Goldsmith and Diunen, two of the Tecumsehs, were robbed at their boarding house on Friday night. The former lost his gold watch worth $200, and $60 in cash, the latter being minus $20 in cash. The watch and money were subsequently discovered; they appear to have been taken for a lark.

The Lacrosse match for the championship of the world on Saturday, between the Ontarios and Torontos, was won by the former in three straight games. The first game was won in 25 minutes, and next three in 23½, 15, and 8 minutes. The victors were enthusiastically and excitedly applauded. Immediately after the play had closed they received challenges from the Torontos and Tecumsehs to play, both of which were accepted.

CHAPTER XXIV.

A PERTINENT QUESTION.

"I ask for no explanation, and will listen to none. Suppose me to repose implicit confidence in the vague accusations of an anonymous slander. Suppose me to believe you false and fickle, a shameless coquette, and myself an infatuated old fool. Suppose anything and everything you please; but first answer the question I ask you from the bottom of my heart, with this anonymous statement, false or true, I care not a jot which, in my hand."

He held it as if about to tear it across and fling it in the grate. She laid a gentle touch on his arm and whispered softly:

"Don't destroy it till I've answered your question. Yes. There is nobody like you in the world!"

We need not stop to repeat a proverb touching the irreverent persistency of Folly in travelling hand-in-hand with Age; and of what extravagances the General might have been guilty, in his exceeding joy, it is impossible to guess, had she not stopped him at the outset.

"Sit down there," she said, pointing to a corner of the sofa, while establishing herself in an armchair on the other side of the fireplace. "Now that you have had your say, perhaps you will let me have mine! Hush! I know what you mean. I take all that for granted. Stay where you are, hold your tongue, and listen to me."

"The first duty of a soldier is obedience," he answered in great glee. "I'll be as steady as I can."

"It is my right now to explain," she continued gravely. "Believe me. I most fully appreciate. I never can forget. Whatever happened I never could forget the confidence you have shown in me to-day. Depend upon it, when you trust people so unreservedly, you make it impossible for them to deceive. I have always honored and admired you. During the last hour I have learned to—to well—to think you deserve more than honor and esteem. Any woman might be proud and happy—yes—happy to belong to you. But now, if I am to be your wife—don't interrupt. Well, as I am to be your wife, you must let me tell you everything—everything—or I recall my promise."

"Don't do that," he answered playfully. "But mind, I'm quite satisfied with you as you are, and ask to know nothing."

She hesitated, and the color came to her brow while she completed her confession. "You—you lent me some money, you know; gave it me, I ought to say, for I'm quite sure you never expected to see it back again. It was a good deal. Don't contradict. It was a good deal, and I wonder how I could have the face to ask for it. But I didn't want it for myself. It was to save from utter ruin a very old and dear friend."

"I know all about it," said he, cheerfully. "At least, I can guess. Very glad it should be so well employed. But all that was your business, not mine."

"And you never even asked who got it!" she continued, while again there gathered a mist to veil her large dark eyes.

"My dear Blanche," he answered, "I was only too happy to be of service to you. Surely it was your own, to employ as you liked. I don't want to know any more about it, even now."

"But you must know," she urged. "I've been going to tell you ever so often, but something always interrupted us; and once, when I had almost got it out, the words seemed to die away on my lips. Listen. You know I'm not very young."

He bowed in silence. The reflection naturally presented itself that if she was not very young, he must be very old.

Miss Douglas proceeded, with her eyes fixed on her listener, as if she was looking at something a long way off.

"Of course I've seen and known lots of people in my life, and had great friends—I mean real friends—that I would have made any sacrifice to serve. Amongst these was Mr. Walters. I used to call him Daisy. General, I—I liked him better than all the rest. Better than anybody in the world—"

"And now?" asked the General anxiously, but carrying a bold front notwithstanding.

"Now, I know I was mistaken," she replied. "Though that's not the question."

both to herself and him, took a courteous leave of his hostess, and gave a hearty greeting to the new-comer as they passed each other on the threshold.

"I think I've won the battle," muttered the old soldier, mounting his horse briskly in the street; "though I've left the enemy in possession of the ground!"

CHAPTER XXV.

A SATISFACTORY ANSWER.

Daisy, with his hair cut exceedingly short, as denoting that he was on the eve of some great crisis in life, entered the apartment in the sheepish manner of a visitor who is not quite sure about his reception. Though usually of cheerful and confident bearing, denoting no want of a certain self-assertion, which the present generation call "cheek," all his audacity seemed to have deserted him, and he planted himself in the centre of the carpet, with his hat in his hand, like the poor, spiritless bridegroom at Netherby, who stood "dangling his bonnet and plume" while his affianced and her bridesmaids were making eyes at young Lochinvar.

Miss Douglas, too, required a breathing-space to restore her self-command. When they had shaken hands, it was at least a minute before either could find anything to say.

The absurdity of the situation struck them both, but the lady was the first to recover her presence of mind; and, with a laugh not the least genuine, welcomed him back to England, demanding the latest news from Paddyland.

"You've been at Cormac's town, of course," said she. "You can tell us all about dear Lady Mary, and your pretty friend Norah. I hope she asked to be remembered to me."

He blushed up to his eyes, turning his hat in his hands, as if he would creep into it bodily and hide himself from notice in the crown.

She saw her advantage, and gained courage every minute, so as to stifle and keep down the knowing pain that made her so sick at heart.

"I wonder Norah trusts you in London," she continued, with another of those forced smiles. "I suppose you're only on short leave, as you call it, and mean to go back directly. Will you have the black mare to ride while you are in town? I've taken great care of her, and she's looking beautiful!"

To her own ear, if not to his, there was a catch in her breath while she spoke the last words, that warned her she would need all her self-command before the play was played out.

He thanked her kindly enough, while he declined the offer; but his tone was so grave, so sorrowful, that she could keep up the affectation of levity no longer.

"What is it?" she asked, in an altered voice. "Daisy!—Mr. Walters! What is the matter? Are you offended? I was only joking about Norah."

"Offended!" he repeated. "How could I ever be offended with you? But I didn't come here to talk about Miss Macormac, nor even Satanella, except in so far as the mare is connected with your generosity and kindness."

"What do you mean?" she asked, in considerable trepidation. "You were the generous one, for you gave me the best hunter in your stable, without being asked."

"As if you had not bought her over and over again!" he exclaimed, finding voice and words and courage now that he was approaching the important topic. "Miss Douglas, it's no use denying your good deeds, nor pretending to ignore their magnificence. It was only yesterday I learned the real name of my unknown friend! I tell you that money of yours saved me from utter ruin—more than ruin, from such disgrace as if I had committed a felony, and been sent to prison!"

"I'm sure you look as if you had just come out of one," she interposed, "with that cropped head. Why do you let them cut your hair so short? It makes you hideous!"

"Never mind my cropped head," he continued, somewhat baffled by the interruption. "I hurried here at once, to thank you with all my heart, as the best friend I ever had in the world."

"Well, you've done it," said she. "That's quite enough. Now let us talk of something else."

"But I haven't done it," protested Daisy, gathering from the obstacles in his way, a certain inclination to his task or at least a determination to go through with it. "I haven't said half what I've got to say, nor a quarter of what I feel. You have shown that you consider me a near and dear friend. You have given me the plainest possible was flatter than it should be, as if the bottle had been already opened to slake another's thirst.

"Better not ask," she said, "if the words don't come naturally,—if the answer is sure to be no."

In his intense relief he never marked the piteous tone of her voice, nor the tremble of agony passing over her face, like the flicker of a fire on a marble bust, to leave its features more fixed and rigid than before.

Even in her keen suffering she wished to spare him. Already she was beginning to long for the dull insensibility that must succeed this hour of mental pain. She dreaded the possibility that his disappointment should be anything like her own, and would fain have modified the blow she had no choice but to inflict.

Daisy, however, with good reason no doubt, was resolved to rush on his fate the more absolutely, as it seemed, because of the endeavors to spare both him and herself.

"I am a plain-spoken fellow," said he, "and—and—tolerably straightforward, as times go. I'm not much used to this kind of thing—at least, I've never regularly asked such a question before. You mustn't be offended, Miss Douglas, if I don't see the right way to work. But—but—it seems so odd that you should have come in and paid my debts for me! Don't you think I ought—or don't you think you ought—in short, I've come here on purpose to ask you marry me. I'm not half good enough, I know, and lots of fellows would make you better husbands, I'm afraid. But, really now—without joking—won't you try?"

He had got into the spirit of the thing, and went on more swimmingly than he could have hoped. There was almost a ring of truth in his appeal, for Daisy's was a temperament that flung itself keenly into the excitement of the moment, gathering ardor from the very sense of pursuit. As he said himself, "He never could help riding, if he got a start!"

And Miss Douglas shook in every limb while she listened with a wan, weary face and white lips, parted in a rigid smile. It was not that she was unaccustomed to solicitations of a like nature; whatever might be her previous experience, scarcely an hour had passed since she sustained a similar attack—and surely to accept an offer of marriage ought to be more subversive of the nervous system than to refuse; yet she could hardly have betrayed deeper emotion had she been trembling in the balance between life and death.

That was a brave heart of hers, or it must have failed to keep its own rebellion down so firmly, and gather strength to answer in a calm, collected voice—

"There are some things it is better not to think about, for they can never be, and this is one of them."

How little she knew what was passing in his mind! How little she suspected that her sentence was his reprieve! And yet his self-love was galled. He had made a narrow escape, and was thankful, no doubt, but felt somewhat disappointed, too, that his danger had not been greater still.

"Do you mean it?" said he. "Well, you'll forgive my presumption, and—and—you won't forget I asked you."

"Forget!"

It was all she said; but a man must have been both blind and deaf not to have marked the tone in which those syllables were uttered, the look which accompanied them. Daisy brandished his hat, thinking it time to go, lest his sentence should be commuted, and his doom revoked.

She put her hand to her throat, as if she must choke; but mastered her feelings with an effort, forcing herself to speak calmly and distinctly now, on a subject that must never be approached again.

"Do you think I undervalue your offer," she said, gathering fortitude with every word; "do you think me changeable, or unfeeling. If you must not make me happy, at least you have made me very proud; and if everything had turned out differently, I do hope I might have proved worthy to be your wife. You're not angry with me, are you? And you won't hate me because it's impossible?"

"Not the least!" exclaimed Daisy, eagerly. "Don't think it for a moment! Please not to make yourself unhappy about me."

"I am worthy to be your friend," she continued, saddened, and it may be a little vexed by this remarkable exhibition of self-denial; "and as a friend I feel I owe you some explanation, beyond a bare 'No, I won't.' It ought rather to be 'No, I can't,' because—because, to tell you the honest truth, I have promised somebody else!"

"I wish you joy, with all my heart!" he exclaimed, gaily, and not the least like an unhappy suitor. "I hope you'll be as happy as the day is long! When is it to be? You'll send me an invitation to the wedding,

"I have not the cheek," was Daisy's reply. "They would chaff one so awfully, if they knew. No, Bill, I'll see you through anything but that."

"Then I must show the best front I can without a support," said the other ruefully. "Why can't she let me off these tea-fights? They're cruelly slow. I don't see the good of them."

"She does," replied Daisy. "Not a woman in London knows what she's about better than Mrs. Lushington."

"How d'ye mean?" asked his less worldly-minded friend.

"Why, you see," explained Daisy, "one great advantage of living in this wicked town is, that you've no duty towards your neighbor. People don't care two straws what you do, or how you do it, so long as you keep your own line, without crossing theirs. They'll give you the best of everything, and ask for no return, if only you'll pretend to be glad to see them when met, and not forget them when you go away. That's the secret of morning-visits, card-leaving, wedding-presents, and the whole of the sham. Now Mrs. Lushington goes everywhere, and never has a ball, nor a drum, nor even a large dinner-party of her own, but she says to her friends, 'I love you dearly, I can't exist without you. Come and see me every Wednesday, except the Derby Day, all the London season through, from five to seven p.m. I'll swear to be at home, and I'll give you a cup of tea! So, for nine pen'orth of milk, and some hot water, she repays the hospitalities of a nation. She's pleased, the world is gratified, and nobody's bored but you. It's all humbug, that's the truth, and I'm very glad I'm so soon to be out of it!"

"But you won't leave the Regiment?" said his brother officer kindly.

"Not if I know it!" was the hearty response. "Norah likes soldiering, and old Macormac doesn't care what we do, if we only visit him in the hunting season. Besides, my uncle put that in the conditions when he 'parted,' which he did freely enough, I am bound to admit, considering all things."

"You've not been long about it," observed Soldier Bill in a tone of admiration. "It's little more than a month since you pulled through after that 'scur' at Penchostown; and now, here you are booked to one lady, after proposing to another, provided with settlements, trousseau, bridesmaids, and very likely a bishop to marry you. Hang it, Daisy, I've got an uncle smothered in lawn; I'll give him the straight tip, and ask him to tie you up fast."

"You'll have to leave the Park at once," was Daisy's reply, "or you'll be returned absent when the parade is formed. You know, Bill, you aren't late, for your life."

