House of Commons Debates

THIRD SESSION—NINTH PARLIAMENT

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, September 29, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES ACT AMENDMENT.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 259) to amend the North-west Territories Act.

Mr. SPROULE. Explain.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Mr. Speaker, the Supreme Court of the North-west Territories, as at present constituted, consists of four puisne judges and one judge of the Supreme Court. The intention is now to have a court constituted with five puisne judges and a chief justice. The second section of the Bill provides for cases reserved for consideration by the full court. As the law now stands a judge reserving a point for the consideration of the full court cannot be a member of the court unless his presence is necessary to constitute a quorum. The intention is that when a point is reserved in a criminal case the judge sitting at the trial in the criminal case who reserved the point may form part of the court before which the reserved case is taken. I may say that the last amendment is suggested by the judges of the Supreme Court.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is there any demand from the bar or the people of the North-west Territories for an additional judge ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Where is he to be stationed or to reside ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. There is an almost unanimous request from the bar of the North-west Territories for the appointment of this additional judge, and I may say that it is supported by the Attorney General of the North-west Territories. No provision is made for residence at the present time. There will necessarily have to be a division made so as to make provision for the district in which Macleod is situated, but I am not sure at the present time where the residence will be.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

DISTURBANCE AT SAULT STE. MARIE.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES (North Victoria). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I desire to draw the attention of the House and of the country to a statement of the conditions as they seem to exist at Sault Ste. Marie, in the Province of Ontario. I notice in the morning paper the following telegram :

> Toronto, Sept. 29, 1.00 a.m.—Col. Buchan commanding the military district in which Sault Ste. Marie is situated, has just received an urgent telegram requesting the immediate despatch of troops to the Soo.

I do not know what the condition of affairs may be, but at all events it is quite evident that there is a considerable disturbance. The point I wish specially to emphasize this morning is the facility with which the people of Canada are calling upon the troops to suppress disturbances on any and every occasion. I presume the troops called for here will only be some volunteers from the city of Toronto and other districts, and probably the permanent corps of the country. Sault Ste. Marie is situated in the Toronto military district. I desire to know what steps have been taken in the premises, or if the government has been advised as to what steps have been taken by the military authorities in that district? I know that the military authorities act independently of the government under the regulations and orders, but still the commanding officer should apprise the government of whatever steps he may take. While the situation there may be, and doubtless is, a very trying one, and while there may be rioting, I think all communities should be encouraged to depend on their own local authorities to as great an extent as possible. I have therefore the honour of asking the right hon. Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) if he has in his possession any information regarding the situation at Sault St. Marie, and whether it is such as to justify the calling out of the troops?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Mr. Speaker, I have not seen the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden) this morning, and therefore he may have information which I have not at this moment. But I can give to my hon. friend (Mr. Hughes, Victoria) the information which I have myself. Yesterday I received, personally, several telegrams, all coming from the same party, from the party in charge of the works at Sault Ste. Marie, Mr. Coyne, representing that there were disturbances and riots, that the property of the corporation was threatened, and asking that the government should supply troops to quell the riot. We had to inform him that under such circumstances the government had no authority to act, that it was for the local magistrate, the civil power in charge at Sault Ste. Marie, to determine whether the presence of troops was necessary, and if necessary to call for them. Whether any steps have been taken in that direction by the local authorities at Sault Ste. Marie I have no information at this moment. I may say that there is a disposition to call very often upon the government to send troops. Perhaps the people are unduly scared, but I do not think for my part that there was a very serious condition at Sault Ste. Marie. There was a small disturbance, but in so far as my information goes it was not of a very serious character, and nothing but which could have been controlled by the local authorities. If the citizens and police are powerless to quell rioters, of course they have a remedy by law, but whether they have availed themselves of it or not I do not know.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria).

NATIONAL TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved the third reading of Bill (No. 235) to provide for the construction of a National Transcontinental Railway.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Mr. Speaker, before the Bill is read a third time, I would like to offer a few remarks in regard to the general scope and character of the measure which has been introduced by the government as embodied in this Bill and in the contract annexed to it. The discussion has been so thorough on almost every phase of this measure and of the alternative scheme which I had the honour to propose in this House some weeks ago that it will not be necessary now for me to go very minutely into the subject, nor indeed could I, without devoting an enormous amount of time for that purpose, undertake to answer in detail all the criticisms which have been addressed to my own proposal by hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House. It is needless to say that if I should go beyond the confines of this House, and attempt to answer the criticisms of the same character which have been made outside, I would be compelled to inflict myself at still greater length upon the patience of hon. gentlemen at this very late date in the session. There is, however, one aspect of the question, referring more particularly to my alternative proposal, which has been dwelt upon in very great detail by hon. gentlemen opposite. I refer to the question of the cost of the alternative scheme which I have suggested. I will not attempt to answer all these gentlemen, as perhaps under other circumstances I might be inclined to do, but, as all of their extended criticism has been summed up in the speech of the Postmaster General—which I regard as embodying on behalf of the government all criticisms of that character which could possibly be made upon my alternative proposal—I shall take the speech of the Postmaster General as a fair type of the criticism which has been addressed to the House and the country, with regard to the proposal which I had the honour of making some few weeks ago. In the first place, the House and the country should know, that my hon. friend (Hon. Sir William Mulock) explained that he especially desired to make a perfectly fair and business-like comparison between the cost of the scheme as embodied in this Bill, and the cost of the scheme which I outlined. Let it be understood also that the Postmaster General repeatedly adopted the figures which have been presented to the House by my hon. friend the Minister of Finance. In order, that I may do no injustice to the Postmaster General in that regard I will quote three passages from his speech. At page 9755 of 'Hansard' the hon. gentleman used the following language :—

> Ours is a very modest one. At one time we had it attacked as being a scheme of great magnitude ; but when compared with the proposition of the leader of the opposition, its dimensions are considerably lessened. It only contemplates the building of a railway from Moncton via Quebec to the coast, a part of which is to be operated by a railway company, and which will only cost the people of Canada $13,000,000.

At page 9760, the hon. gentleman used the following language :—

> Our scheme, limited to an investment with the exception of a few years at the commencement when we pay interest or forego rent, involves a cash outlay by this government, not to be recovered, of not exceeding $13,000,000.

At page 9776, repeating practically the same language, he said :

> I am ashamed of our modest scheme, involving an expenditure of only $13,000,000.

There can be no doubt therefore, as to where we have the Postmaster General with regard to the figures which have been submitted to the House by the Minister of Finance. Further than that, it is to be observed, that by adopting the figures of the Minister of Finance, the Postmaster General has estimated the 400 miles from Moncton to Quebec at $25,000 per mile, equal to $10,000,000 ; and he has fixed the 1,475 miles from Quebec to Winnipeg at $28,000 per mile, or equal to $41,300,000.

My hon. friend the Postmaster General dealt one by one with the items of cost which in his judgment were included in my proposal, and I must take up a little time in also going over one by one the points in the argument of that hon. gentleman in that respect, in order that I may show to the House and to the country, the degree of fairness which the Postmaster General wished to import into this discussion.

In the first place, in estimating the cost of the Canada Atlantic Railway, extending from near Montreal to Depot Harbour on the Georgian bay, he stated—by what authority I do not know, and on what data he left the House in ignorance—that that railway would cost the people of Canada $17,000,000. We have it on the authority of the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair), that that railway including steamships could have been acquired for $12,000,000, and the hon. member for Welland (Mr. German) has stated (page 9718, 'Hansard') that that railway was offered only a very short time ago for $11,000,000. I myself believe on good authority that the Canada Atlantic Railway could have been bought during the present year for $12,000,000 in cash, and that that sum would have included the steamships as well. Now, the Postmaster General was not at first inclined to touch at all on the alternative proposal I made with regard to the line from Montreal to the Georgian bay. It will be remembered that I distinctly stated, that as to this matter, as well as to all matters involved in the scheme which I proposed, I would act only on the best expert advice and assistance that could be procured in Canada, or on the whole of this continent. However, in the course of the speech of the Postmaster General, I interjected a remark which made it necessary for him to consider the cost of a railway from Montreal to the Georgian bay, and he then estimated such a line as costing no less a sum than $15,000,000. That is to say, a railway 360 miles long from Montreal to the shores of the Georgian bay, would cost $41,600 per mile according to the estimate of the Postmaster General ; whereas, a railway, through an unknown and trackless country in the northern parts of Ontario and Quebec would cost, according to his estimate, only $28,000 per mile. That will give to you, Mr. Speaker, and to any gentleman in this House and this country who desires to estimate at its proper value the argument of the Postmaster General in that regard, a true indication of the fairness and the businesslike manner in which he sought to approach the question of the comparative cost of these two projects. Let us look at the argument of the Postmaster General in another aspect.

This line, 360 miles in length through the settled part of Ontario, from Montreal to the shores of the Georgian bay, is to cost $15,000,000, while 1,875 miles of railway from the city of Moncton to the city of Winnipeg are to cost in actual cash outlay, not to be recovered, $8,853,000, and no more. Is there one hon. gentleman on the other side of the House, outside of the Postmaster General, who would dare to get up in this House or on any platform in this country and present that as a fair and accurate comparison of the cost of these two schemes ? Further than that, according to the view of the expert put up by the government to answer the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, this road is to be built for the purpose of transporting to the seaports of the St. Lawrence and of the Atlantic the whole grain trade of the west ; and, according to that same expert, it can only accomplish that provided it is built in the most modern manner, is equipped by the most approved system, and has grades which do not exceed four-tenths of one per cent per mile ; and it is suggested to the people of this country that a road of that character can be built through the northern parts of the provinces of Quebec and Ontario for $28,000 per mile. Why, the capital expenditure on the Intercolonial Railway has run up to between $50,000 and $60,000 per mile ; and the Postmaster General himself, estimated the cost of the road along the northern shore of Lake Superior now operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway at about $50,000 per mile. My hon. friend, the Postmaster General, treated the road from Moncton to Winnipeg as costing absolutely nothing after it was once completed, and after the period of non-payment of rental had ceased. On the same basis, if he had desired to make a fair comparison of these two schemes, he surely would have estimated that the Canada Atlantic Railway, if acquired by this country, paying as it does, 5 per cent on its capital, would not only cost this country nothing, but would afford a small margin of annual profit on the transaction. Yet, according to the estimate of my hon. friend, one road is to be put into this fair comparison at $15,000,000, and the other is to be put in at absolutely nothing beyond the loss of rental during the first seven or ten years.

The next portion of my scheme which the Postmaster General dealt with was the line from North Bay to Fort William, which he estimated as costing the country $38,040,000. At page 9769 of 'Hansard' he dealt pretty fully with the character of that road; and it is just as well that his language should be placed before the House, in order that we may have a thorough appreciation of the view he takes as a lawyer of the compensation that ought to be paid for a public work acquired by the government. He said:

> Everybody knows that the 634 miles operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway between Fort William and North Bay is about the most unprofitable piece in all Canada. Everybody knows that the Canadian Pacific Railway have an alternative route from Duluth to Sault Ste. Marie, and a distance of nearly 400 miles, which they would be only too glad to use if they could get rid of the expensive north shore piece of railway. The hon. gentleman proposes to take out of the Dominion treasury $38,000,000 and hand it over to the Canadian Pacific Railway for the purchase of its railway from Fort William to North Bay. Every day it runs a train from Fort William to North Bay, it loses money. I am not in a position to say how much, but an hon. gentleman opposite—speaking with, I do not know what authority—suggested that $1,000,000 is the annual loss in operating the railway between Fort William and North Bay.

My hon. friend, speaking not only as Postmaster General, but as a lawyer, has taken the ground that if we expropriate a railway, which is an expensive road to maintain, which is losing money every year to the company operating it, we are to pay not only the value of that road, but the cost of it. Well, Mr. Speaker, I thought that every infant in the law knew that when the government expropriate a property in the interest of the country, it pays not what the property cost, but the actual value of it to the person from whom it is taken. That is a principle which my hon. friend the Minister of Justice would not controvert for a single moment, because he knows that it is supported by authorities so absolute and so numerous that no lawyer could dispute it. But the hon. Postmaster General says that although this is a losing road, although it is practically valueless to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, although to be relieved of it and to get running powers over it on a basis of rental would be of great advantage to the company, yet if we undertook to expropriate that line we would be obliged to pay the cost of it. Why, Sir, this matter was argued out in this House years ago. We argued it out in the discussion on the acquisition of the Drummond County Railway. We took the ground, which was not disputed, that the true basis on which the government should pay for that railway was the value and not the cost. Further than that, we took the ground with regard to the Drummond County Railway, which I am prepared to take with regard to the Canadian Pacific Railway from North Bay or Sudbury to Fort William, that if the company sought to be paid compensation on the basis of cost, it would be only fair and proper, in the interest of the country to take into consideration the subsidies which have been paid by the country to the company towards the building of the road. Why should a railway company receive the cost of a public work expropriated by the country when a part of that cost has already been borne by the country? We took that ground with regard to the Drummond County Railway, and it is a sound principle to adopt with regard to any work expropriated by the government in the interest of the country. But notwithstanding that, the Postmaster General puts in this road as part of my scheme at $38,040,000. I would like to know why he puts it in at one single dollar, if he adopts the argument of the Minister of Finance. What was my proposition in regard to the acquisition of the line from North Bay or Sudbury to Fort William? My proposition was that either the absolute right of ownership or the absolute control of running rights should be acquired by the people and that equal running rights over that line should be given the three great railway systems of Canada, the Grand Trunk Railway, the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian Northern Railway. My proposition also involved the necessary consequence that these roads shall pay for that running power. How would that be accomplished? In the first place by the exaction from them of a rental to cover the interest on the expenditure, and in the second place by making them pay, upon what is known among railway men as a wheelage basis, the cost of maintenance and operation. So that if my hon. friend the Postmaster General had desired to make a perfectly fair comparison, if he had dealt with my proposition as he did with that of the government, he would have put it down as costing to the country not one cent, because the whole cost of the line and its operation would necessarily be borne by the three railways to which I have referred. Yet the Postmaster General, with these fair, business-like methods of his, makes my scheme involve an expenditure of $38,040,000 to the people without return, whereas similar propositions—the line from Moncton to Winnipeg for example—are dealt with by him upon an absolutely different basis.

He was troubled also wih regard to my proposition because he said it would result in Americanizing the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Canadian Pacific Railway, he feared, would build its line from the 'Soo' to certain western connections and bring all its traffic through American territory. My hon. friend had better not distress himself very much on that point until he can make up his mind to vote for, instead of against, certain safeguards proposed from this side with regard to the Grand Trunk Railway. Here is a line of railway, the Grand Trunk Railway, which has one terminal in Chicago and the other in Portland. It has a great railway system in Canada, and it has done a good deal of work in developing Ontario, and I do not blame it for one moment for looking after its own interest with regard to its own terminals; but I say that the government and the people must also look after their own interests. When we insisted in committee of this House on imposing in this very Bill conditions and restrictions which would prevent the Grand Trunk Railway from taking the freight that may come over the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and from carrying that freight to its own terminal at Portland, was my hon. friend the Postmaster General distressed at the prospect which now alarms him? No, he stood up and voted like a man to throw out the very resolutions that we proposed as safeguards to the people. This is the same gentleman who is anxious, almost to the point of distress, because forsooth he says my proposal will result in Americanizing the Canadian Pacific Railway. If he believed that, he did not appreciate my proposition, because I distinctly said that the Canadian Pacific Railway should have exactly the same running rights as it has at present over that road, in common, however, with the Canadian Northern Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway under the independent control of the government. The Canadian Pacific Railway would have no more cause than it has now to do what the Postmaster General suggests. It would have less cause because it would operate and send its trains over this road between North Bay or Sudbury and Fort William at a very much less cost to itself than is involved in the operation of that line at present.

My hon. friend the Postmaster General really excels himself when he comes to deal with the line from Port Arthur to Winnipeg. I had suggested that it would be wise for the government to give some assistance in improviding one or both of the lines from Fort William and Port Arthur to Winnipeg. I suggested that as a good business investment for this reason, that if you have a hundred million bushels of grain, as you may very soon have, for export, and if you can, by a fair expenditure, reduce the cost of carrying that grain by one cent a bushel, you will save the people one million dollars every year. Therefore I thought it right and proper that the government might spend two million, or even three million dollars in improving these lines, giving the government absolute control, reducing the rates, and by this means saving to the people possibly a million dollars per year. That was my proposition, but how does my hon. friend the Postmaster General torture it? He puts the cost of that proposal at no less a sum than $26,263,549. He says that I propose to buy both these lines, that it will be necessary to buy them both. We would have to acquire, he says, the Canadian Pacific Railway between Fort William and Winnipeg, which would cost $15,638,549, and the Canadian Northern, which would cost $10,625,000, making a total of $26,263,549. Then comes the following mysterious paragraph in his speech which appears in the revised 'Hansard' and therefore must have been carefully considered. I will give it to my right hon. friend the Prime Minister as a conundrum with which he can deal, when he comes to speak on this question, if he should speak on it:

> Now the purchase of these different roads and the construction of two pieces would aggregate in all $841,015,549.

I do not know really what my hon. friend was driving at, but he was about as near the mark as anywhere in his speech.

He is distressed also at the idea of this country using a railway to Fort William in rivalry with other roads. It would be disastrous, he says, to acquire a line from Fort William to Winnipeg and use that in rivalry with other roads. But will his memory carry him back four years, when he stood up and voted for a proposal to acquire the Drummond County Railway and running rights over the Grand Trunk Railway from Lévis to Montreal, for the purpose of operating that road in rivalry with the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway? Now he is distressed because hon. gentlemen on this side suggest that, in the interests of this country, it might be advisable to grant aid to these two railways from Fort William to Port Arthur and Winnipeg. Why even if we did acquire a line of railway as part of the Intercolonial and operate it all the way from Moncton to Winnipeg in rivalry with the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway, we would only be doing exactly what we are doing now with the Intercolonal. Is not the Intercolonial from Halifax to Montreal operating in rivalry with the Canadian Pacific Railway; and from Lévis to Montreal is it not competing with both the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway ? What is the reason that there should be rivalry and competition between government and private roads in the east and not in the west ? The people in the maritime provinces are very well satisfied to have the Intercolonial operate there in rivalry with other roads, and I suppose the people of the west would be just as well satisfied to have the Intercolonial operating there in similar rivalry. So far as the question of principle is concerned, I challenge my right hon. friend the Prime Minister or the Postmaster General to point out one single distinction in principle between doing that in eastern Canada and doing the very same thing in western Canada.

But, if my hon. friend the Postmaster General excelled himself when he dealt with the line from Fort William to Winnipeg, he more than excelled himself and everybody else when he came to deal with the prairie section. He adopted the estimate of the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) who, at page 8586 of 'Hansard,' stated that the aid proposed by the government in the shape of a guarantee for construction of the prairie section not exceeding $13,000 a mile would cost the country nothing. That is distinctly the basis on which the Minister of Finance proceeded, and it is the basis which has been adopted over and over again by the Postmaster General. But when he deals with my proposal, does he deal with it in the same way ? How should he deal with my proposal ? My proposal was simply to give to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway similar aid for the prairie section to that which the government propose to give under this Bill. The Postmaster General himself makes that perfectly plain when, at page 9771 of 'Hansard' he says that my proposal is for the same assistance to the Grand Trunk Pacific as the Canadian Northern receive, namely, a guarantee of $13,000 a mile. But how does he deal with the cost of the guarantee when he desires to make an extravagant estimate of the cost of my proposal ? He puts it at $13,000,000, as against nothing for exactly the same aid under the government's proposal. Let us look at it for a moment. We have the estimate of the Minister of Finance as follows : Eastern section, including interest during construction, will cost $54,609,676 ; loss of rental, seven years, $11,468,030 ; aid to mountain section, $2,924,000 ; Quebec bridge, $2,000,000. He adds to that for aid to the prairie section under the government's proposal just nothing. So, the total cost of this, including the prairie section according to the estimate of the Minister of Finance, will be $71,001,706. And the Minister of Finance tells us that the total cost to the country will be less than $13,000,000, which is just the sum that the Postmaster General estimates will be the cost under my scheme of aid to the prairie section alone. And this is the gentleman who desired to make not only a business-like but fair comparison of the cost of the two schemes.

Now, the hon. gentleman (Hon. Sir William Mulock) proceeded to deal with the mountain section. He represented the cost to the country of the mountain section under my scheme at $30,000,000, that is, for 600 miles at $50,000 a mile. Of course, I would not deal, even in passing, with the fact that, whereas the Minister of Finance put the length of the mountain section at 480 miles, the Postmaster General adds a trifle of 120 miles to it when he makes an estimate of the cost of the mountain section under my proposal. That was perfectly convenient for him to do, and I do not complain very much about it ; it was only a trifle compared with his other exaggerations. He represents me as deliberately adding a cost of $30,000,000 to that of the scheme which the government proposes. I thought I had made myself perfectly clear with respect to my proposition as to the mountain section, and I believe I did make myself clear to every hon. gentleman in this House and to every man in the country except the Postmaster General. My scheme was this : I said that I believed that, from Edmonton or from some point west of Edmonton to the Pacific coast, there was no necessity for more than one new line. I said the Canadian Northern had as good a right to be regarded as a transcontinental railway as had the Grand Trunk Pacific. Knowing the ways of railway promoters, I apprehended that the Canadian Northern Railway would come to this government for exactly the same aid for a line to the coast as that which was proposed to be given to the Grand Trunk Pacific ; and I said that, inasmuch as it seemed to me that only one line was necessary, I would impose on these two companies the obligation of joining their lines at Edmonton or at some point west of Edmonton, and that any aid given by this country for a line west of that point should be for a line to be operated, under independent control if necessary, and used by both these companies as part of their transcontinental lines. I believed, and still believe, that, in making that proposal, I was saving this country the cost of aid to a second transcontinental line. I said further—and I repeat it now—that the government had the whole situation, and will have the whole situation, in its own hands, if it acts wisely. Let us suppose that the two companies cannot come to an understanding for the operation in common of that road from Edmonton or some point near Edmonton to the coast. What will happen ? The government, in the first place can refuse to give aid until this understanding has been reached. That is the first part the government has to play. In the next place, if the government sees fit, it might itself build the line from Edmonton or some point west of Edmonton to the coast on condition that these companies shall use it upon exactly the same stipulations that I have already referred to in respect of the line from Sudbury to Fort William, that is, they must pay a rental which will free this country from any burden for interest on the cost of construction, and they must also pay the cost of operation, and maintenance upon a wheelage basis according to the user by the several companies. With such a proposition, what should my hon. friend the Postmaster General have put in as the cost to the country under my proposal of the line from Edmonton to the coast, adopting the same basis which he has used for estimating the scheme of government? He should have put it in at not one dollar, because every cent of interest would be recouped to the country. But, instead of that, he puts it down at $30,000,000 and represents me as absolutely proposing to build that line. And so he sails gayly back to the east, carrying with him the $38,000,000, the $26,000,000, the $30,000,000 and the $15,000 not to speak of the $841,000.00 as to which we are not very clear up to the present time.

Now, my hon. friend the Postmaster General then proceeded to deal with my remarks concerning the proposed colonization road in the northern part of the provinces of Quebec and Ontario. He estimates for me not a first-class road—he is good enough in this instance to estimate what he calls a cheap colonization road, and he puts it in at only $20,000 a mile or $28,000,000 for a total of 1,400 miles from Quebec to Winnipeg. That is to say, this cheap colonization road would cost under my scheme as he presents it, just $15,000,000 more than the government's scheme is to cost the country in all. A first-class road from Quebec to Winnipeg, a road with four-tenth per cent grades, if we are to take even his estimate of my proposed line from Scotia Junction to Sudbury, would cost $40,000 a mile. Surely that is not a high estimate; it is an absurdly low estimate for a road with four-tenth per cent grades. I do not believe it could be built for $60,000 a mile. But we will take his own estimate, the estimate which he has placed on the line as proposed by me from Scotia to Sudbury, of $40,000 a mile. Then we will have:

Quebec to Winnipeg, 1,475 miles at $40,000 a mile	$59,000,000
Moncton to Quebec, 400 miles at $40,000 a mile	16,000,000
Mountain section (according to the estimate of the Minister of Finance)	2,924,000
The Quebec bridge (according to the same estimate of the Minister of Finance)	2,000,000
That is a total of	$79,924,000

This is without taking into consideration interest during the period of construction and ten years loss of rental; and the hon. Postmaster General is going to do the whole of that for $13,000,000 while he puts down the cost of a cheap colonization line from Quebec to Winnipeg at $28,000,000. I repeat that we can only stand amazed at the unusual moderation and fairness of my hon. friend the Postmaster General.

Now in respect to this so-called colonization road, I pointed out in the speech which I had the honour to deliver in this House some time ago, that I did not believe that the project of building colonization roads through that country and the project of building a short direct through freight road could be carried out on the same lines. Colonization roads should be built in short sections at a time, as the needs and requirements of settlement and of the people demand. Such a road should not be built as a direct through line but should be built into those portions of the country where it is found that it will be most useful for settlement; whereas a through line if it is to give the shortest and best practicable route would naturally disregard considerations of that kind because it is designed to create the most direct route for the transportation of the products of the west to the Atlantic sea-board. Therefore I said at page 9002 of 'Hansard:'

> So far as the line from Quebec to Winnipeg is concerned, I am not disposed to minimize the possibility of that northern country. Looking at the history of the great west, there may be a great flood of settlement into that country north of lake Superior, some day or other, at least up to a certain point west, but I do not think we know enough to justify us at present in saying that there will or will not be, because I do not know how far that country is capable of competing, in the early future, with the magnificent country we have in the North-west. I have some doubts as to whether or not that great northern country may compete as early as we would desire with the great western country. But I am not disposed to minimize its importance in any way, and to my mind the rational way of dealing with the proposed line from Quebec westward is this: First, thoroughly exploit and explore that northern country, realize and understand its capabilities and possibilities for settlement and colonization and build such railways as these conditions and requirements may demand. Build only after you have obtained the fullest possible information, and obtain that information with the least possible delay. You may find curious conditions surrounding you when you get into that country. You may find that the road which is the most direct line to the Pacific coast, will not be the road that will open that country for colonization. You may find it necessary to have a road running in one direction for colonization purposes while any future line to the coast must take a very different direction.

I adhere to that, and I say further that I believe, that the best method of opening that country by colonization roads will be by building these roads gradually from south to north and by connecting the existing settlement of the provinces of Quebec and Ontario with the settlement that may take place in that northern country. Not only will that be in the interest of the people of both provinces but I believe it will be the way in which settlement can best be opened.

Our people would not desire to go two or three hundred miles away from all settlement and to make their homes on the line of a through transcontinental railway, where many of the trains would not stop and where they might not get the accommodation they would desire because it might be expensive and difficult to give such accommodation on a through line of that character. If you build colonization roads from the centre portions of Quebec and Ontario into that northern country you will keep settlement as it advances, closely in touch with the people in the central part of the provinces and in that way will be more likely to accomplish the colonization of that country. By this method you will attract settlers and it is the only businesslike method that can be suggested.

My hon. friend the Postmaster General entered into a long discussion upon my suggestion of an additional transcontinental line in the future. I did not propose the immediate construction of a transcontinental line, but I wish to tell the hon. the Postmaster General and the people of this country that I did not and I do not shrink from the possibility of a further transcontinental line built by the government and operated by the government when it is called for by the requirements of the Canadian North-west. Let the hon Postmaster General, who shrinks from that possibility, think for a moment of the language of the expert of the government, who said at page 8523 of 'Hansard,' that within the lifetime of persons within this House we might have three or four transcontinental lines. If he wants extravagant language let him look at the words of the expert of the government and not at my modest statement that I believe at some time in the future it might be necessary to have a transcontinental line built and operated at the cost of the people of this country. I do not shrink from that responsibility, although the Postmaster General appears to do so. When he takes that position he takes entirely different ground from the expert of the government, the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), and from that of the hon. member for Hants (Mr. Russell,) who stated, at page 8953 of 'Hansard,' that the number of transcontinental lines which we might have to build in the future was absolutely unlimited. Let my hon. friend also look at the language of the hon. Minister of Finance, who also, at page 8562, looked to the possibility of several more transcontinental roads. Let him also consider the words of the hon. Minister of Agriculture, who at pages 9516 and 9518 of 'Hansard,' dwelt on the immense possibility of that country in the raising of stock and grain in the future. Let him also read the language of the hon. Minister of the Interior. Let my hon. friend the Postmaster General not thus shrink from the possibility that at some time in the future the people of this country may be called upon to build another transcontinental line and may answer the call.

My hon. friend the Postmaster General grew merry over my proposal to equip the Georgian bay, the St. Lawrence, and maritime ports. At page 9777 of 'Hansard' he actually derides this proposal, and in effect declares—and I think the attention of the country should be called to it—that it is no part of the policy of the government of this country to spend one single dollar upon the Georgian bay ports, or upon the St. Lawrence, or Atlantic ports. I say that after having examined the language of tht Postmaster General, and I will show to the House and to the country how I gather that distinct enunciation of policy from the language of the hon. gentleman. The hon. Postmaster General is making a fair comparison—he has stated that over and over again—between my proposal and the proposal of the government. He calls attention, at page 9778 of 'Hansard' to the fact that the debt of the harbour of the city of Quebec amounts to $5,803,538, and he calls attention to the fact that the debt of the harbour of the city of Montreal amounts to $8,054,156. He does not go into the cost of the equipment of other ports, he does not give the figures in regard to them, because he has not the figures before him, but he takes the figures which he has, and he deliberately adds them to the cost of my proposal, and adds not one single dollar to the cost of the government proposal. He is either making an unfair comparison, and I cannot charge him with that, or else it is not the policy of the government to spend one dollar on the equipment and development of the Georgian bay ports, the St. Lawrence or the Atlantic ports. If there is any answer to that, I would like to know what it is. We have a member of the government, put up by the government to criticise the financial part of my proposal, deliberately adding $5,803,538, the debt of the harbour of the city of Quebec, and $8,054,156, the debt of the harbour of the city of Montreal, to the cost of my proposal, and not one dollar for any of these works does he add to the proposal of the government. Is it not an accurate and necessary deduction from that to say that not one dollar does the government propose to expend on the development of the Georgian bay ports, the St. Lawrence or the Atlantic ports ? Either that is the policy of the government or else the hon. Postmaster General has made a deliberately unfair comparison. I leave the hon. gentleman and the right hon. leader of the House to say which of these alternatives he desires to accept.

My hon. friend also became somewhat merry over my proposal in regard to the consideration by this government of the project of erecting elevators or warehouses, and he said that it was absolutely absurd, because the government could not undertake to compete with private enterprise. Has the hon. Postmaster General been so long in his office that he does not know that he is competing with private enterprise in the Post Office Department at the present time in the forwarding of parcels? Does he not know that he is competing with private enterprise in carrying on a savings bank business? Does he not know that the government is competing with private enterprise in its binder twine factory and in its railways? I did suggest the proposal as a project that the government should immediately enter into; I suggested it as a project that the government should consider, and I pointed out that in the western states there was practically state-ownership of elevators, and that when farmers put their grain into these elevators they received a certificate to which the credit of the state is attached. I do not know whether that is the case or not, but I am so informed. I have not had an opportunity of investigating the subject carefully.

Mr. McCREARY. I do not know that there are in the grain-growing states of Minnesota, Dakota, Wisconsin or Iowa state-owned elevators. There are farmers' elevators, but I know of no state-owned elevators.

Mr. SPROULE Are there none at Duluth?

Mr. McCREARY. No.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend from Selkirk (Mr. McCreary) has perhaps misunderstood me a little. I do not think my information went so far as to say that there are state-owned elevators, but my understanding is the state takes such control over them that the certificates issued for grain deposited in these elevators bear upon them the stamp of the state, that farmers receiving these certificates can look to the whole credit of the state to see that they are paid and that, in fact, they are practically regarded as negotiable instruments by the farmers of the west. I would defer to the superior knowledge of my hon. friend from Selkirk in regard to that, but I am informed by people who profess to be conversant with the facts that such a condition exists in some of the western states, and possibly that information may agree, to some extent, with the information that my hon. friend has upon that point. I would not suppose that it was a very radical thing after all to suggest that the government should consider the economic saving in providing elevators or warehouses at a minimum cost, instead of having farmers themselves provide them at a minimum cost. I think perhaps my hon. friend from Selkirk will agree with me in that view, although he may have some modifications to suggest. For example, if it should cost a cent a bushel to warehouse grain for a certain period of time, and if by such assistance as the government could give to the farmers of the west that grain could be stored for a quarter of a cent a bushel during the same period of time, surely a suggestion of that kind is not so utterly absurd that the government should not take it into consideration. That was all I asked. I did not put this forward as a proposal. I put it forward as something which I thought the government should consider. I adhere absolutely to that opinion, notwithstanding the sneer of the hon. Postmaster General, and I think it is a suggestion which the government will have to take into consideration in the not very distant future.

The hon. Postmaster General, after demolishing very much to his own satisfaction, my proposal, proceeded to deal with the line from Quebec to Moncton. He includes, in the cost of my proposal, for his part of the scheme, $10,000,000. I believe I did, in addressing the House somewhat hurriedly the other day, near six o'clock, speak of a line from Lévis to Moncton. I was not aware that I had done so until I was afterwards informed of it by the hon. Minister of Justice, and having been informed of it by the hon. Minister of Justice in the course of his speech, I said that I intended the line to run from Rivière du Loup to Moncton, because Rivière du Loup brings you past the extremity of the state of Maine, and, according to my view, you can make just as short a line by building from Rivière du Loup to Moncton by the best practicable route, as by building a new line from Lévis to Moncton. Whatever necessity there may be for colonization roads through the rear parishes of the counties of St. Lawrence, I do not know. If there is any need of colonization roads, I would be prepared to give it all due consideration; but for the project of a short line from Lévis to Moncton, what I intended to propose was a line from Rivière du Loup to Moncton, if it would give the people of the maritime provinces and the maritime ports a better fighting chance for the trade of the west, and I so expressed myself in my speech. I propose to build this line as a part of the Intercolonial Railway, to keep it as a part of the people's railway, and not to hand it over to the Grand Trunk Pacific. My hon. friend the Postmaster General, no doubt through inadvertence, puts in the whole line from Lévis to Moncton, and charges my scheme with $10,000,000 as the cost of that line.

Let us bear in mind just this. The whole enterprise of the government is to cost $13,000,000; that whole enterprise of the government includes this line which according to the Postmaster General is to cost $10,000,000 in my proposal; therefore, if you eliminate this $10,000,000, you have $3,000,000 left for the construction of all the other lines proposed by the government. That is a fair argument, is it not? This section is included in the proposal of the Postmaster General which is to cost $13,- 000,000 ; this section, according to him, is to cost $10,000,000, and therefore there are $3,000,000 left to represent the country's cash out of pocket for all the rest of the government proposal. Let us see what this wonderful government and this wonderful Postmaster General are going to do with that $3,000,000. I will give here an estimate, according to the Minister of Finance, of the rest of the proposal, and I will give also my own estimate.

The line from Quebec to Winnipeg, according to Mr. Fielding's estimate will cost $41,300,000, but according to the Postmaster General's estimate of $40,000 a mile for a line from Scotia Junction to Sudbury, which I adopt as fairer, it would cost $59,000,000 ; the loss of rental and interest, according to the Minister of Finance, would amount to $11,468,030 and according to my estimate it would be $17,176,033. The mountain section, according to the proposal of the Minister of Finance, which I adopt for this purpose, would cost $2,924,000. The Quebec bridge, according to the proposal of the Minister of Finance, and I accept his figures for the purpose of this part of the argument, would cost $2,000,000. Therefore you have a total estimate of the cost of the balance of the undertaking, according to the Minister of Finance, of $57,692,030, and according to my estimate of $81,100,033. This is how it would stand :

	Fielding Estimate.	My Estimate.
Line from Quebec to Winnipeg....	$41,300,000	$59,000,000
Loss of rental and interest..	11,468,030	17,176,033
Mountain section.. ..	2,924,000	2,924,000
Quebec bridge..	2,000,000	2,000,000
	$57,692,030	$81,100,033

But the Postmaster General is so much of a born financial genius that he is going to accomplish all this for $3,000,000. The fairness, the moderation, the business-like nature of his claim are so obvious that I am inclined to leave the matter here. I would think, however, that if my right hon. friend the Prime Minister should ever have occasion to select a new Minister of Finance there cannot be the slightest doubt as to where the choice should lie.

My hon. friend the Postmaster General had various other objections of a more or less detailed character to my scheme. He objected to the buying of existing lines. He wanted to build lines and spend money ; he thought the people of this country were very much opposed to the buying of old lines. I was under the impression, until I heard him speak, that he is a member of the government that bought an existing line from Lévis to Ste. Rosalie, and paid for it very much more than it was worth. Apparently he cannot be the same gentleman who so strongly advocated that scheme when it was submitted to this House by the present government. He characterized my scheme as a 'patchwork scheme.' I think he used that designation several times in the course of his somewhat voluminous remarks. Let us see to what extent it is a patchwork scheme and to what extent all railway enterprises in this country are patchwork schemes, if this is one. My scheme contemplates the extension of the Intercolonial Railway to the Georgian bay, either by the purchase of an existing line or by the construction of a new line. Does that make the Intercolonial Railway a patchwork railway ? If so, it must be very much more of a patchwork railway at the present time, because it only enjoys running rights from Ste. Rosalie to Montreal. My proposal contemplates the building of a line from Scotia Junction to Sudbury. Does that make it a patchwork scheme ? Surely not.

Mr. HEYD. Does not the Canada Atlantic Railway run right through—Oh, yes ; you are right.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think my hon. friend (Mr. Heyd) misunderstood me. I intended to suggest, and I believe I did suggest, that for the purpose of connecting the Canada Atlantic Railway line with the present Canadian Pacific Railway line between North Bay and Winnipeg, the most convenient route would be from Scotia Junction to Sudbury.

Mr. HEYD. All right.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Surely that is not a patchwork scheme so far. Then my proposal contemplates the acquisition of this line from Sudbury, or from North Bay, if necessary, to Fort William, and the user of that line under proper and independent control by three different Canadian systems, and by the Intercolonial Railway. Does the user of this one line, sufficient for the purpose of three railways ; does the user of this one line by three railways make this proposed scheme a patchwork scheme ? If so what about the Canada Atlantic Railway at the present time, which runs its trains over the Grand Trunk Railway to Montreal ? What about the Canadian Pacific Railway which runs its trains from Toronto to North Bay over the Grand Trunk Railway ; what about the Dominion Atlantic Railway, in Nova Scotia, which runs its trains for 45 miles over the Intercolonial Railway, and has running powers for 15 miles more ; what about the Intercolonial Railway itself, which runs its trains on the Grand Trunk from Ste. Rosalie to Montreal ; what about the Canadian Pacific Railway, which runs its trains over several leased lines in this country ; what about the Grand Trunk Railway, which, if I am not mistaken, does precisely the same thing ? Are these patchwork systems ? If these are not patchwork systems, then what I am advocating is not a patchwork system, and if my system be a patchwork system, then it is just as good a patchwork system as the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Grand Trunk Railway, the Dominion Atlantic Railway and dozens of American lines which can be named.

Then, the next proposal I made was to obtain proper grades between Lake Superior and Winnipeg. There is nothing of a patchwork nature in that, so far as I am aware. There is a proposal to aid the Grand Trunk Pacific to build in the west. Is there anything of a patchwork nature in that ? If so, it characterizes the government scheme just as much as mine. Is there anything of a patchwork nature in the proposal that two railways should use in common a line from Edmonton to the coast, if it is sufficient for the purposes of both ? If so, exactly the same argument could be applied to dozens of railways on the North American continent. My hon. friend (Mr. Charlton), the expert of the government, pointed out to us the other day that the Wabash enjoyed running powers over the Grand Trunk. Is that a patchwork system ? Is it a patchwork system to have grain brought by the Canadian Pacific Railway from western points to Fort William, thence by steamer to Georgian Bay ports, and thence by three different railway routes to Montreal, and by the Intercolonial Railway to Halifax and St. John ? Let me point out to my right hon. friend that if that is a patchwork system, it is the very patchwork system which was endorsed by his late Minister of Railways, when the Intercolonial Railway was extended from Lévis to Montreal. The scheme contemplated then was, that the Grand Trunk should get traffic on the shores of the Georgian bay from the great west, bring it to Montreal, hand it over to the Intercolonial Railway, and that the Intercolonial Railway should transmit it to the maritime ports. Is my scheme a patchwork scheme ? What then is the nature of the scheme which was then introduced to this House by the very government of which my right hon. friend is the First Minister, and in which the Postmaster General is a minister ; a scheme which was heralded at the time as the very acme of wisdom and of statesmanship so far as railway development is concerned. Moreover, what does the government policy contemplate ? It contemplates a line owned and operated by the Grand Trunk Pacific from the coast to Winnipeg ; a line owned by the government and operated by the Grand Trunk Pacific from Winnipeg to Moncton and with running powers over the Intercolonial Railway to Halifax or St. John—or, what is much more likely, the transmission of that traffic by the Grand Trunk Railway to Portland. I do not suppose that the Prime Minister or the Postmaster General would regard that as a patchwork scheme, but nevertheless it is quite as deserving of the appellation as the proposal which I made to the House.

Now, Mr. Speaker, coming down to a real comparison between the cost of these two schemes, let us see what they actually involve. I would suppose that for the purposes of this comparison I would be entitled to place upon the line from Moncton to Quebec and upon the line from Quebec to Winnipeg at least the same estimate of cost that has been placed by the Postmaster General upon the line which I suggested from Scotia Junction to Sudbury. I know of no reason why a line, not with the grades suggested by the government, but even with fair grades, can be built from Moncton to Winnipeg at less cost than a line from Scotia Junction to Sudbury. I have not heard one word in this House to convince me that a line from Scotia Junction to Sudbury would cost one dollar more per mile than the line from Moncton to Winnipeg. On the contrary, from what I have heard in this House during this discussion, I think it may be safely assumed that, with the same grades and the same general character, the line from Moncton to Winnipeg would cost considerably more per mile than a line from Scotia Junction to Sudbury. However, I will give the Postmaster General the benefit of the doubt, and will place on the proposal of the government the same estimate of cost that he has placed on my proposal of a line from Scotia Junction to Sudbury, that is $40,000 per mile. On that basis, the line from Moncton to Quebec—400 miles in length at the lowest estimate, though I believe it will be much more than that—will cost $16,000,000. The length of the line from Quebec to Winnipeg has been variously estimated ; but I take the estimate of my hon. friend the Minister of Finance 1,475 miles, which, at $40,000 per mile, will cost $59,000,000. The cost of the Quebec bridge, I put at the estimate of the Minister of Finance, $2,000,000. For interest during the period of construction, I adopt the basis of the Minister of Finance, although the figures are of course larger, because the cost is larger ; I put that at $4,838,250. This makes a total so far of $81,831,250. The interest on the eastern division for seven years, during which no rental is to be paid, will amount to $17,176,033 ; and the interest on the eastern division for three years, during which rental may not be paid, or if not paid will be added to capital, will amount to $7,365,442. So that you have, as the cost of this railway, on what I believe to be a low and moderate estimate, no less a sum than $106,389,725. I have not included in this a dollar for interest on the rentals of the eastern division ; I have simply taken the rental which is not to be paid, and computed it for seven years. I might have made some additions to this estimate, but I leave it as it is, excluding all doubtful items and all items on which there might be controversy ; and I take as my basis exactly what my hon. friend the Postmaster General estimated as the cost of my proposed line from Scotia Junction to Sudbury. As any hon. gentleman in this House will see, in making the calculation on that basis, I have gone on perfectly fair and legitimate lines. I have taken the Postmaster General at his word, and adopted his estimate of $40,000 per mile, which he applied to my proposed line from Scotia Junction to Sudbury, although I believe the government line through the northern country will cost very much more. And when I give this estimate to the country, I do not wish to be understood for a moment as expressing my belief that that line built at that cost could have such grades or be of such a character as the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) has said are absolutely necessary to ensure the carriage of grain. The cost would probably be increased fifty per cent if you attempted to construct a road of that kind. I am only estimating a road with fair grades as the hon. Postmaster General did when he put the cost of the road from Scotia Junction to Sudbury at $40,000 a mile.

Now let us see what would be necessary under my alternative scheme to give a complete and perfect connection between the east and the west, and to bring the two great railway systems of the west and the three great railway systems of the east into close connection with each other, at a very early day. In the first place, you would have to build a line from Jacques Cartier Junction to Coteau, thirty miles, which at $40,000 a mile—there is no dispute between us as to the cost of that—would amount to $1,200,000. The acquisition of the Canada Atlantic Railway I estimate at a cost of $12,000,000. I estimate it at that, because I believe that if the Canada Atlantic Railway could not be acquired for that amount, a road from Montreal to the Georgian bay not exceeding 360 miles in length could be built for the total of these two sums which I have named, $13,200,000. Therefore, if we cannot make fair terms with the Canada Atlantic Railway Company, I believe that sum would be amply sufficient to build a railway from Montreal to a port on the Georgian bay. A line from Scotia Junction to Sudbury, 104 miles at $40,000 per mile would cost $4,160,000. The line from Sudbury to Fort William, 555 miles, at an outside cost of $45,000 a mile, would cost $24,975,000. Betterments from Sudbury to Fort William might cost $3,000,000, and on the line from Fort William to Winnipeg, $2,130,000. That gives a total cost of $47,465,000 to accomplish the results which I have pointed out. That leaves a balance between the cost of this portion of my alternative scheme and the cost of the government scheme of something like $60,000,000; and that $60,000,000 could be applied in many efficient ways toward the improvement of the transportation facilities of this country. A portion of it could be appropriated towards those colonizations roads in the north of which I have spoken. A portion could be applied to the equipment of the Georgian bay ports. A portion might even be applied to the improvement and development of our canals. A further portion could be devoted to the efficient equipment of the ports of Quebec and Montreal, as well as the ports of St. John and Halifax. And after you have done all that, you would still have many millions of dollars to the good.

With regard to the proposal of the government itself, while I do not at the present moment attempt to deal exhaustively with the defects which might be pointed out—this has been done very fully in the course of the debate—nevertheless there are one or two characteristics so important that I think they should be mentioned even at this stage. In the first place, there is an absolute lack of knowledge as to the eastern section, an absolute lack of any information which can give us a fair idea of what it would cost. I asked members of the government across the floor the other day whether there was one of them who could state the cost of the eastern section within $40,000,000, if it is to be built on a four-tenths per cent grade, and whether or not, if prepared to make such an estimate, they could present to the country any data upon which it could be fairly based. I failed to get any reply. I do not think that my right hon. friend, or any man on that side, is able to make an estimate and support it by sufficient data within the figures I have given. If we are to build a road with a four-tenths per cent grade, which is the grade my hon. friend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) says it must have—the cost of a road with such a grade, with proper curves, to give it the solidity and character necessary for the hauling of trains such as my hon. friend from North Norfolk describes, is a matter of so much intricacy and detail that we cannot say we have any requisite information before us. My hon. friend from North Norfolk the other day spoke of hauling trains of 2,000 tons over that railway at a cost of $1 per mile. My hon friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker), who followed him, showed that on a railway which he mentioned, having as low grades as any railway in America, the cost of hauling a train load of 576 tons was $2 per mile, and the inaccuracy of the hon. member for North Norfolk to whom my right hon. friend the Prime Minister pointed as a great expert on railway transportation, in that regard indicates that if he is so far away from the actual facts in a matter of that kind, the government itself cannot be very near the actual truth as regards the cost of construction.

In the next place we had a commission appointed for the purpose of investigating this question. No one can read the language of the Order in Council without concluding absolutely that the commission was appointed to deal with this very question of transportation. Yet while that commission will be at work, and before we can have any information from it, we are to spend $120,000,000, perhaps $150,000,000, without any data or information from that source.

Then I have pointed out the absence of safeguards to preserve Canadian traffic for our Canadian routes. I have pointed out that the Grand Trunk Railway is really in control of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and designedly so by the Act of this government, which obliges the Grand Trunk Railway to hold $24,900,000 capital stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway stock, which it may acquire at any nominal price that may be agreed upon between the two companies, and that the Grand Trunk Railway can take over the freight at Winnipeg, North Bay, Gravenhurst or Quebec and carry it to Portland without violating a single stipulation in this contract. That is certainly a grave defect. I have pointed out again that the distance from Quebec to Portland is less than 318 miles, and from Quebec to St. John, the shortest possible route, even taking the estimates of my hon. friend, is from 470 to 490 miles, and from Quebec to Halifax, the shortest possible route claimed by my hon. friends opposite, is 586 miles. Even if you make the tolls the same, the Grand Trunk Railway will get all the tolls from Quebec to Portland, whereas to Halifax or St. John it will get only a very small share of the tolls. Therefore it is of prime importance that the Grand Trunk Railway should be bound by some restrictions in the contract. It has both its terminals in the United States, and you cannot blame it for taking its traffic to Portland if it can make more money in that way than by sending it to St. John or Halifax. But I blame the government for not stipulating in this or some supplementary contract that that traffic cannot be carried by the Grand Trunk Railway to its American terminals, but, in consideration of the aid given to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, must be carried to Canadian ports.

Then this scheme of the government absolutely fails to take into account our great inland water ways, on which we have spent some $80,000,000. They propose to side-track the water ways. According to their experts, the whole of the western grain will be brought over this railway, because it will be the cheapest route. Well, what then is to become of our water ways ? or, if the combined rail and water route is the cheaper, what is the object of spending $120,000,000 to $150,000,000 on this scheme ? If the grain will go to the western shores of the Georbian bay and be transported thence by water or by combined rail and water to Quebec and Montreal, why should the country be saddled with an expenditure of $120,000,000 to $150,000,000 on building this road to Moncton? The government can take either horn of the dilemma they chose. Either this road is going to accomplish the wonderful things claimed for it, or it will not. If it should, what will become of the $80,000,000 spent on our water ways ? On the other hand if it should not, and we continue to use the water ways, of what utility will be the road ? If we are spending this enormous sum of $120,000,000 or $150,000,000, as estimated by the ex-Minister of Railways, when will we be in a position to equip the Georgian bay ports, to develop our canals and to do anything effective for the ports of Montreal, Quebec, Halifax and St. John ? It will be an enormous expenditure and will leave us in an absolutely helpless condition for many years to come, so far as the development of our inland water ways is concerned.

Further than that, this new road will strangle the Intercolonial by leaving it with its present terminus at Montreal. There can be no doubt in the mind of any one who listened to the debate on the extension of the Intercolonial from Quebec to Montreal, that the proposal then was to bring the Intercolonial then to Montreal in order that it might compete for western traffic. Well, it was brought to Montreal and has not secured very much of that traffic. What is the reason ? The reason is that it has no western connections. True a contract was made with the Grand Trunk Railway, which was heralded to us as absolutely securing to the Intercolonial a very large portion of the western traffic, but so far we have not secured that traffic, let the reason be what it may. We have two railways coming to Montreal and one very close to Montreal—the Canada Atlantic Railway, the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway. So far as the Canada Atlantic Railway is concerned, it brings its grain from Coteau principally by steamer, and the Intercolonial has no connection with the point to which that grain is brought in the city of Montreal. The Grand Trunk Railway brings grain to Montreal. It has its own connections to Quebec and to Portland, and it takes the grain to either one or the other. The Canadian Pacific Railway also has its eastern connections. But the Intercolonial remains at Montreal, absolutely helpless so far as competition for western traffic is concerned. If, instead of leaving it in that position, you extend the Intercolonial to the Georgian bay, you create for that road an entirely different condition of things. You then have the Intercolonial, the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Grand Trunk and the Canada Atlantic, all competing on the eastern shores of Georgian bay for the traffic that comes from the great west. That traffic is brought by steamers, by independent lines, and the Intercolonial would be on equal terms with these other railways in competing for that traffic. Is there any good reason why the Intercolonial should stop where it is, at Montreal ? We have talked a great deal about government ownership, but I repeat what I have already asked—what are you going to do with the Intercolonial ? Do you propose that it shall have no development in the future ? If you propose to continue to own it, surely the proper policy is to develop it, not to let it stand still. Any railway that stands still in this progressive age becomes inert—it dies or is absorbed. That is what will happen to the Intercolonial if left in its present condition. But if you give it the extension that I have proposed under this scheme you will secure to it, and thus to the maritime provinces, a fair share of the western traffic. For if the Intercolonial once secures a connection with the Georgian bay ports, it will carry the traffic it secures to the maritime provinces, because it cannot carry it elsewhere.

At one o'clock, House took recess.

House resumed at three o'clock.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). At recess I was speaking of that feature of the government proposal which leaves the Intercolonial with its western terminus at Montreal, with no western connection and helpless to compete for western traffic. In that connection it might not be out of place for me to refer to some remarks made by my hon. friend the Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson) which are to be found at pages 10288 and 10289 of the revised 'Hansard.' I am quoting now from the remarks of the hon. gentleman at page 10289, where he says :

> The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, which will lease our line from Winnipeg to Moncton, will have that line fed by the Grand Trunk Railway and by its own western traffic. There will, therefore, be trade and traffic to go over it. But who will there be to feed the Intercolonial Railway, which the hon. gentleman would bring to Winnipeg ? Will the Canadian Pacific Railway or the Canadian Northern Railway ? Certainly not. You run your Intercolonial Railway to Winnipeg and there you stand. But where are you going to get your freight ? Will the Canadian Pacific Railway hand it over to you ? Not at all, because they will use their own road. Will the Canadian Northern Railway ? Certainly not, because they have a road of their own to use. Where then are you going to get your freight ?

My hon. friend the Minister of Customs in the first place does not seem to realize that this is exactly the position in which he proposes to leave the Intercolonial at Montreal, with no western connection. The Grand Trunk Railway, the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canada Atlantic Railway all run from Montreal west, but no one of them has direct connections with the Intercolonial except the Grand Trunk, and that railway has eastern connections both at Quebec and Portland which make it to its own interest that it should not hand traffic over to the Intercolonial at that point ; but my hon. friend, who is thoroughly alarmed at the prospect which will face the Intercolonial at Winnipeg, is absolutely satisfied with its position at Montreal although that railway was extended from Quebec to Montreal, at an expense which has been estimated in this House at from 15 to 20 million dollars, for the express purpose of securing a portion of western freight. Let me point out also, so far as these railways in the west are concerned, that the Canadian Northern at present has no connection with the eastern part of Canada, but that it would have such connection under my proposal. It would connect with the Intercolonial at Sudbury and there would be every reason why that railway should hand over to the Intercolonial at Sudbury freight to be transferred to the seaboard, in so far as freight is to come around the north shore of Lake Superior by rail. I pointed out that the Intercolonial having once arrived at Winnipeg would not necessarily stop there. I stated as part of my proposal, subject to the advice and opinion of the best expert railway men we can get in the country, that the Intercolonial Railway, having once arrived at Winnipeg, would not stop there, but would eventually proceed to the Pacific coast whenever it appeared that the requirements of the people of the west and of this country as a whole should require such an extension. Let me point out that in the opinion of very capable and competent men in this country the traffic will come across Lake Superior ; that it will be gathered on the western shore of Lake Superior, will be freighted across that lake and will be then taken by railways at the eastern shore of Lake Superior. At the risk of wearying the House I would like to read a portion of a letter which has already been read by my hon. friend from North Lanark (Mr. Rosamond). This letter is from Mr. Robert Meighen, who advances arguments pointing to the couclusion that in the future we may expect very much the larger portion, in fact all of the grain traffic of the west to come to the east via Lake Superior. After stating, in the first place, that he does not propose to give any opinion one way or another with regard to the proposals before parliament, but merely to give his views as a business man, he says :

> I have put my views on record in the public press nine years ago that but a small portion of the products of Manitoba or the North-west Territories will ever be brought round the north of Lake Superior by an all-rail route to tide-water. My opinion has not changed—you will never bring but a small portion of the products of our prairies by either the Grand Trunk Pacific or the Canadian Pacific by an all-rail route, and only a small portion can ever be brought to tide-water by our Canadian canals.
> The farmer begins to dispose of his yearly crop of wheat from about the first to the tenth of September, and by the close of navigation if the transportation facilities in the interior to Fort William are adequate, two-thirds of the crop will have gone forward to the lake front by close of navigation, say 12th December.

You can operate vessels from Fort William across the lake to Georgian bay ports up to the 12th December. What we require is elevating facilities east of the lakes the same as they have at Buffalo. We require low grade double track railways from Montreal to the said Georgian bay ports ; when that is accomplished you will freight the wheat across the lakes from Fort Wiliam east to the elevators at from three-quarters to one cent per bushel. The railways wil carry the wheat from Georgian bay ports to Montreal for 3½ cents per bushel or less, winter and summer ; you will have our lake elevators acting as large reservoirs for holding the immense body of grain that will be shipped across the lakes before navigation closes, which will act as freight for our railways during the winter months to Halifax and St. John, our winter ports.

The balance of the Manitoba crop, or the Territories, will be held either in the farmers' hands, or in the interior elevators, or at Fort William until navigation opens on the first of May.

From the foregoing you will observe that a railway round the north of Lake Superior as far as being a factor in diverting the products of our North-west through the all-Canadian channel, in my opinion will be a failure.

The fact of the matter is we are a great many years behind the times ; we should have had elevator facilities at Georgian bay ports ; we should have had a fleet of vessels on the lakes to carry the grain from Fort William to Georgian bay ports ; we should have been far as being a factor in diverting the products of our North-west years ago ; what is the position to-day ?

Mark my words, a considerable portion of our North-west grain in the near future will be diverted to the south to be shipped from Duluth to Buffalo, and from there by American railways to tide-water. By the policy we have adopted, and what we have neglected to adopt, we are furnishing transportation for our American railways ; we are placing our western people in touch with the American middleman ; we are doing our business by the back door.

In a word we will never be in a position to handle the products of the North-west until the transportation in the prairie provinces is capable of handling two-thirds of the crop and delivering it at the lake front, say Fort William, before navigation closes, and the facilities for freighting the wheat across the lakes to our elevators, and railway facilities of the proper kind, as I have described for carrying the wheat from the lake elevators to Montreal and Quebec during the season of navigation on the St. Lawrence, and to St. John and Halifax after close of navigation. But you will never bring but a small portion of the Manitoba crop round the north of Lake Superior by an all-rail route to tide-water. A double-track low grade railway from Montreal to say Midland or some other Georgian bay port will be capable of handling two hundred million bushels of wheat during the year, and as I have said, place an engine to 80 cars on a railway such as I describe, and you can haul it to Montreal. However the contents of 80 cars will be condensed into a much smaller number, but the amount of grain that will be contained in 80 of our present cars will be hauled by one engine from the lake port to Montreal.

I can assure you I look upon the present state of affairs, as far as the transportation question is concerned, as presenting anything but a bright future. I am afraid that before you are much older, you will see a very considerable portion of the products of Manitoba and the North-west Teritories diverted to the south of us.

I would point out that if the views of this gentleman, who has given this question a great deal of study, are correct, then we may expect an enormous amount of the grain traffic of the west, in fact practically all of that grain traffic, to come to the western shores of Lake Superior and then the extension of the Intercolonial to the eastern shore of Lake Superior will give that railway the opportunity which, as the Minister of Customs said, is so much to be desired, of competing on equal terms with other railways for the grain traffic of the west. The hon. the Postmaster General referred with some scorn to my proposal as to the erection of elevators, yet this gentleman, who is familiar with the business affairs of the country, familiar with the problem of transportation, expressly lays stress upon the necessity of having large elevators not only on the western shore but on the eastern shore of Lake Superior. As the hon. the Postmaster General thinks it so absurd a thing that the government should enter into competition with private enterprise, let me point out to him that this government has already done that. They have erected an elevator at Halifax, following in that regard the example of the late government. There, however, they are not competing with private enterprise in one sense as there is no other elevator in Halifax. But the government went further and erected an elevator and terminals at an enormous cost, in the city of St. John where that elevator and terminals are expressly in competition with the elevator and terminals of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Further than that, the policy of the government, as announced by the Minister of Railways of the day, declared that these terminals and that elevator at St. John were built for the express purpose of securing a considerable portion of the grain traffic of the west, in competition with the Canadian Pacific Railway. Therefore when we suggest that the government should erect necessary elevators on Lake Superior and elsewhere on the St. Lawrence route and at maritime ports, we are in that only suggesting the continuation of a policy which has already been entered upon by the Conservative government of years ago and by the present government since they came into power.

