A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XXIII.

At the turn she stopped and looked down at him, with all her soul in her miserable eyes. He was standing, as she had left him, white to the lips, his brows drawn as if he were in physical agony. He waited until she had gone on her way again, then he tore his hat from the stand and got into the open air. Everything seemed spinning round him; his heart was racked with the impotent raging against Fate. For he knew what kind of girl she was, that her resolution was as strong as her capacity for love; that the very greatness of her love for him would give her strength to persist in the course she had taken. He was half-mad with grief and despair, and he threw up his clenched hand as if in defiance of the gods who had dealt him so heavy a blow. Scarcely knowing whether he was going, he strode across the lawn and almost ran against Mr. Spinner, who had been waiting for him, and now emerged from a sidewalk.

"This is terrible business, my lord," he began.

Heroncourt regarded him vacantly; then, with a nod, was about to go on;

but Mr. Spinner trotted beside him. "I am sorry to intrude upon your lordship at such a moment," he said, with a mixture of nervousness and temerity; "but business is business; and this has come so suddenly upon us—I think I have a right, my lord, to ask what course you intend to adopt. I suppose I may say that the engagement with Miss Carrington will be broken off unless she abandons this absurd idea of hers? Very noble of her, and all that, of course; but I've no doubt your lordship has talked the matter over with her and persuaded her to give it up. In that case, everything—business matters—will go on between you and me, my lord, as smoothly as before. All she has got to do is to abide by her father's will and stick to it."

Heroncourt had scarcely been listening; but the man's meaning at last burst in upon him. He turned with a fierceness which caused Mr. Spinner to shrink back, as if he dreaded a blow.

"Miss Carrington will adhere to her resolution," said Heroncourt, "and I, being an honest man, uphold her." Then his face worked and his hands clenched. "Man! Man!" he cried, hoarsely. "Why do you come to me now? The marriage—it is broken off—No, no! it shall not be—For God's sake leave me! But you threaten me—is that so? Then do your worst. Out of my sight!"

He strode on, leaving Mr. Spinner red in the face and gasping, but raging at heart.

When Carrie came up she found Maida seated in a low chair, her hands clasped tightly, her eyes fixed on vacancy; yet not vacancy, for she saw Heroncourt's white face before her, heard his despairing voice.

Carrie went to her and knelt beside her.

"You have sent Heroncourt away, Maida," she said, and she managed to keep her voice steady; for she knew that it was Maida who now needed comforting.

"Yes, he has gone," said Maida. "We have parted."

"Oh, Maida!" Carrie's voice broke for a moment. "Then it is all over? All the money has gone, we are poor again? Oh, it is so hard to believe, to realise—and yet you are quite right. We could not have kept it. It is only of you and Byrne that I am thinking; it is so hard for you. It seems to me that it is always hard to do right; I wonder why? Why should you suffer like this; why should he? Oh, forgive me, Maida dear; I am only making it worse for you, and I want to help you! We are poor again, but it doesn't matter, not the poverty. We can work; you have your reciting, and I—oh, there are ever so many things I can do—if it were only not necessary for you and Byrne—but I won't talk of it, you mustn't think of it, Maida!" She sprang to her feet and pushed her hair from her forehead and drew a long breath, as if she were making up her mind to face the music.

"Maida, we'll go back to Coleridge Street! Yes; that's what we'll do. They know us there and they'll be glad to have us back. How delighted Sarah will be. Why, all this will seem like a dream." Her eyes filled with tears, but she turned away, as she thought, not of the wealth and the luxury that had taken to themselves wings, but of Heroncourt and her sister's broken heart. "Just like a dream; like one of those dreams in the 'Arabian Nights,' when the man wakes up and finds that he has been asleep and has kicked over his basket of crockery. And perhaps it will all come right."

Maida shook her head, and smiled the piteous little smile, which masks an aching heart, aching with despair.

"Yes; we will go back to Coleridge Street, Carrie," she said. "I thought that all was lost; I forgot that I had still got you. Forgive me, dearest!"

She drew Carrie to her; but Carrie, knowing that they were both on the verge of breaking down, drew herself from the loving arms.

"I want Ricky, I must have Ricky!" she exclaimed. "He shall manage it for us. That's the best of Ricky—you can always rely on him when you are in trouble. Wait here, dear."

She went down-stairs and found

Ricky pacing up and down the hall. He turned to her with an expression of dismay and anxiety on his boyish face.

"How is she?" he asked anxiously.

"Bad!" replied Carrie, with her old curtness; for she was forgetting all in her anxiety for Maida. "Everything has gone smash, Ricky—no, don't speak; there isn't time. I want you to help us. We've got to leave here!"

"Why, of course!" she retorted. "This place doesn't belong to us! It belongs to Mr.—Mr.—I forget his name. Everything belongs to him. We are poor again—no, don't speak; I've got to do all the talking; it comes natural—we are going back to Coleridge Street."

Poor Ricky tried to look overwhelmed and aghast; but a treacherous feeling of relief and gladness was making his heart beat—much to his shame.

"To Coleridge Street?" he echoed.

"Yes; you go and catch the first train and go and see if the rooms are vacant. If they are not, get some others in the same street. Wire to me the moment you settle matters—to me, mind."

Ricky went for his hat and coat, and she helped him on with the latter. As she did so, she caught sight of his face, and, despite all the terrible trouble which weighed upon her, a smile stole to her lips and into her eyes; for, try as he would, Ricky could not look crushed and overwhelmed, nor keep an expression of treacherous relief and gladness—at any rate, satisfaction—from his frank countenance.

"You needn't look so hilarious, Ricky," she said.

He crimsoned and cast down his eyes; then he raised them to hers courageously, almost defiantly.

"It's true," he said. "I'm ashamed of myself; but—don't you understand, Carrie? All these months past you've—you've seemed to be slipping away from me—the money made the difference. I felt as if I were losing you; and now—now you are poor again. Oh, I'm a bad lot!"

"That's no news," retorted Carrie. "I've known that all along. Get them to put a dog-cart to, and wire to me the moment you know."

Then her voice broke and her lips quivered.

"Oh, my poor Maida!" she wailed.

He took both her hands in his and pressed them against his heart; but he could not speak, and he turned and ran out of the hall without another word.

An hour later, Lady Glassbury begged Maida to let her come in. Maida was calm—terribly calm—but looked almost worn out. Lady Glassbury took her hand and held it.

"I have been to the Court—I have seen Byrne. He has told me—Oh, Maida, he is heart-broken, almost out of his mind!"

Maida looked at her steadily.

"Do not tell me!" she said, as if Lady Glassbury had stabbed her. "But tell me this—no, look me in the face; answer me as one true woman should answer another: Have I done right?"

"There was a moment of silence, an intense silence. The two women looked at each other, Maida as if she were reading Lady Glassbury's soul. The answer came at last; word after word, slowly, as if they were wrung, forced from the trembling lips.

"You have done quite right. God help you both!"

Maida and Carrie slept together that night; and, worn out by the strain she had undergone, Maida slept soundly. Soon after breakfast, Mr. Coburn and his partner arrived, and Maida went down to them at once.

The two men remonstrated and argued; Mr. Coburn even waxed wrathful and indignant; called her quixotic, absurd, hysterical.

She listened patiently, almost meekly, and in the end they found her as immovable as she had been on the preceding day. Everything was to be given up to Josiah Purley; if Mr. Coburn would not take the necessary steps, she would be reluctantly compelled to employ some one else. Her calmness, her dignity, her strength of will amazed and bewildered the two men of law. They took their departure almost in silence.

