Lady Wyvernes' Daughter.

"Leave Spain!" she said, slowly, as though the idea was difficult of realization. "Leave, never to return?"

The color faded from the beautiful young face, the dark, loving eyes grew dim with tears. She could not bear to return to that dreadfully lonely life; she could not bear to be left alone; it was so sweet to be loved and cared for.

He watched her intently as these thoughts rushed through her mind; something in that exquisite downcast face gave him courage.

"It is bitter grief to me," he continued; "for, Inez, you must know how much I have loved you. From the first moment I saw your face, you have been the star of my life. Leaving you is bitter as death, for I cannot live without you."

"Are you obliged to go?" she asked, gently, as he for the first time clasped her hands in his own.

"Obliged? Yes," he replied; "urgent affairs call me there. Need I say that I will let them all go—nay, I would give my very life itself for one word from you, my beloved. One word from those lips would more than repay me for all. Tell me, shall I go or stay?"

He drew her to him, and kissed the beautiful, girlish face that drooped upon his shoulder.

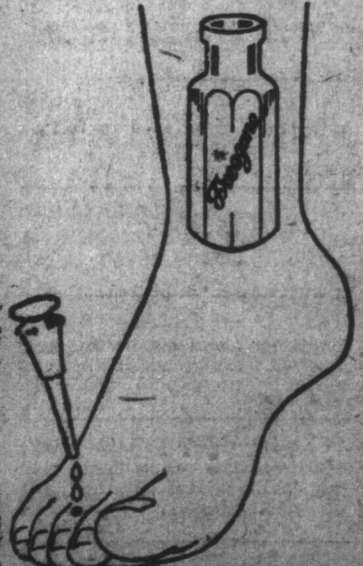

"Tell me," he whispered. "Decide for me. Shall I go or stay?"

The breath of the summer wind was not more sweet than the voice that murmured "Stay."

Then he told her how dearly he loved her. Surely never did human lips tell a more passionate or beautiful story than those of Count Rinaldo, how her face had haunted him in over that child," said Madame Monteleone to herself. "She grows more lovely every day. I never saw anything like those eyes; something must be done. She cannot remain buried here. I will wait two months longer, and then, if I am no better, I will write to Lord Lyane."

These two months spelled the life of Inez Lyne. On the morrow Count Rinaldo came. He had so much to say. First of all there was a pathetic history to be given of his family, the Montalis of Venice—how in a political crisis that had happened only twenty years before, when he was a child in his mother's arms, they had lost the whole of their property. It was confiscated, and given to one of their most bitter opponents. The blow had killed his father, and his mother had lived until he was twelve years old. Her small income then became his own, and on that he had subsisted, living always in the hope that at some future day his lost possessions would be restored to him. So far, all was true; but here Count Rinaldo diverged from the broad line of truth into a narrow line of fiction.

His friends, he said, were anxious to bring about a marriage between him and the only child and heiress of the man who held his estates, the young and beautiful Veronica di Giotto. Here again the truth was interwoven with fiction. Veronica di Giotto really existed; but her father would sooner have seen her dead than married to the son of one whom he considered as a traitor and a rebel. Such a marriage, the count said, would ultimately restore him to his proper position. No doubt of his story crossed the young girl's mind.

"And you," she said, looking at him with her shining, lovely eyes, "you give all this up for me? How much you must love me!"

He clasped her again to his heart, and told her he loved her better than life itself. Still, had she looked at him, she would have seen doubt and hesitation in his eyes. Indecision in the quivering of his hot, dry lips. He hardly dared to broach the subject he had intended to decide this evening.

"Better do it," he thought, "while the tale I have told is fresh and vivid—it is my only chance."

"So you will understand, my beloved," he said, "why I beg your silence for the present. I should be both proud and happy to proclaim to all the world that I had won the great treasure of your love. But if it were known just now it would ruin my cause forever. Those friends who have espoused it would cease to feel any interest in the matter. In another year or two it will not signify."

Writing in the Sky.

Facts About the Latest Aerial Marvel.

If you are one of the thirty million people in this country who have seen sky-writing by aeroplanes, you must have wondered how this wonderful invention works.

It was Major Savage, a British air pilot, who nearly a year ago made the wonderful discovery which he has since patented all over the world. One bright summer day he startled London by appearing in an aeroplane thousands of feet up and proceeding to write words of an advertisement in white smoke.

Sky-writing is not an easy task. It must be done at almost lightning speed, and under considerable difficulties. In the first place, the pilot must choose the position from which he will start with reference to the direction and speed of the wind, the position of the sun, the area his writing will cover, and the corresponding location of the spectators.

The Pilot's Memory-Picture.

His own memory-picture is of the words as they would appear in a mirror—that is, reversed—for he must write in this topsy-turvy way for those who are looking up from below to read it the right way round. He must also have worked out accurately how he is to approach each letter in turn. There is no time, when once started, to study instruments and plans or sketches.

Proportion and alignment are the next two points the sky-writer must study. The letters must not merely be the right shape and equally spaced, but must be kept the same size and not grow or dwindle like a family of ducks waddling across a field.

The letters as written in the sky are usually about half a mile in length. A moderate-sized advertisement in the sky would stretch a distance equal to that from Dover to Calais. On some occasions, according to a writer in the "Strand Magazine" for May, sky-writing has remained legible for more than an hour.

No Catholic Colleges in Federation.

A definite decision that Catholic colleges shall not enter the proposed Federation of Colleges for the Maritime Provinces was received from Pope Pius XI by Archbishop McCarthy last week. It was transmitted to Bishop Morrison of the Diocese of Antigonish, who conveyed the decision by a pastoral letter to all the churches of his diocese on Sunday. No formal translation of the Papal document, which was in Latin and of very outstanding importance, and very definite in character, has yet been made, but the following is the text of the message from the Apostolic Delegate at Ottawa, transmitted to Archbishop McCarthy, and forwarded to Bishop Morrison of Antigonish:

OTTAWA, May 15, 1923. Apostolic Delegation. Most Rev. Archbishop: The sacred Congregation of Seminaries and Universities has recently informed this Apostolic Delegation concerning a plan reported for decision to the Holy See by the most revered and right reverend ordinaries of the Metropolitan Provinces of Halifax and St. John's, Nfld.