The next point of criticism I wish to make upon the proposal of the government is that there is no return of any kind for the vast expenditure that is contemplated. There is no control secured by this measure over rates in the west or in the east beyond the general control of the law of this country applicable to all railways. In that regard the railway policy of the government falls far short of that which was entered upon some two or three years ago by the government of the province of Manitoba, which, in return for aid ganted to railways, obtained stipulations in the form of a contract as to the control which it should exercise over rates. We are told that certain very low rates are to prevail upon this road from Winnipeg to Quebec, or to Halifax, or St. John, but when any suggestion is made that some stipulation should be placed in the contract as to the actual amount of these rates, that there should be some guarantee to the people of this country that the rates so suggested shall be the rates at which the products of the west shall be carried over the road, we are met at once by the government with a refusal to insert any such stipulation in the contract.

The next criticism which ought to be made upon this railway policy of the government is that it aims by means of a short continental route to develop at the same time the great northern country of Ontario and Quebec for colonization purposes. I have pointed out that the development of the country for colonization cannot be accomplished by the construction of a short through route, and I believe that to be the fact, because a short through route, even if practicable for the purp se indicated from Winnipeg to Quebec and Moncton, is not likely to be, in fact cannot possibly be, the kind of road which would best be suited for the development of a country for colonization purposes.

Further than that, the proposal of the government pledges the credit of this country to the extent of between $100,000,000 and $150,000,000 for the construction of this railway upon data absolutely insufficient and utterly wanting in the important details that we should have before an enterprise of this kind is entered upon. The construction of this railway from Winnipeg to Quebec and Moncton as a grain carrying road can only be regarded at the present time as an experiment, because we have not that accurate information that such a road can be built for the purpose with any hope of its being operated upon a reasonable basis. We cannot believe that such a road can be constructed at such a cost as would result in rates that would meet those by the lake and rail route.

In regard to the alternative proposition which has been suggested by myself, I want to say in the first place that it does not propose to proceed with any measure of railway extension until ample information has been obtained on all essential points. It was made a condition precedent to the proposal that I submitted to the House that we should secure the best expert advice and assistance before proceeding with so great a scheme as this. In the next place, I say that it secures effective control of rates as far as the commerce between the east and the west is concerned by the extension of the Intercolonial Railway to western points. In the fourth place, it aims at utilizing and developing the great inland water ways of Canada and demands equipment as speedily as the resources of the country will permit of the Georgian bay, St. Lawrence and maritime ports. In the fifth place, the Intercolonial Railway having been extended at a great cost to Montreal, my scheme aims at giving it further extension towards the west to such points as will enable it to secure western traffic and looks to the ultimate extension to the Pacific coast. I wish to say that I have the support of two very important members on the other side of the House as to the extension of the Intercolonial Railway westward. In addressing this House during the last session the hon. member for Saskatchewan (Mr. Davis), as will be found at page 3676 of 'Hansard,' spoke as follows :

> I believe that the government made a mistake in not having bought the control of the Canada Atlantic Railway some time ago. The Intercolonial Railway should have been extended from Montreal to Depot Harbour on the great lakes so as to give an outlet by the government road from the great lakes to the sea-board.

Exactly the policy which I have been advocating in this House during the discussion upon this Bill, and exactly the policy which was put forward by the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) in regard to future railway extension in this country. Further than that, my hon. friend from Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) also spoke along the same lines. I find at page 8741 of 'Hansard' of this year that in speaking in regard to this very measure he used the following language :

> But there is one thing I do wish to say, and that is in connection with the proposition made by the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) in regard to the extension of the Intercolonial Railway to the Georgian bay, in order that that railway might participate in the traffic which comes over the lakes. I have a strong sympathy with that idea ; but I recognize that this scheme is in no sense a barrier to the final carying out of that great project.

An hon. MEMBER. Hear, hear.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Well, if it is in no sense a barrier to the carrying out of that great project, and if the extension of the Intercolonial Railway is a part of the project of the government, I trust that the hon. Postmaster General, or some hon. gentleman on the other side of the House, will be good enough to add to the cost of the government proposal the cost which they have already assigned to that part of my proposal which contemplates the extension of the Intercolonial Railway to the shores of the Georgian bay. As has been suggested by some of my hon. friends around me, I imagine that the cost of that part of my proposal, when it comes to be investigated from the standpoint of hon. gentlemen opposite will be found to be very much under the sum of $15,000,000 or $17,000,000 which has been so assigned by the hon. Postmaster General in connection with my proposal. In the next place the proposal which I have made to the House takes into account the necessity of developing the great country north of Quebec and Ontario and it aims at accomplishing this by colonization roads built as the requirements of settlement demand so as to bring the newly developed regions into closer touch with the other portions of the settled provinces. It contemplates the necessity of building colonization lines into that country as the requirements of settlements may demand. We believe that the colonization of that country can be best undertaken and carried out by roads which advance gradually, but as rapidly as may be necessary, from the settled points in Ontario and Quebec into these northern regions as settlement proceeds and as these parts of the country are opened up. We do not believe that a through road, a road designed for the carriage of through freight can accomplish colonization and settlement in those portions of the country as rapidly as roads built for the purpose and constructed along the lines which I have already indicated. In the next place my proposal aims at bringing immediately two great railway systems of the west and three great railway systems of the east into almost immediate connection with each other over Canadian territory. The Canadian Pacific Railway, one of the systems of the west and of the east has of course already connection along the north of Lake Superior. The utilization of a line so built will enable the Grand Trunk Railway in the east and the Canadian Northern Railway in the west to get the connection with other portions of the Dominion which it is eminently desirable that these two roads should have. In the next place my proposal aims at the development of our railway system not only through the unsettled northern portions of the provinces of Ontario and Quebec but also through the settled portions of Ontario and Quebec which in many respects are in need of further railway development in order to give them that position in connection with the commerce of this country to which they are reasonably entitled.

When we can have the commerce of this country carried cheaply by the great lakes and through the settled portions of the provinces of Ontario and Quebec to the ports of Montreal and Quebec and the maritime provinces; it is not desirable that we should enter into the experiment of building a railroad through northern Ontario and Quebec, with the idea of making it answer the purpose of a short through transportation route, as well as the purpose of a colonization road. We have every reason to believe that this railroad cannot fulfil these two conditions; but by extending the Intercolonial Railway, which is already of so much importance to the people of the maritime provinces, to the shores of the Georgian bay and, if necessary, further west, even to the Pacific ocean; we bind together the whole of Canada by a road which will be owned by the people themselves and over which they can have control. And lastly, Sir, I may say that the extension of the Intercolonial Railway, even to the shores of the Georgian bay, must necessarily—for the reasons I have stated over and over again, and which are so succinctly stated in the letter of Mr. Meighen—must necessarily bring a very considerable portion of the western traffic, not only to the ports of Montreal and Quebec, but also to the ports of Halifax and St. John. I am sorry to have detained the House at so great length, and I will bring my remarks to a conclusion by moving the amendment, notice of which has already been given by my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk). I beg to move, seconded by Dr. Sproule:

That all the words after 'that' in the main motion be left out and the following substituted therefor:—

1. It is not expedient to ratify the agreement set forth in the schedule to the Bill now before this House entitled: An Act respecting the construction of a National Transcontinental Railway.

2. That the government has failed to lay before the House such information as would justify parliament in committing the country to the agreement as a whole and especially to that portion of the agreement which provides for the construction of nearly nineteen hundred miles of railway constituting the eastern section of the railway therein mentioned.

3. That the government in declaring its policy in the speech from the Throne at the opening of the present session gave a direct and specific pledge that it would immediately appoint a commission of experienced men to report on the whole question of transportation and terminal facilities.

4. That in pursuance of this pledge the government on the 19th day of May, 1903, by an Order in Council touching the questions affecting transportation in Canada further declared its policy in the following words:—

'The questions to be considered are complicated and involved, including among the objects to be sought the transportation of western products from place of production to the markets of the world.

This involves the consideration of their transportation:—

From place of production to Canadian seaports.

From place of production to the western ports of Lake Superior.

From the western ports of Lake Superior to Canadian seaports.

From Canadian seaports to Europe.

From place of production through Canadian ports on the Pacific.

As it affects the products of the eastern provinces of Canada it involves their movement:—

To the seaports.

From the seaports to Europe.

It is obvious that before any satisfactory conclusion can be reached upon these questions a thorough and comprehensive inquiry should be made regarding:—

The conditions of original shipment and the possibilities of improvement in the conditions surrounding such shipments.

The storage requirements of lake, river and ocean ports.

The harbour facilities of the inland lakes, rivers and Atlantic and Pacific ports.

The conditions with regard to the navigation of the St. Lawrence route, and, generally any improvement, enlargement or other matters affecting the more economical and satisfactory uses of any Canadian channel of transportation by land or water.

In making any such investigation attention should not be confined to routes and facilities which are at present utilized but, if necessary, new surveys should be made to determine whether any more economical and satisfactory channels of transportation by land or water can be opened up.

The forces operating against the attainment of all Canadian transport, namely,

Competition by United States railways ;

Competition by United States vessels from Lake Superior ports ; diversions of Canadian products through eastern outlets to Boston, Portland and other United States ports, should be investigated, and the best and most economical methods used by our competitors should be carefully studied and reported upon.

In these circumstances it devolves upon the Dominion government to consider and adopt the best possible means of promoting such measures as may enable Canada to control the transportation of its own products, and it is thought that the most efficient method of conducting such an inquiry and obtaining the required information is by means of a commission of competent and experienced experts.'

5. That no such inquiry or investigation has been conducted or held and the 'required information' referred to in the Order in Council above quoted has not been obtained or laid before this House.

6. That this House is of opinion that the Intercolonial Railway and the Prince Edward Island Railway should continue to be owned and operated by the government of Canada.

7. That the government system of railways should be developed and improved in the province of Quebec and in the maritime provinces and should also be extended from Montreal westward to such point or points as will enable it to transport to eastern Canada and to our national ports on the St. Lawrence and on the Atlantic the rapidly increasing products of our great western country.

8. That by

(a.) Developing and extending the government system of railways either by the construction of new lines, or sections of railway, or by acquiring and improving existing lines of railway ;

(b.) Securing under government control and direction or where expedient under government ownership, common haulage or running facilities in sections where one railway can usefully accommodate several systems ;

(c.) Giving, if and where necessary, material aid by way of guarantee or otherwise, to railway construction in the great west, and to colonization railways in the older provinces.

(d.) Enlarging and improving our canal system, developing our magnificent lake and river routes and thoroughly equipping our national ports on the great lakes, the St. Lawrence and the Atlantic sea-board ;

(e.) Perfecting a system of elevator warehousing, and creating free terminal facilities, and

(f.) Securing absolute and thorough control of rates in consideration for assistance thus given;

We would open up new territories, provide for our products the best and cheapest transport to the Atlantic and Pacific sea-boards, connect without delay the great railway systems of the east and of the west, relieve any threatened congestion of traffic and secure the transportation of our products through Canadian channels while at the same time we would stimulate and promote interprovincial trade between the various communities by whom the cost of such national undertakings must necessarily be mainly borne.

9. That the management of government railways and of all railways under the control or direction of the government should be freed from party political control, influence and interference.

10. That for the purpose of accomplishing these results the government in accordance with the policy laid down in the Order in Council above recited should avail itself of the best expert advice and assistance before seeking to commit the country to expenditure upon any national transportation scheme or project.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). My hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) has devoted the greater portion of his not at all short speech not so much to an attack on the measure which is now before the House as to a defence of his own policy. It is rather significant that on the third reading of this Bill, which has been before the House for two months, the hon. gentleman should feel himself called upon to devote so much energy and so much time to defend a scheme which, in my opinion, he never was called upon to lay before parliament. The hon. gentleman seems to be conscious of the weakness of the policy which he brought to the attention of the country as an alternative, so he says, to the project of the government. I call the attention of the House to the fact that my hon. friend spoke, and his conclusion came after his speech, as night follows day, and his conclusion resembles his speech about as much as night resembles day ; because, if you take the amendment and compare it with the speech, you will find that the amendment has no connection at all with the policy which we have heard dilated upon by the hon. gentleman.

Sir, if anything were needed to justify the policy which the government have introduced to the attention of the House and this country as a necessity of our present situation, there would be justification—nay, there would be complete vindication—in the attitude and conduct of the opposition from its initial step to this last stage. It was remarkable that in the debate which took place on the original resolutions introduced by the government—a debate which lasted some three weeks, in which the whole of the opposition participated from the leader down through all the ranks of the party, in which the policy of the government was subjected to microscopic and minute fault-finding, in which hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House vied with each other as to which could show the greatest ingenuity in splitting hairs and weighing grains of sand—the opposition as a whole never dared to concentrate their criticism in an amendment, so that we could have a line of cleavage clear and distinct between them and the government. It was no less remarkable than when it came to the turn of the leader himself to speak, he rose and delivered a carefully prepared speech, and after having spoken the better part of three hours, he sat down without moving an amendment. The farthest he would go, the most he would dare, was simply to throw out as a feeler some suggestions or ideas, not by way of affirmation, but like the legs of a spider spreading in all directions, but against which immediately some of his followers commenced to kick most vigorously. During those three weeks we had words in abundance, torrents of eloquence, speeches in endless streams; but to those speeches there was no conclusion, and the words were wholly negative. But at last, after the opposition had been taunted in a most admirable speech by my hon. friend the Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson) at having no policy to offer but simply indulging in negative criticism, the speech of the hon. member for Toronto was interrupted in order that notice might be given to us of the tenor of an amendment which should be moved by the hon. leader of the opposition, who was unfortunately absent at that time—not on the third reading of the Bill, but on the concurrence of the resolutions. At last we have that amendment. Let us compare it with the speech of my hon. friend. In the speech which he delivered some time ago he was most precise as to his policy. It was genuine, we understood what it meant. First of all, it meant an extension of the Intercolonial Railway from Montreal to the shores of the Georgian bay. This was a counter proposition which everybody could understand. Next his proposition was to buy the section of the Canadian Pacific Railway from North Bay station to Fort William. This also was a specific undertaking which everybody could understand. If that proposition, which was advocated and defended with great eloquence, were embodied in this resolution, we could understand it; we would have a line of cleavage. But what is the tenor of the resolution of my hon. friend? He has contended that the Intercolonial Railway should be extended to the shores of the Georgian bay; but this is not what he says in the resolution. In the resolution he says this:

> That the Intercolonial Railway and the Prince Edward Island Railway should continue to be owned and operated by the government of Canada.

Well, who has put that in issue? Who has heard in this debate of any proposal to sell the Intercolonial Railway to anybody? And what is the reason for affirming that the Intercolonial Railway must continue to be owned and operated by the government? Then, he says:

> That the government system of railways should be developed and improved in the province of Quebec and in the maritime provinces, and should also be extended from Montreal westward to such point or points as will enable it to transport to eastern Canada and to our national ports on the St. Lawrence and on the Atlantic the rapidly increasing products of our great western country.

There is not a word here to the effect that this should be done by the acquisition of the Canada Atlantic Railway. This is what the government propose to do—to extend our railway communication westward, so as to bring the trade of the western country to the St. Lawrence and to our maritime ports. But my hon. friend is a wily politician. He wants to give just enough to his followers to enable them to say: See where we are; we are in favour of developing the trade of the country and bringing it to our eastern ports; but we do not want to commit ourselves; we speak, but we do not work and do not act. My hon. friend will pardon me if I say that he reminds me of the old fable—I say it without offence—of the bat who one day fell among the birds, and said, 'I am one of yourselves—look at my wings,' and the next day he found himself among the rats, and said, 'I am one of yourselves—look at my claws.' When my hon. friend asks his followers to declare themselves, he is rather chary. He is careful to keep to generalities for which all can vote but on which no one need commit himself to anything in particular. But since my hon. friend has today devoted a great deal of energy and time to a discussion of the policy which he will not dare to put in the form of an amendment, perhaps it will not be amiss if we give some examination to what he calls his policy. And I may say to my hon. friend that I shall be much surprised if, when we come to examine what he so complacently calls his policy, the country does not come to the conclusion that it is not practicable and will not bear criticism.

Let me come to the question of the acquisition of the Canada Atlantic Railway as an extension of the Intercolonial to the shores of the Georgian bay. There is a gap between the terminus of the Intercolonial Railway at Montreal and the commencement of the Canada Atlantic Railway at Coteau. How does my hon. friend propose to fill that gap? He has gone deeply into the subject, and that point has not escaped him. He has given us a plan, and what is that plan? That having acquired the Canada Atlantic Railway from the shores of Georgian bay, not to Coteau, but to somewhere in the state of Vermont, we should build an extension of the Intercolonial from Jacques Cartier Junction to Coteau. But my hon. friend seems to forget that at this moment between Montreal and Coteau there are already two lines of railway—one built by the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the other built several years before by the Grand Trunk Railway; and that between these two lines, for three-fourths of their length, there is not a distance of more than half a mile. They run within sight of each other, and any passenger can see the trains racing with one another almost every day. Between these two railways and the river there is a distance of not more than one mile. Does my hon. friend seriously contemplate building another line of railway in this distance of 30 miles, when we could be accommodated in another manner? In another part of his speech my hon. friend has advocated the acquisition by this government of that section of the Canadian Pacific Railway betweeen North Bay and Fort William, and making it a common highway. Does it not occur to my hon. friend that if we acquired the Canada Atlantic, it would be more reasonable for us to acquire one of the existing lines between Coteau and Montreal? It seems to me that this part of my hon. friend's scheme cannot bear criticism. However, in view of the great improbability of Canada acquiring and operating the Canada Atlantic Railway, this is not of very great importance.

I come now to the main proposition of my hon. friend. He proposes to acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway as it exists to-day. But though the government may acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway, it certainly could not operate it. How could you expect that a Canadian government could possibly, with any advantage to the country, operate the Canada Atlantic Railway. It is within the knowledge of everybody that at this moment three-fourths at least of the business of the Canadian Pacific Railway and three-fourths of the business of the Canada Atlantic Railway is American business. It is business connected with the western states and carried to its destination in the eastern states. The Canadian government could not compete for that business if we were to acquire that railway. At present the manager of the Canada Atlantic Railway has connections and agents in Duluth, Milwaukee, Chicago and other points in the west, and in New York, Boston and other cities in the east, collecting freight in the east for the western states and in the west for the eastern states. Now, would it be possible for the Canadian government to maintain those agents in American cities and keep connections there in order to collect that trade now passing over our territory? That trade is an advantage to our country and we want to keep it. In my opinion we must be the carriers by the valley of the St. Lawrence, not only of the products of our own North-west but of the American North-west and also the traffic of the eastern states. That American business we would lose. Not only that. In order to secure that trade, the Canada Atlantic has to maintain a fleet of steamers on the lakes. I doubt how far it would be advisable for a government to become not only railway proprietors but also navigators. We would have to manage a fleet of steamers. There is something more. The fleet maintained on the lakes for the purpose of supplying traffic to the Canada Atlantic Railway is composed in part of American bottoms. It would be impossible to have the trade we have to-day unless it was carried in American bottoms. We can carry Canadian freight in Canadian bottoms, but you cannot take freight at Duluth, Chicago or Milwaukee or any of the western ports and bring it to Depot Harbour except in American bottoms. The bonding privilege of the Americans has been so devised as to make that a necessity. Therefore the Canadian government would have to become the owners of a fleet of steamers under American register. How would that work? The whole thing is so beset with difficulties that it would be impossible to carry it out as a government enterprise. Of course if you want to give up the American business and confine yourself to the Canadian business, the scheme of my honourable friend might be workable, but there is not a man in this country, not even my hon. friend, who would be willing that Canada should part with this American business. On the contrary we want to increase it. Therefore in my opinion, the scheme of my hon. friend in so far as the acquisition of the Canada Atlantic Railway is concerned, is not practicable.

My hon. friend asked a moment ago what are you going to do with the Intercolonial. His scheme would be to bring the Intercolonial to the shores of North Bay, but our scheme is to bring it, not merely to the shores of the Georgian bay, but to the city of Winnipeg, the heart of the provinces.

Another part of his scheme—one which, I think, he will have some difficulty in getting even his own friends to agree to, and I am not surprised that he would not put it into the concrete form of an amendment and ask his followers to swallow it—is this. He has seriously proposed that the Canadian government should acquire the Canadian Pacific Railway line between North Bay and Fort William. Why should he propose such a scheme? First of all, we ought to be thankful on this side for his having proposed the idea, made as it is, because it is a justification of our policy. But he admits that we must have railway communications between the east and the west. This is the very basis of the scheme we have submitted. My hon. friend has acknowledged that the basis is a good one. He justifies our scheme by proposing that we should acquire that part of the Canadian Pacific Railway line. But he does not want to have that connection between the east and the west in the way we desire. He has a scheme of his own. In what respect is it superior to ours? We have proposed to build a railway between the east and the west. In what respect is his scheme to buy the Canadian Pacific Railway from North Bay to Fort William superior to ours? Is it from the point of view of expenditure? Will the plan he proposes be cheaper than ours ? We have been told that that section of country between North Bay and Fort William has cost at least $60,000 a mile and in parts $80,000 a mile. I think my hon. friend from Macdonald (Mr. Boyd) said that portions of that section had cost $80,000 per mile. He proposes that we should acquire that line, and what does he propose that we should do with it. He does not propose that we should use it at once but that we should spend more money to improve it. Is that a proposition which will commend itself to any intelligent electors—that we should acquire that railway, and after acquiring it for heaven knows how much, we should at once put more money into it in order to make it acceptable? We know the character of that country. It is all rocky. Between Sudbury and Fort William it is granite. You would have to bore into that granite and spend perhaps $50,000 and more per mile in order to make the road more acceptable. Is there any advantage in such a scheme over the one we proposed, namely, that we should built a road ourselves? My hon. friend did not give us any figures. In that he was very wise. He was judiciously vague and would not take any responsibility for any details. And I say that, in point of smallness of expenditure, it is impossible to show that this scheme would be superior to ours, while, in every other way it is inferior. It is inferior to our scheme, for instance, because the character of the country through which the road proposed by my hon. friend would run is so inferior to that of the country through which the road as proposed by us would run. On the north shore of Lake Superior you have nothing but bleak rock. It is impossible to raise even a potato or a turnip in that section of the country—it is nothing but rock and water and is absolutely barren ; whereas, we have abundance of evidence to show that the proposed route for this road is through a fertile country with abundance of timber. But that is not all. My hon. friend has shown a great deal of concern as to the trade going to maritime province ports. He shed a tear the other day over the idea that, under our scheme, the trade would probably go to Portland. But that is only his hypothesis. That the trade under his scheme would go to Portland is not hypothesis, but certainty. The communication between the east and the west, under my hon. friend's scheme would be by the line between North Bay and Fort William. But when you get the traffic from the west to North Bay, you have only the existing roads, the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific Railway. That being so, the traffic must go to Montreal in summer and to Portland in winter. By our scheme we have the intention and the possibility of bringing this trade to the maritime provinces—and we believe we have the certainty as well. These are some of the reasons which make the scheme of my hon. friend absolutely impracticable.

But I must say that my hon. friend deserves some gratitude at our hands, because he has paid the tribute of admiration—involuntarily I admit—to our scheme. I know that, in his speech, he condemned our scheme in toto. But, having condemned it in toto, he accepted it piecemeal. The hon. gentleman in speaking afforded a curious psychological study. It was a case of the contest of conscience with party exigencies. Party exigencies said : You must condemn the scheme. And he condemned it. But my hon. friend is a lawyer, and a good lawyer. He has had experience of course, with the recalcitrant witness, the witness who would swear a certain version of the facts which my hon. friend thought not in accordance with the probabilities of the case. And he would proceed to examine that witness. He would not take issue with him at once, would not contradict him flatly, but would proceed gently to get an admission upon a minor point, then another, and another, until he had a statement of the facts as he conceived them to have been. Such a struggle as that did conscience carry on, quite apparent to those who had the pleasure of listening to the hon. gentleman. The recalcitrant witness, party exigencies, gave a total condemnation of the scheme. But after this witness had proceeded, conscience spoke in the heart of my hon. friend—for I believe he is a man of conscience as well as a man of common sense—and conscience fortified by common sense spoke : You have condemned the whole scheme, but don't you think you have gone a little too far ; don't you think there is some merit in the scheme? For instance, you have condemned absolutely the Moncton line. Don't you think the Moncton line is a necessity. Don't you think we must have another road between the maritime provinces and the west ? That the trade of the country cannot be confined to a single line between the western prairies, Ontario, Quebec and the maritime provinces? And the unwilling witness answers: Yes, I admit that ; I might build that—yes, I would build that road between Moncton and the west ; but I would do it only as part of the Intercolonial. I might quote the remarks of my hon. friend to prove that I have not misunderstood what he said, but perhaps it would be better to pass on. Having secured this admission, conscience proceeded with the cross-examination. Well—said conscience—don't you think that, after all, this section of road in the northern part of Quebec and Ontario must be built some time and that it ought to be built ? Yes, was the answer. I think that that line of railway ought to be built, but I would build it as a colonization road. Well, Mr. Speaker, I do not care very much whether it is built as a colonization road or as a through road provided it is built. Then conscience goes on : Surely that is not all ; you must know that it is imperative at this moment that we should have another means of communication by rail between the east and the west and that the government is right in proposing that a line should be built covering these two points. And the answer is: Yes; but I do not want to build the road; there is a road already built and I propose to buy it. Well, I do not care very much whether it is made one way or the other so long as it is done. Then conscience said: The prairie section must be built; the prairies are developing so rapidly and so thoroughly that present railways are inadequate and the people who are going in there must have means of communication. And again comes the admission: Yes, that road must be built—but it must be built north of existing railways. Well, north or south is not a point that has yet been settled. The point settled is that there must be a road, and it is for the engineers to say whether it is to be built north or south. Then conscience went on to say: The mountain section has to be built. Yes, he had no objection to that, but simply said: I would force the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern to unite in building that road and if they would not agree I would build it myself. Well, if the hon. gentleman accepts the mountain section, the prairie section, the sections between Winnipeg and Quebec—whether colonization or otherwise—and the road to Moncton what is it that he does not agree to? He does not agree to it without qualification. But, when he has put in all these qualifications, the admissions are there just the same.

Now, my hon. friend says we have not sufficient information as to the character of that country. It is true, we have not instrumental surveys; but I maintain—and would appeal to hon. gentlemen on the other side and I would appeal to my hon. friend himself—we have all the information as to the character of the country that is at all necessary for our present purpose; all the information, all the knowledge, to justify us in saying whether that road should or should not be built. I stated in my opening speech on this subject that there were mountains of information; I do not retract a word I said—there are mountains of information. The eastern legend tells us that when the mountain would not come to Mahomet, Mahomet went to the mountain. But our Mahomets on the other side would not go to the mountain, and so we had to bring the mountain to them, or, at least as nearly that as possible. Of course we could not bring this mountain of information and lay it on the Table, the Table is not strong enough to bear it. We had to summarize it in the form of a pamphlet printed and placed in the hands of hon. gentlemen opposite. And if they had taken the trouble to peruse it, they would have learned that the character of the country through which this road is to run, which has been so greatly misrepresented, is a country equal to some of the best parts of the older provinces, a country with a great future. But my hon. friend to-day made an argument which he has repeated several times, and which I have always heard with some surprise from him. He has told us that we have not been consistent because we decided on this railway before we had received the report of the transportation commission which we had appointed?

My hon. friend says that we promised that report before any steps would be taken with regard to this transcontinental railway, but upon this point I take issue with my hon. friend. It is not exact on his part to say that we had promised a report of this transportation commission before we would bring up our policy with regard to a transcontinental railway. This question was before the House twice during the present session. We discussed it on the debate on the address and again on the 26th of May. During the debate on the address, I stated, speaking for the government, that this transportation commission was to be appointed for the purpose of obtaining information with regard to lake transportation and terminals and connection with the lakes, but we did not require further information with regard to a transcontinental railway as we had all the information in regard to that which we required. As my hon. friend has made that the text of his motion to-day, it will be perhaps better that I should once more furnish the evidence upon this point and call the attention of my hon. friend and of the House to the information which we gave him upon this very subject. The speech from the Throne had this paragraph:

> The great influx of population into our North-western territories and the very large additional areas of fertile land which are being brought under cultivation combine to further press upon us the need for increased transportation facilities for the forwarding of our grain and other products to the markets of the world, through Canadian channels. The whole question of transportation and terminal facilities continues to occupy much attention, and my government will immediately appoint a commission of experienced men to report on the subject.

My hon. friend thought that there were two different ideas in that paragraph and he asked for an explanation from the government on this point. We told him that he was right; that there were two ideas, one with regard to the transcontinental railway and another with regard to water communication. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden, Halifax) very properly raised the question in the debate on the address and I answered as follows:

> The question asked by my hon. friend is quite legitimate. There are two ideas involved in this paragraph. In the first place, the rapid filling up of the North-west territories makes it absolutely indispensable that measures be promptly taken for opening up ways of communication into the prairie sections and for the extension of those communications to the sea-board. Numerous projects have been placed before us, but up to the present the government have taken no position. The matter is one of too great importance, involving too many risks, involving large demands, for the government to lightly jump into new undertakings of any kind, and we thought it desirable to wait the opening of parliament in order to consult our friends and have the benefit of the advice of parliament before taking any steps. But we give due warning to the Canadian parliament—and I think it is not out of place—that new efforts have to be made by the Canadian people to meet the new requirements resulting from the development of our country.

Now you see there was an indication as plain as language could make it that we made a difference between water transportation and transportation by means of a new railway.

But the subject came up later on on a motion of my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) on May 26th. My hon. friend became impatient and wanted to know what was the policy of the government in regard to this transportation question, especially in regard to this commission. He made a speech and concluded with these words :

I think therefore, Mr. Speaker, that under the circumstances, I am justified in asking the Prime Minister to take the House and the country into his confidence with regard to this matter, and to make that announcement of policy which it seems to me should have been made long ago in this session whch has already occupied nearly three months ; and to state to us fully and frankly what we are to expect from the government in the shape of a policy on a question of so much importance to the most vital interests of the country.

I answered, speaking for the government, in this way :

In my humble judgment, the transportation question under existing conditions, resolves itself into three different parts. First of all there is the question of water transportation, chiefly connected with the terminals. Then there is the transportation question for the new and rapidly growing settlements in the prairie sections ; and then there is the question of transportation from the prairie sections to the sea-board. With regard to the first, this is the question which we had chiefly in our minds when at the opening of parliament we declared that the transportation question was engaging our attention, and that we intended to appoint a commission to deal with the subject. We have been carrying on works of great magnitude at all parts of our great water system, in order to develop it and to make the transportation of the products of the west, and of the products going from the east to the west cheaper to the producer and to the consumer. We have works on the great lakes ; we have works on the St. Lawrence ; we have works at Port Arthur and Fort William, and it is possible that we may require some more. We have works at the head of canal navigation at Port Colborne which are now under construction ; we have works in the city of Montreal which have been carried on both by the Harbour Commission there and by the government ; we have works at Sorel and Three Rivers carried on by the government ; we have works at Quebec and we have also extensive works in St. John, New Brunswick. Now, I think it may be said that all these works have been carried on, not under any general system, but chiefly from the local point of view of each particular place. We deem it of the greatest importance to have, if possible, all these different works carried on under a general comprehensive system. Before we ask for more money to be expended upon them, we think that it is advisable to have the report of a commission of the best experts that we have in the country in order that we may be able to lay before parliament at this session or next session a comprehensive plan, as to what should be done in these different localities or in other localities in order to meet the object in view.

Nothing could be plainer, it seems to me, than the fact that it was the intention of the government that the commission should deal with water transportation and terminals. I proceeded to say :

There is another feature of the system of transportation to be considered. At the present time the west is filling very rapidly. Next year the valley of the Saskatchewan will be one of the greatest producing areas of the country. It is of immediate necessity therefore that another artery in the form of a railway should be built in order to afford the settlers not only an outlet for their products, but a means of bringing in what they require from the eastern provinces. Probably this week, certainly at an early day, it will be the duty of the government to lay on the Table of the House certain resolutions with regard to this railway. But apart from that, there is another scheme which has been engaging the attention of the House and the country at large. It is generally accepted, I believe, at the present time, that we must have another trunk line to connect the producing centres of the prairies with the tidal waters of the east. This is the point which my hon. friend had chiefly in view when he spoke a moment ago. I may say to my hon. friend at once that the government are not connected, though he implied that they were, with any scheme which has been proposed. We are considering the matter, but I am not prepared to say that we can at this moment lay on the Table the conclusions at which we have arrived ; but we shall deem it our duty to do so before the session is over.

Now, Sir, there was an intimation as clear it seems to me as language could make it, that we required the transportation commission to inquire into the subject of water communication, and did not require any more information with regard to the transcontinental railway which we have proposed. In view of the attitude which has been taken that we must have the easiest possible new means of communication between the east and the west it seems to me that it would be idle for me to spend any more time in justifying our course in this regard. It has been justified not only by our hon. friends on this side of the House but still more by the attitude of our hon. friends opposite in this respect. My hon. friend the leader of the opposition stated this morning that we have in the contract failed to provide proper safeguards in order to ensure the trade of the west going by way of Canadian ports. My hon. friend said nothing new this morning. That point has been met over and over again, it was answered completely the other day by my hon. friend the Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson) and therefore nothing is left for me to add to what has already been said. I do not need to say another word upon it. My hon. friend says that he looks upon this scheme as an alternative one to the water route ? If the plan which my hon. friend proposed some few days ago were adopted would that be an alternative to the water route ? Suppose we were to acquire control of the Canadian Pacific Railway from North Bay to Fort William, as my hon. friend proposes in order to establish communication between the east and the west, would that be an alternative to the water route? No, Sir, the water route and the railways have to go together. One is not an alternative to the other. They are a necessary complement to each other. My hon. friend stated a moment ago that we must have water communication. Since we have been in office we have done more than any other government have done to improve our water communication. We have spent in the neighbourhood of $16,000,000 in improving the water communication and as a result up to this year, up to this moment, there has been more grain transportation upon the St. Lawrence than in any year for the last thirty years. No one proposes that if we open this new railway, ofr which we are askin a grant, that water communication shall be closed. They depend upon each other. It is true that the water communication will be closed for six months in the year; blt the people will have the rail communication, and their business will not be closed down as it was before the railway era. There was a time when the merchants of Quebec, of Montreal, and of Toronto at the close of navigation were obliged to close up everything, and sit with their arms folded until the following spring. But as soon as the railway era came in it was possible to make every day a working day whether it was summer or winter. My hon. friends from the North-west Territories and Manitoba understand the situation better than I do and I appeal to my hon. friends from Manitoba on both sides of the House to say if in the winter time the business of forwarding their produce is not closed down just as was the business of the men of eastern Canada many years ago. From the time that navigation is closed the people of the west are helpless. They have to wait until the following spring. At the present time the Canadian Pacific Railway can take a certain amount of grain out of the west in cars, but when we have another railway opened it will be possible for the farmers to ship their grain all the year round. Some of my hon. friends believe that railway transportation will be as cheap as water transportation. That is a problem of the future, but at all events, whether it be as cheap or not as cheap, the farmers of the west will have the benefit of this railway all the year round, and not only the farmers of the west will have the benefit of it but also the producers of the eastern provinces. It must not be forgotten that this railway is not designed to transport only the grain of the west. There is something else to be carried than grain. This railway will transport everything that civilized man wants. It will transport the produce of the west which is largely cereals; but it will transport also the commerce of the east.

I do not propose to say much more at this stage when we have had this scheme debated for two months. My hon. friend said to-day at the opening of his speech that he had not much to say which was new and in so far as that goes he said what was perfectly true. He had not much to say that was new and I shall not have much to say that is new. But, what I want to impress upon the people of Canada at this moment is that the policy which we have proposed is one which is imperative and that we would go back upon our own record if we were to go back upon the policy which has been devised for the construction of this transcontinental railway. And, that is not all. My hon. friend a moment ago derided my hon. friend the Postmaster General, and I think derided also my hon. friend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) who stated that within the lifetime of some of us here there would probably be two or three transcontinental railways.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I did not deride them. I cited them as evidence in my own behalf.

The PRIME MINISTER. If my hon. friend cited them as evidence in his own behalf he should sit down and say no more. He had better support our scheme then. If my hon. friend thinks that we must eventually have more than one line why should he not accept this immediately ? If he thinks that, why should he throw cold water on this scheme ? We must have more railways than one. We are just on the fringe of our obligations if we want to be true to our destiny. The nineteenth century has been a century that has been remarkable for the marvellous development of the United States. During the whole period of that cycle of time the United States has been the great centre of attraction for all the world, but a new star has arisen upon the horizon, a star not in the orbit of the American constellation but a star standing by itself resplendent of the western sky, and it it towards that star that every immigrant, every traveller, every man who leaves the land of his ancestors to come and seek a home for himself now turns his gaze. We have now a duty in consequence to perform, a duty which is imperative. We must commence here and now, not to-morrow, nor the day after to-morrow, but at this moment, if the Canadian people want to be true to the destinies of the Canadian nation, the construction of this railway. It will cost some money, but money is not an object at this moment. The treasury is affluent and I think the energies of the Canadian people in the eastern provinces and in the west are adequate to provide all that is necessary to cope with this new problem, and it is with this object that I have for the last time to appeal to all who claim to be patriotic to stand by the policy which we have put before the House.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). Mr. Speaker, the right hon. leader of the government (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier), in his closing remarks, said that a new star has arisen but he did not say whether it was in the east or in the west. I presume that he meant that it indicates the approach of the wise men. If that which we have before us is an indication of their wisdom I may be excused if I would say that I have great doubts as to whether that star has arisen yet or not. That star indicated an overflowing treasury, an abundance of wealth and a desire on the part of hon. gentlemen opposite to spend it and spend it freely. I leave it to the people of Canada to judge whether or not it is another evidence of the wisdom of the government. The Prime Minister described the speech of the leader of the opposition, as being not so much an attack upon the policy of the government, as a defence of his own policy. Well, in so far as it was a defence of his own policy, it was an answer by the leader of the opposition to allegations made against it which were devoid of fact and logic. Gentlemen opposite indulged in all kinds of wild statements about the proposition laid down by the hon. leader of the opposition, and it was the duty of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden) to refute these statements. But, it is not the policy propounded by the leader of the opposition that is on trial before the people of Canada to-day. It is the policy propounded by the government that the people of Canada have to consider, and notwithstanding that, it may truly be said that the Prime Minister applied himself to-day, not to defending his policy, but in trying to detract from the acceptance which the policy of the leader of the opposition has found from the people of Canada. The policy proposed by the leader of the government commits the country to the expenditure of millions of dollars, to an increase in the public debt, and to heavy burdens which must be borne by the people for many years in the future. And, Sir, the country will judge the government by the policy which they have laid down, and not by the policy of the leader of the opposition. The right hon. gentleman taunted us, that we have never dared to crystallize our opinion, by moving an amendment. Why, Mr. Speaker, there is an amendment in your hands now, and there was an amendment moved not so long ago in this House, setting forth the opposition's views on this question, and how in the face of that, the Prime Minister could make such a statement, is something that I cannot understand. One of our amendments has already been dealt with, and another very cogent one is before the House now, and it must be voted upon by the ministers and their supporters whether they like the ordeal or not. The right hon. gentleman told us, that the policy of the opposition was many-sided. Well, we are not ashamed to say that it has many-sided virtues, and we are quite confident that its many-sided virtues will receive the commendation of the people of Canada. The trouble with the policy of the government is, that it has only one side, and the only side it has is that it burdens the country with an enormous expenditure. Let us inquire into a few of the many-sided advantages which the proposition of the leader of the opposition will confer upon the people of the country. It develops the transportation routes now in existence ; it increases the transportation facilities which we have been spending money to perfect for years past ; it does not side-track the wealthy towns and cities of Ontario and Quebec as does the government scheme; it assists in building them up and bringing trade through them; it confers benefits on the people of Ontario, of Quebec and the maritime provinces; it builds up the great ports of the Georgian bay, and of Lake Huron and of Lake Superior; affords accommodation to the people of Manitoba and the North-west right through to the Pacific ocean. Yes, Mr. Speaker, the policy of the leader of the opposition is many-sided, and every side of it has a virtue in it, and every virtue it possesses will commend it to the intelligent judgment of the people of Canada. I regret that I cannot say the same for the policy of the government. We are told that no madder scheme could be conceived, than that the government should operate the Canada Atlantic Railway. We were asked, where would that line get its freight if it did not depend on the United States for it. But, is that an unmixed evil ? If we have the United States supplying that line with freight would that fact alone not aid it to give a better service for the transportation of home freight ? Would it not add to the earning powers of that line ? Would that be any objection to the scheme ? Why, Sir, I believe that is an additional recommendation in favour of the proposal that we should take over the Canada Atlantic Railway. And, if the Canada Atlantic Railway is handling the freight of the western states to-day, why should it not handle it if the road passed under the control of the government ? I submit these considerations to the right hon. gentleman in the hope that he may revise his opinion in this respect. Then the right hon. gentleman told us, that the essence of the government scheme is another railway between the east and the west. Let me point out to him that we are going to get another railway into the North-west in a very short time, without a dollar of cost to the people of Canada. I see it stated that the Canadian Pacific Railway is double tracking its line both east and west from Rat Portage, and they hope in the near future to have a double track from Port Arthur to Winnipeg. That affords practically another railway into the country, because when they reach Lake Superior, the great distributing centre of that western country, it is taken by the lake fleet of steamers and transported to the Georgian bay, where there are a dozen railways ready to carry the produce to the east, and distribute it to the markets of the world. That double track line will give to the people of the North-west, without the expenditure of a dollar, all the advantages that the most sanguine could hope from the government scheme, which is bound to cost us millions and millions of dollars. Let me ask the right hon. gentleman, if the scheme proposed by the leader of the opposition does not contemplate giving additional railway accommodation to the people of the western country ? In what light does the right hon. gentleman regard the purchase of that portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway from North Bay to Sudbury, or Port Arthur. If three railway companies used that one track which is only used by one company now, would there not be three railways going into that country, instead of one as at the present time, and we can secure all that for less than one-third of the cost entailed by the scheme of the government. The right hon. gentleman has asked if the plan proposed by the leader of the opposition is cheaper than the plan proposed by the government. Well, the data furnished by the leader of the opposition to-day ought to be satisfactory evidence on the point that his scheme would cost at the outside $60,000,000 to bring it to its full fruition, as compared with at least $120,000,000 which the road proposed by the government would cost. Hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House, have calculated that the government proposal will cost all the way from $13,000,000 to $120,000,000. Of course the $13,000,000 estimate is only the interest upon the expenditure involved in the undertaking, but if you apply any reasonable calculation, you will find that it will cost $120,000,000 of somebody's money to build that road. It will, therefore, be seen that the cost of the scheme proposed by the government will be at least double the cost of the scheme proposed by the leader of the opposition, and will afford no greater advantages. Indeed, in my opinion, the government scheme at double the price, will not be so advantageous for the people of the country as that proposed from this side of the House. I believe, Sir, that the more the people understand the scheme proposed by the leader of the opposition, the more it will meet with the approval of the people.

The line proposed by the hon. leader of the opposition, the right hon. gentleman says, is through a barren, rocky, country, while the other is through a fertile country. It is well enough to say that it is a fertile country, if you judge the whole by a few miles here and there where a traveller, a trapper, a pleasure-seeker, a trader or a timber seeker has been. I do not think the right hon. gentleman has a sufficient data regarding the country through which this road is to run, to speak of its character with confidence. There must be at least 400 or 500 miles of that territory of which we know nothing. We have comparatively speaking no information about the country ; we are going it blind. It may be full of muskegs, rocks, and mountains of rock, like a portion of the country through which the Canadian Pacific Railway runs around Lake Superior. In the one case we have overcome the difficulties, we know what the railway is and what it has cost ; but we do not know what the other will cost. The right hon. gentleman says railways must always be the complement of the water stretches—that the two must work together. Well, surely, the two working side by side are more likely to work together than when one runs through the interior of the country. He says of the scheme of the leader of the opposition that for six months of the year part of it is frozen up. It is true, the water stretches are frozen up, but the railway will run all the year round. If the scheme of the leader of the opposition is carried out, there will be three railways carrying grain around Lake Superior where there is only one at the present time. If we had grain elevators on the ports of Lake Superior and the Georgian bay, the grain coming from Manitoba would be carried around Lake Superior by these three railways in the winter. Surely these railways would be the complement of the water stretches, and the people would have more benefit from them than they would from a single railway running through the interior of the country, where there are no elevators and will not be for years, for the storage of grain. The right hon. gentleman said that the policy of the opposition is a psychological study—a study of a struggle between conscience and duty on the one hand and policy on the other ; a study to decide whether they will follow the dictates of conscience or the dictates of expediency. Well, I regret that I cannot return the compliment to the right hon. gentleman, because there seems to be neither conscience nor expediency in his policy. It is a matter, as he said himself, of imminent haste, of going it blind, without any debate between right and wrong, between conscience and expediency, between wisdom and unwisdom ; but he has mapped it out, and he is going to force it through. There is no psychological study in that. The right hon. gentleman says that we have all the information in regard to the character of that country that we want ; we have mountains of it. I have here the mountains of information laid on the Table of the House, and what is it? A small pamphlet containing 179 pages, with one map. That is the mountains of information given to the House to justify it in supporting this scheme. Let me read a few of the 'sources of information' of which this is the nearest epitome:

The iron belt on Lake Nepigon——

That is supposed to give the information we require to build the railway——

—is the title of a report on some deposits of iron ore recently found on the east shore of Lake Nepigon.

Barlow, Dr. A. E.—Report on the geology and natural resources of the country included by the Nipissing and Temiscaming map-sheets. Annual Report Geological Survey of Canada.

Beatty's lines.—Exploration line of 1870 was drawn from the north-east angle of Lake Nepigon in a south-easterly direction to a point near the southern end of Long Lake and then in an easterly direction to the '46-mile post' just south of the height of land.

Bell, Dr. R.—Report of an exploration in 1865 between James bay and Lake Superior. Report of Progress, Geological Survey of Canada.

Exploration of Churchill and Nelson rivers.

Away up on the Hudson bay, hundreds of miles north of where this railway will run. This is the information which the right hon. First Minister regards as of a most valuable character.

Report on the geology and resources of the country lying on the north-western side of Lake Superior.

Then we have something about 'the Laurentide Axis'; something about 'the Quebec end'; 'obstacles few'; something about the flora of the country, which would be most valuable for those who want to build a railway to know—what kind of flowers there are in the country, whether they are beautiful or otherwise; whether they will furnish a beautiful bouquet for each engineer who goes through. This is the kind of information which the government has furnished. It is rather a burlesque. Then we have something about the Hudson bay basin, which this railway will not touch, though it is expected to cross the height of land nine times. Then, we have something about the Ontario reports, something about the timber limits, the reports published and the geological surveys. This is what the right hon. First Minister characterizes as the mountains of information to enable this House to determine whether or not it should go on with this undertaking.

An hon. MEMBER. Read some of it.

Mr. SPROULE. It may be worth while to read a little. Here is what it says with regard to the Laurentide Axis:

The Laurentide hills proper do not extend to Hudson bay. They form a belt of hills varying from 100 to 200 miles in breadth, skirting the St. Lawrence valley and forming a divide between the great alluvial and marine plain or basin of Hudson bay from that of the St. Lawrence. It is a comparatively narrow belt. North of this fringe of Laurentide hills lies the comparatively level and gently sloping country of the Hudson bay basin.

That is all the information we have about that. Then we have the following about the Quebec end:

The woodland region as a whole throughout Quebec and Ontario, along the height of land, varies but little in its general level, some sections of it, more especially in the eastern portion, between the St. Maurice and the city of Quebec, is rocky, hilly and well timbered, while other sections for long stretches consist of rolling clay and sandy loam and well timbered lands.

The more mountainous and hilly section in Quebec is that from the city of Quebec to the headwaters of the St. Maurice river, but here we have in the latter river a great wide valley which affords a natural and remarkably easy highway into the north and interior of the woodland region.

North-western Quebec—From the surveys made along the northern border of the counties of Champlain, St. Maurice, Maskinonge, Berthier, Joliette and Montcalm in the vicinity of the height of land, it has been ascertained that this region comprising the sources of the Ottawa, Gatineau and St. Maurice rivers, consists of many comparatively level sections constituting a generally level plateau. Many of the streams flowing into the Hudson bay basin have their source here also; the higher woodland being more to the east and south-east.

It is important for us to know that these rivers have their sources up there. That is very valuable information when we are considering the building of a railway through that country. Then we have Mr. Gillies' statement, which gives us a comparison between Hudson bay basin and Scotland. Of course it is important that we should know all about Scotland and be able to make a comparison:

Mr. Gillies, who for eighteen years was Hudson bay factor at Fort George, about 235 miles north of the foot of James bay, volunteered the following statement regarding the capabilities of that portion of the Hudson bay basin:—'I have no doubt that any crop that grows in Scotland can be successfully grown at Fort George.'

That is all Mr. Gillies has to tell us, and very valuable information it is, on which to build a railway. Then we have an opinion with regard to the obstacles, and we are told that the obstacles are few:

For a distance of 700 miles, from Lake Kapitachuan (Upper Gatineau division) in a westerly by north-westerly direction as far west as White Earth lake near the confines between Nepigon and Lake St. Joseph divisions (Div. IX. and X. respectively) the line runs through a generally flat sand and clay country, where hills appear sparingly scattered with occasional ridges protruding through the drift or soil-covered country.

That is another valuable item of information. Then we have some information about the Hudson bay basin, which, if this road ever reaches there, may be of some value:

Whereas the country drained by the streams flowing south into Lakes Superior and Huron constitute a narrow and rocky hydrographic basin, for the most part, fit for cultivation and agriculture only in limited areas, the central portion of the hydrographic basin of Hudson bay, north of the great lakes is covered with soil consisting of clay and sand, in which vegetable mould forms a large percentage, thus rendering the land most desirable for the cultivation of crops when ordinary drainage is effected.

It is valuable to know that the country is covered by soil consisting of clay and sand. What else would it be covered with ? That is valuable information on which to judge whether it is advisable or not to go on with this undertaking.

The evidence afforded by the flora or native plants of the district along the proposed railway line affords an excellent criterion to agriculturists and others in making an estimate of the capabilities of the district in question.

Very valuable information this for the government. Then we have a description of the mineral possibilities :

The metalliferous belt of Huronian rocks which carries nickel, copper, silver, gold, iron and other minerals of economic importance occurs prominently throughout a large section of the line of the proposed railway. After crossing the Canadian Pacific Railway in the Sudbury region this great mineral belt proceeds in a northeasterly direction to Upper and Lower Lake Abitibi north of the height of land. This mineral belt is quite wide in the districts of Algoma and Nipissing, extending close to the boundary of the Thunder bay district. In the latter district two large areas of similar mineral bearing rocks occur which lie also close to the height of land.

But the Prime Ministetr told us that that section of country was largely a fertile clay belt. Well, that is not the kind of belt in which you are likely to find mineral deposits. They are generally found in a rocky section of very little value for agricultural purposes, so that this report contradicts the assertion of the First Minister, who was describing this section as a sort of paradise for agricultural settlers. Its soil, he said, was equal to the very best in Ontario. Then we have the farming operations described :

The various farms of the different lumber companies carrying on business along the headwaters of the various streams which flow into the St. Lawrence and Ottawa rivers, as well as the gardens and farms scattered throughout the hydrographic basin of Hudson bay, at the Hudson bay posts (such as at Abitibi, Brunswick House, Frederick House, Mamattawan, Mattagami, &c.) form excellent criteria from which one can easily ascertain the possibilities of the whole region from an agricultural standpoint, leaving no doubt whatever that the basin can support a vast population.

There is nothing about minerals there :

From a careful study of the altitudes comprised in the Quebec to Winnipeg region and south as well as north, it can be readily seen and affirmed that the boldest expression of the Laurentide hills occurs along the southern border of their line outcrop.

Not much information in that. I do not know that that was not well known before, and in any case it is little value to parties proposing to build a railway. The capabilities of construction are thus described :

The construction of the National Transcontinental Railway, crossing the cereal-growing district south of Hudson bay, between the great lakes and the foot of James bay, will open up for settlement a generally level tract of country, not only well timbered and well watered, but also producing a dense growth of plants which predicates capabilities of an agricultural nature, dairy, farm and stock-raising products, which can support a mixed population, including agriculturists, manufacturers, lumber merchants and all those varied classes of a community dependent on such natural resources as are found within that basin.

It is estimated that the marine sediments of the Hudson bay basin, consisting of clay loam, sandy clays and various other soils and surface deposits, fit for agriculture, is at least twice the area covered by the agricultural lands in Ontario between Ottawa and Lake St. Clair.

Then we are given some information about the timber limits :

Timber Limits.

The Laurentide hills which will ever be a source of immense revenue to the country, not only from their valuable timber limits and capabilities for producing more when re-forestation on a large scale is established in this country, but also from their untold mineral resources, forming a comparatively narrow belt of rugged hills, separate two distinct agricultural basins the larger of which lies to the north.

The new railroad will widen the eastern belt of habitable land, and as soon as the country realizes the immense wealth which is lying dormant in the great undeveloped basin south of James bay, where practically all the cereals can be raised successfully which are now raised in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, so soon will its people seize it and inhabit the same.

We are next told about mineral occurrences :

In the report of the royal commission on the mineral resources of Ontario and measures for their development, presented by order of the legislative assembly, Toronto, 1890, reference to the occurrence of iron and copper on Abitibi lake, is given, pp. 23 and 24 respectively, also of the mineral resources of various districts comprised within the railway belt in question.

That is valuable information for the building of a railway.

For altitudes of lakes, rivers and various locations along the proposed line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, see Mr. J. White's recent work entitled : 'Altitudes in Canada,' issued by the Geological Survey of Canada as publication number 745, 1901, pp. 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 227, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 175.

In this report I also find a mention of trees found along the line of the National Transcontinental Railway. It appears that they have found some trees there, and it is valuable we should know about it. Then we are given the following meteorological observations :

Average summer temperature at all the principal points between Quebec and Fort Simpson (from returns kindly furnished by Mr. R. F. Stupart, director of Meteorological Service at Toronto).

These are specimens of this 'valuable information.'

Report on Moose River Basin, with map,, by Dr. R. Bell, 1883.

Surveys.

The reports of the geology of the basin of the Moose river and adjacent country by Dr. R. Bell issued in the Report of Progress of the Geological Survey of Canada for 1880-81-82, contains not only the results of the surveys and explorations made by him in 1881, but also those of 1870, 1875, 1876 and 1877. Together with the results of a geological exploration of the Upper Ottawa and Lake Abitibi region made by the late Walter McOuat of the Geological Survey in 1872.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.). Better read the whole book.

Mr. SPROULE. This information is so valuable that I wanted to lay it before the country. We have been told over and over again by hon. gentlemen on the other side that this report is so full, so comprehensive, and deals so directly with the question that it is all that is required. I simply want to enable the electorate to judge whether it is so or not, and I cannot do that without placing on 'Hansard' a fair share of what is in the book. It proceeds :

These results are embodied in a coloured map showing the topographical and geological features as known to date.

That is most valuable information.

The areas of Huronian rocks which are those which carry the nickel, gold, silver, copper, and other economic minerals are delineated on the map in question so far as the surveys allowed. A large proportion of the area covered by the map is coloured Huronian.

And what other colour would they make it ?

Eastern Belt.

The more easterly of these belts—the Great Belt—will be traversed for more than one hundred miles in its trend from the north channel of Lake Huron towards Lakes Abitibi and Mistassini.

Second Belt.

The next belt to the west, begins in Minnesota and is traceable from the south-easterly shores of Lake Nepigon in a north-east by east direction to the area of flat-lying evenly-bedded limestones of the Albany river basin.

That is most valuable information, no doubt.

Third Belt.

The third belt is almost parallel to the last mentioned——

Well, it will have to run either in that direction or in some other.

—and lies to the north and north-east of Lake Nepigon.

Western Belt.

The most westerly belt is that which crosses the Canadian Pacific Railway track at Wabigoon, having a breadth of nearly twenty-five miles——

That is a most extensive tract of country.

—and strikes to the north-east in line with the Gloucester House area of similar rocks near Martin's Falls on the Albany.

There we have the eastern, second, third and western belts dealt with and how much information is there in all that ? After that a few lines are given to Fleming's Canadian Pacific Railway surveys. Then, at the beginning of chapter 15 we have the following :

Height of Land Crossings.

Divide.

The line making the height of land or 'divide' between the waters which flow into the St. Lawrence river basin and those flowing into the Hudson bay basin crosses the proposed line of the National Transcontinental Railway as projected at the following points :—

Nine crossings are estimated. We can imagine what the gradients and curvatures will be. The crossings are enumerated as follows :

First crossing.—In division III or upper Gatineau division just south of Lake Matchi Manitou.

Second crossing.—Takes place a little south-west of Lake Kiemawisk in division IV or upper Ottawa division.

Third crossing.—About 45 miles west of the second crossing in division IV. (upper Ottawa river), about 20 miles east of the inter-provincial boundary line between Quebec and Ontario, a little north-east of Lake Mattawa Gosik. The height of land then trends in a south-westerly direction for some 200 miles and crosses the Canadian Pacific Railway track between Ramsay and Ridout stations a little east of Chapleau station via way of Fort Mattagami.

The Canadian Pacific Railway track runs along and close to the height of land in the rough country north of Lake Superior as far west as Amyot station, and thence takes an almost due northerly direction along the 85th meridian and crosses the projected line of the Grand Trunk Pacific five times in a distance of 125 miles in the Long lake district.

Fourth crossing.—Takes place at a point about 20 miles from the western edge of division VII., Mamattawan division.

Fifth crossing.—Takes place just at the junction of divisions VII. and VIII., Mamattawan and Long lake divisions.

Sixth crossing along the projected railway line takes place in division VIII. (Long Lake division), about 18 miles south-east by east of the Hudson's Bay Company's post at the northern extremity of Long lake.

Seventh crossing is about five miles south of the Hudson's bay post just mentioned and occurs in the centre of the VIIIth or Long lake division.

Eighth crossing.—Occurs at the western extremity of the VIII or Long lake division, about 15 miles west of Big lake.

The projected railway line and the height of land then nearly coincide with each other throughout division IX. or Lake Nepigon division.

Ninth crossing.—Takes place on the 89th meridian at a point about twenty (20) miles east of the extreme westerly portion of the Nepigon division, and about twenty miles south of the White Water lake.

The height of land thence takes a sudden south and south-westerly trend towards Lake Superior, where it is crossed by the Canadian Pacific Railway track at Savanne station.

That is the information—the line crosses the height of land nine times. And yet this is to be a railway without any troublesome grades or curves. Yet, it is to go zig-zagging across the height of land like a snake fence. And it is to traverse the sources of these rivers where there must be swamps, muskegs, and rocks. And this is a sample of the mountains of information given to the House. Upon that, how can any one judge whether it is wise or otherwise to build this road ?

Mr. SPROULE. From page 164 of the 'mountains of information.'

Reforestation.