The Torpedoplane.

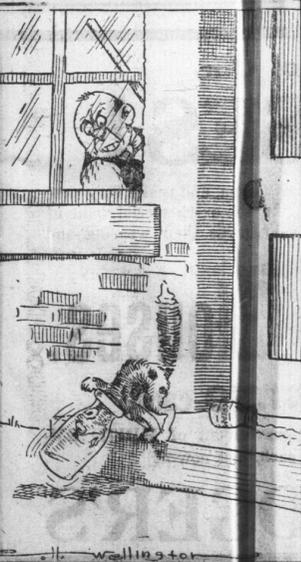

Zeebrugge, Cuxhaven, Wilhelmshaven, and Kiel are the only points on the German offensive on sea, and not now under check and control by the Allies. Kiel, near the Baltic terminus of the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal, and Wilhelmshaven are great vital stations where the German navy has taken refuge almost continuously from the beginning of the war. The German sea power, with the high-lying exception of the submarines, may be said to be under control of the Allies, but from Cuxhaven the mouth of the Elbe and from Zeebrugge in Belgium, German submarines issue forth for their forays against the commerce of Great Britain and France.

There is a growing belief that the torpedoplane is the only weapon which the Allies can make effective against these German naval bases, or any one of them. An attack upon ships of war upon Kiel, Wilhelmshaven, or Cuxhaven is impossible because of powerful land defenses and seas of mines, the safe lanes through which are known only to the Germans. Zeebrugge can be attacked only from the air because of the shallow water which extends several miles from the coast. That the torpedoplane, invented by Rear Admiral Dudley A. Fiske and patented by him in 1912, can be successfully used in naval warfare has been demonstrated two occasions. Four Turkish ships were sunk in the Sea of Marmora by British torpedoplanes in August, 1915. A German torpedoplane destroyed the British steamer Gena near the English coast on May 1 of the present year. The Germans and the English have been quick to avail themselves of this American invention; we have peated a frequent experience in seeing foreign Powers make use of American inventions which advance the military naval art, while we ourselves neglect them.

Zeebrugge is a little over 75 miles from the British coast. Cuxhaven and Wilhelmshaven are less than 50 miles from Heligoland, the great German island fortress which protects the coast. It is the belief of Admiral Fiske that from a sea base of British archipelago established 50 miles west of the three German bases might be tried out with destructive effect. Torpedoplanes could easily make the distance from England to Zeebrugge in their work and return. At that point it is believed that they might destroy many submarines by hovering in the offing, where, owing to the shallow water, the U-boats would be unable to submerge; for five or six miles they would be in plain sight of the foe.

The Torpedoplane.

Zeebrugge, Cuxhaven, Wilhelmshaven, and Kiel are the only points on the German offensive on sea, or on the Allies. Kiel, near the Baltic terminus of the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal, and Wilhelmshaven are great naval stations where the German navy has taken refuge almost continuously from the beginning of the war. There is a growing belief that the torpedoplane is the only weapon of which the Allies can make effective use against these German naval bases or any one of them. An attack upon the German navy, with the use of powerful land defenses and a sea of mines, the safe lanes through which are known only to the Germans. Zeebrugge can be attacked from the air because of the shallow water which extends several miles from the coast. That the torpedoplane, invented by Rear Admiral A. Fiske and patented by him in 1912, can be successfully used in naval warfare has been demonstrated two occasions. Four Turkish ships were sunk in the Sea of Marmora by British torpedoplanes in August, 1915, and a German torpedoplane destroyed the British steamer Gena near Zeebrugge on May 1 of the present year. The Germans and the English have been quick to avail themselves of this American invention; we have copied a frequent experience in seeing foreign Powers make use of American inventions which advance the military naval art, while we ourselves neglect them.

Zeebrugge is a little over 75 miles from the British coast. Cuxhaven and Wilhelmshaven are less than 50 miles from Heligoland, the great German island fortress which protects the Kiel. It is about 90 miles from that island. It is the belief of Admiral Fiske that from a sea base of British torpedoplanes established 50 miles west of Heligoland torpedoplane raids upon three German bases might be carried out with destructive effect. Torpedoplanes could easily make the distance from England to Zeebrugge in their work and return. At that point it is believed that they might destroy many submarines by hovering in the offing, where, owing to the shallow water, the U-boats would be unable to submerge; for five or six miles they would be in plain sight of the foe. Mr. Park Benjamin, who is a very old authority in naval matters, is confident that the torpedoplane is the most promising means at the present moment which the Allies can employ to destroy the nests from which the sea vermin emerge and to attack the places of refuge of the German high seas fleet. Shortly after the destruction of the British steamer Gena, Mr. Benjamin said: "The German fleet is reported to be in the Kiel Canal and in Wilhelmshaven. It is apparently practicable to drop the mobile torpedoes into the canal. No aiming is necessary. Even if after immersion they run into the banks and explode, they will tear therefrom great masses of earth and masonry revetment, thus choking the passageway, as the 'Culebra' silted the Panama Canal. This would cut in two a fleet therein and prevent junction of the divisions, enabling each to be dealt with separately. Such torpedoes will destroy everything afloat they may happen to encounter. To drop them into Wilhelmshaven is to blow up any vessels within their range, any the closer together the ships are moored, the more of them will be destroyed." In an article in The Independent of June 30, Mr. Benjamin repeats his argument for the speedy building of torpedoplanes, and Admiral Fiske in his letter to the Aero Club of America makes a terse and convincing presentation of the case for this new weapon. This is the first three-dimensional war, and it is perfectly evident that the German bases cannot be successfully attacked by instruments of destruction than move only on the horizontal plane. Airplanes using only bombs have not sufficient power and are too easily driven off by guns trained against them. A seaplane launching a 200-pound torpedo against any enemy warship or in a harbor where enemy warships have taken shelter is a vastly more formidable weapon.

Admiral Fiske points out, too, that there is great probability that the Germans even now are preparing to make use of this weapon against the British high seas fleet. It is hardly necessary to say that the Power which first makes use of the torpedo launching craft will have gained a notable advantage over the foe. We can build them quickly, and we have an abundance of torpedoes. A dozen torpedoplanes can be built for the cost of one submarine. If England had two or three hundred torpedoplanes at this moment, there is a very great probability that the published lists showing the destructive work of the submarines would in the next few weeks record an important falling off, even if the sinking of merchant ships by U-boats did not cease altogether.—N. Is Dying Painful?

Discussing, in Reverent Fashion, a Question that is not Inappropriate at Present.

Is death—the act of dying, the cessation of physical life—painful? The question is one of supreme interest for many who have lost loved ones in this terrible war would feel a great lightening of their burden of grief if they could be assured that death was not an awful and fearsome concentration of soul-and-body-rendering agony. The answer can be given at once. Death is painless!

The act of dying must, of course, be separated from the days, hours, or minutes that precede it. That period may—almost must—hold something of pain, yet there is this consoling thought—that when physical suffering reaches a certain point, a merciful unconsciousness almost invariably supervenes. The heart-breaking groans of wounded men are not always conscious groans. They are often Nature's vocal protest against the disturbance of the vital machinery of the body, and a sufferer who feels no pain may utter them.

Picturesque Fiction. The foregoing applies to men who lie wounded and dying on the battlefield or in the trenches. In our hospitals, if pain is not quite banished, it is greatly alleviated and made bearable.

How physical pain affects each of us varies greatly. According to what we are by temperament and character, inherited or acquired, so we face or flinch from pain.