The two young men were by this time at Albert Gate, having spent a pleasant half-hour together on a couple of penny chairs, while the strange medley passed before them that throngs Hyde Park on every summer's afternoon. Daisy was far happier than he either hoped or deserved. After Satanella's refusal, he had felt at liberty to follow the dictates of his own heart, and lost no time in prosecuting his suit with Norah Macormac. The objections that might have arisen from want of means were anticipated by his uncle's unlooked for liberality, and he was to be married as soon as the necessary arrangements could be made, though, in consideration of his late doings, the engagement was at present to be kept a profound secret.

Notwithstanding some worldly wisdom, Daisy could believe that such secrets divided amongst half-a-dozen people, would not become the property of half-a-hundred.

In mood like his, a man requires no companion but his own thoughts. We will rather accompany Soldier Bill, as he picks his way into Belgrave, stepping daintily over the muddy crossings, cursing the water-carts, and trying to preserve the polish of his boots, up to Mrs. Lushington's door.

Yet into those shining boots his heart seemed almost sinking, when he marked a long line of carriages in the streets, a crowd of footmen on the steps and pavement. No man alive had better nerve than Bill, to ride, or fight, or swim, or face any physical danger; but his hands turned cold, and his face hot, when about to confront strange ladies, either singly or in masses; and for him, the rustling of muslin was as the shaking of a standard to the inexperienced charger, a signal of unknown danger, a flutter of terror and dismay.

Nevertheless, he mastered his weakness, following his own name resolutely up-stairs, in a white heat no doubt, yet supported by the calmness of despair. Fortunately, he found his hostess at her drawing-room door. The favorable greeting she accorded him would have reassured the most diffident of men.

"You're a good boy," she whispered, with duchess aforesaid: a missionary, who had been tortured by the Chinese, dark, sallow, and of a physiognomy that went far to extenuate the cruelty of the Celestials; a lady who had spent two years at Thebes, and, perhaps for that reason, dressed almost as low as the Egyptian Sphinx; a statesman out of office; a celebrated preacher at issue with his bishop; a foreign minister; a London banker; and a man everybody knew, who wrote books nobody read. Besides these, there was the usual complement of ladies who gave, and ladies who went to, balls; married women addicted to flirting; single ladies not averse to it; stout mammas in gorgeous apparel; tall girls with baby faces promising future beauty; a powdered footman winding, like an eel, through the throng; Frank Lushington himself, looking at his watch to see how soon it would be over; and pretty Bessie Gordon, fresh and smiling, superintending the tea.

All this Bill took in, wondering. It seemed such a strange way of spending a bright summer's afternoon, in weather that had come on purpose for cricket, boating, yachting, all sorts of out-of-door pursuits. Putting himself beside the question, for he felt as much on duty as if had the belt on in a barrack-yard, it puzzled him to discover the spell that brought all these people together, in a hot room, at six o'clock in the day. Was it sheer idleness, or the love of talking, or only the follow-my-leader instinct of pigs and sheep? Catching sight of General St. Josephs and Miss Douglas conversing apart in a corner, he determined that it must be a motive stronger than any of these, and looking down on her broad deep shoulders, marvelled how such motive might affect his next neighbor, a lady of sixty years, weighing some sixteen stone.

It is fair to suppose, therefore, that Bill was as yet himself untouched. His intimacy with Mrs. Lushington, while sharpening his wits and polishing his manners, served, no doubt, to dispel those illusions of romance that all young men are prone to cherish, more or less; and Soldier Bill, with his fresh cheeks and simple heart, believed he was becoming a thorough philosopher, an experienced man-of-the-world, rather human weaknesses at their real value, and walking about the battle of life sheathed in armor-of-proof. Honest Bill! How little he dreamt that his immunity was only a question of time. The hour had not yet come—nor the woman!

Far different was St. Josephs. If ever man exulted in bondage and seemed proud to rattle his chains, that man was the captive General. He never missed an opportunity of attending his conqueror: riding in the Park—"walking the Zoo"—waiting about at balls, drums, crash-rooms, and play-houses,—he never left her side.

Miss Douglas, loathing her own ingratitude, was weary of her life. Even Bill could not help remarking the pale cheeks, the heavy eyes, the dull lassitude of gait and bearing, that denoted the feverish unrest of one who is sick at heart.

He trod on a chaperone's skirt; and omitted to beg pardon; he stumbled against his uncle, the bishop, and forgot to ask after his aunt. So taken up was he with the faded looks of Miss Douglas, that he neither remembered where he was, nor why he came, and only recovered consciousness with the rustle of Mrs. Lushington's dress and her pleasant voice in his ear.

"Give me your arm," said she, pushing on through her guests, with many winning smiles, "and take me into the little room for some tea."

Though a short distance, it was a long passage. She had something pleasant to say to everybody, as she threaded the crowd; but it could be no difficult task for so experienced a campaigner, on her own ground, to take up any position she required. And Bill found himself established at last by her side, in a corner, where they were neither overlooked nor overheard.

"Now I want to know if it's true?" said she, dashing into the subject at once. "You can tell, if anybody can, and I'm sure you have no secrets from me."

"If what's true?" asked Bill, gulping tea that made him duller than ever.

"Don't be stupid!" was her reply. "Why about Daisy of course. Is he going to marry that Irish girl? I want to find out at once."

"Well, it's no use denying it," stammered Bill, somewhat unwillingly. "But it's a dead secret, Mrs. Lushington, and of course it goes no farther."

"Oh, of course!" she repeated. "Don't you know how safe I am? But you're quite sure of it? You have it from himself?"

"I've got to be his best man," returned Bill, by no means triumphantly. "You'll coach me up a little, won't you, before the day? I haven't an idea what to do."

She laughed merrily.

... always honored and admired you. During the last hour I have learned to—to—will—to think you deserve more than honor and esteem. Any woman might be proud and happy—yes—happy to belong to you. But now, if I am to be your wife—don't interrupt. Well, as I am to be your wife, you must let me tell you everything—everything—or I recall my promise."

"Don't do that," he answered playfully. "But mind, I'm quite satisfied with you as you are, and ask to know nothing."

She hesitated, and the color came to her brow while she completed her confession. "You—you lent me some money, you know; gave it me, I ought to say, for I'm quite sure you never expected to see it back again. It was a good deal. Don't contradict. It was a good deal, and I wonder how I could have the face to ask for it. But I didn't want it for myself. It was to save from utter ruin a very old and dear friend."

"I know all about it," said he, cheerfully. "At least, I can guess. Very glad it should be so well employed. But all that was your business, not mine."

"And you never even asked who got it?" she continued, while again there gathered a mist to veil her large dark eyes.

"My dear Blanche," he answered, "I was only too happy to be of service to you. Surely it was your own, to employ as you liked. I don't want to know any more about it, even now."

"But you must know," she urged. "I've been going to tell you over so often, but something always interrupted us; and once, when I had almost got it out, the words seemed to die away on my lips. Listen. You know I'm not very young."

He bowed in silence. The reflection naturally presented itself that if she was not very young, he must be very old.

Miss Douglas proceeded, with her eyes fixed on her listener, as if she was looking at something a long way off.

"Of course I've seen and known lots of people in my life, and had great friends—I mean real friends—that I would have made any sacrifice to serve. Amongst these was Mr. Walters. I used to call him Daisy. General, I—I liked him better than all the rest. Better than anybody in the world—"

"And now?" asked the General anxiously, but carrying a bold front notwithstanding.

"Now, I know I was mistaken," she replied. "Though that's not the question. Well, after that horrid race—when my beautiful mare ought to have won, and didn't—I knew Daisy—Mr. Walters, I mean—had lost more than he could afford to pay—in plain English, he was ruined; and worse, wouldn't be able to show, unless somebody came to the rescue. I hadn't got the money myself. Not a hundredth part of it! So I asked you, and—and—sent it all to him. Now you know the whole business."

"I knew it long ago," said he gently. "At least, I might have known it, had I ever allowed the subject to enter my head. Does he know it too, do you think, Blanche?"

"Good heavens! No!" she exclaimed. "That would be a complication. You don't think there's a chance of it! I took every care—every precaution. What should I do? General, what would you advise?"

He smiled to mark how she was beginning to depend on him, drawing a good augury from this alteration in her character, and would no doubt have replied in exceedingly affectionate terms, but that he was interrupted by the opening of the drawing-room door, and entrance of a servant, who, in a matter-of-fact voice, announced a visitor—

"Mr. Walters!"

"Blanche turned white to her lips, and muttered rapidly, 'Won't you stay, General? Do!'"

But the General had already possessed himself of his hat, and, with an air of good-humored confidence, that she felt did honor directly. Will you have the black mare to ride while you are in town? I've taken great care of her, and she's looking beautiful!"

To her own ear, if not to his, there was a catch in her breath while she spoke the last words, that warned her she would need all her self-command before the play was played out.

He thanked her kindly enough, while he declined the offer; but his tone was so grave, so sorrowful, that she could keep up the affection of levity no longer.

"What is it?" she asked, in an altered voice. "Daisy!—Mr. Walters! What is the matter? Are you offended? I was only joking about Norah."

"Offended!" he repeated. "How could I ever be offended with you? But I didn't come here to talk about Miss Macormac, nor even Satanella, except in so far as the mare is connected with your generosity and kindness."

"What do you mean?" she asked, in considerable trepidation. "You were the generous one, for you gave me the best hunter in your stable, without being asked."

As if you had not bought her over and over again!" he exclaimed, finding voice and words and courage now that he was approaching the important topic. "Miss Douglas, it's no use denying your good deeds, nor pretending to ignore their magnificence. It was only yesterday I learned the real name of my unknown friend! I tell you that money of yours saved me from utter ruin—worse than ruin, from such disgrace as if I had committed a felony, and been sent to prison!"

"I'm sure you look as if you had just come out of one," she interposed, "with that cropped head. Why do you let them cut your hair so short? It makes you hideous!"

"Never mind my cropped head," he continued, somewhat baffled by the interruption. "I hurried here at once, to thank you with all my heart, as the best friend I ever had in the world."

"Well, you've done it," said she. "That's quite enough. Now let us talk of something else."

"But I haven't done it," protested Daisy, gathering from the obstacles in his way, a certain inclination to his task or at least a determination to go through with it. "I haven't said half what I've got to say, nor a quarter of what I feel. You have shown that you consider me a near and dear friend. You have given me the plainest possible proof of your confidence and esteem. All this instigates me—or rather induces me, or, shall I say, encourages me—to hope, or perhaps persuade myself of some probability. In short, Miss Douglas—can't you help a fellow out with what he's got to say?"

Floundering about in search of the right expressions, she would have liked him to go on for an hour. It was delightful to be even on the brink of that paradise from which she must presently exclude herself for ever with her own hands, and she forbore to interrupt him till he came to a dead stop for want of words.

"Nonsense!" she said. "Any friend would have done as much who had the power. It's nothing to make a fuss about. I'm glad you're out of the scrape, and there's an end of it."

"You are always generous," he exclaimed. "You ought to have been a man; I've said so a hundred times—only it's lucky you're not, or I couldn't ask you a question that I don't know how to put in the right form."

She turned pale as death. It was come, then, at last—that moment to which she had once looked forward as a glimpse of happiness too exquisite for mortal senses. Here was the enchanted cup pressed to her very lip, and she must not taste it—must even withdraw her eyes from the insidious drink. And yet even now she felt a certain sense of disappointment in her empty triumph, a vague misgiving that the proffered draught hardly have betrayed deeper emotion had she been trembling in the balance between life and death.

That was a brave heart of hers, or it must have failed to keep its own rebellion down so firmly, and gather strength to answer in a calm, collected voice—

"There are some things it is better not to think about, for they can never be, and this is one of them."

How little she knew what was passing in his mind! How little she suspected that her sentence was his reprieve! And yet his self-love was galled. He had made a narrow escape, and was thankful, no doubt, but felt somewhat disappointed, too, that his danger had not been greater still.

"Do you mean it?" said he. "Well, you'll forgive my presumption, and—and—you won't forget I asked you."

"Forget!"

It was all she said; but a man must have been both blind and deaf not to have marked the tone in which those syllables were uttered, the look which accompanied them. Daisy brandished his hat, thinking it time to go, lest his sentence should be commuted, and his doom revoked.

She put her hand to her throat, as if she must choke; but mastered her feelings with an effort, forcing herself to speak calmly and distinctly now, on a subject that must never be approached again.

"Do you think I undervalue your offer," she said, gathering fortitude with every word; "do you think me changeable, or unfeeling. If you must not make me happy, at least you have made me very proud; and if everything had turned out differently, I do hope I might have proved worthy to be your wife. You're not angry with me, are you? And you won't hate me because it's impossible?"

"Not the least!" exclaimed Daisy, eagerly. "Don't think it for a moment! Please not to make yourself unhappy about me."

"I am worthy to be your friend," she continued, saddened, and it may be a little vexed by this remarkable exhibition of self-denial; "and as a friend I feel I owe you some explanation, beyond a bare 'No, I won't.' It ought rather to be 'No, I can't;' because—because, to tell you the honest truth, I have promised somebody else!"

"I wish you joy, with all my heart!" he exclaimed, gaily, and not the least like an unsuccessful suitor. "I hope you'll be as happy as the day is long! When is it to be? You'll send me an invitation to the wedding, won't you?"