It appears to me that in view of the thousands of square miles of territory belonging to the province, capable of growing the finest pine, but which has either been destroyed by fire or cut and removed by the lumbermen, it would be desirable to know something of the natural laws in accordance with which, unaided even by us, this wide domain will again be clothed with groves of pine as good, if not better, than those that have been destroyed or removed.

That is valuable information, and will be of great help to us in building a railway. I wonder how many dollars it will save to the country to have this information placed before us. That great country is to be reforested, the forest having been destroyed either by fire or the ruthless lumbermen. The great need is to learn the natural laws of reforestation in order to decide whether the country shall spend $100,000,000 in building this railway.

For although the time for planting young trees may not as yet have arrived, it may well be that in view of the rapid exhaustion of their timber limits, that the time has really come when it may be only prudent to nurse and protect the young pine trees which the hand of nature has planted and which are springing up by thousands in many places. The lands of this description, which are contiguous to leading lines of railways and navigable rivers, are specially deserving of this care and attention on the part of the government, and would, I believe, handsomely repay all the expense that might be required to do so.

Opening up a settlement of the country.

In my judgment, notwithstanding the difficulty of getting in supplies and materials in order to the construction, the railway can be built for little more than one-half the money north of the height of land that would be necessary to make a line with equally good grades along the north shore of Lake Superior.

Notwithstanding the difficulty of getting in supplies, in this gentleman's judgment this railway can be built for one-half the money north of the height of land. It is most important to know that. Then, there is a good deal about bush fires. And, of course, this is valuable information in building a railway :

The bush fires which have passed over the greater portion of the territory on and beyond the height of land——

Yet, we are told, that is a country of valuable tracts of timber.

The bush fires which have passed over the greater portion of the territory on and beyond the height of land within the last twenty or thirty years cannot fail to attract the notice and attention of every traveller—indeed so recent have they often been that the bush or young forest has rarely had anything like the time necessary to attain full growth. Bush fires, looked at broadly, as one of the forces or phenomena of nature, rather than in the light of mere accidental occurrences are, when confined to a wild and uncultivated region, by no means the unmitigated evil they are generally supposed to be.

Then we have :

The quantity of aspen poplar in this territory is very great, and may in view of the employment of the pulp of this wood for the manufacture of paper become extremely valuable. The tamarack too though much less in quantity (unless we include the diminutive ones found in the muskegs), will also be of some value whenever the country is opened up. Tamarack of the size suitable for telegraph poles is very common and more rarely such as would make railroad ties were met with. The largest tree of this kind rarely exceeded six feet in circumference.

He found some that would make railway ties but more that was fit for telegraph poles. One report says that the country is all burnt over and has been for fifteen years past and the other that there is valuable timber up there that would make telegraph poles and ties but that some of these are in muskegs. Then there is gypsum up there :

The gypsum beds situated below the junction of the Mattagami and Missanabi rivers have been already described in former reports. I found pieces of gypsum on the coast about half way between Moose Factory and Albany, and was informed by one of my Indians from that part of the country that it could be seen in place at the bottom of a bay not far off when the tide was out.

That is valuable information given by an Indian in that country. He does not tell us where this is but it is important that we should know it because we are going to build a railway there. Then we come to the question of rock exposure. There are few rocks :

Probably in no part of Canada is there a smaller proportion of rock exposed at the surface than in the low belt of country south of James bay, and very few parts with so little bare rock as the second plateau or belt. In the third plateau, or that which constitutes the height of land, the proportion of rock is greater,——

And yet they are going to cross the height of land nine times and to open up a country with an alluvial soil, well fitted for agricultural purposes where the people can go in and have happy homes and rich farms and cultivate everything that will grow either in Ontario or Quebec. But he says :

—and here the possibilities of finding the metallic ores associated with or contained in the Laurentian or Huronian rocks, may be about as good as they are on the north shore of Lake Huron.

Now we know what the north shore of Lake Huron is that it is practically an uninhabited belt, a mineral belt it is true, but this report says that the height of land is the same and that the rocks are there in larger proportion than in the lower plateaus, and we are told in the same report that this railway is to cross the height of land nine times.

I can only say that in hurrying across this height of land (as I was obliged to do) I did not happen to see any. I heard reports, however, (originating with the Indians) that some such ores may be found in the vicinity of Lac Seul, and I do not think it by any means improbable.

That is valuable information got from an Indian second-hand. It is like the fables of the ancients; it is got second-hand, but it is a valuable thing to know. Then he says :

I saw and examined the deposit of brown hematite and spathic ore at the Grand rapid on the Mattagami river. This has been previously visited and described by Dr. Bell, and a specimen brought back by him was assayed by Mr. Hoffmann of the Geological Survey and reported to contain upwards of fifty-two per cent of metallic iron. I found this iron ore, as it seemed to me in the form of lenticular masses or beds interposed between the limestone strata of the Devonian rocks, which appear in place here for the first time as we descend the river.

It is very important that we should know that we have good iron beds there, because it may enable us to attach greater value to the country.

Then there is the temperature, the report gives us that :

Those who think that the weather is always raw and cold on the coast of James bay, may be surprised to learn that a few days before my arrival at Moose Factory, the thermometer recorded nearly 92° of heat in the shade. As this is one of the stations for taking meteorological observations, both the instrument and the reading was doubtless correct. At Albany, I was assured by Mr. Broughton that it was 94° in the shade.

And of course the House should know it. At Moose Factory on James bay it was 92 degrees and at Albany 94 degrees. Of course we should know that, because it will help us very much in building the railway. Then we have this third plateau and its soil and climate :

It is only from observations recorded at the Hudson Bay Company's posts, from the statements of parties who either live or have lived in the country, and from our limited experience, that we can obtain any knowledge of the climate of the two latter divisions of this territory. As regards the crops which may or may not grow in the territory, much contradictory evidence has been given. Neither is the climate the same in all parts of the territory.

That is contradictory, it does not correspond with the information given by the right hon. gentleman, that we are going to open up such a valuable tract of land for settlement by the farmers of this country.

On suitable soil properly prepared, and with judiciously selected seed, I am of opinion that wheat, oats, barley, and possibly rye, may be grown with more or less success on the second belt or plateau.

Then he talks about the hilly country and the drift covered regions. Dr. Bell has spoken of this. The report says :

As Dr. Bell very justly remarks, the surface, even in the height of land, is almost always covered with loose material of some kind. On this second plateau, the loose material still consists of drab or light-coloured clays, overlaid occasionally by gravel or sand. In these clays, as already remarked, pieces of limestone from the Devonian strata to the north may always be found, decreasing, however, in size and number as we recede from James bay and ascend toward the height of land. I am of opinion that careful analysis and microscopic examinations of the gravels, sands and clays found on or about the height of land would probably throw some light on their origin.

That a very large proportion of the clay and other loose materials found on this upper plateau must have come from the north and that it has been carried or transported in some mysterious way up hill, partly from the shores of the Hudson bay, and partly from the lower plateau, admits almost of demonstration.

It is necessary that the House should know where that clay comes from. It must come from the region of Hudson bay, because we have a suggestion advanced as to where it comes from. Then he talks about peat, about the Laurentian rocks and about the catch of fish, pickerel and pike. He says:

Pike, pickerel and white fish are found in the rivers in limited quantity, and the last is caught in the bay along the coast. Sturgeon are caught in the Abitibi river, two of which I saw near Singed Marten creek.

We all want to know that we can get pike, pickerel and white fish in this country.

These are extracts from the report of Mr. E. B. Borron. Then we are told about climate and game, and about track surveys checked. We are told a little about the physical features of the country:

The most noticeable feature of the west coast of James bay is its extreme flatness. Looked at from a distance there is no distinct shore line, but the water and land seem to merge into each other. A strip varying in width from one to three miles and partly covered with grass and low shrubs extends along the coast from the Kapiskau to the Moose river, except for a few miles north and south of Cockispenny point, where the shore is fairly high and dry and the trees come to the water's edge.

Then we have 'clay, sands and shells.' It is well we should know about the kind of shells to be found in that country, about 'surveys and instructions.' We come then to 'fish,' 'the kind of timber,' 'soil,' 'mountain ranges,' 'crops,' 'coal,' 'clay escarpments,' 'fish and minerals.' This report contains a selection of items of that character from the reports of geologists and a great deal of it is the imperfect information derived from the Indians. A great deal of it is only guess work, and very little is definite and can be relied upon. Yet, these are the mountains of information which have been given us in regard to the country through which this railway must pass. I have given a good many items from this report, and I do so because I think it desirable that we should know the character of the information which is given to this House to enable it to judge whether it is wise to pass this Bill or not.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Read pages 42 and 46.

Mr. SPROULE. I will leave the hon. member for West York (Mr. Campbell) to get up and read the rest of the book if he likes. I have read from page to page so as to give what may be taken as fair samples of the information afforded us, to show how indefinite it is and to show that practically there is no definite information at all; that the data is not reliable, that most of it is collected from the Indians that it is guess work and that it has no relevancy to the information that we want to enable us to judge as to whether it is wise to build this railway or not.

This all important measure that we are dealing with now should have, in my judgment, been referred to in the speech from the Throne. I want to draw attention to one of the features of this session that I have not referred to before. Constitutional government means that the government of the day, when they propound any great policy, refer to it in the speech from the Throne when parliament is called together, and draw the attention of the country to the fact that they propose to deal with the question. It does not matter whether the policy involves a heavy expenditure or is far-reaching in its importance, but in so far as it is interesting or important to the country or is important in other respects, whether it relates to transportation, or to the economic pursuits of the people, or to any other lines of activity in which the country is engaged, our form of constitutional government demands that it should be referred to in the speech from the Throne. Yet, we are asked to commit the country to an expenditure of $100,000,000 or $150,000,000 in carrying out a policy which is not of sufficient importance to be referred to in the speech from the Throne. Is that constitutional government? Coming from the Reformers, who always pride themselves upon living up to the principles of constitutional government, it seems to me that it is more objectionable still. I say that they have abandoned constitutional government in that respect. They have refrained from taking the people as well as the representative of the Crown into their confidence and they have failed to disclose in the speech from the Throne the important policy which we are now dealing with in this House at the tail end of the session. It was not sufficiently important to be referred to in the speech from the Throne, but they can bring it down at the tail end of the session and ask us to deal with it in the dying hours of the session. This policy looks as if it were designed for the destruction of the trade of Ontario as far as I can judge. Taking a comprehensive view of the government in power, it would appear to me that they have a sinister design against Ontario, because it is evident that they are striking at Ontario by taking an unfair census of the country, a census which allowed them to reduce the number of the representatives of the people, and thereby reduce the strength of the voice of Ontario in this House. They struck at Ontario again by the Redistribution Bill, by which they have endeavoured to lessen the power and influence of Ontario in this House. Ontario gave a majority against this government and they cannot forget that. They keep that in view, and their desire is to curtail her strength, to destroy her power, to leave her helpless, to manacle her, first by the census, second by the Redistribution Bill, and third by this great transcontinental railway. If successful this railway would mean the destruction of our fleet of merchant marine which now plies on the great lakes. We are told that if this railway is built up to the standard announced by the railway expert of the government (Mr. Charlton) it will be capable of handling all the produce of the west. If so, it will destroy our lake marine, and in proportion as it is successful it will starve out the existing carrying routes that are so valuable to the province of Ontario. If successful, it means the destruction of our inland shipping; it means the destruction of our ports on the Georgian bay; it means the weakening of the financial strength of Ontario, and it means the decreasing of the population of that province. Our towns, our cities, and our farming districts will be side-tracked by this road. Toronto, London, Hamilton, Windsor, Guelph, Owen Sound, Meaford, Kincardine, Collingwood, Midland; the commerce of all these towns and cities, will be decreased in volume, and the reduction of their business interests will ensue. But we are told, that we will have a railway to Toronto by way of North Bay. Yes, we may have a branch line into Toronto, but all the same it means that Toronto is side-tracked, and any town in Canada that it was proposed to treat in such a way would fight almost to the death against it. If this line is successful it is not only going to injure our Ontario towns and cities, and our ports on the Georgian bay, but it will destroy the ports of Kingston and of Peterborough and the harbour of Montreal as well. It was said by the Minister of Finance, that a railway would be built from the main line to Montreal. Perhaps so; but Montreal will cease to be on the highway of commerce; Montreal will be on a branch line, and Montreal must lose a large portion of her present great trade. So it is with the other cities and towns in Ontario and western Quebec; the trade will be carried by them rather than through them, to their detriment if not to their destruction.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. If the new railway does all that, it is going to be a great success.

Mr. SPROULE. Remember that I said 'if' it met all the expectations which hon. gentlemen opposite claim for it, and the expenditure of this enormous sum of money would not be justified unless that railway proves a success. In proportion, as it is a success, then it will side-track these cities and towns of Ontario, destroy our merchant marine on the lakes and destroy the trade now coming to our harbours. You must remember that the steamers plying on the lakes must have return cargoes, in order that they may be operated successfully. When the boats arrive at Owen Sound they tranship their grain to the elevators and they take the reaping machines, and the mowing machines, and the other manufactured products of the east, back to the markets of the west. At the present time these steamers have cargoes both ways, but if this line carries the grain from the west to the east, then our merchant marine can only have trade in one direction, and every one knows that such trade is not profitable.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS: It will not dry up the lakes.

Mr. SPROULE. Well, that is a kind of a side issue, and it seems to me that it does not require any high degree of intelligence to make such an observation. As between the scheme proposed by the government and the scheme proposed by the leader of the opposition, there is the important distinction, that the scheme proposed by the leader of the opposition, carries in its train none of the evils which characterize the project of the government. The scheme of the hon. the leader of the opposition, brings trade to our ports and builds up these ports; it assists Ontario; it assists our merchant marine, and it assists to build up our cities and towns, whereas the other scheme side-tracks them. There is another difference still. The scheme of the opposition will not cost half the money that the government scheme will cost, although the results from the scheme of the leader of the opposition will, in my judgment, be far more advantageous to the people of Canada. Surely if we can get as much good from an expenditure of $60,000,000 as we can from an expenditure of $150,000,000, it would be the part of wisdom to select the scheme which is the least burdensome upon the people of Canada. Then again, as regards our scheme, we are dealing with things which we know about. There is no uncertainty about it; every foot of territory which would be traversed by railways, as proposed by the leader of the opposition, is well known, and we have the data with reference to it in our possession. On the other hand, uncertainty, the want of knowledge; the indefiniteness of the information surrounding the government scheme, all alike condemn it, and ought to cause us to pause before we embark upon such a hazardous venture.

The Lake Superior ports are important to us; they have their elevators. The Georgian bay ports are important to us; they also have their elevators. If we build railways between Port Arthur and Winnipeg, we can bring down the produce of the great north-western country and put it into the elevators; and during the winter time it will be distributed to Ontario, to the extent to which it is needed there, and the rest will go eastward to the sea-board. But the project of the government does not contemplate the carrying of a bushel to the elevators on Lake Superior or the Georgian bay, but contemplates carrying everything to the eastern ports. Therefore it does not put the people of Ontario on the same level, so far as profits are concerned, with the people of the other portions of the country, and to that extent it is unsuitable. As I said before, the Canadian Pacific Railway is now double-tracking its railway between Port Arthur and Winnipeg. When that is done, there will be practically three railways into that country, because I am told that a double-track railway can carry three times as much as a single-track railway. There will be no danger of blockades in that country when the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian Northern Railway are double-tracked and fully equipped. We have many lines of railway built in the North-west already, and we require many more. At the same time we want the east to go hand in hand with the west, because we need our railways to be competitors with the waterways of the country. When the water-ways are frozen up, the railways can distribute the grain from the elevators, so that the traffic will go on in the winter as well as in the summer.

This scheme attacks the credit of our country ; it will be a fatal blow to our credit if hard times come again, as no doubt they will come in due time. The undertaking is too great for us. It will heap up the debt of our country to an enormous extent. It will minimize the power of the government to assist other important railway projects. The government tell us that the federal parliament must always in the future grant subsidies for the building of railways, not only in the newer provinces, but in the older provinces as well. If we are obliged to borrow so much money for the construction of this road, where is all the money to come from to assist other railway projects in the future, in Ontario, in Quebec, in the maritime provinces, and in Manitoba and the North-west Territories ? I am afraid that our debt will be piled up so high that the government will find themselves very much crippled when demands are made upon them for other railway subsidies in the future.

For these reasons we are justified in asking the government to go slowly. For these reasons we are justified in supporting the amendment proposed by the hon. leader of the opposition in preference to the proposal of the government. For these reasons I support the resolution. It is right that we should delay in order to get more information. It is important that we should have surveys made. It is important that we should not commit the country to such a heavy expenditure. It is important that we should not destroy the influence and power of the province of Ontario, that portion of the country which must pay the greater bulk of this money. In every dollar of indebtedness incurred for this undertaking forty-five cents must be paid by the province of Ontario, according to her population. That province must pay $45,000 in every $100,000. She must pay $45,000,000 in every $100,000,000. I want the people of Ontario to know this, and to realize what it means to them in the future. I want them to know what they are committing themselves and their children to in supporting the government in this undertaking. I want the members of this House from Ontario who are supporting the government to be prepared to defend their conduct of to-day when they go back to the electors and when this subject is under discussion. The province of Ontario is sometimes spoken of as the milch cow of confederation. I want the people of Ontario to know that they are paying forty-five cents in every dollar of the cost of this undertaking, so that they will be able to estimate whether the government have done right or wrong in committing the country to the heavy expenditure which this Bill will involve if we consent to its third reading at the present time.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (South Lanark). Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a good deal of pleasure to the criticism of the right hon. leader of the government and to the remarks of the hon. leader of the opposition in moving his amendment to the third reading of the Bill. The leader of the government said that after all there was not much difference between the scheme of the government and that of the leader of the opposition in the matter of expense, though he claimed that the government's scheme was the best on the whole. His first criticism of the remarks of the hon. leader of the opposition was in reference to his advocacy of the extension of the government railway from Montreal to the Georgian bay. He criticised that because it involved obtaining possession of either the line of the Grand Trunk Railway or that of the Canadian Pacific Railway between Montreal and Coteau, or the building of a rival line. As our policy involves utilizing portions of the Canadian Pacific Railway around Lake Superior, we could in the same way obtain running rights over the Grand Trunk from Montreal to Coteau. Why should we not do that, without building or purchasing another road ? Perhaps in that respect the suggestion of the right hon. gentleman has a certain advantage over the proposition of the hon. leader of the opposition. However, the important thing is to have a government road from Halifax to the shores of the Georgian bay, with means of communication with the western prairies. It means the acquisition of the Canada Atlantic Railway. That could be all done for $11,000,000 or $12,000,000, or at the utmost $15,000,000. As to that portion of the proposed government road from Moncton to Quebec, we hear very little of it at the present time. It seems to have dropped out of sight altogether. I wonder at our hon. friends in the maritime provinces allowing themselves, like the little boy, to be told by the government: Just close your eyes and open your mouth and we will drop a plum into it. Just say nothing and we will build that section from Quebec to Moncton. But I think that section has passed out of the probabilities that are likely to occur for a generation or two in this country. It is not at all likely that the next generation or two will see a road built from Moncton to Quebec.

The right hon. gentleman criticised my hon. friend the leader of the opposition, because he proposed an alternative scheme to his proposition to build a road from Quebec to Winnipeg. The proposition of my hon. friend was to build colonization roads into that country, according as its requirements demanded, with moderate gradients and equipment. In criticising that scheme, the right hon. gentleman did not seem to realize the difference between building a road such as he contemplates, and one to be built gradually as settlement required, into that region which is described as so valuable by our friends opposite, in the northern part of Quebec and Ontario, and which would accomplish all the purposes for which it is needed and would cost far less. The scheme of the right hon. gentleman simply means an expenditure four or five times that necessary to carry out the proposition of the leader of the opposition. What are the probabilities ? I have shown that it will be impossible to build any road from Winnipeg to Quebec with modern gradients at a cost that is within the means of this country. The right hon. gentleman asks why, instead of acquiring from the Canadian Pacific Railway that portion of its line between North Bay and Port Arthur, not build another line which will open up a beautiful agricultural section of the country. I wonder where the right hon. gentleman gets his information. From Winnipeg east, as far as the prairie extends the country is flat, but once you strike the Laurentian ranges and go eastward towards Lake Nepigon, it is a costly country through which to build a railway, not nearly as favourable as the country from Port Arthur to Winnipeg by the north of the Lake of the Woods. From Wabigoon to the prairie country east of Winnipeg is full of granite ridges and morasses. Hon. gentlemen will find it described in the report of Sir Sandford Fleming, made in 1877, and to which reference is made in pages 103, 104 and 105 of the government blue-book, and that reference is the only valuable information given in this book on the National Transcontinental Railway. This report of Sir Sandford Fleming deals with the surveys and preliminary operations on the Canadian Pacific Railway from 1871 up to 1877, made by order of the Canadian government. They cover that section of the country from the north side of Lake Nepigon westward to Sturgeon lake. On page 206 of Sir Sandford Fleming's work will be found a report on the exploratory survey made from the River Pic to the River Nepigon, along the northern coast of Lake Superior and on other surveys made in the year 1874 by Thomas Jefferson Thompson. Let me remind the House that in 1873 and 1874 there was a survey made westward towards Winnipeg. There was a survey made by Sir Sandford Fleming from Winnipeg down to Lake Superior. In his report here he says : 'We have found an excellent route along the whole line of the road from Winnipeg down to Lake Superior.' Speaking of the gradients running eastward he says that in no case do they exceed 26 feet to the mile. That is a fact. We have a road now between Winnipeg and the head of Lake Superior with gradients, none of which are in excess of 26 feet to the mile, and the Canadian Pacific Railway are at present, as was stated by my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule), doubling their tracks and reducing the gradients on that road to four-tenths per cent, or in other words to 20 feet per mile. There can be no better line of road got. It is at least equal to the Northern Railway which runs from Winnipeg to the head of Lake Superior, and you can get no road from Winnipeg to Lake Superior with gradients better than that. But at what expense to the people was that got ? For about 37 miles on that road, on section 15, built by Mr. Whitehead, some of it cost $250,000 per mile on account of the filling. On Cross Lake 1,000,000 yards of earth were put in at a cost of 28 cents per cubic yard. At Lake Deception there were over 500,000 yards and at another lake, Darlingford Bay, over 500,000 yards put in at 28 cents per yard. They managed to get a good road that way, but at an enormous cost ; and according to the reports of the engineers who surveyed that section, Sir Sandford Fleming and the engineers under him, they got a most favourable line of road from Winnipeg down to Lake Superior. But it was only at an enormous cost. On section B there was an enormous expenditure. Let me tell the right hon. gentleman that Sir Sandford Fleming advised that the most feasible line of road for the purpose of connecting the eastern section of the province was from Port Arthur up to Lake Nepigon and thence down by the route at present taken by the Canadian Pacific Railway. Let me quote from the report, to be accurate, what work had to be done on 117 miles of that road :

> The following are the approximate quantities in cubic yards of banks and cuttings for the distance of 117 miles from Peninsula harbour to Red Rock, also lineal yards of tunnels :—
> Embankments, cubic yards, 3,443,860, per mile equal to 29,434.
> Cuttings, cubic yards, 2,779,350 per mile equal to 23,755.
> Lineal yards of tunnel, 13,350, equal to 7½ miles.

And then there are the bridges. And after obtaining all this, the surveyor who was upon that section of the road says that in order to obtain a road such as he has shown you with the amount of excavation, the amount of earth to be removed, the amount of tunnelling that ought to be done in that section of the country, the only difficulty in railway construction along this valley would be in obtaining practical gradients. He says : 'my opinion is that seventy or eighty feet to the mile could be obtained. Now, grades of seventy or eighty feet to the mile are simply of no use for a modern railway competing for traffic with a rail and water route. The hon. gentleman says that we shall have two main lines of railway which will be occupied in the winter, when the lakes are frozen, carrying the produce of the west to the Atlantic seaboard. Does the right hon. gentleman not know that to move freight in that country in winter costs about 40 per cent more than in the summer? If he will ask the men who operate the Canadian Northern or the Canadian Pacific Railway, or the parties who run railways in Minnesota he will learn that their instructions to their subordinates are not to take out a train more than is absolutely necessary; to run the passenger trains even though they must be run at a loss, but not to carry a pound of freight if it can be avoided, because every pound of freight carried when the temperature is 25 or 30 degrees below zero is carried—no matter what you get for it—at a loss to the road. So you cannot expect any freight to be carried in winter. The only time when it would be possible to compete with the rail and water route would be in summer. The plan of my leader is the only practical plan. It is the plan that is seconded by every intelligent man, every intelligent man connected with transportation between this section and the North-west. The main point of that plan is to get your freight from the west by the cheapest way to the ports at the head of Lake Superior. There are already two roads running from the prairie country to the head of the lakes. They carry 30,000,000 or 40,000,000 bushels a year. Double track either of them and they can carry from Winnipeg to the head of Lake Superior 250,000,000 bushels a year. If you have means of carrying the freight to the head of the lakes there need be no difficulty in transporting it eastward. The plan of the leader of the opposition is upheld by Mr. Robert Meighen, who has been connected nearly all his life with the transportation business, and with buying grain in the west and bringing grain to the east. Having arranged to get your freight carried to the head of Lake Superior, encourage lines of steamers to bring it down to Georgian bay. Have elevators at the Georgian bay ports. Get two-thirds of the crop down during the summer, if you can, to the eastern shore of Georgian bay. Then, during the winter, you can take that by rail to Montreal, or, if possible, to St. John or Halifax. That is the only practical scheme. No one in his senses would think of carrying grain, whatever may be said by the right hon. gentleman, through by rail from Winnipeg to Quebec and from Quebec to St. John and Halifax. The road proposed by the right hon. gentleman between Quebec and Winnipeg may be useful for colonization purposes. If it is to be used as a colonization road, it may have grades of sixty or seventy feet to the mile, and, with those grades it can be built for one quarter of the money that it would be necessary to expend in order to secure grades of twenty feet to the mile.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock:

Hon. Mr. HAGGART.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. At six o'clock I was dealing with the practicability of the route between Winnipeg and Lake Nepigon; I was showing that it is almost impossible to obtain a route with modern gradients between these points. The report which has been brought down, as I stated before, is not a full report. It was seemingly prepared by an officer of the Geological Survey, and in it attention is drawn to a report of Sir Sandford Fleming in respect to the practicability of the route, but the reports of Sir Sandford Fleming are simply referred to, and not given in full. I might remind the House that the surveys in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway took up the time from 1872 to 1878. The result of the surveys was the obtaining of a practicable route from Winnipeg to Lake Superior. The practicability of railway construction on the prairies was also established and three or four different passes, the Tête Jaune, the Pine River pass, the Simpson pass and the Peace River pass were shown to be practicable and good routes to the Pacific coast. In dealing with this question when it was before the House some time ago, I stated that the government ought to have a settled policy in reference to this matter. At that time an application was before parliament from the Grand Trunk Railway for permission to build a railway to the Pacific coast. I advocated the granting of that right to the Grand Trunk Railway, and I am in favour of it at the present time. My opinion was that that road should be built on a route entirely different from those which are now occupied by other railway roads. If you remember, Sir, I advocated at that time the construction of this road as far north as possible, and I thought that the least southerly route which could be adopted by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway should be the route recommended by Sir Sandford Fleming, that is one that crosses the Red river at a town north of Winnipeg, then crosses Lake Winnipeg and proceeds towards the coast either by the Peace River pass, the Tête Jaune pass, the Pine River pass, or the Simpson pass. I think that there is room in this country for such development as I advocated at that time. That would not interfere with present enterprises, with the Canadian Pacific Railway or the Canadian Northern Railway. It would be a route which would open up an immense tract of country to the north of both of those lines. I felt that with the usual subsidy, or with the subsidy which is to be given to the Grand Trunk Pacific for the building of that railway a road could be profitably constructed by the people of this country. But instead of that we have a line which virtually parallels the Canadian Pacific Railway, virtually parallels the line which we have subsidized to Edmonton, for we cannot possibly have Edmonton an objective point of the Grand Trunk Pacific line and keep that line from running within 20 or 30 miles of the other road. I object to it then on the ground that the proposed location of the line is one that interferes with enterprises now existing in this country, and on the ground that there is no necessity for the building of duplicate lines in that particular section of the country. Then too I was in favour of the development of Ontario and Quebec not by the line proposed by the right hon. gentleman, a line from Quebec to Winnipeg involving an enormous expenditure of money, but by local or Dominion subsidy to local lines for the purpose of developing Ontario and Quebec. I have an opinion, as I said at that time, in the section of country which lies between the head of Lake Nepigon and Quebec there may be land which will be capable of development in the interests of this country, but it can be developed only by colonization roads. There is no necessity for the expenditure by the people of this country of the enormous sum of money which the government propose to spend for the purpose of building a road which, according to the statements of hon. gentlemen on the government side of the House, will be built on commercial principles, with the lowest possible gradients. The building of such a road involves the expenditure of an amount of money of which we can form no estimate, and I would ask what is the use of the railway and Canals Department? Why is it that the right hon. gentleman (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has not an estimate from that department as to the probable cost of the road. We are asked to go into an undertaking, to enter into a contract with this railway company without knowing what the probable cost of that railway will be; without knowing what the government should have learned from the department which ought to have been able to furnish them with an estimate of what the actual cost would be; without a scintilla of evidence as to the expenditure that would be necessary for the construction of that particular road. That is why I object to the scheme. It involves an expenditure to my mind of not less than $125,000,000. We are bound to build a first-class road from Winnipeg to Moncton, and to construct such a road will involve an expenditure far in excess of any estimate which may be furnished the government. That money to my mind could be expended in works of utility, in works that would facilitate transportation of this country in a far better manner than that proposed by the government. What is the plan proposed by them? To build a road from Quebec to Winnipeg. But what do we find in the Order in Council from the Minister of Public Works providing for the appointment of a commission? The right hon. gentleman says: Oh, it was only for the purpose of finding out and examining the different ports and deciding on what ports of Lake Superior, Georgian bay and the St. Lawrence expenditures should be made. This is what we find in the report of the hon. Minister of Public Works:

> From place of production to Canadian seaports.
> From place of production to the western ports of Lake Superior.
> From the western ports of Lake Superior to Canadian seaports.
> From Canadian seaports to Europe.
> From place of production through Canadian ports on the Pacific.
> As it affects the products of the eastern provinces of Canada it involves their movement:—
> To the seaports.
> From the seaports to Europe.
> It is obvious that before any satisfactory conclusion can be reached upon these questions a thorough and comprehensive inquiry should be made regarding:—
> The conditions of original shipment and the possibilities of improvement in the conditions surrounding such shipments.
> The storage requirements of lake, river and ocean ports.
> The harbour facilities of the inland lakes, rivers and Atlantic and Pacific ports.
> The conditions with regard to the navigation of the St. Lawrence route, and, generally, any improvement, enlargements, or other matters affecting the more economical and satisfactory uses of any Canadian channel of transportation by land or water.
> The minister further states that in making such investigation attention should not be confined to routes and facilities which are at present utilized, but, if necessary, new surveys should be made to determine whether any more economical and satisfactory channels of transportation by land or water can be opened up.
> The forces operating against the attainment of all Canadian transport, namely:—
> Competition by United States railways;
> Competition by United States vessels from Lake Superior ports.

Has the right hon. gentleman carried out his pledge to this House? Has he carried out the promise which he put in the mouth of His Excellency? No, he now limits the scope of that commission to the question of what ports on Lake Superior and on the Canadian water route expenditures should be made upon and on the facilities for transportation on the canals and the St. Lawrence. The promise made by the right hon. gentleman to this House was that the whole question of transportation from the prairies of the west to the Atlantic and from the Atlantic ports to Great Britain would be considered by a commission and reported upon to this House in order that this House might consider the whole question. Fancy entering into a contract with a company without even an estimate from the department which has charge of transportation, the Department of Railways and Canals, as to what the cost would be. The right hon. gentleman then is mistaken in his statements and mistaken in the speeches which he quotes to this House. Fortunately we have here the report of the Minister of Public Works upon which this commission was to be founded. We have not had a scintilla of evidence, we have not had anything in the shape of a report as to what the expenditure will be on this undertaking. Fancy undertaking an expenditure involving, as we say, about $125,000,000, and that figure is within the mark, or two or three times the amount of revenue taken from the people two or three years ago, without having a bit of evidence as to what the cost of the undertaking is to be. That is one reason why the opposition object to this undertaking. We have no evidence as to what it will cost and we have no evidence as to what the liability of the people will be in reference to this undertaking. We have no engineering reports. Why should we enter into a contract without them? The late government with Sir Sandford Fleming engaged upon the surveys, and he had as many parties in the field as he possibly could have at that time, received no information from 1872 to 1878 which would justify them in entering into a contract for the Canadian Pacific Railway except between those points which I have mentioned. We built the road which it was necessary to build in order to connect Lake Superior with Winnipeg by means of the Canadian Pacific Railway. We commenced building the portion of the road in the Rocky mountains which we were bound to do under the agreement with British Columbia. We began these portions of the road. We had not complete evidence after even a six years survey. These hon. gentlemen are entering into a contract for the purpose of building this road without a survey from Winnipeg to Quebec and with only the partial survey of Sir Sandford Fleming which he made when he was building the Intercolonial Railway from Quebec to Moncton. These are the reasons why we object to this proposition. We do not know what the cost of the undertaking is to be and we do not know what the liability of the country is to be in reference to it. Surely the parliament of Canada are delegating powers which it is not in the public interest to grant when they give the government power to enter into a contract when the government cannot tell within $25,000,000 or $50,000,000 or $75,000,000 what the cost of the undertaking will be. Then, the right hon. gentleman talks about the probability of freight being carried from Winnipeg to Quebec. Let me give a few examples to show the absurdity of the statement that freight can be carried profitably for that distance. Freight is carried from Winnipeg to the head of Lake Superior at the present time for ten cents per hundred pounds or about six cents a bushel for every bushel of wheat. It has been carried from the head of Lake Superior to Quebec during the present season by boats for three and one-half cents a bushel. The rate for the 410 miles between Winnipeg and the head of Lake Superior is six cents a bushel.

I venture to say that this rate hardly pays the cost of transport for that 410 miles. Then, it costs nine and a quarter cents to take the wheat from Winnipeg to Quebec. Does the right hon. gentleman pretend to say that with the most favourable gradients that it is possible to get upon that road it will be able to carry wheat to compete from Winnipeg to Quebec with the rate at the present time of nine and a quarter cents per bushel? It would not pay. As I stated before, the rate for 410 miles to the head of Lake Superior is six cents per bushel and for the 1,200 odd miles to Quebec it will cost three times as much or eighteen cents a bushel. It is at present being carried for nine and a quarter cents a bushel. Any railway man, or any man who has studied the transportation question at all will say that no road constructed between Winnipeg and Quebec can successfully compete with the carriage by rail and by water. The right hon. gentleman says that there are five months in the year when it is impossible to carry freight by water or by part water and by part rail and that at these times of the year we will have two roads hauling grain from Winnipeg to Quebec. It will not pay at all. Where the thermometer goes down to 25 or 30 degrees below zero no railway can carry grain at a rate within forty per cent of the rate which would prove profitable during the summer season. The right hon. gentleman spoke about the Canada Atlantic Railway. He said that it was impossible if the Intercolonial Railway were extended to Georgian bay for it to be put in the position of the Canada Atlantic Railway, that is to own steamers, because he said that the American government insisted that wheat from Duluth to the Georgian bay must be carried in American bottoms. I do not think so. I think a British vessel with British register can go to Duluth, Milwaukee or Chicago just the same as an American vessel can.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). They do it anyway.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. They do it anyway and they can do it just the same as an American vessel which carries freight from those ports to the Georgian bay. The right hon. gentleman said that the Intercolonial Railway could not go to American ports and compete for freight to be carried over our own railway lines.

Mr. McCREARY. The vessels have to fly the American flag.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. They do not, I beg your pardon.

Mr. McCREARY. Yes they do.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. A British registered ship can load at Milwaukee and carry to any British port. It is not at all necessary that it should carry the American flag. British ships have just as much right to carry grain as American vessels have because it does not interfere with the coasting trade at all.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Don't they carry freight from New York to Liverpool now ?

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Don't they do it from New York to Liverpool, from Boston to Liverpool and from other American ports ? As long as it does not interfere with the coasting laws of the United States, that is by carrying grain or passengers from one American port to another, a British registered ship can go to Milwaukee, Chicago, or Duluth and load grain for a Georgian bay port as well as an American vessel can.

Mr. McCREARY. As a matter of fact has not the Canada Atlantic Railway Company seven steamers, four of which are registered in the United States and fly the American flag ?

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I do not know whether they have or not, but I believe some of these vessels that are carrying to Depot Harbour belong to Mr. Booth himself and that they are carrying grain from Duluth and Milwaukee. They have just as much right to do so as an American vessel, so long as they do not interfere with the coasting laws of the United States, and our Canadian vessels, have a right to trade with American ports under similar regulations. The Prime Minister said there were 12,000,000 bushels of wheat carried on the Canada Atlantic via Depot Harbour to American seaports, but what is to prevent that being carried on Canadian railways to Canadian ports ? There are 20,000,000 bushels of Canadian grain exported via Port Arthur and Buffalo, and there are only 12,000,000 bushels of American grain carried via Depot Harbour, some of which goes to Montreal and some to Boston. If we could carry all the grain which is grown in the North-west, on Canadian railways we would not need to carry American grain at all, and it is the duty of Canadian statesmen to divert through Canadian territory, that traffic which is now going to Buffalo. The feeling is growing in this country that we ought to have a government railway, and that it is the only means by which we can equalize freight rates on Canadian roads. The Grand Trunk Railway Company had for its object at first, the building of a road towards the north. I was in favour of that, and I am in favour of assisting them to do that now so long as they do not interfere with existing railroads. I would be in favour of aiding the Grand Trunk liberally towards that end. That is the policy of the leader of the opposition. He is in favour of a government-owned railroad having its terminus at some point which would enable it to compete successfully with other railroads in Canada for the purpose of obtaining freight to Montreal, or to the ports of the maritime provinces. The only possible through-freight that can possibly be obtained for St. John and Halifax, is the freight which comes to the Georgian bay ports, and which is carried by the Grand Trunk Railway, or the Canadian Pacific Railway, or the Canada Atlantic Railway, or by a government-owned railway if we had one, to these points. That is the only possible way, of increasing our traffic with the maritime provinces, and for that reason I am in favour of the proposition of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition. I shall not deal at any length with the location of the government line, or its cost, or the probabilities of its success. I have already shown the absurdity of building a road such as this from Winnipeg to Quebec. I would be in favour of a line of railway which would go north of Lake Winnipeg, which would give us a through-route, and which at the same time would open up new tracts of wheat growing country in the North-west and Manitoba. But with regard to this eastern section, it should be the policy of the government to divert most of this traffic through Ontario, Quebec and the maritime provinces to the sea-board. I cannot understand the policy of the government in building a road from Winnipeg to Quebec of the description and design which they propose, and which if built up to the standard described, will cost an enormous amount of money. I trust that the country through which it is proposed to build the new line is suitable for agriculture ; I hope it is a country abounding in minerals, and that it has, what is perhaps more valuable still, extensive waterfalls which can be developed for manufacturing purposes. I heard my hon friend from North Lanark (Mr. Rosamond) tell how a nephew of his who had been examining the Lake Abitibi country over to the north of Lake Nepigon, found that there was a territory there, two or three hundred miles long and fifty miles wide, comprising excellent cultivable land, and that underlying the whole of that territory there were immense deposits of the best lignite coal. If that be the case, it will solve the fuel difficulty in this country, and it will enable the locomotives to be supplied with fuel. But even all that is no justification for this enormous expenditure. The statement of the Minister of Finance, that if the present surplus continued for a few years it would cover the whole cost of that railway, is simply nonsense. How are they to recoup the people of the country for the expenditure ? They propose to appoint a commissioner to issue debentures for the sums expended and they imagine that the mere paper debentures will be a return to the country for the money expended. It is like a friend of mine who always thanked God that a Bill was paid, when he gave a note for it. If when Julius Caesar landed at Dover, a penny was placed at compound interest ; that original deposit and the interest thereon would to-day build all the railroads in Canada. It looks as if the Minister of Finance were trying an experiment of that kind, when he issues debentures to recoup the people of Canada for the money that is expended on this road. It is true that from Winnipeg to the coast we have a mortgage upon the Grand Trunk, for the money expended on the construction of that section. That is some kind of a security ; but what does it amount to ?

There is to be expended $13,000 on the prairie section and $30,000 on the mountain section. For that we are to get security to the amount of 75 per cent on every $100 expended in the construction of the road. Besides that we are to have security on what ? The rolling stock of the road to the extent of $15,000,000. The parties who will supply the rolling stock will take the precaution of having security on it, and it is only the balance that will be liable as security to the government. We have no security on the undertaking from the Grand Trunk Pacific or from the Grand Trunk, which does not appear in the contract at all. We have only the security of the $5,000,000 worth of rolling stock, which is to be earmarked for the eastern division of the road. We have of course the security of the road on the money we advance for the building of the western division from Winnipeg to Port Simpson, and we have the security of the road from Winnipeg to Quebec for the amount expended on that road. Will the undertaking, after it is finished, be worth the amount expended upon it ? I do not believe it will be, nor do I believe the road from Quebec to Moncton will be either, if it is ever built, which I do not believe it will be. Nor do I believe it will be possible to obtain a route for a first-class road from Quebec to Winnipeg. I do not believe that section of the road will be worth one-quarter of the money expended upon it. And what security have we that the road will be operated ? The security of the Grand Trunk Pacific Company. Who are they ? A couple of senators and a lot of others who have formed themselves into a corporation for the purpose of making this agreement. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company are in no way bound by it. Their guarantee would not amount to anything, even if you had it ; but they take care not to enter into the undertaking at all. Suppose that there is a deficiency ; suppose that the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company are not able to work the road, the whole undertaking will be flung back on the hands of the government. What would be the yearly cost to the government of such a road, extending from Moncton to Quebec and from Quebec to Winnipeg, a distance of nearly 1,700 miles ? We can judge to some extent from our experience of the Intercolonial, which passes through a comparatively fertile and well settled section of country. If you want to develop the northern country, do not expend the money in any such manner. There are a dozen ways in which it could be better expended. Assist the Grand Trunk Railway, if you like, to obtain an entrance into the North-west, and if possible get them to pass north of lake Winnipeg. As I said before, in a speech I delivered in this House, I am favourable to the scheme if the right hon. gentleman will see that the railway goes as far north as possible. It is possible to develop that section of the country. Let the road be built, and let generous assistance be given to those who build it ; but do not pledge the credit of the country for the enormous sum required to build a railroad from Winnipeg to Quebec. As I have said before, I believe that much of the land which appears to be barren in the northern parts of Quebec may turn out, from its mineral and other resources and its water-powers in the lacustrine districts, to be as important as any of the settled portions of this country. It is within my experience that lands which twenty or thirty or forty years ago were considered entirely worthless have turned out to be much more valuable than the best farming lands in the country. It is possible that such lands may be found in the northern country. But develop it gradually. Make your expenditure upon commercial principles, and with the judgment and intelligence that ought to guide you in the matter. Let us have surveys of the country made. As I have already stated, we spent six or seven years in making surveys before we entered into the contract for the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and they were only partial surveys at that. We are now entering into a contract which involves a much more enormous sum of money, and we have not a survey between Quebec and Winnipeg, nor have we any means of knowing what the expenditure for that road may be. Let us proceed slowly in regard to it. One thing we do know, that Manitoba and the North-west are an immense wheat field, with enormous capabilities. At present the Grand Trunk Railway has no direct connection with that country ; and in order to divert it from forming American connections, let us assist it along the line of the proposition which the company placed before this House at the beginning of the session. I believe there is no justification at all for that portion of the proposed road from Quebec to Moncton. According to Sir Sandford Fleming's report, it is impossible to get a line with fair gradients in that section of country. The only route suitable for a railroad is that followed by the Intercolonial. Why build a second Intercolonial Railway for the purpose of taking freight from the other portion of that railroad in the maritime provinces. Develop the road which you have at present. Do not destroy the towns and villages which have been built along the line of the Intercolonial Railway, in the hope of getting a shorter route from Quebec to Moncton. If you get it, you cannot carry freight on it either one way or the other, to a greater extent than you can now on the Intercolonial Railway. Leave well enough alone. If the country is rich and there is an immense surplus which it is necessary to expend for the purpose of justifying the enterprise and the aspirations of the young men of the country, the money can be expended in no better way than by cheapening transportation from one part of the country to another. That is what constitutes a nation. A nation which has cheap transportation from one part to another will eventually become a great manufacturing country. The question of transportation is the great question which should exercise the minds of the government of this country. Expend your money in a justifiable manner for the purpose of affording cheap transportation from one end of the country to the other, and you will do more good than can possibly be done in any other way.

I am with the right hon. gentleman when he says that time is of the essence in this country, that we should seize our opportunities, that if we allow five or ten years to pass it may be too late to secure what we want. The opportunities may then be gone elsewhere, and it may take twenty-five or fifty years to recover the advantages we may have lost. Those were always my ideas, and in that respect I am with the right hon. gentleman, but I do not believe in the scheme on which he proposes to expend so much public money. When the surveys from Winnipeg to Quebec come in, and when he finds it impossible to get the gradients he expects, I trust that he will abandon his scheme and resort to the plan proposed by my hon. friend, the leader of the opposition, of building colonization roads into that country. In my opinion, it will be impossible to get there the gradients which will enable us to compete for the carriage of heavy trade from the west. But I believe that in the northern part of Ontario even up to Hudson bay, and in the northern part of Quebec, there are immense tracts of country in which will be found valuable agricultural resources and mineral deposits. And because I look forward to the development of that country, I am opposed to a scheme which can only end in failure and thus retard the development we have so much at heart. What I object to is our entering into a contract with a company of which we know nothing, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, consisting of a couple of senators and some others connected with the Grand Trunk Railway for the purpose of building a transcontinental road. We have the statement of the Minister of Justice that he would take care that the Grand Trunk Railway was a party to the contract, and that members of the House of Commons and the Senate would not be allowed to participate directly or indirectly, in this scheme, or belong to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. While for the purpose of incorporation, it was necessary to have these parties apply for the Bill, yet when the contract was made between the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and the government, he would see that no senator or member of the House of Commons was a member of that corporation. Well, I have not seen that the names of those senators and members were eliminated from the Bill. However, I promised that I would not deal with the details, but simply with the measure in its general features, and my opinion is that a more senseless contract it would be difficult to imagine. Fancy if hon. gentlemen opposite were in opposition and we proposed entering into a contract for an expenditure of an unknown sum of money, entering into it blindly, without surveys, without even a report from the Railway Department or any other department, without any estimate of the approximate cost of the undertaking, what a howl they would raise. I have entered my protest a couple of times already against this measure. I know what the result will be. I believe that the Moncton section must be eliminated. I do not believe that any government in its senses will undertake the construction of that line of road, and I believe that after the surveys are made between Quebec and Winnipeg and it is found what an enormous sum of money that section will cost, it will have to be abandoned, and the government will have to come to the proposition of the leader of the opposition, and build colonization roads into that country.

House divided on the amendment of Mr. Borden, Halifax.

Amendment negatived.

Mr. E. B. OSLER (West Toronto). I do not propose to make any lengthened remarks or to go into any discussion of the Bill generally. The government in their wisdom have seen fit to pass the Bill. The opposition have criticised it to the best of their ability. With the government must rest the responsibility. But I do propose to make one more appeal to the government on behalf of the manufacturing interests of this country. I hope the government will see their way to provide that all goods coming into this country for the betterments on this road for the next fifty years shall pay duties, as other imports do. I think that every day is showing us more clearly the position we are in as regards our fiscal policy. It must be almost a satisfaction to the Minister of Finance, with his free trade theories, to find that the woollen mills in Peterborough have lately shut down, mills that have been running for more than twenty years. We are now face to face with a serious condition of affairs financially. I do not mean that this is true of Canada particularly—I speak of the whole world. There seems to be a feeling of unrest and uncertainty which has upset the calculations of the soundest and shrewdest financiers. There is a feeling of unrest that has not been known on this continent or in Great Britain for twenty years past, and the worst feature seems to be that no one is able to explain why it is. But, though none seem to be able to give the reason, it is there ; and, almost before we realize it, we are going to be in the midst of a commercial crisis—not in Canada alone, for I believe that we in Canada are going to escape it, perhaps, better than any other civilized country in the world. But it behooves us, I think to look to ourselves now, and to decide whether we are going to protect our manufacturers and our industries, or whether we are going to let them be slaughtered. The balance is so little that turns a profit into a loss. Our factories in Canada have been very fully employed, almost overworked ; but they have been working, many of them, as I know, practically at a loss. The result in some branches of our industry is that many factories have to shut up, and I think that many more will have to close before many months have passed, unless we look our position squarely in the face, and make up our minds that we are going to protect our manufacturers to the very best of our ability. We must put them on an equal footing with the manufacturers of the south of us, or our industries are going to be ruined. Do not let us make any mistake about that. The position stares us in the face. You may have the theory of free trade, but it is worth nothing when you come to deal with practical affairs. There is nothing more sensitive than capital, and, if it once gets the idea that it is not being protected, that it is not justly dealt with, that it is liable to be destroyed through lack of proper laws, that we are likely to have an overflow of production from the country to the south of us, the moment production overtakes consumption as it is doing—in fact already has done in many lines—it will withdraw from industry. If our manufacturers have not assurance that they will be protected, they are going to withdraw from business. The ship of industry will be thrown on her beam ends. With capital withdrawn from manufacturing we shall be compelled to rely upon our agriculture simply. Now, no country ever made a success of itself unless it was a manufacturing country, unless as it increased in wealth its industries were diversified. I say that if this agreement goes through as it now stands, if the material to be used in the betterment of this railway for fifty years—and I have shown that the betterments in ten or fifteen years will cost more than the original construction—if that material comes into this country free of duty that will be a most severe blow to our manufacturing industries. Some members of the government maintain that the government have this in their own hands, and that only if the government import direct will the goods escape duty. I say, and my contention has been backed up by eminent legal authority, that under this Act the government have not the power to import material free of duty, but will be compelled by the Grand Trunk Pacific to import it free of duty, because, under the agreement they only pay interest on the lowest possible cost of construction. I appeal to the government to reconsider this clause and to protect our manufacturers to the very fullest extent. If they do not do that, I feel certain that no Act that has been passed in this House for many a year will be such a detriment to the prosperity of the country as will this, because the price of importation of railway supplies for the benefit of that road will, in a measure, govern the prices of importation for all the other railways. Therefore, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Broder :

That all the words after the word 'that' to the end of the question be left out and the following substituted therefor :—'The Bill be referred back to a Committee of the Whole House with power to amend the same by striking out section 33 of the Bill as reported and substituting therefor the following' :—

'Notwithstanding anything contained in section 17 of the said contract, all materials or supplies of any kind which are not the products of Canadian labour and which are imported for the purpose of the construction of the said eastern division by or on behalf of the said commissioners or by or on behalf of any contractors, workmen, agents or servants for the construction of the said eastern division, or for the improvement, replacement of structures or otherwise upon capital account for betterment of the said eastern division as in clause 16 of the said contract provided shall be liable to the usual customs duties provided by the statutes in that behalf and shall be included in and form part of the "cost of construction" mentioned in section 15 of the said agreement, or of the capital account or betterments mentioned in section 16 of the said agreement, as the case may be.'

In moving that amendment, I do appeal to the government to reconsider the position they have taken and further to amend this Bill so as to protect our manufacturers and make it quite clear that all goods imported into Canada for the capital account of this railway shall be subject to pay duty, as provided for now under section 33, so far as concerns the original cost of the road. I cannot see why, when the government have accepted the position that material coming in for the original construction should pay duty and that this shall be added to the capital account on which three per cent interest is to be paid, they should not extend that agreement and make it include all material brought in for betterments. There is more reason to apply it to the betterments than to the original construction, because we do not know how in the next fifty years, the duties may change, and it is most important that there should not be an exception on the statute-books covering such a large import as will be made under this clause. There is no reason why this company should be treated in any different way from others. And if it should happen that our duties are raised all round, then the clause in the Bill as it now stands will appear all the more as a glaring inconsistency, and will be all the greater danger to our industries.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). I do not desire to follow the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Osler) in the general discussion of the fiscal policy into which he entered ; I prefer to confine myself to the particular point which is the subject of his motion. My hon. friend has again said that the goods imported for the betterment of this railway on its completion will be imported free of duty ; that they must be imported free of duty and that he has presented to this House legal opinions in confirmation of that view. I must again state that the hon. gentleman is in that respect mistaken ; he has produced no legal opinion to say that one penny's worth of these goods must be imported free of duty. He has presented legal opinions dealing with the adjustment of the capital account between the government and the Grand Trunk Railway Company, a very distinct and separate question. The position of the government with respect to these importations, if importations are to be made, will be precisely the same position as that occupied by the government for many years with respect to the Intercolonial Railway. That is to say, if the government desire to import goods from abroad for the use of the Intercolonial the government may either pass these goods through the customs house free of duty or may, if they see fit, allow them to pass in as private importation and duty may be paid ; the matter is entirely optional with the government. The position in which this matter will be left as it now stands is exactly the same as that occupied by the government in relation to the Intercolonial now and for many years past, the same as it was during all the years when the fiscal policy of hon. gentlemen opposite was in operation. There is no change whatever. The government have the privilege if they so wish to bring goods in free without having them go through the form of passing through the customs house. As a rule the government does not avail itself of that privilege but has in some instances, chiefly with regard to importations of rails, availed itself of it. But it is a pure matter of option and there is not a line in this contract which obliges the government to import a penny's worth free of duty. The government may exercise that right if it so wishes just as it may in relation to the Intercolonial. Inasmuch as there is no change in the position, and as the law is left exactly in the same position under this Bill as it has been for many years, we see no reason for the change which the hon. gentleman proposes.

Mr. ANDREW BRODER (Dundas). I wish to say a few words in reference to what might be called the 'blue-book railway.' So far it is only in the blue-books and the mountains of information that the hon. gentleman has presented to the House and to the country are not so hard to find as the hon. gentleman might suppose. I desire to read from this interesting document a clause in one of the reports of the engineer's or officers who were asked to report to show how they intend to get information. He says here on page 72, speaking of the north country around the region of Hudson bay :

> It would be the means of opening up a country hitherto shrouded in a very considerable degree of darkness, and enable us to obtain full and reliable information.

The idea of any person building a railway in order to get information in regard to any locality ! That is the proposition, that we will build this railway in order to get information about a certain country through which we intend it to pass. If you look at this map what do you find ? You find a red line drawn across the map from Moncton to Port Simpson. I want to call the attention of the right hon. gentleman to this. A great deal has been said about being free from American influence. We are to go away to the north away from the contamination of these Americans whom hon. gentlemen opposite were courting a few years ago. Does the right hon. gentleman not know that when he lands at Port Simpson he is right close to the disputed territory in reference to the Alaska boundary, right within reach of American influence ? I do not for a moment pretend to admit or to say, as a public man or a member of this House, that Port Simpson is not entirely within Canadian territorry. But when you get to Port Simpson you are very close to the disputed territory about which negotiations are at present going on. Thus hon. gentlemen are going right into trouble instead of out of it and it is well to consider all these things when we are talking about a railway of which the government seem to know very very little.

I wish to call the attention of the right hon. gentleman to another point. When freight comes from the west to the great lakes it is virtually common property because there you get competitive rates. But it is proposed to build this road out of reach of that competition so that it will be impossible to obtain cheaper rates owing to any competition that might exist at the great lakes. It is being made impossible for this country to solve this question which every Canadian is anxious to have solved, the obtaining in a reasonable way of cheaper transportation for the products of Canada. Not one of the gentlemen who have advocated this scheme from the right hon. gentleman down to his most humble follower has been able to prove that this proposal will lower the freight rates of this country one cent per hundred pounds, that cannot be done under the proposed scheme and that is a question that should be solved by this House.

While I am on my feet I wish to say further that the Finance Minister takes a peculiar position in disputing the contention of the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Osler) in reference to the position of the government in regard to the duty on importations for the betterment of this road. The Minister of Finance says that the government will be in the same position as they are in with reference to the Intercolonial. Is that a fact ? Who will have the control of the purchasing of supplies for the betterment of this road ? It will not be the government but the contractors, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and they will be able to claim the right to have that advantage, under that contract, of freedom from duty in reference to any importations for the betterment of this road and they will force hon. gentlemen opposite to carry out that contract. The government are not in the position the hon. Minister of Finance says. Why ? Because the government are the absolute owners of the Intercolonial, but in the other case, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company have a right to purchase the goods and hon. gentlemen opposite would be forced to carry out this provision.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is not so. The Grand Trunk will not have the power to make these importations. It is the government and the government only which will have that right.

Mr. BRODER. Then I wish to ask this simple question. Why did hon. gentlemen opposite take so much credit for the clause obliging the builders to buy all their materials in Canada ? If you are going to do it why do you have to put a clause in the Bill pledging yourself to do it and why do you take any credit to yourselves for that? The clause has no meaning; it is merely clap-trap, if what the hon. gentleman now says is true, so you had better quit blowing this horn about buying everything in Canada. There is nothing in it.

I do not care which horn of the dilemma the hon. gentleman takes. He is welcome to it. It will not hurt the horn, but I do not know what would become of him. There ought to be no doubt at all on this point, and it is an easy matter to fix it in such a way that there would be no doubt. I think we have a perfect right to deal with Canadian interests and to deal with them in a permanent way. This report to which I have already referred advocates the building of roads not from east to west, but from north to south, for the purpose of opening up the country. That is what ought to be done. I want to say before I sit down that this road, if it is built, will not solve the problem that is before this country. Every man knows that if you add anything to the transportation charges of a country it is virtually a direct tax upon the producers of the country. If there is one factor more important than another in the settlement of our North-west, and in the opening up of these vast regions that we all anticipate will be opened up, it is the question of transportation, and there is no question that will affect the interests of the people who are there and the people who will eventually go there so much as the solution of this question in the interest of the people, and in the direction of securing cheaper rates from the west to the east. This road will not give the people cheaper rates. You are putting the road away outside of the region of competition to commence with. The question to be solved is how the grain or the produce of the west shall be put into the eastern markets at as low a rate as possible. This road which is proposed will not solve that question. This road, as the right hon. gentleman said in introducing the Bill, is not a purely commercial road. It has, according to the right hon. gentleman, its national features, which he took so much pride in speaking of before the House and the country. He laid great stress upon the national features of the road, but he failed to show that it will in any sense solve the problem that ought to be solved by parliament in the interest of the people generally.

Mr. GEORGE. TAYLOR (South Leeds). Mr. Speaker, just one word. The right hon. leader of the government (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier), in referring to the leader of the opposition this afternoon, made the statement that if he purchased the Canada Atlantic Railway and its steamships, those steamships, in order to carry grain from Duluth to Depot Harbour, will have to sail under the American flag. I was surprised that the hon. Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson), who ought to know better, and probably does know better, did not get up in his place, call the right hon. leader of the government down, and say: You are making a mistake. He does know better. I have been shipping grain from Canada to the United States for the last three years, and I can ship in a Canadian bottom or in an American bottom. A Canadian vessel can go to a United States port, load with coal or grain, and deliver its cargo in any port in Canada, and for the right hon. gentleman to get up and try to mislead the House in respect to this as he did before in reference to the bonding privilege——

The PRIME MINISTER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) is all wrong. If grain is carried from an American port to a Canadian port it can be carried in an American or a Canadian ship, but if bonded freight is taken from Duluth to Boston it has to be carried in an American bottom.