This was a plan to bring about a federation of all the Catholic and non-Catholic colleges with the aid of a money contribution from the Carnegie Foundation, so that only one non-denominational university would be formed, or the present non-denominational college of Dalhousie in the city of Halifax would, in case the federation were approved, be enlarged and equipped with everything necessary to make it a university in the true and proper sense.

His Eminence the Cardinal Prefect of the said Congregation, having secured all necessary and pertinent information, and having carefully ascertained the wish of the consultors, decided that in a matter of such great importance the whole question should be submitted to all the Cardinals of the Congregation for their investigation and decision. Accordingly, at the general meeting held March 22nd of the present year, the following question was submitted:

"Whether the plan of forming a federation of all the colleges, both Catholic and non-Catholic, into one non-denominational university can be approved, permitted or tolerated."

Their Eminences the said Cardinals, after diligent and mature study and prayerful consideration that "the question must be answered in the negative and should the aforesaid University be established, even without the Catholic Colleges, and should there be Catholic students who frequent it the most Rev. Archbishops and Bishops will zealously and earnestly take care that these shall not remain deprived of religious instruction and Catholic training."

This decision of their Eminences the Cardinals was submitted to his Holiness Pope Pius XI who ratified and confirmed it.

By order then of the Sacred Congregation of Seminaries and Universities, I communicate all these facts to Your Grace and meanwhile I pray God to bless you and long preserve you for the welfare of the Diocese committed to your care.

Most faithfully in the Lord, (Sgd.) P. DI MARIA, Archbishop of Icosium, Delegate Apostolic.

His Grace Archbishop McCarthy interviewed by The Morning Chronicle yesterday said that he was not in a position to give any formal translation at present, but in view of the widespread interest manifested in the matter, he gave the following synopsis:

The document, he said, was received from the Apostolic Delegate, Pietro Di Maria, at Ottawa, on Tuesday last, with instructions that copies be forwarded to the suffragan Bishops. The document gave account of the case having been presented to the Sacred Congregation of Seminaries and Studies at Rome. The deliberations of the congregation were held on 22nd of March of the current year. After seriously considering the matter a negative answer was returned. The reply specified that in the event of other colleges going ahead with the Federation and Catholic students should it come to the new University, then it would be the duty of the Archbishops and Bishops to provide such students with religious instruction and Catholic education. The decision of the Cardinals was solemnly confirmed and ratified by His Holiness, Pope Pius XI.

Bishop Morrison's Pastoral. The following pastoral was read in the churches of the Roman Catholic diocese of Antigonish on Sunday:

ANTIGONISH, May 25, 1923.

Dear Reverend Father:

"When the proposition for the federation of the colleges of the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland into one central university was put forward last summer, a meeting of the archbishops and bishops of the territory concerned was called by the Archbishop of Halifax to consider the proposed matter.

"This meeting was held at Halifax on the 19th of October, 1922, and among the resolutions passed were the following:

"BE IT RESOLVED that the tentative proposition of college federation made in the Carnegie Foundation report, as it appears detrimental to the existing Catholic colleges throughout the Provinces and merely experimental in its nature, accompanied as it is by very meagre details of the means of construction and maintenance of a central university, does not encourage the episcopate of the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland to recommend that Catholics take any steps toward federation in its present form; and

"That, before taking any steps in the matter of federation of the colleges in the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland, the Hierarchy make proper inquiries concerning the mind of the Holy See on the matter.

"In accordance with this latter resolution the project was laid before the Sacred Congregation of Seminaries and Universities, and it was felt that, pending the decision and in reference to the Holy See, all public controversy on the part of the Catholics concerning this subject, should not be encouraged or approved.

"I am now able to inform the reverend clergy that the question has been decided by the supreme authority of the Church, a copy of the decision having been sent me by His Grace, the Archbishop, of which the enclosed is also a copy.

"The document speaks for itself and its purport is clear and to the point, so there cannot be any doubt as to what is the mind of the Holy See on this matter. I am sure we must all feel thankful to Almighty God that while the proposition was in some measure an open question, which is now no longer for Catholics, the attitude of the Diocese was such as to be found consonant with the final decision of the Holy See and now that the supreme authority of the Church has decided against such a federation as far as Catholics are concerned, let us all hope and trust to God that through our earnest cooperation the good work of the diocesan college and university may proceed apace, and may receive the abundant support and encouragement from the reverend clergy and laity of the Diocese, as well as from its graduates and friends wherever they may be.

"With all best wishes, I remain sincerely in the Lord

JAMES MORRISON, Bishop of Antigonish."

The Joys of Bruges.

In French Bruges is called "La Mortelle," "the dead"; but in Flemish "De Schoone," "the beautiful"; and in the names are crystallized the differences of attitude, the differences of vision. For the Flemish spirit is waking up in Flanders and challenging the French, not in a mood of hostility but of active rivalry. And because of this the Flemish spirit becomes conscious of the beauty of the medieval Bruges that is her heritage. Not that Bruges is by any means dead, rather it has been resurrected. The end of the nineteenth century found Bruges stranded, the ship canal which goes to Ostend on the one hand and Ghent on the other was a quiet backwater. But now the canal is busy, and we may see over the medieval spires and turrets the rigging of three and four masted sailing vessels moored at her quays and discharging a cargo borne from overseas. If the town be thought to be a town of the dead, then one cannot fail to note the interesting conclusion that in the land of the dead people go about in great numbers of happy parties—very many of them speaking English!

Several Hours' Journey.

Bruges is so convenient of access from England—only seven hours' journey, including Customs and embarkation, by rail and sea—that it seems absurd not to visit it. For a change to Bruges is not only a change of scene, but also of one's century. And it can be visited comfortably and fairly completely inside a week-end. Essentially and emphatically Bruges is not as much a city of the Middle Ages as is Manchester a city of the nineteenth century. Indeed, this is so much the case that the excellent train and steamer service has its drawbacks; one gets to Bruges so quickly that one feels its difference more like a change of scene at a theatre than a change of centuries of development.

