For Love of a Woman;

New Romeo and Juliet.

CHAPTER VIII.

"I promise nothing!" rang in his ears. "I promise nothing!" It was a strange answer. Most girls would have said "Yes," or glanced at him, so to speak, indignantly; but "I promise nothing!" she had said, in her sweet, grave, penetrating voice. Would she come? And if she did, how much the happier would it be? What on earth had come to him that he should be unable to think of anything but this lovely, bewitching girl, so beautiful in face and great in genius?

He woke with a start as the marquis rose, and bowed to Lady Grace, who was quitting the room.

"Come with me and smoke a cigar," said Lord Neville to Spencer Churchill.

"Mr. Churchill will do nothing of the kind!" exclaimed Lady Grace, stopping and looking over her shoulder, not at his smiling face, but at the opposite wall. "How inconsiderate you are, Lord Neville; you forget that I am dying to hear all the latest news."

"I thought you'd heard it all," he said, with a smile.

"Not half," she retorted. "I shall be on the terrace, Mr. Churchill."

He bowed and smiled; then he turned to the marquis.

"There used to be a very fine old port, marquis," he said.

The marquis glanced at the butler, who went out, and returned presently, carefully carrying a bottle in a wicker frame, and Mr. Spencer Churchill slipped the famous wine with angelic enjoyment.

"There is nothing like port," he murmured. "Nothing, yes, marquis, you look the picture of health. Ah, my dear Neville, depend upon it, that the moralists are right after all, and that, if one would enjoy life at its fullest, the thing is to be good!" and he smiled beamingly at the marquis, who had, for a generation, been called Wicked Lord Stoyie.

Lord Neville glanced at the pale, cold face of his uncle, expecting some cutting retort; but the marquis only smiled.

"You were always a moralist, Churchill," he said. "But your advice comes rather late for Neville, who has, I'm afraid, made acquaintances with the prodigal's husks pretty often."

THIS MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

Both Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Steele, Ala.—"During the Change of Life I had hot flashes, was nervous, run down, and had sick headaches for two or three days at a time. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am much stronger and better in every way than I was. My daughter's health broke down last June from teaching school without a rest, and she has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Blood Medicine with good results. She is much better and teaching now and I give your medicine the praise. You are welcome to use this letter for the benefit of other suffering women."—Mrs. F. A. GAINES, R.R. No. 1, Steele, Ala.

Women who suffer as Mrs. Gaines did should not hesitate to give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial, as the evidence that is constantly being published proves beyond question that this grand old remedy has relieved much suffering among women.

"And now comes back to find the fatted calf killed for him," sang Mr. Spencer Churchill, sweetly.

The Marquis rose.

"Don't let me interfere with your part," he said.

Neville looked after him.

"I think I can stand about another day of this," he said, quietly.

"After that you would really not be able to resist the temptation to throw him out of the window, eh? He, he, my dear Neville!" murmured Spencer Churchill, with a smile.

"Shall we go and join Lady Grace? She won't object to a cigarette, I suppose?"

"I don't know; I never asked her," he said. "I'll go and get some cigars," and he sprang up and left the room.

Spencer Churchill's bland smile followed him for a moment or two, then the expression of his face wholly changed. His lips seemed to grow rigid, his soft, sleepy eyes acute, his very cheeks, usually so soft and round, hard and angular; and he sat with his glass held firmly in his hand, peering thoughtfully at the table-cloth.

Then he rose, and, carefully examining the bottle, poured the remains of it into his glass, and drank it slowly and appreciatively, and then stepped through the open window on to the terrace.

A slim and graceful figure leant against the balustrade. It was Lady Grace; her hands, clasped together, were pressed hard against the stone coping, as if they were trying to force their way through it, and the face she turned towards him was pale and anxious—the face of one waiting for the verdict of one expecting the dread fiat of a judge.

With a benign smile, more marked than ever, perhaps intensified by the famous port, he slowly approached her.

"What an exquisite view!" he said, softly, and extending his hands as if he were pronouncing a benediction on the scenery; "not that Nature is in her spring-time. How refreshing, how inspiring, how vernal! I cannot express to you, Lady Grace, how deeply this beautiful prospect moves me! One must have a hard and unimpressible heart, indeed, who is not moved by such a landscape as this so soft, so—er—green."

Her clasped hands grew together more tightly.

"Why have you come here?" she said, suddenly, in a strained voice.

He raised his pale eyebrows.

"Here—on the terrace, do you mean, Lady Grace?" he said, in a voice of an innocent unsophisticated child; "surely you forget. You yourself asked me."

"Why have you come here?" she repeated.

Without changing his expression or his attitude of bland, serene enjoyment, he murmured:

"I came because I thought you wanted me—and you do!"

CHAPTER IX.

A SECRET COMPACT.

"I came because I thought you wanted me—and you do," said Spencer Churchill, softly.

Lady Grace looked at him with an expression of dislike and fear—actual fear. It displayed itself in every line of the face, perfectly formed face, in the expansion of her clear eyes, in the light—almost painful—compression of her slim, white hands.

"Why do you think so?" she demanded, in a low voice.

He smiled, until it seemed as if he meant it for his only reply; then he said in a dulcet voice:

"A little bird whispered—"

She made a movement of impatience.

"Is there anything you do not know? Is there anything one does or says that does not reach you?"

He shrugged his shoulders, not cynically, but still with the amused gesture with which one meets the petulance of a spoiled child.

"I believe there is no secret in any of the lives of men and women who call you friend—friend!—that you have not become possessed of. How, is a mystery!"

"It is a question of sympathy, my dear Lady Grace," he said. "Nature bestowed upon me a large and sympathetic heart—"

Again she made a movement of impatience.

"Spare yourself the trouble of trying to delude me," she said, in a kind of quiet despair. "There are many who fully believe you to be what your face and voice and manner and reputation make you appear; but I am not one of them—I think I have known you from the first."

BUNIONS

Relieved by Dr. Scholl's Bunion Reducer Shield

This appliance has a peculiar concave shape purposely so formed to fit snugly over joint between toes, and at the same time also prevents the enlarged joint from forcing shoe out of shape.

Is superior to old-fashioned leather and felt protectors, as it is made from antiseptic rubber, and being worn right on bunion inside boot, it excludes dirt, and retains a moisture pocket which keeps the joint soft and pliable, removes that hard skin or scab that so often accompanies and increases the irritability of the enlargement, also reduces inflamed condition.

Made in three sizes, right and left foot. Price 50c each, $1.00 per pair.

Sold by RELIABLE SHOE DEALERS

Free booklet "Treatment and Care of the Feet," mailed to any address on request. There is a Dr. Scholl Appliance for every foot ailment.

SCHOLL Eases the Feet

"You have been penetration," he murmured, as if she had paid him a delicate compliment.

"I see you without your mask—that mask which presents the appearance of a smiling, benevolent good will. You cannot impose upon me, Spencer Churchill!"

"Do me the credit of admitting, dear Lady, that I never tried," he said, softly.

"No," she said; "it would have been useless. Others you may deceive; me you cannot. Therefore, I ask you plainly, why you came here? Of course I know that you were aware I was here."

"Oh, yes, I was aware of it," he admitted; "but think, dear Lady Grace, such a knowledge does not prove much astuteness on my part. Lady Grace Peyton's movements are one of the social events which are daily reported—"

"None of the papers said that I was at Barton Towers," she said, sharply.

"You got that information from some other source."

"What does it matter?" he remarked, soothingly.

"No," she said; "it does not matter, excepting that it proves what I say, that there is nothing you do not know. And now, once more, why have you come? I put a plain question. I expect a plain answer."

"If I always get what we expected!" he murmured, mockingly.

She coloured and bit her lip.

"You do not mean to answer? It was from no love for or goodwill to me. I know you do not like me, Spencer Churchill!"

"He looked quite shocked, and whistled:

"My dear Lady Grace, you hurt me; you do, indeed! There is no one in the charming circle to which you belong whom I more ardently admire and respect. Oh, really, you wound me! Not like you!"—he held out his soft, plump hands reproachfully—"Lady Peyton possesses the whole of my esteem; and if I could do her a service—"

"You would do it!" she broke in, abruptly, with a bitter scornful laugh. He sighed and looked up at the sky with an injured air of patience and long-suffering.

"How little you know me! How cruelly you wrong me! Alas! it is always thus! One's best effort on behalf of others is always met with scorn and incredulity—"

"There is the marquis," she said, as if she had been thinking deeply and had not heard his pathetic appeal.

"What do you know about him? How have you got him in your power?"

"Got the marquis in my power? My dear Lady Grace—"

"Pshaw!" she said. "Do you think I am blind that I cannot see how different he treats you to others? Is there any other man who would come to Barton Towers, and be received as you have been? Is there any other man who would dare to brave him—yes, and taunt him—as you have done to-day? You know something about him—you have some hold upon him. I don't ask what it is—oh, no," she added, quietly, as he smiled, "for I know that you would not tell me—I would palm off some smooth falsehood—"

"Oh, Lady Grace! Lady Grace!" he answered, plaintively; but there was a flicker of self-jubilant and satisfaction on his smiling face.

"It is so, or why should he, who is civil to no one else, be civil to you? You know why I am here?" she said, abruptly, as if to throw him off his guard.

But the ruse failed utterly. He turned his smiling face to her suavely.

"I can guess," he said, softly.

Her face flushed, then grew hard and defiant.

"Of course you can. Guess? You know! I am here because I was commanded by the marquis. I am here because his mightiness pleases to wish that I should—"

He glanced over his shoulder warningly.