Mr TAYLOR. The right hon. gentleman is wrong again, and the hon. Minister of Customs will certainly contradict him, because American grain can come in an American or Canadian bottom to a Canadian port in bond. It is immaterial what boat it is carried in, whether an American or a Canadian boat. If it comes in bond it is loaded in a Canadian or American car, and it is sent through in bond. The hon. Minister of Customs will verify the statement I am making. The right hon. Prime Minister ought to know better and any hon. gentleman occupying his position ought to know what the laws governing the bonding privilege are. The hon. Minister of Customs will verify my statement, and I call upon him to verify or contradict the statement of the right hon. Prime Minister. I shall wait for the hon. Minister of Customs to answer my question.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I was not listening to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. TAYLOR. May a Canadian vessel go into an American port, load with grain, bring it to a Canadian port in bond, put it in an elevator and have it shipped out in Canadian or American cars in bond to Boston or to another American point of destination?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. It can do whatever is allowed to be done under the coasting laws of the United States.

Mr. TAYLOR. That is simply contradicting the statement made by the right hon. Prime Minister. I could not possibly have a better answer when I call upon one of the business men in this business government to contradict another member of the government. But it is the same story from beginning to end. When the Bill was introduced the people were led to believe that we were at the mercy of the United States in respect to the bonding privilege. It was said that if this road were not built for six or seven months of the year we were at the mercy of the United States, because, if the American government should choose to abrogate the bonding privilege we could not ship a pound of goods from Canada by way of an American ocean port. This statement was made by the right hon. leader of the government, knowing that we had a Canadian railway running through Canadian territory to Canadian ocean ports. Now the right hon. gentleman comes down with a blue-book containing a map, as my hon. friend from Dundas (Mr. Broder) has said, locating the line from Moncton to Winnipeg across the state of Maine. Yet, the right hon. gentleman tells the people of this country that this is to be a Canadian railway. I simply rose because I was not disposed to allow the statement of the right hon. Prime Minister or anybody else to go uncontradicted to this country that Canadian boats carrying the British flag have not the right to go to an American port and bring grain to a Canadian port either in bond or for sale in Canada.

Mr. J. D. REID (South Grenville) Mr. Speaker, I feel, before allowing this Bill to pass, that I should enter my protest against the clause that my hon. friend (Mr. Osler) proposes to amend, and that I should make a further appeal to the right hon. Prime Minister and his colleagues in behalf of the labouring classes of this country. It is very amusing to members of this House, who have listened to hon. gentlemen opposite in days gone by pretending to be friendly with the labouring men of this country, when we find them now coming down with a Bill which has not been prepared by the solicitor of the government but by the solicitor of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, containing this clause :

No addition shall be made to the cost of construction or to the capital of construction account in respect of customs duties in cases where there is direct importation of material or supplies by the government.

The Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) makes a statement that the government may or may not allow the duties to be imposed. That is no doubt true, but clause 37 says :

The company shall purchase the materials and supplies required for the construction of the western division and the equipment of the whole of the said line of railway from Canadian producers, when the same are produced in Canada, and when such material and supplies can be purchased in desirable quantities and of equal quality suitable for the purposes required.

Here is the important part :

And for prices and upon terms equally advantageous with those procurable elsewhere.

If you put the two clauses together, the result is that the contractor can get prices from foreign manufacturers, and he can go to the Canadian manufacturer and say : I can get these goods in free of duty, and the Canadian producer has either to accept these prices without the duties added, or else he loses the order.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It would not be true if the contractor said that. He could not get them in duty free.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I do not wish to cast any doubt on the word of the Finance Minister, but at the same time, I would remind him that it is the courts of the country that will construe this clause, and they may hold against his opinion. Why is the government afraid either to make this clear, or to leave it out altogether. If a Canadian producer has to accept prices in competition with foreigners, he will have to cut down the wages of his mechanics who are employed in the manufacture of these articles. We have at present in Sault Ste. Marie, a state of affairs which we all regret, but which gives us an illustration of what may happen in the future if this clause is left in the Bill. The 'Soo' works were intended to produce steel rails, and with this clause in the Bill. they would have to meet the competition of foreign manufacturers who are ready to unload their surplus stock on Canada, at prices lower than they sell for in their own country.

Mr. McCREARY. They cannot fill their orders now.

Mr. REID (Grenville). That is because the duties are so uncertain.

Mr. FRASER. They have seven dollars a ton.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The government of this country is responsible for what has happened at the 'Soo,' because they would not give sufficient protection.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). What protection on steel rails did the Sault Ste. Marie Company ask for ?

Some hon. MEMBERS. You tell.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). I can tell.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The hon. member (Mr. Johnston) knows that there is trouble in his constituency. Let me ask him if he is willing to have the duties increased for the protection of the industry in Sydney, or is he satisfied with existing conditions ?

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). I will say to hon. gentlemen, that the people who are operating in my constituency got the very duties they asked for. Let me say further that a few years ago a concern in my province came to the Conservative government, stating they were prepared to manufacture steel rails and asking for a duty, but that application was rejected.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The hon. gentleman knows that the people in his constituency were hounding the government here for months to get protection, and stating that if they did not get protection their mills would be closed down.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). And they got it.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The government gave a remedy to a certain extent by granting a bounty, but if this clause is retained in the Bill, these mills in Sydney will probably close down, because they cannot compete with the foreign manufacturers who are ready to unload their surplus stock on the Canadian market.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). That is not answering my question. I asked the hon. gentleman what protection the people operating at Sault Ste. Marie asked on steel rails.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The hon. gentleman can answer that himself when he is making his speech. In addition to steel rails, there will be enormous quantities of nails and spikes used in the construction of this road, and if this clause is retained in the Bill, the mills at Montreal and perhaps in Sydney, will not be able to supply these articles to those constructing the road. I object to this clause because it will have an injurious effect on the condition of every workingman in Canada. If the employees in Canadian manufactories are obliged to take a small wage, they will not be able to pay good prices for their clothing and other necessaries of life, and so every mechanic engaged in supplying these necessaries will be injuriously affected. I cannot understand why this clause was inserted in the Bill, execept it was done at the instance of the Grand Trunk solicitor, who, looking far ahead saw that the privilege to import free of duty, would effect an enormous saving to the Grand Trunk Company. I believe that the government are not doing their duty by the workingmen of this country, if they retain this clause, and I am satisfied that when they appeal to the country the result will be disastrous to them.

Mr. M. K. RICHARDSON (South Grey). There is abundant evidence that there is a very important element of doubt as to the legal construction which may be put upon this section. While that element of doubt exists, it must have a very damaging effect on the manufacturing and other industries of this country. If the government have it in their power, as I believe they have by accepting this amendment, to eliminate that element of doubt, thus giving a degree of stability to the industries of Canada which would tell immediately and for years to come on the advancement of the country in various directions, why cannot they accept it? It is evident that this provision has been imported into the contract entirely in the interest of the Grand Trunk people, that it has been put there at the instance and by the action of their own solicitors. It is clear, from the evidence produced in this debate, that while this element of doubt exists, it will have a depressive effect upon all the industries of Canada, not only in manufacturing, but in mining and agricultural industries. We have in section 37 of the contract a provision that:

> The company shall purchase all material and supplies required for the construction of the western division and the equipment of the whole of the said line of railway from Canadian producers——

But the conditions following that are such as to nullify it almost entirely. It just means this, that Canadian manufacturers and producers shall have the great privilege of competing on equal terms with the manufacturers and producers of any other country in the world, nothing more or less:

> —when the same are produced in Canada, and when such material and supplies can be purchased in desired quantities and of equal quality suitable for the purpose required and for prices and upon terms equally advantageous with those procurable elsewhere.

And only on these conditions will it apply. The conditions are so onerous as to nullify the very pretense which the section makes of protection to manufacturers and all Canadian producers. It would appear to me to be almost imperative on the part of the government to accept any amendment which would eliminate this element of doubt in this section, which must have a very injurious effect on Canadian industries, Canadian wealth, and Canadian advancement. I do not intend to occupy any time on this matter. I simply desire to point out that Canadian manufacturers and producers should not merely be put upon an equal basis with those of other countries. If we are to get nothing else out of this railway project, which involves such an enormous outlay of public money and such an enormous increase in the debt of the country, we ought at least to have this much out of it, to give Canadian industries that stability which is so much needed and which would warrant the investment of capital in this country in many directions. The government profess at times to have an interest in protecting our home industries; and here is a great opportunity for them. If this railroad project is to be of any use to this country at all, here is the way and the only way which I can see at present by which we can get any good out of it, and that little modicum we ought to have at least.

Amendment negatived.

Mr. G. O. ALCORN (Prince Edward, Ont.). The amendment I am about to propose, Mr. Speaker, refers to clause 7 of the Bill, which authorizes the Grand Trunk Railway to acquire, hold, guarantee pledge and dispose of stock, bonds and debentures or other securities of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, subject to the provisions of the agreement between the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and upon such terms as are specified in a resolution to that effect passed by the directors of the said company and sanctioned by a majority of the shareholders. The clauses of the agreement which relate to this subject are clauses 26 and 27. They are as follows :

The capital stock of the company shall be forty-five million dollars, of which not more than twenty million dollars shall be preferred and not less than twenty-five million dollars common stock.

The company undertakes that the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada shall acquire and take the said common stock to the amount of twenty-five million dollars, except shares held by directors, not exceeding one thousand shares, and shall hold the same during the term of the said lease, and so long as any of the bonds guaranteed by the government under the terms of this agreement shall remain outstanding unpaid.

Hon. gentlemen will be familiar with the contention raised by this side of the House with reference to the number in which the stock should be acquired and held by the Grand Trunk Railway. We on this side have contended, as set forth in an amendment proposed by the hon. the leader of the opposition, that the Grand Trunk Railway should be compelled to subscribe for this stock in the ordinary way and incur all the liabilities incident to such subscription. In other words, that they should pay for that stock in cash at par, either in one payment, or in instalments as called upon, in the ordinary way. My hon. friend the Minister of Justice, in reply to the hon. the leader of the opposition, objected to the term 'subscribe' for and argued that the Grand Trunk Railway should be at liberty to acquire that stock by any means; and that all that was necessary was that they should be compelled to hold it during the time specified in the agreement. In my opinion, the proposition of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition, is one of vast importance to the project and to the people of this country, namely, that a fund should be expressly provided in this agreement, out of which the liability of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway for its 25 per cent share of the cost of construction of the western division might be met. In the agreement there is no clause providing for any fund out of which that 25 per cent of the cost of construction may be paid. Surely there can be no reasonable objection to a provision of that kind, and I am at a loss to understand why the government, if it is guided by any ordinary business ideas in this matter, should object to it. The amendment which I beg to move, is as follows :

That section 7 be amended by striking out all the words after the word 'three' in line 42 down to and including the word 'company' in line 44 and by inserting instead thereof the words : 'subscribe and pay in cash at par for common stock and for preferred stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific Raiway Company, and may acquire, hold, guarantee, pledge, and dispose of preferred stock, bonds, debentures, or other securities of the said Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.'

As I have said, it is in my opinion of the utmost importance that these words 'subscribe and pay for in cash' should, as suggested by my hon. friend the leader of the opposition be embodied in this clause, and the Grand Trunk Railway should not be allowed, as it will be if this amendment be not adopted, to acquire the common stock by any other means. It is evident that if the Grand Trunk Railway should hold the total $25,000,000 of common stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, less $100,000 the entire control will be exclusively in the hands of that company. It will have absolute control. It may appoint every director on the board. All the employees and agents of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will be subject to its control and may be appointed and dismissed by it at will, and the object of my amendment is, in the case of such an event, to compel the establishment of the fund I have spoken of, out of which the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway may be in a position to construct its share of the western division.

The PRIME MINISTER. I shall not surprise my hon. friend if I tell him that I cannot accept his amendment and I am sure he will not expect me to go over the arguments which have already been made at length against it.

Amendment negatived.

Mr. WM. J. ROCHE (Marquette). I have an amendment which I desire to propose at this stage; and, inasmuch as the principle of this amendment was discussed in Committee of the Whole I do not intend to deal with it at great length on this occasion. I may say that in connection with this amendment the Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) took the ground that it would limit the powers of the Railway Committee in regard to the control of rates. To show that there was no force in that, it is only necessary to read the amendment. The object is not to limit the control of rates but simply to provide that the rates on this road shall not be any higher than those charged, or at any time to be charged, on the Canadian Northern Railway system. Nothing can be more important in connection with a new road than the rates to be charged to the people who have to ship their produce over that road. We have heard many objections offered in the past to the rates charged on the Canadian Pacific Railway. It has been declared that the agriculturists in the west were merely farming on shares with the Canadian Pacific Railway. And still the very men who made those assertions admit that the Canadian Pacific Railway was neither better nor worse than other corporations, and that other corporations placed in similar circumstances would do what it has done. On that reasoning, if this Grand Trunk Pacific Company comes to deal with the farmers who have no competing line—and it is provided that this line shall not be built within less than thirty miles of the Canadian Pacific Railway or the Canadian Northern—the farmer along this route will be placed in exactly the same position as were the farmers of Manitoba and the North-west in relation to the Canadian Pacific Railway, and will have to pay the rates demanded for the shipments of their products to the head of the lakes by this road. It is important that a safeguard should be provided to protect the farmers from exorbitant rates. The Minister of Justice, when he took the position that this amendment would limit the power of the railway commissioners to control rates, was asked in what respect this would be the case, replied that, according to this amendment we would be practically binding ourselves to follow the rates on the Canadian Northern Railway. That is not the intention at all. The Grand Trunk Pacific can charge lower rates than the Canadian Northern if they desire to do so; the idea of the amendment is that the rates on the Canadian Northern Railway shall be the maximum. And the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, when introducing his Railway Bill, stated the duty of the commission would be not to raise the rates but to lower the rates when it was possible to do so. So, the objection raised by the Minister of Justice is not a valid objection at all. Now, those hon. gentlemen in this House who have spoken in favour of this Bill, particularly the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) have taken the position that this road, when it is constructed, will be able to haul grain at the rate of five cents a bushel from Winnipeg to the port of Montreal. If that is the case the government should have no objection to incorporate this amendment in its agreement with the Grand Trunk Pacific people. But the very best evidence that the government and its supporters have no faith in that arrangement is the fact that they have rejected this amendment which merely provides not for a five-cent or six-cent rate which these gentlemen declare can be had over this road from Winnipeg or Brandon to Quebec—but simply that the rate shall not exceed the rates on the Canadian Northern. The rate now charged by the Canadian Northern is ten cents per hundred pounds, or six cents per bushel, from Winnipeg to Fort William. If these hon. gentlemen are not ready to make it part of the bargain that the charge for hauling grain over this road shall not exceed six cents per bushel from Winnipeg to Fort William, how can they expect to convince us that the grain can be hauled from Winnipeg to Quebec for five cents per bushel ? Hon. gentlemen opposite take the ground that the Canadian Northern are losing money in carrying grain from Winnipeg to Fort William at six cents. If that is a fact, what reason is there to expect that this new railway can carry grain a thousand miles farther east for the same amount of money. Now, however, they aver, as the reason why the Grand Trunk Pacific would carry grain cheaper than it is carried at the present time, that its fixed charges will be low. But as a matter of fact, the fixed charges of the Canadian Northern are lower than those of any railway on the American continent today. The Grand Trunk Pacific will have a capitalization of $45,000,000. That, together with its bonding issue will make an amount of $95,000,000 on which fixed charges will have to be paid. This will amount to something in the neighbourhood of $50,000 a mile which will, for many years, prevent a reduction of rates upon the road unless parliament takes steps at this incipient stage, to fix rates which shall not be exceeded. The hon. member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Scott) stated that if he thought this road would charge exorbitant rates he would support the amendment, but that he had every confidence in the enterprise that the rates would be reasonable. I must say that the hon. gentleman evinces childlike simplicity and every confidence in this corporation—very much more than he ever had in the Canadian Pacific Railway. But he admitted that the Canadian Pacific Railway was not treating the people worse than any other corporation placed in similar circumstances would treat them. And, if the hon. gentleman believes, as he declares, that the corporations were bleeding the farmers white, that they were charging the farmers such exorbitant rates that the effect was that the agriculturists were farming on shares with them. I think I can, with every confidence claim the hon. gentleman's support to my amendment, which simply declares that the rates shall not be higher than those charged by the Canadian Northern. The reason why I select that road is because, under its arrangement with the Manitoba government, its rates are under control of that government, and have been reduced four cents per hundred pounds during the last two years. Now, we on this side expect that this road is going to carry very little grain to the east by the all-rail system from Winnipeg to Quebec, Moncton, St. John or Halifax. But, practically all the grain that will be carried will have to go to a Lake Superior port, provided that branch is built which the Grand Trunk people have taken the power to build to Nepigon Bay. Therefore, my amendment limits the rates which shall be charged to Lake Superior ports, realizing as I do that the bulk of the grain will be shipped by lake and rail route, even after this road is constructed; because it is impossible, as pointed out by practical men in this House and out of it to carry grain all rail. We want to protect our farmers so that they shall not be charged exorbitant rates for the carriage of their grain to the head of navigation. Therefore, without taking up further time, I move, seconded by Mr. Boyd :

That all the words after 'that' to the end of the question be left out and the following substituted therefor :—The Bill be referred back to a Committee of the Whole with power to amend the same as follows :—

That in the transportation of traffic from or to points on the said western division by way of Lake Superior, whether such traffic be between points in Canada or be export or import traffic, the rates of transportation to be charged by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company shall not exceed the lowest rates then being charged by the Canadian Northern Railway on the lake traffic by way of Lake Superior between the same or corresponding points.

Amendment negatived.

Mr. G. W. FOWLER (King's, N.B.). I desire to move an amendment to section 7, which is so very defective that it is necessary, in order to perfect it, to move a number of amendments. The amendment which I propose is somewhat akin to an amendment moved by the hon. member for Prince Edward, Ontario, except that it goes further and is a sort of complement to that amendment. It relates to the common stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company which is to be acquired by the Grand Trunk Railway. The objection to the Bill in this particular is that under section 7 of the Bill and section 11 of the charter it is possible for the Grand Trunk Railway Company to acquire the common stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific Company without paying therefor any money or giving therefor any consideration which would be at all commensurate with the value of $24,900,000 of common stock. This we believe to be entirely wrong ; we believe that this common stock should be paid for in cash or in the equivalent of cash in order that the Grand Trunk Pacific Company will be able to complete their railroad and its equipment without having to float as large an amount of bonds as they would otherwise have to float ; that is without adding so greatly to the indebtedness of the company as they would be obliged to do if they did not receive par value for this common stock. It has been pointed out in this House that this objection existed, and I do not desire to take up much time in discussing the matter now, because I suppose that the government have hardened their hearts in respect to this matter and do not propose now to amend any portion of this contract or this Bill. At the same time I do propose to point out what has been urged already, that by allowing the Grand Trunk Railway to acquire this common stock we impose a very much greater additional burden on the people who use this road in the additional freight rates that will be required. Under the Bill as it stands there is no way of fixing the value of the privileges which may be taken in exchange for this common stock. It has been pointed out even by hon. gentlemen opposite that the guaranteeing of the bonds by the Grand Trunk will be a sufficient consideration for this $25,000,000 of stock. Then there is the additional feature that the possession of this $25,000,000 of common stock gives the Grand Trunk the absolute control of the Grand Trunk Pacific, so that the Grand Trunk Railway will control all the officials of the Grand Trunk Pacific and will be able to violate all the conditions supposed to be imposed on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway by the contract as to the carrying of freight over Canadian soil to Canadian ports without rendering themselves liable to any penalty. The Grand Trunk Railway, controlling all the officials, can easily induce these officials to persuade shippers to route their freight over the Grand Trunk to Portland and it will be absolutely impossible to trace such an action or to prevent it, and so I say that by allowing the Grand Trunk Railway to acquire this common stock in this way the government is putting this power in the hands of the Grand Trunk, which will enable them to violate with absolute impunity the agreements of the contract which has been entered into by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company. Now, Sir, I trust that the government, even at this late day, will permit this amendment to pass, that they will accept this amendment, because if they do that they will have given an earnest of their desire to make this railway which they propose to build with such an enormous amount of the people's money, a truly Canadian line, which will carry Canadian freight all the way from the west to Canadian ports, and build up this Canada of ours into a nation. I therefore beg to move:

That all the words after the word 'that' to the end of the question be left out and the following be substituted therefor:—'The Bill be referred back to a Committee of the Whole House with power to add the following as a sub-clause to section 7.

'Notwithstanding anything in this Act or in the said agreement contained, His Majesty the King, acting in respect of the government of Canada, shall not be bound or obliged to perform, carry out or fulfil any of the covenants, undertakings, conditions or stipulations in the said agreement contained on behalf of His Majesty the King, acting as aforesaid, unless and until the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada shall have subscribed for the common stock of the Grand Trunk Railway Company payable in cash at par to the amount of not less than $24,900,000.

I regret that there are not more members from the west in the House, because I think they would all certainly vote for this motion.

Amendment (Mr. Fowler) negatived on the same division.

Mr. W. B. NORTHRUP (East Hastings). Mr. Speaker, I rise to propose an amendment to the seventh clause in the following words. I move seconded by Mr. Rosamond:

That all the words after the word 'that' to the end of the question be left out and the following substituted therefor:—The Bill be referred back to a Committee of the Whole House with power to amend section 7 by adding thereto the following subsections:—

Notwithstanding anything in this Act or in the said agreement contained, His Majesty the King, acting as aforesaid, shall not be bound or obliged to perform, carry out or fulfil any of the covenants, conditions or stipulations in the said agreement contained on behalf of the Dominion of Canada, unless and until the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada shall have entered into an agreement with His Majesty the King, acting as aforesaid, by which the said Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada shall covenant and agree as follows:—

(a.) That the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company so long as the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada shall hold the common stock of the said Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company to the amount of $24,900,000, shall perform, fulfil and carry out according to the true intention and meaning thereof, all the provisions of this Act, and of the covenants, stipulations and conditions in the said agreement contained, which according to the terms thereof, ought to be performed, fulfilled or carried out by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company.

(b.) That neither the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, nor the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada shall in any matter within its powers, directly or indirectly permit, advise or encourage the transportation of traffic by routes or at rates other than those in the said agreement, provided that each of the said companies shall in all respects and in good faith use its utmost endeavours to fulfil the conditions upon which public aid is granted and accepted, namely, the development of trade through Canadian channels and through Canadian ocean ports.

I will only speak briefly on this amendment, as the subject was so thoroughly thrashed out in committee, but I will state that the object is to provide a security on the part of the Grand Trunk Railway Company that the terms and conditions which have already been agreed to by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company shall indeed and in truth be carried out. I presume that we can predicate the duty of the House to be, that, the government having entered into a contract with the Grand Trunk Pacific, which is subject to the ratification of the House, to endeavour to the best of our ability in order to safeguard the interests of the people, to throw every protection they possibly can around these interests so that the real and true intent of the contract may be in fact carried out. When we look at the contract it requires but a moment's consideration to see that it is a contract simply between the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, a contract in which there are a certain number of covenants and stipulations made by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, but we must not forget, that, although there are many covenants and stipulations on the part of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, in order to estimate the value of the covenant there are two conditions which must not be overlooked. In the first place, as to the extent of the covenant we want to see what is really undertaken by the party covenanting, and in the second place, we want to see whether the financial standing of the party giving the covenant is sufficient to secure the carrying out of the obligation. I do not intend to discuss the question of the covenants, because that has been practically settled by the various divisions which have so far taken place here, but it is quite in order to call attention to the fact that, even assuming that these covenants made by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company are expressed to an extent which is satisfactory to the people, practically we have no financial obligation on the part of the Grand Trunk Railway Company which can give us any remedy at all in so far as they are concerned. When we consider that we are making a contract with a company whose whole line when completed will be mortgaged for every single dollar that it costs to build the line, I think no further comment is necessary to show of how little value the covenant of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company really is. In fact, the government of the country is in this position: If the government claims that the covenant of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company is really a valid financial obligation, and one upon which the people can rely then the Grand Trunk Railway Company is not assuming any risk whatever in guaranteeing 25 per cent of the obligation necessary to construct this road. If we look at the position of the Grand Trunk Railway Company we find that that company, by the Act being enforced to accept practically the whole of the stock, we have the Grand Trunk Railway Company controlling the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company without any obligation whatsoever. It seems to me that if we could throw on the canvas a picture of the interest that the government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company and the Grand Trunk Railway Company really have in this particular contract, and if the picture could be drawn according to mathematical scale, showing the true interests of all these parties, it would be found that the interest of the Grand Trunk Railway Company looms up very large indeed, while, on the other hand, if we could have thrown on the canvas a picture of the obligations asssumed by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company and the Grand Trunk Railway Company, it would be found that the obligation assumed by the Grand Trunk Railway Companay is in reality very trifling. If the government should vote down this amendment, it must be on the ground that the covenant of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company is a good covenant, but if so, it is perfectly evident that the Grand Trunk Railway Company is assuming no liability whatever practically in guaranteeing the amount of the bonds it undertakes to guarantee. Therefore, as to this subclause (a), I think we are justified in assuming, that, as the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, which after all is as clay in the hands of the potter as between itself and the Grand Trunk Railway Company, the Grand Trunk Railway Company should covenant that it, itself, will see that the child of its creation shall carry out the contract which has been entered into. Another feature of the contract is as to the carrying of trade through Canadian channels and through Canadian ports. I will not occupy the time of the House in reading clauses 42 and 43 of the contract, which provides that the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company shall see that freight is routed through Canadian channels and through Canadian ports. Subclause (b) of the amendment which I moved provides that the Grand Trunk Railway Company shall do in fact itself what the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company is bound by the contract already made with the government to do. It also provides that the Grand Trunk Railway Company, itself, shall not in any roundabout way defeat the true intent of the agreement by itself doing what the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company would be liable under its covenant for doing. Therefore, without occupying the time of the House further, I submit this amendment which is in effect to secure to the people of Canada the covenant of the Grand Trunk Railway Company that in these two respects the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company shall carry out the contracts, covenants and agreements which it has made with the people of this country. While under ordinary circumstances it might not seem reasonable or fair to exact such a covenant from a third party, the Grand Trunk Railway Company, I submit, that as under the terms of this particular contract it is provided that the Grand Trunk Railway shall hold the stock and shall in effect be the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company in every sense, except liability, the amendment is not unreasonable.

Amendment (Mr. Northrup) negatived on the same division.

On motion of Mr. Lancaster, the debate was adjourned.

ADJOURNMENT—COASTING PRIVILEGES.

The PRIME MINISTER. I beg to move the adjournment of the House. In reference to a certain point, as to which my hon. friend from Leeds (Mr. Taylor) and myself do not agree, let me quote the following from an Act of the congress of United States, of February, 1898.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that no merchandise shall be transported by water under a penalty of forfeiture thereof from one port of the United States to another port of the United States, either directly or via a foreign port, or for any part of the voyage, in any other vessel than a vessel of the United States.

Mr. TAYLOR. That is quite correct with regard to coasting, but carrying from an American port to a Canadian port is a different story.

Mr. SPROULE. What business will be taken up to-morrow ?

The PRIME MINISTER. We will continue this Bill and after that we will take up some other Bills and then go into supply.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 11.25 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, September 30, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

RECEPTIONS OF PETITIONS.

Certain petitions praying that Bill (No. 235) to provide for the construction of a National Transcontinental Railway should not become law; having been read by the Clerk at the Table.

On the question—Is it the pleasure of the House to receive these petitions?

Mr. O. E. TALBOT (Bellechasse). I wish to ask, Mr. Speaker, if hon. members who present petitions of this kind in the House are responsible for the authenticity and genuineness of the signatures attached to them. I notice that on one of these petitions presented yesterday by the hon. member for Prince Edward; out of twenty-five signatures, there are twenty-one written by the same hand and in the same ink, and without any evidence as to the witnessing of these signatures. Are the members who present these petitions responsible for that?

Mr. SPEAKER. It certainly would be irregular that the signatures on petitions presented to this House should be signed by the same person. Petitions should be signed by those whose names are supposed to be attached to them. Rule 84 says:

Petitions to the House shall be presented by a member in his place, who shall be answerable that they do not contain impertinent or improper matter.

The petitions were received.

QUESTIONS.

IMPERIAL SERVICE ORDER.

Mr. CLARKE—by Mr. Taylor—asked:

1. On whose recommendation were the Imperial Service Orders and medals, recently issued to members of the Dominion and provincial civil service?

2. Under what system was the selection made in each case; and is the same authority responsible for all decorations and medals issued?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The Imperial Service Order is a new order created by His Majesty the King for rewarding long and faithful performance of duty in connection with the civil service in different parts of the British empire. Of course, I need not say that the conferring of the Order is a prerogative of His Majesty the King, after advice is tendered to him by His Excellency the Governor General, who has previously consulted his ministers and who are responsible.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE, 1903.

Mr. CLANCY asked:

1. What was the total amount of revenue collected for and during the fiscal year 1903?

2. What was the total expenditure for the fiscal year 1903?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). The final figures for the fiscal year recently closed have not yet been made out.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

MR. F. L. CHEVRIER—MISS EDNA CHARBONNEAU.

Mr. FOWLER—by Mr. Lancaster—asked:

1. Is F. L. Chevrier, son of Mrs. L. D. Chevrier, employed in the Customs Department in Montreal? If so, what salary does he receive?

2. Is Edna Charbonneau, niece of Mrs. L. D. Chevrier, employed in the Printing Bureau? If so, what salary does she receive, and on whose recommendation was she appointed?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. Wm. Paterson). I do not know who Mr. F. L. Chevrier's mother is, but there is an officer of that name employed in the Custom's Department in Montreal, who receives a salary of $900 a year, and I consider him a very efficient officer.

The PRIME MINISTER. With reference to Edna Charbonneau. I have no information that she is the niece of Mrs. L. D. Chevrier, but she is the daughter of a widowed mother with four children. She is employed in the Printing Bureau and is paid $5.50 a week. She was appointed on good recommendation.

DIRECT IMPORTATION BY GOVERNMENT.

Mr. OSLER—by Mr. Taylor—asked:

1. What classes of goods, and what value, have been imported direct by the government of Canada in each fiscal year for the three years ending 30th June, 1903?

2. If duty had been collected on such imports by the government, what would have been the amount of the duty collected on such imports in each year specified above?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. Wm. Paterson.) The value of 'articles imported by, or for the use of, the Dominion government, or any of the departments thereof, or by and for the Senate and House of Commons' free of duty during the undermentioned fiscal years are respectively as follows: 1901, $1,646,337; 1902, $2,607,664; 1903, $1,407,060. The inquiry cannot be further answered at present. A special classification of invoices at various ports of entry, requiring time for its preparation, would be necessary before all the information asked for could be furnished.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Mr. PORTER—by Mr. Taylor—asked:

1. Has W. McLeod, C.E., made his report upon the work assigned to him in regard to the location, feasibility and cost of construction of the south-eastern terminus of the Trent Valley canal, to determine which route is preferable, that proposed to terminate at Port Hope or that at Trenton?

2. If such report has not been made, when may it be expected to be made?

3. Will such report, if made or when made, be laid upon the Table of this House?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding).

1. Mr. H. A. F. McLeod has reported on the feasibility and cost of construction of the south-eastern terminus of the Trent canal.

2. Answer to No. 1 disposes of this question.

3. Yes.

CANADIAN NATIONAL GALLERY.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked :

1. How much has the government already expended within the last seven years for pictures, paintings, and other works of art for the Canadian National Gallery, or for other purposes ?

2. What sums have been expended for the works of Canadian artists ?

3. Under whose supervision are these works of art selected ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland) :

1. $9,250 for pictures, &c., $3,635.58 caretaker's salary, and $1,964.81 for repairs, &c.

2. $1,720 for painting, &c., and $330 for statuary.

3. On the recommendation of two members of the Royal Canadian Academy and a representative of the Department of Public Works.

THE DISTURBANCES AT SAULT STE. MARIE.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the Orders of the day are called, I would like to ask the government whether they have any further information as to the disturbance at the Sault, which would seem to have been of a somewhat more serious character than was anticipated by my right hon. friend yesterday. I observe from the newspaper reports that two men were shot, one named Dault, from Lake St. John, Quebec, and another named Grenier, from Ottawa. The report states that Dault was shot in the neck and Grenier in the leg. Another report indicates that one of these men was very seriously injured. It has even been reported—I do not know with what truth—that he has died. It would also appear that some portion of the permanent force of the country has been called out. I would like to ask my hon. friend what is the total force, whether permanent or militia, now engaged in subduing the disturbance, and under what circumstances they have been called out. There is a further newspaper report to the effect that a bulletin has been placed on the door of the company's offices in the following terms:

Officers and employees of the Consolidated Lake Superior and Subsidiary Companies : The president and directors in New York have been unable to raise money to pay to-day the wages and salaries now due the men and officers of the company. Advice received from New York this morning indicates that our president and directors have a plan to raise the money to not only pay the men, but to start up the works, that seems to promise success. The plan has the endorsement and promise of support of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, and the Hon. Geo. W. Ross, Premier of Ontario, and it is expected to produce the necessary money within thirty days. While we regret very much the inability of the company to pay to-day, the fact remains that there is not money to pay with. There seems to be only one thing left for the men to do, and that is to accept the offer of work elsewhere, leaving their checks with friends, responsible attorneys, or business men, to collect and send to them when the company pays them. Bear in mind that your wages will have to be paid ultimately, and constitute a just obligation against the company, which all the property and other assets of the company will ultimately be liable for. Any men who cannot get free transportation to new work can no doubt get enough money advanced on their time checks by business houses to pay their way to their new work.

There are just these points on which I would like my hon. friend to give information. What is the situation in Sault Ste. Marie with respect to this disturbance ? What portion of the permanent force has been called out ? What portion of the militia force is also on duty there ? At whose instance have these forces been called out ? And what truth is there in the statement affixed to the door of the company's offices that some plan has been proposed to the government, which has the endorsement and the promise of the Prime Minister, by which it is expected the necessary money will be obtained to pay the men their wages ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The statement which my hon. friend has read with regard to a plan for raising money has not been submitted to me, and I do not know exactly what it means. I have only to say that no plan of any kind for raising money has been submitted to me, either directly or indirectly. With regard to the condition of things at Sault Ste. Marie, the last information that I have personally received is from Mr. Dyment, a member of this House, who wired me late last evening to this effect :

Trouble here has somewhat subsided. Don't anticipate further rioting after arrival of troops to-day. Many arrests made. Policemen injured and two rioters shot, but not fatally. Troops now guarding government canal and allied companies works.

As to the other question, it will be answered by my hon. friend the Minister of Militia.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. Sir F. W. Borden). The municipal authorities at Sault Ste. Marie applied, under the clause of the Militia Act providing for such a contingency, to the senior military officer there, the colonel of the 97th regiment, for protection. The company at the Sault was accordingly called out by that officer, and I think a company was brought from the adjacent village of Thessalon. Finding the matter more serious than he thought he could cope with, the senior officer applied to the district officer commanding, at Toronto, Col. Buchan. Col. Buchan notified the Adjutant-General here that he considered it proper immediately to despatch sixty of the permanent force to the Sault, which, I presume has been done, and that he had given orders to draft some two hundred men from regiments within the city of Toronto. That is all the information which I have to give. I have had no report as to the shooting; but from what I gather from the newspapers, I believe the shooting has been done by the police officers, and not by the militia. All the proceedings have been done in the regular way, under the clause of the Militia Act, to which I have referred, through the senior officer at the Sault, and the district officer commanding at Toronto.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Does the Militia Act provide for the calling out of the permanent force in that way?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I believe it does.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman may be right; I was not aware of it. Of course, I am not very familiar with the provisions of the Act, but my recollection was not in accord with that. The hon. gentleman has not stated how many of the active militia are on duty there outside of the permanent force.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think about 100. I think there are four companies in the 97th regiment, numbering about 200 men. Two of the companies were called out, but they did not turn out in full strength. I am not aware that the 200 men who have been drafted from the different regiments of the city of Toronto have yet been sent forward. They are held as a reserve in case of emergency.

Mr. BENNETT. I may say that they went up yesterday afternoon. I saw the train pass at Orillia.

DOMINION ELECTIONS ACT.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the Orders of the day are called, I would like again to call the attention of the government to Bill (No. 3) to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900, which was introduced by my hon. friend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) and was referred at the instance of the hon. Minister of Finance to a special committee. I believe that a good deal of work has been done by the committee in re-drafting the Bill; but it will be absolutely impossible for it to be dealt with this session unless it is removed from public Bills and orders and placed among government orders. As the Bill was referred to a special committee at the instance of my hon. friend the Minister of Finance, I had expected that it would have been transferred to the government orders before this. I would like to ask the intention of the government with regard to it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have already intimated, in reply to a question that was asked a day or two ago, that it is the intention of the government to bring the question forward, in order that the committee may present the measure to the House and the House may have an opportunity of discussing it. It will be placed on the government orders for that purpose at an early day.

NATIONAL TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

House resumed adjourned debate on the proposed motion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier for the third reading of Bill (No. 235) to provide for the construction of a National Transcontinental Railway.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER (Lincoln and Niagara). Mr. Speaker, I suppose it is not necessary for me to tell the House, in view of the several votes which have been cast by me on this measure, both yesterday and at earlier stages of the debates which have taken place upon it, that I am opposed to the third reading of this Bill. Notwithstanding the amendments which we think it in the interest of the people to propose or the force or strength with which we may advocate them, it is evident that the government are determined to carry the Bill through as it is. Several amendments to section 7 of the Bill now before the House were voted down, and I propose to submit an amendment which, though not the one I would have submitted in the first instance, I think should in the present conditions be accepted. Under that section the Grand Trunk Railway may hold securities of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, but there is nothing in it to guard the rights of the people. Its sole object seems to be to enable these two companies to deal with these bonds and securities as they may see fit in their own interests. That section was amended in the Committee of the Whole by the addition of three subsections. The first of these subsections, subsection 2 in the Bill, provides that the Grand Trunk Railway shall guarantee the bonds of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway for the balance required for the complete construction of the western division. Subsection 3 provides that the Grand Trunk Railway shall hold $24,900,000 of the common stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway; and by subsection 4 the Grand Trunk Railway must hold the said common stock during the entire term of lease mentioned in clause 20 of the agreement, and so long as any of the bonds guaranteed by the government remain outstanding and unpaid. In an earlier part of the debate the government, for some reason I cannot understand, refused to make it one of the conditions of the bargain that the Grand Trunk Railway shall be liable for the covenants of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. One would think that if the government expect the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway to carry out its agreement, they would certainly make the Grand Trunk Railway bind itself as surety, in every way responsible for the carrying out of the contract. But the government took the position that there was no necessity to do this, because, by the very nature of this transaction, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway would not fail to carry it out. I do not think that that will be satisfactory to the people. If the government are so certain that the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will carry out its contract, and if the Grand Trunk Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway are acting in good faith, none of the parties should object to such a provision, and I cannot understand why it was not agreed to. However, all the amendments we proposed to section 7 have been voted down, and consequently there is in that section no protection for the public at all. The Grand Trunk Railway may acquire the stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway for nothing, and in such an event the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway would not have the means to carry out its obligations. The only thing left is to insist that the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway shall not give away its stock for nothing—that so long as the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway has not fulfilled all its obligations to the government it shall not be allowed to make a present of its stock to the Grand Trunk Railway. By such a provision we will be placing the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in a solvent position. We will put it in such a position that it will be more likely to carry out its contract with the government, and make that profit out of the venture which it must reasonably expect. The only thing, therefore, that is left apparently for us to do is to move that the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway shall not be allowed to make any disposition of its stock to the Grand Trunk Railway without getting cash for it at par value in return, so long as its agreement with the government remains unfulfilled. Otherwise we might be met some day with this plea from the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. That company might say to us: We cannot do what we agreed, because we have not the means. The Grand Trunk Railway refuses to do what it was called upon to perform under our contract, and as it was not compelled to pay cash for the stock it got, we are without any means to go on with the undertaking. I would beg to move, therefore:

That all the words after the word 'that' to the end of the question be left out and the following substituted therefor, 'the Bill be referred back to a Committee of the Whole House with power to amend the same by adding to section 7 the following subsection:—

Notwithstanding anything in the Act incorporating the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company the said company shall not, until it shall have paid and satisfied all bonds and debentures guaranteed by the Dominion of Canada and performed all the covenants and conditions of the lease in the schedule of this Act referred to, issue any common or preferred stock of the said company otherwise than subject to the payment in cash of the full amount of the stock so subscribed.

My amendment amounts to this, that the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway should not be allowed to beggar itself for the benefit of the Grand Trunk Railway. It is the Grand Trunk Pacific that is responsible to us, and this company should not be allowed to make itself insolvent before it has satisfied its obligations to the people of Canada. I can not, for the life of me, see what objection there can be to this amendment. It is not as if I were opposing the scheme. It is true that, if I were free to have my own way, I would not have the country become a party to this bargain. At the same time, I recognize the fact that the government, in insisting upon putting the scheme through, accepts the responsibility for it. I am trying now, without prejudice, to make the scheme as little unworkable and as little unfair to the people as I can. There is only one company that is under obligation to the Dominion of Canada for the carrying out of this contract and it is our duty to safeguard the assets of that company and keep it as solvent as possible, so that it may be able to carry out its contract with us. After the Grand Trunk Pacific has done all it has contracted with the government, representing the people, to do, it can give away its stock if it chooses—that is its own business perhaps. But it surely is our business to provide that these assets shall not be given away so long as obligations to the people on the part of this company are unfulfilled. We must not leave this company in the position to say: We are honest and desire to carry out our obligations, but the Grand Trunk Company have our assets and we are financially unable to do what we agreed to do. The other amendments to section 7, though, I submit they were proper amendments, have been voted down by this House, and the section stands as it did. But, in respect to the matter I have been dealing with, it seems to me quite clear that that section is imperfect, and that it would be improved by amending it as I propose. This company, the Grand Trunk Pacific, make a contract with the people of Canada, and they make a contract also with the Grand Trunk, which is a sort of side partner. Surely it is open to us, and not only open to us but our bounden duty to see to it that the Grand Trunk Pacific—being the only company responsible, for the government refuse to make the Grand Trunk responsible—shall keep itself solvent and shall not make presents of its stock until it has fulfilled its obligations to the people. The people should not be kept wondering and undecided whether they are dealing with the Grand Trunk or the Grand Trunk Pacific. It is not necessary to weary the House with a further discussion, for this matter has been debated both on the second reading and in Committee of the Whole, so that the people are in possession of the facts and discussion in the country can go on. And I must say that the more the discussion has gone on among the people, the more the people have said the opposition are right and the government wrong. The opposition is perfectly right in determining not to leave the job so long as there is any opportunity left of setting right in any particular this contract which the government forces upon the country.

Amendment (Mr. Lancaster) negatived.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Lost on the same division.

Mr. SPEAKER. Lost on the same division as last recorded yesterday.

ORDER IN THE HOUSE.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). If I may be permitted, I would like to ask my right hon. friend (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to co-operate with you Mr. Speaker, in maintaining better order during this forenoon. I do not think it is in keeping with the decorum of this House that when an hon. gentleman on either side is speaking, six or seven others should be carrying on conversation almost at the top of their voices, as has been the case for some minutes past. I think that my right hon. friend, and you, Sir, in particular, must see to it that there is a little better order kept in the House. I refer at this moment particularly to hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House, although, as I said on a previous occasion, I have noticed the same thing on this side, and I deprecate it as much here as there. But during the last fifteen minutes when my hon. friend from Lincoln and Niagara (Mr. Lancaster) was speaking, I noticed at least half a dozen gentlemen carrying on conversation in tones almost as loud as those of my hon. friend in addressing the House. I do not think we should conduct the business of the House in that way. Some restraint should be put upon hon. gentlemen; and I, for my part am prepared to support you, Mr. Speaker, to the utmost of my power, so far as this side of the House is concerned, in putting a stop to this undesirable condition of things. I trust the right hon. gentleman (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) will support you with regard to the other side.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I am afraid the sinning is not all on one side——

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I have said so.

The PRIME MINISTER. And my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) acknowledges it. I have no hesitation in saying that, for my part. I shall be glad to co-operate with him, and with you, Mr. Speaker, in preserving order. I suppose that if we maintain order we shall reach prorogation all the sooner—and it ought to be sufficient inducement for us all to behave. If my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) says that he will take care of his own side, I will try to take care of ours ; and you, Mr. Speaker, will take care of both.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not know that I said I would take care of my own side ; I do not know that they require much care. But I said that I would endeavour to support you, Mr. Speaker, so far as my own side is concerned, and that is what I suppose you would desire.

Mr. SPEAKER. For my part I will do my best to maintain order.

NATIONAL TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

Mr. RICHARD BLAIN (Peel). Before the third reading of this Bill is carried, I wish to occupy the attention of the House for a very short time to move an amendment, which applies to section 8, it is as follows :

> That all the words after the word 'that' to the end of the question be left out, and the following be substituted therefor : 'the Bill be referred back to a Committee of the Whole House with power to amend section 8 by adding thereto the following words :—
> 'Provided, however, that the surveys and plans, showing the most favourable route and the best practicable grades and curvatures that can be obtained, together with an estimate of the cost based thereon, shall be first submitted to the parliament for approval.'

It seems to me that this is an amendment that should meet the approval of both sides of the House. When this Bill was first introduced by the Prime Minister, the leader of the opposition challenged the government to state within ten million dollars what the cost of this work would be. I listened with great attention to the whole debate, lasting many weeks, and I have not heard any member of the government attempt to answer or to solve that question. I am quite sure that the people of Canada will regret very much that the parliament of Canada propose to expend in the neighbourhood of one hundred or one hundred and twenty million dollars without first laying upon the Table of the House some closer estimate of what this work is going to cost, and some estimate of its length, within a few miles, and the character of the country it is to traverse.

During this discussion a large number of petitions have been presented to the House coming from every section of Canada, coming from the farmers of this country, who ask that, following ordinary business principles, the government should lay upon the Table some estimate of the cost. Surely, there must be some duty resting upon the government in respect to the expenditure of the people's money. It is all very well to say that we have prosperous times now, it is all very well for the Finance Minister to say that we have a flowing treasury—that is all very acceptable, and is appreciated by the people of Canada. But notwithstanding that, Mr. Speaker, the people of this country expect that their money should be expended in a business-like manner, and with that in view they have spoken out in very loud tones, I think, judging from the large number of petitions that have been presented from day to day, signed by hundreds and hundreds of electors belonging to both sides of politics. I think it is proper that a copy of these petitions should be placed upon the 'Hansard,' and I propose, with the kind indulgence of the House, to read it. It deals with the subject of the resolution which I have moved, because it asks for an estimate of the cost of this proposed railway.

To the Honourable
The Senate and House of Commons of Canada,
In Parliament assembled.

The petition of the undersigned electors of the Dominion of Canada humbly showeth :

1. That a wise and prudent solution of the great question of transportation is of the utmost importance as regards the future of this Dominion.

2. That your petitioners are of opinion that it would be unwise and imprudent to take definite action until the government and parliament are fully possessed of the information essential to a proper decision of that question.

3. That the country is not possessed of such information ; that the government has appointed a commission to investigate and report upon the whole subject of transportation.

4. That a project of such magnitude should not be undertaken without the most complete and accurate surveys, under the direction and control of engineers of standing and repute.

5. That such surveys should be in the hands of the government and of parliament before the credit of the Dominion is committed to an enterprise which involves enormous obligations.

6. That those obligations cannot properly be estimated before such surveys shall have been made.

7. That, however, the most competent men are of the opinion that the cost of the projected line between Winnipeg and Moncton will reach the enormous amount of upwards of $120,000,000.

8. That no evidence has been adduced so far during the long discussion that has taken place to establish that such a large expenditure of public money will cheapen the freight rates for the products of the west, or establish more satisfactory communication between the different parts of the Dominion.

9. That, on the contrary, it is greatly to be feared that by pledging the credit of the country to such a vast extent, the government will make it impossible to carry out works better calculated to meet the transportation needs of the country.

10. That the government, parliament and taxpayers should have an opportunity to learn the results of the investigation of the said commission ; and to examine the evidence upon which such results were arrived at.

Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray that the said Bill now before parliament may not now become law ; but that its further consideration by the government and by parliament shall be deferred until such full and accurate information shall have been obtained and laid before parliament.

That is a copy of the petitions that are being presented to this House by the hundreds within the last few weeks. Some little effort has been made on the other side of the House to cast reflection upon the genuineness of the signatures to some of these petitions. I may remind our hon. friends opposite that from every section, almost from every county, have come petitions from the farmers who have put their names to these documents, making the reasonable request that before their money is expended the government should apply to this enterprise the same business principles that any private company would apply to its own business. I have no hesitation in saying that the electors who signed these petitions are responsible citizens—we have seen them coming from the great metropolis of Montreal this morning signed by 5,000 electors of that great city—surely these deserve some consideration by the government.

We are asked to construct this road without proper estimates. The right hon. first minister has laid upon the Table a Blue-book, that has been occasionally referred to in this discussion. I do not propose to make any extended reference to it, only to read one short paragraph in respect to the timber. It has been frequently alleged in this House by hon. gentlemen opposite that this road ought to be constructed through the northern part of the provinces of Quebec and Ontario for the purpose of developing timber limits and the timber resources of those regions. Here is a paragraph from the report of Mr. Ogilvie, D.L.S., 1891, addressed to the Minister of the Interior, in which he makes this statement :

If the timber on all the other rivers flowing into the bay is no more important than that I saw on the Abitibi, I would hesitate as to the timber resources of that district being valuable; for though it is all thickly wooded, only a small percentage of it (along the river at least) is large enough for merchantable lumber.

So you see that this gentleman says that the timber limits of that section of the provinces of Quebec and Ontario to which reference is made in this Blue-book, are not so valuable as the members of the government would lead us to believe. Now, in so far as the transportation of wheat is concerned, I wish to give one short quotation from a speech of the First Minister when discussing the transportation question last session. On page 958 of the 'Hansard' of 1902, I find he made this statement :

But, unfortunately, there is a rugged section along the shores of Lake Superior which hardly admits of wheat being commercially carried through.

When the First Minister was discussing the transportation question in the last session of parliament, with all this information in the hands of the government—because doubtless there is no information of more recent date than that they possessed last session—with all the information at his disposal with all the knowledge the right hon. gentleman has been able to obtain as First Minister for the purpose of solving the great transportation question during all the time he has been in public life, during the seven years he has been Prime Minister of this country, I say with all this information, the right hon. gentleman stood up in this House last session and said that the carriage of wheat from the west would be a failure as a commercial enterprise. I do not quite understand what change has come over the hon. gentleman's views. Surely the rocks that were there last year are there still; this rugged country that he referred to last session is still as rugged as ever. The hon. gentleman has not given us any information more recent than that. And yet the First Minister is prepared to say now that a road can be constructed through that country that would be of commercial value. It does look as if some unknown person had stepped in to the counsels of the government and demanded a speedy solution of this question in the interest of the Grand Trunk Railway. I do not quite understand what the right hon. gentleman means. We are expected as a Canadian parliament to conduct our business in a businesslike manner. The government of Canada, by reason of owning and operating the Intercolonial Railway has the advantage of knowing something about the cost of railway construction, inasmuch as it has expended an enormous sum ranging from seventy-five million upwards upon government roads in this country.

It has been expended, not by private enterprise, but by the government themselves. The government of this country, year after year, have been expending vast sums in the purchasing of cars, and of steel rails, and of locomotives, and of railway ties, indeed, in the purchase of everything that enters into railway construction, and the government, therefore, should have been able to lay before the people of this country a fair estimate of the cost before they would undertake such a gigantic work, notwithstanding the government has this advantage, they are now in the railway business themselves, notwithstanding that they have been equipping the Intercolonial Railway by taking down the old bridges and replacing them with newer and up-to-date bridges, notwithstanding that they have told the people of this country that they have practically equipped anew the Intercolonial Railway by the construction of better roadbed, by the purchase of better freight cars and better passenger cars—notwithstanding all this, the people of this country are asked to pay this enormous amount of money without the Railway Department coming forward and laying upon the Table of the House a statement of what, in their opinion, would be a proper estimate of the cost of this road. Further than this, it would not be an unreasonable request for the people of Canada to ask some leading railway man, either in this country, in the United States or in England, some man who has a reputation as a railway expert, who has constructed railways in this country, like Sir William Van Horne, to give an opinion upon the cost of the building of that road before we are asked to vote the money. As it is, we are asked to do so, without having the opinion of any great railway man in this country excepting that of the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), and I noticed the other day that the right hon. the First Minister rather shoved him aside and did not put quite so high an estimate on him as a railway expert as when he introduced the Bill.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.). Has the hon. gentleman read Sir Sandford Fleming's report?

Mr. BLAIN. I may say to the hon. gentleman of many years, that I have read Sir Sandford Fleming's report, and that it has been read in this House over and over again in the absence of my hon. friend during this discussion. Sir Sandford Fleming's report, in so far as it refers to the province of New Brunswick, and that gentleman states that the northern part of the province of New Brunswick, where this government propose to construct the road, is a very rough country, so rough that he would not recommend the government of earlier days to construct the Intercolonial Railway there. That is what he said in the report which is in the possession of this House at the present time.

Just one word in conclusion in respect to the country through which this railway is to pass in the province of Ontario and in the province of Quebec. My hon. friend the Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) made a statement in this House the other day that there was a very large area of good land in the northern part of the province of Ontario amounting to millions of acres. If that statement be correct, and perhaps it is correct, then I say that the people of this country would expect the government to tell them within twenty or thirty or fifty miles, through what part of that country this railroad will be constructed. Why do they not tell this to the people of Quebec and of Ontario and of New Brunswick, because the electors in these three great provinces are interested in this matter, as they will have to pay some portion of the taxes of this country like all other citizens—and they are not complaining on that point—but they do expect that the government will lay before the people of this country data sufficiently accurate to enable them to judge within 100 miles where this railway will be constructed in these provinces. Is that an unreasonable request? I do not think it is, and I do not wonder that as the people come to understand this matter, information which the newspapers with their splendid facilities and enterprise, are circulating throughout the country, that we are beseiged day after day with petitions from the electors saying something must be done by this government to furnish information before they pledge the people of this country to an expenditure of at least one hundred millions of dollars.

I move the resolution which I read, seconded by Mr. McGowan, and I would earnestly hope—although perhaps it would be too much to say I expect—that the government will lay before parliament such information as will enable the electorate of this country to vote intelligently when they are asked to authorize the expenditure of so many millions of dollars.

Mr. A. E. KEMP (East Toronto). I desire to say one word in reference to this resolution, which appears to me to be one of the most reasonable that has been placed before the House in connection with this transcontinental railway project. The resolution asks that the information obtained by the government from time to time in regard to the surveys and estimates of cost shall be placed before this House. It is evident that this railway cannot be built before the House meets again; the surveys and the reports of the engineers cannot be completed before that time. Is it not, therefore, as reasonable a proposition as ever was made in this House that the information thus obtained should be placed before the House before we pass final judgment? The government, perhaps, might not then be disposed to adhere to what they had stated in regard to building a first-class railway, with one-half or four-tenth per cent grades through this country in order to carry the products of the west to the seaboard in a more economical way than by the existing routes. This country, under such circumstances, would not be under any obligation to the Grand Trunk Pacific, because parliament would have an opportunity to say whether the road shall be constructed or not. The only reports that have been placed before this House are reports of geologists, who were not instructed to investigate the regions through which they travelled for the purpose of building a modern railway, and I submit that their report is of no value when it comes to building a modern up-to-date railway. We have absolutely no information before the House from first-class competent engineers as to the suitability of that country for the building of a railway for the purpose for which this is being built. I would not have spoken on this resolution, but I wished to ask the Prime Minister a question. I read to him the other day a report from one of the Toronto newspapers that the Grand Trunk Railway themselves were making surveys between Winnipeg and the Quebec boundary. The right hon. gentleman will remember the contents of the article to which I am now referrng. I asked, why did not the government make the surveys for this government road, instead of the Grand Trunk Pacific, and also asked why it was that the information obtained by these surveyors was given to the press before it was submitted to this House. I think the Prime Minister would have replied to me the other day were it not that the chairman called 'carried,' and the resolution was hurried through. Surely the Prime Minister can give the information to the House now.

The PRIME MINISTER. What is the question?

Mr. KEMP. The question was in reference to the surveys. I will again read what was said by the Toronto 'News':

> The Grand Trunk has been exploring the country. Its officials to-day are in possession of their own surveyors' reports. These reports cover the country from Winnipeg to Lake Abitibi. These reports state that from Winnipeg to the eastern border of New Ontario a grade of four-tenths of one per cent—about twenty-one feet to the mile—is perfectly practicable. The standard of the best wheat-carrying railways of the United States can be attained.
> More than that, the fall of almost every grade is to the east. This is an immense advantage, for it means that the road will practically run down hill from Winnipeg for the thousand mile stretch in eastern Manitoba and New Ontario.
> This is a splendid start. For the first thousand miles at least the trains will roll down a continuous gentle slope. Extraordinary economy of operation should be practicable. The limit to the size of the trains will be the number of cars which a single crew can handle, rather than the hauling power of the engine. We must insist on equally good grades all the way through Quebec. It may prove the case that the height of land in Quebec will make an up hill grade necessary. The ideal road would be down hill every foot of the way from prairie to ocean. The ideal seems to be assured for one thousand of the fourteen hundred miles.

I wish to know why the Grand Trunk are making these surveys, and if they are going to be accepted by the government?

The PRIME MINISTER. The hon. gentleman asks me, if it is true that the Grand Trunk Pacific are making surveys?

Mr. KEMP. On the government line?

The PRIME MINISTER. Between Lake Abitibi and Winnipeg. The hon. gentleman also asks, if the government will avail of these surveys. I understand that the Grand Trunk have been making surveys since last fall; that they started when they first thought of this Grand Trunk Pacific scheme. I do not know for a fact whether they have done so or not. It is impossible to say what the government will do with regard to these surveys. The only thing I can say is, that we shall have surveys of our own when the commission is appointed, and these surveys in proper time will be laid before the House.

Mr. H. R. EMMERSON (Westmoreland). I would be very sorry indeed to take up the time of the House in prolonging this discussion, but there has been some reference made to the petitions presented, asking that there should be delay, because there is little knowledge of the section of the province of New Brunswick, through which this road is to run. I do not think that there is very much significance to be attached to these petitions, but there is this significance: That while they have been very carefully prepared, I have no doubt, by hon. members opposite and printed and sent throughout the country and signed in their respective constituencies it is quite apparent—at all events judging of the signatures with which I am familiar—that they are signed by friends of hon. gentlemen opposite almost exclusively. There is one very strange thing in connection with the contents of these petitions, and that is, that though they have been prepared with so much care by hon. gentlemen opposite and circulated by their political agents, there is no reference in these petitions to the alternative proposition of the leader of the opposition.

Mr. SPROULE. The alternative proposition is not about to become law, and there is no reason to petition for or against it.

Mr. EMMERSON. This fact proves, that the great body of the Conservatives, in my province at any rate, are no more in sympathy with the alternative proposition of the leader of the opposition, than are some of the hon. gentlemen's own friends in this House, who have devoted the whole time during this debate to speaking of the government proposition, and have hardly raised a murmur in favour of the proposal of my hon. friend (Mr. Borden). The hon. gentleman (Mr. Blain) who moved this amendment, has stated that there is little known of that part of New Brunswick through which this road will run. The fact that he stated that it was going to run in the northern part of the province, shows that he is ignorant of the geography of New Brunswick. I have in my hand a pamphlet issued by the board of trade of the town of Woodstock, which is situated in the county of Carleton, represented by my hon. friend opposite (Mr. Hale), and this road will run almost entirely through that rich and flourishing county. Just what portion of the county it will run through, I have no doubt will be determined by the engineers, but in order to show the resources of that county, I will read an extract from the circular to which I refer. Here is a statement of the yield of crops in Carleton county, in 1902:

Variety.	Acreage.	Bushels.	Yield Per Acre.
Wheat	2,951	62,945	21·3
Oats	42,982	1,428,325	33·2
Barley	372	10,718	28·9
Buckwheat	10,751	267,597	24·8
Potatoes	3,329	336,802	101·1

Hay—25,000 tons were shipped over the Canadian Pacific Railway, valued at $250,000.