Best Way to Enter.

The hurried traveller must perforce approach Bruges by train; the wise traveller will take care to arrive after dark, and if possible on a moonlight night; the traveller wisest of all will approach Bruges on foot or (concession to the modern spirit) on a bicycle. For to see Bruges one requires time—to shed the illusions of fetters of modernity. And one of the modern fetters one must shed even to attempt to see the medieval Bruges is the fetter of speed. For journeys now are measured by the speed of express trains or even of aeroplanes—but journeys then were measured by the walking pace of a man or the day's task of a horse.

The men who built medieval Bruges and the men who lived in medieval Bruges were men whose thoughts travelled at the slow, unhurried pace of the long-distance walker. It is one of the main charms of Flanders—the Flemish-speaking part of Belgium—that distances are still reckoned as "hours' march"—the time standard of the plodding peasant trudging along the tree-bordered and raised roadway over the flat and canal-intersected countryside. Much in Flanders, even in the life of men, still echoes the old days.

If you are wise and come to Bruges softly, approaching not on the modern iron road but down one of the illimitable paved roads, watching the little ditches by the side, seeing the peasants in the fields, noting the towers and spires and houses of Bruges gradually rise into greater and greater distinctness as you come near, then you will come not only into the town of Bruges but into the spirit of Bruges also. And if you walk the streets of Bruges on a moonlight night when the good citizens have gone to bed and their yellow window-panes flutter out one by one, then you may catch the veritable tang and taste of life five and six hundred years ago.

In the canals by which you walk, overhung by ancient houses and great window lattices, the bridges on which you lean, the massive churches, the great Hospital St. Jean, the serene Beguinage, the stately town hall, the old houses of the Guilds, there are in truth the flesh and bones of a real medieval city that you may animate with life, fill with whisper and talk and pleasant laughter by June so much as your own mind is stored with desirable knowledge.

If you come to know what Bruges is by sympathy and feeling, then you can quite cheerfully accept the everyday Bruges of the twentieth century.

One of the great charms of Bruges is that it is such a little place—you can stroll round it in a couple of hours, for the most part on the raised Boulevard of the Ramparts overlooking the canal, and see how Bruges sits upon the Flanders countryside as you can never see London or Paris. Or if you can go a little way outside Bruges and stand and look at it as you may stand and look at your own house or at a country village. Bruges is a personality—not an administrative expression.

Another of the charms of Bruges is that there is so much to be individually discovered. No discerning traveller will fail to go and see the Memling pictures in the Hospital St.

Jean, nor to admire the paintings by Fourbus and by Adrien Isenbrandt in Notre Dame des Sept Douleurs. But no discerning traveller will fail to find, when he explores under little porticoes leading into enclosed courtyards, or wanders along the quaysides of the canals that thread through the town, all kinds of little gems of architecture, of heraldic carving, and nooks and corners that belong to another age.

Even the modern ordinary houses are often built in a medieval way, the sides sloping up to the roof-point, climbing by a series of steps that appear to have been designed as an incitement to dare-devil climbing by the younger generation, but at any rate look charmingly picturesque. And the modern life in the streets is diversified by the frequent passing of ample vestimented nuns or by the long brown-robed barefooted priests, or the little milk-carts drawn by dogs with their shining yellow cans.

A Hospitable Welcome.

Bruges welcomes the visitor, feeds him and houses him very well and very comfortably, sells him photographs and pictures, laces of beauty and pottery of interest—but it remains itself. Bruges does not wish to become less Flemish because it is visited by English and by French; it becomes even more Flemish. And if the traveller would completely understand the life there he must speak neither English nor French, but the tongue of the people, the Flemish variant of Dutch.

But apart from language, a sympathetic understanding of the religious and life will take one a long way, and Bruges provides—on the second Monday in May of each year—one of those religious pageants which are characteristic of Flanders and through which the life of the soil expresses itself.

The Bruges Pageant.

The Bruges Pageant is the Procession of the Holy Blood, a drama of the Passion. In this procession year by year in the month of May there passes through the streets of Bruges the Saviour carrying His Cross, flanked by Roman soldiers; through the streets walk prophets and persecutors, and a little group of men, women and children symbolic of "Het Volk van Bethlehem" ("The People of Bethlehem"). And when at the end of the procession's pilgrimages all are arrived upon the medieval Place du Bourg, with quaint dress, impressive figures, sacred images, and waving display of many banners to receive the Benediction, then indeed we are back in Bruges of the Middle Ages.

And he will best understand the charm and beauty of the life, and see the essential beneath a perhaps unlovely exterior, who has known how to walk quietly and gently among the holy things of to-day and among the assured achievements of the Middle Ages; best of all, perhaps, he who has spent one, or better, two, quiet hours with the pictures of Memling in the Hospital St. Jean and learned out of their jewel-clearness to look understandingly on a world which is after all not so very far away.—John O'London's Weekly.

Work for the Opposition.

There never was a time in the political history of Newfoundland when the people who supported the opposition in an election looked forward with keener interest to the fearless performance of their work, than do the 60,000 electors throughout the country who voted for the Bennett party. The abiding fact that the Opposition should keep in mind is that they have this large number of sympathizers and supporters at their back. This should steel them in their endeavours to uncover all the details of the scandalous expenditure of the past year, and let the taxpayers see how their money was spent. The long hidden terms of the Humber Deal will have to be dragged to the limelight of the public purview so that the people will at last find out the reasons why this information so often asked for was so carefully kept in the background during the election campaign. We venture to say that the financial condition to which the Squires Government has brought the country will be appalling to the general public. The people have not been able to get this information owing to the fact that the House was kept closed till after the election. Every act of the Government has been kept in the dark, but the day of reckoning has come and the Opposition will now compel them to exhibit to the public gaze all that they had been trying to conceal, to save themselves from the indignation of an outraged people. Wrong, deceit and injustice may flourish for a time, but a day will come when the perpetrators of it will be found out. The people will count on the Opposition to have all the accounts submitted and published, particularly the expenditure in the recent election. Let all this be published for the public to read and consider, and afterwards, if they are satisfied that the Squires Government is a sound and sane Government for Newfoundland by all means then let them have the Squires Government for ever. The Opposition will have done their duty.