The same rule applies to the act of dying. We may be temperamentally unafraid of death, or our self-made characters may be such that we can face death without fear. Death, therefore, holds no terror. And even in those cases where death does hold terror—there are those who are terribly afraid of the act of dying—it can be said at once that the terror, the fear, is one of prospect, of contemplation only, and not of actual experience. The act of dying, the moment when the heart ceases to beat, has nothing of pain, nothing of suffering, nothing of horror. The "rending of soul and body" is picturesque fiction, holding nothing of fact.

Alluring and Pleasant.

All deaths are in reality sudden, although we apply the word to one type only. A bullet through the brain or heart may cause "sudden death" in the sense that the physical machinery stops suddenly; but the death that follows an illness is really equally sudden. The machinery stops just the same, and with equal suddenness, even if it has slowed up before the actual stopping.

What we call "death" is, after all, merely the culmination, premature or natural, of the dying that is going on within us each minute. Every blow we strike, every thought we think is accompanied by the death of a certain amount of muscular or nervous tissue. In health the "death" is followed by new life—the tissue is renewed. There is no more pain in the death of the whole physical organism than there is in the death of one cell.

In that act of dying there may be pre-death pains, but the act itself is painless. Those who have been close to actual death, and restored, have stated that their sensations—the death sensations—were pleasant, almost alluringly so. It is not quite easy to realize, but the fact remains that "death" is quite natural, and that which is natural, part of Nature's ordered, never holds pain. It is when Nature is outraged, or her workings interfered with, that there is pain and suffering.

The End of a Chapter.

Death is but the end of a chapter in the Book of Life. The act of dying is painless. There is no death agony. Kindly Nature has seen to that. Medical science—Nature in fuller action—helps. Mental pain, spiritual desolation, there may be, but there may not even be those. God is nothing if not absolutely just. Those who have laid down their lives for us, and for the Right, as assuredly they have done, died good deaths, and shall not lose thereby.

Let those who scoff account for this—that not one soldier of the King has been afraid to die, or thought that when he died, far from home and the loved ones, he would never see them again.

Like children we fear the unknown, but find the thing we dreaded not so terrible after all.—Answers.

Paints Bright Pictures of War Progress.

Pleasure and Treasure-Hunting Submarines and Wireless-Driven Airships are Germany's Dreams.

Amsterdam, June 15 (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—A German scientist's imaginative after-war picture is a feature of a recent number of Zukunft. The author, Professor Moritz Lesser, is a member of the Faculty of the University of Bonn.

The Professor pictures a world at peace, making use in friendly international relationship of the technical discoveries which have been made during the war for the development of commercial enterprise. The article reads in part as follows: "Three months after the end of the war the Directors of the leading banks and corporations of Germany held a meeting to the number of 3,000 in the Reichstag, with the Home Secretary for Chairman, and founded a company 'For the Development and Use of Inventions Discovered During the War.' The object of the company was to employ in peace the technical progress which had been accomplished under stress of war, and the capital subscribed was forty times as great as required.

"One object of the company was to build submarines for pleasure trips and search for treasure lost during the war. The great shipping companies followed suit by building deep-sea submarines in which one could sail without seasickness. These ships travelled on a cable laid under the sea, and were worked by an electric current from the land. They journeyed at incredible speed, making the journey from New York to Hamburg in forty-eight hours.

"It was found possible to build a submarine which sank to a depth of more than a mile, and from this sprang the international company for raising ships sunk during the war. The parcel traffic no longer needed, and large sums of money were made from this salvage work. There was also huge profit in taking passengers in these ships for trips of exploration and sightseeing along the bottom of the sea. Ships were found which had gone down centuries ago, and one expedition recovered the treasure of a continent which was sunk in a Spanish Armada. Moreover, rich veins of coal and iron and other minerals were discovered in the sea.

"Meanwhile wireless telegraphy was perfected until it was possible to send a current around the world. It was also possible to supply airships with the current. A company was founded for a passenger and parcel service without port, which began serving important parts of the world. The parcel traffic no longer needed human pilots, because the airships were guided from the land by a wireless contrivance.

"At the same time the Peace Conference at The Hague, which represented all civilized nations, decided on the disarmament of all the world without any restrictions. By this time every great power had established a fleet of unmanned airplanes, loaded with thousands of bombs which were to be let loose by wireless current at the first mobilization of an enemy over all his important towns. In this way every hostile town and base would be reduced to ruin in a few hours. This meant that there could no longer be any war."

Other imaginary inventions described by the writer include an American "spectral film," which brought the pictures of distant events as they happened to the theatre and private houses.

Another invention dispensed with the use of coal and gas by preserving the heat and light of the sun. Traffic problems in the world's great cities were solved by setting pavements and streets in motion. The article concludes:

"Finally, inventions reduced the trouble of living more and more, and the people began to lose the use of their hands since everything was done for them, so a world conference was assembled which forbade anyone inventing anything more."

The German Mystery.

Leading members of the Catholic Centre Party in Germany go to Austria and hold conferences with leaders there. Austria is the great Catholic Empire, and has at present a ruler who is obviously tired of the war. Hardly have the Centrists returned before Catholic South Germany produces surprising manifestations. The newspapers which have heartily supported Pan-Germanism suddenly abandon their policy and come out against the Government. Then Matthias Erzberger, the Centrist leader, formerly a supporter of the Government, makes a resounding attack on it, and from the replies made to this unprinted speech it is evident that he demanded internal reforms as well as the abandonment of submarine warfare.

Information from Germany is so fragmentary and so filtered that all we can do at present is to note these facts, not to theorize about them. If the Vatican, through Austria, is at last exerting pressure on Berlin to end the inhumanities of U-boat war and to make the German rulers recede from their determination to wreck the world rather than give an inch, a great hour in the history of the world has struck. But it is impossible to form any conclusions until there are more facts.

What is certain, however, is that, in spite of all the boob-hooping, under orders, of the American war preparations by the German press, these preparations are taken seriously. Why is there a sudden outburst against submarine warfare? Because it was that which brought America into the war, and because those who make it mistakenly imagine that if the submarine outrages ceased America would be in the mood to make peace. Certainly the dread of America must be strong upon them if they are so anxious, and not only the dread of America but the dread of America's early participation in the fighting, for if they thought we would not be effective until next year they could afford to let the submarine war go on until the time was near at hand.

There have been curious evidences, for a long time, that something more than popular unrest was stirring in Germany. The people are not a power there, but there are powers, and it is among these powers that mysterious rumblings have been heard. Last April the journeys of Count Hertling, the Bavarian Premier, to Austria created great disquiet and many rumors. Then came the Berlin Post's story of how Bavaria had been kept in line by a promise to give her part of Alsace-Lorraine, which, whether true or not, caused much unrest in Saxony. Meanwhile the constant upheavals in Austria and the constantly recurring reports about the disaffection of Emperor Charles, and especially of the Empress, have kept a monotonous accompaniment to the suppressed noises from the Catholic South of Germany. It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that a large and influential part of the German population is out of sympathy with the Kaiser's methods and is growing more so all the time.

It would be the best thing that could happen to the world if the Vatican, which has so much influence with Austria and South Germany, should accept the truth that the only way to the peace of Europe is for Germany to recede from her position. Meanwhile it is impossible to refrain from conjecture about why Mr. Lloyd George should have chosen such a singular time as the end of June to inform Germany that if some other Government than her present one was seated in office the Allies would be willing to give that new Government easier terms. The thing is true, and any time is good enough time to say it, but Mr. Lloyd George is not in the habit of uttering eternal truths that have no application to the passing hour. Did he know something that the rest of the world does not know, and was his announcement intended, not for the universe in general, as it seemed to be, but for some particular ears in, say, Austria?—New York Times.

