During the first days of the battle certain detachments of Canadian cavalry were placed under orders of the French General commanding the French army corps which was first thrown into the struggle to maintain liason with the British right. On Tuesday the 26th, the Germans made their attack upon a certain height. The Canadian horsemen were ordered to occupy the hill in order to drive back parties of German infantry who were endeavoring to worm their way gradually up the slopes. The Canadians who arrived on horseback dismounted at the foot of the hill and climbed to the summit from which after a hard fight they were dislodged by the Germans. On descending from the height they were met by their General who ordered them to return and capture the position. No greater compliment could be paid us than to have the Advocate republish nearly the whole of our article on "the beginning of the end." We can pass over his personal reference, for to indulge in of a losing fight. In the connection in which we have written we are prepared to stand any amount of abuse from the patriarch in journalism who edits the Advocate by Command, but we would have thought that even he would have recognised the amenities, notwithstanding any decree issued by his master, and we are surprised that a gentleman of the late standing of the editor of the Advocate, should so far forget himself. ### 25 p.c. Increase Granted

The laborers engaged handling the cargoes of the sealing steamers decided, on Saturday, to try for increase of 40 p.c. in pay. President Jas.

McGrath, of the L. S. P. U., notified the owners of their decision. The laborers contended, and that rightly, if the sealers can be guaranteed an increase of 40 p.c. they should receive a corresponding increase. President McGrath has met Messrs. E. A. Bowring and R. B. Job and received an offer of 25 per cent., which offer, we understand, has been accepted.

bucto Collision.

Drysdale, J. Having gone over the extended notes again and again, I have reached conclusions: In the first place. I find that the Chebucto and Morwenna were crossing ships, the Chebucto having the Morwenna on the starboard side was the giving way ship.

I have, after looking over the evidence and the plans, and having put the rulers on the chart, concluded that there is no reasonable doubt that the vessels were crossing ships. All you have to do, is to put the parallel ruleres on the chart, take the place of collision, the admitted point of starting, and it is beyond question that the vessels were crossing ships. I have no doubt of this, and I have no doubt that it was the duty of the Chebucto to keep

TORONTO, To-day.

Canadain Methodism has lost its most influential and beloved personality, in the death of former Chancellor Burwash, D.D., at his home here Saturday night. The late Dr. Burwash was in his usual health until Saturday afternoon when he complained of feeling a little unwell. His physician was called in and after treatment the doctor retired to his room. After getting up at eleven o'clock to take his medicine, he returned to bed and lying back he passed quietly away. The Doctor was born near St. Andrew's, Quebec, in 1839.