The New Cabinet.

Yesterday morning the new Cabinet was sworn in by his Excellency the Governor at Government House as follows:—
Hon. Sir R. A. Squires, K.C.M.G., K.C., LL.D., Prime Minister and Colonial Secretary.
Hon. W. R. Warren, K.C., Minister of Justice.
Hon. W. W. Hallyard, Minister of Marine and Fisheries.
Hon. Alex. Campbell, M.D., F.R.C.S., M.L.C., Minister of Agriculture and Mines.
Hon. W. H. Cave, Minister of Finance and Customs.
Hon. Arthur Barnes, Ph. D., Minister of Education.
Hon. Thos. Bonin, M.L.C., Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.
Hon. S. J. Footo, K.C., without portfolio.
Hon. George Shea, M.L.C., without portfolio.
Hon. Sir Marmaduke G. Winter, Kt., M.L.C., without portfolio.
Moth Balls, 20c. package at STAFFORD'S.—June 6.

Political.

The appointments of Messrs. Bonin and Doctor Campbell to executive seats and heads of the departments of Posts and Agriculture and Mines respectively, caused no end of discussion in the ranks of the Government; particularly amongst the friends of Messrs. Hawco and Downey, who, despite great odds won their districts for the Government. It is said that the Premier assured Mr. Downey the position of Minister of Railways at the Humber Deal was bound to go through; and in that case the Reds would have no further interest in the Railway as it would be taken over by the Government. The Government is particularly anxious for the resignation of Mr. Downey from his seat in the House in order that Hon. Dr. Campbell might be given an opportunity to contest the constituency. As far as Mr. Hawco is concerned, the Prime Minister is reported to have made himself quite clear when he refused him a just claim to a seat in the executive and a departmental position which would enable him to look after his district more advantageously than as an ordinary private in the ranks. It is said that Sir Richard absolutely refused Mr. Hawco any consideration as petitioner for.

The appointment of Mr. Cave to the Ministry of Finance was prompted solely to avoid a by-election in the district of Bay de Verde. Political expediency and brazenness seem to fill every paragraph of the Government's ritual whilst every effort is being made to flout the interests and wishes of the people generally.

The formal opening of the House takes place this afternoon when the members will be sworn in and sign the roll, in the presence of commissioners Hon. J. D. Ryan, R. K. Bishop and Sir M. G. Winter, after which the business of electing a Speaker will be conducted. It is rumored that friends of Mr. H. A. Winter are agitating for the election of the member for Port de Grave to this important post notwithstanding that Mr. Coaker had promised the member for St. Barbe the position shortly after his election. After the speaker is selected the House will adjourn until tomorrow when the address in reply will be moved and seconded by Messrs. Cramm and Randall in the Lower House and Sir M. G. Winter and Hon. Dr. Mesdell in the Legislative Council.

Baby Week.

There was a large attendance of mothers and babies at the Clinic in the Star Hall yesterday. The Girl Guides of Spencer College gave an excellent exhibition on "How to Bath a Baby." Doctors Carnell and Macpherson were in attendance and many babies were examined. The Hall opens this morning from 10 to 1 and there will be a dental clinic by Dr. Jones from 10 to 12. As to-day is a half holiday there will be no afternoon session.

IF BABY COULD TALK HE WOULD SAY:

Do not kiss me on the mouth.
Do not let the sun shine in my eyes, nor the wind fill them with dust.
Do not sneeze or cough in my face, for I may take cold; and that would be bad for me.
Do not expose me to whooping cough, measles, or other catching diseases, or I may get sick and die.
Do not pick me up by the arms.
Be careful how you handle me, and lay me down.
Do not give me candy or other things which are not good for me.
Do not give me a dirty pacifier to suck, nor allow me to suck my thumb as it will spoil the shape of my mouth.
Do not rock me to sleep nor teach me other bad habits.
Do not take me to see movies, nor keep me up at nights, for it robs me of my sleep and makes me cross.
Do not dose me with patent medicines nor nasty mixtures.
Do not give me wine, beer or whiskey, tea or coffee, as I want to keep well.
Do not jog me nor trot me on your knee when I cry.
I want the right things to eat and I want my meals on time.
I want some pure, cold water to drink between meals, for I get very thirsty.
I want a bath every day and plenty of clean clothes.
I want my own bed, a comfortable room with the windows open, and plenty of time for sleep, which I must have in order to grow.
I want to be taken out of doors every day for the fresh air.
I want mother to love me and to always be gentle with me.
I want to be a good baby.

ANNUAL MEETING AND ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The annual meeting of the local Union, 1320 United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, was held last night at the L. S. P. U. Hall. Reports submitted by the various officers showed the Association to be in good financial standing, with also a good increase of membership for the year. After the general business of the Union was disposed of, the election of officers took place and resulted as follows:—E. Horwood, President; J. Monk, Vice-President; E. Day, Recording Secretary, re-elected; A. Johnston, Financial Secretary, re-elected; J. Clarke, Treasurer, re-elected; G. Hellier, Conductor, W. Bradbury, Warden, re-elected. Trustees—J. Kehoe, H. Taylor, J. Myler; Investigating Committee: J. Jacobs, T. McCarthy, J. Monk.

T. A. Card Party and Dance.

An enjoyable card party and dance was held in the T. A. Club rooms last night, upwards of 200 people were present. The prizes in the card tournament were won by Miss A. Donnelly and Mr. Leo Spindell. The ladies of the Auxiliary served supper, after which the gathering indulged in dancing. Miskell's Orchestra providing the music. The affair was a great success and everyone felt highly pleased with the evening's amusement.

Acknowledgment.