"Is it wise to speak so loudly, my lady?"

She made a gesture of impatient self-scorn.

"What does it matter? Why should I care who knows it? I am here that I may learn to regard myself as the future wife of the future marquis. And you know it."

He looked at her quietly, with a frank, benevolent regard—just the look one bestows on an irritable child.

"And is that so distasteful?" he asked. Her face crimsoned, and her eyes drooped, and his smile grew broader.

"Not distasteful, I should say," he murmured; "quite the reverse. Lady Grace let me return you a compliment. You praised me for my power of acting; yours is a great deal higher. You wanted me to believe that the marquis's idea was repugnant, whereas—"

He chuckled smotherly.

Her face grew crimson again, and she turned it from him for a moment, then faced him again.

Bee-Stings for Headaches.

Nature, wonderful Nature, is a sweet, motherly person. She provides remedies for all sorts of invalids, whether human, animal, bird, or insect. They all receive the same kind, unflinching consideration. There is no distinction.

A severe headache is a common complaint with Mr. Bruin. When attacked acutely, he will amble along to the nearest hollow tree and smell out the bees, who in turn become highly indignant and sting the intruder unmercifully. But Mr. Bruin doesn't mind. With a snort and a snug he ambles off home again. His headache is cured.

The bear is a staunch believer in the medicinal qualities of the ivy-leaf, and when feeling out of sorts chooses ivy-leaves as a restorative.

Donkeys are frequent victims to me-lancholia; but a tonic is close at hand in the scale-fern. It is a sure restorative, and backs them up wonderfully.

The chameleon is a perfectly harmless little creature. It has, however, one hereditary enemy in the crow, if they should happen to meet, a battle-royal rages. But cautious Mr. Crow is aware of his rival's poisonous qualities, and before waging war eats a leaf or two of laurel as a preventive against poisoning.

Even the busy little bee has an enemy. Sometimes it is attacked by numerous very tiny insects. When infested with these small mites the enraged one makes off to the nearest anthill and causes a commotion. The angry ants come out and attack, but failing foul of the mites, they destroy or carry them all off.

The bee, thus delivered of its aggressors, calmly wings itself away.

BRITAIN SCORES AGAIN

R-34 Makes Successful Return Voyage---King Congratulates Commander of Dirigible---Allies Have Raised Blockade Against Germany.

R-34 ARRIVES HOME.
LONDON, July 13. The arrival of the British Dirigible R-34 at Pulham airbase this morning is announced by the Air Ministry to have occurred at 6.06, Greenwich time. Unofficial Timers reported that she had landed at 7.02. The Air Ministry announced at 5.56 o'clock that R-34 was first sighted 50 miles north of Pulham, Greenwich time. The dirigible turned to the south and after circling over the airbase at a height of 800 feet landed safely at 6.06 Greenwich time. Delay of one hour after she was first sighted at Pulham.

CONGRATULATIONS FROM KING.
LONDON, July 13. King George sent the following telegram to Major Scott, Commander of the R-34: "I hereby congratulate you on your return home after the completion of your memorable and indeed unique trans-Atlantic achievement." Gen. Seely, head of the Air Ministry and other officials sent congratulations.

THE PRINCE'S TRIP.
LONDON, July 13. The Entourage of the Prince of Wales for the Canadian visit shows that with the exception of the controller Sir Sydney Greville, all small household will accompany him. Admiral Sir Lionel Halsey, Chief of Staff, Commanded the warship New Zealand, in the action of the fight of Heligoland a month after the outbreak of hostilities, when the British sunk three cruisers and several destroyers. Commander Dudley North has recently served with Admiral Halsey on the President. Lieut. Colonel E. W. Greig has a brilliant career ahead and followed journalism as a profession for several years before the war sent him into the Grenadier Guards.

WIRE TAPPERS ARRESTED.
NEW YORK, July 13. John McSherry, describing himself as a salesman and alleged by the police to be a member of a gang of "wire tappers" who are credited with fleecing victims out of $1,000,000 in Buffalo was arrested to-day. McSherry's arrest followed that of Charles Drucker and William Jarvis. One of the principal victims of the Buffalo gang was Michael Donnelly, a Contractor, who claims to have lost $12,500 betting on a horse race in a Bogus poolroom in Buffalo last December.

BLOCKADE ON GERMANY OVER.
PARIS, July 13. The German delegation at Versailles was informed to-day in a letter from the Peace Conference that the ratification of the blockade was about over. Decision to raise the blockade was taken by the Council of Five Friday.

STORY OF THE VOYAGE OF R-34.
PULHAM, NORFOLK ENGLAND, July 13.—Great Britain's Mammoth Transatlantic Dirigible R-34 arrived at the air station here, 6.06 o'clock Greenwich time to-day completing her round trip from the British Isles to the United States and return. The R-34 poked her nose out of the clouds north east of this village and after circling the flying field three times, gliding gently to the ground and ten minutes later was hoisted in the Dirigible shed. The voyage from Long Island was without particular incident and was completed in approximately seventy-five hours. Soon after daybreak, four hundred men, stationed at the airbase, were roused from their sleep to prepare for the landing of the Transatlantic voyager. Lookouts took positions in the towers and Wireless Operators prepared to pick up messages from the airship.

The sun rose bright but soon afterwards was obscured by clouds, there was no wind, and those on land were confident that the Dirigible would arrive on time. Shouts from those on the field greeted the first sight of the big gray body on the horizon. As the R-34 approached the field she dropped from a height of five thousand feet to two thousand. The men who were to aid the airship in landing were ordered to their positions, and waited silently as the ship circled the field, dropping lower and lower. When Major G. H. Scott, her Commander had maneuvered the airship into position for the landing, the water ballast was thrown from her bow. The rope was grasped by eager hands, and the giant ship moved gently across the field to the shed where the delicate operation of berthing her was completed quickly without accident. The voyage home has been without incident, said Major Scott. We went breakfast, after breakfast, and while enjoying the belated luxury of his little black pipe, smoking not being permitted on the airship, Major Scott, told the story of the return flight. We estimated we would make it from 70 to 80 hours he said but made it 75. When we left we had a strong wind behind us, and we covered the first 800 miles in about 8 hours. When we circled over New York we could plainly see the crowds on Broadway waving to us as we passed, but could not hear them because of the noise of the engines. South of Newfoundland we encountered head winds, and our progress from then was slow. We travelled at an average height of from 3000 to 5000 feet, and found much low clouds and fog. Once we saw nothing but fog for 24 hours. "We struck Ireland at Clifden, and made good progress from there, although our steering machine broke down Saturday morning. We started with 4000 gallons of gasoline, and had 1000 left. We are naturally pleased with the trip, 21 of us. I expect airships, big ships that will travel 70 to 80 miles an hour, and powerful enough to crawl through anything in the near future.

Yesterday at St. Thomas's.

At 8 o'clock the Men's Corporate Communion was held, and as usual a goodly number of the men of the Parish attended to receive the Blessed Sacrament. The Rector celebrated.

At 11 o'clock the congregation had the privilege of hearing a Priest of the Holy Catholic Church of China, the Rev. Percy Scott, M.A., Rector of the Cathedral at Peking, speak to them of the immense opportunities, the great and effectual door which is open in China offers to the spread of the Christian Church. The address was full of true missionary zeal and the preacher gave some striking facts about the new spirit in China, favorable to Christianity which the last few years have brought to light. He made it clear, however, that the Chinese do not want a mere western brand of Christianity, Anglican or other, forced upon them, but to develop a religion which, holding all the essentials of Christian doctrine and practicing essential Christian ordinances, will yet be a religion characteristic of China, one for the wealthy and educated, as well as for the ignorant and the humble coolies. Mr. Scott has a fine presence and a splendid delivery, and his reading of the lessons (there were two very striking lessons cast up by the sortes Hauracae, the second of which the summary given in Acts xvii of St. Paul's address on Mars Hill, he took as the starting point of his discourse were much enjoyed by a congregation which is used to good reading and accustomed to discriminate. Mr. Scott comes of a family in which the priestly tradition is strong, the late Bishop of North China was a cousin; and we believe he is directly descended from a divine eminent in his day as one of the bright lights of the Evangelical School, and well known as past author of the Biblical Commentary of Henry and Scott, once popular among the pious, and scholarly.

At Evensong the pulpit was occupied by Rev. Mr. Lyncheon, of Saskatoon, Sask., who based his discourse on the passage St. James I. v. 22 to 25: "Be ye doers of the word, etc." Simple in language, sincere in expression, evangelical in tone, the preacher's words were attentively listened to by the large congregation present.

Both preachers from far countries, came to us by the accident which brought R.M.S. Gramplan to our shores, and in that respect at least, the accident was a lucky one for St. Thomas's congregation.

L.O.A. Church Parade.

The Royal Oak and Leeming Lodges of the Royal Orange Association, held their yearly anniversary parade and church service yesterday afternoon, about 250 members being in regalia, at George Street Methodist Church. Rev. D. B. Hemmon, B.A., pastor of the church, was the preacher, delivering a magnificent sermon, touching upon the present day problems. A large congregation was also present. Return was made to the Hall by way of Water St. and McBride's Hill, when the usual votes of thanks were passed. The choir was voted thanks and Rev. Mr. Hemmon a $20 gold piece as a slight sign of the esteem in which he is held. The parade was under the direction of Mr. J. W. Penney, the W. M. of Leeming Lodge and Grand Treasurer of the Association for Newfoundland, and Mr. R. Simmons, the W. M. of Royal Oak Lodge.