Cheese.

	Pounds.	Value.
Manufactured in county	294,307	$29,430 70
Exported	210,450	21,450 00

Butter.

	Pounds.	Value.
Exported	115,052	23,010 40

A county that can present such a record is not to be treated in the way in which the hon. gentleman who last spoke referred to it. This does not by any means represent to the fullest extent the resources of that very flourishing county. There are many other crops which have not been mentioned. It is a splendid fruit country, as my hon. friend will testify. This statement has reference only to the settled portions within sight of the valley of the St. John There are undeveloped sections of that country, to the development of which this railway will contribute, which I am sure will be equally productive. This is only a slight evidence of the richness of other sections of that portion of New Brunswick through which this railway will run, and I could not allow to pass unchallenged the remarks of the hon. member for Peel. There appears to be on the part of some hon. gentlemen opposite an antipathy to that section of the proposed railway between Moncton and Quebec which is unwarranted by the circumstances and by the past political history of this country. My hon. friend the leader of the opposition was quite willing that such a line should be constructed. He was not quite certain as to the time when it should be constructed; but he recognized its value to this Dominion, and he recognized the fact that it brought his own city of Halifax nearer to the other cities of the Dominion and clasped the different sections of the Dominion altogether. He was willing to aid in accomplishing this desirable object—desirable by his own admission; but his colleague sitting beside him, the hon. member for South Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart), declared the proposition to build a shorter line between Lévis and Moncton to be an absolutely senseless proposition. He declared that such a line was not required, and that even though it was proposed in this Bill, it would be generations before it would be an accomplished fact. How many generations we would have to wait for it if hon. gentlemen opposite had the control of the matter, I am not in a position to say; but I do say that until we have this shorter line, until the several parts of the Dominion are brought together in the way proposed by the terms of this Bill, there cannot be that interchange of trade, commercially, politically, and socially, that there should be. I am sure that the cities of Halifax and St. John are suffering, and have been suffering since this country became a Dominion, for the want of that interchange. Certainly the province of Nova Scotia has been suffering in a way that cannot be adequately described here. The province of New Brunswick has had advantages which the province of Nova Scotia has not enjoyed. The city of St. John has been connected through the state of Maine with the city of Montreal by a short line; but the other sections of the province of New Brunswick and a great section of the province of Nova Scotia have not enjoyed that advantage. Now, there is no doubt that the antipathy and antagonism shown by hon. gentlemen opposite is injurious to the interests of the maritime provinces. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), yesterday afternoon, in a spirit which was most sectional and narrow, and in a way indicating a small-bore idea of the needs of this Dominion, complained of the disadvantages of the province of Ontario. That province has had advantages and has enjoyed them, and she certainly should not now complain if other sections of the Dominion are to have some advantages. Under these circumstances, the amendment of the hon. member for Peel, based as it is upon his antagonism to the line through New Brunswick, is unwarranted, and I have a right to assume that his objections to the other sections of the line are equally faulty.

Mr. F. H. HALE (Carleton, N.B.). Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to take up the time of this committee, and I did not intend to say anything on this subject; but in view of what my hon. friend from Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) has quoted from the pamphlet he had in his hand, I desire to say a few words in regard to the county of Carleton, which I have the honour to represent. It is well known that Carleton county is one of the most fertile districts in the Dominion of Canada, and all that the hon. gentleman has read from the pamphlet is no doubt correct. It is a very productive county, but I am sorry to say that not one pound of the produce of that county will ever be carried over the proposed road. It will pass so far to the east and through so poor a section of the county that it will be impossible for us to reach it. I am sorry that the government propose to locate this road where they do. In that location it will never be of any use to the county of Carleton or to the province of New Brunswick. It is a great pity that the road, if it is to be built, is not to be taken down the valley of the River St. John, where it would be of some benefit to the people of New Brunswick, and where it would find a good outlet in the harbour of St. John. I am sorry that this road is to be forced along without any survey or any knowledge of the country through which it is to go. I can speak from personal knowledge of the section of the country through which this road is to go. So far as the county of Carleton and the county of York are concerned, it is going where it will never be of any use to that section of the country.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). The hon. member for Westmoreland has just stated that these petitions do not make any reference to the alternative policy of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition. One would surely expect that a prospective cabinet minister would be intelligent enough to see that in a case like this, the alternative policy submitted by the leader of the opposition is not usually referred to in petitions against the legislation introduced by the government. However, the hon. gentleman has evidently not read all the petitions. He has probably taken up one of them and concluded that all the others were counterparts. But if he had looked at some of the petitions he would have found that not only is the government scheme condemned in unmeasured terms, but that practically the scheme of the leader of the opposition is endorsed, and parliament is asked to take it up instead of the other. I happen to have a petition which is the same as that which is being circulated throughout Manitoba.

Mr. EMMERSON. It is not the same as that circulated in the eastern provinces.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). I am speaking of the petition circulated in that portion of the country which this projected railway is particularly supposed to benefit. It is that portion of the country to relieve the congestion of traffic and lower the freight rates this government measure was introduced, and it is the people there who are protesting against the government scheme and asking, in effect, that the scheme propounded by the leader of the opposition be adopted in its place. Let me read the petition:

1. That western Canada is vitally interested in questions of transportation and that its progress will be checked by inadequate facilities on the one hand, or, on the other, by excessive transportation charges.

2. That it is of the utmost importance to the prosperity and development of western Canada that transportation facilities be afforded at the lowest possible rates, upon both products exported and merchandise imported.

3. That in this connection it is absolutely essential that the combined rail and water routes to the east should receive proper development.

The people of the west realize that it is by the combined rail and water routes they will get the required relief.

4. That ample and extensive railway construction in the west should be, and can be, secured upon such terms as will safeguard the public interest in low rates and abundant car supply, and will thus avoid the recurrence in the territories of the grave public injury and discontent formerly caused in Manitoba by excessive charges.

5. That the over capitalization of transportation companies is one of the most important conditions leading to unduly high rates, and should be prevented.

They see the significance of the $45,000,000 of capitalization in connection with this road, which I referred to yesterday, and which, in connection with the bond issue, will make the fixed charges so very high that it will be impossible for the company to give low freight rates.

6. That a railway system designed to move the products of the west should not be burdened by the addition of costly and needless sections; that the proposed eastern section of the Grand Trunk Pacific would be of value chiefly for the purpose of colonizing the territory it traverses; and that the western lines should not be obliged to impose rates fixed with a view to providing for the annual fixed charges upon such a section, between one and two thousand miles long, built many years in advance of settlement in the James bay basin.

This is the very scheme propounded by the leader of the opposition.

7. That the country should not be committed to the construction of the eastern section over the proposed route until full information is obtained as to distance, grades, cost and the possibilities of local traffic.

Exactly as propounded by the leader of the opposition.

8. That the effective exercise of government control of rates upon the lowest practicable basis must be the object of government policy.

Notwithstanding this, the government voted down a resolution which would place the control of the rates absolutely in the hands of the government and make the maximum rates not greater than those charged by the Canadian Northern Railway, whose rates are controlled by the Manitoba government.

9. That because of the effect it would have upon the rates and general facilities the Intercolonial should be extended to Georgian bay, with party politics excluded from its administration and its management made non-partisan and business-like, and that under these conditions its field of operation should be extended to Manitoba and ultimately across the continent.

Almost the identical words of the leader of the opposition in his speech formulating his policy.

10. That the arrangement in the Bill now before parliament by which the government is to build the section between Winnipeg and Moncton at a large cost, and then lease it for 50 years, is unsatisfactory, because so large a pledging of the public credit as would be required may prevent the undertaking of more effective transportation measures; and also because, there being no option of purchase on the western division, the government at the end of 50 years would not have the alternative of obtaining a complete transportation system under government operation.

11. That the proposed western section of the Grand Trunk Pacific from Winnipeg to Edmonton should be constructed as an additional line opening up new territory; and that the Grand Trunk Pacific Company should not be allowed to purchase the Canadian Northern Railway line instead of constructing an additional line.

The government has refused to incorporate a clause to that effect. I had the honour of introducing one myself to prevent amalgamation with the Canadian Northern Railway, but the government absolutely refused to accept it. As regards the opening up of new territory, the government do not know where the road will be located west of Winnipeg. They cannot say whether it will be north of the Canadian Northern Railway or south. Unless it be north, it will not open up the new territory referred to in this petition.

12. That provision should be made in the Grand Trunk Pacific agreement for an outlet from the Grand Trunk Pacific's western lines to Lake Superior.

The people of the west realize that no matter how many railways they may have, the grain will travel by lake and rail.

Your petitioners therefore humbly pray that the transportation Bill now before parliament be not passed in its present form, but that it be altered to provide for the above-mentioned conditions, and that the commission on transportation should consider the whole question of the proposed eastern section and report, and that complete surveys and estimates should be made.

It seems to me that this petition is a complete endorsation of our leader's policy, just as much as it is a severe condemnation of the government's policy. And I merely rose for the purpose of drawing the attention of the House, and particularly of the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson), to the fact that the people of the west generally are opposed to the scheme propounded by the government.

Mr. TALBOT. With the hon. gentleman's permission, I would ask him if he is aware that in the province of Quebec agents are going from house to house getting signatures to these petitions, and that notwithstanding the very strong representations they have made, they have not so far got ten per cent of the people of these parishes to sign these petitions?

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). I am not personally aware of that fact, but would require a little stronger testimony than that of the hon. gentleman to make me believe it.

Mr. S. HUGHES (Victoria). The hon. member for Westmoreland endeavoured as usual to bring in the locality question. He said he was surprised to see the antipathy displayed by the opposition to that section of country between Moncton and Quebec. I want to point out to him that the policy of the opposition is not to belittle one part of the country as compared with another. But when hon. gentlemen on that side claim they are going to get a line 140 miles shorter from Quebec to Moncton via the Etchemin valley and the Maine border, they do not know what they are talking about, or are endeavouring to deceive the electors. Take the figures given in the report of the engineer of the Quebec government. They show that with grades almost as low as 53 feet to the mile, and some of them rising as high as 71 to 79 feet, that road surveyed between Quebec and Edmundston is 209 miles in length.

Mr. TALBOT. If my hon. friend (Mr. Hughes, Victoria) will permit me, I would say he is mistaken in his figures. He will find several reports, which give it at 186 miles following the railway showing that it can be done within thirty days.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). If my hon. friend (Mr. Talbot) will read the report, he will see that that line is across the state of Maine.

Mr. TALBOT. No, Sir.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon. He cannot find an air-line of 186 miles around the point of the state of Maine.

Mr. TALBOT. I will get it and read it to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I shall be glad if the hon. gentleman will do so. What we want is to have the facts of these lines referred to by the hon. member for Bellechasse, one goes by the Etchemin and Daagnam rivers and down the valley of the St. John across Maine, while the other is still further to the south. Now, it is for me to go into these elevations and grades, which are given in my former remarks at page 11951 and succeeding pages of 'Hansard.' I have pointed out the report of the engineer of the Quebec government which says :

> I again took up my work which I had left off at the west of Lake Long, behind St. Paul de Montmagny, distant sixty-three miles from the original point of departure at St. Anselme in the county of Dorchester.

And he goes on to say :

> I should here observe that Long Lake is really only thirty-eight miles from St. Anselme in a direct line.

That is, the line has to cover a distance of 63 miles in order to reach a point distant 38 miles in a direct line. And he points out that the grades are about 53 feet to the mile, being about the old standard one per cent grade.

And he points out further on, with regard to the grades on this line :

> I started from the Etchemin valley line, eight miles south of St. Anselme, and half a mile from the north bank of the Abenakis river.
> The grades on this line can be made 52 feet per mile and under for a distance of 6½ miles, after which there is a continuous grade of 79 feet per mile for 4½ miles, rising to Lac Vert, but by lengthening the line and increasing curvature by actual location, that grade could be reduced to 53 feet per mile.

But our hon. friend the expert, the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) tells us that no road need hope to secure a share of through-traffic unless its grades are reduced to twenty-five feet to the mile. This would stretch the line out still longer. So, for every one of these grades, where it is from seventy-five to seventy-nine feet to the mile, you must multiply the distance by three in order to give you the one-half per cent grades. Here is a distance of sixty-three miles and you must multiply it by two in order to get your mileage. Taking these elevations and gradients with an admitted length of line of 205 or 209 miles these are the extremes and hon. gentlemen will remember that I took the middle distance of 207 as my figures, in order to get grades of one-half per cent, I venture to say it will be nearer 300 miles than 250 miles between Quebec and Edmundston. A little further on, this engineer points out that near the foot of Lake Pohenegomook the grade rises at the rate of 71·28 feet per mile for a distance of nine miles. Multiply that by three as will be necessary in order to secure the one-half per cent grade, and you get a distance of twenty-seven miles, instead of nine miles. Then he goes on :

> In that next four miles the summit between the Smoky and Noire rivers was reached with a grade of 65 feet per mile, at an elevation of 1048 feet above the initial point in the Temiscouata Railway.

Multiply that by three again, and instead of four and a half miles you get thirteen and a half miles.

Mr. EMMERSON. That is not the route.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What does the hon. gentleman propose, then ?

Mr. EMMERSON. The frontier route.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). That is what I am quoting.

Mr. EMMERSON. No.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I can tell the hon. gentleman that lake Pohenegomook comes within one inch of the Maine border. The road will have to cross at the lower part of the lake in order to get round. Now. I come to the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Emmerson's) own province. Between the Salmon and Tobique rivers the line proposed by the hon member for Annapolis (Mr Wade)—though I believe the hon member (Mr. Emmerson) takes the same route—rises in five miles from an elevation of a little more than 366 feet to 1,000 feet, to the summit pass of Tobique mountains, a rise of 634 feet in five miles. If, instead of climbing straight up the mountain you allow for one-half per cent grade you must cover a distance of 25·66 miles in order to make the same elevation. How will the hon. gentleman get the one-half per cent grade in any other way ?

Mr. EMMERSON. I do not wish my hon. friend to misrepresent me. I said that in the choice of routes there, if the grades did not permit me to cross the divide, the road will necessarily take the valley of the St. John which is the route I personally prefer.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I am delighted with that explanation. Then there is no quarrel between us. The hon. gentleman must admit that the road will be, as I am convinced it will be, longer. It will certainly be longer from Quebec to Moncton by the St. John valley if he secures one-half per cent grades. That five miles is drawn out to 25·66 miles. Then, on the other side between the summit and the Tobique river with a fall of 684 feet, that stretched out so as to give the one-half per cent grade instead of nine and a half miles it makes 27·36. miles. The hon. gentleman cannot avoid it. He does not propose to go through the mountains, so he must go around them or over them. I am following point by point the line proposed by the hon. member for Annapolis. I believe that the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) and the hon. Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) have lines of their own.

Mr. EMMERSON. The line will be located by engineers.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The hon. member for Annapolis was the only gentleman who undertook to give definite points, and I understood that he voiced the opinions of the hon. member for Westmoreland. From the Tobique valley to the next summit easterly to a distance of only ten miles it passes to a height of 1,206 feet. In order to secure the half per cent grade you would have to extend that to 33·64 miles. And yet, in the estimates furnished by these hon. gentlemen, they counted only ten miles. Going down on the other side of course involves a corresponding extension. We do not object to the road going through. Hon. gentlemen who sat on this side, years ago voted for bonuses for the road from Lévis out through the Etchemin valley through the Pohenegomook district to Edmundston and on through New Brunswick. We are quite prepared to support that policy but we are not prepared to have these hon. gentlemen deceive the House and the country, willfully or otherwise, by saying that there will be a saving of 140 miles, or even ten miles, as compared with the Intercolonial. I trust the hon. member for Westmoreland will live to see the survey made. But I am sure that he will never see this proposed line from Lévis to Moncton with a much less mileage than the Intercolonial. Such a line does not exist and cannot be made unless you tunnel the mountains.

Mr. TALBOT. I will read from a report made to the Commissioner of Public Works of the province of Quebec, 1891, to prove that the figures given by the hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) are all wrong, and that I was right when I made the correction. These figures are given by Mr. E. A. Hoare, the engineer who went over that part of the country several times :

From Chaudière via Intercolonial Railway and Quebec Central Railway, via St. Anselme, 207½ miles ; from Chaudière direct via St. Anselme, 205½ miles ; from Chaudière via Intercolonial Railway by St Charles, 202½ miles ; from Lévis via Intercolonial Railway and Quebec Central Railway via St. Anselme, 209½ miles ; from Chaudière via the Intercolonial Railway and Quebec Central Railway via Etchemin valley, through the state of Maine, connecting the St. Francis branch of the Temiscouata Railway, 190 miles ; from Chaudière via direct line——

This is the line which is now proposed.

That is not 209 miles.

From Chaudière to Edmundston by the Intercolonial Railway and Rivière du Loup and Temiscouata Railway, the distance is 199 miles.

Further on Mr. Hoare quotes Mr. Henry O'Sullivan's report, in which the latter describes a favourable route for the railway between Quebec and Edmundston. Mr. O'Sullivan says :

That line would give access to a vast area of cultivable and well-timbered lands in the counties of Bellechasse, Montmagny, L'Islet and Kamouraska, and by touching the River St. John at its confluence with the St. Francis would bring the forest wealth of 3,000 square miles of United States territory, drained by the River St. John and Allaguash, a tributary, to Canadian markets, and to the port of Quebec. The distance between Quebec and Edmundston by this route is estimated at 156 miles, or 30 miles shorter than by the Etchemin valley.

Mr. HACKETT. I wish to make a few observations——

At one o'clock, House took recess.

House resumed at three o'clock.

Mr. HACKETT. Mr. Speaker, before you left the Chair at one o'clock I was endeavouring to explain some features of the great undertaking proposed by the government and was endeavouring to show that this large expenditure of public money would be forced upon the country without any knowledge of what would be obtained in return for it or whether this country through which it is intended to build will be a country available for settlement. We have received no information from the government in that regard ; they simply say : We will go on and build this railway—and the people of the whole of Canada are asked to pay $125,000,000 for its construction. I desire to say a word in reply to the statement of the hon. gentleman from Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) that this railway will open up a large area for settlement in the province of New Brunswick. That was replied to pretty well by the hon. member for Carleton, N.B. (Mr. Hale). There is no gentleman in this House for whom I have a higher respect than for the hon. member for Westmoreland, but we have before us the fact that an hon. gentleman who represented the province of New Brunswick in the cabinet the late Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) was forced to resign an important seat in the cabinet, carrying with it much influence, because he could not accept the proposition of the government, and yet we now have a gentleman who has been a protege of the hon. the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals coming forward and saying that he approves of everything. Can it be true that the hon. member for Westmoreland, who is living in expectancy and is hoping to be a member of the government, at some future day, will endorse everything, while the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals resigned his position because he could not accept what was proposed by the government. I desire to say a word or two in connection with the petitions that are being presented to this House. I have presented many of these myself and I accept the responsibility, of saying, as a member of this House, that every petition presented by me, having my name endorsed on it is a right and a proper petition. In addition to that, while I take the responsibility of endorsing these petitions, I say that it is an insult to the people of Canada to say that they would send a petition to this parliament which is not properly and correctly signed. The hon. gentleman for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) made a remark this morning in connection with a petition presented by my hon. friend from East Prince (Mr. Lefurgey). I can assure the hon. gentleman that his statement is not correct.

Mr. TALBOT. I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon. I referred to the hon. member for Prince Edward (Mr. Alcorn), not to the hon. member for East Prince.

Mr. HACKETT. I accept the hon. gentleman's apology. I would not for one moment have stated that the people of East Prince or of West Prince who attach their names to any petition of this kind are doing it by fraud. They are honest and straightforward, and I would say in addition to that that there is not one man whose name appears on the petitions either from East Prince or West Prince or from Queen's or from King's who is not the equal of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Talbot).

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have no desire to delay the proceedings of this House. We have been here for many months threshing out as far as possible the rights of the people and endeavouring to ascertain the views of the government. We have been charged by our friends on the other side of the House with obstructing public business. Sir, what are the facts? During a period of four months and a half, from the 12th of March until the last day of July, although the House was in session this important measure was not placed before parliament. Can you blame the representatives of the people, who are charged with doing their duty to the country, because they opposed by every means possible a measure which is brought down four and a half months after the opening of the session when it would be supposed that we were to prorogue and go to our homes? The hon. gentlemen, for some reasons of their own, withheld this proposition until the last day of July when the House had been in session four and a half months, and then they charge hon. members on this side of the House with obstruction. I heard the hon. member for Selkirk (Mr. McCreary) make a charge a few days ago that the opposition were obstructing.

Mr. SPEAKER. Order. The hon. gentleman has no right to refer to a previous debate.

Mr. HACKETT. It was in connection with this debate; it was part of this debate.

Mr. SPEAKER. I am afraid that this discussion of delay is not germane to the question before the House. The subject now before us is the third reading of this Bill, with the amendment thereto proposed by the hon. member for Peel (Mr. Blain).

Mr. HACKETT. Mr. Speaker, I accept your ruling, I submit to it, and I trust that the amendment offered by the hon. member for Peel (Mr. Blain) will be accepted by this parliament, because it is an amendment in the right direction. It is an amendment that will not allow the passing of this Bill until full information has been obtained by the people of this country; until after the people have had an opportunity of raising their voice and speaking through their representatives in parliament, and have had submitted to them at the polls this question of building a railway, costing over $100,000,000, from Quebec to Moncton. My first intention was to say one word in connection with the remarks made by the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) who has gone back on his benefactor and who has not acted fairly by the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair). I want to say in connection with the late Minister of Railways and Canals and to say it honestly and fairly that so far as the province from which I come is concerned, I found the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals progressive and up to date and

I believe that when he found it his duty to resign as a minister of the cabinet he was conscientious and that he felt he was doing his duty to the people of this country.

Some eight months ago, before the meeting of parliament, a meeting of the electors of West Prince was held in the town of Tignish, and they unanimously passed a resolution congratulating the ex-Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Blair) on what he had done for the opening up of that part of the country, and especially for running two trains a day between Summerside and Tignish. I desire to convey to the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Blair) the thanks of that meeting, and at the same time I trust that the acting Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Fielding) will continue the good work initiated by the ex-Minister (Hon. Mr. Blair). Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that, before the government undertakes such a large and expensive project as is included in this Bill, proper surveys should be made, and estimates of cost should be obtained and we should not have to rely on explorations made 25 or 50 years ago for another purpose altogether. I am in favour of opening up our country, but I do believe that while we have in the North-west 150,000,000 acres of the most fertile lands in the world awaiting settlement, it is a mistake to throw away the money of the people of Canada on such an undertaking as this.

Mr. J. D. REID (Grenville). Had it not been for the member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) and the member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) prolonging this debate this Bill would have passed the House before one o'clock. I have a question to put to the Prime Minister, which has not yet been answered so far as I know. It is reported that the reason why the Winnipeg-Moncton section is tacked on to this project by the government, is, because the member for Victoria, N.B., (Hon. Mr. Costigan) is interested in a railway from Quebec to Edmundston, part of which has been built, and that pressure has been put upon the Prime Minister to absorb that line of railway. It is also reported that the Quebec Bridge is to be absorbed, and that the government intend bringing down a subsidy of some $4,000,000 for that Bridge Company, of which Mr. Parent, Prime Minister of Quebec, is the president. In addition to that, there is the Trans-Canada Railway from Quebec to Winnipeg, of which Mr. Parent is also president, and that also is to be absorbed by the government, and these parties are to receive a large amount for their charters. Perhaps the Prime Minister could give us some information as to these rumours.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I have no objection at all to answering my hon. friend. Although we do not share all ideas in common perhaps the hon. gentleman (Mr. Reid) will take a piece of advice from me, and that is, that he will do well not to be too credulous, and especially not to credit reports which are without even a semblance of foundation or common sense. The member for Victoria (Hon. Mr. Costigan) is, I believe, interested with other parties, in a charter for a railway over the territory which will be traversed by the government line from Moncton to Quebec. His charter which I think had some value some few months ago, will in consequence have no value whatever to-day. As to the rumour that the Prime Minister of Quebec is president of a transcontinental railway company to which some subsidies are to be given ; this is the first information I have had on that. I am not aware that the Premier of Quebec is interested in any such road, and at all events the government has no such intention, nor has it received any application with regard to it. There is a company known as the Trans-Canada, which had a charter, and wanted to build a railway practically over the same ground which is to be covered by the railway contemplated by this Bill. As to the Quebec Bridge Company, there is an application for further aid to that company. It was assisted by the government some two or three years ago, and there is an application for further aid.

Mr. REID (Grenville). That bridge would be absorbed by the new road ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Well, legislation will be necessary on that subject.

Mr. G. W. FOWLER (King's, N.B.). I would not have spoken further in connection with this Bill, were it not that the member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) has I am told attempted to cast a reflection upon the members for New Brunswick—especially those who sit on this side of the House—by saying that they were not doing their duty to their province in opposing this railway.

Mr. EMMERSON. If the hon. gentleman understood that, he certainly was misinformed. Those who heard me will acquit me of having made any reflection whatever upon any hon. member from New Brunswick or any other province.

Mr. FOWLER. I am very glad to hear from the hon. gentleman's own lips that he did not make any such statement, but I am informed that what he said was that he was surprised at their antipathy against that section of the country between Moncton and Quebec. If the hon. gentleman uttered these words he cast a reflection upon the gentlemen who are opposing this Bill, because he insinuated that they had an antipathy, not against the railway itself, but against that section of the country between Moncton and Quebec. I do not know how else his language can be construed. Speaking for myself—and in this respect I can speak for every member on this side of the House—we have no antipathy against any part of this Canada of our. We are Canadians before we are provincialists. The fault I find with the member for Westmoreland and others of his friends is, that they are provincialists and not Canadians. The hon. gentleman from Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) said that the hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Hale) should support this railway because it goes through his county. Are we to be told that a member of this House should support a national transcontinental railway as it is called, simply because it runs through a portion of his county ? Are we to take such a narrow view of national questions ? Are we to consider only the interests of the little district in which we live, and not the interest of our country as a whole ? As a member of this parliament of Canada, I protest against being asked to take any such narrow view as that. We are here as Canadians, expected to legislate for the best interests of Canada, and not to narrow our minds by local considerations when the good of the whole country is at stake.

No man in this House will stand up for the particular district he represents more strongly than I will if it is being interfered with or is being injuriously affected in any way. But what we are to look to is the good of all Canada, the good of the greatest number. Is this proposed railway going to do the greatest possible good for Canada ? That is the first question for us to consider. Afterwards we may consider how it is going to affect the particular district in which we live or the particular province from which we come. I say I object to this railway on broad grounds, because I do not believe that it will do what its promoters claim it will do. I do not believe it will prevent Canadian freight going through Canadian channels to American ports. That could have been prevented ; but the very men who are promoting this railway, the very government which is pinning its faith and pledging its existence to this scheme, have by their contract failed to prevent that being done, notwithstanding the objections which have been urged from this side of the House. I am opposed to this scheme because it will to my mind destroy as a trunk line the Intercolonial Railway, on which $70,000,000 of the public money of this country has been expended. I am not alone in that view. The leading man on the government side of the House from the province of New Brunswick, the hon. ex-Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Blair)—a powerful member of the government he was too—felt so strongly on this point that he abandoned his office and resigned his seat in the cabinet rather than agree to this scheme.

Let us for a moment contrast the conduct of that hon. gentleman with the conduct of the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson), and see which shines the brighter by the contrast. The hon. member for Westmoreland was just as strongly opposed to interference with the Intercolonial Railway as was the hon. ex-Minister of Railways, if we can judge of the strength of a man's position by the strength of the language he uses ; and that is the only way we can test it until we find that his acts do not harmonize with his language. The hon. gentleman urged strongly in the Railway Committee the extension of the Intercolonial Railway to Depot Harbour. But now we find that the hon. gentleman has abandoned that position entirely. He has swallowed this Bill holus-bolus, although it was too severe a dose for the ex-Minister of Railways. Why has the hon. gentleman gone back on his professions ? Why has he changed his view ? Does he put his party before his country ? Surely he was honest and sincere when he was advocating so strongly the extension of the Intercolonial. He waxed most eloquent. I was pleased to hear him, because the language he used was entirely in accord with my own view, and I contributed to the generous meed of applause which his remarks received in the Railway Committee ; and a man has to be pretty eloquent to get any applause there. So you can judge of the strength of the language the hon. gentleman used on that occasion. Since then, as I say, a change has taken place in his views. Has he seen more light ? What is that light ? Is it the bright reflection of office ? Is it that he sees an office in the distance ? Does he hope to rise by the fall of his former benefactor and chief ? Is he willing to give up his principles ? Is he willing to go back on that which he so strongly urged, and which he claimed was required in the best interests of Canada, because he sees, forsooth, an opportunity of becoming a member of this cabinet, and this is the only way he can reach that desired goal ? I do not like to impute motives. I am not imputing motives ; I am merely asking the question. I do not say for a moment that that is the case. It may be that some miraculous intervention of Providence has taken place. It may be that there has been a miracle as in the time of old, when a great light broke in upon a benighted man and he saw clearly what he had not seen before. It may be that that is the case with the hon. gentleman. If so, I am afraid that the light that has broken in upon him is not a light from heaven, but that he is being deluded by a false light.

What is the great reason given for the building of this transcontinental railway ? The reason is the freight congestion in the west. One of the reasons why I oppose this road is because it will not relieve the present congestion in the west. This proposed road cannot be built for many years ; but the freight congestion is acute to-day, if we can believe the statements of western people. And so, if you are only going to apply your remedy to a deep-seated disease ten years hence, I am afraid your patient will be dead before the remedy can be applied. I believe in applying the remedy at once, when the patient can be relieved. I am opposed to this road, and I believe the people of New Brunswick are also opposed to it. The hon. member for Westmoreland will find that the people of New Brunswick are opposed to this railway irrespective of politics, apart from the heelers and the hot party men. I am not using the word heeler in an offensive sense. I am only using it to indicate those men who are always prepared to swallow anything their party puts forth. Then, there are a certain class of men supporting the government, who have no party fealty, but whose sole idea is to get what they can, by whatever means they can, out of the public treasury. That class of men will support this Bill, as they will support anything that the government brings forward.

Mr. EMMERSON. Will my hon. friend pardon me if I ask him a question ?

Mr. FOWLER. With pleasure.

Mr. EMMERSON. I want to ask him if it is true that when the Grand Trunk Pacific Company proposed to have their line stop at Quebec, he, in conjunction with the hon. member for Carleton, N.B. (Mr. Hale), sent a telegram to the St. John Board of Trade to this effect :

> Important that civic bodies take immediate, united and strong action re Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. Apparent intention is to make Portland winter terminus ; and if maritime provinces are to reap reward for past services, a fight to the finish must be made.

Mr. FOWLER. Yes, I sent that telegram, and I endorse it to-day. Let me tell the hon. gentleman that I do not pursue so sinuous a course in politics that I have to take back to-day what I said yesterday. I sent that telegram, and I stand by it to-day. What does that telegram say ? It says it is evidently the intention to make Portland the winter terminus. Has that intention been changed ? Why, that is the very fault I have to find with this whole scheme—that under this contract between the Grand Trunk Pacific and the government, the Grand Trunk Pacific are enabled to send their freight originating along this line, by way of the American routes to American ports.

That is the very ground that I take now and that I took then. The alternative proposition of the leader of the opposition is the very thing that will prevent that. It is the very thing that my hon. friend proposed in the Railway Committee when he spoke so strongly and eloquently in favour of the extension of the Intercolonial. That extension I was in favour of then as I am to-day. He was in favour of it then, but is opposed to it to-day. And why ? By the extension of the Intercolonial you would prevent most effectively the making of Portland the winter terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific. That is one feature which will appeal particularly to the electors of the east when called upon to pronounce their verdict. By extending the government system until it taps the wheat fields of the west, we would ensure to the people of the east the certainty that the sacrifices they have made for the development of Canada were not in vain. We will ensure to them their share in the trade of carrying the grain and other products from that great western country to the markets of Europe. I stand by every word of that telegram, and I defy any one to construe it in any other way than I am construing it now. But the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) cannot square what he said in the Railway Committee with what he has been saying here. There is just this difference between us. The one is guided in his career by patriotic motives, by endeavouring to do what is best for the country, whereas the hon. gentleman is evidently guided solely by what he thinks will be most to his own advantage.

Another objection to the transcontinental railway scheme is this, that by expending so much money you will restrict your capacity to spend in other directions. You are about to incur an enormous expenditure of over $120,000,000, which is the lowest estimate of cost, and you are to build a road with gradients of four-tenths per cent, according to the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) over which you will be capable of hauling trains of 2,000 tons. I am confident that there will be no such grades on that road, nor will you be able to haul trains of more than 250 tons, and you will prevent us from obtaining the proper transportation facilities which are so necessary in the east in order to handle the immense trade we expect to develop between the west and the east. When you tax the country to the extent of $120,000,000 and over, you will find it more difficult to get the necessary millions to construct the great work required at Montreal, St. John and Halifax, and the other ports which it is necessary to develop on the maritime coast. You should do these things first, and then when you have obtained the requisite information, build your transcontinental. But do not take a leap in the dark. First develop our ports, make them free ports so that we will be in a much better position to compete against American ports, and after we have obtained full information about the character of the country through which it is proposed to build this line, will be time enough to build it. We object to this scheme on the ground that we have no definite information on which to base it. What have we ? Nothing but guesses. We have no information such as business men would require before they took one step forward. It is all very well for the hon.

member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) to make glib statements about the condition of that country, which he knows no more about than the man in the moon. I have never yet seen an hon. gentleman who possesses such a vivid imagination. He can imagine almost anything, and then he will speak with such an air of candid sincerity that people almost believe him. But we want something more definite than the mere statement that a man has tramped on foot over a certain portion of this territory, when the snow was three feet deep, and then gave his opinion on the fertility of the soil. We want something more definite before we spend $150,000,000. That country may be the most fertile part of Canada. I am not saying anything against it. But I am opposed to your proceeding before you have definite information regarding the character of the country, and before you know whether there will be any local trade developed there or not. As to the gradients that may be obtained, of course, you can go through a mountain if you have money enough. But then comes the question whether or not the cost would be so great that the freight rates would be too heavy to enable freight to go that way. All these things have to be considered. There should be full information on all these points before we undertake this responsibility. That is what the people of New Brunswick are saying. What the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) suggests is that the people of New Brunswick are so venal as to be bribed to vote against their conscience and what they believe to be best simply because there is going to be a railway down there through some portion of the province. A suggestion of that sort would come fittingly from the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Rt. Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright), who described the maritime provinces as the shreds and patches of confederation, but I cannot understand an hon. gentleman who is a son of New Brunswick, who has had the honour of being premier of that province, making such an insinuation against it, more particularly when that province has done much better by him than he deserved. He has tried to lead the House to believe that we in New Brunswick are to be bought, simply because a railway is going to be brought down to our country. Let me tell hon. gentlemen opposite that we are not that kind of people in New Brunswick. There is no part of Canada where the Canadian spirit burns more strongly. We look first to the interests of Canada, and then to those of our province.

Some hon. MEMBER. Good.

Mr. FOWLER. I can quite understand how the hon. gentleman can say 'good' in his sarcastic tones. That sort of thing does not appeal to little minds. I have heard that particular hon. gentleman before in this House, and can quite understand how anything of that kind would appear absurd to him. But there are men to whom that sentiment would appeal. They are the sort of people we have in New Brunswick, and are not to be dragooned into the supporting of Bills simply because you are going to throw a sop by building a line down there. I would not have taken up the time of the House had it not been for the hon. member for Westmoreland. I do not know why he spoke. Surely he must have received the same instruction as the rest of the rank and file on the back benches. Surely he was told as well as they to retire into the cave of silence and remain there. Did the ministers not speak to him? Is it because he is just standing on the threshold of a cabinet portfolio that he was not spoken to? Perhaps he did not get his notice and was dragged into the debate. But I understand it was whispered around the corridors that one minister was deputed to spank the hon. gentleman for having interfered in this debate. I hoped the hon. gentleman had enough manliness to resent that and prevent the Minister of Customs from giving him that spanking.

Amendment (Mr. Blain) negatived, on the same division.

Mr. GEORGE TAYLOR (South Leeds). I notice, in reading the 42nd section of the agreement between the Grand Trunk Pacific and the government, that it is very ingeniously worded. I am not a lawyer, but I will submit my point, and will challenge any legal gentleman in this House to controvert the statement I make. That 42nd section reads as follows:

It is hereby declared and agreed between the parties to this agreement that the aid herein provided for is granted by the government of Canada for the express purpose of encouraging the development of Canadian trade and the transportation of goods through Canadian channels. The company accepts the aid on these conditions, and agrees that all freight originating on the line of the railway, or its branches, not specifically routed otherwise by the shipper, shall, when destined for points in Canada, be carried entirely on Canadian territory——

From that point it goes on as follows:

—or between Canadian inland ports, and that the through-rate on export traffic from the point of origin to the point of destination shall at no time be greater via Canadian ports than via United States ports, and that all such traffic, not specifically routed otherwise by the shipper, shall be carried to Canadian ocean ports.

That makes provision only for traffic for export. But what provision is made in the agreement for the Canadian manufacturer in eastern Canada, or the Canadian shipper from Manitoba or the North-west over this line? Suppose a manufacturer in the eastern provinces wants to ship to Winnipeg over this line, there is no provision that his goods shall be carried as cheaply as by lines running over American territory.

I propose to amend this section by putting in the following words :

That all freight originating on the line of the said railway or its branches, not specifically routed otherwise by the shipper, if destined for points in Canada, shall be carried entirely on Canadian territory or between Canadian inland ports, and that the rate for such carriage shall not be greater than the rate charged between the same points by any route not wholly Canadian ; and if such freight be for export, it shall, unless otherwise specifically routed by the shipper, be carried to Canadian ports, and that the through-rate on such export traffic from the point of origin to the point of destination shall at no time be greater by way of Canadian ports than by way of any other ports.

I want this to apply for the benefit of the Canadian manufacturer or the Canadian shipper. Suppose a Canadian shipper has a carload of cattle, or a carload of hogs or a carload of butter or cheese, that he wishes to send to Montreal, this clause makes no provision for his case. Suppose a miller in Manitoba has sold a carload of flour in Prince Edward Island. That is not export trade, and there is no provision that this road shall serve him as cheaply as the road that runs partly over American territory. There is nothing to prevent the Manitoba miller from shipping over the Canadian Northern and Northern Pacific to Boston, and so to Prince Edward Island, and he may get a much cheaper rate than on this proposed route under this agreement. I wish to make provision so that the Canadian shipper, whether in the east or in the west, shall be able to ship over this line at as cheap a rate as over a partly American route. There is not a member of the government, there is not an hon. member supporting the government, particularly among those who come from the west or from the manufacturing towns in eastern Canada, but will see the necessity of the condition I here propose.

Before I formally place this resolution in your hands, Mr. Speaker, I desire to refer to a matter that was up for discussion yesterday. The right hon. Prime Minister, just before the House rose, took occasion to refer to a debate which took place in the afternoon in which I criticised some remarks of his with reference to the route proposed by the hon. leader of the opposition. Here is the statement the right hon. gentleman made :

I come now to the main proposition of my hon. friend. He proposes to acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway as it exists to-day. But though the government may acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway, it certainly could not operate it.

And he goes on to explain why :

How could you expect that a Canadian government could possibly, with any advantage to the country, operate the Canada Atlantic Railway. It is within the knowledge of everybody that at this moment three-fourths at least of the business of the Canadian Pacific Railway and three-fourths the business of the Canada Atlantic Railway is American business. It is business connected with the western states and carried to its destination in the eastern states. The Canadian government could not compete for that business if we were to acquire that railway.

He does not explain why. Why would not the government be in a position, if the scheme of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition was carried out, and this road operated by a commission entirely apart from politics, to operate that railway the same as any company would operate a railway ? But the right hon. gentleman goes on :

At present the manager of the Canada Atlantic Railway has connections and agents in Duluth, Milwaukee, Chicago and other points in the west, and in New York, Boston and other cities in the east, collecting freight in the east for the western states and in the west for the eastern states. Now, would it be possible for the Canadian government to maintain those agents in American cities and keep connections there in order to collect that trade now passing over our territory ?

Why not ? Has not this government a horde of immigration agents in the United States trying to collect immigrants in that country, and does it not pay these agents large sums of money ? Wherein would it be inconsistent in this government, operating this railway through a commission, to have its freight agents in every city of the United States bidding and competing for the trade of that country ? But the right hon. gentleman went further, and I presume he has had a number of telegrams from the marine interest of this Dominion this morning telling him that the statements he made yesterday in the House were not in accordance with the facts. Remember this, that I am about to quote the statement of the right hon. Prime Minister to the people of this country :

There is something more. The fleet maintained on the lakes for the purpose of supplying traffic to the Canada Atlantic Railway is composed in part of American bottoms. It would be impossible to have the trade we have to-day unless it was carried in American bottoms. We can carry Canadian freight in Canadian bottoms, but you cannot take freight at Duluth, Chicago or Milwaukee or any of the western ports and bring it to Depot Harbour except in American bottoms.

There is the statement of the Prime Minister that we cannot take freight in Chicago, Duluth or Milwaukee and bring it to Depot Harbour except in American bottoms.

The PRIME MINISTER. If destined to American harbours, certainly.

Mr. TAYLOR. There is where the right hon. gentleman (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) is wrong again. It is being done every day. Since this discussion took place I have had a conversation with a prominent officer of the Canada Atlantic Railway, and he explained to me that they have part of their fleet American bottoms and part Canadian bottoms. The Canadian vessels go to Chicago, Duluth or Milwaukee, take a cargo and bring it to Depot Harbour. The reason for having part American bottoms is so that if they have no business for Depot Harbour they can load at Chicago, Duluth or Milwaukee for Buffalo or any other point on the American side, which a Canadian bottom cannot do. But the Canadian bottom can load at an American point and carry to Depot Harbour exactly the same as an American bottom. Then, to contradict my statement, the right hon. gentleman read the law. I challenged the Minister of Customs to deny my statement last night, and he said that the Canadian boats could do just what the law allowed them to do. The law is the same on the Canadian side as on the American side. Will the Minister of Customs tell me that I cannot do what I am doing every day, shipping goods to Winnipeg routed by the Grand Trunk Railway to Collingwood or to Sarnia, loading them there on American boats, taking them to Duluth and shipping them over the Northern Pacific and the Canadian Northern into Winnipeg? Is there anything in the laws or bonding privileges of the United States to prevent that being done? Nothing. We are doing it every day, so is every manufacturer in eastern Ontario shipping by the Grand Trunk and by the water route, going partly through American territory in bond; and the Americans are doing the same in our country. The law passed in the United States is for this special purpose. it was passed in February, 1898, and the Prime Minister read it last night:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Repesentatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that no merchandise shall be transported by water——

'By water' this Act applies to—by water all the way.

—under a penalty of forfeiture thereof, from one port in the United States to another port in the United States, either directly or via a foreign port, or for any other part of the voyage, in any other than a vessel of the United States.

Now, that applies this way: I cannot go to Chicago and order a load of grain shipped from Chicago via Port Colborne to Ogdensburg by a Canadian boat; that is, I cannot go into Chicago and load grain on a Canadian boat and carry it to Port Colborne, unload it in an elevator there, get it reloaded into another Canadian boat and carry it to a Canadian port. But they say: Grain going from Chicago, for instance, to Ogdensburg must be carried all the way in an American bottom, it cannot be transshipped at Port Colborne by a Canadian vessel or by an American vessel and then put into an American vessel and carried back, the same bulk, to an American port. But there is nothing in that law, and I defy any lawyer in this House to contradict the statement, there is nothing in the bonding privileges of the United States, which are the same as they are in Canada, to prevent us shipping every day in bond through the United States and back into Canadian territory, from Collingwood or Sarnia to Duluth. There is nothing to prevent it being carried in an American bottom, neither is there anything in their law to prevent me from shipping a load of grain in bond at Chicago to Depot Harbour, because that is the water route, shipping it partly through Canada and partly through the United States, for export to the old country. Every bushel of grain in bond for export goes through Depot Harbour and goes through our Canadian elevators and over our Canadian railways. The Prime Minister tried to belittle the proposition made by the leader of the opposition, saying that he could not acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway and operate it; and could not operate the boats, because they are sailing under the American flag. That is in accordance with the statement made by the Postmaster General when he tried to make the people believe that by the proposition of the leader of the opposition you could not acquire 57 miles of the Canada Atlantic Railway, all of which were in the United States, whereas there are only three miles in the United States to make a connection. Although the Postmaster General made that statement and I showed he was wrong, he has not risen in this House and apologized for it Neither has the Prime Minister apologized for the statement he made in introducing this Bill, saying that it was wanted altogether for the purpose of making Canada independent of bonding privileges that might be withdrawn. He has never withdrawn that statement. He made the same statement yesterday, which I am sure he will withdraw when he looks into the matter, otherwise he will raise the marine interests of Canada against him; he said that we cannot carry grain from an American port and land it in an American port when it is carried through in bond for export. Therefore, in order to settle this question, I am going to move an amendment, which I hope the government will accept, because it is in the interest of the manufacturers of eastern Canada and of the purchasers in the west, who may want to ship goods through Canada. I want to assure them that they will be sure of the same rates on this road on goods transported from the west as they can get when they are carried partly over Canadian and partly over American territory. I therefore move:

That all the words after the word 'that' to the end of the question be left out and the following substituted therefor:—'the Bill be referred back to a Committee of the Whole House with power to amend the same as follows:—

That all freight originating on the line of the said railway or its branches, not specifically routed otherwise by the shipper, if destined for points in Canada, shall be carried entirely on Canadian territory or between Canadian inland ports, and that the rate for such carriage shall not be greater than the rate charged between the same points by any route not wholly Canadian; and if such freight be for export, it shall, unless otherwise specifically routed by the shipper, be carried to Canadian ports, and that the through-rate on such export traffic from the point of origin to the point of destination shall at no time be greater by way of Canadian ports than by way of any other ports.

I may say this whole clause provides, in case of freight carried from the west or elsewhere, if it is for export, that they must comply with the requirements and not charge a greater rate; but if the grain, or cattle, or cheese, or butter is shipped from any point in the west to any point in eastern Canada, they can charge whatever they please for it. We want to say this to them: You have received aid from the government of Canada, and you shall carry these goods as cheaply as they can be carried over any competing line, whether partly in Canada and partly in the United States or not.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. One word about a subject not directly concerned in the amendment, and that is with reference to the misunderstanding that seems to exist between the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) and the Prime Minister with reference to the law of the United States. He asked me last night what I had to say, and being busily engaged at the moment in conversation, I did not hear what he said, and gave the answer that they could do whatever was permitted by their law. Now, the law of the United States that was passed in 1898 is this:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that no merchandise shall be transported by water, under penalty of forfeiture thereof, from one port of the United States to another port of the United States, either directly or via a foreign port, or for any part of the voyage, in any other vessel than a vessel of the United States.

Then the hon. gentleman argues that if merchandise is shipped from Duluth destined, we will say, to Boston——

Mr. TAYLOR. For export.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. It has to take that voyage from Duluth to Boston, we will say. This section reads that if on any part of the voyage it is carried in any other vessel than a vessel of the United States it is subject to forfeiture.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does he say that the United States have construed the word 'voyage' as including transmission by railway trains?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. There is reciprocity in the bonding arrangements as far as railways are concerned but not with reference to coasting.

Mr. TAYLOR. No one denies that.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. But I have read the law which says these consequences may arise out of this and if they did not arise I do not think it would be our desire or duty to call attention to it. I understood the hon. gentleman to say it is done now, that it is perfectly legal to do it and that he has the authority of the Canada Atlantic Railway for stating that it is possible for a merchant to ship goods say from Boston by way of the Canada Atlantic Railway destined for Chicago, that they may be put on a Canadian vessel at Parry Sound and landed from a Canadian vessel in Chicago. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) say that the Canada Atlantic Railway can do that?

Mr. TAYLOR. If the hon. minister is quoting me, I said nothing of the kind.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. What did the hon. gentleman say?

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. gentleman said: that what we are doing in Canada to-day is shipping goods via the Grand Trunk Railway by rail to Collingwood or Owen Sound; that they are there placed in a Canadian or American vessel and are landed in Duluth; that they are there taken by the Northern Pacific, carried through the United States, handed over to the Canadian Northern Railway, and taken again through Canadian territory. Will my hon. friend admit that this can be done under the United States law?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. The question was one of United States law and we do not here interpret United States law. If the United States law is more liberal than we thought we are delighted to know that, because we would like to have all the advantage we may have, and therefore I would be pleased if I correctly understood the hon. gentleman to say that he has the authority of the Canada Atlantic Railway for saying that merchandise may be shipped from Boston over a Canadian line of railway, say to Parry Sound, and there be placed on a Canadian vessel and be delivered from that vessel at its destination in Chicago. I again ask the hon. gentleman if he has the authority of the Canada Atlantic Railway for saying that?

Mr. TAYLOR. I did not say that the Canada Atlantic Railway made any such statement. The statement I made about the Canada Atlantic Railway was that they are to-day carrying grain from Chicago and Duluth by both Canadian and American vessels to Depot Harbour, then putting it in cars and shipping it out from there; that there is no difference between Canadian and American bottoms.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. Grain is merchandise and I understood my hon. friend to say that grain may be shipped at Duluth, consigned to Boston, in a Canadian vessel, may be taken in a Canadian vessel to Depot Harbour and then be carried from Depot Harbour on to the port of Boston.

Mr. TAYLOR. For export.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. You are qualifying it now.

Mr. TAYLOR. No, I said it from the first; the hon. gentleman wants to misrepresent to the House every statement I made.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. Not at all, I am only trying to understand.

Mr. TAYLOR. I have interpreted the law and I challenge any legal gentleman in the House to disprove my interpretation of it. The hon. minister cannot do it himself.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I am not going to define the meaning of American law.

Mr. TAYLOR. The law against coasting applies to carriage altogether by water; it does not refer to carriage by part water and part rail.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I would be very pleased if it did so; I wanted to ascertain from the hon. gentleman if he had the authority of the Canada Atlantic Railway for the statement that they carry grain from Duluth in Canadian vessels and that it is being shipped out by Boston; that they can carry American grain in Canadian vessels to Depot Harbour destined to Montreal for shipment is of course very evident, but the question is whether they can carry it from one port in the United States to another port in the United States. As I said I will be very glad if that will be found to be the case but I will say to my my hon. friend that perhaps the Prime Minister can interpret a law fully as well as my hon. friend and he interprets it that this can not be done. The commissioner of customs also does not think it can be done.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Does the hon. Minister of Customs take the ground that if a cargo of wheat billed from Chicago to the port of Boston is taken in a Canadian vessel to Depot Harbour, there transhipped to the Canada Atlantic Railway cars and taken from Depot Harbour to Boston, it will come within the law of the United States prohibiting the participation of other than United States vessels in the American coasting trade?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. The officers of my department think that is the interpretation which the American government place upon that law; if they do not do that we will be very pleased to know it.

The PRIME MINISTER. I made a statement yesterday with regard to American traffic originating in the United States and ending in the United States, for instance a bill of lading from Chicago to Boston or to any inland town of the United States, and said that that cargo, in order to get the benefit of the bonding privilege on the Canada Atlantic Railway, would have to be carried to Depot Harbour on American bottoms.

Mr. TAYLOR. Not at all.

The PRIME MINISTER. That is the statement I made and I hope I am wrong and that the Canada Atlantic Railway can do that, but, I am not going to admit that I am wrong at this moment. I was not guided by my own interpretation of the law, I do not undertake to interpret American law, but I was acting on the impression I have had for some time. I made the statement yesterday; I make it to-day; I may be wrong, I think I am right, but I shall look into it and give the result of my investigations to the House.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Whatever question there may be about the matter which has been raised by the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) there is no question at all that the Prime Minister was wrong yesterday as I shall show him in a moment. If the officers of the Department of Customs say that the United States courts have interpreted the word 'voyage' in the United States statute as including transmission by rail, I say no more because I have had no occasion to investigate or to interpret this statute; but I would be surprised to learn that the United States courts had interpreted that section in that way. The clause is dealing with vessels, and it uses the word 'voyage' and there does not seem to be anything in it which would include or appear to take into consideration transportation by railway. It is a matter for the United States courts to determine. Have they determined that the law in the United States is as the Minister of Customs says?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I did not say that. I asked the commissioner of customs if there had been a decision on this question and he said he thought there had been but he had not it handy and he is looking it up.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That is a perfectly fair statement. The point we were dealing with yesterday was, whether or not grain taken at Duluth and brought to Depot Harbour for the purpose of transmission through a Canadian port, could be carried in a Canadian bottom. There is not a scintilla of a doubt about that. Does my right hon. friend say there is a doubt about it?

The PRIME MINISTER. What I said yesterday, was, that the business of the Canada Atlantic was chiefly American business from American port to American port, and I stated yesterday, that that business could not be carried, so far as water transportation is concerned, except in American bottoms.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does the Prime Minister or the Minister of Customs say that there is anything to prevent a Canadian bottom carrying grain from Duluth or Chicago to Depot Harbour, for transmission through a Canadian port to Great Britain ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Certainly not. I referred to American business.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Then why did the right hon. gentleman raise the question, that we were extending the Intercolonial Railway for the purpose of sending grain to American ports ? What we want to do is to send the trade by Canadian ports. The right hon. gentleman has American ports too much in his mind ; it is Canadian ports that we are thinking of. Our object is to bring that grain from Duluth or Chicago to Depot Harbour, and to transmit it, not by American but by Canadian ports. The right hon. gentleman now admits that there is nothing in the United States law that could by any possibility interfere with a project of that kind. Let me point out to my right hon. friend, that if we acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway system there is no reason why the 20,000,000 bushels of Canadian grain that now go via Buffalo through an American port, should not be brought by the Canada Atlantic Railway system, and sent to Europe through Canadian ports. The Canada Atlantic Railway carries a very considerable portion of Canadian grain now. My recollection is that it carried some 8,000,000 bushels of Canadian grain last year, and if 8,000,000 bushels of grain can be carried by the Canada Atlantic Railway, I do not see any reason why, with proper development, it could not carry 28,000,000 bushels to the ports of Quebec and Montreal in summer, and to the maritime province ports in winter, as set forth in the letter of Mr. Meighen, thus giving to the ports of Canada a greater share of the western business than they have at present. If you are going to acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway to take grain from Chicago or Duluth to Depot Harbour, and then send it to Boston or Portland, there may be a doubt ; but my proposal was that you should acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway for the purpose of sending traffic to Canadian ports, and in that respect the point raised by the hon. gentleman has no bearing at all.

The PRIME MINISTER. I presume that the Canada Atlantic Railway could develop Canadian business, but the point which I made against the project of the hon. gentleman was, that if the government were to acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway they would destroy the American business which the Canada Atlantic Railway has at this moment. You might improve the Canada Atlantic Railway business, but that business could be done by any other company just as well as the Canada Atlantic Railway. If the government undertook that, it would destroy the American business of the Canada Atlantic Railway, and as I stated, three-fourths of the business done by the Canada Atlantic Railway is American business ; that is to say business originating in the United States and ending in the United States.

Mr. TAYLOR. Does the right hon. gentleman say that three-fourths of the business of the Canada Atlantic Railway commences and ends in the United States ?

The PRIME MINISTER. That is my information.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is that grain sold in Boston or is it taken there for export ?

The PRIME MINISTER. The Canada Atlantic Railway is doing not only a grain business but a large package trade in return freight. I stated that this freight could not be carried except in American bottoms upon the lakes, and I maintain it. That is what I stated yesterday, and if I am wrong I will admit it. I will investigate it, and give the House the benefit of my investigation. I say that the business commencing in the United States and ending in the United States, has to be carried in American and not in Canadian bottoms. I had occasion to look the matter up some years ago, and that is my impression about it, although it may be that my recollection is wrong.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). So far as the origination of grain traffic in the United States is concerned, my right hon. friend may perhaps not be very far from the mark. My recollection is, and I speak only from recollection, that about 20,000,000 bushels of grain were carried last year by the Canada Atlantic Railway, 12,000,000 bushels of which were American grain, and 8,000,000 were Canadian grain. The hon. gentleman is right so far as that goes, but I was not aware until the right hon. gentleman stated it, that when that 20,000,000 bushels got to Montreal, it went, not from the port of Montreal but from United States ports. Upon that I have no direct information, except the impression I have gathered from reading the reports of a recent commission in the United States, which seemed to indicate that grain brought by the Canada Atlantic Railway not only from Canadian points, but from American points, went by the St. Lawrence route. Has the right hon. gentleman any information which would indicate that any considerable portion of the grain brought to Montreal by the Canada Atlantic Railway, does eventually go by American steamship routes ?

The PRIME MINISTER. What I had in my mind was not only the freight eastward but the freight westward, and a good deal of the trade of the Canada Atlantic Railway is package freight from American cities to other American cities in the west, and which would have to be carried in American bottoms.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My right hon. friend is, I think, right in saying that a portion of this westward freight is package freight from the United States; and as to that we will have to investigate the question as to the intrepretation which the United States authorities put upon this statute.

Mr. BENNETT. I have lived for many years in the town of Midland, where there is a large quantity of grain handled, and I know that Canadian vessels bring corn to Midland from Chicago, transfer it to the cars, and these cars are sealed by a United States officer, who is kept there for that purpose during the summer months. This grain goes to the United States and is shipped from Portland. I notice from the 'Marine News,' in this newspaper that a boat called the 'Ottawa' has passed Mackinaw. That boat comes from Chicago loaded with grain. She belongs to the Booth line, and is going to Parry Sound. When that boat arrives at Parry Sound her grain is shipped eastward, and it is possible that it may be shipped at a Canadian port. There is no doubt that numbers of Canadian vessels arrive at Midland with grain in the summer months when the Canadian North-west grain is not moving, and then these vessels go into the corn trade between Chicago and Midland, and that corn is ultimately shipped from United States Atlantic ports.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. Is it for export or does it go into storage?

Mr. BENNETT. I am quite positive that it is shipped from Portland to points in Great Britain. There is no doubt that the United States government keep an officer at Midland, whose duty it is to have these cars all sealed, so that they will not pass to any ports of Canada.

The PRIME MINISTER. Under the bonding privilege.

Mr. BENNETT. Under the bonding privilege they go to the United States and on to Portland. The grain cannot be used for local consumption. It must be exported.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Hon. gentlemen have been speaking entirely of American laws. I suppose that these bonding privileges are mutual, and that our Canadian laws regarding them are the same as those of the Americans. If such is the case—and this arrangement was agreed to between the two governments when this bonding treaty was made—there should be no misunderstanding about it. The Minister of Customs must have been a party to the making of this bonding treaty with the American government in 1898; and the interpretation which the government place on the American law must be the same as that which the Americans place on the Canadian law. If such is the case, our Canadian vessels have been running great risks; and they are doing so now if they carry cargoes from an American port in the way the hon. Minister of Customs speaks of. I suppose that if this new railway is built, or if the government acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway, and if goods are shipped over the government railway, they will have to be loaded into Canadian vessels at Depot Harbour, if consigned to a Canadian point in the west. If American vessels carried those goods they would be violating the law of this country, as the Minister of Customs construes it. I rose to refer to this matter because I think the press should let marine men know the position they are in, so that if there is any misunderstanding of the matter it can be remedied at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Mr. Speaker, the remarks which I have to offer on this motion will partly cover the remarks which I addressed to the House this morning. I was pointing out the length of the road from Lévis to Edmundston. The hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot), who was in the House a few moments ago, and to whom I gave notice that I was going to correct his statement, has gone out. When that hon. member this morning stated that the distance was only 186 miles by a direct line, I stated that that was through United States territory; and the hon. member for Bellechasse contradicted me point-blank. I will read from the same report that he read from. The first heading is: 'To Edmundston by lines surveyed via Cabano river and Temiscouata Railway.' The next heading is: 'To Edmundston via Etchemin valley through state of Maine, connecting with St. Francis branch of Temiscouata Railway.' Then it goes on: 'From Chaudière via Intercolonial Railway and Quebec Central Railway, 190 miles.' The hon. gentleman quoted this and the next line to make it appear that it was not through the state of Maine, though it is under the sub-heading which says that it is through the state of Maine. It is from Chaudière via direct line, through the state of Maine, 186 miles.