The "American Peril"

New York Evening Post: An American Peril is now confronting the Kaiser in France; only, as in the case of Russia, it is of quite the peril that was foreseen. Not Delarika has entered the fight, but American Democracy. It is not the democracy of the new Russia, as Mr. Root so wisely pointed out to the men at Petrograd, but it looks to the new Russia with infinite sympathy and, according to our powers, with understanding. We indeed may the Kaiser complain of the policy of "encirclement." He is caught in the democratic ring. William II. may take such comfort as he can out of the thought that he has helped to transform the brutalized mujik and the money-grubbing Yankee into champions of an ideal.

THE WAR.

Russia continues for the time to occupy the centre of the stage. The news that her forces have abandoned Kolus is a little disappointing but not surprising: their advance has been almost too rapid for safety. But they have got across the Lomnica River, which runs just east of the town, and the fierce fighting for possession of the important little city is certain to be resumed. Unless the enemy has been very greatly strengthened in this region, the loss of Halicz has loosened his hold upon Lemberg, and his losses in men and material have been very serious. It is about time that Russia's fine effort showed signs of some influence in the quarter which it was intended to affect, the Italian front: Brusiloff chose his chief point of attack with judgment, for it is known that the Austrians had massed great forces to hurl against Cadorna. As the Austrian resistance, therefore, to Brusiloff increases we shall expect Cadorna to keep the pressure up from his side. Possibly his capture of Dolina is the precursor of another offensive. Meanwhile the assurance that Greece is heart and soul with the Allies draws attention once more to the Balkans. Matters of the first importance are likely to revolve there, for the whole military and political situation will shortly be the subject of an Entente conference. It is on the face of it unlikely that an army which, with the help of Greece, may approximate a million men, will either be withdrawn, as has been so often suggested, or permitted longer to remain inactive.

Quiet along the western front seems to have succeeded the brilliant French victory at Moronville. The sortie of no less than seventeen German steamers from Rotterdam, with the loss or capture by the British of the greater part, is a most extraordinary episode. No details have yet reached us to explain either their purpose or destination, but the possession of four more steamers will not be altogether unwelcome to Britain. Possibly the affair may be another suggestion of the desperate straits to which Germany realises she will be reduced by the American embargo, and reminds us of the attempt, which is certain to fail, of the Dutch ships which lately left the States to run the blockade. Whether this be so or not, it is apparent that in their blockade the Allies have now at last a weapon of terrible power.

Nothing for the moment on any battlefield approaches in importance the political situation in Germany, of which the seriousness has been aggravated rather than diminished by the appointment of Michaelis. No doubt we shall shortly hear from Herr Erzberger again, who, with Austria behind him, has lately emerged as the spokesman of the German people to the military autocracy. The forces which are gathering for an explosion have not been dissipated but suppressed and confined by the set-back, and the explosion will be the more disastrous for it when it comes.

The Wrecked Liner.

There is no change in the condition of the wrecked Scandinavian Liner Kristiniafjord on the rocks at Mistaken Point. The Captain and crew are still standing by her. Wrecking tugs and divers are due there to-day to attempt to refloat her.

Some women and children passengers at the Seamen's Institute, who were in want of clothing, were kindly supplied last evening by some charitable ladies. All the passengers who are housed here spent a good night. Most of the women were at the Prince's Hall and all the men at the Prince's Hall.

The Swedish-American Liner Stockholm, which is coming here to take the survivors, is, we learn, expected to arrive to-night or to-morrow morning.

"The Bravest Englishman."

The Stanhope Medal of the Royal Humane Society was awarded recently to John Paxton, a marine fireman, for a remarkable feat of heroism. Some months ago his vessel was shelled and sunk by a German submarine in the Mediterranean. In the hurry of leaving the vessel Paxton, and three other men, none of whom could swim, were left behind. Immediate action was necessary, and Paxton, at once jumping overboard, called on the first man to follow, which he did, and Paxton swam with him to the nearest boat. Returning he called on the second man, and he also was taken to a boat. Again Paxton came back, and in like manner rescued the third man, and this in spite of the high wind and rough sea. The medal is awarded annually for what is regarded as the bravest feat for the year. It was presented to Paxton by the Lord Mayor of Liverpool at the annual meeting of the Mercantile Marine Service Association in May.—Halifax Chronicle.

Your Boys and Girls.

The moods of a child are nature's sign posts, they tell us which way to go to guide the child to the best manhood and womanhood, how to save waste of strength and time in training. Watch a child, and if it is allowed to indulge in its moods unchecked and unrestrained you will be able to tell just what it will be by and by. If the children ask for something and it is denied, then the real character is uppermost. Some will cry, others sulk, some rage and others whine, while others who have confidence in Mother's wisdom, as well as in her love, will be sure that there is a good reason for the denial, and will not allow it to mar their cheerfulness or spoil their joy.

To-Day's Messages.

SERIOUS APPEAL TO SHIPBUILDERS.

LONDON, To-day. The Iron and Steel Confederation of Great Britain has received the following message, signed Carson, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Jellicoe, First Sea Lord: The Board of Admiralty wish to impress on all engaged in the building and repairing of ships how serious are the times in which we live. The determined enemy has set himself to blockade our islands and destroy the merchantmen bringing food to our people and supplies to our armies, by using methods contrary to the law of nations. Every day merchant ships are sunk. We need all our resources to prevent the threatened starvation. The enemy knows this and has staked everything upon it. If he succeeds victory rests with him, if he fails his defeat is certain. There are only two weapons we can use both forged in our shipyards: one is a class of warship that will enable the navy to hunt down and destroy submarines, the other is every new merchant ship that will replace a ship sunk. These weapons must be used together. Upon men in the shipyards and engineering shops depends entirely their output. How the latter can be increased concerns every one and no measure which will enable a better use of labor and machinery can be neglected. We who are secure in our homes owe it to the brave men dying every hour for us at sea, on land and in the air to spare no weapons to give them the weapons with which to win. We are confident that in this supreme crisis of our history the men of the shipyards and workshops will see that this appeal does not fall on deaf ears.

Amateur Champion Wrestler Here.

Among the passengers now in the city is Mr. Carl Benson, lightweight amateur wrestler of the United States for 108 lbs, also champion of the Metropolitan area, 108 to 115 lbs. Mr. Benson is a native of Sweden, but has resided at Brooklyn, N.Y. for some time, where he is engaged as a machinist and tool worker, and is considered an expert at his trade. He was on his way home to visit his relatives when shipwrecked, and has in his possession numerous medals and certificates that have been awarded him on different occasions, also a magnificent gold watch beautifully engraved which was presented to him by the Amateur Wrestling Association of America. Mr. Benson is 27 years of age, slightly under 108 lbs. weight and not quite five feet in height. He offered for the American Army but owing to his being short of the standard size was not accepted.