The Arch-Enemy of Trotsky.

Koltchak, the arch-enemy of Trotsky and of Bolshevism, and who is commanding the army of the East that will yet appear in Russia out of Siberia, was bred to the sea. Under the Empire he held the rank of Admiral. When the debacle came he was commanding in the Black Sea. There was a Bolshevik mutiny among the sailors, and the control of the ships passed into the hands of a Soviet representing ignorance and disloyalty to the vital interests of Russia. But the Bolsheviks did not dare to kill Koltchak. They let him go with his sword. Koltchak made his way to the East and has succeeded in organizing a force that may prove to be the nucleus of an army that will finally rescue Russia from the bandits and murderers now terrorizing Central Russia and calling it democracy.

An English newspaper correspondent recently had an interview with Koltchak. "During our conversation," writes the interviewer, which was about the future of Russia, the Admiral, a wiry spare man of medium height, gave me the impression of being on pins and needles. Never had I met anybody so restless. His nervous irritability betrayed itself in his manner of speech—a string of short sharp, stabbing sentences. Thus:

"I do not despair of Russia. She can be saved. How? By her own exertions, but the Allies must help. "Rebuilding the Russian morale is necessary. This the Allies can do by showing they are with us, by practical, effective help. "After what our people have been through they want encouragement. Do not the Allies realize this?" Some months ago Koltchak threw over all the political "has-beens," posing as saviour of Russia, developed the nucleus of the sound army furnished by the Siberian recruits, and religious value, that were taken in some period of the world's history from the countries that now are victorious. The British, Belgian, French and Italian Governments have claims of this nature upon the enemy.

Some of the claims made evoke a picture of the wonderful pageant of Hapsburg rule from the low countries to the Italian plain. Italy is claiming on behalf of Tuscany, crown jewels and medals forming part of the Medici heirlooms and other precious objects removed to Vienna during the eighteenth century.

They also ask for the return of furniture and silver plate belonging to the Medici house, and of the instruments of astronomy and property belonging to the Academy of Cimento, removed by the House of Lorraine and sent as a present to cousins of the imperial house at Vienna.

Modena requires the return of the Virgin by Correggio, which was removed in 1859 by Archduke Francis V. as well as manuscripts and bronzes from the Modena library removed at the same time, including a billa vulgata, brevarium Romanum and officium beatae Virginiae. Also required is the restoration of a number of other objects which were claimed by the Duke of Modena in 1868 and 1872. These include two pictures by Salvatore Rosa.

Claims by Palermo and advanced upon objects made in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries by Arab workmen at Palermo working for Norman kings. These objects were carried away to Vienna and used at the coronation of emperors. These are by far the most important artistic treasures the return of which is claimed. The objects in question are the vestments of the Hohenstauffen Conrad and Frederick II period.

There are other vestments, most of which were made on the order of Conrad at the end of the twelfth century for use in the coronation ceremony. Work of this nature was the special province of Arab embroiderers, who were by far superior to European craftsmen.

National Tribute to Capt. Fryatt.

MEMORIAL SERVICE IN ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL, LONDON.

LONDON, July 8.—A national tribute of honor was paid to-day to the memory of Captain Charles Fryatt, executed by the Germans in 1916 for attempting to ram a U-boat, by a national memorial service at St. Paul's cathedral. After lying in state at the Dover station over night, the body arrived at Charing Cross station at 11 o'clock and was placed on a gun carriage drawn by blue jackets. A cortege was formed headed by relatives and including representatives of the admiralty, war office, other government departments and all seafarers' organizations.

With a naval escort and a band, the procession passed slowly thru the crowded streets by way of Trafalgar Square, Northumberland avenue, the Thames embankment and Ludgate Hill, arriving at the cathedral at noon. The coffin was hidden under a mass of flowers, among which were magnificent wreaths from the townspeople and authorities of Bruges and Antwerp. Only the steady tramp of feet and the solemn strains of funeral music broke the silence as the cortege passed thru the streets.

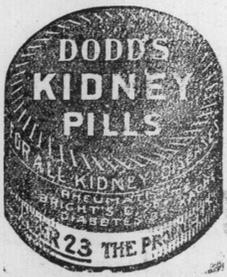

At the cathedral the ceremonies were generally a repetition of those to Edith Cavell. The clergy received the body at the west door of the edifice, an orchestra playing a funeral march as the coffin was placed in position. The burial service was read and the hymns, "Eternal Father, Strong to Save" and "Abide with Me," were sung. At the conclusion of the service the procession was reformed and again made an impressive progress to the Liverpool station, where theasket was placed on a train and sent to Dovercourt, the home of Captain Fryatt, where the remains will be interred in the quiet parish church yard.

All flags which are floating over the public buildings of London in honor of the signing of the treaty of peace, were half-masted during the ceremonies.

Onomatopoeic.

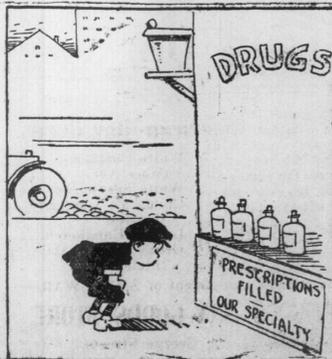

"Into the fog of the Banks they zoomed," writes a poet, moved to utterance by the hopping off of the aeroplanes from the shores of Newfoundland, and finding a new word to express the sound which the indignant writer of a letter to a St. John's newspaper declares frightens his hens and reduces their product of eggs. Future dictionaries may find a place for the verb "zoom." Considering all one has read about the aviators waiting, however, one may be allowed to wonder a little whether they actually zoomed into the fog. An earlier poet described the landing of the Pilgrims where the breaking waves dashed high on a stern and rockbound coast, and many readers have accepted that rugged picture of the historic scene without realizing that the spot where they land was particularly lacking in rocks.—Christian Science Monitor.

St. Bon's Re-union.

This morning, at 8 o'clock the annual re-union of the Old Boys of St. Bonaventure's College took place. The meeting commenced with a Solemn High Mass of Thanksgiving, celebrated by the Rev. (Capt.) T. Nangle, C.F. The choir rendered excellent singing of the Mass. This was followed by Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament celebrated by His Grace the Archbishop, assisted by Rev. Fathers Donnelly and Kerivan; after which breakfast was served in the College Refectory. The orator of the day was the Rev. Fr. Kitchen of St. Joseph's Parish, whose address proved to be one of the most magnificent ever delivered.

Great credit is due to the committee of management of which T. J. Thornburn is Chairman and J. A. Barron and T. S. McGrath Sec. & Treas. The catering was looked after by Mr. John Robinson of the Bally Haley Club while the decorations of the Refectory was done by Mr. P. Brown. Among the guests were: Dr. J. A. Burke, W. J. Carroll, F. J. Morris, K. C., Major G. T. Carty, Rev. Capt. T. Nangle, C.F., W. E. Beards, J. J. McGrath, B.L., L. E. Emerson, B.L., Major Geo. Emerson, M.B.E., V. P. Burke, M.A., B.Sc., etc., Sir P. T. C. of E. Cathedral.

Yesterday the pulpit at the Cathedral was occupied in the morning by Rev. Canon Heygate, who was for some years previous to 1889 Curate, and whose last visit to Newfoundland was 16 years ago. Many of his old parishioners were delighted to hear again one whom they greatly valued as priest and friend. In the evening Rev. Percy Scott, M.A., Rector of Pekin Cathedral was the preacher. The singing at both morning and evening prayer was of the usual high standard of excellence, and passengers from the Gramplan, who were present in large numbers were heard to express the opinion that both services were of a high liturgical order.

Accident at Cross Roads.

At 6 o'clock last evening one of Lester's buckboards, driven by Mr. Cole, came near killing a small boy named King, of the Cross Roads. It appears that the little chap ran under the horse just as the driver started, and the hind wheels of the buckboard went over the boy. Ex-Captain Kean, R.A.M.C., who happened to be near the scene, was quickly called and rendered medical aid. He found no bones broken but the boy was badly bruised.

Storm Causes Damage.

The following message was received by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries on Saturday evening from St. Mary's: "Storm still on; damage to traps cannot be estimated yet; bankers, motor boats, and trawlers lost cables, fear very many traps are torn up or floated away; so far no loss of life has been reported."

The Ex-Kaiser's Trial.

(From the Toronto Globe.)
The mention of Westminster in connection with the trial of the ex-Kaiser is repugnant to every Britton. Whatever the crimes or the station of life of those who have been tried there during all the centuries of its existence, they were at least of our own race. Westminster Hall, built by William Rufus, and altered by Richard II., has been the scene of many memorable events, notably the trials of Charles I. and of Warren Hastings. Charles' request to be heard before the Lords and Commons was rejected, and he was tried by a high court of justice headed by Bradshaw. On the morning of January 30th, 1649, he walked across from St. James' to Whitehall, calling on his guard "in a pleasant manner" to walk aside, and at two he stepped upon the scaffold from a window, probably the middle one, of the Banqueting House. In his last hours Charles showed remarkable dignity and self-possession, and, as it has been well said, nothing in his life became Charles like the leaving of it:

My gracious Lord shall say "Well Done,"
And I shall enter into rest.

At Bishop's Cove, on June 28th, 1919, there passed peacefully away after a lingering illness, Josiah, beloved son of Edward and Emily Smith, aged 42 years, leaving a loving wife, five children, three brothers and two sisters, beside a large circle of friends to mourn their sad loss. May he dwell with Jesus.