The PRIME MINISTER. What report is that?

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). This is a report to the Quebec government by Mr. Henry O'Sullivan. Then, here is something that he did not read:

It can be seen by the table that for a through line to Edmundston within Canadian territory, as regards length, the Intercolonial and Temiscouata route ranks first. Any line passing in the interior is lengthened by loss of distance following river valleys whose course is often out of direction.

This report the hon. gentleman had before him this morning; and yet he sought, I will not say intentionally, to mislead the House by saying that the route he was speaking of did not run through the state of Maine, when it is here stated in plain black and white that it does run through the state of Maine. This was also before him:

The summit on the Temiscouata Railway is 235 feet lower than the lowest summit of the line surveyed. There is a possibility of reducing this by 100 feet by changing the position of Mr. Têtu's line, and that part of it between St. Paul and the township of Painchaud might be shortened by a closer survey.

This was also before him this morning, and he failed to read it when he tried to make out that there was a direct route 186 miles in length without going through the state of Maine:

Although the surveyed line may not have the advantage as a through route, by its position it is admirably adapted to colonization purposes, and it would get a share of foreign business without a doubt.

This was also before him this morning, and he failed to present it to the House:

The maximum grades on the new survey for this line need not exceed 53 feet per mile, excepting at Lake Pohenegomook, where the only long continuous grade of 71·28 feet per mile occurs. I am not able to give the maximum grade on that part of the old survey made use of for this route, not being connected with that work.

Then follows the statement which the hon. gentleman read from Mr. Henry O'Sullivan's report. Yet, with that report before him, the hon. gentleman attempted to mislead this House by saying that that route did not go through the state of Maine.

Now, Sir, a word to the west. As I have already said, I at first regarded the notion of a transcontinental railway with a great deal of favour; and if the right hon. First Minister had brought down a scheme which, to my mind, was in the best interests of Canada, or nearly the best interests of Canada, it would have had my hearty endorsation. He knows that I supported his project for a railway to the Yukon, with certain amendments, a few years ago. But this measure I regard as nothing more nor less than one to give the Grand Trunk Railway Company, not the Grand Trunk Pacific Company, a through-line to the Pacific via Chicago, Minneapolis, Winnipeg and the Canadian Northwest from Portland. If some one will waken up the expert from Norfolk, I would like to have his attention.

Mr. CHARLTON. I am listening to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). As has been previously pointed out, the part from Winnipeg eastward is to be built and owned by the Dominion government, but is to be operated by the only railroad in Canada that should not operate it.

Mr. CHARLTON. It is to be operated by any railway company.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The hon. gentleman will pardon me. The Bill does not say so. Perhaps he has something from behind the scenes which other people are not in possession of. The Bill says it is to be operated by the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Mr. CHARLTON. With running powers to other railways.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). That is not operating, as the hon. gentleman knows, if he knows anything.

Mr. SPEAKER. Order.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Am I out of order?

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman should not accuse a member of not knowing anything.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I used the hypothesis: I said if he knew anything. I would not like to accuse the hon. member of not knowing anything, no matter what I think. Knowing that he knows something on some matters, Christian Endeavour and that sort of thing, I know that he knows that this railway is not to be operated by any other company, but is to be operated solely by the Grand Trunk Pacific Company. Therefore we have that eastern section of the road from Winnipeg built and owned by the government, but operated by the Grand Trunk Pacific, and we have the section from Winnipeg west assisted by the government, but owned and operated by the Grand Trunk Pacific. Speaking generally, the mileage is 1,600 from Winnipeg to the Pacific coast, and 2,000 and a little over from Winnipeg to the Atlantic ocean. The Grand Trunk Railway is to receive $25,000,000 of the common stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific. The total stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific is to be $45,000,000, so that the Grand Trunk Railway will have the controlling interest, it will elect the president and the directors, and be master of the situation. It will absolutely control the Grand Trunk Pacific from Winnipeg to the Pacific ocean, and will control the management from Winnipeg east. Let us review the transport of freight over that road. A carload of freight leaves the Pacific coast over the Grand Trunk Pacific, 1,600 miles to Winnipeg and 2,000 to the Atlantic ocean. Let us say that the freight is $360. The share that will belong to the Grand Trunk Pacific will be $160, and the share that will go to the government section east of Winnipeg will be $200. The Grand Trunk Pacific proper will only get $160 out of it. There is grave doubt as to whether the earnings of the eastern section will be sufficient to pay 3 per cent interest on the cost of the construction during the forty years, and we may easily set apart all the freight on the eastern section to meet the interest and maintenance of way, so that there will be nothing available for dividends or general maintenance. Then let us take a car starting from the Pacific coast over the Pacific Railway to Winnipeg, and thence by the Grand Trunk Pacific from Winnipeg down to Minneapolis, Chicago and on through Sarnia or Detroit eastward to Portland. The distance covered will be a few miles over the 3,600, but in round numbers exactly the same. The freight we will say is $360, which will net $160 for the Grand Trunk Pacific and $200 for the Grand Trunk Railway. In other words, the whole of the $360 will pass into the treasury of the Grand Trunk Railway for the benefit of its own system. And inasmuch as there is not a line in this contract, and there cannot be a line in the contract, that will force that management of the Grand Trunk Pacific to send its freight by the North Shore instead of via Chicago, is it at all likely that the Grand Trunk Railway will not give the preference to its own route ? Undoubtedly every car will go over its own lines from the Pacific coast to Winnipeg, and thence to Chicago and Portland, and in such case the Grand Trunk Railway will get every dollar of freight, whereas by the other route it would only get $160. Take another illustration. Suppose you start a car from Toronto. The distance to North Bay over the Grand Trunk Railway is 200 miles ; over the Ontario government road it is 200 miles to Lake Abitibi, from that point to Winnipeg it is 1,000 miles, and to the Pacific coast 16,600 miles. Then send another via Chicago and the Grand Trunk Railway. Let us say that the freight is $300 to the Pacific ocean. The Grand Trunk Railway will get its share on 1,400 miles haulage, or $140 to Winnipeg, and the Grand Trunk Pacific will get $160. The entire amount will go into the pockets of the Grand Trunk Railway. But by the other way the Grand Trunk Railway will get $20 as far as North Bay, the Ontario government road will earn its $20, the government road from Winnipeg east will earn $100—all of which $100 is supposed to go for the maintenance of way and equipment and government interest—and $160 will be the share of the Grand Trunk Pacific from Winnipeg west, so that this $160 and the $20 from Toronto to North Bay are all that really the Grand Trunk Railway will get. Under these conditions, I have never been able to see why the government does not operate as well as own the line from Winnipeg east. If that road is to be built, either let the government operate it themselves or let some other company than the Grand Trunk Railway operate it. The Prime Minister may be determined that some regulation shall be made to bring the traffic over this northern road, but if he were accustomed to the handling of freight on railways he would know that in 99 cases out of 100, the shipper will send his freight by the way he thinks will best suit the railway over which he is primarily shipping. I would suggest to the Prime Minister that it is not yet too late to amend this Bill. No doubt the Grand Trunk Railway will be more than delighted to carry their traffic through the United States, but there is one great objection to that. It is generally understood in railway circles that the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway purpose using Duluth for their lake port in the west. I would again seriously impress on the First Minister the necessity of insisting on a guarantee that the Grand Trunk Pacific will run to a Canadian port on Lake Superior, so that there will be a lake route from a Canadian port to Midland instead of from Duluth to Midland. If the Grand Trunk Railway choose to go to Duluth, I do not see how he can prevent them. Unless he gives liberal assistance for a line to a Canadian port, it will be in their interest to go to Duluth. If the right hon. gentleman will not accept the proposition of the leader of the opposition, then let him not only build the road and own it, but also operate it from Winnipeg to Quebec. There can be no earthly intention of ever building the line from Lévis east. A colonization road through that country, as the hon. member for Dorchester (Mr. Morin) pointed out, from Lévis east, should receive the endorsation and assistance of this country, and would undoubtedly open up a track of country which is very badly off for railways.

But if he will not do that, let him abandon the northern scheme ; let him hand it over to some company—any one of a dozen companies that will take it—on a guarantee of bonds giving them the same as is given the Grand Trunk Pacific Company through the mountains, and he will find that a road will be built through that region that will not cost much over the interest on the bonds during the period of construction. In other words let him give the same privileges that are given to the Grand Trunk Pacific Company through the mountains and there will be any number of opportunities to relieve the government of the construction of the road to the north. Then we will have enough money left over to develop the transportation needs of the country. Ports on the Atlantic and Pacific can well be developed. The Ottawa and Georgian bay canal can be built, and I would much like to see that work completed. It is not necessary to make it a canal of a depth of 21 feet. There is plenty of water in the French and the Ottawa rivers to provide for long locks. Let the locks be built so that the capacity of the barges can be in length rather than in depth, and I am satisfied that the canal would be a great factor in the problem of transporting the grain from the west. The city of Buffalo finds that its grain trade is not satisfactory, and the people of New York proposed last year to tax themselves some $30,000,000 to improve the Erie canal, and I see that it is now proposed that the American government shall spend $100,000,000 on the Erie, Oswego and Lake Champlain canals, so as to enable them to hold the traffic of the great west, which they find the Canadian routes are taking from them. There would also be sufficient money to provide better grades on the existing roads in Ontario, so as to allow of reduction of rates for the benefit of the people in this province. I have already stated in this House that the rate from Lindsay to Montreal was higher than the rate from Winnipeg to Liverpool, and infinitely higher than the rate from Chicago or central Iowa to Liverpool. By some such arrangement the government could control the freights from inland centres, and thus benefit the whole community. I trust it is not too late for the Prime Minister to take this matter up. If he thinks it cannot be decently done in the House of Commons, I trust he will give a hint to the Senate that it may see to it that the scheme is remodled in the manner I have suggested.

Amendment (Mr. Taylor) negatived on the same division.

Mr. W. H. BENNETT (East Simcoe). Mr. Speaker, I beg to move :

That the said Bill be amended by adding thereto the following clause, and that for such purpose the same be referred back to the committee :—

'That no contractor or sub-contractor on the said railway shall employ any Asiatic labour or workman in the construction of the said railway. Any contravention of this section shall render the person so contravening liable to a penalty of dollars in respect of every such person so employed for each day during which he shall be so employed.'

Before the motion is put I have only a word to say in addition to what I said the other night in support of a similar amendment. I wish to accentuate the statement of the hon. member for Burrard (Mr. Macpherson), that there are to-day in British Columbia some 35,000 of the Chinese and Japanese people. I remonstrate on behalf of the labouring men and others in the province of Ontario that on this road, which is practically a government road from Winnipeg to the sea-board, this foreign element should be allowed to participate in the work of construction.

Amendment (Mr. Bennett) negatived.

Mr. SPEAKER. On the same division ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I would not have this on the same division as last reported yesterday, because I do not know the views of some members and how they would vote, so it would not be fair to them to have them on record as voting the same as on another amendment.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Very well.

Mr. SPEAKER. Lost on division.

Mr. S. BARKER (Hamilton). I beg to move the following amendment :

That all the words after the word 'That' to the end of the question be left out and the following substituted therefor :—'the Bill be referred back to a Committee of the Whole House with power to amend the same as follows :—

'Should the government be of opinion that at any time during the continuance of any obligation of the government in respect of the western division, or during the said lease of the eastern division, that the earnings upon the traffic interchanged between the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company's system of railways and the system of railways of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, have not been properly apportioned between the said two companies, the question of such apportionment shall be determined by arbitrators to be appointed by the government and the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada in like manner as is provided with regard to arbitrators by paragraph 47 of the said agreement, or be determined by the board of railway commissioners as mentioned in section 19 of the said agreement. And the government shall have the right to inspect all books of account, statements, contracts, correspondence, vouchers, waybills and all other papers and documents of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, the inspection of which may be considered necessary for the purpose of investigating or determining any question, matter or thing arising out of the said agreement, or the said lease or the provisions of this Act, or connected with the obligations or undertakings of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company entered into pursuant to the said agreement, or lease, or to this Act.

The object of this amendment is to enlarge the scope of section 19 of the agreement. The government in that section endeavours to protect itself against a possible unfair division of the earnings on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The Grand Trunk Pacific Company will own the western division of the line and it will be lessee of the eastern division. Its liability in certain years to pay rent upon the eastern division depends, under the contract, upon whether there shall be net earnings in those years. It might, therefore, be to the interests of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company to so divide the earnings as between the western division and the eastern division of the railway that all its profits would go to its own property, the western division, and that there should be no net earnings upon the eastern division, and thereby the company would escape, in certain years, any liability to pay rent. The government very properly saw that this might arise, and, under section 19, they protected themselves fairly enough against it. The provision of that section is :

The company shall keep separate accounts of the earnings and expenditure of the eastern and western divisions, and, for the purposes of this agreement, the earnings from through traffic shall be apportioned between the eastern and western divisions, according to the usual practice of connecting lines of railway operated by two separate companies ;——

Then it goes on to provide that, in case of a dispute between the government and the railway company in that regard the matter shall be left to arbitration, or, in the event of a board of railway commissioners being appointed, the board of commissioners shall deal with the dispute as between the company and the government. All that is fair and reasonable and would be expected in such a case as this. But the government seem entirely to overlook the very important consideration that the very thing they are protecting themselves against as to the western and eastern divisions of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, may occur as between the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway. A very important portion of the through-traffic will pass over both the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Grand Trunk Railway, and there will be through-earnings on that traffic to be divided and apportioned between the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Grand Trunk. Now the Grand Trunk, it is quite clear, will control both systems, and it will be quite possible for that company, by taking too large a proportion of the through-earnings to itself in respect of its own railway, so to lessen the earnings upon the Grand Trunk Pacific that they will accomplish the very object that the government in this section 19 have endeavoured to prevent. Therefore I propose by this amendment to provide that wherever there may be a question as to whether the Grand Trunk is taking to itself, for its own railway, a larger proportion of the through-earnings than it ought to take, the government can intervene, and if the parties cannot agree, can ask that the matter shall be referred to arbitration, so that the Grand Trunk Pacific shall get its due share of the earnings, and that in consequence the government will be certain to get its rent. The Minister of Finance the other day seemed to think that the government was sufficiently protected because the Board of Railway Commissioners might intervene. But that is really a mistake ; there can be no question about that. The Board of Railway Commissioners can only intervene to settle questions where two railway companies differ about a division of their through-rates. But there will be no such difference here, there is no possibility of a difference between the Grand Trunk Railway Company and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company. No one will ever hear of a dispute between these two companies as to the apportionment of the earnings, and unless there is some dispute, the Board of Commissioners cannot intervene. They can, however intervene if it is made part of the bargain between the government and the companies ; while if we are left to the statutory provision that the Board of Railway Commissioners can settle disputes between two railway companies as to the apportionment of through-traffic, such a dispute will never arise. Therefore it is that I move this resolution, which I will not take up further time in discussing, because the proposition seems to be perfectly plain. The government have shown by their own agreement that they contemplate the possibility of an unfair division between the eastern and the western sections; that unfair division could only take place for the purpose of avoiding the payment of rent, and having provided against such an emergency, the government is bound to go further and prevent the same trouble arising from an unfair division between the Grand Trunk and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

Amendment (Mr. Barker) negatived on the same division as yesterday.

Mr. CHARLTON. I question the propriety of declaring this lost on the same division as yesterday. Some members are here to-day who were not here yesterday and others were here yesterday that are not here to-day, and I think it would be better merely to declare it lost on division.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I understood yesterday that our arrangement was to have the same division recorded on the other amendments.

The PRIME MINISTER. I did not understand that we should have absolutely the same division recorded. At all events, there can be no difficulty, for if five gentlemen wish for a division they can have it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not know that it makes any difference.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) was not in the House yesterday, and he was recorded as paired.

Mr. CHARLTON. I was not speaking exclusively in my own interest but merely as a question of policy.

Mr. BARKER. I would prefer that a vote should be taken than that it should be declared lost on division, because I would like to know how hon. gentlemen are going to vote on this amendment.

Mr. CHARLTON. Let it go on yesterday's division, I have no objection.

Mr. SPEAKER. Call in the members.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Carried.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Lost.

Mr. SPEAKER. Lost on the same division as last recorded yesterday.

Mr. HENDERSON. Even at this late hour of the debate, I do not consider that an excuse is necessary for offering another amendment to this Bill. When we consider the very large sum of money that is involved in this Bill I do not think it is necessary to offer any apology for the amendment which I propose to place in your hands. Never during the history of Canada has any question of so far reaching importance been brought before the attention of this parliament, not even the Canadian Pacific Railway, as the question now under consideration in this Bill. Consequently the greatest care should be exercised by the government in dealing with the moneys to be expended on this undertaking, and every safeguard should be adopted to secure the proper and legal expenditure of every dollar of the money.

Let us look for one moment at the authority on which the money is to be expended. When work is done or a service performed it has to receive the approval of the commissioners appointed under this Act. Then, on the approval of the commissioners, certified by the chairman of the board, the Minister of Railways and Canals recommends to the hon. Minister of Finance that payments be made and payments are consequently made from time to time on the recommendation of that minister. First parliament appropriates the money by a vote, then the commissioners approve of the work and of the services performed, the Minister of Railways and Canals recommends to the hon. Minister of Finance payment and payment is made accordingly, but it is made without any audit of these accounts by any officer of this parliament until after these moneys have all been expended. The commissioners, we understand, will be appointees of the government. The Minister of Railways and Canals is a member of the government and so also is the hon. Minister of Finance. But who is to guard the rights of the people of this country? Who will represent the people in this vast expenditure of the $100,000,000 or $150,000,000? Even if the cost of the railway does not exceed $125,000,000, if the work is continued over five years it will result in the expenditure of $25,000,000 per annum. And yet this work under the Bill is to go on from day to day without any audit of it, such as is necessary for the protection of the people, being made. I am aware that under section 31 of the Act it is proposed that an examination and audit shall take place, but, I desire to remind the House that this examination and audit does not take place until after the money has been paid and consequently will prove to be of very little value or importance indeed. It would be better that the ordinary course be pursued and that all the safeguards that are exercised over our ordinary expenditure should be exercised in this case, where such a vast amount of money is to be paid out. Therefore with a view to making it imperative on the government that such an audit should take place I propose to move an amendment to section 22 of the Act and I trust that the House will accept it. I may say for the information of the House that section 22 as I have already stated provides:

> The Minister of Finance and Receiver General may, on the recommendation of the Minister of Railways and Canals, from time to time pay such claims and accounts for work done or services performed in the construction of the said eastern division as have been approved and certified by the chairman of the commissioners: Provided, however, that no money shall be so paid until a sufficient appropriation has been made by parliament for the purpose.

I now beg to move, seconded by Mr. Wilson:

> That section 22 of the Bill be amended by adding thereto the words 'and that the making of such payments shall be subject to the provisions, regulations and requirements of the Consolidated Revenue and Audit Act.'

Amendment (Mr. Henderson) lost on the same division as recorded yesterday.

Mr. A. C. BELL (Pictou). I suppose it is scarcely necessary at this stage of the question to repeat all the arguments that might be advanced against the Grand Trunk Pacific project and I shall not even attempt to repeat the majority of them. There is, however, one feature in the Bill which is of great importance to the people and parliament of Canada and particularly to the people of eastern Canada, that is, that it should be so carried out as to realize for that part of Canada all the benefits which I understand, the right hon. the leader of the government and his colleagues anticipate from its completion and operation. In order that that may be accomplished it is necessary, in the opinion of some persons who are not quite so sanguine in their hopes in respect to this matter as some others are, that the parties who are entering into the contract with the government to build and operate this road should be so bound and held that they would faithfully operate it and thereby realize all the advantages that in the course of time may be expected to result from its operation. It has been shown very clearly in the course of the discussion that the real party of the second part is the Grand Trunk Railway and it has been just as clearly brought out that the Grand Trunk Railway is not a contracting party in the ordinary sense of the word. Nor is it our opinion that they are held and bound to the fulfillment of all the agreements in the contract, or under any penalty whatever if they fail to execute these contracts. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company has undertaken to secure certain action on the part of the Grand Trunk Railway Company but it would apparently be better if the Grand Trunk Railway Company itself were held and bound by the contract. In the opinion of hon. members upon this side of the House the contract is secured by a very slender provision so far as the Grand Trunk Railway Company is concerned. It is admitted that the financing of the new corporation is to be largely the work of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, still it is held that there is not sufficient strength in the contract so far as the Grand Trunk Railway Company is concerned to ensure that that company may not at some time refuse to carry out its part of the contract and that the penalty which may be exacted under the terms of the contract would not be of sufficient strength or weight to prevent that company from forfeiting, from violating its agreement and refusing to carry out what they had undertaken. Therefore, with a view to improving the condition of affairs in that regard I am about to offer an amendment to the House and to ask the government to adopt it, or at least to endeavour to secure the assent of the House to the proposition that there should be some further security than that which is contemplated in the agreement as we understand it. The only security which the government have is a claim upon $5,000,000 worth of rolling stock, a property which in the course of time must depreciate very rapidly so that its value will diminish to a point far below $5,000,000. It is quite easy to realize and to understand that the moment may come, and may come perhaps in the not very far distant future, when the Grand Trunk Railway Company, which is really the contracting party, would consider it a good business operation to forfeit and abandon that property which is held as security for the fulfilment of this agreement. We believe that the government of the country should have some further hold upon the contracting company in order to secure that the operation of this road be continued, and that it be not thrown back to us, as it may be, in a depreciated condition. Therefore, with the view of trying to improve the security held by the country, and to furnish a much stronger guarantee that this road should be operated, and that whatever good results from its operation by the Grand Trunk Pacific as represented therein by the Grand Trunk Company, shall be more fully and more thoroughly ensured to the people of this country; I move, seconded by Mr. Kemp, the following, as an additional clause to the Bill.

The railway and the property and equipment of the said western division, and the equipment of the eastern division shall be charged, subject only to the mortgage obligations in the said agreement mentioned, with the payment of all rents that may become payable to the government under the said lease of the eastern division to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, and with the payment of all claims of the government against the said company under any and every covenant or obligation or condition of the said lease and agreement, and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company shall enter into and make all proper and sufficient mortgages, agreements and covenants with the government for that purpose.

I do not think it is necessary to occupy the time of the House at greater length just now. I think I have made it perfectly clear that the purpose of this amendment is to endeavour to improve the security held by the government and by the country.

Amendment (Mr. Bell) negatived on the same division.

Mr. MORIN moved:

That the said Bill be not now read a third time, but that it be recommitted to the Committee of the Whole House, with power to amend section 8 by adding the following thereto:—

Provided that the said railway in its course through the province of Quebec, shall run from the Quebec bridge on the St. Lawrence river, in a south-easterly direction, through the counties of Lévis and Dorchester, following the course of the Etchemin river up towards Etchemin lake, and thence easterly through the province of Quebec towards the city of Moncton.

Amendment negatived on the same division.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). Before fore you put the motion, Mr. Speaker, I desire to draw attention to the fact that on the second reading of this Bill, I raised a point of order as to the irregularity of the course pursued by the government in introducing the Bill. I drew attention to the fact that the Bill had reached its second reading, and although it was a Bill which involved a charge on the revenue of the country, it was not introduced by resolution, as it should be, nor had the announcement been made in the House that the consent of the Crown had been given to the Bill before its introduction. You then intimated, Mr. Speaker, that you would give your decision later on. In the meantime I presume that you have had an opportunity to consider the question, and I would like to have your ruling on it now.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have prepared my opinion on the question whch was raised by the hon. gentleman, not on the second reading, but on the first reading. That, however, does not make a great deal of difference. This is my opinion:

A point of order has been raised as to the propriety of proceeding with Bill (No. 235) 'An Act to provide for the construction of a National Transcontinental Railway,' because that measure has not been previously considered in a Committee of the Whole, and has not been recommended by the Crown. That question is a very important one, as I had occasion to state when it was raised on motion for leave.

The rules which govern the case are Rules 86 and 88. Rule No. 86 reads as follows:

By the 54th section of the Imperial Act, 30 Vic., c. 3, 'The British North America Act, 1867,' it is provided that the House shall not adopt or pass any vote, resolution, address or Bill for the appropriation of any part of the public revenue, or of any tax or impost, to any purpose that has not been first recommended by a message of the Governor General in the session in which such vote, resolution, address or Bill is proposed.

Rule No. 88 is couched in about the same wording. It requires that no motion can be made in the House for any public aid or charge upon the people unless it be considered in the Committee of the Whole House. I need not refer to the importance of the principle embodied in Rule 86. It gives, as we see, the initiation of money votes to the Crown, and was adopted in Canada as a necessary remedy against the numerous and glaring proposals made by private members to make grants of public money, as Mr. Gladstone once said in parliament (vol. 182 'Hansard,' p. 598).

The principle of Rule 88 is perhaps of not as great importance. In fact, in England to-day they are in the habit of introducing Bills where appropriations of public money are provided for, with the reserve, however, that the clauses which give the public aid or charge upon the people are inserted in italics, and considered as blanks until the House has considered those clauses in committee on a separate resolution. They have a standing order to that effect. Those clauses, however, are so well considered as being part of the Bill, that if they are adopted in committee the Bill is not reported with amendments.

It was decided in England by the Rt. Hon. Mr. Peel, in 1894 :

Provisions imposing charges in a Bill involving charges on the revenue are printed in italics and technically form no part of the Bill, but the discussion thereon is not irregular. The chairman in committee would not put any question on those clauses unless the charges to be imposed by them were previously sanctioned in a money committee, and the motion setting up that committee could not be put unless a minister of the Crown signified the Queen's recommendation to such charges being incurred. As the government were not prepared to sign this recommendation, the debate therefore is of the nature of an academical discussion, as no effect can be given to it, but the debate is not irregular.

In this country we have been following the same procedure. Bourinot says, at page 597 :

It often happens that Bills are introduced with certain clauses providing for salaries or other charges on the public revenue, and in that case the Bill may be introduced directly on motion, while the clauses in question (which should be distinguished by italics or brackets) are considered in the shape of resolutions in committee, and when agreed to, referred to the committee on the Bill.

When the motion for leave was made the other day, I suggested that the debate be adjourned. The House, however, went on to consider the motion for leave, and it was adopted, and the Bill stood over for the second reading on the next day. Since that time a resolution has been put on the Order Paper, having for its object the approval of the contract mentioned in the said Bill, and, for the purpose of authorizing the government to do whatever is necessary to give full effect to the said Bill. Moreover, the House has been informed of the fact, that the Crown has recommended the said resolution to the House. It has since been adopted and referred to the Committee on the Bill. If at one time the question could have been raised, whether this Bill was properly introduced I do not think that at the present stage of the proceedings it would be a proper question to discuss. We are now aware that the recommendations of the Crown have been given to the money clauses of the Bill, and that they have been considered in Committee. It is perhaps an opportune time to call the attention of the House to a very serious difference which exists between our rules, and those governing the English House of Commons with respect to grants of public money Bills.

Before 1866, the rules 396, 397 and 398 of the parliament of Great Britain and Ireland provided : That the House could not proceed upon any motion for granting money, or, for any public aid or charge upon the people, unless upon the recommendation of the Crown, and in Committee of the Whole.

It was found, however, that those rules had not the effect desired, and that members were in the habit of having Bills passed contemplating demands upon the public purse, and containing a clause which provided that the necessary expenses should be defrayed out of money hereafter to be voted by parliament. In 1866 it was decided to amend those rules, and to declare that the restriction would apply not only to actual aids and grants, but also to grants and charges payable out of moneys to be provided by parliament.

The debate on that question is very interesting, and will be found in vol. 182, pp. 591, and following. These English rules are now to be found in Standing Orders 57, 58 and 62, as printed in 1901.

In the Bill under consideration, it is provided in clause 22, that no money will be paid until a sufficient appropriation has been made by parliament for the purpose.

Applying to this case the English precedent, as it was before the amendment of 1866, I have come to the conclusion that there was in that respect no violation of our rules 86 and 88.

As to the western section of the road, the government pledges public credit by guaranteeing the bonds of the company. Could that part of the Bill have been introduced without a previous recommendation of the Crown, and without the consideration of the matters in Committee ?

I find in Blackmore (p. 26), a decision on that point which is to this effect :

A Bill which pledges the public credit for any loan to be raised may be introduced without the preliminary committee, for the introduction of money Bills under the standing orders provided, that the clauses referring to the raising of the money area guarded by being passed through preliminary committee of the whole House.

The Committee, having adopted a resolution, as required by that decision, and the recommendation of the Crown having been announced, I am of opinion, that the House may proceed to debate, and to adjust the motion for the third reading of the Bill.

We have a precedent in this House in the procedure adopted with regard to the contract with Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann. On the 8th of February, 1898, that contract was laid before the House. At the same time a motion for leave to introduce the Bill confirming the said contract was granted, and before the second reading of the Bill, the House passed a resolution, on the recommendation of His Excellency, providing for the construction of the railway mentioned in the contract. The resolution was reported and referred to the Committee of the Whole, on the Bill.

Journals House of Commons, pp. 25, 37 and 88.

Motion agreed to; and Bill read the third time, and passed, on the previous division reversed.

STEAMBOAT INSPECTION ACT AMENDMENT.

Bill (No. 237) to further amend the Steamboat Inspection Act, 1898, read the second time, and House went into Committee thereon.

On section 1,

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What change in the law is effected by this?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The explanation of this Bill is very simple. A Bill passed the House and the Senate this session amending the Steamboat Inspection Act. By an inadvertance an omission was made from it. A petition had been presented on behalf of people owning or running boats on the Yukon river, and some other rivers in the west, asking permission to use coal oil as fuel. I was under the impression that it could be allowed; but after looking through the law and studying the precedents, I came to the conclusion that such permission could not be granted legally. Coal oil as fuel has come into very general use, and the officers of my department report that when it is properly stored and guarded it is perfectly safe.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Would the hon. gentleman be kind enough to say what subsection 1 of section 27 really does enact?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The portion of subsection 1 of section 27, to which this refers, reads as follows:

No coal oil lamp shall be used between decks on any passenger steamboat in which any inflammable material is carried; nor shall any coal oil which will not bear a test of 300 degrees Fahrenheit without taking fire be used on any passenger steamboat.

It is proposed to add at the end of this section:

Provided, however, that in any case where oil is used as fuel for the production of motive power on steamboats, oil which will bear a test of two hundred degrees Fahrenheit without taking fire may be accepted if properly stored with safe and suitable provisions as to safety and to guard against fire and explosion from such oil to the satisfaction of the steamboat inspector.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). You are changing the test from 300 degrees to 200 degrees?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES: Only when it is used as fuel for motive power.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does not the danger which was previously guarded against still exist?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Section 27, as regards the oil to be used for lighting purposes, is left the same. This deals with cases where the oil is used as fuel for the production of motive power. It provides that oil which will bear a test of 200 degrees Fahrenheit may be accepted if properly stored to the satisfaction of the steamboat inspector. Besides, I know as a fact that the insurance companies will not permit the use of the oil for motive power except under special rules and regulations.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Unless the conditions to which the hon. gentleman refers are statutory, we cannot rely on their being enforced or made effective. I understand that the hon. gentleman depends to a great extent on the conditions imposed by insurance companies, but I would not consider that a good principle in legislation. Some of these steamers may not be insured, and if you were to have an accident and loss of life resulting from the absence of safeguards, that would be a very unfortunate condition of affairs.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have referred to the insurance companies' conditions only as an additional safeguard. My hon. friend will see that there is provision at the end of this Bill for the taking of proper precautions. The oil must be properly stored, with safe and suitable provisions as to safety and to guard against fire and explosion, to the satisfaction of the steamboat inspector. The test is the same as in the United States, and it is considered perfectly safe, under certain conditions, to use that oil for fuel for motive purpose. The boats on the transportation companies between San Francisco and Dawson are using that oil at present, under the laws and regulations of the United States, and considered perfectly safe. The officers of my department report that under the conditions imposed by this Bill, there will be no danger.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

SWING BRIDGES AND FERRIES.

House went into Committee to consider the following proposed resolution :

Resolved, that it is expedient, in the interests of navigation, that the Act respecting certain works constructed in or over navigable waters be amended so as to better control the working of swing bridges and ferries worked by cable, rod, chain or other device.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. Raymond Préfontaine). This resolution has been brought before the House on the recommendation of several members of the North-west. Since a few years there has been increased communication between points on the shores of lakes and rivers in the west, and a great many ferries are operated, which are run by cable. Under the existing laws, we cannot make any regulation for the protection of life and property, and frequent accidents have happened and lives have been lost owing to these ferries not being properly managed. It was suggested that the Marine and Fisheries Department should make the necessary regulations. The same remarks apply to draw bridges which are not regulated.

Mr. SPROULE. If the Bill which is to follow does not give more information than we have in the resolution, we will not have much to go by.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The point made by my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) is that the resolution seems to be of a very vague and indefinite character. It simply informs the House that 'the Act respecting certain works constructed in or over navigable waters should be amended so as to better control the working of swing bridges and ferries worked by cable, rod, chain or other device.' I do not see any great object in proceeding by resolution, when the resolution is of so vague a character. Of course, Bills of this character should be proceeded by resolution, but I should hardly think that a resolution of this kind would fulfil the condition made necessary by the rules of the House.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden, Halifax) will allow me I can give him a general idea of the Bill. I did not frame the resolution myself, and I know that it does not cover all that the Bill is intended to cover. For instance the Bill explains that :

No person shall lay, stretch or maintain any ferry cable, or any rod, chain or other device for working a ferry across, over or under any navigable water in Canada, without a license from the Minister of Marine and Fisheries ; and the said minister may make rules for regulating the applications for such licenses, and may fix the fees (not exceeding the sum of five dollars each to be paid therefor) and any ferry cable, rod, chain or other device for working the ferry laid, stretched or maintained without a license may be removed and destroyed under authority from the Minister of Marine and Fisheries ; and any person laying, stretching, or maintaining a ferry cable, rod, chain or other device for working a ferry without a license shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding one hundred dollars or to imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, and, in addition thereto shall pay the cost of removing or destroying such cable, rod, chain or other device.

2. The Governor in Council may, for the purpose of this Act, make regulations to govern the use of ferry cables and to regulate the maintenance, use, opening and closing of swing or draw bridges, other than railway bridges, upon any navigable water in Canada, and for the maintenance of lights and other precautions of safety in connection with ferry cable and bridges, and may impose a penalty, to be recoverable on summary conviction, not exceeding in any case fifty dollars and costs, or imprisonment not exceeding ten days, for the breach of such regulation, and, in case of continuing the breach, a further penalty not exceeding ten dollars and costs for every twenty-four hours during which such breach continues, or imprisonment not exceeding twenty days ; and in the case of ferry cable license the Minister of Marine and Fisheries may cancel the license upon any conviction for breach of the regulations. Every such regulation shall be published in the 'Canada Gazette.'

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I must compliment the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Prefontaine) on the speed with which he got through that. The result of it all does not seem to be very much information, but I suppose we shall be able to read it in 'Hansard' to-morrow, and so we shall be able to get an idea of what the hon. gentleman was imparting to us. I think the hon. gentleman made a record in his reading.

Mr. COCHRANE. We generally have a resolution to explain a Bill, but the hon. minister read a Bill to explain a resolution.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is this law going to be retroactive ? Will it apply to ferries already established ? Because, in my section, from Howe island to the township of Pittsburgh, we have two cable ferries that the farmers have established there for their own convenience and that have been running for years. If the Bill is to be made retroactive it will apply to these.

Mr. SPROULE. It will apply to all.

Mr. TAYLOR. It may be intended to apply only to new ferries. Then, on the Rideau river we have a number of swing bridges that are not railway bridges. Why should the Department of Marine and Fisheries take charge of the bridges across the Rideau ? And why should the Department of Marine and Fisheries interfere with these ferries? As I understand it the Department of Public Works gave permission to have them placed there, and now the Department of Marine and Fisheries interferes.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There might be some good reason in support of the suggestion by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) with regard to bridges on the Rideau canal. My attention was not drawn to that point. It may be that when we come to consider the Bill in committee it will be found advisable to except these as well as the railway bridges.

Resolution reported, read the first and second time, and agreed to.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 260) to amend the Act respecting certain works constructed in or over navigable waters.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

PILOTAGE ACT AMENDMENT.

House went into committee to consider the following proposed resolution :

Resolved, that in the interests of the navigation of the River St. Lawrence, between Montreal and Quebec, and the River Saguenay below Quebec, to amend the Pilotage Act, and the Acts relating to the Montreal Harbour Commissioners, and the Quebec Harbour Commissioners, so as to place the pilotage of these districts under the control of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.—The Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. R. Préfontaine). I suppose that the hon. gentlemen on the other side will not complain of the form of this resolution, because it comprises nearly every word of the proposed Bill. I do not wish to detain the House very long in discussing the question, as the subject is pretty well understood by hon. members of this House. There have been very serious complaints about the pilotage on the St. Lawrence, but, up to the present moment it has been impossible to get the consent of the harbour commissioners of Quebec and the corporation of pilots of Quebec to put the Quebec pilots under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. But the pilots on the St. Lawrence between Quebec and Montreal have asked that the Act concerning pilotage should be amended and that they should be put under the control of the department. The harbour commissioners of Montreal have had control up to the present time, and they also have recommended that this matter be transferred to the department. The conference of the transportation companies and the shipping interests have asked that this Pilotage Act should be amended, not only as regards the St. Lawrence, but generally. But, on account of the fact that I could not come to an agreement with the shipping interests in Quebec proper, the Bill is made to cover only the pilotage system between Montreal and Quebec and on the River Saguenay.

Mr. SPROULE. Why apply to one part of the country only ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. We have not been able to get the shipping interests in Quebec proper to consent to it. And the harbour commissioners of Quebec and the corporations of pilots themselves do not want it at present. After many consultations with them, I came to the conclusion that we would try the plan of bringing under the control of the department the pilots of the port of Montreal as well as those of the Saguenay river. We will see if it works any better. If it is found to be an improvement, probably these gentlemen in Quebec will consent to an extension of the system. The Bill covers the upper Saguenay. The reasons are these : There have been serious accidents in the Saguenay river, due to the incompetence and ignorance of some of the pilots. The pilots could not agree with the harbour commissioners of Quebec as regards the pilotage of the Saguenay. The harbour commissioners allowed all pilots to pilot vessels in the Saguenay river, instead of appointing only those who were well acquainted with the river. This resolution is introduced on the recommendation of the shipping interests and the boards of trade of Montreal, who think it would be in the public interest to have the Saguenay river put under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, which, while keeping control of the pilots in the district of Quebec, will require from them such examination as will afford the necessary guarantee of efficiency to the shipping interests.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What body has control at Quebec and Montreal, and between the two cities, at the present time ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The harbour commissioners of Montreal control the pilotage between that city and Quebec, and the harbour commissioners of Quebec control the pilotage of that city and down the gulf to Bic.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does this Bill remove the pilots between Quebec and Montreal from the jurisdiction of the Montreal harbour commissioners ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It is proposed to remove the pilotage authority from the harbour commissioners of Montreal to the Department of Marine and Fisheries as concerns the river between Montreal and Quebec.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does that comprise the pilots at Montreal as well ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The resolution does not make that very clear. What you mean by the resolution is this, that the pilots above Quebec and up to Montreal are placed under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). And the pilots at Quebec and below as far as Bic are to remain under the control of the Quebec harbour commissioners ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will there not be something of an anomaly in the government exercising control over the pilots on part of the river and not over these on another part of the river ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The principle is the same. At the present time pilots from Montreal to Quebec are under the control of the Montreal harbour commissioners, and the pilots from Quebec to the gulf are under the control of the Quebec harbour commissioners. It is now proposed to change that system, and to take the control over those in the Montreal district from the Montreal harbour commissioners and vest it in the Department of Marine and Fisheries. This is done with the unanimous consent of the pilots themselves, who are not incorporated between Montreal and Quebec. But between Quebec and the gulf they are incorporated, and that is why they persist in making their own regulations. From Montreal to Quebec they are not incorporated, and are administered by the harbour commissioners of Montreal, and it is desirable to make some further regulations governing those pilots. The harbour commissioners of Montreal are quite willing that this control should pass to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, the pilots themselves are unanimously willing, and the boards of trade and the shipping interests have been asking for this amendment for years. The Act will go into effect on the 1st of January next, after regulations have been prepared and submitted to the different bodies interested, so that the interests of every one will be fully protected.

Mr. GALLERY. What is the reason that the pilots between Montreal and Quebec are not incorporated ? What is the difference between those below Quebec and those above ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Those between Montreal and Quebec asked two years ago to be incorporated, and presented a Bill for that purpose. It was opposed by the boards of trade and those interested in navigation, and the Bill was killed in the Senate. That is the reason why they are not a corporation.

Mr. SPROULE. But if there is any need of putting the control of the pilots under the Department of Marine and Fisheries for one portion of the river, the same argument will apply to all.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman may be right in theory, but we do not want to put any compulsion upon the pilots at and below Quebec, who are now making a strong opposition to coming under the control of the department, and the shipping interest in Quebec are supporting them. So we have concluded to take only those of the Montreal district under our own control, and to make such regulations as will be satisfactory to the public and to the pilots themselves. If these work satisfactorily, as we expect they will, we will then be justified in saying to the pilots of the Quebec district, whether you are willing or not, you must come under the control of another authority. But for the present we are not ready to do that.

At six o'clock, Committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. GALLERY. I would like to get some information from the hon. minister in reference to this Bill. It appears to me that it is just as important that the pilots between Montreal and Quebec should be incorporated as it is that those from Quebec to the coast should be incorporated. I would like to know why it was that the pilots between Quebec and Montreal were not incorporated. They made an application for incorporation some time ago.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Two or three years ago when a demand for incorporation was made on the part of the pilots between Montreal and Quebec it was opposed by all the shipping interests, by the Board of Trade of Montreal, by the Corn Exchange and by everybody connected with shipping. The reasons given for that opposition were discussed by the Senate, before whom the matter was brought up, and they came to the conclusion that these pilots should not be granted incorporation, that they should remain as they were, under the control of the harbour commissioners of Montreal.

Mr. GALLERY. Do I understand from the hon. minister that the pilots between Quebec and Montreal are a different body altogether from the other pilots ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Oh, yes.

Mr. GALLERY. What is the difference ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The difference is that the pilots from Quebec to the gulf formed an incorporation many years ago and that incorporation has continued in existence. The harbour commissioners of Quebec and the Quebec Board of Trade, seem to be inclined to keep the corporation alive and not to allow it to be under the control of the government, through the Marine and Fisheries Department. The sentiment in Montreal is quite the contrary. Everybody admits that the pilots between Montreal and Quebec should be under the control of the Marine and Fisheries Department, and they have asked that this should be the case, and the pilots themselves have unanimously concurred in that demand.

Mr. GALLERY. So far as I can gather from what the hon. minister says, the pilots between Quebec and Montreal are not as good as those between Quebec and the gulf.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Nobody says that.

Mr. GALLERY. Is it not as important to have the pilots between Montreal and Quebec incorporated as to have the other pilots incorporated ; that is the point I wish to get at. It seems to me that this is a very important matter, and that the members of this House should consider it well and should not deal with it in a hurry. The success of the whole transportation system of Canada rests on this question of pilotage, and if we are now going to change any part of the system we should change the whole system and not deal with only a part of it. Since six o'clock I have been speaking to a couple of the harbour commissioners of Montreal, and as far as I can see they would very much like to have the matter deferred for a day or two.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The harbour commissioners of Montreal have unanimously passed a resolution in favour of government control of these pilots. The board of trade and the shipping interests have also expressed themselves in favour of it, so I do not see where the difficulty comes in. The harbour commissioners of Montreal desire to get rid of the control of the pilotage between Quebec and Montreal, and under the circumstances I do not see where any objection can be raised.

Mr. TALBOT. The difference between the pilots on the river between Quebec and Montreal and those from Quebec down to Bic Station is easily explained. It was only a couple of years ago that the pilots of Montreal moved for incorporation ; their system is entirely different from that of the other pilots and is almost voluntary, giving the shipping companies the privilege of choosing whom they liked out of the number of pilots. There are about seventy-five pilots between Montreal and Quebec and the best authorities say that about twenty-five or thirty could do the work. As to the pilots between Quebec and Bic, I may say that they form a body which has existed over one hundred years, and as a corporation for forty-three years. I think it is generally agreed that we should move slowly in this matter, that we should experiment first and find out if the new plan works well between Quebec and Montreal before we go any further with it. I want to read you a few extracts which I hold in my hand as to the history of the pilots of Quebec :

The branch pilots for the lower St. Lawrence, the sea pilots, were incorporated in 1860. At that time, the pilotage authority was the Trinity House. Later in 1875 this was replaced by the harbour commission. (Vide chapter 82.) Our corporation has been in existence for over 43 years, so that it has had a long experience in pilotage matters as well as in all that concerns the management of the pilots under its control and direction. It is perfectly well posted as to the services of the different pilotage stations such as Bic and Father Point, as well as what is necessary in handling the ocean steamships, and the vessels called colliers. Besides this, our corporation has a considerable advantage, by its constant communications with the captains of the pilot-boats who are themselves branch pilots always cruising day and night to Bic and other stations. In brief, its duty is to see that the service is as effective as possible. This year the number of pilots on official list is 114, but the effective number is, in reality, 106.

I may say, Mr. Chairman, that at the time of incorporation the number of pilots was between 240 and 250, and in order to explain this diminution, I may say that it is now admitted that probably seventy-five or eighty pilots could do all the work between Quebec and Bic, owing to the change which has taken place in the system of navigation, owing to the introduction of steamships. At one time all of the vessels were sailing ships which moved very slowly, but with the more rapidly moving steamships the same pilot can do five times as much work as he then could.

The pilot office is open the year round. During the season of navigation, that is to say, from April 10th to December 10th, our office is open day and night. The night watchman is himself a licensed pilot, always ready to give all the information asked for at any time. He has always on hand some pilots ready to board a vessel the moment she arrives in port, be it a sailing ship or a steamer, whether she comes from Montreal, or Three Rivers, or whether she is ready to leave our port for sea.

The ship-owners, their agents, the captains or masters have the right of selecting their pilots in the port of Quebec or at the pilotage stations at Bic or Father Point. Every spring the large companies choose the pilots they wish to have and our board readily accede to their request, reserving the right, however, to command their withdrawal if the general interest requires it. All this is done in such a way as to help the trade, although the law does not bind us to do so. We have some pilots who have been 40 years in the employ of the same company, and some others during over 30 years. This proves that they have given full and complete satisfaction to the trade.

Most of ocean vessels, colliers or others coming from Montreal arriving at Quebec during the latter part of the day, steam ahead to sea during the night. They hardly slow down the vessel to allow the boat carrying the pilot to come alongside, and you can thus easily see that our pilots are sailing at night most of the time. They must have, during foggy weather, knowledge of the river to pilot their vessels and steer them off the reefs when necessary.

Several of our pilots hold first-class certificates from the captains of the vessels they have often piloted. Several too who hold certificates are sea captains, and others are river captains.

Complaints have been made against pilots, a good deal of noise has been made about the complaints against pilots, either for incompetency, drunkenness, or some other cause. Allow me to call specially your attention to the fact that most of these complaints are made most of the time from unauthorized sources. It is not the companies conversant with the organization of the pilotage service which complain of its efficiency, but some writers badly informed, and I would add who have a predisposition against the pilots. When an accident happens—an accident may happen to the most experienced pilot—it is said it is the pilot's fault, even before they have the necessary information, and before the investigation has decided who is to be responsible for it. Nay, more: even after the investigation, these writers persist in accusing the pilot when the fault has been attributed to the captain or the officers of the vessel.

Even in those cases in which it was said that the accident had happened through a lack of knowledge of the pilots, it has been a common thing to accuse the pilots of imaginary complaints. These irresponsible writings have done more harm to the St. Lawrence route than the so-called incompetency of the navigators.

There has been error of judgment in some cases; but where is the mortal who has never committed an error? One moment of absent-mindness is sufficient to strand a vessel, and during foggy and bad weather, God knows what our troubles are, and to what dangers we are exposed. Those who give us the blame so freely do not know the anxieties we have to experience. I do not fear to state that, with regard to maritime disasters, the St. Lawrence can show a very favourable comparison with any other river.

I ask the House to give attention to this statement:

During the last forty years, our pilots have piloted 86,702 vessels, of which 50,305 were sailing vessels and 33,398 steamers.

We are accused of forming a family compact, and of being an out-of-date institution, whose existence is no longer necessary.

In several instances the pilots have gone through investigations which have been turned against them by those who were trying to ruin them. Every time the pilots have come out safe from those investigations. What better testimony can we give them than that of the companies who employ us? We have from these the most flattering letters addressed to the pilots. Without boasting, we may say that we compare favourably with the pilots in all parts of the world.

In the pilotage waters from Quebec to Bic and vice-versa, you can see by the official reports of the harbour commissioners that accidents have been comparatively few. Some years even, there was no accident for which the pilots had to be blamed. To show you how cautious and severe we are, we do not allow a pilot under the influence of liquor to take charge of a vessel. If this pilot is engaged or retained by a company, its agent or captain, he is fined, and loses the privilege of being employed by a line. I am proud to be able to affirm that the pilots who make use of liquors are very few. Our board, for a certain number of years have been very severe in this respect. Before long we hope to completely kill this vice which is of great danger to the safety of navigation. To destroy this deplorable passion, our corporation has an efficient means which is given by law; it is the loss of the license upon a sworn official declaration by two trustworthy witnesses given before the harbour commission.

When an accident happens to a pilot, he must have a hundred good reasons to win his case, as he may be sure to have all the crew against him to save their officers.

3. Apprentice Pilots—To-day, the apprentice pilots have not the advantage of obtaining reliable information as to certain features of pilotage, notably the soundings. It may be understood that, on board steamers which run at full speed, the soundings are impossible, except in foggy weather. Formerly, when we had the sailing vessels it was easier. Several times the corporation of pilots has asked the government, that the part of section 22 of 12 Vic. chapter 114 which was abrogated by the 36 Vic. chapter 54, be put into force. By the Act 12 Vic. chapter 114, it was said: 'There will be two superintendents of pilotage, who will be licensed pilots of at least ten years practice. And be it enacted that the Trinity House, in order to give to the apprentice pilots the means of studying the north channel, will send at least twice every year its vessel to explore this channel, on which may be admitted, under the supervision of one of the superintendents, all the apprentice pilots.'

The harbour commission which replaced the Trinity House since 1875, has no vessel at its disposal. That is the reason why the pilots insist that a vessel be put to their service. These apprentices, having made all the necessary soundings under the supervision of a licensed pilot, and having kept official notes verified on the charts, will obtain more knowledge than by any other means. Every apprentice who, in future, will have to pass an examination to become a pilot, when his apprenticeship will be finished, will have a perfect knowledge, not only of the compass by points and degrees, but also of variation, deviation and sheering, to be made to give the true or astronomical course and vice versa. To get a thorough knowledge of the River St. Lawrence either of the south channel which is mostly in constant use, or the north channel, and the going in or going out of the Saguenay, we must necessarily give to these apprentices the opportunities to become competent pilots. It is no use thinking now to make soundings when a steamer runs 10 or 12 miles an hour. On board, they even count the minutes a vessel may lose. That is why we ask that a vessel be put at the disposal of the apprentices in order that they may learn what cannot be taught to them otherwise. This would cost very little to the government and would make the navigation of our river safer. These apprentices could then make the necessary soundings, under the direction of a licensed pilot. The pliot board should be authorized to examine at least once a year, during the summer all the apprentices. This would give us the opportunity of seeing the progress made by them in the study of their future profession. Special notes would be kept in a particular book to that effect. I cannot repeat too often that the profession is open to every one. It is, therefore, unfair to say, as is said in some quarters, that the profession is limited to certain persons only. We have actually on our board, a pilot who has been several years president of our corporation, and whose father was never a pilot. Some say: it is only the pilot's sons who can enter the profession. Does it not happen often that a young man becomes a lawyer, or a doctor because his father belonged to the profession. He undergoes the influence where he lives. It is the same thing with the pilot's sons ; from their tender youth they hear navigation talked of ; they have small boats, which they command with their comrades and, little by little, the taste developes for navigation, and they become pilots. Where is the evil in that ?

According to the new law the apprentices are admitted to be indentured with the corporation of pilots only after permission is obtained from the pilotage authority as to the number. These apprentices are presented to the pilot board, according to their seniority, by licensed pilots, after the manner which has now been made law. They are afterwards presented by the board of directors to the pilotage authority who has a right to accept or refuse them. These apprentices are then seemingly under the government control, because all the by-laws, even those of the pilots before coming into force, have to be published in both languages in the newspapers, and receive the sanction of the pilotage authority established by the government.

The tariff.—The pilotage tariff goes as far back as 1803. It has 100 years of existence. It is only in 1882 that we succeeded in getting its lightly modified. We were then granted an increase of 7½ per cent ; the harbour commission have unanimously and according to law, recommended 5 per cent. Besides we had from the Hon. Mr. McLelan, the then Minister of Marine, the promise that in the following year our tariff would be based on the tonnage, in all the Dominion. This manner is undoubtedly the most rational. Several of the ministers who have preceded you at the head of the ministry, have admitted the principle, but that is all that has been done ; it has been a dead letter.

You will admit that the conditions of life have singularly changed. Every thing costs dearer, and we are still with an old tariff 100 years old, slightly changed in 1882. But the lawyer's and the notary's, and the salaries of the judges, have been changed on the ground that the cost of life has much increased. We are mortals like all these men, and we suffer from the increase in the cost of living as they do. Would it not be just to remodel our tariff ?

It is a fundamental principle that an employee has a right to such remuneration, in proportion to the responsibility he assumes. Does a lawyer entrusted with a $100,000 case charge the same fee as for a 100 case ? Evidently not. Well, why not apply this rule to us. If it is just for some, it ought to be just for others.

Allow me to call your attention to the fact that we have lost, partially at least, what was granted to us in 1882, by the exemption of colliers from pilotage (vide R.S.C., chapter 80, section 59, (C) and by 2 Ed. VII., chapter 27). Some of these colliers take pilots, but some take pilots only when the captains fear that they could not easily pilot the vessels themselves or believe that they would save time by taking a licensed pilot. We have already verified the incompetency of these unqualified mariners, especially when crossing another ship in the river in different places. Our pilots know what to do being constantly exposed to these crossings, they know how to give the necessary space, because they are certain of the depth of the water they have on either side of the river. There is loss of time for both parties and those inexperienced pilots put our pilots in difficult positions.

The pilot, to have a right to take charge of any vessel, must be a branch pilot. That is to say, he must have served an apprenticeship of seven consecutive years, made eight trips over the Atlantic, have passed an examination as to the river, and as to his sight, hearing, &c. When an accident happens to him, his branch is taken from him for a longer or shorter period, if not for life. As to those colliers, said to be exempted from pilotage, any one can take charge of them without having passed an examination, or having proved that he had a sufficient knowledge of the river, and yet he has no responsibility, as there is no law governing such a case. We keep licensed pilots at the pilotage stations on the pilot boats ready to take charge of these vehsels. We believe it would be better to repeal that law. After all, the pilots have never refused service, so conscious are they of the responsibility of their position.

The whole is respectfully submitted.

(Sgd.) L. E. MORIN,

President of the corporation of pilots for and below the harbour of Quebec.

I may add that some 35 or 40 years ago, when we had only wooden sailing vessels, the pilots were paid so much per foot draught. In those days the largest sailing vessels carried a cargo of from 1,200 to 1,500 tons. To-day vessels on the St. Lawrence carry from 8,000 to 10,000 tons. Then, wooden vessels sailing down the St. Lawrence might go aground five or six times without any injury, while the vessels of to-day, being constructed of iron or steel, will be smashed by the least shock. Then, the wooden vessels usually had only the wind for their propelling power, while the vessels of to-day are steamers. Therefore, the responsibility of the pilots is to-day much greater than it was formerly.

This paper, in a few words, describes the action of the pilots on the Lower St. Lawrence. No one who has had any knowledge of the navigation of that river from Quebec down will deny that the corporation of pilots is composed of excellent men. They are all men of experience who have had a thorough training as sailors, who know all about the compass and the business of navigation, and who have been over the seas in many parts of the world. There is no doubt that in the last few years great improvements have been made on the St. Lawrence river, but some things yet remain to be done. It is admitted that there are more pilots now belonging to the corporation of pilots from Quebec down than are able to find employment. As the steamship companies have their choice of pilots, it would be a very good thing if the Department of Marine and Fisheries employed the balance to take constant soundings across and up and down the channel. They would be able to make complete reports from year to year, which would certainly be valuable aids in the navigation of the St. Lawrence, and would tend to diminish the chances of accidents.

Mr. TAYLOR. I fail to see what the argument of my hon. friend from Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) has to do with the resolution now before the House. I agree fully with what he says with respect to the great body of the pilots; and some legislation may be necessary at the proper time on their behalf. But the resolution now before the House is to amend the Pilotage Act and the Acts relating to the Montreal Harbour Commissioners and the Quebec Harbour Commissioners. I fully agree with my hon. friend from St. Anne's division, Montreal (Mr. Gallery). The government should move slowly in disturbing existing arrangements on the St. Lawrence. It is very singular that after the House has been in session for nearly seven months, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries should have the Order paper covered with four resolutions which he is introducing at this late date, and on which Bills will afterwards be founded. What time is there for the harbour commissioners of Montreal and Quebec and the general shipping interests to protest against this resolution if they do not approve of it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. They have all demanded it.

Mr. TAYLOR. We have not seen any evidence of that demand, and we have the hon. member for St. Anns (Mr. Gallery), who represents one of the districts most largely interested, protesting against it. But there is a sting in the closing words of the resolution, 'so as to place the pilotage of these districts under the control of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.' Are we to take this as carrying out in part the pledge which the hon. minister made to his constituents before his election, when he said to them: If you will elect me, I am going to take control of a great portion of the public Works Department? If he made that speech with the sanction of the government, why does not the government come down with a Bill to divide up the Department of Public Works, instead of bringing in resolutions by piece-meal to transfer portions of that department from the Minister of Public Works to the hon. gentleman? We have here a resolution to take this pilotage system and put it under the control of the Marine Department. The hon. minister violated a cabinet secret in making the announcement he did, and afterwards denied that he had made any such declaration, but we find the announcement verified by this resolution. I should think that the words of the hon. member for St. Anns would have some weight with the government, and that the government would hesitate before disturbing the existing regulations. The present system has been in force for years, and I fail to see what necessity there is for changing it. f this is in part accomplishment of the bargain made by the government with the hon. minister before he accepted office, namely, that they would transfer a certain portion of the public works to his department, they should come down with a Bill and do it in the light of day, and not slip in half a dozen little resolutions taking this part and the other away by piece-meal from the Public Works Department and transferring them to the Department of Marine and Fisheries. I would advise the government to let this Bill lay over until we hear from the pilots, and the shipping interests, and the harbour commissioners. They are under the Public Works Department now, do they want to come under the control of the Marine Department? These interests connected with navigation should either be in one department or the other, and not be split up piece-meal—a part in Public Works, a part in Marine and Fisheries and a part in Railways and Canals. The government should settle on some well defined plan and place them under the charge of one department, so that the people would know with whom they were dealing.