The Hon. Treasurer of the Permanent Marine Disasters Fund has received from Mr. S. G. Moores, Secretary, an express order for $40.25, proceeds of an entertainment held under the auspices of Crosby and Loyalty Lodges, L.O.A., of Twillingate. In thanking the donors, the Hon. Mr. Watson says that several of the Orange Lodges are now annual subscribers to the Fund, but this is the first time, so far as he remembers, when an entertainment has been given under the auspices of certain Lodges expressly in aid of the Fund. The Twillingate friends have set an example well worthy of imitation by other Lodges, other Societies, and in other places.

Capto's Repairs.

DOCK PRESENTS BUSY SCENE.—S.S. Capto is expected to come off dock about the 20th of the month. Her repairs, which are rather extensive, have taken longer than anticipated. Had the dimensions for the new parts been looked after by our own skilled mechanics, instead of sending down two supposedly experienced men from New York, who were thought to know their business, the repairs would have been effected weeks ago. The ship's new stern post which had to be moulded a second time in New York, is now placed in position, and work is now being rushed to completion. As soon as the Capto comes off dock, the Frasers, which has been held in the slips for the past three months will enter the slip. The latter ship needs considerable repairs as a result of her grounding at Greenspond.

Kyle's Passengers.

S. S. Kyle, Capt. Cross, arrived at Port aux Basques from North Sydney at 6.20 this morning, bringing over several hundred bags of foreign mail matter, and the following first class passengers:—F. A. White, Mrs. J. Wells, Mrs. M. Reynolds, Mrs. I. Chard, K. and Mrs. Parsons, E. J. White, J. Sheppard, Miss L. Fitzpatrick, A. Munn, F. Tuir, Miss A. Egan, Miss E. McDonald, Miss E. Peltman, G. Kearley, Mrs. A. Kearley, F. Matthews, Mrs. J. Shawson, Miss E. Ivary, H. E. Horwood, Mrs. W. F. Horwood, W. Gittleson, B. Miller, L. Miller, Mrs. J. Squires, Miss K. Fox, and G. C. Carew. The express left Port aux Basques on time.

Rugger Game This Afternoon.

A rugger match between Bishop Field and a scratch team will take place at 4.15 this afternoon on Calver's Field. It is understood that an exhibition rugger game in aid of the Girl Guides' Movement, between a team representing the combined schools and a City fifteen is being arranged. Rugger is attaining greater popularity than ever and this year efforts will be made to draw more public attention to this interesting sport.

Statement in "Suffragist" Letter Explained.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir—With regard to the statement referring to Miss Hurst, that was made without her sanction, in a letter signed "Suffragist," which appeared in the public press about three weeks ago, I beg to state, on behalf of Miss Hurst, that the incident was incorrectly reported; she did not make use of the phrase "the door of a Government office was slammed in her face." What Miss Hurst did say was that "if women had the vote she would not have had a politician's door slammed in her face when she called on business." Thanking you for space, I am,
Yours truly,
M. SOUTHCOTT,
President Child Welfare Assn. St. John's, June 5th, 1923.

First Vessel to Gold Fields.

SCHER. CLIMAX SAILS TO-DAY.—The first vessel to leave port for the gold fields at Stag Bay, Labrador, will probably get away to-day. Her name is the Climax and she is commanded by Capt. Peter Roberts, a man with wide experience of the Labrador Coast. The Climax is a 54 ton schooner, which has been specially fitted for the voyage. Quietly, preparations for the start have gone on for the past few weeks. Stores and a complete prospecting outfit have been placed on board and the vessel is now ready to weigh anchor. The Climax is being despatched by the Labrador Gold Deposits Ltd., and it is understood that Mr. Robert Henry is going at super-cargo. The vessel will call at Hare Bay, where a quantity of lumber will be taken on board and from there she will proceed direct to Stag Bay. It is learned that a motor schooner, also fitting for the gold fields, will be ready to start in a couple of weeks time.

Tramp Musicians of Egypt.

The finding of harps in the Tombs of the Kings shows that the early Egyptians studied the art of music with greater attention and more seriousness than do the natives of Egypt to-day. As our picture shows the hand harps of Egypt at the present day are very unlike our ideals of "David's harp of solemn sound," but the tinkling little music produced from them, is not at all unpleasant, though the tunes are often very unlike those of British choice. It does give one a turn, however, to have one of these grave looking tramp-musicians jingle out the air of some common song popular in British or Canadian homes forty years ago, as is not altogether uncommon. But as a rule the music produced in crude, reminding one somehow of the attempts often made to reproduce tunes upon an old peal of bells.

Dr. Jack Harold Lloyd's Greatest SIMPLICITY IS LLOYD'S KEYNOTE BOTH ON SILVERSCREEN AND OFF.

Simplicity is the entire keynote of Harold Lloyd's life, and of his successes. In the flush of his success, following the stupendous triumph of "Grandma's Boy," Lloyd never changed from the likable boy he has always been. This is not the ranting of a press agent, but the opinion of everyone who has come into contact recently with "The Boy," as the comedian is known to all.

Harold Lloyd is just "Plain Folk." He lives in a house that might be rather disappointing to those who figure that all movie stars live in castles. It is an unpretentious, ivy-covered house, and back of it is a swimming pool that any of its would-be builders would be proud to have. His automobiles are not flashy, though they are expensive ones.

Ask Your Neighbor. There is hardly a neighborhood in the United States where women cannot be found who have derived benefit from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For nearly fifty years this botanical medicine has been overcoming some of the worst forms of female ills. As one woman has been benefited by its use she has told others who have used it with the same good results; so the use of this great medicine has spread from shore to shore by the recommendation of those who have found it good. Therefore, ask your neighbor; let her tell you from experience the benefit which all women derive from its use.

NO WONDER THEY ARE COOL.
Detroit Free Press: Upon learning that the people of the United States ate 181,000,000 gallons of ice cream last year, the Europeans will no longer wonder why America throws it the frozen glance.

EQUALITY NOT ALWAYS EQUITY.
London Daily Herald: It is the custom of all powerful professional and trade organizations to make strict rules and enforce them. All rules sometimes bear hardly on the individual case, since equality is different from equity. But that is the price we pay for the general utility of the rules.