Now the laborer's task is o'er,
Now the battle day is past;
Now upon the farther shore
Lands the voyager at last.
Father, in Thy gracious keeping,
Leave we now our loved one sleeping.

IN LOVING MEMORY
of our dear son, Heman Noseworthy, who gave up his life for his country on July 1st, 1916, and now rests somewhere in France.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

Have You a Lucky Name?

"Of course, I am not superstitious; of course, I am not superstitious. Stay a moment! Are you quite sure that you would willingly be one of the fatal thirteen to sit down to dinner? Would you choose to live at No. 13? Would you walk under a ladder? Would you break a mirror without an involuntary shudder at the idea of seven years' bad luck?"

So many people say they are not superstitious, but by many little everyday actions they prove that they most decidedly are.

Whether unlucky or not, number 13 is thoroughly unpopular. If thirteen sit down to a meal, the first to rise will die within a year, says superstition. The person born on the thirteenth of the month will be unlucky throughout life; no one should embark on a journey or start an enterprise on the thirteenth of the month; while the thirteenth house in a row or street is nearly always tenantless, or renumbered 12a or 15.

Three is a lucky number. People born on the third day of the week (Tuesday) are under the special protection of Providence; while those born on the third of the month are declared to be forever safe from fire, drowning, prison, and robbery. Folks with three initials are more lucky than folks with less or more, and marriages contracted on the third day of the week will always turn out lucky.

The mystic number is seven, neither particularly lucky nor unlucky; but it is supposed to have close association with the unknown world. The seventh child of a seventh child is endowed with clairvoyant power and second sight; and people born on the seventh day of the month will come into touch with the spirit world, and will dream dreams and see visions.

Life's critical periods are every seven years. Twenty-one and forty-two (three times seven, and six times seven) are recognized as the periods of one's life when great care should be taken.

The most lucky number of all is nine, because it is composed of three threes. People with nine letters in their name will always be lucky. A name composed of three letters is a lucky name, unless the number of letters that completes the name makes thirteen.

For example, Ada is a lucky name having three letters, but, supposing the other names are Mary, Dobson, all three names are unlucky, because the sum total of the letters of the three names is thirteen.

There is no significance about four; but, supposing your name is Maud or Jane, and the surname is one having five letters, as Brown or Jones, both names are lucky.—Answers.

King Solomon's Mines.
Despite the watchman who nowadays guard the remarkable ruins of Rhodesia, where may perhaps once have been the mines of King Solomon, the latest traveller in that part of Africa reports that the baboons are dealing with the ancient masonry after a very baboonish fashion. Century after century the clearness of the atmosphere and the absence of moisture have preserved the walls of the building whose original use will probably never be known. It may be reasonably argued, however, that some of them were fortifications built for the protection against native tribes, and that this part of Africa was a centre for the mining and distribution of gold, the very spot, in fact, where Ophir obtained the precious metal that it forwarded to the court of Solomon. So far as can be determined Solomon and the structures were contemporaries, and it is likely enough that the now mysterious relics of a remote past were later in the possession of the Phoenicians. In the end the mines were exhausted, the civilizations went their way, and the spot was forgotten until Portuguese traders found it in the Sixteenth Century. An effort to work the mines was made but abandoned as profitless, and the spot was again forgotten till found by Livingstone. Now it is chiefly interesting to archaeologists who are responsible for the watchmen. But the baboons apparently are too lively for the local police.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE DIFFICULTY OF SAYING WHAT ONE MEANS.

Are you sometimes appalled by the difficulty of writing or saying exactly what you mean? Theoretically it should be the simplest thing in the world. Ready at your hand lies the dictionary filled with some hundreds of thousands of words which surely should be capable of conveying the most minute shades of meaning. Of course you are not familiar with all these words, but you know some thousands and you could help yourself to more, if need be.

From feeling or thinking a thing to saying it ought to be just a single step dependent solely on one's volition. And yet, as a matter of fact, there often yawns a wide chasm between the two, which baffles all one's efforts to throw a bridge across it. And writing it is just about twice as hard as saying it. (I have just re-written that paragraph three times and it is not at all my liking yet.) I have been especially impressed by this truth lately by an experience with the author. I am a great student of faces and sometimes when I come home from a social evening or a trip to town, and tell about a beautiful or interesting or unusual face that I have seen he will ask me to describe it. The face is perfectly clear in my mind. I can speak of it with a good deal of fervor and vividness, but when I sit down at my typewriter and try to put that face on paper I begin to stutter, and to write and cross out and rewrite, instead of just saying directly what I have seen. And when I have finished with all my labors the result is not at all what I would have it.

Do you remember Brownings' famous characterization of the three kinds of writers (I quote from memory) and therefore under correction: "Some may say they so have seen; some what 'twas they saw; the best impart the gift of seeing to the rest." And then there is Stevenson's wonderful analysis of the inadequacy of words: "Many words are often necessary to convey a very simple statement; for in this sort of exercise we can never hit the goal; the most we can hope for is by many arrows more or less far off on different sides to indicate in the course of time for what target we are aiming. . . . It is really a most delicate affair. The world was made before the English language and seemingly upon a different design." With which, especially since it is spoken by a master of language who should have found making his meaning clear a simple thing if any mortal could, I suppose we shall have to rest content.

I fell from a building and received what the doctor called a very bad sprained ankle, and told me I must not walk on it for three weeks. I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and in six days I was out to work again. I think it the best Liniment made.

The Storks Come Back.

The storks have come back to Strassbourg, and the townsfolk are happy. For a long time the storks of Strassbourg have been famous birds, and their long-legged presence in the Place de Broglie has been an attractive and picturesque feature of the old cathedral town in the eyes of tourists. So the fame of the storks went round the world. At home they were regarded more matter-of-factly, although the Strasbourger held them in high regard even whilst he took them as a matter of course. In the spring of 1914, so the story runs, the word passed from mouth to mouth that the storks were leaving their nests and going away. Then came the war, and for five years the nests went from Ltd. to warse, and Strasbourg, with so much else to think of, almost forgot there had ever been any storks. But the other day somebody said, "The storks have come back"; and sure enough, whoever went to the Place de Broglie saw them busily rebuilding their nests, without so much as a word of explanation as to why they had been away.

VACATION TIME.

The man who works too all-fired hard, be he a plumber or a bard, will wake some rainy morn to find that he's played out, in frame and mind. And he will murmur through his tears, "I'm not a patriarch in years; I still should be as good as wheat, a husky man on active feet. All sound in intellect and brawn, yet to the scrap heap I have gone." Man is an intricate machine, though he's not run by gasoline; he labors, burdened by his cares, and hates to slow up for repairs. "Some other year," says he, "I'll go and climb a large peak capped with snow, or gambol on the ocean's shore, or tread the forest's tufted floor, but now I can't afford to rest and let affairs go galley west. Some shining plunks have loomed in view, and I must try to cop a few; let others picnic in the glen, while I rake in the iron men." And so he wakes some rainy day to find his pep has ebbed away, his nerve is in its winding sheet, and he is dead upon his feet. An auto must be overhauled; a locomotive oft is stalled, while skilled mechanics test its works, to see why it has jumpy jerks; all things that move and toil need rest, and man's of all machines the best.

An excellent salad dressing is made of the best olive oil with wine vinegar, a dash of garlic, pepper and salt.

Baptized in a Balloon.

The child of a well-known M.P. was recently christened in the crypt of the House of Commons. This is, in a sense, a survival of a custom of bygone days, when christenings in crypts were by no means uncommon. Some years ago a baby was baptized in a London tramcar. It had been born there prematurely, and its life was despaired of. Hence the hurried ceremony.

Anywhere But in Church. In similar circumstances, too, a new-born babe was christened at the bottom of a coal mine in South Wales. This was in the bad old times, when women worked underground until almost the eve of their confinement. In the United States, where christenings other than in church are the rule, rather than the exception amongst well-to-do people, babies have been baptized in all sorts of odd places. In one recent case in California, for instance, the ceremony was performed in a diving-bell at the bottom of the sea. In another case the proud parents of the new arrival persuaded a clergyman to baptize the child while up in a balloon.

THE LESSON.
Now let the lesson be learned,
That the tyrant has taught,
Power is a joy to be earned,
Not cruelly bought.
He that would rule or would lead
Must triumph by right,
Broken forever the creed
Which glorifies might.

Gaze on the German despair!
Look at the wreck of their dreams!
Gone are their citadels' fair,
Faintly their old glory gleams!
Can you behold this and doubt
The error of might as a creed?
Here was force, cruel and stout!
What more than this do you need?

This was the land of the Hun,
Built and fashioned for lust;
Taught was each dutiful son
That the whim of the tyrant was just.
Never was mention of right
Made in their churches and schools;
There was a worship of might,
Might and the monarch who rules.

Bright were the swords of their greed,
Heavy the guns of their hate;
Never an unworthy creed
Had weapons so cruel and great,
Never by forces so strong
Were right and its honor assailed;
Might was massed there for a wrong
At the peak of its power, and it failed.

Now let the lesson be learned,
Teach it anew to your youth,
Power is a joy to be earned,
Evil must bow to the truth,
Force, be it ever so strong,
Cannot conquer the soldiers of right;
The sword that is drawn for a wrong
Shall ever go down in the fight.

Prussian Officers Commit Suicide.