Teachers' Rights.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Mr. Editor,—I have noticed of late several items in the city papers from some of the teachers attending the Summer School. Most of these teachers, if not all, have clearly put the matter, re the inadequacy of teachers' salaries, before the public, so it is not my intention to go into detail about the matter. The chief point, I think, which all have endeavored to emphasize is that they have been "tricked" in one particular way; whether intentionally or unintentionally I am not prepared to say. The point is this: According to the appeal set forward by the memorialists, the increase in teachers' salaries should date from Jan. 1st, 1917. We all understood that this was granted, until some little time ago we found, to our disappointment, that the increase was to date from July 1st, 1917. Now, anyone who studies the matter can see that this will mean a loss of from $20 to $40 at least for every teacher. That amount may seem small, but it means a good deal to a teacher. Now then, we ask that this amount be paid us, through our respective Superintendents while we are here in town. Then we shall all go home with a light heart, feeling that things are not so bad after all. On the other hand, if our request is not granted I venture to say that 20 per cent. of our energy, that we require for the next school year, will be destroyed; and probably a decrease in our numbers will be the result, which would be deplorable. We are not boggers, but are "faily" convinced that we are asking only for our rights.
TEACHER.

SUSPECT ARRESTED AND RELEASED.—Last evening Detective Flynn arrested under suspicion a laborer of the East End for the larceny of $200 from a residence on Gower Street. This morning in court the police stated that they had no evidence against the accused and he was honourably discharged. The police are continuing their investigation in the hope of capturing the guilty party.

Fishery News.

From J. Parsons (Riverhead of Bay Roberts to Juggler's Cove).—The catch is 720 qtls. and for last week 220. Thirty-eight traps are fishing. The hook and liners are doing nothing, but caplin is still plentiful, and there is also some squid. Prospects are poor up to the present.

From J. Gosse (Spaniard's Bay to Upper Island Cove).—Ten traps and 42 skiffs are fishing. The catch is 406 qtls. with 160 for last week. Hook and liners and trawls are doing nothing. There is plenty caplin and squid for bait.

From P. Brown (Upper Amherst Cove to Cape L'Argent).—Trapping is good for hook and liners, especially on the outer grounds. The total catch is 26,000 qtls., and for last week 5,000. The traps fishing number 128 and dories and skiffs 205. Caplin is plentiful for bait, and there is also a good sign of squid.

From J. F. Williams (Bay Bulls S. Head to Long Point).—During the first part of the week fish was very plentiful, especially with trawls, but it was scarce the last few days. There is plenty of caplin and squid for bait, and prospects are fair. The catch is 5,440 qtls., with 1,645 for last week.

From J. White (Colinet Island to Head of Salmonier).—Twelve traps, 40 dories and skiffs and 15 boats are fishing. By latest reports some fishermen are doing well with trawls. The traps at some places are also doing well, but no fish is being taken by cod nets. Prospects are fairly good, and there is some squid and caplin for bait. The catch is 2,000 qtls., and for last week 800.

We are informed that the teachers' request has been granted by the Government.

Public Notice!

Tenders will be received at this office until noon on Tuesday, the 21st day of July, 1917, for a suitable steamer for the Mail Service in the District of Fortune Bay.

The steamer must be from 80 to 100 tons net measurement, fitted with all modern improvements, and to have accommodation for about 20 cabin and 20 steerage passengers. This service, which will commence as soon as possible, will consist of one round trip each week and will be continuous throughout the whole of each year. The steamer is to class "X 100 A1 at Lloyd's (England)" and to have a speed of at least ten knots. Yesterday at the House

The Premier Announces the New Government.

When the House of Assembly met yesterday afternoon the Prime Minister, Sir Edward Morris, made an expected announcement concerning the new Coalition Government. He said: "I desire to inform the House that since we met yesterday the new Government has been formed and sworn in for the Colony. Many of the members of the House are aware that for some time negotiations have been taking place between the two political parties in the Legislature for the purpose of bringing about a National Government, a Colonial Government, a Government strong enough, should the strain and stress come that has arrived already in other portions of the Empire. It is a matter of congratulation for the House to know, and I think the country will appreciate also, that in the negotiations everything of a personal character has been laid aside; both parties seem to be impelled by the desire to put Country first and Party second; to forget personal motives, personal ambitions and personal interests. Any other sentiment would be entirely foreign from what one would expect from the members of this Legislature. All are Newfoundlanders and in that spirit and with that desire these negotiations were taken up, which, I am glad to be able to announce to the House have been perfected and to-day the new Government were sworn in, consisting of Honourables W. F. Lloyd, M. P. Cashin, J. R. Bennett, R. A. Squires, J. T. Clitz, J. C. Crosbie, M. P. Gibbs, W. F. Coaker, W. J. Ellis, A. E. Hickman, W. W. Halfyard and myself.

This change in the Government of the Colony has not been brought about without grave thought and grave consideration. We have now almost reached the end of the third year of the great titanic struggle going on in the world in which the British Empire is playing so important and prominent a part. In fact it is hardly fair to incorrectly describe and refer to it as a part at all, because it is England really with the assistance of the Allies, that is doing the greater part, as for while the responsibility rests of carrying on the war rested on the British Government and as part of the Empire we have grave responsibilities cast upon us inseparable from the great nations that constitute the British Empire."

Continuing, the Prime Minister, as a justification for the course he adopted, referred to the many precedents established since the outbreak of the war in the Governments of England, the Dominion and her Allies. So far we have not experienced any of the great difficulties arising out of the war, but if we have made up our minds to hold a place in the Imperial possessions, and if we are desirous of establishing a place in the great victory, which one day will be celebrated, then we shall all have to do our part. The whole country will have to do its part and this is one of the many things that the National Government will have to grapple with. How that will be accomplished will be a matter of study to utilize the very best judgment of the Government. Any moment, any day, this Colony may be sorely affected in her trading operations by the great menace of the war. Already we have felt it, but have been fortunate in being able to remove the difficulties to a certain extent and surmount the obstacles as they come along. We must be prepared to lay aside all party strife, putting Country before Party, as other countries have done, so that we may be able to lessen the dangers that may beset us. It was only fair for him to say that in the negotiations that have taken place in connection with this National Government he found the gentlemen on the other side of the House most reasonable and ready at all times to look at the matter from a purely patriotic and national standpoint. In the ordinary course of events an election would have to be held this coming Autumn. Parliament expires in January next and after that date there would be

The following letter received from Mr. T. V. peared. It might be as well to point out to the parties responsible for 'this theft that they are stealing from 'the RED CROSS FUND, as these 'balls could have been used in the 'next game and expenses would 'there be reduced accordingly. These 'balls were left with some other material in the dressing room and were 'taken after we left the field. T. V. HARTNETT."

The House then adjourned.

A King in Name Only.

(From the Providence Journal). A story that comes from Athens by way of London is good enough to be true, and it probably is true. It concerns the young King Alexander, who was lately placed upon the throne by the departure of King Constantine and the Crown Prince from Greece. M. Venizelos, it appears, after he had taken the oath as Premier, observed to the youthful monarch: "I presume you understand, sir, that one of the first duties of the constituent assembly that we shall call will be to pass measures to lessen the power of the King." To which the sovereign responded: "I quite understand so." To the further information that the King could no longer bring about the dissolution of the Chamber of Deputies or the dismissal of the ministers, Alexander said: "Very well." In other words, the Greek monarchy is a mere fiction from this time forward. The real power under the Allies, is Venizelos, who for years has been unquestionably the strongest man in Greece.

Holyrood Welcomes
Rev. Leo V. Walsh, O.S.B.