ENGLAND IS ENGLAND STILL.
London Daily Herald: Most civilians would salute the King if he should pass; whether they will salute the King's emblems, or the Army's emblems, is a matter of taste which concerns the individual and nobody else. It is as well to be quite clear on these little matters in this post-war world. We are in England still, not Prussia.

POINCARÉ'S GESTURE.
Cincinnati Times-Star: It is a much-abused and now hackneyed phrase, but as the French coined it, it may as well be applied to the latest political event of France. The resignation of President Poincaré and his cabinet was a "gesture," and a "gesture" that they knew would be frustrated by the refusal of President Millerand to accept the resignations.

HIGH COST OF SOOT.
London Daily Telegraph: It has been calculated that every year unconsumed fuel of the value of £6,000,000 is carried up the domestic and other chimneys of this country to descend in small particles of oily soot, unless unfavorable conditions of wind and temperature hold it for a long period in suspension, creating a more or less dense fog. This soot, with its oil, which causes it to stick to everything, is a cause of endless expense.

NAMES THAT FIT.
Natal Advertiser: The poetic instinct in the choice of names has led to our best British writers to a choice so pleasant that it is half the charm to the reader. Dickens, for instance, gave us such a magic library of names so instinct with appropriateness as to suggest that until a man's character and characteristics are known, the final choice of a life's names should only be made on his approach to manhood, and not while he has no say in the matter.

Fighting the Ice Peril of the Atlantic.

The interplay of two great ocean currents off the Newfoundland Banks is the key to the icebergs situation, according to Charles Fitzhugh Tolman, who says that the cold Labrador current pushing southward and the warm Gulf Stream sweeping to the east, wage incessant warfare along a battlefront that is constantly changing its position.

As one or the other of these warring currents sacrifices ground or drives a deep "salient" into the other territory the icebergs are carried back and forth along erratic courses. In recent years the drifts of many individual bergs have been charted day by day in some cases for many weeks together.

In the Labrador current an icebergs tends to survive; in the Gulf Stream it speedily disintegrates. Hence the line of demarcation between these two currents is the boundary between relatively safe and relatively unsafe waters, and the location of this ever-shifting danger line is a vital problem of the ice patrol.

Although there is some mixing of water along the dividing line, its position is generally easy to determine on account of the different characteristics of the opposing currents. Their most obvious and striking differences are in color and temperature. The water of the Labrador current is green; that of the Gulf stream dark blue. The contrast in temperature, which extends vertically downward for hundreds of feet, is expressed in the name "cold wall," applied to the interface of the currents.

Two Temperatures in One Ship.

A case is recorded in which one of the patrol ships, placed across this "wall," measured a water temperature of 34 degrees Fahrenheit at the bow and 56 degrees at the stern; a range of 22 degrees! The same day the crew went swimming in tropical water at 70 degrees Fahrenheit, while half a mile to the northward was a huge Greenland icebergs.

A popular impression prevails that the coast guard cutters blow up icebergs as they do derelicts. The fact is that no amount of blasting would have an appreciable effect on one of these floating monsters, consisting of millions of tons of hard, flinty ice. Since icebergs cannot be destroyed, they must be avoided. By day and in clear weather the mariner can easily give them a wide berth. By night and in the dense fogs that so frequently shroud the icebergs region the task is not so easy.

A sudden encounter with cold water means that the vessel has entered a cold current, but not necessarily that ice is at hand. According to Prof. H. T. Barnes, of McGill University, Montreal, who has been making a study of ice and icebergs for many years, the approach of an icebergs is indicated by a characteristic rise in the temperature of the water, which can be detected many miles from the icebergs by means of a delicate recording thermometer of special type.

Another novel device for locating bergs, and one in which the authorities of the United States hydrographic office and the coast guard see the greatest promise at present, is an outgrowth of war-time experiments in "sound ranging" under water. A sound sent out by the instrument is reflected back to its source and an indication is obtained of both the position and the distance of the reflecting surface.

The Depth Finder.
Under the name of this "sonic depth finder," this device has been successfully used by the navy for sounding ocean depths. Its use for locating icebergs is being tested during this year's ice patrol.

It is proposed to establish an observation post on the shores of Davis Strait, for the purpose of making an actual count of the number of icebergs that start each year on their march to southern waters. The most favorable location for such a post would be Cape Drer, Baffin land, where the Arctic drift sweeps in close to the shore. It takes an icebergs about five months to travel from this point to the vicinity of the Grand Banks.

Regardless of future developments, it may be stated that the ice patrol has already almost abolished what was once the greatest peril of a trans-Atlantic voyage. No disastrous collision with ice has occurred within the area covered by the patrol since this service was established.

To Restore Suede.

When suede gloves or bags have become greasy the leather may be restored by being rubbed with fine emery paper.

This method may also be adopted in the case of suede shoes, but it is worth while giving a more complete cleaning. First of all, stuff the shoes with tissue paper and then rub them thoroughly with a rag which has been soaked in spirits of turpentine. Continue the rubbing until all marks disappear, and then hang the shoes in a draughty place until they are dry and all smell of the turpentine has vanished.

SIR OLIVER LODGE IN GREAT SECRET

Sir Oliver Lodge, former research laboratories at the University recently, said in discovering that electricity is the basis of everything, and that living in an electrical atmosphere should have a source of energy dwarf chemical combustion in significance and would give more than the power we had been suggested it we should how to get at energy in the maturely we might do a great of damage. Let us hope that time atomic energy was the human race would be civilized enough to use it for good purposes.

The energy was there, we know how to take it, but either hopefully or dangerously it according to how one regard the matter. "It will have extraordinary effect, it will man life generally, and our of town life." Sir Oliver said there need be no more smoking ugliness. All the energy need can be got from a few of matter instead of by the tion of thousands of tons.

A man summoned at Ealing having the number-plate of his car illuminated pleaded that the stein theory (of the bending through the action of the gravity) should be his explanation. He said, was the ton, and so was the lamp the outside force caused the rays to be bent so that they shone ground instead of on the plate.

"Sulphur" Rain

From time to time strange are told of wonderful things have fallen in rainstorms. everybody claims to have seen or little fishes, or some other remarkable thing, descend with rain.

