Autumn.

Over the purple seas
The fragrant sounding breeze,
Comes from some sunny island in the south,
To tell me of the fall and the Gives me a breath like wine,
And stings me like the creper's scurried

Mr. Carton's Will.

[From the Gentleman's Magazine.]

all went to church, and in the afternoon Miss Grahams and I went to the Zoological Gardens. It was just 9 o'clock that evening, and we were sitting in the drawing room before supper, when a messenger came to the house to ask if Mrs. Grahams would go to see a Mrs. Wilmore, who was very ill at Highgate. Mrs. Wilmore had been a school-fellow of Mrs. Grahams', and she was the only friend of Mrs. Grahams' whom she had not seen for many years.

and then the next thing was she came into the kitchen in a great hurry with her travelling bag, and she said to me, "I must go, and you must go with me." She then took her hat and coat, and she went down to the carriage and drove away.

"Do you know the gentleman's name?"
"No, she gave me no name, but I thought it was Mr. Carton, because she seemed to know him quite well, for she looked at his card as she went, and she said to me, 'I must go, and you must go with me.'"

"The latter part of the sentence was uttered in a tone of reproach, as if she disapproved very much of what had happened."

A Pathetic Story of a Dog.

Only a few days ago we were in the town of Mrs. Angus's, near Little River. Some of the local papers have already been favored with an article in commemoration of her most interesting qualities. What I am about to write now concerns the death of her dog, and the manner in which she was treated.

The Barthold statue with its pedestal is 320 feet high from the water to the top of the torch. Eight lamps of 6000 candle power each, are set in the torch. At the base of the statue are also a number of lamps of the same power each, and around the head of the figure are a number of immediately lamps to give the statue its own light.

There is nothing like it.

It is a remedy offered to suffering humanity whose use is so universal and frequently required as Hagar's Yellow Oil, for rheumatism, neuralgia, colds, sore throat, distemper, cramp, colic, and other ailments, and is a most valuable remedy in all cases of these kinds, when internally and externally used.

Those women who persist in wearing the skins of wild birds as part of their head-gear or upon other articles of dress are likely to have a tough time in the State of New York. A law was passed by the State Legislature during the last session making it a misdemeanor punishable by thirty days' imprisonment and fifty dollars fine to "wear or use" any article of dress made of the skins of wild birds or other animals.

What a world of meaning this statement embodies. Just what you want to know is not Putnam's Painless Corn Extract—the great cure-pop corn cure—acts in this way. It makes no more spots, inflicts no pain, and is perfectly safe and reliable, without irritating the skin. It is not a medicine, but a remedy. Do not be imposed upon by imitations or substitutes.