Mr. GALLERY. The reason I raised an objection was because I think the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal are just as well able to manage their own affairs as are the Harbour Commissioners of the port of Quebec. I fail to see why the pilotage system and the pilots below Quebec should be treated differently from the pilotage system and pilots between Montreal and Quebec. I have been speaking to a couple of Harbour Commissioners since the House took recess at six o'clock, and I find that they are of the same opinion as myself, and would like to have the matter held over for a day or two. I am not at all implying that my hon. friend the Minister of Marine has any object to serve in doing this. I believe that he is simply acting according to the wish of the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal, but I am not inclined to see the matter in the same light as these gentlemen. In my opinion we would be taking a retrograde course, if we were to take this matter out of their hands and give it to the control of the Marine Department. It would be better that the resolution should be held over a day or two in any case, so as to give us time to think over it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not quite approve of the way in which my hon. friend the Minister of Marine approaches this question. He says that because a certain public body has no objection to transferring to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, the control of the pilotage from Montreal to Quebec, this should be done, and because a certain other public body does not want the pilotage from Quebec down to be interferred with, no change should be made. It seems to me that the real question is what is the most effective way of dealing with the pilotage question. If the most effective way is to put it under the control of the hon. gentleman's department, then let that be done for the entire pilotage from Montreal down to Bic. If it is best to let matters remain under the present control, then make no change. I do not see why this matter should be dealt with upon any consideration other than the consideration of what is best in the public interest. But the only reason which my hon. friend gives for the change is that certain men, who are exercising certain functions in Montreal, are willing that the pilots under their jurisdiction should fall under the control of his department. Is there any sound principle in that for the administration of public affairs ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The principle involved is the same in the two cases. I entirely agree with my hon. friend that the whole of the pilotage should be under the control of the department.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I did not say that it should be under the control of the department, but that we should come to a conclusion as to what would be the best plan, and when we came to a conclusion apply that to the whole river.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Who is going to judge ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Why the government.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. On the advice of whom ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). On whose advice does the government act with regard to public affairs generally ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Public opinion.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is there one public opinion for the river above Quebec and another below ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That is not my conception of public opinion. If my hon. friend means that there are local opinions in each case, each of which differs from the other, I can understand him. But that is not public opinion. Further in matters of administration. I do not agree with the hon. minister or my hon. friend from Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) that you are to be guided entirely by public opinion. The government ought to have some opinion of its own. Surely my hon. friend does not propose that, if public opinion this year is favourable to dealing with this question in a certain way, he will deal with it in that way this year, and, if public opinion in that particular district veers around, he will veer with it and deal with the matter in another way next year. I know that public opinion controls the policy of the government in very many cases; it controls it much more than principles do. But I do think, so far as an administrative matter of this kind is concerned, no safe guide is to be found in the mere question of local public opinion in one locality.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. But, when we find among those interested a unanimous opinion in favour of a change in the way suggested by this resolution, I think the government is perfectly justified in accepting the suggestion of those who know something about the matter. For instance, the shipping conference of Montreal is composed of men representing the different steamship companies. That conference have represented time and again that the pilotage system between Montreal and Quebec should be under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and that there should be an improvement in the management of this important part of the St. Lawrence transportation system. That has been their opinion, to my knowledge for the last ten or fifteen years. An investigation took place some years ago, the result of which was that the recommendation that the pilotage should be put under the control of the government. It was not done because the government wanted to have the consent, as much as possible, of those who are directly interested. There were the board of harbour commissioners of Montreal and the pilots. The pilots are an important body of men. Most of them have made sacrifices in studying navigation and becoming proficient for the work they are called upon to do. After becoming Minister of Marine and Fisheries I took hold of this question, because I knew something of it before I was in office, having been a member of the board of harbour commissioners of Montreal for four years. I knew the difficulties in connection with this part of the navigation of the St. Lawrence. The board of harbour commissioners came to the conclusion that they would be relieved of part of their duties by handing over the control of pilotage to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and they unanimously passed a resolution in that sense. The pilots themselves discussed the question for quite a long time before coming to a decision, and, finally, they came unanimously to the decision that they should be under the control of the department. The Board of Trade of Montreal also favours the change. These are all public bodies and must know something of what is in the public interest and in the interest of the navigation of the St. Lawrence, that part of it at least. But we have not succeeded in convincing the Harbour Commissioners of Quebec or those specially interested in navigation in Quebec that they should concur in this Bill. They have a corporation of pilots, and that corporation hold to their privileges and advantages, believing that the severe laws and regulations under which they work are sufficient. They have not consented to come under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. Why should we coerce them? Why should we take them by the throat and force them to come under the control of the department when, after all it is a debatable question and a question which, even when it is decided in the sense in which the government have decided it up to this point, will involve some difficulty in working out so as to make sure that it shall be to the general advantage? The Harbour Commissioners of Montreal are convinced, the pilots themselves are convinced, the board of trade and all the shipping interests are convinced that the pilots should be under the control of the department, because then they would know whom to blame in case of an accident or in case incompetent pilots are employed. Under these circumstances, the government have prepared this Bill. Delay is suggested. I do not know how anybody can complain about haste when everybody agrees to this measure and demands it. It is very well for the hon. member for Ste. Anne, Montreal (Mr. Gallery) to voice the after thought of some members of the harbour commissioners in asking for a day or two more. But surely this hon. gentleman is not serious any more than the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) is serious in his remarks. Because, when everybody wants something to be done, and all have agreed that it should be done, I would like to know if the objection is well founded when it comes from outside. Who knows better what is proper for the pilotage between Montreal and Quebec than the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal? Who knows better than the pilots? Who knows better than the representatives of the shipping interest?

Mr. TAYLOR. If they are left to themselves. But the hon. minister stated that he had not been able to convince the harbour interests of Quebec that it would be in the interests of navigation. So, it is evident that the department has been trying to influence public opinion. The framing of public opinion originated with the Department of Marine and Fisheries by the hon. minister's own story.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That would indicate powerful influence on the part of the department. I stated a fact that was well known, and with regard to which I defy contradiction, when I said that for over ten years the shipping interests of Montreal had been asking for what I propose in this Bill. Who are more interested in the safe navigation between Quebec and Montreal than the shipping interest? They are unanimous on the subject. Why should the hon. gentleman say that we had framed public opinion in that sense? We have not framed it. Their opinion of the shipping interest on this question was formed ten years ago and it has never changed. But the pilots themselves were not at first disposed to favour the change. Lately they have convinced themselves that it would be better in their own interests that they should be under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. The board of trade have passed a resolution in that sense and so has the harbour commissioners. So, opinion among those interested is unanimous. Outsiders certainly cannot be supposed to know more than those who are especially interested in a satisfactory settlement of this question.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Prefontaine) has not assigned a very high function to my hon. friend from Ste. Anne's division (Mr. Gallery) when he says that everyone is asking for this Bill and demanding it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Every one interested.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is not my hon. friend from Ste. Anne's division a ratepayer of Montreal?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He is not interested in shipping.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is not the hon. gentleman (Mr. Gallery) representative of one of the most important divisions of Montreal? The Minister of Marine and Fisheries practically tells us that the hon. gentleman is not to be considered, because though he stands up and objects to this proposal, the hon. minister says that everybody demands it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Every one interested.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I should have thought that my hon. friend from St. Anne's division, being representative of a very important division of the city of Montreal, might be regarded as being interested, to some slight extent at least. I do not know how many constituents my hon. friend has, I suppose, 35,000 or 40,000, for whom he speaks in this House, and yet he is not interested in this measure, which affects the interest of the city of Montreal to a vital extent. Well, no one is talking about forcing the pilots, or doing them any injustice, either at Montreal or Quebec. The pilots at Montreal and Quebec must be subject to the law. The passing of an Act regulating the control of these pilots would not necessarily result in any injustice to them. Is it to be supposed that the pilots coming under the control of a department of this government would thereby be subjected to some injustice? Would it disturb their corporate rights in any way? Would they, by being subjected to an Act of that kind, be treated any more harshly than any railway or telephone company, any bank, any company having public officers in its employ, is treated by being made subject to the law, and to regulations devised by the government under the law? This is not to be spoken of as coercion, this is to be spoken of as a regulation in the public interest, such a regulation as will protect the public interest on the one hand, and will also do justice to the officers engaged in the performance of public duties on the other hand.

Mr. TALBOT. I think the point under discussion as to the different position occupied by the Quebec pilots and the Montreal pilots, should be made clear. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) doubted whether the memorandum I read from the pilots' corporation of Quebec was germane to the question. I began my remarks by saying that they were unanimously of the opinion in Quebec, the pilots the harbour commissioners and the shipping interests, that things should remain as they are now, whilst in Montreal they are just as unanimously asking for a change. The pilots of Quebec are differently organized altogether from those at Montreal. In the latter district they have a system of go-as-you-please, each one is independent of the others; whilst in Quebec they are under stringent rules, being bound by their Act of incorporation. Besides that, the Quebec pilots are making strong efforts every year to improve the St. Lawrence river in order to make the navigation more efficient. The change they ask for is contained in that memorandum. All the pilots are interested in preventing accidents as far as possible, because their lives are at stake in the performance of their duties, and the welfare of their wives and children is at stake. When a man takes a steamer and is on duty 12 or 15 hours, he may run into a fog and meet with an accident. Well, you may say, he had no business to run into a fog. But he must suffer the consequences, and in any case he is set aside by the steamship company, whether he was blameable or not. That man is certainly interested in seeing that everything possible is done for the improvement of navigation, he is interested in seeing that every facility is given to the safe navigation of vessels.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Do steamship companies have the selection of their pilots in going out and coming in?

Mr. TALBOT. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Are they not obliged to take the first pilot that hails them on coming in?

Mr. TALBOT. No. Each steamship company in Quebec has an agent or a representative, who goes to the pilot corporation and says: We require so many pilots this year, and we want you to give us the names of those whom you think are the best pilots, and we will take our choice. The company keeps these pilots on trial a number of months, perhaps a year. Indeed some of these pilots have been forty years with the same company, who are satisfied with their services and who employ them all the time. When an agent gets a telegram notifying him that a steamer is coming in, he asks the pilot to go down to Father Point and take charge of the vessel. The agent has the choice of the pilot.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I should think that is a very serious state of affairs, because, according to my hon. friend's statement, it appears that the steamship companies have the choice of their own pilots, and if these pilots are not willing to violate the law by running into a fog, or running at an excessive speed, they are put to one side and others are put in their places. That indicates that some better regulations are needed in the district of Quebec.

Mr. TALBOT. It is not the fault of the pilots, because if the pilots were left to themselves they would prefer throwing out the anchor than to move on under dangerous circumstances. But they have got to move in their own interest.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I agree that, under these conditions, it is not the fault of the pilots, but it is the fault of the system, and indicates that some different regulations are required. I do not say that the system which prevails in Halifax is a perfect one, but it is a different one. I have a little familiarity with the system prevailing there. Vessels coming into the harbour of Halifax are obliged to take the first pilot that hails them. But the pilots are under strict regulations. No pilot receives a license unless he is perfectly competent, and they are employed only so long as proper discipline is maintained among them, and every case of wrong-doing is properly punished. We have a pilot commission in Halifax that attends to these matters. Then when a vessel leaves the city the same pilot that brought the vessel in is to be on hand to take her out, and if he is on hand the vessel is obliged to engage the service of that same pilot for the voyage out.

Mr. EMMERSON. Under the system in Halifax, the pilot who does no work, is he not entitled to as much compensation as the pilot who does work?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The pilots are obliged to be on duty; they are obliged to be on hand when vessels are likely to come into port. A vessel is bound to take the pilot that first offers, as I understand the regulations, and that pilot has the option of taking that vessel to sea himself. He is bound to be on hand when she goes out, and if he is not, he is subject to censure and punishment. I think there is some system by which the pilots, although they do not happen to meet a vessel in the first instance, nevertheless receive some consideration for the time they have spent, and for the risk which they have run in going out to the mouth of the harbour in all kinds of weather to pick up vessels that are coming in. I think they also have a provision by which some portion of the common fund is set aside as a superannuation allowance for those pilots who are no longer able to perform their duty. But I think the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) will agree that it is not in the interest of the pilots themselves that any such system as that which he describes should prevail, and it seems to me one of the strongest arguments why some better regulations should be made respecting pilotage affairs in the district of Quebec. Whatever else we may differ about we are all agreed that there should be no such system as will place temptation in the way of pilots to violate the rules which are laid down for the proper guidance of vessels. If a captain of a vessel desires to run the risk of violating the regulations in order to get to sea a little earlier, I say that the pilot should be in a perfectly independent position, and be at liberty to disobey the captain and to say that he will not violate the regulations; he should be able to do that without the slightest fear of penalty. I think the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will agree with that. If the system to-day be as described by my hon. friend from Bellechasse, it is certainly the best argument in favour of better regulations.

Mr. TALBOT. In answer to the hon. the leader of the opposition I may say that after a pilot starts with a vessel he may anchor the vessel if he wishes whether the captain is willing or not. While the pilot is in charge of the vessel he is the master, but there is this consideration that the captain looks after his own interests; he has so much expense for delays, &c. for which he has to account. The company want him to make time and he is urged to make time and to save expenses so that the pilot is indirectly under that influence. The one body that should see that a vessel comes to anchor in cases of that kind is the insurance company. It is they who suffer the risk and the loss and they should see to this matter. They know all about the situation and know that this occurs for the very reason that the pilots at Quebec always take their steamers at night. The navigation between Montreal and Quebec is carried on during the day time and the steamer arrives at Quebec about dark so that the Quebec pilot has to do his work in the night.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend will see that it is the public who suffer in the end, because as the result of this, accidents occur, insurance rates are put up and the St. Lawrence route is discredited.

Resolution reported, read the first and second time, and agreed to.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. (Hon. Raymond Préfontaine). Moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 261). respecting the Pilotage District of Montreal and respecting the Pilotage District of Quebec.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

NORTH SYDNEY HARBOUR COMMISSION.

House went into Committee to consider the following proposed resolution:

Resolved, that it is expedient, in the interests of the harbour of North Sydney, Nova Scotia, to amend chapter 30 of the statutes of 1879, intituled: 'An Act respecting the Harbour of North Sydney in Nova Scotia,' by striking out the word 'four' in the last line of section 8 of the said Act, and substituting therefor the word 'five'; and by inserting the words 'after deducting five per cent for his remuneration' after the word 'shall' in the fourth line of section 10 of the said Act.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Would the hon. gentleman be good enough to explain.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am perfectly willing to give all the information but I really cannot give more than is contained in the resolution. It appears that the harbour commission of North Sydney, Nova Scotia, have more work to do than they used to have and their secretary will not remain in office with a salary of $400. The department has been requested to amend the law so as to give a salary of $500. The second section provides that the collector of customs, who has been collecting harbour dues, will have a commission of five per cent of these dues as remuneration for his services.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is there any remuneration provided for the commissioners themselves either at Sydney or North Sydney?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not think they have any remuneration.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is my hon. friend quite sure of that?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The commissioners have no

remuneration whatever. With that commission of five per cent the collector of customs will probably receive $150 a year.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries considered the question of giving some moderate remuneration to pilotage authorities in cases where the duties which they discharge make very large demands upon their time? I know the question has come up a good many times within the last ten or twelve years in connection with the pilotage authority at Halifax and I believe it was under the consideration of one of the predecessors of my hon. friend, Sir Louis Davies. I do not know whether my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has himself taken the question into consideration.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No requests have been made of me in regard to that, but, I will inquire into it.

Resolution reported, read the first and second time, and agreed to.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. Raymond Préfontaine) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 262) to amend the Act respecting the harbour of North Sydney, Nova Scotia.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

SHIPPING CASUALTIES ACT.

House went into committee to consider the following proposed resolution:

Resolved, that with a view to facilitate investigation into shipping casualties, it is expedient to amend the Shipping Casualties Act, 1901, by inserting the word 'stranded' after the word 'abandoned' in the first line of paragraph (a), and by inserting the word 'stranding' after the word 'abandonment' in the first line of paragraph (d) of section 3 of the said Act; by repealing section 8 of the said Act, and substituting therefor the following section:—

'8. The minister may appoint any officer of the government of Canada, or any judge of the Superior Court of the province of Quebec, or any judge of a county court, or any local judge in Admiralty of the Exchequer Court of Canada, or any stipendiary magistrate, to be a commissioner to hold formal investigations, and a commissioner shall for such purpose be a court.'

By adding the words 'or default' after the word 'misconduct' in the second line of paragraph (b), in the first line of paragraph (c) and in the second line of paragraph (d) of subsection 2 of section 8 of the said Act; and by adding the words 'provided, however, that no formal investigation of any case shall be held until it has been ordered by the minister,' after the word 'bound' in the last line of paragraph (e) of the said subsection; by repealing section 12 of the said Act, and substituting therefor the following section:—

'12. When the minister, at the request of any person, orders a formal investigation, it shall be the duty of such person to render such assistance to the court as is in his power.'

By striking out the words 'before the commencement of the investigation' in the fourth line of section 15 of the said Act; by adding the words 'or engineer' after the word 'mate,' in the third line of section 17 of the said Act; by repealing section 21 and subsection 2 of section 21, of the said Act, and substituting therefor the following sections:—

'21. The certificate of a master, mate or engineer may be cancelled or suspended by a court holding a formal investigation, if the court finds that any loss or damage, or the abandonment or stranding of any ship, or any loss of life has been caused by the wrongful act or default of such master, mate or engineer; or if it finds that any master, mate or engineer is incompetent, or has been guilty of any gross act of misconduct, drunkenness or tyranny, or that in a case of collision he has failed to render the assistance, or to give information required by law. Provided that in a case of a shipping casualty the court shall not cancel or suspend a certificate unless one at least of the assessors concurs in the finding of the court.

'2. A certificate shall not be cancelled or suspended by a court under this section unless a copy of the report or a statement of the case upon which the formal investigation has been ordered has been furnished to the holder of the certificate, and he has had an opportunity of making a defence.'—The Minister of Marine.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Would the hon. gentleman be good enough to say what is the exact effect of the amendment on the first paragraph of the resolution?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The word 'stranding' is added to the existing law and it gives us power to hold an investigation in the case where a vessel is stranded, and if the evidence is against the officers, they may be censured. This Bill is introduced on account of representations made by the British Board of Trade, and it is almost word for word with the English law. The idea is to make our investigations into shipping casualties uniform with the English procedure on the subject. Mr. Salmon, chairman of the board of examiners of masters and mates has made these suggestions, and he believes that in the future we will be in a position to give complete satisfaction to the insurance companies. In every case where an accident has happened we will be able to hold an investigation, and to discover who is responsible. Perhaps it may be well for me to read Mr. Salmon's report to the deputy minister. He says:

While holding an investigation into the casualty to the ss. 'Manchester Trader,' several omissions and deficiencies in the present 'Act relating to Shipping Casualties' became apparent. Some of them are of so much importance, that, with deference to your opinion, I venture to suggest that they should be amended as soon as possible.

A recent letter from the Imperial Board of Trade, urgently requests the department to hold investigations into every shipping casualty occurring in the Dominion of Canada, and I think you will agree with me, that unless these investigations are held promptly—especially where ships and cargo are underwritten at 'Lloyds'—the possibility of reducing the present high rates of insurance is remote. For this purpose I think it advisable to appoint a permanent commissioner of wrecks, who would organize some system and be responsible that every casualty of importance is reported, with comments thereon, to the minister.

While I was in the maritime provinces last month, no less than six casualties occurred that should have been investigated, but owing to the fact that they were not reported to me, and the local papers gave me no information, I was unable from lack of knowledge, to make any representations as to the advisability of holding investigations, and on my return to Ottawa, five out of these six vessels had sailed.

As the Act stands at present, the minister is not empowered to appoint a commissioner permanently, but in the inclosed draft you will see that by a slight alteration in the wording of section 8 relating to this, I have made it possible.

At the time the Act was drafted, it was not considered necessary to hold investigations into mere strandings, the word 'stranded' was omitted from the section of the Imperial Act from which section 1 was taken, so that, although investigations have been held and certificates dealt with in cases of stranding where no damage was sustained, the proceedings were illegal. As it is of the last importance that strandings should be investigated, and masters punished where negligence is proved, I have thought it advisable to amend section 1 to read as the Imperial Act does; also subsection 2 of section 8, and section 21 relating to the same thing.

Section 12 has been slightly altered in wording though not much in sense, by the advice of the Department of Justice. It refers to a superintendence of a marine inquiry.

In the investigation into the loss of the tug 'Mersey,' I was unable to deal with the certificates of two officers, owing to the fact that the Act requires that a 'report' or 'statement of the case' shall be delivered to the master, mate or engineer before the commencement of the proceedings. It will frequently occur—as in the case referred to—that witnesses absent themselves purposly with an idea of escaping justice, and I have therefore amended section 15 by omitting the words 'before the commencement of the investigation.' Subsection 2 of section 21 in the inclosed draft refers to this also.

In section 17 the word 'engineer' in the third line was omitted owing to an oversight, so that an engineer who fails to comply with an order of the court to deliver up his certificate cannot be subjected to any penalty. I have amended the section in this respect.

The alterations to the Act suggested have been approved by the Department of Justice, and I now submit them to you, trusting they may meet with your approval, and that you will impress upon the minister the importance of revising the Act, if possible, this session.

R. SALMON,

Chairman of the Board of Examiners, Masters and Mates.

I may say that this is signed by a special officer who was appointed to replace the late Captain Smith, who died three or four years ago.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There does not seem to be any objection to the first paragraph, except that I do not think it adds anything to the Act to insert the word 'stranded'; because a vessel can hardly be stranded without being damaged. With regard to the second resolution, there seems to have been a mistake in drafting it, because it first repeals section 8, and in the next paragraph amends the section that has been already repealed. The draughtsman has evidently overlooked the fact that section 8 contains two subsections. This should be amended so as to read as follows: 'by repealing subsection 1 of section 8.'

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I move to add after the word 'repealing,' in the sixth line, the words, 'first subsection of.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The language of the first subsection of section 8, as now proposed to be enacted, is very different from the language of the first subsection at present on the statute-book. Is there a recommendation of the British Board of Trade that it should be enacted in this form?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have not submitted this draft amendment, but it is introduced in consequence of the British amendment. But this is largely a domestic measure. Its object is to render more effective these investigations by authorizing them to be held at any place or at any time the minister decides.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Section 8 at present provides that if it appears to the minister that a formal investigation is necessary, a formal investigation may be held. The section as proposed to be enacted simply provides that the minister may appoint certain officers to hold formal investigations which have not previously been mentioned in the statute. It would seem possible that this subsection might require a little further consideration; but as the hon. gentleman is to introduce a Bill, and that Bill can be amended in the committee if necessary, I merely make the suggestion for the consideration of the officers of his department. I wish to make another suggestion. We have discussed more than once in this House the form in which amendment to statutes should be made. I agree with the hon. Minister of Justice that when you are amending a section of a statute, it is far better to repeal the statute and to re-enact it in full with the amendments than simply to specify that a word is to be inserted in place of another here and there.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I think the Bill is to be introduced in that form.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose section 21 is designed to carry out the recommendation of the British Board of Trade?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is the recommendation of that board available ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. When the House goes into committee on the Bill, I will furnish all the information required.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). If the hon. gentleman could place it on the Table of the House or place it on 'Hansard,' so that we could see it in the meantime, it would be of great advantage.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I will try to lay it on the Table of the House to-morrow.

Resolution reported, read the first and second time, and agreed to.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 263) to amend the Shipping Casualties Act, 1901.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

SUPPLY—GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) moved that the House go again into Committee of Supply.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). When may we expect the railway subsidies ? We were promised them during the past week, and afterwards we were told that they would be laid on the Table the early part of this week. We have been now six and a half months in session, and it is high time we should have them. The same observations would apply to supplementary estimates.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Although we have been a long time in session, the hon. gentleman will bear witness to that fact that there has been no lack of business occupation for us all. The supplementaries I hope to lay on the Table to-morrow morning, and the railway subsidies at a very early day. They may be down Friday or Monday.

THE NORTH POLE—CAPTAIN BERNIER.

Mr. JOHN CHARLTON (North Norfolk). Before you leave the Chair, Mr. Speaker, I wish to offer a few remarks to the House with reference to a matter which is one, in my estimation, of considerable importance, the consideration of which has been delayed until this stage of the session. Naturally the House will not be disposed to devote much time to it at present, and I shall certainly not trespass to any extent on its forbearance. We discussed last session the propriety of making a grant for a polar expedition, and I think that the general feeling of the House was in favour of a sufficient grant being made for that purpose. At an early date in the session, a very large and influential deputation waited upon the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, accompanied by Captain Bernier, whose explanation of the plan he intended to adopt was evidently quite satisfactory to the minister, and it was expected that some action would be taken on his application. I do not know what the intention of the government may be, but it certainly has not moved in that direction up to the present. The importance of this expedition, I think, is very great indeed. A successful expedition to the pole would give to Canada a very prominent place among the maritime states, and the discovery of the Pole would give us a standing with regard to territorial acquisition in the north between the Pole and the northern coast of the continent, which we would not otherwise have. A successful expedition would be worth much more than it would cost, and an unsuccessful one would entail no disgrace, because the discovery of the North Pole has been the dream of nations for many years, and each failure to reach the goal has only been an incitement to a renewed attempt. Captain Bernier reminds me, in his persistence of Columbus going from court to court in Europe in the 15th century, seeking for a patron to put him in possession of the means of making his coveted voyage of discovery to the west. For several years Captain Bernier has been in pursuit of this project. His persistence is worthy of all praise, and the traits of character he has evinced in the prosecution of his mission would lead us to suppose that he has the dogged pertinacity and courage which would stand him in good stead, if he ever be placed in command of a Canadian Polar expedition. He has peculiarly good qualifications for this position. He is now fifty-one years of age. He commanded a vessel at the age of seventeen, and has been a commander of 46 vessels. He has crossed the ocean 174 times, and he is a navigator possessing a record. This question of Arctic exploration has engaged his attention the last twenty-four years. He has been a diligent student of all the facts that have been elicited with regard to Arctic matters. He has studied the question of the Arctic currents and the proper methods to be followed in order to make progress towards the North Pole, and his speculation and knowledge have been availed of by Arctic explorers, among them Nansen and Baldwin. The route which Captain Bernier proposes to take is to enter the Arctic ocean from the Behring straits. The Japan current strikes the west coast of America, and one portion is deflected to the south and another passes through the Behring straits to the Arctic sea. It has been discovered that the ice pack in the Arctic ocean moves to the eastward from the western side of the ocean reached from the Pacific ocean, through Behring straits. In 1879 the 'Jeannette' entered the Arctic ocean at Behring straits, and entered the ice pack, and while the expedition was disastrous, a portion of the crew reaching the coast of Siberia, the relics of the vessel were afterwards found between Greenland and Spitzenburg, showing that the ice carried it across the Arctic sea. Captain Bernier proposes to place his vessel in the ice pack, between longitude 170 and 175, entering the Arctic ocean through Behring straits, and trusting to nature for the driving of his vessel as near as possible to the Pole. The old theory about an open sea around the Pole is an exploded one. It is certain now that if there is not land there, the North Pole is water covered with ice.

Captain Bernier belongs to a race eminent as explorers in the early history of this country—a race of adventurers, a race of men filled with the spirit of adventure. While the English were quietly settling along the sea-board of the Atlantic in the thirteen colonies, and penetrating no farther than the Alleghany Mountains, the French inhabitants of Canada penetrated the far west, established trading stations on the upper lakes and on the Upper Mississippi, extended their explorations far beyond Manitoba even, and entertained dreams of the creation of a French empire in that country of the possibilities of which they alone were aware. The captain is thoroughly imbued with that spirit; and, if he is entrusted with the charge of this expedition, I have not the slightest doubt that he will be able to give a good account of himself.

One feature of this matter which possesses some degree of significance is the fact that Lord Strathcona endorses the captain's theory with regard to the proper course to pursue in polar explorations. Lord Strathcona has promised to give the Captain a subscription of $5,000, and, by this course and by his statements made to the Captain, has endorsed the plan that Captain Bernier has adopted. This is significant because of the fact that Lord Strathcona is intimately acquainted with Arctic matters. He was early in the service of the Hudson Bay Company, has been in the far north, and has a knowledge of that country of a character which makes him peculiarly a judge of the proper methods to be employed in such an expedition as this.

The prize of the discovery of the North Pole is one that any of the great marine powers would gladly win. Several expeditions are even now afoot, as expeditions have been set afoot from time to time, none of which have been successful. It is not an unworthy object of ambition for us to seek to snatch these laurels from other competitors. The Captain's plan is to have the vessel built and owned by the government. This vessel, if she returns from her voyage of exploration, will be of service to the government. She would be the kind of vessel that would be exactly wanted in patrolling Hudson bay, in making voyages among the islands north of Hudson bay, and taking possession of newly discovered lands in that region. The government could easily find useful and profitable employment for such a vessel. The cost of such a vessel as the Captain proposes would be about $80,000. In addition there would be certain instruments required, which, it is supposed, the government has in its possession and could loan along with the vessel, for the purpose of this expedition. In addition to the cost of the vessel and the instruments, about $70,000 additional would be required for the expedition. This the Captain would furnish himself; that is, he would secure it by contribution from the public. About $60,000 has already been secured, and there would be no difficulty in collecting the balance if the government would make the appropriation necessary for the construction of the vessel and would embark upon the scheme as the Captain proposes.

Of course, this vessel would be one of peculiar construction. In the first place she would be built of wood, for a wooden vessel is infinitely better in contact with ice than steel or iron. She would be a vessel of great strength, braced with heavy timbers, and would have six water tight compartments. She would be a vessel of 300 tons register, 120 feet in length, with 35 feet beam, a depth of 18 feet, and would draw 14 feet of water. She would have an engine of 200 horse power. She would have a ten foot wheel, and would carry 300 tons of anthracite coal of which she would burn 3½ tons in twenty-four hours. In every way the vessel would be thoroughly adapted to the navigation of the ice-bound sea. She would carry a spare wheel and a spare rudder. She would carry a diving apparatus, which, I believe, no previous Arctic expedition has carried. She would have 100 tons of provisions—six years' supply. These provisions would be of a character to provide against that dreadful disease of Arctic exploration—scurvy. The provisions would include vegetables of various kinds done up in fifty pound cans; and generally the provisions would be of such a character as to ensure the crew against the ravages of scurvy. She would be—which is a new feature—lighted and heated by electricity. For this purpose she would be furnished with two windmills and two dynamos which would be run by the windmills. The electricity would be used for lighting and heating and also for medical treatment of certain maladies among the crew as, for instance, rheumatism. The vessel would carry a doctor and apparatus for the medical treatment of disease where it might be necessary. This provision with regard to heating and lighting is a matter of very great importance. Of course, the burning of oil, or the combustion of fuel, consumes air, while electric lighting and heating would consume no air. So that keeping the air pure would be much easier by this method of lighting and heating than by the burning of oil or coal. The vessel also would be kept cheerful and dry, overcoming a great difficulty of former Arctic expeditions, that of dampness in the vessel. The vessel would carry an apparatus for the distilling of water. In most cases, Arctic explorers have depended upon melted snow, which is often found to give a supply of water that is impure and deleterious to the health of the crew. The vessel would carry a wirelesss telegraph apparatus and could maintain communication with some point upon the shore of America, and, when well advanced on the exploration, with some point in Norway. But the great advantage of the wireless system would be that the communication could be maintained with the sledge parties sent out from the vessel. It is the intention of the Captain, as he drifts towards his destination, to send sledge parties fifty miles from the vessel on each side and take soundings at intervals and make other investigations. These sledge parties would be in communication, by wireless telegraphy with the vessel, so that they would know the location of the vessel and the vessel would know the location of the sledge parties, and the sledge parties could keep up communication which would be of the greatest importance in case of emergency of any kind. When the vessel approaches the pole—it might be one hundred miles or two hundred miles away; Nansen, I believe reached within 280 miles of the pole and the nearest has been 250 miles—when the vessel is at its nearest point to the pole a sledge party would be sent out with the most ample and up-to-date provision for making a successful journey over the ice. Among other things, the Captain proposes to have an automobile motor with either a reservoir of electricity or an engine run by gasoline. They would take frames and canvas for boats that could be set up readily for transportation across the open stretches of water. The expedition would set up bamboo rods with small flags every mile, and every ten miles they would place a hollow cylinder with records. Every ten miles also they would leave a supply of provisions, so that the return could be made with greatest speed and safety. And all the time communication with the vessel would be maintained by telegraph.

The Captain proposes to carry a crew of 15 men, and the arrangement with regard to this crew is one to secure efficiency and economy. I will give, from the statement made last year, as to the composition of this crew :

> The crew will consist of fifteen men. There will be the commander himself, without pay. There will be two officers, captains of experience, who can take the wheel, go to the masthead and look-out, or perform any duty regarding the navigation or care of the ship in case of the captain being incapacitated. There will be a first mate who will be what is termed an ice master, a man who is thoroughly conversant with everything pertaining to the dangers of ice and of being caught between the ice floes. There will be two engineers ; one will be a machinist who can do any work in connection with the machinery or apparatus, the telegraph apparatus or fixtures ; while the other will be an electrician and wireless telegraph operator. Two men will be surveyors and astronomers who will also serve on sledge journeys or in almost any other capacity on the vessel. There will be one doctor who will be a botanist and seaman. There will be one naturalist, who will be a botanist, photographer and artist and assistant to the surveyors and electrician, and who also will go on sledge journeys. There will be one cook, who, in addition to being a cook and steward will be an able seaman. There will be one seaman who will be a whaler and sealer and stoker, and who will combine the qualifications of all three and be able to serve in almost any capacity. There will be a carpenter who will also be an able seaman, and one stoker who will also be an able seaman. These will be his crew of 15, men combining the qualifications and different kinds of capacities that, if confined in each case to one man, would require a crew of 50 or 60 men, an efficient crew, and yet a compact crew of small number.

This is the arrangement that Captain Bernier proposes to make with regard to his crew. His scheme for provisioning his vessel, fitting it out, and the conduct of his expedition, all has been carefully thought out. He has brought to bear upon the arrangement of his plans the experience of a navigator of over thirty years, and his experience as a navigator with regard to Arctic matters extending over more than twenty years. Undoubtedly Captain Bernier possesses qualifications for the task he desires to undertake at least equal to those possessed by any living nautical man. He does not know but deems it advisable to buy the celebrated vessel the 'Fram,' which is for sale, and can be bought at a less price probably than he could construct a vessel. It might be possible to buy the German vessel, the 'Gosse,' which is just returning from an Antarctic expedition. But whatever course may be taken with regard to a vessel, the government is called upon, if it embarks in this scheme, to supply not more than $80,000. It will be an investment in a vessel which will belong to itself, and which will be available in subsequent years for other purposes. I think, Mr. Speaker, that the feeling of the House last session was unmistakably in favour of giving Captain Bernier the means that are necessary to prosecute his cherished purpose of making an expedition to the North Pole. I feel confident, from my investgations into this matter, that if Captain Bernier secures the outfit he requires, he may enter the ice pack east of Behring Straits, and that he will drift past the Pole, and will locate the Pole, and that we will in all probability have the credit of making that discovery. I think his plan is one that is calculated to secure success, and Canada certainly could have no prouder distinction than to step in and discover the North Pole after all the attemps that have been made by Americans, by English, by Norwegian, by Swedish navigators and others. I trust that the government will look favourably upon the application which Captain Bernier makes, and that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will urge upon his colleagues the appropriation of the necessary sum of money to carry the Captain's purpose into effect.

Mr. A. C. BELL (Pictou). I presume this is not a matter which has at all any party significance. I feel very much disposed to lend my support to the argument made by the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton). From the statement made by him it would appear that Captain Bernier is contributing resources that he has accumulated by a very long and patient effort in this direction, to the extent of something like $70,000. This the Captain has collected, or has secured the promise of, by very patient, persistent devotion to a subject which is of course of very great interest. Now, it would appear that the government of Canada is asked to contribute about an equal amount; and surely if one enthusiastic citizen of Canada is prepared to contribute half the capital required, and his own services for a great many years, not only in preparation for this adventure but in carrying it out to a successful completion, which I hope he may succeed in doing, it is comparatively a small matter that all the other citizens of Canada collectively should contribute merely one-half of the total sum required. There can be little doubt as to the great value of the search that Captain Bernier intends to make. The discovery of the North Pole, while it may seem to a great many people to be a visionary project to which no material advantage can attach, is unquestionably one which has engaged the attention and aroused the enthusiasm of all the maritime nations of northern Europe in succession. Our cousins in the United States have made repeated efforts to discover the Pole, and I think if any people in the world should look upon it as their peculiar business, and finally succeed in making that discovery, it is the people of Canada, because the North Pole when discovered will unquestionably form part of this country. It would be an exceedingly inconvenient and unfortunate thing for us if some representative of another power should, with less advantages, beginning from a more distant point, succeed in finding the North Pole, and planting the flag possibly of some other country upon that point of the earth's surface. I think we have more reason to look upon this as particularly a Canadian object than have the people of any other nationality in the world.

There can be no doubt at all that there is a certain amount of scientific interest attached to this effort. There can be equally no doubt that it may be of great material advantage to Canada to establish finally and indisputably her claim and title to all the lands lying on the north part of this continent. Now it is possible for us at this moment to look upon this enterprise as being of no importance. It is not a long time since the whole of the north-west portion of the continent now owned by the United States, Alaska, was regarded as a country of no importance whatever. Any one looking at its position on the map would not suspect its character or importance. To-day that country is proving to be possessed of great wealth. Our own territory lying adjacent to Alaska is at this moment perhaps attracting more attention to Canada than any other part of our territory, and in this far northern region is just as likely as anywhere else to find great and valuable stores of mineral wealth. There can be no question that there are great and valuable stores of coal in those northern regions, and while they are at present inaccessible, and we have other supplies more near at hand which satisfy our requirements for the moment, we cannot tell what scientific discoveries may do in the course of a year or two. The access to that northern region, which is now almost impossible, may become, through some scientific discovery, comparatively easy, we may be able to derive from these northern portions of our possessions great wealth, great stores of mineral value. There can be of course no prospect of anything outside of minerals, but there is no reason to doubt that in those extreme northern regions, as well as in any other portion of this northern half of the continent, may we expect to find richly mineralized lands. I know very well that Canada, while making great progress in many other directions, has depended quite as much, if not more, upon her largely increased exports of minerals for her enormously extended foreign trade, as upon any other portion of her resources. Therefore these extreme northern regions, while possessed of no agricultural value, may prove to be capable of largely expanding our exports and of adding to our national wealth. So while we may admit that national pride and scientific interest should impel us to enter at once upon an undertaking that can be carried out at such a small cost as $80,000 or $100,000 we must recognize in addition that if we succeed through this expedition in increasing our knowledge of these regions, unpromising as they may seem at this moment we may in the end derive benefits that will repay us tenfold or one hundred fold for any outlay we may make. I think that the enthusiasm and energy that the Captain has shown in his long continued effort to foster this child of his fancy and to carry to completion the course which he has marked out for himself and has pursued despite every kind of difficulty and doubt and disappointment, should incite us to turn with warm sympathy towards a Canadian who is willing to undergo every discomfort and hardship that the frozen north may present, in order to accomplish the object he has set before him and should induce us to assist him in his enterprise.

Mr. D. HENDERSON (Halton). I do not wish this occasion to pass without availing myself of the opportunity of expressing my hope and confidence that the government will not permit the appeal made by the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) to be lost sight of. Several years ago, when I first had the pleasure of hearing Captain Bernier deliver a lecture on this polar expedition and explain his views in regard to the northern hemisphere and the surroundings of the pole, I became interested in the work which he has so much at heart, and I believe that if the north pole is ever to be discovered, it will be discovered either by Captain Bernier or by some one following a course similar to that which he has marked out. He told us that he is following nature, getting nature to assist him. Instead of following the course pursued by navigators who have gone from Europe and America, he proposes to enter the ice in a different way and to follow the direction of the current which is flowing towards the pole and southward instead of going over ice which is flowing away from the pole. In this way he has great hopes that he will discover the pole. It seems to me to be common sense reasoning that if another man has come within 200 miles of the pole and has passed it by, there should be no great difficulty in Captain Bernier coming within fifty or one hundred miles, of it, or even passing over that coveted point of the earth. It may seem something like a wild cat scheme to many in this country to talk about an expedition to the north pole ; they see no financial advantage to be gained by spending money in that way, but to my mind the contrary is the case. Even in the matter of immigration, of making Canada known in every home in Europe, I do not believe that $100,000 could be better spent than in assisting Captain Bernier to fit out an expedition to discover the pole. Even if he fails so much would be written in the newspapers about the expedition that Canada would become a household word in every home throughout Europe, and if he succeeded in discovering the pole Canada would be known in the heart of China as well as in the heart of every European country. My suggestion is that we should provide the $100,000 which Captain Bernier requires out of the money which we have been appropriating for purposes of immigration. I believe that in that way it will accomplish a great deal more than if it was spent on newspaper advertising or even in sending agents to the continent of Europe and Great Britain to solicit immigrants to come to this country. My object is to make Canada known, and by fitting out an expedition to the pole, whether it proves successful or not, we will secure the aid of every newspaper in the old land in advertising Canada. That is just what we want to do ; it is by advertising Canada and making this country known throughout Europe that we are going to get immigrants. To my mind nothing will do that more cheaply or successfully than the fitting out of such an expedition, and that is one reason why I think we should assist Captain Bernier in his very laudable purpose. The hon. member for North Norfolk has referred to another point which I think is worthy of consideration by the government. Not long ago I saw in the newspapers that the Americans are talking very loudly of some possessions to which they propose to lay claim, away to the north of this Dominion which properly belong to the Dominion of Canada. Now, if Captain Bernier succeeds in locating the pole and planting thereon the British flag, taking possession of whatever there is in land or sea, we will certainly have a right to claim possession in the name of the King of England of everything that lies between the north pole and the now known Dominion of Canada. We will then not be troubled in the future with any Alaska boundary disputes in that direction, but will have the first claim to everything lying between what we now know as the Dominion of Canada and the North Pole. I hope the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Prefontaine), who will no doubt take an interest in this enterprise, will deeply concern himself about it, give attention to it and encourage Captain Bernier in his expedition. I hope that he will persuade the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) that the Dominion of Canada is patriotic enough and rich enough to supply the funds necessary to meet the needs of Captain Bernier's expedition. I am not at all afraid to advocate this scheme ; I think it would be a great thing for the Dominion of Canada to have it said that one of her citizens was the first to plant the flag of his country upon the pole. And if the pole is ever to be discovered—and I believe it will be discovered some day—every citizen of this country would feel proud in the thought that a citizen of Canada was the first to plant the British flag upon the pole. I trust the hon. Minister of Finance will not be backward in providing a sum of money even if it is taken out of the vote which is ordinarily given for immigration purposes. I would say again : Let us devote $100,000, less to immigration and give $100,000 to Captain Bernier to fit out his expedition. If we do that I am quite sure that at the end of two or three years we will have accomplished a great deal more in the way of attracting immigrants to this country than if we had spent the sum in the ordinary way.

Mr. R. HOLMES (West Huron). At the risk of perhaps being the only member who will speak in opposition to this project, I desire to say a few words. I have no hesitation in saying that I am entirely opposed to the project of the Dominion of Canada granting any considerable amount for this purpose. If I am not mistaken, this is the second or third time the matter has been before the House, and has to certain extent received the approval of the members of this House. The attempt to discover the North Pole is a very fascinating subject, which has engaged the attention of mariners for many years. Expeditions have been fitted out in past years, and almost unlimited wealth has been expended in the attempt to discover the north pole. Nevertheless, we can safely say that the result of these expeditions has not furnished us with even sufficient information to warrant us in spending money for such a purpose. We have heard a great deal in this House recently about lack of information, but there is nothing in the world about which there is less definite information than there is about the North Pole. Those who have read the history of polar expeditions know that many lives have been sacrificed, and that wealth has been poured out lavishly without any definite result having been accomplished. It is simply a matter of sentiment, and if you should be disposed to look upon it from a commercial point of view, there is certainly no commercial advantage to be reaped. If the North Pole is ever discovered, I would be very glad indeed that it should be discovered by a Canadian, but in view of the fact that so many expeditions have failed, I have grave doubts that the North Pole will ever be found. The statement of the member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) that this expedition would be a good advertisement for Canada is to my mind rather far-fetched. When the Coldstream Guards band played here the other night, I met in the audience the gentleman who signs himself 'the wandering Yankee,' and he told me that when he first came to Canada he brought his furs along in the summer time, thinking he would require them, as he had formed his ideas of this country from the pictures sent abroad of ice palaces and winter scenes. I do not think it particularly advantageous that we should spend $100,000 to let the world know that the North Pole is in Canada. I believe we could spend $100,000 to much better advantage in advertising Canada in another direction. The hon. member for Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) has told us that for 24 years Capt. Bernier has made this matter a subject of very deep concern. I would not for a moment think of detracting from the merits of Capt. Bernier. I esteem him as much as any one, and I believe that as a navigator he is entitled to much credit. But if for 24 years he has been following this visionary idea without any greater success than he has achieved, it is pretty nearly time for him to think of something else. I believe that the House will be endorsed by the public at large if it once and for all sets its face against this proposition. One of the functions of government is to spend money to the best advantage for the good of the country, but we must not think that because we have an overflowing treasury, we can take $100,000 from it and spend it for some impractical purpose which will bring to us no beneficial results. The hard-headed farmers of Ontario and the business people of Canada generally, would not have much sympathy for a government that has no better use for $100,000, than to spend it in chasing a chimera. For some years past they have been fitting out polar expeditions in the United States and in European countries, and I believe that the navigators of these countries are just as likely to find an easy way to the North Pole, if easy way there be, as Capt. Bernier. The simple fact that Capt. Bernier belongs to Canada, and will start out on a new tack, does not to my mind give an assurance whatever that he will be successful. My opinion, based upon the reports of polar expeditions in the past, convinces me that this expedition, if it be undertaken, is doomed to failure, and that the money expended for it will be absolutely thrown away.

Mr. S. E. GOURLEY (Colchester). I am very happy to support the views of the member for North Norfolk in this matter. It is very proper that the objection to this expedition should come from a gentleman representing a constituency in Ontario, which is the home of all the narrow ideas in Canada.

Mr. HOLMES. And Truro is the home of the narrow men.

Mr. GOURLEY. For 24 years Capt. Bernier has pursued this ambition, but we know that Columbus besought the court of Ferdinand and Isabella much longer than 24 years before he got a vessel to discover the American continent. I am not embarrassed by the statement that Capt. Bernier has besought this country for 24 years without success, but I trust that as the name of Ferdinand and Isabella are immortalized because of the aid they gave Columbus, so this country will be immortalized on account of the aid which it will give to the discoverer of the North Pole. The hon. member (Mr. Holmes) fancied that there was something derogatory to Canada in the possession of a cold but delighted climate. I am here to say that the climate of Canada is her glory. I desire to propagate the idea that we possess a cold climate, and I shall not attempt to minimize it in the slightest degree. Any gentleman who is acquainted with the history of the great forces that have made, and are making this world, recognizes the benefits of a cold climate. I desire this country to be known as a northern country. All of the countries of the world that have matured high civilizations have been northern countries, Germany and Russia are north of the fiftieth parallel, and they are great, dominating, world powers, while southern countries, like France, and Italy, and India, and China, are the dying nations of the world. Therefore, to be a northern country is to be a dominant and a growing country, and in that view I boast that Canada possesses the North Pole. A northern country has but one frontier to defend, and hence a northern country is most dominant in the military sense, being almost impregnable. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Holmes) peculiarly illustrates the genius of Ontario, when he says that this is a commercial question. I wonder that the people of Ontario can never rise above some little tu'penny-ha'penny consideration in the discussion of great questions. Ontario, instead of being the dominant and leading province of Canada, has almost lost her influence, because she has permitted herself to be influenced largely by petty commercial considerations. Gladstone and John Bright undertook to rule the British empire on those lines in Exeter Hall, and one of them had a little bit of paper, on which was figured out the cost of an insult that had been offered to England by France or the United States. Some little fellow got up and said: It will cost us five million nine hundred and twenty-six dollars and twenty-six and a half cents to avenge that insult, but, if we let the insult go and take the kicking, it will cost 36 cents less; therefore let us take the kicking and the insult. That was the commercial argument; that is the Ontario argument. That kind of argument reduced England from a first-class power to a third or fourth-class power. Thank God, the day for that kind of argument is past, the men who made it have gone into oblivion, and we have in England to-day a dominant people who would face the world and spend every dollar they possess rather than take an insult. We have got past the commercial idea in England, and I hope we have in Canada. There are much more important ideas than the commercial idea when we are dealing with imperial questions. Sentiment rules this world, and mere figures are a secondary consideration with the great, dominant powers of the earth. Let me say one word more. Some hon. gentlemen seem to think that there is going to be a great sacrifice of life and blood in the proposed expedition. Well, what of that? You cannot build up a nation of high civilization without the sacrifie of life and blood. That is the price any nation pays for building up a great civilization. Little Switzerland, the most civilized country in Europe, has defied the whole of Europe because it has been willing at times to sacrifice its best men and to defend its independence with its life-blood. That is the price you have to pay for high civilization and dominant political feeling. The life that would be sacrificed in this enterprise would be a noble example to the people of Canada. We want self-sacrifice. What is the good of a lazy loafer who is not prepared to make any sacrifice? Of what value are such people to any nation? We want men and women who are capable of self-sacrifice. The mother who tells her son to go forth and fight for his country is the only kind of woman who is worth her salt. You want men and women who are willing to sacrifice themselves and their children, if need be, on the altar of their country. That is the only basis of high national life, and we want that sentiment in this country. I am surprised, when the duty of self-sacrifice is mentioned, that any hon. gentleman should be averse to self-sacrifice in the direction of noble duty. The railways of the United States kill 70,000 or 80,000 people a year, and whoever hears a word of that. In the South African war when 200 or 300 people were sacrificed in a battle everybody held up their hands in horror, and said, What a terrible thing war was. But, when the trains of the United States kill that many every week, nobody says a word about it. Why, Sir, the sacrifice of life in war is the noblest way in which life can be sacrificed; and yet you find weak writers, weak ministers, and sometimes weak members of parliament deprecating the shedding of blood. I will deprecate the shedding of blood if it is shed for no purpose; but if blood is shed in the best interest of the national life, there is nothing to regret. What are flesh and blood given to this world for? At eighty years of age when life is spent, man is thrown into the earth and covered up; is it not better at thirty or forty years of age, when life is keen and the blood is strong, to throw it away in the defence of some noble principle? So far as I am concerned, I will support this proposal, because I do not think there is the slightest doubt about Canada owning every foot of territory from here to the North Pole. It is contiguous to Canada, and we own every foot of it by right of discovery and exploration. But if there is any doubt about it, and if we have to take physical possession of it, I am ready to support Bernier in taking physical possession of it. What we ought to do in this parliament is to husband our resources. I hear that Greenland is in the market, and if so, we ought to buy it to-morrow. Alaska was in the market a few years ago, but England did not take advantage of the opportunity to buy that country. Since then we have had enormous difficulties in consequence, and we shall continue to have difficulty in regard to Alaska until we get strong enough to ask the United States to hand over that country for a fair price to us, as we certainly shall. If Canada succeeds in this boundary arbitration, as I hope and believe it will, the United States will still own a narrow coast line of almost 400 miles that should belong to this country. No maritime people will ever put up with a deprivation of that kind. No maritime people will ever permit a neighbouring country to own a thin strip of 400 miles of its coast; and if the United States will not sell us that territory for an equivalent sum of money, the day will come when we will take it, in spite of all the resources of the United States. It is an insult to a maritime people to be deprived of 400 miles of their coast line, and England deserves the reprobation of the Canadian people for letting Alaska go. While I am an imperialist, and while I am in love with the traditions of England and the English people, I have nothing but reprobation for the stupid diplomatists who gave away 400 miles of our coast line on the Pacific. I make a distinction between the people of England and the few men who attempt to play the role of diplomats and statesmen of England. I support Bernier's proposition, because we are the vikings of this continent. Nansen, who attempted a few years ago to reach the North Pole, was the heir of the old vikings of Norway and Sweden, who illustrated the genius of the human race on the continent of Europe; and if the English people and the French people are great races to-day, they owe the fact to the brave old vikings, who, without compass or any of those mathematical instruments which make sea-faring safe to-day, went out on the turbid ocean to battle valiantly with wind and wave. No inland people can ever be a dominant people. You must have a race of men fond of the sea, battling every day with dangers to life and limb, to become a bold and dominant race. Therefore I favour this search for the North Pole. In that way we shall keep up in Canada that spirit of the vikings, the going out on unknown and sormy seas in pursuit of exploration. That makes a bold and intrepid race, which is the sort of race we want in Canada. Therefore, without figuring this matter up, according to the Toronto or Hamilton or Ontario notion of making five or ten cents profit, I support this project, because it tends to arouse and keep alive the old sentiment for life on the sea, and those feelings of high courage and enterprise that makes a noble race.

Mr. A. W. PUTTEE (Winnipeg). I very much fear that the country will question the sanity of this House when it finds that after sitting here for seven months we have nothing better to talk about than discovering the North Pole. On behalf of Manitoba, let me say that there are a great many things which ought to be attended to by the government as soon as possible. The St. Andrews Rapids work has been at a standstill for upwards of a year. In Winnipeg business is almost paralyzed for the lack of room in the post office. And I am not ready to spend money on the North Pole until more immediate necessities such as this are attended to. I have been doing my best for some weeks past to get a sufficient amount of confidence in the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) to accept his curves and gradients, which he says may be obtained in that country to the north, of which he alone seems to know anything. But I cannot follow him when he goes to the North Pole and shows us exactly by what currents and curves and grades you can get there. It seems to me that the hon. gentleman ought to be content to wait and see how some of his prophecies will come out regarding our own northern country before he asks us to accept his statement about the passage of the North Pole. As to $100,000 being spent out of the immigration grant for that purpose, that would be most absurd. We have been spending money trying to abolish the idea among Europeans that Canada is an annex of the North Pole, and our increased immigration is due to the fact that we have to a considerable extent dissipated that notion. I should therefore be opposed to our spending money in a direction which will tend to foster it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. Raymond Préfontaine). I do not propose to detain the House at any length, but as this matter came under my consideration early in the session, I would like to say a few words concerning it. It was brought under my notice by a large number of members of the House of Commons and Senators, and Captain Bernier gave at that meeting a complete exposition of his plan. Last year his proposition was that we should vote him purely and simply a certain amount for the purpose of his expedition. His proposition was that we should give him from $100,000 to $120,000 to organize an expedition and carry it out. But the plan he submitted at the meeting to which I have referred was quite different. It was one which should really commend itself to the attention of the House and the country. His proposition was that the Department of Marine and Fisheries should provide a boat, to be constructed in Canada and be loaned to him, and he would, by means of public subscriptions, get the crew and all the provisions necessary. That would entail an expenditure of about $60,000 or $70,000. Acting on that idea, Captain Bernier with commendable courage and energy succeeded in getting nearly $40,000 subscriptions, among which was a subscription of $5,000 from Lord Strathcona, and he would certainly have succeeded in getting the full amount had he been in a position to say that the Canadian government was ready to endorse his scheme. If he has succeeded in getting subscriptions to the amount of $40,- 000 without the aid of parliament, no doubt, he would with that aid, succeed in getting all the money necessary from public subscriptions. The boat to be constructed by the government would remain government property and be used for fishery protection and other purposes on the Pacific coast, provided Captain Bernier ever returned with the boat. Such a scheme should certainly commend itself to the serious attention of business men. There is not only sentiment in this matter. Of course we feel a good deal of pride in having one of our fellow-citizens, at Captain Bernier's age, plucky enough to undertake this perilous expedition. A great many would treat the question as just an idea without anything at the back of it. If Captain Bernier has sufficient courage to undertake this expedition at the risk of his life, that is certainly commendable even as a question of sentiment, but there is a practical side to this matter. We have organized many expeditions, most of which have been successful and given great returns. No doubt until ten years ago the territory of the Yukon was almost unknown except for two explorations made and organized by the government. Ten or fifteen years ago, if any one had stated on the floor of the House that the Yukon Territory would some day be producing from $10,000,000 to $25,000,000 of gold, people would have laughed at the idea. But now the fact has been established. The Yukon Territory to my personal knowledge—I was there a year ago—has not yet been scratched. It has not been opened really for mining in the proper sense of the word, and I have no doubt that there is an immense future for that country. Captain Bernier has held many conferences in which he has been considered a very serious man, who knew what he was talking about, and what he said about his project was taken seriously by all those who took the trouble to listen. If his proposition be simply and purely to loan a boat for the expedition, personally I do not know that there would be much objection. I understand perfectly well that this country, in developing itself so fast, requires large sums of money for things that are absolutely necessary, but that does not mean that we are going to fold our arms and let our neighbours take advantage of us. At the present time an expedition has left for the northern part of Hudson bay. And why? Simply to organize that territory, to protect our interests in it and keep it for Canada. We have an immense territory in the direction of the North Pole, and that territory has been but little explored. It is reported, however, to be rich in minerals of all kinds. If by risking the sum of $80,000 which would be the cost of the steamer to be built for the expedition, and which could be used for something else when it returns, the exploration of that territory could be helped on, I think, personally and as a member of this House, that the people of this country would approve of it. Of course, speaking as Minister of Marine and Fisheries, though personally quite favourable to the scheme, I must say that question has not yet been considered, because there have been so many important matters demanding the attention of the government that this question has not been specially taken up by the cabinet. But, surely if the government thinks that it should be encouraged in the way that has been suggested, I am sure that the people of the country would agree with it. And it certainly would be a credit to Canada if a Canadian should achieve the discovery of the North Pole, which nobody has been able to achieve up to the present time.

Mr. EDWARD HACKETT (West Prince). We have been debating a region of frost and ice. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries is very anxious that assistance should be given to Captain Bernier. I desire to call his attention and that of the government to the province of Prince Edward Island, which is not near the pole at all. That province has been deprived of the communication with the main land which the Dominion, at the time of confederation, undertook to keep up. The minister speaks in very glowing terms of the possibility of discovering the North Pole and what Captain Bernier may do in that direction. But I wish to impress upon him the fact that the government undertook with the province of Prince Edward Island to maintain communication during the winter between the Island and the mainland. Before the hon. minister undertakes to spend $80,000 or $100,000 to discover the North Pole, he should provide us with another boat to keep up this communication. The hon. gentleman says that if this boat we loan to Captain Bernier returns from the North Pole, it will be of some service. But, so far as the province of Prince Edward Island is concerned, we do not want to depend upon a boat of this kind from the North Pole. I am not opposed to this expedition. I would like to see Captain Bernier bring back enough of the North Pole to make a snuff-box. But, while I say that, I say that the government should, in the first place, carry out the terms of confederation and give to Prince Edward Island the communications that they were guaranteed at the time of confederation. And when this parliament are ready to carry out the terms of confederation in that respect, they may think about the North Pole.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). I invite the attention of the committee again to the estimates of the Department of Railways and Canals. When we last had these estimates under consideration, two or three items were held over and these items I now ask the committee to take up. I refer to the main estimates, page 42 :

Railways and Canals—chargeable to capital—Intercolonial Railway—increased accommodation at St. John, $84,800.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I think that the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) and the hon. member for King's (Mr. Fowler) were making inquiries about this item. I see that these hon. gentlemen are not in the House. If we could take up the Prince Edward Island items in the meantime, these hon. gentlemen might be with us later on.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think that there is anything that the hon. gentlemen would object to in this item. I shall be glad to give any information asked for, and, if the items are adopted, that shall not shut off discussion. With regard to this item for St. John, I may explain that we had an appropriation for this service last year of $90,500. That amount was expended, and a little more, including the purchase of some land under a judgment given by the Exchequer Court. The actual expenditure was $3,000 odd in excess of the appropriation. We ask here for an appropriation of $106,000, of which a one-fifth has already been voted. We shalll ask in the supplementaries to be brought down a further sum of $5,000. So we shall have for expenditure on the works at St. John $111,000. I gave the details of this on a previous occasion, but I may summarize them now. The sum of $41,355.50 is to pay the balance of the contract for the engine house and machine shop ; $10,000 for coal shed ; $10,000 for boilers and engines, and $10,000 for grading and track laying, and various small items.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Are these manufacturing shops ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The engine house and machine shop are for repairs. The manufacturing is done at Moncton.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it anticipated that there will be a greatly increased trade by adopting St. John as a winter port ? And is that why we need to make this heavy expenditure ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The larger portion of the winter port business is done by the Canadian Pacific Railway on the other side of the harbour. But the general business of St. John has grown very much, and it is necessary to make these improvements for its accommodation. The work is now in progress, the contract having been let for the engine house and machine shop.