On Saturday the town of Holyrood was in a festive mood, the occasion being to extend a hearty welcome home to the Rev. Leo V. Walsh, O.S.B., after an absence of almost fourteen years. Fr. Walsh is an ideal specimen of a Newfoundland who has made good in a foreign country, unaided save by his own activity, industry and, best of all assets, a healthy constitution. Emigrating from here shortly after graduating from the High School here he worked for some time in the gold mines of the far west. He resumed his studies at the Jesuit University Spokane, and continued them for the course. Finally he entered the order of the Benedictines, and was ordained priest on the 14th of May last. He was granted permission to visit his native home, and when the Star of the Sea Association, of which he was a juvenile member, became cognizant of the fact, it decided to give him a grand reception. The day was an ideal one for our door festivities—a fine westerly breeze and a fine clear sun—indispensable features to any 'out door jubilation, and consciously lent support to the preparations of willing and faithful hearts. Opposite the railway station a beautiful arch was erected, beautifully festooned and mottoed and crowned with flags and bearing words of joyous welcome to the young levite. Bunting flew from the prominent residences. Cannon and guns thundered forth a hundred welcomes, and at night bonfires blazed forth from the hilltops. On the arrival of the express he was met at the station by the officers and members of the Star of the Sea Association and presented with an address of welcome to which he briefly and suitably replied. Then boarding a wagon in waiting draped with the Union Jack, he was pulled to the Presbytery by the members of the Association, the officers in regalia preceding the wagon, and the town's people following behind. Having arrived at the Presbytery he again thanked the Society and people for their cordial reception, and was justly and enthusiastically cheered. On this joyous occasion Rev. Father Finn, P.P., the esteemed Pastor was unavoidably absent; but very generously placed the comforts and hospitality of the Presbytery at the disposal and convenience of his guest, the young mission father, during his stay.

ADDRESS.

Rev. Leo V. Walsh.
Rev. and Dear Fr. Walsh:— We, the members of the Star of the Sea Association of Holyrood, beg to extend to you a very hearty and cordial welcome to your native town of Holyrood. We feel proud and honoured to see you amongst us to-day, after a long absence at College studying for the Ministry in far distant Oregon, and on the occasion of your first visit since your ordination. We tender you our hearty congratulations on your elevation to the Priesthood, and greet you with feelings of respect a happy day as also was the day of his first mass, but he felt the same happiness on his arrival at his native place to find such an ovation tendered him by the good old Star of the Sea Association. And when he got back to Oregon there would always be a warm spot in his heart for his native place and dear old Newfoundland. Filled with emotion he imparted his blessing to the congregation.

Drowning Accident
Narrowly Averted.

We learn from passengers who arrived by the s.s. Thetis, that Capt. Ed. Kean, of Brookfield, B.B. and three of his crew had a narrow escape from drowning about three weeks ago while setting their trap at Belle Isle. It happened that Capt. Kean and his men left their schooner early in the morning, and after rowing some distance along the shore proceeded to set their net. While in the act of throwing over the twine the boat capsized, throwing the occupants into the water, where for upwards of an hour the men struggled for their lives. To regain the boat was impossible as it was bottom up and covered with the tangled ropes and twine, so the only thing for the men to do was to keep themselves afloat as best they could; this they did by holding on to each other, the stronger helping the weaker to remain above the surface until rescued by another boat from the schooner which was also setting a trap some distance away. The four men in the rowing boat on seeing their shipmates in trouble dropped their work and with four oars across their boat pulled for all their might to the scene of the accident. One by one the drowned men were lifted into the boat and taken on board their schooner. Two of the number were so exhausted that they became unconscious, and remained so for a considerable time. However, after a few days' rest the rescued fishermen were fully recovered and able to continue the voyage.

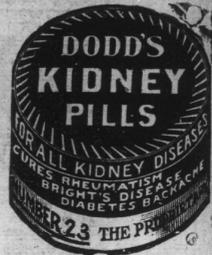

Thetis From Labrador.

PROSPECTS OF GOOD FISHERY.
The s.s. Thetis, Capt. Burgess, reached port at 5 p.m. yesterday from the Labrador mail service having gone as far north as Hopedale. Capt. Burgess reports the fishery along the coast as exceptionally good. From Indian Tickle to Sandy Island shoremen and boatmen are doing well, traps averaging from 20 to 50 qts. daily. At Macrorick there is also a good sign. The fish only struck in a few days before the Thetis reached the place, which was on the 12th inst. Dense fog was experienced throughout the whole of the voyage, and it was with great difficulty that Capt. Burgess navigated his ship. The Grenfell Mission have opened up their stations along the coast and have already attended to a large number of patients. A fisherman named James Kennedy, of Hr. Main, who was fishing at Griffin's Hr. came along to enter the hospital. He is suffering from an internal complaint. It is expected that the Thetis on her next trip will go as far north as Nain.

Madame Olive Timmons sings the popular Scotch ballad "Annie Laurie" at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day. Marguerite Coyrot is presented in "When Appearances Deceive," one of the most exciting episodes of the "Ventures of Marguerite Series." The Selig Company presents a Diamond special feature in three reels, entitled "Diamonds are Trumps," and a very funny comedy "A Safe Risk." Not one of our readers should miss seeing this great Holiday program at the Popular Crescent to-day.

A delicious beverage for a warm day is made by covering pineapple cores and peels with water in a kettle, adding a teaspoonful of ginger and letting simmer on the back of the stove all day.

Twin-screw Motor Launch.

The new twin-screw motor launch for the use of the new cold storage plant, was given a try out yesterday morning. Manager Gowans and Mr. John Angel going out for the run. The launch is the first of its kind to be seen on the Harbor, and will be used exclusively in towing the company's fish scows in and out the Harbor, five of which are now ready to be put in use. The motor launch is 24 feet long, 6 ft. 6 in. wide and 5 ft. 2 1/2 inches deep, is 19 h.p. and has a speed of 11 knots. In order to get full value from her engines she will take about three tons of ballast. The launch, which is original in design, has attracted much attention along the waterfront. Manager Gowans is certainly making things hum in connection with his business and is to be congratulated on the success achieved.

WEDNESDAY, July 18th, 1917. It is claimed for Lazell's Dental Cream that it beautifies while it purifies, and this seems to be the result obtained by users in Canada and the United States. This particular member of the Lazell family of superior toilet preparations is new to Newfoundland, but it is as good as others of their preparations which we have been handling we think we can reasonably bespeak for it a fair share of public patronage. Large tubes, price 35c. Mentholated Bronchial Lozenges look simple enough, but a great deal of thought has been put into their formula, with a view of combining the most effective expectorants, stimulants and demulcents in a palatable form. The Day of the Child.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

A dear old lady whom I know went recently to visit her daughter and her children in another state.

She had a beautiful visit but came home looking very tired. After a time the reason came out. She is used to sleeping in a large bed. Her daughter's home is small and full of children and she slept on a couch.

"It was a very comfortable couch," she said in quick defense of any unspoken criticism, "but the last few years I can't seem to sleep as well on a couch. I like a headboard and a footboard somehow. I know I'm foolish but old folks are apt to be that way. And then I slept in the room with Roderick and I'm not used to sleeping in the room with anyone."

I Abuse My Privileges.

"Did Roderick sleep on a couch too?" I asked (I have a close friend's privileges and I was minded to take advantage of them).

"Oh, no, he has a bed."
"Oh well," she said, "I don't think his mother would want to move him. He catches cold awfully easy. Anyway it was a very comfortable couch. It was just my fault."

Surely this is the century of the child!

The Child Comes First Nowadays

I quote that incident because it was typical. This is the day when not only the child's development but his comfort and his pleasure are put above the comfort and pleasure of older people. Look back at your own youth. When grandmother came to visit and the home was full who slept on the couch, you or grandmother? More Likely You Curled Up On the Sofa.

Indeed you were lucky if you had a comfortable couch to sleep on. Couches weren't so plentiful then. More likely you had to camp out on a sofa or some such contraption. My own memories are of a curious extension chair that was supposed to serve as a bed in times of stress—a sort of awkward and cumbersome ancestor of the Morris chair.