Her heart was very sore. He did not even ask the name of his fortunate rival, and he could hardly have looked more pleased, she thought, if he had been going to marry her himself.

"I don't know about that," she answered, shaking her head sadly. "At any rate, I shall not see you again for a long time. Good-bye, Daisy," and she held out a cold hand that trembled very much.

"Good-bye," said he, pressing it cordially. "I shall never forget your kindness. Good-bye."

Then the door shut, and he was gone. Blanche Douglas sank into a sofa, and sat there looking at the opposite wall, without moving hand or foot, till the long summer's day waned into darkness and her servant came with lights. She neither wept, nor moaned, nor muttered broken sentences, but remained perfectly motionless, like a statue, and in all those hours she asked herself but one question—"Do I love this man? and, if so, how can I ever bear to marry the other?"

CHAPTER XXVI.

AFTERNOON TEA.

"I wish you'd come, Daisy. You've no idea what it is, facing all those swells by oneself!"

likely a bishop to marry you. Hang it, Daisy, I've got an uncle smothered in lawn; I'll give him the straight tip, and ask him to tie you up fast."

So, while Mrs. Lushington did homage (in French) to the arch-duchess, who was old, fat, good-humored, and very sleepy, Bill took up a position from which he could pass the inmates of the apartment in review. Observing his welcome by their hostess, and knowing who he was, two or three magnificent ladies thought it not derogatory to afford him a gracious bow; and as they forbore to engage him in discourse, a visitation, of which Bill had fearful misgivings, he soon felt sufficiently at ease to inspect unconcernedly, and in detail, the several individuals who constituted the crush.

It was a regular London gathering, in the full-tide of the season, consisting of the best-dressed, best-looking, and idlest people in town. There seemed an excess of ladies, as usual; but who would complain of a summer market that it was overstocked with flowers? While of the uglier sex, the specimens were either very young or very mature. There was scarcely a man to be seen between thirty and forty, but a glut of young gentlemen, some too much and some too little at their ease, with a liberal sprinkling of ancient dandies, irreproachable in manners, and worthier members of society, we may be permitted to hope, than society believed. A few notabilities were thrown in, of course: the arch-

"I can't get out of it!" exclaimed Bill. "He's such a 'pal,' you know, and a brother-officer, and all."

She was amused at his simplicity. "I don't want you to get out of it," she answered, still laughing. "I can't tell what sort of a best man you'll make, but you're not half a bad boy. You deserve something for coming to-day. Dine with us to-morrow—nobody but the Gordon girls and a stray man. I must go and see the lady off. That's the worst of royalty. Good-bye," and she sailed away, leaving Bill somewhat disconcerted by misgivings that he had been guilty of a breach of trust.

The party was thinning visibly upstairs, while people transferred themselves with one accord to the hall and staircase, many appearing to consider this the pleasantest part of the entertainment. Mrs. Lushington had scarcely yet found time to speak three words to Blanche Douglas, but she caught her dear friend now, on the eve of departure, and held her fast.

CHAPTER XIX.

Judge Fullerton—His Training, Feeding, and Shoeing—Three Years of his Career on the Turf.

[From the Spirit of The Times.]

In September, 1870, Mr. Wm. H. Humphrey, of New York, purchased the chestnut gelding Judge Fullerton, and he was placed in my care very shortly afterwards. Judge Fullerton, at that time was five years old; he was bred and foaled upon the farm of Daniel Bull, sometimes called Tinker Dan, in Montgomery, Orange Co., N.Y. He was sired by Edward Everett, at that time called Major Winfield, and his dam was a bay mare of unknown pedigree, raised in Columbia County. Mr. Bull owned him until he was about five years old, and then sold him to Mr. S. W. Fullerton (now Judge Fullerton), of whom his present owner, Mr. Wm. Humphrey, purchased him, after which his name was changed from the Bull Colt, which he had been called, to Judge Fullerton. Judge Fullerton is a chestnut, with four white legs and a blaze, 15½ hands high, with fine quarters and stifles, hips large, but not ragged; head, eye, and neck bloodlike, and a true gamecock throat. When Mr. Humphrey bought Judge Fullerton he had no record, had never trotted, nor been trained for a race. I used to drive him with a straight bar bit covered with rubber; thus he always seemed to like best, and as it suited him I never changed it, nor experimented with other bits. He never wore a check nor martingale, and I never used boots on him, except skin boots behind occasionally, but I do not remember to have ever seen that he hit them. He wore 1½ lb shoes forward, and 12 oz. shoes behind; no corks. He was a hearty feeder, and I used to give him ten or twelve quarts of oats a day when campaigning, and he never refused a feed while travelling. He was a good traveller, and, although he would never lie down to rest in a car, he would come off as fresh as a daisy. On the day of a race he would get the same amount of food and water that he did at any other time, except that he would get them earlier in the day; he never pulled off a shoe in his life, always wearing them until they were taken off and replaced by new ones. I used to give him about eight miles every day, and he would also get a mile, and repeat, twice a week—say at about a 2:30 gait. When speeded at all, he never wanted to go at less than a 2:30 gait; he never wore a muzzle. I used to grass him a great deal when in training, and then I never gave him mashes. Fullerton was rather capricious some days; if there was anything annoyed him, or interfered with him, or that he didn't like, he would cut up all day, and you couldn't get him over it or whip him into shape. When he was all right he would never leave his feet; he was an easy driver, if you didn't pull him, but eased up on him; he was a very hard horse to get away from the score, it took a vast amount of skill and patience sometimes to get him off with the other horses. I used to come up for the word behind him when I first drove him, almost always. His sulky weighed 52 lbs. He always conditioned himself, but needed plenty of work. He would often surprise all of us by acting badly and refusing to trot, and, although we try our best to ascertain the cause of his showing temper, we would have to give it up and lay it to his disposition. I worked him some at Fleetwood Park, the fall Mr. Humphrey bought him, and, as he had very high knee action, we shod him with a shoe forward, weighing a pound and two ounces, to reduce it; this was three ounces less in weight than he had been wearing, and prevented him from stepping so high. Fullerton is a slashing-gaited horse, a very square mover, and so perfect in his way of going, that his action is monotonous; he trots entirely with his legs, not making his body work hardly at all; he carries his hind legs outside, is evenly balanced, and goes like machinery.

The first race Fullerton trotted was at Buffalo, August 8, 1871, for a purse of $5,000, for 2:34 class. Fifteen horses started for this race, James H. Burke, Ohio Boy, Le Blon, Joe Brun, Norwood, and ten others. There were a few attempts at robbing, and Fullerton went off on a break when the word was given. Burke won the first heat in 2:37½. The fifteen again started for the second heat, and Fullerton, breaking badly, lost all chance for the heat, which was also won by Burke in 2:29½. Fullerton, then steadied by the two heats, went to trotting, and won the next three and race in 2:26½, 2:29, 2:32½. On the 11th of August, three days after, Judge Brigham beat Fullerton for a purse of $5,000, for 2:30 class. Fullerton won the first heat in 2:25½, and Brigham the last three in 2:22, 2:22½, 2:26½. We then went to Kalamazoo, Mich., where, August 17, Brigham beat Fullerton and others, for $10,000, 3:00 purse, best time 2:26½. Fullerton, the next day, won the $7,500 purse for 2:40 horses, best time 2:32; this was an easy race for Fullerton. We then journeyed homeward, and on September 21, at Fleetwood, Fullerton beat J. J. Bradley.

THE DUNDAS CLUBCASE.

INTERESTING ACTION UNDER THE NEW LICENSE LAW.

Rather an interesting case under the new license law occupied the attention of the Police Magistrate Wednesday afternoon. Charles Moss was a saloon keeper in Dundas up to the first of May last, and had applied for a renewal of his license from that date, but his application was refused. After this a club was formed who rented Mr. Moss' premises, including what furniture they required, for $800 a year, and engaged Moss as their steward at a salary of $626 a year, as in all clubs of the kind liquor was sold, but only to members. The License Inspector laid an information against Moss for a violation of the license law, and yesterday afternoon the Police Magistrate fined him forty dollars. The Magistrate did not state very fully what were the grounds upon which he rested his decision, except that he considered the arrangement an evasion of the law, but whether that would apply to all clubs he did not state. It was pleaded by counsel for the defence that the practices of this club were precisely the same as those of the Hamilton Club, the Yacht Club, and the Toronto Clubs, none of which are licensed, but the Magistrate merely replied that they were not on trial before him. The case will, in all probability be carried to a higher court and will become a test one. Should the Magistrate's decision be reversed, there will certainly be established a rather easy method of evading the license law; but, on the other hand, if the decision is sustained, it is not easy to see how any other can escape. Mr. Oiler, for the prosecution, drew a contrast between the club on trial and the Hamilton Club; in the latter the initiation fee is $100, in the former it is but $1. In the latter the annual subscription is twenty dollars, in the former it is but one dollar. From the difference in the fees he argued that there was a guarantee of good faith in the one case, and the evidence of a mere subterfuge in the other. But, is it only those who can afford to pay a hundred dollars initiation fee and twenty dollars annual subscription who are to enjoy the comforts of club life? Besides, there are clubs in full operation which do not charge such fees. Those of the Yacht Club of Hamilton are twenty dollars for initiation and ten for annual subscription, and those of the United Empire Club of Toronto are, we believe, still less. Now between one dollar and one hundred dollars exactly, where is the line which divides bona fides from mala fides.

So far as the outward conduct of this Dundas Club is concerned, there is nothing in it, as it came to light in yesterday's evidence, except the smallness of its fees, which distinguishes it from that of other clubs. The belief that its forms are a mere cloak to cover illegal liquor selling is but an inference of which there was no direct evidence. It is incorporated under a general Act of the Provincial Legislature; it is true that that Act does not permit any Society incorporated under it to engage in trade or barter, but the immunity of clubs from the license law has rested upon the ground that dispensing liquor to their own members exclusively, was not trade or barter.

If this case is taken into the higher Courts, which we believe is the intention, it will prove to be a very interesting one, about which there is likely to be considerable difference of opinion in legal circles.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE BIGGEST BEAR STORY.

The Reno (Nevada) Gazette repeats it thus: "I've fought 'em standin' and runnin', but the toughest citizen I ever lit onto was a black 'un. He was sittin' in the chapparal eatin' manzanita berries, when my dog smelt him and went home. I sneaked up and began aggravatin' him by shootin' at his ears and feet. I then took around him, and with three shots cut off his tail. Old Blacky heard me shootin', and turnin' around, seed his tail layin' there. He picked it up and looked at the trade mark, and I see in a minute that war was a comin'. I lit out for a tree, with only two cartridges left and him a comin'. Well, to make a long story short, I shot twice, hittin' him both times, and he began to git hot, so he took up the tree after me, and I knocked him down three times before my gun broke. He started on the fourth trip, and I didn't know what to do till I thought of my Derringer, which shot a four-ounce ball. I drew her out, tied a string to the trigger, and as old Blacky came up with his mouth wide open I dropped her in. He hadn't time to spit her out, and so he swallowed her, and I pulled the string. Off went the gun, and so help me, I never see anything of bear or pistol since."

ANOTHER TROTTING WONDER ON THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., May 11, 1876.

DEAR SPIRIT: Thinking that perhaps some of your readers might like to hear from the Pacific Slope, and especially of my new developments in speed, I drop you this line.

Last evening I received a telegram from San Jose to meet a friend by the name of John S. Carter (formerly of Lowell, Mass.) at the Oakland track, to see a mare that he was interested in, so this morning, very early, more so than usual, I was on hand. On arrival at the track, the wind blew a gale and it was very cold and foggy, still, for all this, after my coming so far, they hitched up the mare. She is called the Stark mare, and is owned by a Mr. Stark, a farmer, formerly of San Jose, bought by him two years since from a man who was using her in a team of six horses to haul wood from Mr. Moody's ranch to San Jose. She was one of the wheel horses. She is now seven years old, stands 16½ high, weighs 1,040 lbs., and is as nice a pattern as any one ever saw, clean cut up in the neck, large nostrils, and, in motion, is the image of old Lady Thurn. She is a bright mahogany bay, perfectly quiet, and afraid of nothing, any woman can drive her, she touches in no place or spot, and has not a blemish on her.

After the usual slow work, Mr. Thomas McDaniel got up and drove her a half mile in 1:08, and a full mile in 2:22, under a pull the whole length of the homestretch. Mind you this was without a skip or break, and in the easiest possible manner. I was told last night by Mr. Stark himself that he could show me three heats better than 2:18. She has never had a solitary day's training only by Mr. Stark, her owner, a man who weighs 175 lbs. Such action and such nice trotting were never excelled. I timed this mare myself from the stand, and she was also timed by Mr. Carter and other gentlemen. I was told her owner made no secret of working her before any crowd in from 2:20 to 2:24, and, if she is not the coming horse, I would like to know where the one is. Quite a number said they had timed her a half-mile in 1:06 and a full mile in 2:20, and a quarter in 31½. Mr. Budd Doble drove her several weeks since, when she was all out of condition, a quarter in 82s., and a half in 1:10.