Geneva, July 8.—Suicides among the German officers are increasing alarmingly, especially in Prussia, where the number of suicides is thirty-eight per cent. more than before it became known that former Emperor William was to be placed on trial by the Allies, according to Munich despatches. The wives of officers are also reported to be taking their own lives. The increase in the number of suicides is attributed, not only to patriotic despair, but to the loss of the officers' past social positions.

The Newest 1919 Trench Coats!

The Trench Coats for men we are now showing arrived on the last English boat and are quite the finest Coats we have ever handled. They are the product of a first class English firm, famed for its Military Tailoring, are built of fine quality Gabardine in all shades of Khaki, well-lined with smart-patterned Twill Plaid. Pockets velvet lined. Three very special features in these Coats are: (1) Extra high and well-fitting storm collar; (2) extra wide revers, forming when fastened ample throat and chest protection; (3) an entire interlining of Oilskin, rendering them not only doubly waterproof but absolutely wind and cold proof as well; forming an ideal Coat for all weathers. All Coats are belted and strapped at wrists. All sizes.

JEFF GIVES THE FACTS IN A JOCLAR MANNER.

Nfld. Will Benefit.

Foreign Attention Concentrated on Dominion.

Things of foreign moment are judged by Newfoundlanders as being important or otherwise according as they apply to Newfoundland. For this reason, the big special issue of the Montreal Financial Times, dealing exclusively with this country, which is to be published early in August, must appeal to the vigorous interest of all who like to see Newfoundland take its place among the important countries of the world. Seen by the Telegram reporter this morning, Mr. B. M. Greene, representing the Financial Times in St. John's, gave the facts of this big venture that is being made by the most influential paper of its class on the American continent.

"Apart from the business side of it," he said, "this special issue is being put out purely for the sake of benefitting Newfoundland and to open up avenues of trade between it and Canada. Unlike most countries, Newfoundland does not advertise herself and assets, and it is wholly due to this that she is not where she should be to-day. It is undeniable that your country possesses great and many resources, as yet barely scratched, which await the enterprising touch of the financier. There are many, scattered throughout the British Empire, who are looking about them for such resources, not knowing that right here in the centre of the Empire exists such possibilities as they seek. This, of course, is entirely due to the national failure to advertise. Again, Newfoundland is a great sporting country, possessing hundreds of lakes and streams swarming with fish and salmon, countless flocks of feathered game and great herds of fur game. Nowhere in the world will there be found a country offering such sporting opportunities which is at the same time so easily accessible and near. You do have a number of sportsmen visit your country now. I am prepared to admit, but nowhere as many as your country warrants. They don't come because they do not know about you—they are hardly aware of your existence and even those that are, think of Newfoundland as a land of fish and fogs. How could they think otherwise? You have never advertised the truth. Then hurt your feelings by repeating the idea of outsiders of the weather of Newfoundland. How could they think otherwise, when you have not told them the true state of things? There is also the part Newfoundland played in the war. Do you suppose that is widely known but should be. Take the matter of imports: You import about two million dollars worth of boots and shoes a year from America. Little or none comes from Canada. Yet Canada can give you better and cheaper boots. Quebec, the home of Canadian boot and shoe industries, would be delighted to sell you that two millions dollars' worth of goods every year. And, because they would have to compete with the American markets, they would undercut them. The result would be that you would get better service all round. Not only in the boot industry, but in many others as well, is Canada able to do better for you than any other country. Canada is nearer you, and is part of the British Empire. Freight rates there are lower, and there is absolutely no reason why they should not have the big trade that America now has. Why have they not captured the trade, you ask? Because the Americans were here first. It was a case of first come first served, the matter of service being left out. Canada did not trouble because she did not know the trade there was to be done with Newfoundland. Newfoundland has products, now going elsewhere, that could be disposed of in Canada. There is no market for them now, because Canada does not even know of them. Another result of your failure to advertise. These, then, are the thoughts that have caused the Financial Times to turn its attention to Newfoundland. Mr. Cox, the Managing Director of that big paper, already possesses material for the special Newfoundland issue. The remainder I am collecting now. We want to advertise Newfoundland, her resources, her assets and her possibilities. This edition, which will be named the "Newfoundland Export Number," will consist of twenty-four pages of seven columns each. They will deal exclusively with this country. The edition will then be circulated to all the Canadian Trade Commissioners over all the world, while every newspaper in Canada will receive one. It will undoubtedly be widely quoted by the latter, and from them by many other newspapers. In this way the name and wealth of Newfoundland will be broadcasted over the earth. There will also be the regular circulation, of course, and it is safe to predict that your country will thus receive the greatest advertising it has ever received."

That the special edition of the Montreal Financial Times will serve to do what Mr. Greene says would seem to be certain, and in hoping that he is right every true blue Newfoundlander will join.

Four hundred and twenty-seven years ago three frail craft set sail from Europe to venture over the unknown waters of the western ocean. Their prows held ever west, and as the days wore into weeks, and the weeks into months, high-hearted mariners became wan and weary with watching, and doubtful of another shore. But the motto was sail on, and at last the day came when one, peering into the dawn, discerned the land. The great initial voyage was accomplished, and Columbus and his wondering men set foot upon the soil of the new world.

Since that day a million mighty ships have traversed the charted lanes of the great Atlantic, always bearing cargoes of human freight from one shore to the other, and even venturing to and fro the ties of commerce and sentiment which bind the old world to the new. Old things pass away. The great ships with their towering masts and innumerable sails give way to turbine-driven ocean liners, carrying thousands of people, offering them every luxury of civilized life, and accomplishing the voyage in a few days. And now a new epoch has been opened up to the world. The voyage of the R-34 was a practical and final demonstration of the feasibility of aerial transatlantic travel, with all that it means. The only question in the minds of many men now is, how long will it be before aerial liners will be making ocean trips on schedule time and carrying large numbers of passengers overseas in a few hours? Peoples and continents will now be closer together than ever, commerce will undoubtedly be much greater than before, and competing interests will probably be in conflict oftener. And so the voyage of the great airship is the biggest argument that has yet been put forward in favor of the League of Nations.—Sydney Record.

BUILD YOUR HOUSE WITH BEAVER BOARD.

LOOK FOR THE BRAND ON THE BACK OF THE BOARD.

Seven Advantages of BEAVER BOARD.

1. It isn't so very expensive and is easily handled, saves labor.
2. It's not messy like lath and plaster, nor wasteful like P. & T. board.
3. It gives a neat appearance to your room and prevents draughts.
4. It eliminates the nuisance of having to paper your room every year.
5. It doesn't crack like plaster nor shrink like P. & T. board.
6. One carpenter can do as much work with it as 3 using P. & T. board.
7. Three rooms can be done with it while one is being done with lath and plaster.

Brigands on Road to Jericho.

Many of the demobilised men who were in Palestine with General Allenby's troops were not sorry to bid good-bye to the precipitous, zig-zagging road running down from Jerusalem to Jericho. In summer it was intolerably dusty, and after rain its greasy surface was dangerous for motorists.

At one part of the route the site of the Inn of the Good Samaritan, is still pointed out.

Even in modern times the road is so infested with robbers as to be unsafe for travellers. In the day before the war tourists were recommended to apply to the shekh, or headman, of the village of Bethany, on the other side of the Mount of Olives, for a mounted and armed escort. His charge, however, was high, and on one occasion a party not well off declined to pay it. They declared they would go without escort and chance it. Whereupon this wily Oriental dispatched a messenger to the chief of the brigands telling him to be on the lookout for a party of travellers. Of course he and the robber chief shared the booty.

The Latest Attraction.

The greatest attraction in the engineering world at present is a sort of glorified limpet, which, when lowered by a crane on to a girder, or rail, ingot, plate, piece of armour, or a heap of pig-iron or scrap, immediately sticks by magnetism and hoists the stuff ready for transportation to another place.

The power is conveyed through a small cable, and the magnetic attraction is sufficient in the case of large magnets—about 5 feet in diameter—to pick up 40 tons.

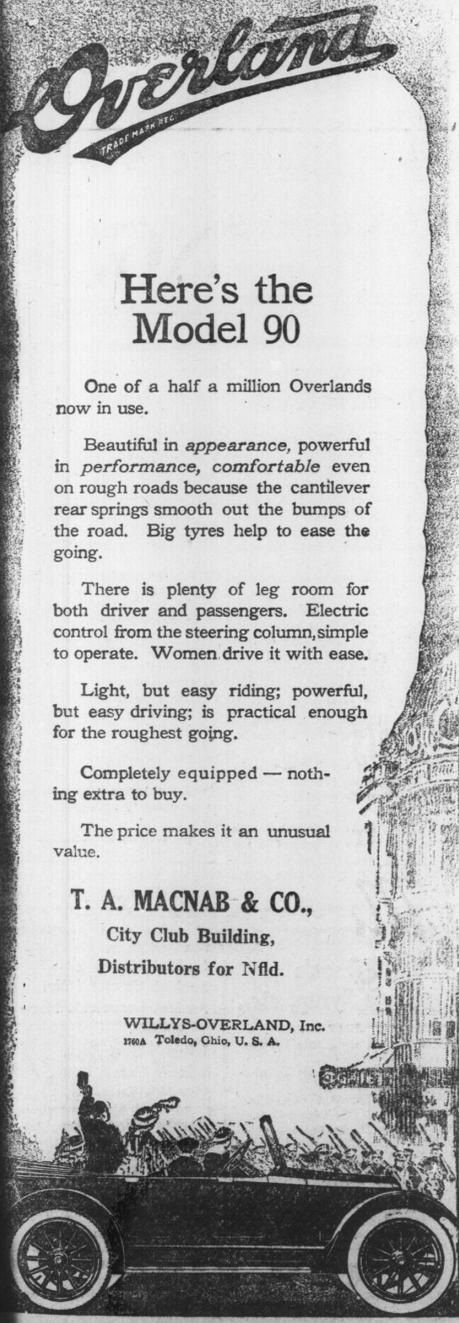

One of the most curious sights is to see a wooden packing-case clinging on to a magnet, the secret being, of course, that the case contains nails or other iron or steel things.