Being young, I didn't mind sleeping in it the least. Indeed I regarded it as a kind of adventure to sleep in the parlor. But even youth didn't save me from being cramped in the morning. However, what of that? I was young. I could stand it and I soon forgot it. And it certainly would never have occurred to the family to ask the visiting relative to sleep in the chair.

But times have changed since then. For the better?

I wonder.

I fell from a building and received what the doctor called a very bad sprained ankle, and told me I must not walk on it for three weeks. I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and in six days I was out to work again. I think it is the best Liniment made.

THE CARBURETOR.
The carburetor is a small, malignant attachment to an automobile which is used for demonstration purposes, after which it is removed and replaced by a stuttering imitation of a milk strainer.

The purpose of the carburetor is to take a swallow of waterized gasoline and pure, fresh air and mix them together in equal parts. A good carburetor will do this without getting red in the face. When the mixture is ready for use it is sprayed into the cylinders through the front teeth of the carburetor, which then reaches back into the gasoline tank and takes another swallow. Once in a while the carburetor will swallow too much and choke, causing the engine to miss several important impulses and imparting an undulating motion to the car, like riding in an elevator, with St. Vitus' dance.

Along in the fall of the year most carburetors contract a severe cold in the head. The carburetor always comes from the factory adjusted to meet any climate that it happens to run into. Notwithstanding this fact, which is plainly printed in short, crisp language on a red card tied around his neck, the first thing the new automobile owner wants to do is to adjust it to the temperature of the country in which he lives. By the time an Inexperienced but earnest citizen has adjusted a new needle-valve carburetor so that it will carb without flooding the drip pan and the garage floor, he will be ready to crawl into the sofa and take a well-earned rest. If carburetor manufacturers could persuade inquisitive owners to keep profane hands off their product long enough to ascertain whether the trouble is in the clutch or the spark plugs, there would be fewer high-priced service men in the madhouse. The carburetor is a summer device, and works at its best when the thermometer is at the melting point. Along in the fall of the year most carburetors contract a severe cold in the head, and have to be put on a diet of 25-cent gasoline, which is not more than 90 per cent. water. This is termed a rich mixture, because nobody who is not rated in six figures can afford to use it. Some carburetors have to be fed on hot air in large quantities, and thrive upon it as well as a candidate for Congress who is about to distribute a few post offices. The life of the carburetor is usually longer than that of the man who tries to hurdle a wooden culvert with the cut-out open.

Australian Referendum a Blunder.

Sydney Morning Herald: That a blunder was made in ever submitting the question to the people must now be readily accepted by all. A nation, in seeking such powers as that sought by the federal parliament should have taken counsel of its "braves," of its fighting men only. It should have been a question put to men of military age only, and put in another form. Instead of that it was decided by the women's vote, and the vote of old men and women, frightened by the tales put up by the unscrupulous Laborites, who did not hesitate to put their great organization to work to accomplish the downfall of those above them in the political world, not for the sake of a principle, but for the sake of office. The loafer and shirker only too readily followed their lead, and they, together with those who studied only their own, short-sighted, selfish ends, gave them the victory for the time being.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.

Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. Drayton Sends Back Cheque for $15,000.

Railway Commissioner Asks that His Services be Considered as a Contribution to the Country.

Ottawa, July 11.—Sir Henry Drayton, Chairman of the Dominion Railway Board, has returned to the Government a cheque for $15,000, which was sent to him in payment for his services as a member of the Drayton-Ackworth-Smith commission which investigated the Canadian railway situation. In the letter which accompanied the cheque, Sir Henry said he could not accept such a payment in the present time of stress and war. He asked that his services as a member of the royal commission be regarded as a contribution to the country.

ALL CAN HELP.

I cannot sacrifice a leg, as I'd do with delight, no odds how earnestly I beg, they will not let me fight. "You are too old," the sergeant cries, "to go across the sea; you have bun eyes and misfit eyes, and gout and housemaid's knee. We only want the young and hale to swat the foe in France; you are fat and halt and stale to do stunts with a lance." I cannot shed my rich blood beneath a foreign moon; as warrior my name is Mud, for I was born too soon. But there are fifty-seven ways in which a man may aid the lads who fight the Prussian jays, though he can't wield a blade. You do not want a catalogue those methods to descry; if you're not walking in a fog, they stare you in the eye. Each day I see new ways to help and give Red Bill a slap; and so I do not groan or yelp, that they won't let me scrap. They will not let me bleed to death where roaring armies meet; they say I am too short of breath, and have too many feet. I cannot pile my dead in hills upon a crimson field, but I can help to pay the bills, for I am nicely healed.

For egg toast, take one cupful of milk, skim milk or water, and add a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt. Beat the egg, and add the liquid and salt. Let the bread soak in the mixture until slightly soft. Then fry to a light brown on a hot, well-greased pan or griddle. More eggs may be used, if available.

ELECTORAL REFORM GETS BACK.

COPENHAGEN, Den.—The German press continues to reflect public opinion on the appointment of George Michael as Imperial Chancellor will be with the death of the movement to parliamentarize the Imperial Government by giving the members seats either in the Reichstag or in a new controlling body created such as the proposed Council of Representatives. The Emperor of Bavaria and other states of the Empire was quick to point out that the Parliamentary Ministry could be introduced without upsetting the whole federal character of the Empire, which finds expression in the Supreme Bundesrat. The idea which Bethmann Hollweg considered for time, namely the institution of an Imperial Council consisting of five representatives of the Government, Bundesrat and Reichstag to serve as a connecting link between the Government and legislative institutions of the Empire, has been dropped, according to the public newspaper Germania.

ELECTORAL REFORM GETS A SET BACK.

COPENHAGEN, To-day.
If the German press correctly reflects public opinion on the event, the appointment of George Michaelis as Imperial Chancellor will be associated with the death of the movement to parliamentarize the Imperial Administration by giving the Reichstag members seats either in the Cabinet or in a new controlling body to be created such as the proposed Imperial Council of Representatives. The press of Bavaria and other states in the Empire was quick to point out that a Parliamentary Ministry could not be introduced without upsetting the whole federal character of the Empire, which finds expression in the Supreme Bundesrat. The alternative idea which Bethmann Hollweg actually considered for time, namely the institution of an Imperial Council, consisting of five representatives each of the Government, Bundesrat and Reichstag to serve as a connecting link between the Government and representative institutions of the nation, has been dropped, according to the Catholic newspaper Germania.

THE IRISH CONVENTION.

DUBLIN, To-day.
The National Convention will assemble on July 25th in Regent House of Trinity College, according to an official announcement. The Chief Secretary for Ireland, R. E. Duke, will preside until the Convention chooses its own Chairman. It is expected that the proceedings will be private, but probably an official record will be made of them.

"THE HOUSE OF WINDSOR."

LONDON, To-day.
King George today at a meeting of the Privy Council announced the new name of the Royal House and family to be the House of Windsor. The Privy Council at which the King announced the change was held at St. James's Palace. It was the most important and largest attended since the coronation. The attendants included Premier Lloyd George, Foreign Secretary Balfour and other members of the Cabinet, the Archbishop of Canterbury, former Premier Asquith and all the members of Colonial Governments who are now in London. The Privy Council unanimously endorsed King George's announcement and a proclamation putting it into effect was published this afternoon.