If the Eastern horsemen come here with the expectation of finding no trotters raised here, they will be mistaken. There are now at the Oakland track sixteen horses that can beat 2:30, such as Dirigo, Gold Note, Prince Allen, Henry, Redcross, Amy, Moore, and others, and, if friend Titus, whom I visited at Los Angeles, reaches the Centennial with his three and four year olds in good condition, look out for hot work in their class. It will be trotting in a race, and not in an easy chair in some one's parlor. My best wishes are with Mr. Titus that he may not travel so far in vain, but may reap a harvest for his pains, for he is a gentleman of the first water and deserves credit for his developments on the Pacific Slope.

DRIVING A STURGEON.

The period of mythology when they used to drive dolphin teams harnessed to barges, was not more strange than the present, and feats which seemed improbable to us at school days, are reproduced in these days with the faithfulness of fact. We find the statement in a country paper that Mr. Robert L. Pell, residing near West Park, on the Hudson River, having caught a sturgeon nine feet long, conceived the idea of harnessing it to a boat after the fashion of the Tritons. Accordingly a tackling of leather and rope was attached to its body in a way which prevented its slipping behind the fins, and the fish having been placed in an artificial lake a quarter of a mile long, on the grounds of Mr. Pell, the experiment began. "In order to obtain the services of the sturgeon when needed, a pair of rope reins, eighteen feet long, were attached to the harness, and these were fastened to a large cork float, which swam upon the water. A boat five and a half feet long and two and a half wide was then constructed. It could contain but one man, and in that Mr. Pell took his seat, and attached the chain at the bow to the floating cork. The sturgeon soon began to move, and the moment he realized that a further impediment existed to his movements he shot frantically ahead. The boat swayed to and fro, and the spray, dashing furiously from the prow, flew in every direction.

NOT ANY FOR HIM.

This is the season when advertisements of refrigerators and ice-chests spread out in a newspaper like a mortgage on a small corner lot. It was advertising that attracted a Brampton man into Toronto and into a Yonge St. housefurnishing store the other day. When he mentioned the fact that he would like a refrigerator, Harry welcomed him with a sunny smile, and the clerks cheerfully barked their shins against the stoves as they flew around.

"Will you look at these ice-chests?" asked Mr. Piper as he came to a long row. "What do I want to keep ice in a chest for?" growled the man. "What I want is something to keep provisions cool and nice in hot weather."

"Well here you have it. Here is the best refrigerator made."

The man opened the doors, looked the box over and around, and seemed much pleased with it. Presently he inquired:

"What's the principle of the thing—how does she cool off the provisions?"

"You put your ice right in here, shut the box and away she goes," was the reply.

"Ice!" gasped the man.

"Why, of course. You can't run a refrigerator without ice, can you?"

The man turned without a word, walked down stairs and out to his wagon, and was getting in when Harry hurried up and asked:

"What's the matter?"

"Do you think I'm a four-cornered fool?" howled the Brampton man. "Do you think I'm going to buy that high-priced provision asylum and then keep ice too?"

The Trigger.

Messrs. E. H. Gillman and L. H. Hascall, of Detroit, have challenged Messrs. Stenotte and Overman, two crack shots of Fort Wayne, Ind., to shoot a match of fifty birds, English rules, for $200 a side.

LONDON, ENGLAND, June 8.—Ira A. Paine, of New York, now in England, had a shooting match to-day, having for his antagonist Captain Patton, the winner of the Grand Prix du Casino, at Monaco, last January. The terms of the shoot were 80 rises, 27 yards, for $250 a side. The contest resulted in a tie, each killing 21 birds. Paine's shooting was much admired Wednesday, June 7.—The second match between Paine and Patton was shot to-day, on the Gun Club Grounds. Paine won easily with a score of 24 to Patton's 20. Paine then shot an off-hand match with Captain Shelley at 20 single rises, 27 yards. Paine won by one bird, his full score being 15. The Americans won large amounts, as the Englishmen backed their cracks heavily. Paine is winning much praise for his superb shooting.

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—The match for the English champion medal, between Capt. A. H. Bogardus and Dr. Talbot, was shot at Old Lamb Tavern, to-day. The attendance was very meagre. The terms of the match were to shoot at 100 birds, divided into three classes. The first, 50 single rises, 30 yards English rules; second, 15 double rises, 18 yards, American rules; third, 20 rises, 21 yards, American rules, one barrel to a bird. Both shooters experienced great difficulty in shooting, those present being very unruly, and persisting in getting in range. Of the first 50 Captain Bogardus killed 38 to Dr. Talbot's 39. Of the 15 double rises, Captain Bogardus killed 22, Dr. Talbot getting but 15. The last 20 was very close, Bogardus came out best, killing 16 to Talbot's 14. The total score stood Captain Bogardus, 76 birds; Dr. Talbot, 68.

CANADIAN SALMON.

A great improvement has been made in the Canadian fisheries during the last ten years. By a better system of inspection, the trout streams have been kept free from impurities, and unlawful fishing has diminished; whilst by the more extensive propagation of salmon, principally through the enterprise of Mr. S. Wilmot, of Newcastle, Ont., the lakes and streams are becoming more plentifully supplied with fish. As a pleasing result of this, fish is no longer an expensive luxury in the market for the gratification of the wealthy, but is now sold at moderate prices, and within the reach of all; and by reason of more extensive sales there is an increased revenue to the country.

In some respects, however, other improvements are needed, and to one of these special attention is now being devoted. It is suggested that the Government should purchase a large stock farm, say 200 at the Miscellaneous.

Queen's Birthday, a larger bear came the premises of Mr. Geo. Reid, 6th St. S., near Sydenham, near Massey, took a large amount of carrying it about 150 yards from a barn, deliberately ate it. Sixteen or seventeen of the neighbors gave chase, and after a hard fight mastered him. His bear weighed 405 pounds.

On the farm of Mr. Thos. Willoughby, 24, 4th con. township of Essex, the other day a barn 40 x 80 feet was raised in thirty three minutes. The Messrs. Nichol of Thorntons were the builders, and the job was executed all through.

Last week an extraordinary large tree was cut down on lot 20, in the 1st con. Ors., measuring twenty four feet in circumference. There were four men chopping round the tree on the outside, and it was hollow, a man got inside and commenced chopping, which made five men cutting away at the same tree.

DEATH OF A RAILROAD DOG.—Henry, an assistant baggage-master of the Western depot, in Windsor, died on Tuesday morning last, after a continuous fast service of 17 years. Beaver came into the depot one day in 1859, and took up his quarters in the baggage room. Every successive baggage-master took care of him and gave him food, and he required their care by keeping a strict and faithful watch over the baggage. He was better known in Windsor than any railroad man, and he was a general favorite with all the employees of the road. The old "collie" heard the news of an incoming train, and he made a weak effort to get up; but he fell back, and, after a few convulsive twitches, his muscles relaxed, and the boys knew that Beaver was gone to the land where all faithful canines generally proceed.

Female ambition is the rock on which the young Dominion is going to split. The girls of Odessa have organized a base ball club. They expect to challenge Brockville, and the Enterprise man knows what that means. Clubs are trump—with the women, and they can handle other things as well as past board, as our contemporary knows as well.

While cleansing out the large porpoise tank at Brighton aquarium the other day, the superintendent came upon several specimens of oyster spat of last season, about the size of a sixpence. This is the first time that oysters have been known to breed in an aquarium.

STOCKING OUR WATERS.—The Petrolong Fish and Game Protective Society have received from Mr. Wilmot about 10,000 salmon and salmon trout fry, which was deposited by Mr. Eastland in Gull Lake last Monday evening, the same day that they left New castle. They were placed in the water in splendid condition. Another lot is expected shortly for Stoney Lake and the waters near Apsley. Mr. Wilmot has also promised a quantity of white fish fry for next year.

PECULIAR CALF.—The Tilsonburg Observer says Mr. Charles Clark, near Aylmer, possesses a calf which is attracting considerable attention from parties residing in the vicinity. Instead of four legs it has but three. The calf is now two weeks old, and is as strong as any other of the calves on the farm. The shoulder blade can be felt but there is no stump of a leg, nor can the resemblance of a limb be detected by carefully feeling about the spot where the missing leg should be. The calf is very lively and creates much merriment by the manner in which it hops along.

Some of the Bullock's Corners crabbage players are considerably elated at a victory over some East Flamboro' gentlemen of few evenings ago. There had been a standing challenge for some time and the match having come off resulted in the defeat of East Flamboro' by one game in some seven games played on the occasion.

Considerable amusement has been afforded recently by the performance of a pair of colts of the Messrs. Enright, of Dundas, as they returns from pasture. The grain has taken some pains to teach it to carry small logs, sticks, boards, &c., on its back, which it does with seeming enjoyment, gracefully gratifying with the implement of exhibition, and sometimes making such approaches to the progression as must have made it quite a dandy and an accomplished well altogether among the famous Baboos of Dean Swift.

except that he would get them earlier in the day; he never pulled off a shoe in his life, always wearing them until they were taken off and replaced by new ones. I used to give him about eight miles every day, and he would also get a mile, and repeat, twice a week—say at about a 2:30 gait. When speeded at all, he never wanted to go at less than a 2:30 gait; he never wore a muzzle. I used to grass him a great deal when in training, and then I never gave him mashes. Fullerton was rather capricious some days; if there was anything annoyed him, or interfered with him, or that he didn't like, he would cut up all day, and you couldn't get him over it or whip him into shape. When he was all right he would never leave his feet; he was an easy driver, if you didn't pull him, but eased up on him; he was a very hard horse to get away from the score, it took a vast amount of skill and patience sometimes to get him off with the other horses. I used to come up for the word behind him when I first drove him, almost always. His sulky weighed 52 lbs. He always conditioned himself, but needed plenty of work. He would often surprise all of us by acting badly and refusing to trot, and, although we try our best to ascertain the cause of his showing temper, we would have to give it up and lay it to his disposition. I worked him some at Fleetwood Park, the fall Mr. Humphrey bought him, and, as he had very high knee action, we shod him with a shoe forward, weighing a pound and two ounces, to reduce it; this was three ounces less in weight than he had been wearing, and prevented him from stepping so high. Fullerton is a slashing-gaited horse, a very square mover, and so perfect in his way of going, that his action is monotonous; he trots entirely with his legs, not making his body work hardly at all; he carries his hind legs outside, is evenly balanced, and goes like machinery.

The first race Fullerton trotted was at Buffalo, August 8, 1871, for a purse of $5,000, for 2:34 class. Fifteen horses started for this race, James H. Burke, Ohio Boy, Le Blonde, Joe Brun, Norwood, and ten others. There were a few attempts at scoring, and Fullerton went off on a break when the word was given. Burke won the first heat in 2:27. The fifteen again started for the second heat, and Fullerton, breaking badly, lost all chance for the heat, which was also won by Burke in 2:29. Fullerton, then steadied by the two heats, went to trotting, and won the next three and race in 2:26, 2:29, 2:32. On the 11th of August, three days after, Judge Brigham beat Fullerton for a purse of $5,000, for 2:40 horses, Fullerton won the first heat in 2:25, and Brigham the last three in 2:22, 2:22, 2:26. We then went to Kalamazoo, Mich., where, August 17, Brigham beat Fullerton and others, for $10,000, 3:00 purse, best time 2:26. Fullerton, the next day, won the $7,500 purse for 2:40 horses, best time 2:32; this was an easy race for Fullerton. We then journeyed homeward, and on September 21, at Fleetwood, Fullerton beat J. J. Bradley, for $2,500 purse, for 2:25 horses, best time 2:27. At Fleetwood, October 30, Fullerton trotted a match against the gray mare Sea Foam, for $5,000. This race was made about a week before, and there was lively speculation on it; both horses were backed heavily, first one and then the other was the favorite. The attendance was large, day and track good, and Fullerton disposed of Sea Foam easily, distancing her in the second heat. Time 2:27, 2:27. This was a walk over for Fullerton, and closed his racing season of 1871. Fullerton commenced his second season by beating W. H. Allen, Huntress, Sea Foam, and Byron, for a purse of $2,500, for 2:25 horses, at Fleetwood, May 22, 1872. He made a bad break in the second heat, and lost it to W. H. Allen in 2:25. He won the first third, fourth and race in 2:25, 2:27, 2:29. August 9, 1872, found us at Buffalo, where Fullerton won the $10,000 purse, $5,000 to the winner, for 2:25 horses; Lula, Derby, Nonesuch, Triumph, and Jas. H. Burke started for this race; Rosalind burst a blood vessel in scoring for the first heat, and was withdrawn; Burke went to the half-mile pole in 1:11, ahead, and then, as he was trotting splendidly staggered fell, and died in a few minutes. There was at least 25,000 people present, and it was a great betting race: the time was 2:25, 2:24, and 2:23, and showed Fullerton to be an improving horse.

WHOLESALE DESTRUCTION OF FISH.

