FIENDISH SAVAGES.

The Victim Lived For Years After His Crucifixion.

A writer in the Chicago Record says: The body of a man who had been crucified, and who had survived the ordeal and lived for years afterwards, late Tacoma, Wash., the other day for internment at Salt Lake City. The remains were those of Dr. William Bredemeyer, who years ago was crucified by an evil tribe in the Burmah, India. The burial at Salt Lake City was by the side of his first wife, Annie May Savery-Meyerson Evans. His second wife, born Miss Penelope McVicker, accompanied the body, which was carried to the train by members of sixteen fraternal orders, including 120 women who were members of Brethren Lodges, and the Poobahs of the order of Red Men and the Pythian Sisters. Dr. Bredemeyer was a great fraternal man. He was a member of nearly every secret order in existence, and had lived a week longer he would have perfected the organization in Tacoma of the Heptosophs. But paralysis carried him off, and with his right hand peacefully over his breast as he lay in his coffin, the jagged nails left by those who crucified him could be plainly seen. Hundreds saw the scar, and thought it a dreadful sight. The right hand scar was not so long as the left hand one by an inch. Both were between the bones of the thumb and forefinger, in the thickest part of the palm. The left hand scar was

A MOST DARING ROBBERY.

An Ontario man's Terrible Experience.

News of a most mysterious and daring highway robbery has been received from Elora, Ontario. Wm. G. Rose, wood dealer near Rossby, $1,000 in broad daylight near Pombony on office on the Guelph road, then blindfolded and taken by the highwaymen to a swamp near Stratford, where he was left exhausted and naked in the middle of the night. A reporter found the victim of the alleged robbery at the home of James Ross, his father-in-law, in Pikington, Wednesday night. Rose is a man of about thirty-five years, has lived in Elora for about twenty years, and is an excellent character. Those who know him best are firmest in their belief of the truth of the story which he tells.

THE MAHARAJA'S WIFE

Her Clever Ruse in Circumventing The Hindoo Laws.

One little incident of the maharaja's trip to this country, which has not yet been chronicled, says the Philadelphia Press, gives a spice of adventure to the potentate's visit not often met with in these prosaic nineteenth century days. The Hindoo laws relating to women not only enforce a strict seclusion, but forbid them from leaving the boundaries of India under any pretext. They are allowed to travel in their own country under the strictest surveillance and with the proper escort but the Brahmins, the ancient priests of the Hindoo religion, holding their iron rule over rajah and low caste alike, have from time immemorial forbidden the women to travel in foreign lands.

When the maharaja decided upon taking his favorite wife with him on his visit to the United States he had to devise some means of circumventing the Brahmin tradition, and what did he hit upon but the old disguise of Rosalind. He dressed his pretty little anapa up as a boy and sailed out on his long journey without fear of the displeasure of the priests.

The little lady lent herself to the part she had to play. Several Americans who met the rajah's party in Rome and other continental cities were attracted by the pretty youth who was with him. When they tried to make friendly advances, the extreme modesty with which they were met rather puzzled them until, arriving at Paris, the pretty youth disappeared and the wife of the rajah took his place.

One American lady who enjoyed the society of the rajah and his suite much by which the name New York was not let into the secret until on board the steamship Paris she spoke to the rajah's secretary about the absence of that handsome boy she had met travelling with them.

The secretary explained the little ruse by which the rajah had circumvented the Brahmins. Soon afterward the lady was introduced to the anapa, and the latter, on being reminded of her changed identity, laughing, replied in French, which she speaks very well:

"Ah, yes, in Rome I was messieur. In Paris I was madame. I prefer to be madame."

If the little trick should be discovered by the Brahmins on his return, all the maharajah would have to do to condone the matter would be to hand over a good generous dose to the offended hierarchy.

This method of evading time-honored custom is evidently becoming quite popular among the younger oriental potentates who are developing the modern mania for travel. The sultan of Turkey, in his recent travels through Europe, had with him a very beautiful page—his favorite wife, who, however, preserved her incog. until they returned to the palace.

DESTROYING SHEEP TICKS.

I notice, says a writer in Country Gentleman, the enquiry of A. H. M., in regard to the best method of destroying ticks on young lambs. This is one of the many cases where prevention is better than cure, and the matter of prevention is a very simple one. I have used a number of different remedies, such as tobacco, snuff, sulphur, soap, etc., and while each may be good for some purposes, I consider them nearly worthless, and too expensive to use as tick exterminators.