In view of the extensive salvage operations which will engage the attention of the shipping world for a long time to come, it is interesting to note that these magnets can be lowered under the water and sunk until they attach themselves to the iron or steel goods to be recovered.

Another striking and useful feature of the magnets is that they may be used to handle hot pieces of steel, such as rails or ingots, which men cannot approach to put hooks on.

LOOKS BAD.

One of a half a million Overlands now in use.

Beautiful in appearance, powerful in performance, comfortable even on rough roads because the cantilever rear springs smooth out the bumps of the road. Big tyres help to ease the going.

There is plenty of leg room for both driver and passengers. Electric control from the steering column, simple to operate. Women drive it with ease.

Light, but easy riding; powerful, but easy driving; is practical enough for the roughest going.

Completely equipped—nothing extra to buy.

Sea Chanties.

(Morley Roberts.)

A sea song is not a sea "chanty," though most people seem to think it is. What sailors sing in the fo'c'sle when they are in a good ship and feel like singing may be any kind of a song. They are mostly sentimental for the matter of that, and have rarely anything to do with the sea. At times, however, one may hear "Spanish Ladies" or "Rolling Home" in the second dog watch. A chanty or shanty is purely and simply a working or hauling song. Whether the word is derived from the French "chanter," to sing, or from a shanty song, i.e., such a song as was sung in grog-shanties and the like, is a little doubtful. It is, however, invariably pronounced "shanty."

The main theme is sung by the shanty-man and the hauling chorus by the rest of the watch, or the whole crew if all hands are on deck. They haul at the stressed words of the chorus, for the whole scheme of the shanty is to ensure a simultaneous pull on the brace or sheet or whatever gear may be handled. Among the real old favorites are "Haul on the Bowline," "Blow the Man Down," "Handily, Boys! so Handy!" The shanty-man, who is very often an old seaman, will often be the first man on the brace, and I have seen them look as proud as a Scotch piper, as they started, after a look at those tacking on behind them. He gives out:

Haul on the bowline,
The main 'gallant bowline,
and the rest come in with:
Haul on the bowline,
Haul, boys, haul!
The pull coming on the word "haul."
Then the shanty-man may go on as he likes, sometimes with personal remarks, such as:

Haul on the bowline,
The cook's a bally Chinaman,
or, more according to tradition, with:
Haul on the bowline,
The ship she is a-rolin'!

and so go on, till the bo'sun says "Belay there!" Such a shanty is a fairly slow one though the time can be varied by the chief musician when the haul is heavy or light. "Handily, boys, so handy!" is a quicker shanty, and often used for masteading a topsail. I have heard it sung and sung it myself:

Now, up aloft that yard must go,
Handily, boys, so handy!
So haul it up from down below,
Handily, boys, so handy!
And when we get to the Isle of Wight
Handily, boys, so handy!
The pilot boat will heave in sight,
Handily, boys, so handy!

There is, indeed, a grim and sometimes awful humor in a few of the shanties, in "Whisky" for instance, which often goes:

Whisky is the life of man,
Whisky, Johnny,
And I'll drink whisky while I can,
Whisky for my Johnny!
Oh, whisky killed my poor old dad,
Whisky, Johnny,
And whisky drove my mother mad,
Whisky for my Johnny!

Many of the best and most interesting tunes are set to words which cannot be printed, in particular one of the capstan shanties, which has a curious staccato rhythm for the men as they stamp around, shoving at the handspikes. Some of the "stamp and go" or "walk away" shanties are very good. They are used when there is enough "beef on the braces" for the men to run away rather than do a haul at rhythmic intervals. Such a one is "What shall we do with a drunken sailor," in which a step is taken with each accented syllable. The slowest shanty of all is what is known as a "main-sheet shanty." Here there is a good deal of song to one big pull. An example is:

Way, haul away; we'll hang and haul together,
Way, haul away, and haul away Joe,
in which the only pull is on the word "Joe."

Another favorite is "Time for us to leave her." I have heard it sung with considerable bitterness when the ship's officers were not popular:

Oh, the times are hard and wages low,
Leave her, bullies, leave her;
Bet your life it's time to go,
It's time for us to leave her.

Perhaps the most beautiful of all the shanties is "Good-bye, fare you well!" and to hear it sung early on a misty morning in a harbor when many ships are "rousing out the mud-hook" is something to remember. One kind of purely individual shanty is very rarely spoken of. It often has a strange personal note, and is used when no regular shanty is needed, as in a straight, downward pull of a 'gallant sheet. Then the call comes: "Sing out, some one!" and the best at the game piles in with an irregular series of words and sounds impossible to describe.

"M.D." By Film.

(London Daily Mail.)

The training of medical students is the latest development of the kinema.

Various experiments are being tried in all countries, one of the latest being a remarkable film lesson in anatomy at the Royal College of Surgeons last week. A skeleton was taken to pieces on the screen, the importance of the various parts demonstrated, and it was then reconstructed—the effect being much stronger than if these facts had been merely gathered from a text book.

In the United States operations by important surgeons are being recorded by kinema photographers, and they will then be used through the country in all the medical colleges for practical instruction. The life of a film may be short, but if it is given only ten years, this means that during that time, thousands of students will be able to benefit by first-hand knowledge instead of the relatively small number who can be present in a theatre during the actual operation. Not only students in the country where the operations was performed, but others all over the world will be able to benefit by one man's skill. A special lens has been invented which shows the details more clearly than in an ordinary film.

In Germany the same movement is taking place. A "film library of medicine" has been formed in Berlin for the use of German medical schools. Films are to be taken of all important operations. A special censorship has been arranged and permission must be received before these films can be shown—to prevent their being exhibited for amusement to a morbidly minded audience. Here it was found that the noise of the camera distracted the surgeon, so it was decided to take the film from another room through a hole in a partition wall.

Once the kinema is applied to medicine, there is no end to its possibilities. Not only will the future "M.D." profit greatly by it, but also the public can receive from the film useful lessons on general matters of cleanliness and health.—C.R.

A Recondite Ass.

(From the London Chronicle.)

In his speech at the Guildhall yesterday Mr. Austen Chamberlain was reported in the evening papers to have spoken of the "Puritan's ass. Of course it was Buridan's ass from which the Chancellor drew his simile.

Phonetically the words are very similar; in Pitman's shorthand the only difference in the symbols which represent them is one of thickness; also the slip might have been due to mishearing on the telephone. But the likeliest explanation is that the stenographer was quite unacquainted with the philosopher of Bethune, whose dicta on Determinism was a fine bone of contention among the learned of the sixteenth century. We wonder how many of the city merchants on whose ear the phrase fell were familiar with the reference.

How Do You Walk?

A man's walk is often a very good indicator to his character.

Firm, regular steps are said to denote a steady, reliable nature, while jerky, uneven movements indicate the reverse. The energetic person walks quickly and stops suddenly; the dreamer saunters along with a slow, abstracted mien.

The obstinate man goes straight ahead, refusing to turn aside for anybody. On the other hand, the person who is ready to step out of everyone's way is not necessarily weak-willed. He may be afflicted with two much courtesy.

The long, swinging step usually marks the generous, broad-minded person, while the small, petty tread shows the walker to be of a mean and narrow character. The last rule applies, of course, far more to men than to women.

The Real Bluebeard.

He Killed His Wives in France, Too.

It is a somewhat curious coincidence that Landru, who is accused of murdering a number of his "wives" and cremating their bodies in his villa at Gambais, should be a Frenchman.

For the original Bluebeard was also a Frenchman, named Gilles de Laval, whose atrocious crimes shocked the world about the middle of the fifteenth century.

How tremendous was the sensation created by the revelations which preceded the trial and execution of this monster of cruelty and iniquity, may be judged from the fact that stories and operas innumerable have been written round his personality by such well-known authors and composers as Perrault, Crety, Tieck, and Offenbach, amongst others.

In Perrault he is a rich man who, in spite of his ludicrous blue beard, gains the love of six young women, whom he weds and murders one after the other. He is about to serve a seventh in the same way, when she is rescued in the nick of time by her brothers, who have been summoned to Bluebeard's castle by another sister.

The Lottery Germ.

(From Forbes's Magazine.)

If the oil germ has taken possession of your blood and you simply must buy oil shares, do not try to make yourself believe that you are investing, but admit frankly to yourself that you are indulging in a gamble as uncertain as a horse race or a lottery. In other words, do not put any money into any of these new and alluring oil shares unless you are prepared to lose every penny of it. It is human nature to want to get something for nothing. Usually when we try this we get something we hadn't expected. This will be the experience of the great majority of those who are scrambling to buy unknown oil stocks to-day. In every lottery there are a few prize winners; the other tickets become worth only the paper they are printed on. So will it be with the oil lottery which is now raging.

Thinking Aloud.

In "A Westminster Pilgrim," Sir Frederick Bridge tells an amusing story of an aged singer in the choir of the Chapel Royal, who was taking an alto part in the anthem.