The Ottawa Citizen says: "For the past two days the stop logs have been removed from the dam at Hog's Back, allowing the water to run into the natural bed of the Rideau at that point. Yesterday the logs were put in, and as soon as the water ceased to flow, the rocks over which it had recently run were found to be literally covered with fish. The news spread through the district like wildfire, and hundreds of farmers flocked to the scene of the sacrifice. Some of them brought bags with them and found but little difficulty in filling them. One farmer is said to have secured six bags of pickerel, eels, bass and suckers, the most of which he sold in the city last night and this morning. Another party secured two maskinonge weighing 50 lbs. each. One of them was over five feet in length. In fact, last night the whole district in the vicinity of Hog's Back smelt fishy."

Mr. Ronald McDonald, of Parkhill, challenges the counties of Middlesex, Lambton or Huron, to a match at putting the stone, weight from 16 to 28 lbs., to be thrown according to the rules of the Caledonian Society of Toronto. DRIVING A STURGEON.

The period of mythology when they used to drive dolphin teams harnessed to barges, was not more strange than the present, and feats which seemed improbable to us at school days, are reproduced in these days with the faithfulness of fact. We find the statement in a country paper that Mr. Robert L. Pell, residing near West Park, on the Hudson River, having caught a sturgeon nine feet long, conceived the idea of harnessing it to a boat after the fashion of the Tritons. Accordingly a tackling of leather and rope was attached to its body in a way which prevented its slipping behind the fins, and the fish having been placed in an artificial lake a quarter of a mile long, on the grounds of Mr. Pell, the experiment began.

In order to obtain the services of the sturgeon when needed, a pair of rope reins, eighteen feet long, were attached to the harness, and these were fastened to a large cork float, which swam upon the water. A boat five and a half feet long and two and a half wide was then constructed. It could contain but one man, and in that Mr. Pell took his seat, and attached the chain at the bow to the floating cork. The sturgeon soon began to move, and the moment he realized that a further impediment existed to his movements he shot frantically ahead. The boat swayed to and fro, and the spray, dashing furiously from the prow, flew in every direction. Frequently the gunwale was an inch or two below the water's edge, but such was the rapidity of motion that the water had not time to overflow it. The lake being but seventeen feet deep, and the reins eighteen feet long, there was no possibility of being pulled under the water by the diving of the fish, and the career of the boat was uninterrupted. The sturgeon kept near the sides of the lake, and swam four times around without slackening his pace. He then rose to the surface, rolled on his back, and exposed his white stomach to sunshine, as if to say, "I have swum long enough, and am not going any further." Mr. Pell, satisfied with his experience, then detached the boat from the float, and landed. The fish soon again disappeared. At each subsequent sail, either by Mr. Pell, or any one else, the fish would rush regularly four times around the lake, and no more. He would then, as at first, regularly roll over on his back and rest. A neighbor of Mr. Pell caught a large sturgeon, and imitated his experiment in the river. Matters worked well for a few moments, but it suddenly occurred to the sturgeon to dive. This, the river being deep, he could easily do. To the dismay of his owner, under went the cork float, and a violent jerk at the prow of the boat was a warning to jump into the stream. The boat went down, and was lost to sight for several minutes. That was the beginning and end of harnessing sturgeons as a river pastime.

The terms of the match were 20 rises, 20 yards, for $250 a side. The contest resulted in a tie, each killing 21 birds. Paine's shooting was much admired Wednesday, June 7.—The second match between Paine and Patton was shot to-day, on the Gun Club Grounds. Paine won easily with a score of 24 to Patton's 20. Paine then shot an off-hand match with Captain Shelley at 20 single rises, 27 yards. Paine won by one bird, his full score being 15. The Americans won large amounts, as the Englishmen backed their cracks heavily. Paine is winning much praise for his superb shooting.

The first, 50 single rises, 30 yards English rules; second, 15 double rises, 18 yards, American rules; third, 20 rises, 21 yards, American rules, one barrel to a bird. Both shooters experienced great difficulty in shooting, those present being very unruly, and persisting in getting in range. Of the first 50 Captain Bogardus killed 38 to Dr. Talbot's 39. Of the 15 double rises, Captain Bogardus killed 23, Dr. Talbot getting 15. The last 20 was very close, Bogardus came out best, killing 16 to Talbot's 14. The total score stood Captain Bogardus, 76 birds; Dr. Talbot, 68.

CANADIAN SALMON.

A great improvement has been made in the Canadian fisheries during the last ten years. By a better system of inspection, the trout streams have been kept free from impurities, and unlawful fishing has diminished; whilst by the more extensive propagation of salmon, principally through the enterprise of Mr. S. Wilnot, of Newcastle, Ont., the lakes and streams are becoming more plentifully supplied with fish. As a pleasing result of this, fish is no longer an expensive luxury in the market for the gratification of the wealthy, but is now sold at moderate prices, and within the reach of all; and by reason of more extensive sales there is an increased revenue to the country.

In some respects, however, other improvements are needed, and to one of these special attention is now being devoted. It is suggested by the Commissioners of Fisheries that the salmon stands in different rivers are too numerous, and that these should be reduced either by lessening the number of licenses or by associating together the owners of different stands, and granting joint licenses for a reduced number of places. This would be a saving of expense to the fishermen, and would result in an increase of fish in the rivers.

In the Province of Quebec the plan has been tried on a limited scale, and with marked results. Since 1868 the salmon fishery there has yielded an increase of nearly three hundred per cent. As an illustration, it is said that in the river Moisie there were in 1858 not less than 15,000 fathoms of nets, which secured only 75,000 lbs. of fish; whereas, in 1875 there were only 2,500 fathoms of nets, and yet the yield was 204,000 lbs. of fish. This astounding increase was due entirely to better inspection and more discriminate fishing. In Ontario similar facts may be quoted; and in many places where, a few years since, fish were hardly to be caught they are now so plentiful as to be almost thrown away.

The inference is that it pays to take care of fisheries. In reality Canada possesses a great source of wealth in rivers and lakes. Every year their value is increasing; and the more prudently they are guarded the more they will yield to the substance of the people and the revenue of the Government.

at the aquarium the other day, the superintendent came upon several specimens of a species of last season, about the size of a speucee. This is the first time that oysters have been known to breed in an aquarium.

STOCKING OUR WATERS.—The Pot through Fish and Game Protective Society have received from Mr. Wilnot about 10,000 salmon and salmon trout fry, which was deposited by Mr. Eastland in Gull Lake last Monday evening, the same day that they left Newcastle. They were placed in the water in splendid condition. Another lot is expected shortly for Stoney Lake and the waters near Apsley. Mr. Wilnot has also promised a quantity of white fish fry for next year.

PECULIAR CALF.—The Tilsonburg Observer says Mr. Charles Clark, near Aylmer, possesses a calf which is attracting considerable attention from parties residing in the vicinity. Instead of four legs it has but three. The calf is now two weeks old, and is as strong as any other of the calves on the farm. The shoulder blade can be felt but there is no stump of a leg, nor can the resemblance of a limb be detected by carefully feeling about the spot where the missing leg should be. The calf is very lively and creates much merriment by the manner in which it hops along.

Some of the Bullock's Corners' cribbage players are considerably elated at a victory over some East Flamboro' gentlemen of few evenings ago. There had been a standing challenge for some time and the match having come off resulted in the defeat of East Flamboro' by one game in some seventeen played on the occasion.

Considerable amusement has been afforded recently by the performances of a splendid colt of the Meares, Enright, of Dundas, as it returns from pasture. The groom has taken some pains to teach it to carry small logs, sticks, boards, &c., in its teeth, which it does with seeming enjoyment, gracefully gesturing with the implement of exhibition, and sometimes making such approaches to biped progression as must have made it quite a dandy and an accomplished swell altogether among the famous Yahoos of Dean Swift.

Horse Notes.

A REVEREND GOES INTO STOCK RAISING.—Rev. L. Lampman, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Jamaica, L.I., has purchased a valuable herd of Jersey cattle. He owns a large stock farm, is a great admirer of the horse, and has several good ones, he being a skilful trainer and driver.

SALE OF THE NIPPER.—Messrs. Wilson & Raudall, of Lexington, Ky., have sold to A. Hankins, of Chicago, the three year old bay colt, The Nipper, by imp Phaeon, dam Annette, by Lexington, her dam Alice Jones by imp Glencoe, dam of Blue Bonnet, by imp Hedgeford, etc., for $1,500.

SAFE OF NETTIE B.—Mr. Byrnes has sold the bay filly Nettie B, 4 years, by Vandal, dam Woodbine, by Lexington, to H. J. Woodford, of Randolph, N.Y., with her engagements, for $1,000 cash.

WELL PROVIDED.—Mr. Smith Kenney, of Bourbon County, Ky., recently gelded a colt with four distinct testes, each sack containing two, with full and separate cord. This is a remarkable instance of sexual development.

DEATH OF KITTY CLARK.—Mr. A. J. Alexander has met with a serious loss in the death of his valuable thoroughbred brood mare Kitty Clark (dam of Maiden), by imp Glencoe, dam Miss Obstinate, by Sumpter, 2nd dam Jenny Slamerkin, by Tiger, &c. aged 23 yrs. Kitty Clark was placed in the stud at three years old, and has been bred regularly, omitting the years 1867, 1868, 1869 and 1871, having in the interim produced sixteen live foals, most of which are now living.

nature will be imputed to him. Again, to the conscientious man, a sense of the responsibility, if he be not thoroughly competent, will prevent his acceptance of a position for which he feels he is but indifferent qualified. Immense sums of money are at issue on his knowledge and judgment, amounts that would cause thoughts in the minds of the most competent who wear crowns in our judicial halls before a decision would escape their lips. Where all is plain sailing no particular ability is required; but when a knotty point comes up then turf lore is an absolute necessity to arrive at a proper and equitable conclusion. And in case an improper verdict is rendered, even if done through ignorance, improper motives are sure to be attributed for the decision. And to the Turf itself, mediocrity of talent in the stand is sure to prove disastrous. Let any one at all conversant with Canadian racing recall to mind any track upon which a put-up job has been successfully perpetrated with the supposed connivance of the Judges, and it will be found the odium of fraud still clings to the locality. In this the Association may not be in any way to blame, or could anything even suspicious be attached to any of its members. Still there is a feeling of doubt and insecurity when any big event is billed for decision over their track. No doubt this is wrong, but the impression is almost indelible; and such being the case, it devolves upon our Clubs to use extraordinary exertions to have the best men it is possible to obtain to occupy the judicial positions at their meetings, as any mistakes that are made are sure, sooner or later, to recoil to the financial disability of the resources of the Association, and inflict permanent injury on the institution itself.

DATES.

Now the Spring and Summer campaign is drawing to a conclusion, Associations intending to give Fall meetings should not be tardy in making their preliminary announcements. In previous years it has been the custom to endeavor to run off all the Fall programmes in the month of September, with the consequence of any amount of clashing, as unfortunately that month does not consist of a sufficient number of weeks or days to supply the complement required by our Clubs without a good deal of jostling one with another. To judge from our American cousins' experience, August should be just as good a month as its successor, while the chances of obtaining good weather in the former one are infinitely better than in the latter. No valid reason presents itself why our meetings should not be continuous, and not as heretofore, have a break of six or eight weeks between the Summer and Fall campaigns. A meeting in August should be equally attractive as one in July, and more remunerative than one in September, the way things have been going. The major portion of the Grand Trotting Circuit is held in August, and their meetings are models of success. With the exception of the Buffalo meeting the first week in August, none of them interfere in any way with Canadian interests, and that one only to a certain extent. Very few Canadian horses take part in any other of these gatherings, while the major portion of spectators from this country are quite satisfied with their experience at Buffalo. Such being the case, we cannot understand why one of the best months in the year has been permitted to be considered an off-time altogether, and fancy when managers of our associations have their attention drawn to the matter will give the subject the consideration it deserves. One thing is assured, it will be impossible for the number of clubs that have signified their intention of giving meetings this Fall to all hold them in September, and any later time makes the experiment rather hazardous on account of the fickleness of the weather.

THE AMERICAN HORSES.

Nearly all the London papers speak well of the performance of Preakness in the High Level Handicap at Epsom on Thursday, June 1. Mr. Sanford's horse carried 8 st. 10 lbs. and finished second to Cato, who led but six stones on his back. The Sporting Gazette remarks: "The American Preakness was not altogether despised, though he is still on the 'big' side, for all the work done since his first appearance in public in this country at the metropolis of the turf; and he did not disgrace his flag, considering he beat all the other good horses in the race, as well as the leniently treated favorite, and only succumbed to a six-year-old in receipt of 88 lbs. from him." The London field says that Preakness "ran wonderfully well, and is sure to secure some races on this side of the Atlantic when he becomes fit." Bell's Life calls attention to the fact that Preakness carried a quantity of flesh, and remarks that he "far from disgraced himself, as he finished lengths before the Artemis colt and Earl of Dartrey, and, moreover, gave Mr. Sanford his first taste of our racing gold by defeating Chancellor by a head for second place." The Sporting Times comments: "The handicaps were for the most part a failure, and it was a subject of general regret when Preakness, with 8 st. 10 lbs. on his back, was seen struggling home second to a turned-loose rip that he was giving nearly three stones to. It is at all times disgusting to see a good horse under the disadvantage of weight beaten by a bad one, and it was particularly so in this instance." Other journals in similar remarks. Preakness is making friends on the other side of the water. The more the English see of him, the better they like him.

of them being representatives from this side of the lake. We hear astonishing stories of some trotters around Toronto, but the Niagara district will pretty nearly plump for Fulton.