For several years past I have used Little's patent dip, manufactured in Brooklyn, and find it not only the cheapest, but the most effective remedy I have ever used.

My plan has been to dip the entire flock immediately after being shorn, and in October, and in the spring, carried out in spite of the fact that we have no ticks, as I believe the benefit to the sheep and fleece fully repays me for the labor and expense involved.

For sheep of moderate size, an ordinary iron kettle, with a large tub, with a short handle, will answer the purpose very well. We found our large Shropshires quite too heavy to handle in that way, so were obliged to build a dipping tank, with arrangements for raising and lowering the sheep with pulleys. But no matter what the machinery or conveniences may be, be sure to dip the sheep.

If A. H. M. will get a can of patent dip and mix with cold water in proportion of one to one hundred, and dip his lambs twice, he will find a remedy, without any possibility of ill effects, and at the same time very much cheaper and more easily applied than the snuff.

Keep a tub of the mixture in the sheep barn, and dip all the young lambs before they are infected with ticks, as a tick will starve rather than go on a sheep that has been dipped.

TO CROSS THE ATLANTIC.

During the present month an attempt will be made by Wm. Oldham, a resident of Nottingham, to cross the Atlantic on a water cycle. Oldham is twenty-nine years old and a member of the army reserve. He served with the colors ten years, mostly in India. While in India he studied the art of navigation and got the idea in his head that he would attempt to cross the Atlantic on the smallest possible contrivance.

His craft, which is named Marion, is of remarkable construction and is the smallest boat that was ever proposed to use for such an adventurous voyage. It was built entirely by Oldham. Its dimensions are ten feet five inches in length, five feet beam and three feet six inches depth, with a draught of twenty inches of water. It is constructed of the best iron plates that are one-eighth of an inch thick and these are supported by one quarter inch copper ribs. With a view to making the most of his voyage limited capacity, the little vessel's bottom is flat with a wooden floor over the iron work.

In the centre is constructed a small cabin rising nine inches above the deck. It is four feet long and two feet broad. It has seven windows, two in front, one on each side, and one at the back. All the windows can be opened and are watertight when closed. At the top of the cabin is a watertight hatchway six inches square. In this extraordinary craft Mr. Oldham will have Nothingham towards the end of May.

THE BUCKLE FAD UPON US.

The merry maidens of Gotham are now collecting buckles. They prefer a new buckle to a box of bonbons or a bunch of violets, and when presents are not numerous their own allowance diminishes with startling rapidity. Cause—the boom in buckles. The dainty summer skirt waists are, in a measure, responsible for this buckle craze. They require a belt and the belt requires a buckle to spare my life. They made him sit at a log and his companions were seated on either side of him. The third man joined them by one of the other saying: "So you have come at last." Starting up again the party

MOVIE CONTINUOUSLY TILL DARK when they rested for a short time in another bush. As they drove along the men spoke but little. Rose was lying at their feet with his head to the dashboard. They asked him what occupation he followed. "Trucking in wood," replied Rose. "Well, you must have tracked a good deal to get that pile together," observed the highwayman. When darkness came on they drove rapidly and the roads were rough. About midnight they reached the bush where the robbers laid their victim.

STAYED HIM OF THE CLOTHES which at first they had exchanged for his own, and left him and untied his hands. They warned him that if he stirred for two hours he would be shot. When they drove off Rose found his overcoat within a few feet of where he was and he put it on. "I'll be bound to get the rest of his clothes. The unfortunate victim made his way to the road, travelled some distance until he reached a thoroughfare on which a telegraph line was, and turning his back to the sun, started, as he thought, towards home. The affair has created a great excitement around Elora. It is generally believed that the robbers were expert professionals, and that they were on the lookout for another man, a cattle dealer who looks something like Rose.

SHE LIVED IN A CELLAR.

A Montreal Constable's Experience With a Prisoner's Keys.

When Mary Hitchcock, widow of James Sergeant, was searched at the police station in Montreal by the police maroon, two small keys were found in her pocket. They were given to the constable by the recorder to search where the prisoner lived, and see what kind of boxes the keys belonged to. The constable found that the woman lived in the cellar. Dire poverty was everywhere apparent in the miserable place where Mrs. Sergeant, by her own free will had preferred to live. An old stove, a few chairs and an arrangement called a bed, was about all there was in the place. The woman had no other relatives of Mrs. Sergeant but she would not live with them and moved into the cellar.