At Bordeaux for many April and May, "sulphur rain" have been noticed. After the ers the earth became spotted what appears to be patches of sulphur brought down by the rain. Scientists have interested selves in the phenomenon, as result of their report disprove "sulphur" theory, but leaves almost as strange as the fact has been exploded.

The supposed sulphur is a low pollen of a species of grass grows in forests in large to the south and south-west of death. The rains which were bring the "sulphur showers" when the pines are in flower, pollen from these blooms is by the atmosphere to so great height as to impregnate the

Beckett's Hard Fight

SMITH BEATEN AFTER 17 ROUNDS—DRAMATIC KNOCK-OUT.

At Holland Park, London, May 14, before an attendance that broke all records for the building—almost every seat was occupied—Joe Beckett of Southampton knocked out Dick Smith, of the University Gymnasium, Oxford, in the 17th round of a 20-round contest for the heavy-weight championship of Great Britain and the Lord Londale challenge belt.

Although Beckett has been the acknowledged heavy-weight champion of this country for four years, he had never before fought for a belt, and by his victory he thus acquires the most valued trophy in boxing for the first time.

The fight was not only completely astonishing for all predictions that it would end moderately quickly in a win for Beckett appeared to be on the point of fulfillment in the 1st and 2nd rounds—but it was also rather a sad commentary on our position as a heavy-weight nation. It revealed nothing save our distinct poverty.

BECKETT STAGGERED

Smith was undeniably clever as a tactician and as a boxer, but if he had possessed only the semblance of a hard punch he would have levelled Beckett in the first half-dozen minutes. I gave up counting the number of times he landed flush on Beckett's jaw, but, except for one brief occasion in the 1st round—when Beckett, staggering, rocking, with his eyes rolling, was on the brink of defeat—he did nothing that was more nearly related to a punch than a flick with a feather duster.

Smith was everything barring a hard hitter. He was the ring general. He "stalled" with a skill that would have done credit to those Americans who have been called Old Masters; he used with uncommon dexterity every legitimate trick known in the business of boxing; he plied Beckett so that the latter was clamped fast; he took useful rests merely by compelling Beckett to sap his stamina by pushing him away; he flung in countless blows with rights and lefts—but there was never one that had behind it the strength required to end the proceedings.

It was rather pitiful to see this elderly man for a boxer (Smith is over 40) still doing things—bravely boxing things—that Driscoll at his best would have been proud of, and yet falling to gather the laurels that one good, stiff punch would have given him.

It was always obvious that Smith was only separated from defeat by the thinnest possible margin. Just one punch from Beckett was all that was necessary to topple him, but for 17 rounds he boxed so well as to make Beckett look infinitely more indifferent than he really is. At the opening of the final round Smith was considerably ahead on points; but he was very tired, while freshness had crept into his face, and his guard, if such it could be called—had sunk so low that it was more a barrier for his thighs than for his head.

He had less than ten minutes of fighting to go and conquest was in his grasp. It looked as though only a miracle could beat him; and then, for a reason that is extremely obscure, he let loose an upper-cut when well out of distance—his only real mistake during the night—flung—badly and gave Beckett the opportunity he had been desperately angling for from the opening round.

THE KNOCK-OUT

Beckett, quick to see the chance—and for this he must be given all credit—took instant advantage and swung for his antagonist's jaw with his right. The blow must have connected fairly with the point; Smith's knees sagged, his limp arms fell, and he tottered away to the ropes.

Beckett, tigerish, and hunched to an incredible extent, sprang after him and sent over another right which only grazed Smith's face. But he was dropping then. His legs had lost their power to keep him upright, his arms were pumping against his hips, and his head was down to his

There are 4 grades of roofing felt selling in Newfoundland, "BARRETT'S" is guaranteed the highest grade.

"Barrett's" 1, 2 and 3-ply felts have been in use in Newfoundland for more than 50 years.

The best roof known in America is a "Barrett" roof, "Barrett's" felt ONLY is used in putting on a "Barrett" Roof. Ask any Architect.

"Barrett" 1, 2 and 3-ply felts are really made of felt saturated with genuine coal tar—the 2 and 3-ply felts have a layer of coal tar pitch between each ply.

"Barrett's" felts are made to give good wear, therefore they cost more than roofings made of paper saturated with diluted asphalt.

If you use "Barrett's" felt instead of common felt, a new roof covering for your house may cost you $2.00 more for the whole roof.

Roofs covered with "Barrett's" felt are secure, the extra-cost of one or two dollars (for the entire roof) is money well spent.

Which felt do you intend to use?

Blacksmith Obtained King's Autograph

While holding court in Rome a short time ago, the King of Italy received a blacksmith who desired to thank the king for the decoration conferred on him in recognition of his having invented an agricultural machine.

During the audience the blacksmith drew from his pocket two photographs representing the king and queen, and said, handing them to his majesty: "May I ask your majesty, and also the queen for your signatures?" "And why?" demanded the king smilingly.

"Well, when I die the cross of merit which your majesty has given me will have to be returned and my children will at least have your majesty's portraits and signatures in reminiscence of this audience."

"The queen is absent from Italy," said the king, "and I cannot give you my signature at the present moment, for I have neither pen nor pencil within reach."

"I have brought a pencil with me," said the blacksmith, handing it to the monarch. The king thereupon attached his signature to the photograph, and dismissed the smith with a smile and his customary inclination of his head. To the king's surprise the smith did not retire, but stood his ground.

"Is there anything else I can do for you?" asked the king. "Yes, your majesty: I am waiting for my pencil."

The Marriage Register of the Abbey

The marriage register of the Abbey—the Collegiate Church of St. Peter at Westminster—which the Duke of York and his bride signed on their wedding day is a record of curious and unexpected contrasts. It contains, of course, many names of the famous and the great, but has almost equally numerous signatures of those of humbler sort. This is due largely to the fact that not only members of the body collegiate, but their servants can claim the right to an Abbey wedding. As the privilege of an Abbey ceremony is not one that is too readily accorded, it may easily arise that a peer fails to secure it.

while the handmaiden of one of the collegiate clergy and her bridegroom may have no difficulty in arranging their nuptials in the central church of the Empire.