Knowing your readers as well as yourself are always anxious to hear of fine horses, I draw their attention to what is undoubtedly the best team in Canada, owned by that sterling horseman Mr. T. F. Ellis, of this town. They are a span of bay geldings, 16.2, 6 years old, sound as a bullet and clean as a pin, named Judge Harrison and Judge Lander. The team will weigh 2,300 lbs. The second time they were ever hitched up and speeded together, they showed a half mile in 1:23, and the full mile in 2:48; over a half-mile track. Subsequently they showed 2:45, and it is expected before a month they will be able to beat '40. One is entirely bay and the other is bay with two white heels behind. If any horsemen should visit Clifton, Mr. Ellis, I have no doubt, would be pleased to show them this remarkable team.

There is some talk of having a small meeting here, of which I will keep informed.

NEW RACING ANNOUNCEMENTS.

MONTREAL.

To-day we are favored with the announcement of the Montreal Summer Meeting which will be held under the management of Messrs. Carson & Quinn and auspices of the Montreal Turf Club, to be run over the Fashion Course on July 1st and 3rd. Purses to the amount of about $1,800 are hung up. The contests are all for running, and are divided into open to all, Dominion bred, and the jumping classes; two races being allotted to each section, and a race for each division been run off either day. It is quite unnecessary for us to enter into a detailed statement of the bill as it will show for itself. The quality of sport usually seen at Montreal requires no flattery at our hands, while the management of previous years will a guarantee of the excellence of this. The entrance has been fixed at 10 per cent. on first money, and 8 to enter and 2 to start. Dominion weights govern. Entries close on 30th June.

WOODBINE.

A special meeting is announced for July 8th over this track. $825 and a pony sweepstake are offered. Gentlemen riders are given a fine opportunity to display their skill in the pigskin. A handicap dash of 1½ miles for Province bred; a hurdle race, handicap, for hacks; a half-bred steeple-chase for horses owned within 10 miles of this city, likewise a handicap; and a pony race, catch weights, make up the programme. This is the first of a series of Saturday afternoon races which the Woodbine Association propose to institute. The entrance has been fixed at 10 per cent. on the purse; and entries close on July 5 at 8 o'clock.

STRATFORD.

The Stratford Association give a one day's meeting on July 1, at which in addition to some local affairs 8:00 and 2:35 trots and an open running race will be given. Entries close on June 29.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

A 4th of July meeting takes place at Rochester, N. Y., when $900 will be given for three races—two trots and one running race. $800 is the amount of each purse, and 8:00 and 2:35 horses are provided for in the trotting classes. National Association Rules will govern. Ten per cent. entrance on the purse, and entries close on July 1. Doubtless many of our Canadian friends will visit Rochester to spend the Centennial 4th with their American cousins, and the races over one of the finest Driving Parks in the world, will be an attraction they can hardly resist taking in.

RUSSELL vs. CAPRON.

A match was made on Tuesday between Mr. Thomas Russell, of Ottawa, and Mr. Jos. Capron, of Paris, to play a game of 450 points, French, in this city on Thursday, 29th inst., for $400. $100 forfeit was placed in our hands, the balance of the money to be made good on 29th inst. The game will be played on a Riley & May table, 5 x 10, with 2½ in. balls; Canadian Tournament rules to govern. Mr. James Bennett, ex-champion, is behind Mr. Capron. From the well-known merits of the principals an interesting contest may be expected. The location has not been decided on, but due publicity will be given of the hall engaged for the purpose of the game.

Veterinary.

THE RELATION OF THE LARVÆ OF THE GESTRUS EQUINUS (OR BOTS) TO THE SYSTEM OF THE HORSE.

BY S. G. TATTERSALL, V. S., (LONDON, ENG.)
AILSA CRAIG, ONT.

Continued.

Secondly—Can they cause the death of a horse, and, if so, in what manner? I believe that they can cause death but only in two ways, that is, supposing an egg or eggs to be passed down the œsophagus together with a small amount of saliva: by the time the eggs have reached a given point before entering the stomach it is possible that the saliva may not be sufficient, either in quantity or liquidity, to carry them any further, and, in that case, they would adhere to the œsophagus, and after being hatched, if in great numbers, might produce either suffocation or severe inflammatory action either of which would be liable to result in a fatal issue.

The other possible contingency would be the deposit and hatching of a sufficient number in the region of the Cardiac Orifice to block up that orifice.

I have had gentlemen also surmise that death may be caused by the larvæ attaching to the villous coat of the stomach instead of to their usual position which is to the cuticular or insensible coat. I have never, however, seen such a case, and although such a thing is possible to occur, I have never had the pleasure of meeting a practitioner who could verify a case of this kind by his own personal observation. Should, however, even one or two of the larvæ manage to attach themselves to the villous coat, the irritation on so highly sensible an organ would doubtless produce gastritis, and very possibly death, as the whole system would be called into sympathy with the part affected.

I have met numbers of people who have told me that the larvæ crawl up into the œsophagus, but the idea is not only erroneous but absurd.

Thirdly—Do they exist in all horses whether healthy or otherwise? In my exposition of the first question I have almost answered this, and I have only to repeat that I believe that they are to be found mostly in healthy animals, and not in those suffering from disease, especially from chronic diseases. I do not pretend to give a reason for their presence there, but have no doubt that they are placed for a reason beneficial to the animal, and that they are by no means injurious to the animal as a rule. Most possibly they are placed there as purifiers of the system.

Fourthly—Can the Bots eat through the coats of the stomach, and, if not, how is it that the stomach is undoubtedly occasionally found in a perforated condition?

They certainly can do nothing of the kind, and though they are found after death in the abdominal cavity, and though at the same time the stomach is found to be perforated, these facts, though liable to deceive superficial observers and deduce to the fact of the stomach having been perforated by these Bots are to be accounted for in an entirely different manner, and I believe the perforation and consequent appearance of the Bots in the abdominal cavity to occur in this wise:

Gastric juice is a liquid thrown out by the coats of the stomach in order to saturate the food in the stomach and thereby render it into a more pulpy condition and more sensitive to the coming action of the bile and the change from chyme to chyle.

A PARTICULAR POSITION.

Time and again we have drawn attention to the importance of having competent gentlemen to act in the official capacity of Judges at our race meetings. We have endeavored to impress upon Associations the desirability of those who are placed in that responsible position being intimately conversant with the rules governing the race, and thoroughly acquainted with the usages of the turf. Judges should be perfectly at home in the practical as well as the theoretical part of their duties. When a race is concluded it should not have to be won over again in the Judges' stand. Where competent men are occupying the position there is a feeling of security by all in any way engaged in the race, either as owners, drivers, or investors. And when this confidence is abused or misplaced the injury is sure to recoil on Associations themselves. It is not sufficient that the judicial power should be vested in the hands of well-meaning honest men, although that is always desirable, as well as they should be of unimpeachable character, and have the respect of their fellow-men. A man with any bias respecting a horse, driver or rider, should not on any account, for his own sake, go into the stand, as his personal feelings may so warp his judgment that motives of a very unfavorable

"Better late than never" is an axiom which is entitled to reverence on account of its age. The owners of the fine trotting stallion Charles Douglas were in doubts whether they would make a season with him or not until the entries appeared for the SPORTING TIMES Stallion Race. Their announcement is in to-day's paper. From Chas. Douglas' performances, breeding and size, he should make one of the finest stock horses in the country. Of Royal George and American Star trainers, as his advertisement shows, he combines the blood of the best thought of families in America. His book is limited, and as some of his get have developed into speedy horses, breeders should scan carefully his announcement. He is well thought of in the Stallion Race, for which he is entered, and it is simply to make him eligible his owners have consented to make the limited season demanded by the conditions of the race. A 4th of July meeting takes place at Rochester, N.Y., when $900 will be given for three races—two trots and one running race. $800 is the amount of each purse, and 8:00 and 2:45 horses are provided for in the trotting classes. National Association Rules will govern. Ten per cent. entrance on the purse, and entries close on July 1. Doubtless many of our Canadian friends will visit Rochester to spend the Centennial 4th with their American cousins, and the races over one of the finest Driving Parks in the world, will be an attraction they can hardly resist taking in.

RUSSELL vs. CAPRON.

A match was made on Tuesday between Mr. Thomas Russell, of Ottawa, and Mr. Jos. Capron, of Paris, to play a game of 450 points, French, in this city on Thursday, 29th inst., for $400. $100 forfeit was placed in our hands, the balance of the money to be made good on 29th inst. The game will be played on a Riley & May table, 5 x 10, with 2 1/2 in. balls; Canadian Tournament rules to govern. Mr. James Bennett, ex-champion, is behind Mr. Capron. From the well-known merits of the principals an interesting contest may be expected. The location has not been decided on, but due publicity will be given of the hall engaged for the purpose of the game.

BILLIARDS EXTRAORDINARY.—On Saturday afternoon an interesting game of pyramid pool was played at the Revere House here between two American gentlemen. One of the players, in three games, pocketed forty balls out of a possible forty-five, in four runs, the first shot being a break. This is undoubtedly the best play that has ever been made in Ontario.

I have met numbers of people who have told me that the larva crawl up into the oesophagus, but the idea is not only erroneous but absurd.

Thirdly—Do they exist in all horses whether healthy or otherwise? In my exposition of the first question I have almost answered this, and I have only to repeat that I believe that they are to be found mostly in healthy animals, and not in those suffering from disease, especially from chronic diseases. I do not pretend to give a reason for their presence there, but have no doubt that they are placed for a reason beneficial to the animal, and that they are by no means injurious to the animal as a rule. Most possibly they are placed there as purifiers of the system.

Fourthly—Can the Bots eat through the coats of the stomach, and, if not, how is it that the stomach is undoubtedly occasionally found in a perforated condition?

They certainly can do nothing of the kind, and though they are found after death in the abdominal cavity, and though at the same time the stomach is found to be perforated, these facts, though liable to deceive superficial observers and deduce to the fact of the stomach having been perforated by these Bots are to be accounted for in an entirely different manner, and I believe the perforation and consequent appearance of the Bots in the abdominal cavity to occur in this wise:

Gastric juice is a liquid thrown out by the coats of the stomach in order to saturate the food in the stomach and thereby render it into a more pulpy condition and more sensitive to the coming action of the bile and the change from chyme to chyle.

LONDON RACES.

The Spring meeting of the London Turf Club commenced on Wednesday, 14th inst., over the Newmarket Course in that city. The attendance numbered fully 1,000, and everything passed off on the first day in the most satisfactory manner. The track was rather heavy. Being favored with fine weather, the racing was much enjoyed. Interesting contests marked most of the events, and the defeat of Bill Bruce in the two-mile dash by Inspiration and Millionaire was the exciting topic of the day.

The first event was a trot for Dominion bred horses that have never started in a race. It had four entries. In the first heat Rocket got away with the lead and never was headed. Empress and George B. had the best of the send off in the second heat, but before they got to the quarter pole Rocket put on steam and gave them the go-by, winning the heat easily. Rocket broke badly after getting the word in the third heat and did not collar the others until the half-mile was reached, when he went to the front, but breaking again was passed by the others. However, he was steadied down the stretch and beat the trio handily. Rocket is a fine gaited horse, speeding very much after the style of Gen. Benton, who will be remembered at Woodbine last year. He is rather a slow scorer, but accumulates his speed at a surprising gait when fairly settled. He will probably be heard of again. The record follows:

June 14.—Newmarket, London. $200; Trotting. For Dominion bred horses that have never started in a race. Mile heats, 3 in 5; $150 to first, 50 to second.

The second race was a dash of a mile and a half for Dominion bred horses. Pilot had the call, and on getting the word jumped away with the lead which he kept for over a mile when his want of condition commenced to tell, and Maritime and Gil D. Roy went on the lead. It was an exciting race, the persuaders being freely applied down the stretch, but Maritime drew ahead at the starting post which is about a 100 yards above the judges stand, the track being lapped back; and won a fine race, the favorite looking badly used up.

Same Day.—$200; Running Purse—For Dominion bred horses. Horses that have never won a race, allowed 7 lbs; dash of 1 1/2 miles. $150 to first, 50 to second.

The sensation of the day followed in the 2-mile dash, open to all. Bill Bruce was a warm favorite. Boyle's mare and Millionaire cut out the running, and when half the distance had been run the mare had the lead with the bay at her heels and Bruce a few lengths in the rear. These positions were maintained until the head of the stretch was reached when Tiffin called on Bruce, but the response was very weak, and so far as he was concerned the race was over. Millionaire failed to overhaul Inspiration who won a well-contested race with the bay at her saddle girth. Bruce three or four lengths in the rear. It was the general opinion after the race was over the distance was too far and the track too heavy for the Kentucky crack. In fact his owner had very little confidence in his ability that day to gallop away from two such formidable rivals.

Same Day.—$200; Running Purse—Open to all; dash of 2 miles. $150 to first, 50 to second.

better company will likely show to more advantage. Poor Boy, winner of the second money, is also worth watching; he is a coming one, and when out lose will give any horse that beats him a record of below '40.

