The New York Sun has the faculty of laughing at men whom it cannot condemn, because they happen to be its candidates for office-Horace Greeley, for instanceor because their absurdity consists only in a slight exaggeration of national characteristics. Of a representative American abroad-Sergt. Bates-it laughingly says:

At this very hour a scene is going forward beyond the ocean which cannot but thrill the average American breast with rapture. Between Glasgow and London, a distance of four hundred and four miles, there marches a procession bearing in its bosom the welfare and greatness of the American name and in its hand the American flag. It is not numerous. Nor indeed is it loud. We do not learn that it is ac