HOW TO KEEP ONE'S FRIENDS.

Friends, she said to herself, ought to be able to speak plainly to one another and if they did not agree upon a certain subject, they must fall back upon the deeper agreement to which their friendship had brought them, tested by time and welded by affection."

Archibald Marshall.

I copied these words out of a book I was reading because they seemed to me to express so well the ideal of a true friendship.

And because, at the same time, they point out so well the rock on which so many friendships founder.

I have a true friend whose kindly feeling towards me I could never really doubt. She has done some of the kindest things for me one woman ever did for another. Whenever things go wrong with me, my mind always turns toward her to help me set them right. Her advice is invaluable because it is absolutely sincere and well thought out—and it is never given unless I ask for it.

In fact, she is the pattern of what a true friend should be.

An Unfortunate Manner.

Except for one long. She has, at times, a most unfortunate manner. She will sometimes speak to me in a most rude and ungracious way which hurts both my pride and my feelings. No one likes to be snubbed by friends whose praises they have sung in the presence of people to whom the snubbing has been done. No one likes to be set right in a manner which suggests to those who hear that the set-righter thinks one is at least first cousin to a moron.

And when these things happen, as they occasionally do, I am filled with indignation against my friend.

Women's Superstitions.

ARE THEY FOOLISH?

At one of the Child Welfare Centres in Wales last month the Medical Officer appealed to the mothers present to put an end to the cruel practice of cutting a baby's ear at the waxing of the moon.

Truly, superstition dies hard even in the twentieth century.

Few women would allow their wares to be cut by a razor, and yet how many customs and sayings cling round the life of the home.

RIGHT FOOT FOREMOST.

You must get out of bed right foot first, but into your bath with your left. To put on a garment inside out is a sign of good luck. It is unwise to pass anyone on the stairs, or wash in the same water, or to go beneath a ladder.

FOR BRIDES.

A bride must wear something blue and something borrowed, and it is most unwise for her to remove her marriage ring. Happy the bride the sun shines on. New-comers to her house must take her a gift.

Carry a new-born baby upstairs first, as a sign it may rise in the world.

THE BROKEN GLASS.

The most fatal event is an accident to a looking-glass—no doubt because the reflected image is destroyed.

Salt, which in former days was of great price, is surrounded by traditions. If you have the misfortune to spill it, some must at once be cast with the right hand over the left shoulder. It represents wealth, and grain is a sign of fruitfulness; hence the custom of presenting a bride with vessels containing either, and of throwing rice after a wedding carriage. The casting of old shoes is a most ancient Jewish custom.

May is an unlucky month for marriage. This idea dates from Roman times, as the month was sacred to Diana, a Virgin Deity, Goddess of Chastity.

"Marry in May, woe is the day."

LUCK AND THE NEW MOON.

Everyone knows that at the New

Which isn't either strange or inexcusable.

But here is the inexcusable part. In that moment of indignation I sometimes forget all my friend's good qualities and I say: "That ends it. I will not be snubbed that way."

And then the Authorman plays his part:

"You know very well," he reminds me, "that she hasn't the least idea she is snubbing you. It's the way she does to everybody. She doesn't know she is doing it. It's very trying sometimes, but it's part of her. And when you come right down to it, you know it's only an infinitesimal part compared to her kindness and loyalty. Now, isn't it?"

And I always admit that it is.

So when I saw those words in the book, I copied them out and showed them to the Authorman.

"Why, that," said he, "is ready to be indignant at my being more impressed by a book than by him, 'is just what I've always said."

"Which is exactly why," said I, "taking the wind out of his rapidly filling sails," I showed them to you."

Keeping Friends Takes Character.

A real friendship ought to be a big enough thing to keep all small misunderstandings and irritations in their place.

Suppose you hear that your friend has said or done something that doesn't sound a bit like him, must you assume that he is a different person than you thought him? Why not trust his character as you know him, instead of the report? Rumor does its office in a while, you know.

"That's really being friends."

Making friends is a test of one's personality. Keeping friends is a test of character. You cannot keep your friends unless you are capable of deep-rooted affection, of tolerance and of loyalty.

CUTTING LOVE.

Knives and scissors cut love, and must not be given; a small coin must be paid in return for them.

We all know there is luck in a crooked sixpence or holed penny, and rejoice when we pick up a horseshoe—the more nails left in it, the greater the good fortune to the finder.

A horseshoe nailed over a door or chimney keeps out witches.

3, 7, 9, and their multiples are all blessed numbers, but 13 is an omen of evil. No hostess will willingly sit down 13 to eat at her table.

Carrying a potato in the pocket as a cure for rheumatism, or a garter of bottle corks to prevent cramp, is entirely superstitious.

A black cat coming of itself to live with you brings great good fortune. It is always good to pick up a pin on the floor.

EVANESCENT.

The griefs that beset me the week before last don't worry or fret me, they're faded and past. They broke like the bubbles, and vanished, I wist; I found that my troubles were a bubble of mist. But now I have new ones, dire ones abound, and green ones and blue ones are standing around. I say, in my sorrow, "To-day is a joy, but wait for to-morrow—It's bound to bring woe." The sun is dispensing its world famous rays, but grief I am waiting in coming days." We always are looking for something to bust, beshewing, gadzooking, and fearing the worst. The skies are present are cloudless and clear, tempests unpleasant are sure to appear. To-day we are feeling as when new; next week we're reeling around with the flu. We are carving a roast and a pig, we shall be starving ere many days. Through life we go treading souls out of plumb, still fearing dreading the griefs that don't move us to tears. Oh, heart of future, just pack up and don't stay and root your long legs in me!

SATISFACTION!

A seemingly low price is always attractive but frequently misleading. How often is heard the remark, "I would rather pay a little more and get the best."
As a matter of fact, that "little more" was necessary to obtain the BEST. Good things require a higher price to be good. There may be cheaper policies than ours, but would you be satisfied with their so-called protection?