June 15.—$200—Trotting Purse—For Dominion bred horses that have never beaten 3 minutes; mile heats, 3 in 5. $150 to first, 50 to second.

A dash of two miles for Dominion bred horses followed. Mary L. was favorite, with Maritime for second choice. Pilot was quickest on his feet, but was soon overhauled by Goldfinch and Mary L., the Blue nose trailing. After running a mile and a half Maritime moved up, Pilot and the favorite falling in the rear. Goldfinch and the bay had it hot down the stretch, but the Nova Scotian pulled away from her and secured first place, Pilot and Mary L. being behind.

Same Day.—$200; Running Purse—For Dominion bred horses; dash of 2 miles. $150 to first, 50 to second.

The third race was mile heats, open to all, and had a very fine entry list. Bill Bruce was made the favorite at about $20 to $10 for the field, notwithstanding his defeat of the previous day; the shorter distance and better track being looked upon as being much in his favor. A good start was had, with Bruce on the lead past the stand, which he kept up to the end; Inspiration apparently not being sent for the heat. On getting off for the second heat Bruce and Inspiration had it red hot, the mare clinging to him like a burr on a dog's tail, and would not be shaken off. Both were exerting themselves to the utmost for mastery, and running at a rate very seldom seen in Canada, the half-mile being reached in about :50, going like a double team. The old uns knew the pace was a clinker, from the style of going; and those who had watches in their hands looked for something extraordinary before the wire was reached. Around the turn the mare lunged to him, Millionaire and Warrior already out of the race, and it was not until about two-thirds of the way down the stretch that Tiffin was able to show Bruce in front. The mare had done all she could and made no further effort for the heat, being satisfied with second place; Bruce coming in on a slow gallop a length ahead of Inspiration in 1:45. This is as good a heat as was ever run in Canada, being only equalled twice—by Morlacchi at Hamilton on July 2, 1872, and Lady Washington at Barrie July 1, 1874. There is good reason to suppose Bruce ran this heat in 1:44, as the outside timers caught him at that notch, and we have understood the official timer announced it the same, although 1:45 appeared on the board. The summary follows:

June 15 and 16.—$200; Trotting Purse—For horses that have never beaten 2:32. Mile heats, 3 in 5. $150 to first, 50 to second.

The concluding event was the 2:32 race which had six entries and five starters, Grey Eddie being the absentee. Ethan was the favorite with Vanderbilt for second choice. J. H. Boyle had the best of the send off, but was captured by Ethan before the quarter was reached. Vanderbilt moved up to second place, and Mack and Sam occupied the rear posts of honor. In this way they passed under the wire. In the second heat Ethan was away first, and never was headed throughout. For the third, about a dozen false starts were made, but they were finally sent off with Vanderbilt having the best of it; J. H. Boyle not having got turned around properly. Ethan had the inside, and Vanderbilt kept gradually drawing in on him until the judges stand was passed, when Curran saw he had either to pull behind Vanderbilt who had about half a length the lead, or to vindicate his right to his inside position by going through regardless of consequences. He chose the latter alternative, and making point; but for giving Vanderbilt the heat and taking it away from Boyle there is no excuse, say they intended the London horse should win at all hazards. One of the home papers says Ethan impeded Vanderbilt so that Boyle got second place. It is safe to assume this is the best apology that can be offered; but why Boyle should be punished for what Ethan did is what requires explanation more than anything else. The fact of it is as our report reads, Vanderbilt pulled up thinking he had lost the heat, and it did not make any difference with him for second money where he was so long as he got inside the flag. When the board was hung out the outburst of indignation at the ruling was more violent than anything we have ever witnessed on a race track. It would be safe to assert that 95 out of every 100 men on the track at all conversant with racing were astonished and disgusted at the unfair ruling, and not a single voice save a "lamb" like one could be heard in defence of the decision. However, the Judges would not reconsider their verdict; Ethan was sent to the stable, and the next heat called up which Black Mack won. This concluded the race for the evening, the final issue being postponed until Friday morning at 9 o'clock, when Black Mack captured two straight heats, winning the race, evidently to the satisfaction of everybody, who were pleased that the ill-concealed attempt to favor Vanderbilt had at least been partly checked, even though Boyle had something the worst of it.

CAMPBELL'S QUININE WINE.—Report from Dr. J. Baker Edwards, Ph. D. D.C.L. F.C.S. Professor of Chemistry and Microscopy. I hereby certify that I have carefully analysed the samples of "Quinine Wine" submitted to me by Messrs. Kenneth Campbell & Co., with the following result: No. 1—Dark in color and turbid, deposits a muddy sediment on standing; has a sweet and acid taste, Orange Flavor and scarcely bitter, yields on evaporation a thick syrup of inverted sugar, contains only a microscopic trace of Quinine and Quinidine. Is made with Orange Wine. Sample X—Dark color, with dark muddy deposit on standing, has an acid and slightly bitter taste, contains Cinchonine but no Quinine. Is made with an acid wine, not sherry. No. 3—Campbell's—Light color, clear, with no deposit, contains Disulphate of Quinine in the proportion of 1 grain to two fluid ounces. Is made with sound sherry wine. N.B.—The latter (Campbell's), is the only genuine "Quinine Wine" of the three samples examined.—Signed, JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, Ph. D. D.C.L. F.C.S. Prof. of Chemistry and Microscopy, Bishops' College and College of Industry, Montreal.

The attendance on the second day was very large, not less than 2,500 people being within the enclosure. The track was in much better condition than on Wednesday, the rain being welcome by both horsemen and spectators. The first contest was the 8-min. trot for Dominion bred. This race admits of no description as St. George won three straight heats handily. He is a fine, level headed, pure gaited green one, and in

into being reached in about 300 yds, giving rise a double team. The old man knew the pace was a clunker, from the style of going; and those who had watches in their hands looked for something extraordinary before the wire was reached. Around the turn the mare hung to him, Millionaire and Warrior already out of the race, and it was not until about two-thirds of the way down the stretch that Tiffin was able to show Bruce in front. The concluding event was the 2:32 race which had six entries and five starters, Grey Eddie being the absentee. Ethan was the favorite with Vanderbilt for second choice. J. H. Boyle had the best of the send off, but was captured by Ethan before the quarter was reached. Vanderbilt moved up to second place, and Mack and Sam occupied the rear posts of honor. In this way they passed under the wire. In the second heat Ethan was away first, and never was headed throughout. For the third, about a dozen false starts were made, but they were finally sent off with Vanderbilt having the best of it; J. H. Boyle not having got turned around properly. Ethan had the inside, and Vanderbilt kept gradually drawing in on him until the Judges' stand was passed, when Curran saw he had either to pull behind Vanderbilt who had about half a length the lead, or to vindicate his right to his inside position by going through regardless of consequences. He chose the latter alternative, and making a spurt ran his wheel against that of Vanderbilt, breaking a couple of spokes out of Ethan's sulky. Curran scarcely looked behind, but kept sending his little charge ahead; Vanderbilt in the meantime being put on a full run to overtake the Brantford pony. This was kept up round the turn and on to the back side, where Vanderbilt struck a trot when about two lengths ahead. In this position they trotted until the upper turn was reached, when Ethan made a break and caught up to Vanderbilt, who in turn lost his feet. Striking the head of the stretch they had a race of it, but about the distance Vanderbilt was dead beaten, and pulled up almost to a walk; J. H. Boyle, who had been busy, coming with a rush and beating the London equine for second place, Mack fourth, Sam as usual. After several protests and counter complaints, a great deal of time was cut to waste by the Judges in giving their decision, which we venture to say was one of the most extraordinary ever promulgated on a race track in the world. Notwithstanding the evident determination of Vanderbilt to crowd Ethan to the rail, the latter was distanced for a foul; and Boyle, who had beaten Vanderbilt out for second place, was set back and the London horse given the heat. For the distancing of Ethan there might be a mere shadow of reason, as people will view subjects from a different stand

THE THOROUGHBRED RACE HORSE.— HOW TO BREED, REAR, AND TRAIN HIM.

BY AN OLD TRAINER.

CHAPTER XXI.

On Judging and Starting.
From the Spirit of the Times.

While upon the subject of race courses, I would beg to suggest to the clubs and managers of tracks the importance of reform in the judging of races and in the judges' stand, as conducted in America. In the first place, no three judges can correctly judge a very close race, for all must see the result from different standpoints. The right hand judge, instead of looking over the line as the horses pass under, as he cannot approach it in consequence of the middle judge occupying that position, will look at the horses some distance before they approach the stand, his eyes will naturally be fastened upon the outer horse, and his opinion will be that the outside horse won the race, if it is a close contest. The middle man may judge the race properly, and award the heat or race to the proper horse, but the left hand judge, who cannot look over the line, will, in all probability, make it a dead heat, and very often the right hand man will agree with him; so, with two against one, a dead heat is the result. Whereas, if there was but one judge, as there is in England, and only one man allowed in the judges' stand, and that placed about four feet lower than our judges' stands are built, dead heats would very rarely be announced. For, if over the great love of the manly and noble sport of racing is lost or diminished among the American people, it will be brought about by inefficiency or corruption in the judges' stand. Nothing will destroy confidence among the spectators who witness a race so much as to be impressed with the belief that, in the decision of a race the judges have acted corruptly. Therefore, great care should be taken that none but the best men should be placed there, and a change should be brought about by which one man alone should judge the race, and alone should occupy the judges' stand. That course has always been adopted in England, where they run a hundred races to our ten in this country, and it gives the greatest satisfaction. Scarcely ever does a murmur arise in England from the spectators after the judge has placed the first three horses in the race.

There is another great objection to the manner in which our judges' stand are used by the judges, to invite distinguished strangers or distinguished citizens into them, to partake of refreshments or lunch, or to witness a race more conveniently, all of which is wrong. The first article in most of the Jockey Club rules empowers the judges to keep the stand clear of all persons but themselves, and yet, I venture to say, there is not a popular race track in the country, but what sometime, during the pendency of a race, the judges' stand is crowded with unofficial persons, invited there by the judges, who frequently retard and prevent the judges from attending strictly to their duties. I myself have frequently been compelled to call three or four times, to get permission of the judges to dismount my rider, from the fact that they were busily engaged with their backs turned to where their faces should have been, either taking a social drink or lunch with the distinguished persons invited into the stand, or holding a conversation with them in regard to the merits of the race, or other trifling matter, foreign to their duty. It was but last year that the owner of a horse, that had just won the race, was deprived of the fruits of his winnings by the rider of the horse being disqualified from having dismounted, as the judges alleged, without permission. Now, it is said, that the rider held up his hand and called to the judges for permission to dismount. Their backs being turned to the front of the stand, they did not hear him, and he, being a man of quick temper, dismounted without permission, for which the horse, although he came out ahead, was disqualified from winning. Of course, the rider was wrong in dismounting without permission, as he broke a rule, which he must have known, would operate against himself and the owner of the horse; but at the same time the question arises, were the judges entirely blameless in this case? For, had they been attending to their duties, and watching closely the return of the horses to the weighing stand, this unpleasant occurrence, which resulted in great injury to the owner of the horse, and loss to his backers, would have been avoided. Now, if there was but one man in the stand as a judge, he would have nothing to call him away from his proper duties; he would have no one to propitiate no one to drink, lunch, or converse with, but would stand ready at all times to perform and fulfil his duty to the public as a judge, and no such mistakes or accidents as that just mentioned would occur. If a club is desirous of inviting distinguished men or meritorious gentlemen, either of civil, military, or literary standing, they should have a stand erected, and placed under the direction of the stewards of the track where they can be invited, waited upon, and entertained by the stewards, entirely aside from the judges' stand.

There should be no stand on the opposite side of the inside of the track, either for timers or any other purpose. It is in the presence of the horses, frequently causing young heard by all the riders. Then they can use their eyes for keeping their horses in their proper places, and prevent their being kicked and jumped upon by other horses; whereas, as long as you start with the flag, the attention of the boys is divided between the flags, and in nearly every race the start, after a long and tedious effort, will be made only by leaving one or two horses at the post. That is a great injury and a great drawback to owners and backers; for, if the horse is left at the post, they are disgusted and vexed with the start. If he gets off with a reasonable start after a long trial with many false starts, and loses the race, his owner will attribute his defeat to the fact that his horse was worn out, particularly if it is a young one, by the false start for an hour. This must necessarily exhaust the running powers of any two or three year old, unless it is some animal that has been trained very hard and low.