The words were, "The ungodly have laid a snare for me," and I suppose (writes Sir Frederick) that the ancient chorister, with his cracked voice, somewhat annoyed an old peer who sat immediately behind the choir, and was rather given to thinking aloud.

Anyway, when the singer had finished his sentence, "The ungodly have laid a snare for me," the old peer ejaculated, loudly enough to be heard by the choir, "I wish to Heaven they'd caught you!"

A Notable Statesman.

The present year marks the centenary of the birth of William Edward Forster, the well-known Liberal statesman, who was born at Bradpole, Dorsetshire, on July 11, 1818. Forster was trained for the Bar, but abandoned it for a post in a worsted manufactory near Bradford. He married a daughter of Dr. Arnold, of Rugby, and after an unsuccessful contest at Leeds, entered Parliament for Bradford in 1861. Four years later he became Under-Secretary for the Colonies, and on the formation of the Gladstone Ministry in 1868, he was appointed Vice-President of the Council on Education. In this capacity, Mr. Forster carried the Education Bill with which his name is so generally associated, and also piloted the Ballot Bill through the Commons. When Mr. W. E. Gladstone resigned the Liberal leadership in 1896, Mr. Forster was very strongly favored for the position, but a certain unpopularity with a section of the party secured the election of Lord Hamilton. In the Administration of 1899, Mr. Forster became Chief Secretary for Ireland, and was responsible for a Coercion Bill which evoked bitter opposition. When the Cabinet decided to modify his policy in 1902, he resigned office, and afterwards proved a severe critic of the Liberal Ministry. He was a strong opponent of Mr. Gladstone's advances towards Home Rule, but died three days before the introduction of the Bill of 1896. It is an interesting and appropriate coincidence that Mr. Forster's centenary should be marked by the discussion and probable enactment of a comprehensive Education Bill, and also that the Ballot Act, with which he is associated, should be made a permanent measure by the Reform Act of this year.

Just Gas.

The Will o' the Wisp, Jack o' Lantern, or Corpse Candle—different names for the same thing—will soon, as the evening mists close the hot summer days, be abroad in the land, and it is certain that the usual curdling crop of ghosts and spirit stories will follow.

In scores of cases the Will o' the Wisp will become the spirit of some gallant lad whose body lies in France or Flanders, returned to haunt the old home and village. Town folk, in the country for a holiday, will be shown the weird light, and as likely as not respond to the rural superstition as to its origin and meaning. But the Will o' the Wisp, or ignis fatuus, is simply the gas arising from putrefying animal and vegetable substances. It is luminous because the gas—phosphoric hydrogen—ignites spontaneously in the air. It is found in damp meadows, those which have been fish-manured especially.

The terror that it inspires among the superstitious is because it seems to be before an approaching person, and to run after them when they flee its light. But that, in the former case, is because when we approach we send a current of air ahead of us, which bears away the light, luminous gas. When we retreat we create a vacuum, and the gas is drawn toward it and us.

Good Salesmanship.

The following story of the sale of an antique ewer is going the rounds in Paris. The two parties to the deal were Alessandro Castellani, a clever dealer, and Baron Adolph Rothchild, of Paris.

Castellani had a superb enamelled ewer, with the dish on which it stood. The Baron, on arriving in Rome, visited Castellani's shop, and was shown the best things the dealer had except the enamelled dish and ewer. When everything else had been inspected Castellani drew from a hidden cupboard the dish, but not the ewer. The Baron was so pleased with the dish that he agreed to buy the lot of which it was a part. The Baron paid heavily, lamenting that there was no ewer to stand on the dish, and departed for Florence.

There he was visited by an agent who told him of an old lady who wished to sell several beautiful majolica pieces. He visited her house and was disappointed, as the majolica was not fine enough. The old lady, seemingly chagrined, left the room to order refreshments, and the Baron saw through the open door of a bedroom a ewer, covered by a glass shade, on which rested a wreath of immortelles.

When the lady arrived the Baron asked permission to examine the ewer. It was brought out, and the Baron saw that the enamel was of the same work as that of the dish he had bought. He wished, however, to be certain that the foot of the ewer would fit into the hollow of the dish.

The Baron went back to his rooms, had the dish unpacked and found that the foot of the ewer fitted perfectly. The next day the Baron sent the agent to offer the old lady a princely sum for the ewer. He brought back a refusal to sell. But at last the widow's scruples were overcome. Castellani, with his Italian cunning had planned the whole affair.

Tennis-racquets cost 50s. compared with the pre-war price of 30s. Bricks which before the war cost £1 15s. a thousand, now cost £4. A few drops of formalin in milk-and-water form an effective fly-trap. War pensions in New Zealand are expected to cost £2,000,000 annually. Fly-traps should be placed in sunshine near windows. Beer makes a good bait.

Intemperance in England has steadily decreased during the war, the convictions last year being less than one quarter those of 1915.

During a recent twelve months, over 39,000,000 pounds of tobacco were issued free of duty for Army and Navy use.

Duty on playing-cards was paid to the amount of £2 in Scotland and £47,885 in England during the recent Eccles year.

On water alone a horse can live twenty-five days, but he will only last five days eating solid food without drinking.

A woman's chance of marriage is greatest between the ages of twenty and twenty-five, when fifty-two per cent. of marriages takes place. Merchant shipping sunk by the Germans is officially estimated at: Great Britain, 2,197 vessels; France, 238; Italy, 230; United States, 80; Japan, 29. In tonnage the British losses were 7,638,020.

Crooks and Looks.

How to Tell a Criminal.

Many criminals who might otherwise have escaped have been detected by the abnormal development of their heads.

Professor Lombroso, a great criminologist, said that it was his opinion that all criminals except thieves had remarkable heads. Charles Peace is a striking example, for his head was an enormous size, whilst his ears were very prominent.

Irregular heads are another feature in criminals of all classes. The thief possesses this peculiarity in addition to a remarkably small head. The lower part of the face has always a heavy appearance, and crime experts declare that the weight of the lower jaw is far above that of an ordinary man. Young thieves often have a number of freckles and wrinkles which are strongly marked.

Disturbed Sleep.

A unique feature in an habitual criminal is that whilst the hair of the head is abundant, that of the beard is scanty. Left-handedness is common in young and old alike, but in exceptional cases some criminals have been found to be ambidextrous. Criminals never sleep well, and the respiratory organs, necessarily, good for the sake of health, are also deficient. Stooping shoulders, narrow chests, and large noses are other strange features.

Marriage Manners.

It is an old belief that a marriage should take place when the moon is waxing and not waning, if it is to be a lucky match, and in many North-Country districts a strict inquiry is made as to the state of the moon before the wedding day is fixed. In the North, too, no wise bride will ask an odd number of guests to her wedding-feast, for an old superstition has it that if this is done, one of the guests die before the year is out. In the Highlands it is taken as a terribly unlucky sign if a dog should run between the bridal pair on their wedding-day; while in Derbyshire prospective brides still tell the bees of their wedding, and decorate the hives for the occasion. In parts of England and Scotland there exists an ancient custom for which reason is hard to find, by which part of the wedding-cake is broken over the head of the bride and the guests scramble for pieces.

None of these marriage manners, however, compare with the Chinese custom which causes bacon and sugar to be hung on the sedan-chair of a Chinese bride, in order to keep the demons from molesting her on her wedding journey. The Chinese bride-to-be, too, has to stand in a round, shallow basket while she dresses for the wedding, in order to make her of a good temper and amiable disposition.

Allies Demand Skull.

Curious Clauses in Peace Treaty. Among the hundreds of clauses in the Treaty presented by the Allies to Germany are two of a particularly interesting and novel character. Within six months the Germans must return the skull of the Sultan Mikava to the British Government.

This skull is that of a native chief of German East Africa, who for seven years defied the Germans, till, in 1898, rather than surrender, he committed suicide. The Germans decapitated him and sent his head for exhibition to a Berlin museum. It was a brutal, unnecessary act, and Great Britain is determined that the natives shall have returned to them the head of their old chief.

Germany is also called upon to return the Koran of the Caliph Othman to the King of the Hedjaz. This is one of the world's most ancient literary treasures, dating back to 711 A.D. It doubtless fell into the hands of the Turks when they captured Medina in 1812.

"So likewise, whosoever he be of you, that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple." That was a tremendous claim for a leader of men to make upon His followers.
Yet that was the claim of Jesus, as reported in Luke 13, 33. In that chapter
He calls upon His followers to count the cost and estimate the risk of discipleship. Nothing worth having is ever obtained without cost. The successful business man has had to rise early and work late, and sacrifice pleasure and art and literature may be in order to win his wealth. The great teacher has had to burn the midnight oil and study until his brain fairly reels, in order to impart knowledge to others. The great musician has gone through long years of drudgery and discipline before he can execute the music of the masters. The religion is no exception to this rule; if we are to rise to that high spiritual plane where the human soul holds communion with the divine, then we must be prepared for self-denial, meditation, prayer and self-surrender to the will of God, and it will cost something. All great achievement involves risk. Columbus risked all to discover a way to India via the west, and found America. Capt. Scott risked all to explore the South Pole; he succeeded, but lost his life in the attempt. Hawker and Grieve, Alcock and Brown, risked all in their attempt to be first to fly the Atlantic. The world's benefactors have been those who were prepared to take big risks. Buddha is worshipped by nearly three hundred millions of the human race to-day; he was the son of a king and left the royal palace in order to go into solitude and solve the problem of the world's evil. Socrates, who has done so much for the cause of truth in the earth, drank the cup of poison rather than be untrue to his convictions. The Pilgrim Fathers left the Old Country in their little ship and faced the dangers of a wild and savage country for the sake of Religious liberty. Livingstone crossed and recrossed Central Africa and gave his life for the redemption of the Dark Continent. To be a follower of the Christ involves big risks. Of course it means also the curtailment of some of our pleasures, such as dancing and cards and the pictures.
Not that these things are wrong in themselves, but they may interfere with loyal discipleship. It may mean the surrender of selfish ambition. When the call came to D. L. Moody to give himself up to preaching, he was earning $5,000 a year and his ambition was to save a $100,000; he gave up that ambition to follow Christ. It may mean for you a call to Foreign Service, perhaps to some fever stricken country like West Africa, or to live and work amongst lepers on some South Sea Isle, as Father D'Amien did; who knows? To follow the Christ means forsaking all, and judged by that standard, how few real Christians there are. And yet, having counted the cost and estimated the risks, will you not yet follow Him?
For believe me, you can never give up as much to follow Christ as you would lose by not following him.—Com.