On account of her peculiar behavior, a warrant was issued for her arrest, and she was charged with "keeping an unsafe mind." Burns tried hard to find a box that the keys would fit, but failed to do so. Finally he saw hidden away under the little stove a satchel. One of the keys fitted into the lock.

"Gracious!" exclaimed Burns, as he unlocked the satchel. Gold, bank bills and silver, were there in generous quantities. He took the satchel to the recorder's office, where the money was counted. The following was found and handed to the chief of police for safe keeping: One twenty-dollar bill, thirty-three ten-dollar bills, three five-dollar bills, ten four-dollar bills, five two-dollar bills, two one-dollar bills, and thirty-nine cents in gold.

The woman was not supposed to own a cent and for some time had been supported by her friends. It is thought she must have saved the money during the life time of her husband. She was remanded for two days for mental examination.

THE POISON KILLED "TIP."

He Was Inconceivable and Had a Record of Eight Men Killed.

New York, May 12.—New York was greatly excited yesterday over efforts to put to death a rogue elephant called "Tip." Burns tried hard to find a box that the keys would fit, but failed to do so. Finally he saw hidden away under the little stove a satchel. One of the keys fitted into the lock.

"Gracious!" exclaimed Burns, as he unlocked the satchel. Gold, bank bills and silver, were there in generous quantities. He took the satchel to the recorder's office, where the money was counted. The following was found and handed to the chief of police for safe keeping: One twenty-dollar bill, thirty-three ten-dollar bills, three five-dollar bills, ten four-dollar bills, five two-dollar bills, two one-dollar bills, and thirty-nine cents in gold.

LEARNED IT TOO LATE.

Did you ever hear of Tip? Chappie Simpson's bride has left him because he is cross-eyed.

Goodness gracious! Didn't she know he was cross-eyed before she married him? He spat them out. Finally he was induced to take some bread in which the

BLIND PITIED BLIND.

An Afflicted Business Man and a Street Musician.

"Look out for the steps, father, put your foot a little further and you will feel the first."

"Yes, yes; go slow," replied the father, with irritation in his voice, as in a hesitating, uncertain manner he felt with his foot for the step. The son held his father's hand and guided him as the blind have to be guided.

For many days the father had been in the Notre Dame hospital having his eyes treated. The doctors at last had to tell him that there was no hope. For the remainder of his days sunshine and color would only be a memory to him.

"How many steps are there?" The fretful inquirer was still there.

"Only one more, father. The carriage is at the curbstone and we will soon be home."

The afflicted man was slowly led through the little iron gate that separated the hospital grounds from Notre Dame street, and across the street to the carriage. Just as he was being helped into the vehicle the doleful wail of an aged violin floated to his ear. The tones were discordant and the playing poor.

"Shall I help you in, sir?" asked the kindly carrier, as the stricken man paused and listened.

"Who is that playing, my son?" He had heard the carrier; for memory was busy with him.

"An old blind man, father; shall I help you?"

"A blind man that turns his face upward while he plays?"

"Yes, that is him, father, the one you said you saw so often when you were going to business. Won't you get in?"

"The same blind man that I said should be locked up instead of being allowed to play on the streets?"

"Never mind that now, father. Mother is anxious to see you."

"Count that silver, and tell me how much it makes."

"Three dollars and five cents."

"Take it and give it to him."

"That, of all?"

"All of it. And tell him that one who understands better now sends it to him. He won't understand, of course, but some day I may explain it to him. The fretful tone had entirely vanished; pity for others had put it to flight.

"He was so glad that he could hardly find words in which to thank me," said the young man, as he reached his father's side. On the way home he heard his father say softly, "I have been blind all these years, and it is only now I see."

He looked up into his father's face and saw it was wreathed with a beautiful smile.

AWFUL DISCLOSURES.

A Young Woman in Quebec Confesses to the Most Terrific Crimes.

In the action last week of Odell vs. Gregory for separation de corps et de biens, some of the most sensational evidence so far adduced is that of a sewing girl named Eugenie Touchette, whose admissions, outside of her testimony bearing on the case in which she was called, disclose a long list of criminal practices, and may furnish a clue to the detection of more than one supposed murderer.