A great many persons who know but little about horses, and never owned or paid for the training of a horse, are always complaining about the management and programme of the races, because the clubs will not give more repeating races. Now, the false starts of a horse, plunging off and being compelled to pull up suddenly, with his whole weight forcing against the ground, pounding his legs down to the ground almost back to the knee, is equal to any repeating race of three or four heats; and if it should be a repeating race, it is just so much more exhausting and injurious to the horse than it would be if it were a dash; for after a dash the horse can be taken to the stable, and sometime before night might be cooled out. But if he has to run three or four heats, besides five or six false starts at every heat, and sometimes more, he will not, perhaps, be able to run again during the week. Therefore, so far as the best interests of the turf are concerned, as well for the horse as for the owner, there should be no heat-racing until some plan has been devised by which the horses can be got off without being exhausted and ruined before the start is accomplished. Let those who are always clamoring for heat racing go to the country and bushwhack it, where all the purses given are in the pool box, and it is necessary to have five or six heats to get all the money in the pool box before the race is terminated. I am glad to see of late years that those who have the best interests of racing at heart are sensibly alive to the bad results of repeating races; for if a horse should be unlucky enough to get into a repeating race out of condition, unless he should fall lame, or become injured so as to prevent his starting, the judges will hardly ever permit his withdrawal during the pendency of the race. The consequence is, he has to run from two to three heats when his condition would not justify his running a second heat, and after he is injured by continuing in the race, exhausted from being out of condition as well, perhaps, as being overmatched, when, if it were a dash, although defeated, he could be saved, by proper care, to run one or two races more during the week. On the other hand, the club or association, as well as his owner, would be deprived of his services for the remainder of the meeting.

The judges generally in charging the boys in regard to the race they are about to start in, overlook many points which it would be beneficial to inform them upon. The charge should be written out properly and printed, so that a judge, however unfamiliar with the technicalities of racing he may be, can instruct the boys without embarrassment, which many would feel in delivering an oration to them. They generally state to the riders the distance they are to run, and tell them to ride a fair race, and not swerve to the right or left when a horse is about to pass them; that if they do, it shall be deemed foul riding, and they will be ruled off, etc. Now, there are many other things which constitute foul riding, that are not embraced in the above instructions, one of which is, it is foul for a rider to halloo, "Get out of the way!" "What are you doing there?" "Pull your horse out, or I will run over you!" "Take care, there, or I will report you to the judges!" and many other things, in fact anything that will intimidate an inexperienced driver, for he is sure to pull out, thinking he is in the wrong place. It is wrong to speak or say anything to another rider, during the pendency of a race. It is foul riding also for two to combine to keep another in a pocket, or for one rider to call to another to pull out when he finds he has lost all chance of the race, to let him pass through on the inside, for the rider pulling out must pass against or before the horse on his right, and thereby impede his progress. It is also foul riding for two to combine to do this, or to combine for the foremost one, when he finds that he cannot win, or has his money upon his contederate's horse to run a horse wide on the turn, or press him out in any way, or to hold him, as it were, on his hip, to prevent his running in his proper place, while the other comes up on the inside and passes on unobstructed, and perhaps wins the race by the collusion of the two riders. It is also foul for a rider to open a sufficient space on either side, in or out, to allow another horse, or induce another rider to bring his horse into the space made vacant, and then turn upon him and choke him out, and prevent him from passing, which is frequently done by sharp riders against inexperienced jockeys. And it is foul, or at least unfair, for riders to intimidate and threaten another jockey whom he has rode foul of, if he makes a complaint, to punish him or to make the same accusation against him; and riders should be instructed upon that point, for it frequently occurs where old riders come by threats, when turning their horses to come back to the track, that they intimidate the

... of which is wrong. The first article in most of the Jockey Club rules enjoins the judges to keep the stand clear of all persons but themselves, and yet, I venture to say, there is not a popular race track in the country, but what sometimes, during the pendency of a race, the judges' stand is crowded with unofficial persons, invited there by the judges, who frequently retard and prevent the judges from attending strictly to their duties. It was but last year that the owner of a horse, that had just won the race, was deprived of the fruits of his winnings by the rider of the horse being disqualified from having dismounted, as the judges alleged, without permission. Now, it is said, that the rider held up his hand and called to the judges for permission to dismount. Their backs being turned to the front of the stand, they did not hear him, and he, being a man of quick temper, dismounted without permission, for which the horse, although he came out ahead, was disqualified from winning. Of course, the rider was wrong in dismounting without permission, as he broke a rule, which, he must have known, would operate against himself and the owner of the horse; but at the same time the question arises, were the judges entirely blameless in this case? For, had they been attending to their duties, and watching closely the return of the horses to the weighing stand, this unpleasant occurrence, which resulted in great injury to the owner of the horse, and loss to his backers, would have been avoided. Now, if there was but one man in the stand as a judge, he would have nothing to call him away from his proper duties; he would have no one to propitiate, no one to drink, lunch, or converse with, but would stand ready at all times to perform and fulfil his duty to the public as a judge, and no such mistakes or accidents as that just mentioned would occur. If a club is desirous of inviting distinguished men or meritorious gentlemen, either of civil, military, or literary standing, they should have a stand erected, and placed under the direction of the stewards of the day, where they can be invited, waited upon, and entertained by the stewards, entirely aside from the judges' stand.

There should be no stand on the opposite side, or the inside of the track, either for timers or judges, or any other purpose. It is in the way of the horses, frequently causing young horses to shy and swerve, and thereby, perhaps, lose a race, for at all times, even when there are only two timers appointed, there will be one or two more crowd into the stand, which is always a very small one, placed immediately on the inside of the track, where the horse has to run within a foot of it perhaps; and those persons will frequently make remarks loud enough for the judges or stewards to hear, and thereby influence, perhaps, even the decision in the stand. But whether it would lead to that or not, there should be no stand, even if it be kept empty, upon the inside of the track. If you wish to have official timers, and time the race, place them above the judge in the stand, in a story constructed for that purpose. They then would look from the same standpoint, and if they were cautious enough to interfere or make remarks about the result of the race, they would be apt to see the determination of it the same as the judge would.

Another reform should be made in the starting of the horses, for, as at present managed, it is a great drawback, and the most vexatious that owners and trainers have to contend with, often from ten to twenty false starts being made before they get the word, and most of them occasioned by the use of the flag as a signal for starting. The flag is used in England, because frequently a great number of horses will start in one race—say 30 or 40—occupying a space of from 150 to 200 yards. Of course they can only be started by a signal, and the flag being the easiest used, it is necessary to use it there; but where our horses are all crowded into a space—it matters not how many start—of 75 or 100 feet, the sound of a gong or drum will be easily condition as well, perhaps, as being overmatched, when, if it were a dash, although defeated, he could be saved, by proper care, to run one or two races more during the week. On the other hand, the club or association, as well as his owner, would be deprived of his services for the remainder of the meeting.

The judges generally in charging the boys in regard to the race they are about to start in, overlook many points which it would be beneficial to inform them upon. The charge should be written out properly and printed, so that a judge, however unfamiliar with the technicalities of racing he may be, can instruct the boys without embarrassment, which many would feel in delivering an oration to them. "What are you doing there?" "Pull your horse out, or I will run over you!" "Take care, there, or I will report you to the judges!" and many other things, in fact anything that will intimidate an inexperienced driver, for he is sure to pull out, thinking he is in the wrong place. It is wrong to speak or say anything to another rider, during the pendency of a race. It is foul riding also for two to combine to keep another in a pocket, or for one rider to call to another to pull out when he finds he has lost all chance of the race, to let him pass through on the inside, for the rider pulling out must pass against or before the horse on his right, and thereby impede his progress. It is also foul riding for two to combine to do this, or to combine for the foremost one, when he finds that he cannot win, or has his money upon his confederate's horse to run a horse wide on the turn, or press him out in any way, or to hold him, as it were, on his hip, to prevent his running in his proper place, while the other comes up on the inside and passes on unobstructed, and perhaps wins the race by the collusion of the two riders. It is also foul for a rider to open a sufficient space on either side, in or out, to allow another horse, or induce another rider to bring his horse into the space made vacant, and then turn upon him and choke him out, and prevent him from passing, which is frequently done by sharp riders against inexperienced jockeys. And it is foul, or at least unfair, for riders to intimidate and threaten another jockey whom he has rode foul of, if he makes a complaint, to punish him or to make the same accusation against him; and riders should be instructed upon that point, for it frequently occurs where old riders have by threats, when turning their horses to come back to the stand, after a race is over, so intimidated the rider who should make the complaint for being rode foul, that he is deterred from it entirely from fear, and the jockey who has transgressed the rules and interfered with the just rights of another, is allowed to escape without punishment, all of which should be examined with scrupulous exactness by the judges.

WOUNDS ON HORSES:

Whenever an injury is inflicted or a wound made on a horse it should be attended to at once, or with as little delay as possible. If any dirt is in the wound it should be well cleansed with a soft sponge and luke-warm water. Then with a proper needle (a curved surgeon's needle should be used) and stout silk twist, pass as many stitches through the edges of the wound as will draw them and hold them together. These stitches should not be made as in sewing cloth, but the thread is to be passed through the skin at points directly opposite to each other. The two ends of the thread should be tied into a secure knot after drawing the edges of the wound closely together. If the edges are ragged, some care must be exercised to bring the corresponding parts into their proper place. If swelling takes place, apply cold water until it is reduced, and avoid all irritating or spirituous applications unless they become necessary. Nature will generally perform the cure if assisted to make a proper start.

Centennial visitors stopping in Toronto should call and see our splendid stock of Gents Goods. 248-ty RYSDYK, the "Stud King" of the Stock Farm, is the best bred trotting stallion in America, embracing the best possible cross of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, the highest type of the trotting horse with Lexington, the perfection of the thoroughbred; the unequalled staying qualities of the latter added to the purely gaited trotting action of the former.

Mares kept at moderate charge and well cared for. All accidents and escapes at owner's risk. Communications by letter or telegraph cheerfully attended to by addressing the proprietor or superintendent, H. W. Brown. Mares not proving in foal can be returned next season free of charge.

CORNWALL ONT.

RINGWOOD,

Got by Edward Everett; 1st dam by Long Island Black Hawk; 2nd dam by American Star, will stand during the season of 1876, at the Stormont Stock Farm, one mile east of the Town of Cornwall.

RINGWOOD is, in color, golden chestnut; stands 15 1/2 hands high, and weighs 1,170 lbs. He is a horse of grand presence, of more style, head and tail, than any horse in the country. With his perfect, regular, machine-like action, his wonderful speed, power and substance, and his rare combination, in the closest and most direct lines, of the blood of the three greatest trotting families on the turf, the ABDALLAHS, BASHAWs, and STANs, he is the most desirable horse to breed from in Canada, and not surpassed by any trotting stallion in America. From the appearance of his colts and fillies of 1874 and 1875 (his first get were dropped in 1874), they have his fine size, form and color, it is fair to infer that he will transmit to his stock his own great qualities; the great qualities of style, speed and game that distinguish his Royal ancestry, and place them on the roll of fame, high above all other families of trotters.

Directly descended through his sire, Edward Everett, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian (by Abdallah by Mambrino), from imp. MESSENGER; through his dam, by Long Island Black Hawk (by Andrew Jackson, by Young Bashaw, from imp. ARABIAN GRAND BASHAW; and through his grand dam, by Seely's American Star (by American Star by Duroc), from imp. DIOMEDE, he is more closely and immediately allied to the great trotting wonders of America, with the exception of Walkhill Chief, Ajax, and Artemus, full brothers, and of Socrates and Norwood, full brothers, than any other horse now AT THE STUD, that we know of, either in Canada or in the United States. Add to this the Royal blood of imported Margrave, deeply inbred to the great HENON, derived through the dam of his sire, and you have a combination of the lightest and purest types that may be equalled possibly, but cannot be excelled by that of any trotting sire in the world. AND BLOOD WILL TELL!!

TERMS.—$30 the season, payable 1st Sept. next, or if preferred, $50 to insure. Season will end 31st July.

All mares owned out of the Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, must be paid for at the time of service or before removal.

Mares will be pastured or stabled carefully, and fed grain, as the owners may desire, at the most reasonable rates. Every care will be taken at the risk of their owners.

Mares from a distance will be met at the steamer or cars and taken to and from the farm, free of expense, by a careful man. Send for tabulated pedigrees.

All letters to be addressed,

A MAGNIFICENT PRESENT!

The proprietors of the SPORTING TIMES have much pleasure in announcing to their patrons that they have made arrangements to present a magnificent horse picture to their advance paying subscribers for the year 1876-7. Realizing the importance of this undertaking, and being determined to offer our subscribers a picture that should in itself be worthy of the paper it represents, and which should be treasured as a work of art; after culling over the finest productions of the American press, we selected the beautiful chromo of GOLDSMITH MAID, printed in nine colors and innumerable shades, size 18 1/2 by 24 inches, believing, as our friends will when they see it, that it is the finest horse picture ever published in America. It is not to be confounded with the miserable pictures hawked around the country by some journals, but is really a work of high art and intrinsically of more value than we receive for our yearly subscription. She is represented standing in a box stall stripped, and in this position the picture, from which the chromo is reproduced, was painted by one of the first artists in the profession in America. When varnished and mounted it is impossible to distinguish between the chromo and a very fine oil painting. It is a work of art worthy of a place in the finest collections in the country, and what adds to its value it is the only correct likeness of GOLDSMITH MAID ever published. As a memento of the most remarkable trotting equine in the world, shortly to be relegated from the turf, it will be treasured by every horseman in the country, more especially by those who have seen the little mare in any of her races. This picture was sold by subscription only a few months ago for $5 a piece, and copies of it were in great demand. We expect in this liberal gift to more than double our subscription list in the next three months, and if our friends who receive the picture will only show it to their acquaintances and inform them how they may get a copy, we are sure our anticipations will be realized. The picture can be procured in no other way; we do not