War Veterans' Drive.
To-night, at the Mechanics Hall, the final arrangements will be made for the big drive, organized by the G. W.
V. A. of this city. Thirty of the prominent war-workers are associated with the enterprise, as reference to the an-nexed list will show. The returned soldiers are out of funds to establish a permanent club where all their overseas brethren can meet and discuss their difficulties. These men, who have offered their all, do not ask very much but they do expect that a country freed from subjection will appreciate the boys who have kept the foe from their doors. On Thursday, the great appeal will be made to the citizens of St. John's. Let us show the men who fought that the sacrifices which they made are not forgotten, and give liberally to their cause. The area of St.
John's is divided up as follows:—

Aviator's Influence on Newfoundland.
The marvellous developments of the science of aviation during the past five years bid fair to at last break down the splendid isolation of Newfoundland. St. John's, as an American contemporary remarks, has become the aviation capital of the world.
If trans-oceanic air-travel ever becomes a practical reality—and he would be a daring man who would declare that it will not—Newfoundland will naturally become a centre of events, for geographical reasons.
Already the insularity in which Newfoundlanders have taken pride, is being broken down. The Legislature of the colony has granted concessions to a company which proposes to conduct mail and passenger services from Newfoundland to Canada and the United States. It is proposed to first establish an aerial service between St. John's and Montreal, and the distance between the two cities will be covered in sixteen hours. At once Newfoundland will be brought into immediate touch with the heart of Canada, and an intimacy between the two British dominions which steam navigation has never been able to effect should result.
It is interesting to note that Newfoundland in the past has chiefly gotten into the newspapers in connection with extraordinary feats of adventure. Whenever there has been an Arctic exploration enterprise under way, Newfoundland has come into the map in a fuller sense than ever. Science of human endeavor ultimately destroy all barriers.—Toronto

Labor vs. Hysterics.
(From the Toronto Labor Leader.)
At Atlantic City the American Federation of Labor has, with no uncertain voice, declared itself in favor of the craft union as against the Bolshevik—I. W. W.—One-Big-Union. The project to have all contracts so co-related that the total arrest of all industry might be instantly accomplished was frowned upon. The convention also bumped the proposal that workers should elect their own foremen. The sane and safe forces in trades unionism showed in the Federation a majority of practically six to one against those who are so violently seeking to hoist aloft the red flag of Bolshivism. These are cheering words for those who seek to gain a livable life from their work rather than merely to battle with their real or imagined, upon any pretext whatever. President Gompers is today, as he has always been, the leader of firmness in the rights of labor as against hysterics, and President Gompers is a safe leader to follow.

THIS WEEK'S GAMES.

Tuesday—Cubs vs. Red Lions.
Wednesday—Mount Cashel double-header between all four teams for the Reid Trophy.

Thursday—D. I. S. vs. Cubs.
If you want to see a good game of ball, or know of a friend who would like to see one, we can confidently recommend to-morrow night's clash between the Cubs and Red Lions. Somehow or other both clubs are looked upon as the logical runners up for the 1919 pennant, though the Cubs have lost some ground. The line-ups will be published to-morrow.

Hiltz is calling up "The Old Guard" and will have Cooney and Jenkins on. The former is a slugger of repute, while in the outer gardens where the high ones go sailing over, Si has no equal.

THE CUB REFRAIN.

I remember—I remember—one year ago to-day.
When we were rushing to the front along the winning way.
But now it gives us little joy—in fact it makes us sore.
To know we're getting farther from the pennant every hour.
I remember—I remember—our rose embowered fate.
When Claude in a happy vein was winning his games straight.
Alas! then was the happy days! alas! and then alas!
For now the other three Ball Clubs are roosting on our back.

Nevertheless if you bet on the Cubs both ways (top and bottom) you're going to cash in, at that.
The difference between a passed ball and a wild pitch is just this:— If you're pitching and the ball goes back to the goal post, letting in two men, that's a passed ball. But if you're catching, it's a wild pitch.
The B. I. S. and the Dupont Powder

Mills are both useful institutions—until they go up in the air.

The proper definition of eternity is Bill Cooney's playing-life.

An error is any fumble, muff, or wild chuck you do not make yourself.

Tim Hartnett declares the umps throw straight decisions at the other teams and curve 'em on the Wanderer's.

"Twill soon be time for the City "A" and "B" teams to be formed to see who will represent St. John's in the Inter-town Series,—especially as the Grand Falls team is coming in for the Regatta.

All the Lions need to win the flag according to Hiltz, "is airtight pitching!" All we need to have a dollar is ninety-five cents.

A fair fanette sat on a ballplayer's knee, he had made a nice "hit" and was working the "squeeze." He was on to her "curves" and was winning the dame, when old umpire Dad "threw him out" of the game.

TO FAN:—All baseball averages are made up on the basis of 1000. Thus, if a hitter were at bat 4 times and sashed first base safely on 4 hits, his average would be 1000 per cent. If he got only 2 safe hits out of 4 times at bat his average would then be 500. To find the average at any time divide the number of times at bat into the number of hits adding three cyphers.

When a batter is "walked" he is not credited with a time at bat, and it does not count either for or against him in the averages.

The Junior 'ecre has been asked to furnish an exhibition game at both the Kibride and St. Joseph's Garden Party to be held this month.

We hadn't hit in many moons; he was a fearful slump.
But still they kept him in the game for he could lick the ump.
He couldn't steal a base or slide; he didn't get the can.
For though he couldn't spike the gas, how he could spike a fan.
A field he covered lines and flies; at home he was quite a stager.
But still they kept him on the rolls, for he could lick the "Major."

And don't forget the BIG game to-morrow night!

A Surpassing Feat.

(Morning Chronicle)

The arrival of the R-34 at her terminus at Mincola completes an aerial journey unparalleled in history. Thrilling as were the heroic but nerve-racking and adventurous voyages of Havelock and Grievie, and the dashing exploits of Alcock and Brown, the surpassing feat of the British mariners in making the non-stop flight from Scotland to Leng Island marks a new advance in the conquest of the air. It is a notable triumph for British aircraft builders and designers, for British airmen, and, above all, for the British mariners. During much of the voyage they ploughed their way through banks of fog and clouds, which blotted out the sea, obscured the visibility, and made the voyage longer than they anticipated. They sailed 3,600 miles in 109 hours and 12 minutes at an average speed of 33 nautical miles an hour. The crossing of the Atlantic with a crew of twenty-three without mishap is an epoch-making achievement. The time is rather slower than the schedule, but this, we must remember, was the pioneer voyage, and the foggy conditions encountered on the first leg, from the Scottish coast to Newfoundland, appear to account for the lengthened journey, and the consequent depletion of the supply of petrol which made it necessary for the giant dirigible to poise at slow speed as she passed over Nova Scotia. But the great thing is that the feat was accomplished without mishap and with a degree of quickness which presages the development of practical passenger craft of the sky. It was a happy circumstance that on this pioneer voyage over the Atlantic the British mariners should have as their guest an officer of the American navy, to add tangible evidence of the comradeship of the two great nations, just as the voyage of the R-34 is the forerunner of the day when they will be brought closer together by the argosies of the air.

Modern Methuselahs.

A marked distinction between the Jew and his neighbor is his longevity. This is attributed to the strict dietary laws of the "chosen race," and to the frequent ablutions which their religious ceremonial demands. It is a truly significant fact that those Jews who abstain from eating pork are practically free from cancer. Apparently, if the Jews know how to accumulate money, they also know how to preserve good health for they enjoy remarkable immunity from consumption, cholera, and typhus. In 1348, when the Black Death was taking throughout England, the Jews were exempt from the plague.

Jews are, of course, subject to the ordinary ailments of life, but they can boast of an average longer life than any other race.

Among the Jewish community it is not uncommon to hear of a co-religionist who has "topped the century." Numbers did not originate in India. The origin of our common number symbols has never been clearly established, but until recently all writers agreed that these symbols were transmitted to Europe by the Arabs, who had obtained them from India. It is very interesting to note that available data relating to the origin of our common number symbols have been carefully re-examined by Carra de Vaux. Among the most surprising results are the following:

Our common number symbols originated in Europe, and from there were transmitted to the Persians. Both India and Arabia received them from Persia, so that the common term Hindu-Arabic numerals is decidedly misleading. The common numerals did not come from letters of the alphabet, but were formed directly for the purpose of representing numbers.