LONDON, To-day.
We gained ground slightly during the night northwest of Wirnemen, says a statement of the British War Office to-day. In the Neuport sector, the communication adds, one of our raiding parties encountered a large party of the enemy in front of the GERMANS REPULSED.

PARIS, To-day.
German troops made a strong attack on the French positions in the vicinity of the Teton, but were driven back, leaving a number of dead, according to a statement issued by the War Office to-day.

TROUBLE IN RUSSIAN CABINET.

PETROGRAD, To-day.
Three members of the Cabinet have resigned and a special session of council ministers has been convoked in an effort to avert a crisis. Their names are A. I. Shingaroff, Minister of Finance; Prof. Manuiloff, Minister of Education; and Prince Skavsky, head of the Dept. of Public Aids. The resignation of these Cabinet Ministers followed a sharp disagreement over questions involving the Ukraine. Premier Lvoff has requested the Ministers to meet at his private residence when the cause of the dispute will be considered. The Ministers took exception to the form of a declaration drawn by M. Tereschenko and Tsaratelli without the authorization of the Government. Tereschenko and Tsaratelli, the Cadets maintained, simply had been given the power of making a declaration in the name of the Government. M. Tereschenko and Tsaratelli insisted upon the immediate publication of the declaration, adding that the form might be altered if the sense were kept intact. When a vote was taken at a Cabinet Council meeting the two Lvoffs in the Cabinet and the Socialists declared themselves in favor of the declaration as already drawn without correction or alteration. Opposed by the majority, the cadet members then resigned.

THEIR SUCCESSORS.

PETROGRAD, July 17.
Prokopovitch and Charnovsky have been appointed Ministers of Commerce and Education.

Germany hopes that the affair of the torpedoing of the Argentine steamer Torb will be settled amicably, according to a semi official note. This statement denies that relations have been broken off, the Government saying that it has not yet replied to the Argentine note.

MAKING MORE TROUBLE.

PEKING, July 17.
Premier Tuan has decided that an abdication edict is unnecessary, as it would compromise the Emperor. The Chinese of the southern provinces, jealous of his success, are already endeavoring to weaken his power, asserting he intends to retain the Emperor.

BRITISH TAKE FOUR GERMAN STEAMERS.

LONDON, July 17.
The Admiralty announces the capture of four German steamers by British destroyers in the North Sea. The steamers are the Pelloworm, Brietsig, Marie Horn and Heinzblumberg. The Brietsig is 1,415 tons gross, owned in Hamburg; the Pelloworm, 1,370 tons gross, owned in Hamburg; the Marie Horn, 1,083 tons, is from Schleswig, and the Heinzblumberg, 1,226 tons, is registered from Hamburg.

SHOOTING AFFAIR IN PETROGRAD.

PETROGRAD, July 17.
Two demonstrations against the Government resulted in the firing of shots in the Nevsky Prospekt at midnight, as a result of which a number of persons were killed or wounded. The firing apparently was the result of stray shots which brought on a panic, in which the demonstrators turned rifles and machine guns on each other. Quiet was restored after a few minutes. The demonstrations were organized by the Bolsheviki, the majority faction of the Social Democrat party.

ANOTHER RESIGNATION.

LONDON, July 17.
A despatch from Petrograd says that M. St. Panoff, acting Minister of Commerce, has resigned.

GERMAN SHIPPING LOSSES.

LONDON, July 17.
Since Saturday seventeen German steamers have sailed from Rotterdam three at one time and 14 at another, a despatch says. Of the first group, one, the Magdalena Blumenthal, was wrecked off Zandvoort. Of the second group, owing to action with British destroyers not one ship was able to proceed, eight being captured or sunk and three succeeding in putting back to Rotterdam. Of the three remaining steamers which were stranded two were afloat.

BRITISH CABINET CHANGES.

LONDON, July 17.
Sir Edward Carson has relinquished his post as First Lord of the Admiralty and joined the war cabinet without portfolio. According to the official statement of the new ministerial appointments Sir Edward will be succeeded by Sir Eric Campbell Geddes, who has been director general of munitions supply. Winston Spencer Churchill succeeds Dr. Christopher Addison as Minister of Munitions. Dr. Addison becomes minister without portfolio in charge of reconstruction. Baron Montagu of Beaulieu is made Secretary for India.

Airplanes Will Make War Futile.

SAYS O. WRIGHT.

Dayton, Ohio, July 11.—Orville Wright to-day declared this is the last war and that aeroplanes will win it.

"This is the last war because aeroplanes used in great numbers will make war futile. My brother and I were so convinced from the beginning," said the inventor of the aeroplane. Wright said air attacks on London are absurd if the design is to destroy the city. The obvious reason for these raids is to keep large numbers of these airmen in England for defensive purposes," he said. "They might otherwise be used on the western front."

"What will become of the airplane after the war?" he was asked. "It will become the most popular vehicle for sport," said Wright. "Thousands of young men who will have learned to fly will be coming back. They will not quit flying. It is great fun."

"From the start," said Wright, "my brother and I saw the aeroplane as an unerring scout through which armies could detect each other's movements. An army movement can be successful only if veiled in strictest secrecy. The army with the most eyes will win."

To Make Munitions in Private.

Westinghouse Interests Want 1,000 Men to Imprison Themselves for Ten Months.

New York, N.Y., July 13.—A special to the World from Pittsburg says the Westinghouse interests here are seeking one thousand men who are willing to sign an agreement to enter a new plant to be built for the manufacture of war munitions by a secret process and remain imprisoned for ten months, all communication with the outside world to be shut off.

Men who have been approached were told that the plant will manufacture a powerful implement of war and the secret must be guarded until the Government sees fit to make the details public. Only those workmen and officials who would be engaged in the production of the new weapon will know its character and the details of manufacture.

Recreation and entertainment of every possible sort will be furnished the isolated employees. Pay double that they now get is guaranteed and bonuses will be paid for high production. Only picked men whose Americanism is unquestioned and whose skill in their respective vocations is of the highest, will be employed. Officials of the Westinghouse interests to-day refused to talk.

An artisan of high standing who was approached by the Westinghouse agents said he had received an intimation that the new plant would turn out in large quantities one of the late inventions of Thomas A. Edison.

SEAMAN'S BAG PICKED UP.

Last evening a number of children playing at Buckmaster's Field discovered a seaman's bag partly filled with clothing. The police are of the opinion that the package is the property of a seaman who has deserted his ship.

The Revenge of Dignity

(From the Springfield Union.)

Cardinal Mercier in telling the Governor General of Belgium that his priests will pay fine upon fine rather than give assistance to the Germans in carrying on their policy of deportation, says: "We await our vengeance in patience. I am not speaking of our earthly vengeance. We have that already, for the regime of occupation that you force us to undergo is despised by everything that is decent in the whole world. I am speaking of the judgment of history, of the inescapable punishment, of the God of justice." It takes more than the guns that silenced Liege to silence this great prelate and the simple truths he utters.

What's in a Name?

(From the Macon Telegraph.)

In view of the fact that Georgia has a bone-dry law, A. Pettibone opines that the following news item deserves a moth-proof pigeonhole in the archives:

Loganberry, Ga., June 24.—The suit of Drydale vs. Wetz was on trial here Saturday, with Attorney Casebeer at the bar for plaintiff.

The suit involved the rental of a dry goods store.

The Wetz side lost. Attorney Casebeer's corksing plea lacked much of being dry, and the plaintiff won the case with spirit.

Drydale won judgment for $1,000. The case was tried before Judge Hay.

WOUNDED WITH CANADIANS.—J. Haarahan, Conception Bay, Nfld., reported wounded July 14.