Mr. SPROULE. But, if the Canadian Pacific Railway is doing the major portion of the work and the Intercolonial is not, what justification can there be for this greatly increased expenditure ? Is the business of the Intercolonial Railway increasing rapidly in St. John of late ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In what I said regarding the Canadian Pacific Railway doing business, I did not imply that the Intercolonial is not doing any, but the Canadian Pacific Railway is doing a winter port business, which is handled on the western side of the harbour. But the general business and trade at St. John are decidedly increasing, and we desire to increase the facilities for handling that business. An engine-house is also rendered necessary by the fact that we are now using engines of much larger size, and we require larger engine-houses. The modern engines cannot get into the old engine-house.

Mr. SPROULE. A few years ago we were told that the roadbed was in first-class condition, and afterwards it turned out when the new engines were purchased that it was dangerous to take them over the bridges.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman knows that there has been quite a development in railroading. You have to build larger engines, heavier cars ; and the equipment of railways is different from what it was a few years ago.

Mr. SPROULE. It was contended on this side of the House that the road was not suitable for the heavier rolling stock, and unless it was made more substantial this rolling stock could not be used to advantage. Now, with regard to the engine-house, if you require to expend over $100,000 in one place for an engine-house, it seems you must either be expecting greatly increased trade there in future, or else your old engine-house must have been very inferior in the first place.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The old engine-house was part of the original construction of the road, and was built before confederation, and naturally was not adapted to the conditions which exist at present.

Mr. SPROULE. Could the minister tell us what quantity of winter freight is being carried, and whether much grain is carried to St. John in the winter ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. A very small quantity of grain passed through the elevator, but the general business of the Intercolonial is increasing at St. John.

Increased accommodation at Halifax, $83,600.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We had a considerable appropriation for Halifax last year, but a large amount of it was not expended, and we have to revote it now, with some additional sums. The appropriation last year was $143,000, of which we expended $75,174. So there is a balance of last years's expenditure to de carried forward, in the form of a revote, of $67,826.

The revote here is stated to be $104,500. That estimate was made some months ago, and is now found not to be correct. We are taking in this item an additional sum of $36,674, making the sum of $104,500 which is accounted for in the main estimates. We have, however, other works on hand in Halifax which we shall have to provide for in the supplementary estimates, and which will make the total appropriation for the year, including these revotes of last year, $229,500. The details of this sum are: Land for engine-house and yard, $20,000; land at Cornwallis street, $20,000; grading and other work in connection with the proposed engine house, $20,000; to complete improvements at station, $7,500; construction of quay wall of crib-work, $37,000; wharfs and freight shed, $125,000. A part of the sum we are asking will be included in the supplementary estimates. With regard to the land for the engine house, we have not yet determined on the location, and we shall be obliged probably to go outside of the city limits, where we have some land in our mind's eye. It is not wise at present to state where it is. We have, of course, in view two or three different locations, and we think we shall be able to acquire the land at a moderate cost. We wish also to acquire a small amount of land south of the elevator at Halifax, partly because it is likely to be applied to other purposes if we do not purchase it, and also because we shall need it if we are to do any business at all with the elevator, to allow tracks to run through the elevator, so that the cars may pass through and go off on another track. At present there is not a great deal of that kind of business done at Halifax nor at St. John. But for any business that may be done at the elevator, the cars at present have to go in and then back out again, which makes considerable delay. It is desirable that we should purchase a small quantity of land on the other side of the elevator so that tracks may be laid down on which the cars may pass through the elevator, while others come up behind. These, together with wharf improvements, are the changes and operations which we propose to carry on.

Mr. SPROULE. After this new transcontinental road is built, do you expect to need all this heavy expenditure to accommodate the trade that you are likely to get over the Intercolonial at Halifax and St. John?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Well, I differ with my hon. friend on that point; but to my mind, after building this railway, there will be more business at St. John and Halifax than there is now. The Intercolonial buildings will all be required, and probably more. However, even without the transcontinental railway, we require this accommodation at Halifax; and we also require, apart from the elevator, which will only be used for the grain traffic—but leaving that out of the question, for the business of the Intercolonial we undoubtedly need the greater accommodation in land and buildings, both at St. John and Halifax.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not object to the expenditure if it is needed. But it does seem a little suspicious. We expended a large sum for an elevator at St. John some time ago for the purpose of handling grain on the Intercolonial, but we have never had any grain to handle. That was not a wise expenditure. To-day you propose to purchase more land to run cars through the elevator, but there is no grain to handle, and according to the outlook you are not likely to have any grain to handle in the future. It seems to me to be providing accommodation for a trade which we have not yet got, and that the money expended in it will not be earning any interest. I do not think that is wise; in fact, it is very unwise, but if there is clearly indication that the trade requires it, I for one do not feel like objecting to the expenditure.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think that if we should take the position that we should first get the trade and then build the elevator, instead of building the elevator so as to be prepared to handle the trade, we would be reasonably and justly open to criticism and to be asked: How can you expect trade when you provide no facilities? As to additional land to be purchased near the elevator at Halifax, for which $20,000 is asked, I may say that this land is close by the deep water terminus in the centre of the north part of the city. We had some reason to believe that this property was about to be purchased and a costly building to be placed upon it. Then, if in a short time we should require that ground, we would have to buy it with the buildings added, and we thought that as the buildings now on it are of a very poor character, we should buy it now. It was thought wise by the railway authorities to purchase the land. We have not yet purchased it, because the parties who own it are not willing to accept the price we offer, and we may be obliged to go into the Exchequer Court. We have made an offer which they do not wish to accept. I may say that in these purchases of property we do not wish to go into the Exchequer Court, because it is an expensive proceeding.

Mr. SPROULE. What portion of these works are now under contract or under construction?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is some costly work to be done on one of the old wharfs, and it is proposed to build some new wharfs further north. It is proposed also to buy some land outside the city to put up an engine-house. I think that only a small amount of work has yet been undertaken; in fact, it is a subject of criticism that they have not done more with it.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it intended to do these works and to put up these buildings by tender, or does the government propose to do the work by any other means ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Works of this character are usually done by tender.

Mr. SPROULE. I think the minister has an idea whether he will or will not do this work by tender, and his answer appears to me to be an evasive answer.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It was not intended to be an evasive one ; I have no intention of doing it otherwise than by tender, but at the same time if any reason should arise why, in my judgment, or in the judgment of the government, it appears better that it should be done otherwise, I would wish to be free.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Have tenders been asked for any part of it yet ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. For the Halifax work tenders have been asked for creosoted piles for one of the wharfs ; that is the only work that has yet been started. Owing to the difficulty of obtaining the land the work has been delayed.

Increased accommodation at Pictou, $23,200.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We had an appropriation last year for this work of $70,000, and the work in that case also, owing to some difficulty in obtaining the land has been delayed, and we have not been able to make as much progress as we expected. The actual expenditure out of that vote has been $12,155.10, so that the unexpended balance at the close of the year which is to be revoted, is $57,884,490. This sum of $57,884, carried over from last year with $40,355, which we shall have to add, makes a total of $98,200, which is the amount that we expect to be authorized to expend in Pictou this year. Of this we are taking $36,500 in the main estimates, and we shall have to ask in the supplementary estimates for the balance of $61,700. This $98,200 is made up as follows : Land, $27,000 ; piles and trestles, $10,000; new station, $30,000. There are also various smaller items, making up the total of $98,200. Pictou is the point at which a large part of the business with Prince Edward Island is carried on ; the station buildings are somewhat old and we are desirous of making considerable improvements. We have selected some land, but it has not yet been purchased, because the price asked is higher than we feel disposed to give, but we are now negotiating and hope to obtain the property at a lower price.

Improvements at Little Metis station and diverting public road, $3,200.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. When this item was before the committee the other night, I was asked to explain what portion of it went for land and what for the road, and other improvements. I find now that the estimated cost of the land is $300 and the cost of building the road $1,200, making $1,500. Then, there are the expenses of moving the station and tank and enlarging the station, which is estimated at $2,500. These items together make the $4,000 for which the vote is asked. Little Metis is the principal summer resort on the Intercolonial Railway, and is visited by a large number of people from various parts of the Dominion, particularly from Montreal and vicinity, and this improvement seems to be very necessary.

Prince Edward Island—to widen wharf and to provide coal sheds at Summerside, $1,600.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is proposed by this expenditure to increase the size of the coal shed so as to afford more shed room on the wharf. We made some expenditure last year upon the other side of the wharf, but this further expenditure is deemed necessary, especially for the accommodation of the coal trade.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Summerside railway wharf is the only place where goods can be landed for transit throughout the Island, and there is only one side of the wharf at which a vessel can get accommodation. At a meeting of the maritime board of trade held recently this question was considered and the following resolution adopted :

That better facilities should be provided at the railway wharf at Summerside to accommodate the steamers landing freight for transportation over the Prince Edward Island Railway.

Most of the freight coming through Prince Edward Island from the west, is brought to Summerside, and it has to be stored in the warehouse before being shipped. There is also a very extensive shipment of goods from different points on the Island to the railway wharf. Increased accommodation is badly needed there. Only one steamer can lie at that wharf, and other steamers have to land their freight at private wharfs, so that the goods have to be trucked across the town at increased cost. I trust that both the wharf and warehouse accommodation will be improved there. I have seen the warehouse so overcrowded, that flour and other merchandise had to remain outside.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The improvements contemplated by this vote will I am sure be appreciated so far as they go. I shall give careful consideration to the representations made by the hon. gentleman.

Mr. LEFURGEY. This work contemplates an improvement to the coal shed, and that is all right so far as it goes, but the other improvements are of great necessity.

Murray Harbour branch and Hillsborough bridge, $600,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is a large item, but as hon. gentlemen know, we have undertaken quite a costly work in the extension of the railway from Charlottetown to Murray harbour, inasmuch as a very expensive bridge has to be provided for. In the main estimates we ask for $750,000, a portion of which has already been voted, and we are asking the balance now. In the supplementary estimates we shall have to ask a further sum of $480,000, so that the expenditure which we expect to make on that work during the current year, including the bridge, will be $1,230,000. There was expended on this work up to the 30th June, $1,492,525.47, so that if we take the expenditure to the 30th of June, and the amount we shall have to ask for the current year, these sums make the cost of the work, as estimated up to the end of the current year, $2,795,113.19. The road is already constructed as far as Murray river, and it will take six miles more to carry it down to Murray harbour, which extension is included in the estimate which I have given for the year, and which will have to be provided for in the supplementary estimates. There is also a wharf to be built at Murray harbour, where navigation is open four weeks earlier in the spring and four weeks later in the fall than at Murray river. We propose to carry the road down, as the Act contemplated, from Charlottetown to Murray harbour. The total expenditure for the whole work completed will be about $3,000,000 in round numbers. The bridge is a very costly bridge.

Mr. LEFURGEY. What is the tender for the bridge ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The tender is on schedule prices, and the estimated cost of the bridge is $1,494,097.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Is the estimated cost likely to be increased or decreased ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think there will be any change which would increase the cost of the bridge. It was known from the beginning that it would be a very expensive undertaking. I may say in reply to a question put to me some time ago, that there is a contract between the Dominion and local governments, by which the local government is to contribute to the Dominion the sum of $9,750 per annum for this bridge, and the local government reserves the right to levy tolls on the highway portion of it, if they should see fit to do so.

Mr. SPROULE. For how long are they to pay that ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is a permanent charge which is to be deducted from their subsidy, or any payment that may be due them.

Hon. Mr. FIELDING.

Mr. LEFURGEY. On what basis is the schedule of prices for the building of the bridge arranged ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is the usual method of taking tenders for a work of that character.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I thought you said you could not give the exact cost of the bridge, because it was based on schedule prices ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a lump sum for the superstructure, and the schedule price applies to the masonry, &c.

Mr. LEFURGEY. How much has been expended on the bridge up to the present time ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The expenditure on the substructure and approaches up to the 30th June, 1903, is $733,101.99.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I understand that the work on the bridge has not been proceeded with as rapidly as the government promised and that the contractor has been very little on the ground, pushing the work, this year. When does the minister expect that the bridge will be finished and open for traffic ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The work, like most large undertakings of the kind, has not gone on as rapidly as we might desire. The probable date of the completion of the substructure of the bridge is fixed at the 31st of December of this year, and the probable date of the completion of the superstructure at the 30th of June, 1904.

Mr. LEFURGEY. You say the railway has been completed from Charlottetown to Murray river. How many miles would that be ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Forty-four miles to Murray river, and 6½ miles further to Murray harbour, making 50½ miles for the whole length.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Was this 44 miles tendered for ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, in the first instance ; it was awarded to a party who did not take it. It was then passed to the next tenderer. At a later stage the subsequent portion of the work was given to that contractor at the same rate as the tender price.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Who was the contractor ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Mr. Willard Kitchen.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Is he the contractor for the bridge ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No; the contractor for the bridge is Mr. M. J. Haney.

Mr. LEFURGEY. The 6½ miles of railway was not contemplated at the time the contract for the 44 miles was let ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No. The contract was let only to Murray river, and we propose to build the railway to Murray harbour.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Has the contract for the 6½ miles been let ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Is it proposed to let it by tender ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have not given that any consideration. We have no intention to build it otherwise than by public tender; but if there are good reasons why we should not do that, I would like to hold myself free.

Mr. LEFURGEY. What is the estimate for the wharf at Murray harbour ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The estimate is much larger than I thought it should be, and I have been asking the engineers if it can be reduced. I have included in these figures an estimate for cribwork, which is to cost something over $60,000. It is a question whether we can reduce this figure. The place is very much exposed, and we may have to build a wharf there of a very substantial character, and the estimate for that is, I think, $69,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Do you charge the building of that wharf to the capital account of the Intercolonial Railway ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Is there any distinction between building that wharf and building wharfs all over the county and charging them to harbours and rivers ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Wharfs built as part of the terminal facilities of the Intercolonial Railway are all considered to be part of the railway, and are charged to capital.

Mr. LEFURGEY. What is the cost of this railway per mile ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is difficult to make an estimate of the cost of the railway per mile without the bridge. I do not think we have the figures in that form.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Is there any standard to which this road has to be built ? Is it to be built as well as the Grand Trunk Railway between Montreal and Toronto, apart from the double track ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No. I think it will be as good as the railway from Charlottetown to Murray river. We like to have standards which the people can see. When the Canadian Pacific Railway was built, the standard fixed was some railway in the United States that the people of Canada knew nothing about. We want a standard which the people can see.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I have had several communications from people in the locality of the railroad, people who have some little idea of the construction of railroads, and they report that the culverts along the line from Charlottetown to Murray river are not fit to be under any railroad or tramroad, as they are not properly constructed.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am bound to take notice of what my hon. friend says, but I can only say that no such representations have reached me. Of course, the island railway is a narrow gauge road, and does not require to be built according to the standard of a larger road. But we do want good and substantial work ; that is what we are paying for, and if we are not getting it, there is something wrong. But the work is constructed under competent engineers, and I cannot think that they would accept work of the character my hon. friend describes.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why would it not be easy to arrive at a calculation of the cost of the railway per mile apart from the bridge ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I did not say it would be difficult to arrive at it. I said I did not happen to have the figures before me. The deputy minister informs me that it cost $21,500 per mile without the bridge.

Mr. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.) I was somewhat surprised at the statement made by my hon. friend from East Prince (Mr. Lefurgey), to the effect that the character of the road was so poor. My information is just the opposite.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I did not say the general character of the road. I said the culverts.

Mr. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.). That is a part of the road and a very important part. It is very strange that if that is the case I have not heard anything about it. I live pretty near that part of the country. If the railway does not run through the district I represent, it runs close to it. As a matter of fact, I have been speaking to some railway men, who belong to the Prince Edward Island Railway and who would have no interest in misrepresenting the matter in any way.

Mr. LEFURGEY. You do not suppose I would.

Mr. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.) No. But I do not know the men who gave my hon. friend the information. I do not mean to say for one moment that he would misrepresent ; but possibly the matter may have been misrepresented to him. The men I have been speaking to on the subject are practical railway men, and they have told me that it is an excellent road, a much better one than the older part of the Prince Edward Island Railway was when it was built.

Mr. COCHRANE. Were they contractors?

Mr. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.). No, and they have no interest whatever in the contractors. They are Prince Edward Islanders, who would be interested in having a good road.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Are they brakesmen ?

Mr. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.). No ; they are men who have been engaged in the construction of railways.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Then they have been contractors ?

Mr. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.). No, they have been employed with contractors in railway work. They have no interest at all in Mr. Kitchen's contract, not the slightest, no more than my hon. friend.

Mr. LEFURGEY. The information came to me in several communications, and I have given it to you as I got it. I only call the attention of the minister to it in order that it may be looked into. I would like to know how this amount of $9,750 which the provincial government is to pay has been arrived at ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am afraid I can hardly answer that question. It was originally fixed at a larger sum, in the earlier negotiations. The estimate for the bridge was less than was thought in the first negotiations, and this sum was fixed by Act of parliament in the year 1901 confirming the arrangement made with the government of Prince Edward Island.

Mr. COCHRANE. What are we to understand by a narrow gauge road ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The railway on the island is not the standard gauge, but three feet six.

Mr. COCHRANE. What is the lay of this country ? I always understood that it was level.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is not level, but there are no very high mountains. It is a rolling country.

Mr. HACKETT. I am satisfied with the plan of the hon. minister with regard to the substructure of the bridge. But how will the superstructure be carried on ? Are we to have some of the old bridges on the Intercolonial taken across and placed as a superstructure on that work ? The people of the island, according to the statement of the hon. gentleman, are paying $9,750 per year for this accommodation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Mr. Haney's contract is for the substructure, $1,218,000. The superstructure represents $275,000. We are not to have any played-out bridges, but some good, strong bridges, suitable for the island, are to be taken from the Intercolonial.

Mr. HACKETT. From what part of the Intercolonial are those bridges coming ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. From the Miramichi river.

Mr. HACKETT. The south-west or north-west branches ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The chief engineer thinks south-west, but not very positive.

Mr. HACKETT. What is their age ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They were built in 1872.

Mr. HACKETT. Did not the hon. minister a few days ago give a bridge of the same age to be used as a traffic bridge between Quebec and the province of New Brunswick, without charging anything at all for it ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We are not charging this to the island.

Mr. HACKETT. Yes, you are compelling the province to pay $9,750 per year for this superstructure, where there shall be a carriage way alongside, and I think that it is strange that a present should be made to the rich province of Quebec and the province of New Brunswick, while you insist upon Prince Edward Island paying the last farthing.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think, in view of those large figures, that my hon. friend will hardly get a great deal of sympathy when he complains that the island is badly treated. Over the Restigouche there was a bridge for which we had no use. If we could have used it on any other part of the government system, we would have done so, but there was no place for which it was adapted, so that it was practically worthless. We offer it to the provinces of New Brunswick and Quebec as our contribution for an iron bridge between the two provinces, but the municipalities or the provinces will have to provide considerable expenditure in the making of that bridge. We occasionally grant sums for interprovincial bridges, and we deal with new Brunswick and Quebec as we deal with other provinces between which there are interprovincial bridges.

Mr. HACKETT. I am not objecting at all to what is being done at Restigouche, but I object that, while the provinces of New Brunswick and Quebec are dealt with in one way, Prince Edward Island is dealt with differently. What does the acting minister intend doing in connection with the building of a railway station at Charlottetown ? That has been in discussion for many years, and the present railway station is not at all fitted for its purpose. Does the hon. minister intend now to build a proper railway station in Charlottetown ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We expect to provide for some improvements in Charlottetown in the supplementaries.

Mr. COCHRANE. What is the cost per mile of that road ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $21,500 per mile. It is a narrow gauge road through a hilly country, with a considerable amount of rock.

Mr. SPROULE. If the bridge cost a million and a half and the whole expenditure was $2,795,000, the railway, being 45 miles in length, must have cost $28,000 a mile.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That would include the bridge.

Mr. SPROULE. No.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is 50½ miles over the whole line—44 miles to Murray river and 6½ miles from Murray river to Murray harbour.

Mr. SPROULE. That would make it about $28,000 a mile.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I would like to ask the acting Minister of Railways and Canals if he has had any communication from any source, inside or outside this House, with regard to a line to Elmira ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have had communication verbally and, I think, in writing—at any rate, I know that a desire has been expressed for one or two extensions. But I do not remember the name of Elmira. Perhaps the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lefurgey) has better information than I have.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Among the lines very much needed in Prince Edward Island is one to Elmira. I think my hon. friend from King's (Mr. Hughes) will explain that point somewhat fully. I have here a resolution passed by a public meeting held on the 27th of February, at which speeches were made by Messrs. John McLean, M. L. A., J. J. Hughes, M.P., and others. And the following resolution was passed :

Whereas a survey for a branch line of railway was made in the year 1882 by the then government of Canada ; and whereas

The government of 1895 promised to construct several branch railways on Prince Edward Island, among which was the Elmira branch ; and

Whereas a delegation from Elmira had a promise from Sir L. H. Davies when Minister of Marine and Fisheries that upon the completion of the Murray Harbour Railway he would use his influence with the Minister of Railways to cause a survey to be made and estimates prepared and submitted to parliament for the construction of a branch line to Elmira ; and whereas

Since that time largely increased expenditures for railways and other public works have been made in nearly every part of the Dominion ;

Therefore resolved that the residents of East Point and vicinity, in meeting assembled, strongly urge upon the government the necessity of commencing this important work at an early date, and also request our representatives in parliament to press this matter upon the Minister of Railways during the coming session.

It seems to me very strange that the acting Minister of Railways and Canals had not heard fully of this branch line to Elmira, seeing that the hon. member for King's was one of the prominent speakers on this occasion. But if the hon. gentleman has not spoken of it, I wish it to be borne in on the hon. minister on this occasion that there are other places in Prince Edward Island that need railway facilities; and, while I do not know so much about this railway to Elmira, I have on several occasions brought to the notice of the government the promise that was made to the people of Prince Edward Island that a branch line was to be constructed from North Wiltshire to Crapaud. On two occasions, I think, petitions were presented to this House largely signed, by persons irrespective of politics, for branch lines through that thriving settlement. It would run through a country from 15 to 20 miles away from railway communications, and would be of great service to the people there. There are also several much shorter lines in the western part of the province to which, I think, the attention of the government has been called on several occasions. I think we have the right to expect some promise or some indication of what the government's intentions are as to these branch lines.

Mr. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.) My hon. friend from East Prince (Mr. Lefurgey), speaking of the branch line to Elmira, said he did not know much about it. I am quite convinced of that fact. He does not know much about it, or he would not have mentioned it. I did not intend to make any remarks about this matter, and would not but for the ill-advised statements of the member for East Prince. I should be sorry to refer to any matters in the hon. gentleman's district while he is a member of the House and present. I take it that he is quite able to take care of his own district, and I think that I am able to take care of the part of Prince Edward Island which I represent. The facts are, that while the hon. gentleman's friends were in power a survey was made from Harmony, near Souris, to Elmira, just on the eve of an election. But when the election was over nothing further was done. And so the people were deceived. In fact, they were deceived twice by running a survey over that part of the country. After the first survey the stakes were allowed to rot, and when the next survey was made they were not to be found. As a supporter of the government, I would not ask the government to do anything of that kind. The hon. gentleman has referred to a meeting at Elmira, or rather at Lakeville, near Elmira. If he has a true report of that meeting, he will find that I stated that, until the road to Murray harbour was completed, I would not take this matter up, as I thought the government was doing fairly well for Prince Edward Island in the matter of building railways. And I think so still. I have told the people that I would not bring this up as an election dodge, nor would I bring it up until the Murray harbour road was completed. But, when that road is built, I shall bring this to the attention of the government upon its merits as a fair and reasonable commercial proposition. I think my hon. friend (Mr. Lefurgey) was ill-advised when he brought this matter up. I did not intend to refer to these old subjects, but I could not avoid it in view of the fact that his party, when in power, deliberately twice deceived the people of the eastern part of King's county, in the hope of affecting an election. I would not ask the government to do anything of that kind, and if I did ask them, I do not think they would consent.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I am sorry the hon. member for King's (Mr. Hughes) got so excited over this matter.

Mr. HUGHES (King's, P.E.I.) I am not excited, but I have stated some facts that are not palatable to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lefurgey).

Mr. LEFURGEY. I have brought this matter up on several occasions, and intend to bring it up again until I get some satisfaction as to the intentions of the government with regard to these lines. The hon. member (Mr. Hughes, King's) may be very well satisfied with the work going on in the eastern part of the province, where they are getting fifty miles of railway built, while the people of the western section have none. He may well be quiet for a year or two. I have simply taken occasion to remind the government of a promise made by Sir Louis Davies that on the completion of the road now under construction, the road to Elmira would be looked after. But merely because one road is under construction, is that any reason why the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes, King's) should not press his claims on the government. Is he too bashful? Well, I can tell him that, while I am in this House I consider myself as a representative not only of my own district, but of his district as well, which is in an integral part of the Dominion, and I am a representative of the Dominion. I do not intend to keep quiet, even though the hon. gentleman does get excited; and if he does not see fit to ask for more railway communication for the eastern part of the island, I shall do so myself.

Mr. HACKETT. Can the minister say that a new station will be built in Charlottetown within a year?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will ask my hon. friend to be patient, because the supplementary estimates will be down to-morrow. I cannot promise that they will satisfy him absolutely, but they will be encouraging.

Mr. HACKETT. There is another matter I desire to call to the attention of the minister, and that is the construction of a new station at Alberton, in the county of West Prince. The station there is really an old ramshackle, one of the first erected on the Island, over thirty years ago.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Leave something for Ontario.

Mr. HACKETT. You are asking us to vote away over $100,000,000 for building a railway from Moncton to Winnipeg.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Do you have to pay for it?

Mr. HACKETT. We have to pay our proportion of it, and we insist upon receiving our share of the public moneys of the Dominion of Canada. Now might I ask the minister again if he intends to build this station at Alberton, in the county of West Prince, within a short time?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think my hon. friend will have to have some faith and not cross examine us too closely. I will not say 'wait till you see us next year,' but wait till you see the supplementaries.

Mr. HACKETT. There is another matter I desire to bring to the attention of the minister, and that is the building of a branch line of railway from O'Leary Station to the west shore of Prince Edward Island. There have been petitions sent asking for it, and many meetings held advocating it. The people are desirous of having this branch line constructed. While my hon. friend from West York (Mr. Campbell) appears to be very indignant because we insist upon having our rights in the expenditure of public money, he is quite willing to vote away a hundred million dollars of the public money, while he would not give us a hundred thousand dollars in the province of Prince Edward Island to complete our railway system. I hope the minister will see his way clear to do something in connection with a branch from O'Leary to the west shore of Prince Edward Island.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am sorry to hear that my hon. friend from West York is not willing to give Prince Edward Island a hundred thousand dollars, because I am asking my hon. friend from West York to vote $1,230,000 for Prince Edward Island in this one item alone.

Mr. SPROULE. How many tenders did you receive for the substructure of this bridge, and who was the lowest tenderer?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This contract was let to Mr. Haney on the 25th of August, 1900. We expect the bridge will be finished at the end of the calendar year, and we hope the whole work will be finished by the 30th of June, 1904.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the minister bring down the information regarding this contract, the parties tendering and the amount of each tender ?

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is this superstructure to cost $275,000 over and above the bridges that are taken off the Intercolonial Railway ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, a value will be put upon the bridges and credited to the Intercolonial account. The $275,000 will include the price which will be paid to the Intercolonial and also the cost of erection.

Mr. HACKETT. The minister brushed aside the remarks I made very easily. But he must remember this first, that while we are voting this large amount for the construction of this bridge, the government and people of Prince Edward Island are bound to pay $9,750 in interest upon that sum. Now if you are voting a million dollars or so, you are obliging the people to contribute that much. I shall make no apology for bringing up the matter in this House.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. With regard to the people of Prince Edward Island paying this sum of money, I do not wish the hon. gentleman to offer an apology, but unintentionally he has omitted an important fact. This bridge is being constructed for two purposes, partly for a railway bridge and partly for a highway bridge. The Dominion of Canada is paying every copper of the cost so far as it relates to the railway, and the local government are contributing a share towards the bridge in consideration of the fact that it provides a highway for them, and it is their business to provide a highway.

Mr. SPROULE. What valuation do you put on these bridges that are taken from over the Miramichi river ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The value placed on the bridges for the purpose of being credited in the Intercolonial Railway accounts is $64,000. The remaining portion of the value placed on the bridges represents the cost of transportation and erection.

Mr. HACKETT. Will the bridges be sufficient to cover the distance between Southport and Charlottetown ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, the bridges will be quite sufficient for the purpose.

Mr. HACKETT. In addition to that you have to provide the carriage way by the side of the bridge ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is included in the figures I gave.

Increased accommodation at Kensington, $800.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. One-fifth of this has already been voted.

Mr. LEFURGEY. This is for increased accommodation at Kensington. I have a letter from one of the chief business men in Kensington in regard to these improvements and for the benefit of the acting Minister of Railways and Canals I wish to read this in order to give him an idea of what is required there. He says :

A memorial asking for a new station building here was sent to Mr. Blair a few days ago from the committee appointed at a meeting of the patrons of the station here held on October last. And since then we see that $1,000 is in the estimates for repairs of the old one presumably by Mr. Sharpe's plan. Now, owing to increased business, both freight and passenger lately, and especially as it is here the summer tourists for Malpeque and New London take and leave the train, decent and if possible attractive accommodation should be had. At present it is the very reverse. The change proposed by Mr. Sharpe would be very little better, whilst it would stand in the way of getting a new building for some time. For instance, he proposed taking a portion of the old freight-shed (ceiling 8 feet 6 inches), under a flat roof and saturated with oil, petroleum and other things and converting it into a ladies' waiting room, and all his other changes according to that. We had some differences with Mr. Sharpe and now he is getting square with us. He could not say but the old building as you know, with only one waiting-room, where every class of persons have to wait for hours at night waiting for belated trains as is very common, yes, from wealthy, refined Americans and other tourists down to Indians and drunken toughs, is not fit for use. But he wants to patch it up in any shape and punish the public for the criticism offered to him about the present state of affairs.

Now, this section is one of the principal shipping points between Charlottetown and Summerside, possibly the largest town between these two points, and it is a place of considerable commercial importance, as the writer states here it is a point where a great many tourists coming to Prince Edward Island leave and take the trains to go to the watering places and they have had but the one station where Indians, ladies and all congregate to wait for trains which at this point are necessarily late leaving Summerside and arriving through from Charlottetown. When $1,000 is being spent to make repairs in this station it seems to me that at a point so central as this the government might very well spend a little more, a thousand or two, whatever is necessary and build a suitable station. I merely want to call the attention of the minister to this before any expenditure is made upon it in order that he may have an opportunity to investigate. I wish also to say that their freight accommodation and the platform arrangements for passengers are very deficient and require some attention. Before sitting down I would also wish to put in a word for the improvements at Charlottetown and to say that I am entirely in accord with what Mr. Hackett said that the station is an old and dilapidated affair and the people there certainly need a new station. They also need increased accommodation along their water-front for the different private wharfs. There is no way of getting at the freight in these places unless you cart it straight across the town to Charlottetown station.

To improve the water service, $19,200.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. At present they use wells on the Prince Edward Island Railway, and we propose to place upon the system a modern method of supplying the railway with water from tanks.

To provide additional accommodation at Kinkora, $640.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Is it intended to make this a booking station ? Unless it is made a booking station the residents of that section of the country extending from Emerald and Albany to Kinkora, will not be able to get their goods without sending their money to Emerald. Trains pass this station late at night and early in the morning, and the booking station is an absolute necessity.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We propose to erect a building forty feet by twenty feet, in which there will be a waiting room and baggage room. The business at the station is not very great, and I think probably it will have to be a flag station for the present.

Mr. LEFURGEY. The business of the station cannot be great when you do not afford accommodation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. At all events this is a step in the right direction.

Mr. HACKETT. Kinkora is a very prominent point on the line from Emerald to Cape Traverse, and I would urge the minister to have a regular booking station and telegraph office there.

New stations at Northam and Richmond, $800.

Mr. HACKETT. Will these buildings be erected before the winter ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will try. I cannot promise.

Mr. HACKETT. Will these stations be similar to the stations at Elmsdale and Conway, and have a fire and caretaker, without being regular booking stations ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The station will be similar to that at Kinkora.

Mr. SPROULE. We have now passed the railway estimates, and as it is after twelve o'clock, we should adjourn.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think the request is reasonable.

Some resolutions reported.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. SPROULE. What business will be taken up to-morrow ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The orders are so reduced in number now, that it is very easy to make a selection. We might take up some Bills which have already been discussed, and we will perhaps go on with supply. That is as definite as I can state at present. If we go on with supply we will proceed from the point at which we left off.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 12.25 a.m. Thursday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, October 1, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

QUESTION.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES VOTED.

Mr. WILSON asked :

1. What amount of bonuses or subsidies have been voted by parliament each year to railways during the years 1900, 1901 and 1902 ?
2. How much of the said bonuses or subsidies has been paid during the said years, and up to 1st September, 1903 ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). The first part of the question will hardly admit of a definite answer, inasmuch as the subsidies are not voted in any lump sum. If my hon. friend will take the mileage which is voted, and make an approximate estimate on the basis of $3,200 per mile, he might arrive at some idea of the amount ; but in some cases the subsidies are larger than $3,200 and are paid in proportion to the cost of the road. The second question admits of an answer, and I will be very glad to give the hon. gentleman the information at a later stage ; I have not it ready to-day.

Mr. WILSON. Would it not be convenient for the Minister of Finance to get one of the clerks to make up the calculation, and give it to me later ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is impossible to make it up accurately ; it is a matter of approximation.

Mr. WILSON. You can give the amount voted ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am afraid my hon. friend has not caught the point of my remarks. The hon. gentleman wants to know the total amount of the subsidies that have been voted by parliament. Railway subsidies are not voted in an express amount, but are voted on the basis of so much per mile, and the statute provides that the subsidy may be $3,200 per mile in the case of an ordinary road, or, when the road proves more than ordinarily expensive, it may be an increased sum not exceeding $6,400 per mile. I therefore cannot give the hon. gentleman a statement of the amount voted, but I can give a statement of the amount paid, and will be glad to do so.

Mr. WILSON. We had a statement brought down to the House giving the amount voted.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If my hon. friend will call my attention to that, I will be glad to look into it.

Mr. WILSON. I shall.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Sometimes the subsidies are voted in this way : To a line between certain points, not exceeding so many miles in length. Perhaps that is what my hon. friend wants.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We vote the subsidies for not exceeding so many miles, but the amount per mile is necessarily somewhat indefinite, although within limits. That is why I cannot give the hon. gentleman the statement he asks for. If he will be good enough to call my attention to the return to which he has referred, I will see what further information can be given.

GOVERNMENT OF THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES—FINANCIAL AID.

Bill (No. 256) to provide for advances to the government of the North-west Territories, read the second time, and the House went into committee thereon.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). This Bill is in the precise terms of the resolution which has already been fully discussed in Committee.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this intended as an advance for any particular period of time, say for the fiscal year, or is it simply an indefinite advance to be paid to the government of the North-west Territories at any time in the future, as the government may see fit ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is an advance without limit. It stands to the credit of the government of the North-west Territories, to be used or not to be used, as in their discretion may seem to be necessary.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has the correspondence brought down in connection with this matter been printed?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am not aware whether the correspondence has been printed or not.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My recollection of the correspondence brought down in connection with this matter is that the Prime Minister of the North-west Territories objected to the creation of a debt account between the North-west Territories and the government of Canada at the present time, and pointed out that what the North-west Territories really desire is that the annual subsidy to the North-west Territories should be increased to such an amount as would be adequate for the works which they have to undertake in the administration of that country. He also expressed the opinion that it was not in the interest of the North-west Territories that any debt should be incurred by them at the present time, before the territories have received that provincial status which has been demanded by its legislature for some considerable time past.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think that the government of the North-west Territories objected to this advance being made to them. The special point of their objection was to a proposition which was made at one stage of the negotiations that the cost of two large bridges, for the construction of which we were arranging with them, should be made a charge against an advance. However, I am sure the government of the North-west Territories would prefer to have any sums which are available for them given in the way of an annual grant and perhaps my hon. friend may be right in saying they objected to this. There is however, nothing compulsory about this; it is an option which we give to the government of the North-west Territories and if they do not see fit to exercise it no harm will be done. The allowance made in the meantime was fully discussed in the Committee. I then pointed out the rapid increase made by this government in the allowance to the North-west Territories and I think the Committee were generally satisfied that the allowances we now make, irrespective of this grant, are quite liberal and take due account of the rapid growth and greater needs of that section of our country.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What increase is made in the allowance for the present year ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I gave the figures in the previous debate. The appropriation for 1902 was $407,979. I am speaking now entirely of what I may call the general vote for the North-west Territories which would correspond to the provincial subsidy. There are other grants for other purposes, and my observations are confined entirely to that general vote which appears in the estimates as a grant for school and other purposes. For 1903, including the supplementary estimates passed in the latter part of the year, the grant was $707,989 and for the current year we are proposing to pay them including a special grant for two large bridges which at one time it was suggested should be charged to capital account, but which we ultimately decided to provide for in the way of grant —$1,046,979, irrespective of this advance of which the government of the North-west Territories may or may not avail themselves.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

SUPPLY.

House again in Committee of Supply.

Harbours and rivers, Quebec—Sorel deep water wharf, $37,600.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would like my right hon. friend to make some explanation of this item. I would like to know how much money has been expended on the terminals, wharfs and harbour improvements at Sorel; how much is proposed to be expended in the future and whether or not the object of that expenditure is to create at Sorel an ocean port for export traffic.

The expenditure made there is not at all commensurate with the idea of improvements for merely local purposes, and we are entitled to a full explanation as to whether or not this port is designed to be one of the national ports of the St. Lawrence. We have the ports of Montreal and Quebec upon which considerable sums have been expended. It may be the policy of the government to create another national port at Sorel and to expend large sums on terminal facilities there for the export trade. But I do not suppose there will be any difficulty in handling all that trade in Montreal and Quebec, if these ports are properly equipped, and further we have the ports of Halifax and St. John, to which, in the winter months, the people of the maritime provinces at least think a very considerable portion of the western traffic will come. We ought to know what has already been expended at Sorel, what is the scope of the works there, what traffic is expected. Has the government any expectation that traffic, which could be handled at Montreal and Quebec, will be handled at Sorel? Why should we attempt to create an ocean port there instead of concentrating our efforts upon Montreal and Quebec?

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. colleague the Minister of Public Works will give the information required regarding the expenditure. The question of policy, I think, was stated pretty fully two years ago when this appropriation was first asked for. In the opinion of the government there certainly must be at Sorel a large ocean traffic. It is the outlet of the Richelieu valley, which is one of the most fertile and wealthy in Canada, and from which a great deal of agricultural produce is exported. At Montreal to-day there is scarcely adequate space for the traffic. The government are asked every day to provide more facilities at that port. The tendency there has ever been to concentrate the traffic within a very narrow limit. All the efforts of the traders have been to get as near as possible to the canal basin, so that practically the whole traffic is centred between the canal basin and Bonsecours market. But it is impossible that the trade should be confined within that narrow space. The government has put up large wharfs at St. Mary's Current, near Hochelaga, and the trade no doubt will extend more and more along the St. Lawrence. It is impossible that the western traffic will be confined at Montreal. By and by the harbour will not be confined merely to the city of Montreal, but will extend to Sorel and Three Rivers, and the Montreal Harbour Commissioners will claim jurisdiction over these places. In my opinion the harbour of Sorel is destined not only to take the trade of the Richelieu valley, but also to become an outlet for the trade of the North-west. At present the Canada Atlantic Railway has no terminus in any Canadian port. It is forced to unload at Coteau and send its freight down the St. Lawrence in barges. On the south shore it extends to the state of Vermont, and has a point of junction with the Southern Counties Railway, at Noyan, which comes from the state of Vermont and extends to Sorel. It is expected that the Canada Atlantic Railway will be able to make arrangements with that company in order to have its terminus at Sorel. Unfortunately however, the Southern Counties Railway is in difficulties. It is in the hands of a company which cannot carry on the work, but this is only a temporary obstacle, and I expect that the trade of the west will certainly find an outlet at the city of Sorel.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I have not recently examined the explanation which my right hon. friend gave of this expenditure some two years ago. My recollection is that the policy of the government then was based altogether on an expected railway development which has not materialized. I believe that Dr. Seward Webb had some negotiations with regard to the acquisition of some of these railways. There was to be a great system connecting with certain railways in the United States. As I understand it, that project has entirely fallen through, and there is no prospect of it being resuscitated. If it is not resuscitated, I do not know exactly upon what ground we can anticipate that a considerable trade in exports will go by Sorel. Properly equip the harbour of Montreal and why should trade go past Montreal to Sorel? Surely, we can hardly expect, at present, to have trade so great that it will occupy both sides of the river St. Lawrence for a space of forty miles or more. Surely the Prime Minister can hardly expect to equip the St. Lawrence to that extent when his Minister of Public Works, in making a comparison between the government's proposal with regard to the transcontinental line and mine, added $14,000,000 in connection with these harbours to the cost of my project, and not a single dollar in connection with the project of the government. Now, the harbour of Sorel is within forty-five miles of the harbour of Montreal. No one is inclined to minimize the Richelieu valley or its products. But, as my right hon. friend speaks of the necessity for an ocean port in that valley, has he any information to give the House as to how many tons of export for Europe the Richelieu Valley produces at this present time? Has it sent one steamerload to Europe in the course of the year?—or two, or half a dozen? How many does it send? There are fertile valleys in the province of Nova Scotia, valleys that may not be so large in extent as the Richelieu valley, but quite as fertile, I suppose, as any valleys in Quebec or Ontario; but I shall hardly expect to have a great ocean port created for one of these valleys, though its people send a great many hundred thousand barrels of fruit to Europe every year. Sorel, being about forty-five miles down the St. Lawrence from Montreal, must be within about 120 miles of the port of Quebec. My right hon. friend and his transportation expert, my hon. friend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), have proven, very much to their own satisfaction, that transportation by rail is cheaper than transportation by water. So, if we wish to be economical, we should send the freight of the Richelieu valley as far as we can by rail. This would mean, under present circumstances, that we would send it at least as far as Quebec. That is a logical result of the argument of my right hon. friend and the hon. member for North Norfolk. But now the right hon. gentleman is going on an absolutely different principle from that which guided him in relation to the National Transcontinental Railway. He has embarked upon the project of constructing a railway nearly 2,000 miles in extent from Quebec to the maritime provinces, on the theory that rail transportation is cheaper than water transportation—if that is not the reason there can be no reason for his policy. Acting upon that principle what should the right hon. gentleman do? He should improve the railway grades from Sorel to Quebec to the four-tenths per cent of which the expert has told us, and thus minimize the cost of transportation via existing ocean ports. I am sure the right hon. gentleman did not think of that when he embarked upon this project. It is two years since he entered upon this policy of making an ocean port of Sorel, and the great advantages of rail transportation had not then become crystallized in his mind. But, in the light of his new theory he will see that this project is unwise; and I should think he would not be inclined to persevere in his proposal to spend these very large sums at Sorel. For, of course, on the hon. gentleman's theory, that expenditure can only result in disadvantage to Sorel and to the Richelieu valley, as it will result in sending their products by water, when, with other improvements, they might be more advantageously sent by rail. As I understand it, the Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) is going to give us the cost of these improvements up to the present time and the estimate of further expenditure. But I am sure, that he, like my right hon. friend, in view of the light that has come to them with regard to all-rail transportation, will see that there cannot be any justification for the expenditure of any further large sums of money on these works at Sorel.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote of $40,000 is to complete the work. The total cost of the work when completed is estimated by the department at $273,500. Of course, the work is under contract, and I believe it is nearly completed. This vote is to pay the amount which will be earned under the contract.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Is the wharf a wooden one?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, all wood. I suppose I need not go into details, for on a previous occasion this matter was discussed at length, and I gave the committee all the facts of which I was in possession.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Perhaps the hon. gentleman could tell us the wharfage that has been collected? What quantity of freight has been shipped, especially foreign exports?

The PRIME MINISTER. There is none, because there has been no wharf to take it.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. This money is being expended to serve the export trade of Europe. This is to be a wharf for ocean-going steamers. Surely, the Minister of Marine, in whose department this is, will be able to give us information as to the amount of dues collected.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The wharf has not been handed over to the department yet, because it has not been finished.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. But the government must have made a calculation of the work to be done before entering into this expenditure. Can he tell us the whole export trade of the valley of the Richelieu that is expected to be sent by Sorel?

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not think we have any statistics. But to show the amount of export trade, I can tell my hon. friend—or rather remind him, for he knows it already—of the extent of the valley from which this wharf would draw its trade. The counties of Richelieu, Yamaska, Verchères, Rouville, St. Hyacinthe, St. John and Iberville, all centre upon the Richelieu river, and the hon. gentleman knows as well as I do that these are amongst the most fruitful and wealthy parts of the province of Quebec or of the Dominion. There are large exports yearly of hay, butter, cheese, and all agricultural products. These are what we expect to carry from this wharf when it is completed. But my hon. friend is 'too previous' in asking how much has been collected. There is no connection yet between the wharf and the railway, the work being still in progress.

Mr. BROCK. Considering the very meagre information that the government has been able to give us in connection with the establishing of a great ocean port, I think I might draw the attention of the House as I am sure the attention of the country will be drawn, to the fact that the government has appointed a transportation commission for the very purpose of taking into consideration such matters as these. I believe that the government have contended that that commission will have no right to interfere with the transcontinental railway, but that harbours, wharfs and general transportation questions will be considered by them. I do not think it would be too much to ask that this matter of Sorel should be taken into consideration by the transportation commission along with the other matters which will claim their attention. I believe a report from that commission would have great effect upon this House and upon the country. It would greatly simplify our plans. The government are starting out on what I believe they have called a patchwork system of transportation—a part of a scheme here, part of a scheme there, and without definite information with regard to any of them.

We all know that the valley of the Richelieu is a very rich valley, and we all know that if they are going to bring freight from Iberville, the question of which will be the cheapest route, whether by rail or by water, would be an important one. That district is now served by the river navigation, and I suppose by the harbour of Montreal. But the point I would like to make just now is: What part is the transportation commission going to play in dealing with matters of this kind, when the government let contracts for supplies? I do not see that these gentlemen are really going to be of any use, and I think that if they have any respect for themselves and for the position they will occupy, they will say: Well, we have got the appointment, for which we are going to be paid a salary, but if we are not going to have any work to do we will throw up the appointment. Now the hon. gentleman must remember that we are building a railroad on which we are going to spend hundreds of millions of dollars, and we are making appropriations for harbours here and there. The harbour of Three Rivers has a large appropriation, and I think these things should be taken into consideration by the Transportation Commission. If they decide that Montreal is the best harbour, let them concentrate their means upon it and make a grand harbour of it. These little patchwork harbours do not seem to be in accordance with the grand views expressed by the Prime minister and other hon. gentlemen when they spoke of the idea of a transcontinental railroad. Now, I contend that spending $37,000 in addition to what we have already spent, is doing the work in a patchwork fashion, because the government are not able to lay before this House a single item of information as to the amount of freight that is likely to be moved there. I say, therefore, that this whole question should be taken up by the Transportation Commission, and reported upon to the House, so that next session we will have sufficient information upon which to go; and you will find that members on this side of the House will be only too anxious to assist in the improvement of our transportation facilities in every possible way. Perhaps the right hon. gentleman (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) may be considered a doubting Thomas in respect to any desire we may have of assisting the government. I know he is able to carry this vote through the House, although I do not consider it is in the interests of the country at large, but I believe it is brought forward merely in view of an early election. There has been too much of that kind of thing done already, and the country is getting hold of it. I do not want to give the hon. gentlemen advice for their own interest, because I know they are able to take care of themselves, and they can turn a corner more sharply than they will be able to do under any advice I can give them. Again I say that this transportation commission must consider all these matters and make their recommendations before we spend these enormous sums of money. I, therefore, ask the government to submit this question to the Transportation Commission.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend's objections come rather late. He should have made these remarks two years ago when this vote was first brought to the attention of parliament. Let him remember that this work is already far advanced, there is only $40,000 more to expend upon it, and surely the hon. gentleman does not expect that we are going to give it up now and not pay the contractors who are at work. This work has been progressing, and it is now nearly completed. True, we stated at the opening of this session our plans with regard to the navigation and transportation questions. I am afraid we have been proceeding rather loosely, but it was better to adopt an extensive transportation system, and that is the reason we have appointed this commission. I think the commission will do good work in this respect, and will give us a general plan as to where these national works had better be undertaken. But in the meantime we must complete the work that we have undertaken.

Mr. BROCK. The right hon. gentleman says my remarks come too late. If he will look in 'Hansard' of 1900 he will find that I urged the appointment of a transportation commission in reference to this very point, when these items were up before. I am merely reiterating what I said then. I gave the government good advice. but they did not see fit to follow it. They have recently appointed a commission, and now they are taking the whole question of transportation out of the hands of the commission.

Mr. KEMP. The counties to which the Prime Minister refers as being fertile counties are doubtless the most fertile in the province of Quebec. The surplus exports of these counties, however, are not very large, because there is a large consuming population lying near-by. The city of Montreal takes a very large part of the products of those counties. I suppose that one large modern steamship, such as navigates the St. Lawrence, would be able to take all the surplus products of those counties which will be produced in the course of a season. I do not suppose there will be more than could be put on one large steamship and taken to Eurpoe. Now, to make ocean harbour for the purpose of taking away the products of these few counties I do not think is a very practical way of viewing the question. I have been under the impression that the best way to deal with the Sorel harbour matter was to let it drop, and I justify that opinion by the fact that the railway for which this work was proposed to be promoted, has failed to make its connection, and has failed to make Sorel its terminus. The excuse for these tremendous works at Sorel was that the United Counties Railway was to be taken over by the Rutland Railway, which was practically a part of the New York Central. I believe the Prime Minister assumes full responsibility for the initiation of this work. The first vote was a small sum of $25,000 for improvements in Sorel harbour. That was an innocent looking estimate, and no one in this House, I presume, took strong ground against it. But as time went on the reports of an engineer were secured by the department and it became known to this House what is would cost in order to carry out the works which the petitioners asked for, representing the Bank of St. Hyacinthe and the United Counties Railway, who wanted to make this an ocean port. The engineer estimated, according to papers laid on the Table of the House this session, that it would require a sum of not less than $935,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think my hon. friend is mistaken as to the report of the engineer.

Mr. KEMP. I will read it. The report of the engineer is dated, Department of Public Works, office of chief engineer, Ottawa, January 10th, 1900:

Sir,—With reference to file No. 208,734, being an application from Mr. J. N. Greenshields, on behalf of the United Counties Railway, for the construction of deep water terminal facilities at Sorel, I have the honour to state that a certain portion of the ground to be occupied by the improvements in question has already been surveyed by Mr. Assistant Engineer F. W. Cowie, and that judging from the estimate of the cost of the works then proposed, which only consisted of 1,000 feet of wharfing instead of the 2,000 feet applied for, the estimated cost of the works now required cannot be placed at a less figure than $935,000, as follows:—

Dredging an area 800 feet wide by 25,000 feet in length, an average depth of 18 feet to 27½ feet at extreme low water..	$255,000
Cribwork and sheds..	430,000
Elevator of 1,000,000 bushels capacity..	250,000

If the department decides to undertake this work it will of course be necessary to have a complete survey made, in order that the above estimate may be revised, especially as far as the dredging is concerned.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Sgd.) EUGENE D. LAFLEUR,
Acting Chief Engineer.

The Secretary,
Department of Public Works.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In what way does the hon. gentleman make the connection between that report and the item under discussion?

Mr. KEMP. That is an interesting question. I will have to think that out and see how I can connect it with the item under discussion. The item under discussion is a small estimate for the purpose of doing further work on the Sorel harbour.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend, as well as the hon. member for Centre Toronto (Mr. Brock), has apparently not looked at the estimates to see what the item is for, because both seem to have made the same mistake.

Mr. KEMP. Is the item not for the purpose of carrying on work to give Sorel a deep-water harbour and make it an ocean port?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The item is to pay the balance due on a contract for work already undertaken.

Mr. BROCK. It is all part of the same scheme.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Well, facts are facts. This is a balance as I say, of the payment due on a contract for work that has already been undertaken. My hon. friend (Mr. Kemp) is reading the report of an engineer in regard to another proposition that was not undertaken. What we are discussing now is an item providing for the payment for work that was undertaken, that was let by contract and which is almost completed.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think they are pretty closely connected by the fact that this report is included in the file of papers that was brought down to the House, papers that we demanded in respect to the very matter we are now discussing. If they are not connected it is a remarkable thing that this report was brought down with the papers in connection with this scheme.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) that it is connected with it in the sense in which he speaks of it, and that is the reason why I asked my hon. friend (Mr. Kemp) the question. He is apparently using the report as a report in connection with the work under contract.

Mr. COCHRANE. No, I do not understand him in that way.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I simply asked my hon. friend the question, because, if he was using the report in connection with the work under contract, he is making a mistake. If he was using it in connection with a certain proposition that has not been undertaken, I think my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) is quite correct.

Mr. KEMP. I think the question which the hon. Minister of Public Works puts forth is a reasonable one. It seems to me that it resolves itself chiefly into a question of order. I am discussing the whole work of improvement at Sorel harbour. I realize that the amount now under consideration is to complete certain contracts already entered into. I realize that for the full amount of $935,000, which is estimated as being necessary to make Sorel an ocean port, you would only have a depth of water of 18 feet. That would not take very large vessels in, and if it is intended to make Sorel a port to compete with Quebec and Montreal, you would need to have a greater depth of water and the cost would be that much more. As the prospect of the New York Central Railway having a terminus at Sorel has not materialized, is it not a reasonable thing to criticise this item very strongly? The right hon. Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) last year stated in this House in regard to the New York Central having a terminal at Sorel:

> But railways are taking the place of waterways, and two railways are now converging at Sorel, the South Shore which has been constructed from Montreal to Sorel and beyond Sorel to Nicolet, and will be completed this year probably to Lotbinière. There is the United Counties Railway also, which became the Rutland Railway and which I believe now belongs to the New York Central, and it comes from the New York Central Railway system at Lake Champlain to the town of Sorel.

I submit that we ought to have a full explanation from the government as to whether it is their intention to go on with this work and follow out the report laid down by Mr. Lafleur, in which it is stated that, in order to make Sorel a deep-water harbour, for the purpose of transferring merchandise, and to provide an elevator of one million bushels capacity, it will take $935,000, and that Sorel will then only have a depth of 18 feet of water.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Before the item is adopted, I wish to make some remarks in answer to the hon. Minister of Public Works. He asks what the report estimating the cost at $935,000 has to do with the item at present under discussion. He forgets that the right hon. leader of the government stated that the intention of the government was to make Sorel an ocean port, and use it as a terminal, perhaps, for the Canada Atlantic Railway, which had not terminals in Montreal, and which might establish its terminal in the United States. According to this report, it is necessary to expend $935,000 for the purpose of getting only a depth of 18 feet of water. What good would an ocean terminal for the Canada Atlantic Railway or any other railway, or for the export of trade of that particular section of the country be with only a depth of 18 feet of water? No modern vessel could go into the port. Not $935,000, but $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 would be required to make an ocean port of that place. Then the hon. gentleman says that this is not for the purpose of carrying out that scheme, that it has no connection with the $935,000. What is the hon. minister going to accomplish then with the $270,000 that he is getting from this House? If it takes $935,000 to give an 18-foot navigation, $270,000 will accomplish not a tithe of it. If it is for that purpose, then the expenditure of this amount of money will be totally useless.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I quite agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Kemp) in the sense that he explained the manner in which he was using the report. I think it was quite in order and quite interesting. I only asked him the question for the purpose of showing that the report was not acted on in connection with the item under consideration. I quite agree with him as to the propriety of using the report in discussing the general question as to what further improvements may be made there with the view of making Sorel a national port. But the item was adopted on the report of the engineer, at the time estimating the cost of this work at $306,000. The work has been described fully, and this item is a balance of $47,000 to pay the contractor for work done. This does not mean that we are undertaking anything new at all. It is carrying out a plan that some years ago was submitted to the House.

Mr. COCHRANE. It appears to me, as a farmer from a section of the country which I think is quite as fertile as this valley, that this expenditure is most enormous. It almost staggers me when I think of the people of the district from which I come, Northumberland, Durham, Hastings, and down through that section of the country, asking me why it is that these enormous sums of money are being spent down at Sorel for the accommodation of the people there. We have five or six wharfs on Lake Ontario. There has not one dollar been spent at Presqu'Ile, for instance, one of the finest natural harbours on Lake Ontario, for the improvement of that harbour. Now we are told that this enormous expenditure is necessary to facilitate the export of the products of the rich valley adjacent to Sorel to the markets of the world. If it is necessary to build a wharf there, not connected with this great scheme which is going to make it an ocean port and the terminal of several railways, as we have been led to believe, why all this enormous expenditure? I venture the assertion that a wharf can be built for a fraction of this $270,000 that would provide for all the export trade that will take place at Sorel from that section of the country. If this is not going to be an ocean port this enormous expenditure is worse than money being frittered away. The whole scheme is wrong. I am willing to vote any amount of money to facilitate the transportation of the products of this great country to the markets of the world; but I want to know that every dollar I vote for shall be expended on some well thought out scheme for the benefit of all the rich valleys in this Canada of ours, and not for the special purpose of the Richelieu Valley, or any other single valley, I care not in what province it may be. There is no provincialism about me. I want to have the money wisely expended, so that it will do the most good to all Canada. For years this government has misapplied money, because they have gone on with schemes which were not well thought out and considered. The Minister of Public Works is not treating the House with proper courtesy when he says that this money is to pay for a contract already let. This was originally voted for the purpose of making Sorel an ocean port —the minister shakes his head but if it was not voted for that purpose, there is more money expended than ought to have been expended for local purposes. It is no argument for the Prime Minister to say that the time to protest against this was when the appropriation was first asked. We know how these things are done. I recollect that in one case down there, there was an innocent looking vote of $5,000, which no person paid attention to, but it developed into an expenditure of $60,000 to build a wharf where there were only 350 people, and no post office even. These votes look very innocent at first, and we are left in ignorance about their meaning. I know, Mr. Chairman, (Mr. Macdonald), how you grieve at these things; I know how you criticised these expenditures when we were in power, and I know how the hearts of your party went out to the farmers of Canada who were robbed and bled white. But now Sir, I know you grieve at what is called a buoyant revenue, and a Liberal expenditure.

Mr. GEOFFRION. I am well acquainted with the locality where this wharf is being built, and it is only right that I should say to the House, that at Sorel we probably have the best harbour in Canada; a harbour which it would not be in the interests of the country to allow to remain unimproved. This wharf at Sorel will give facilities for shipping their produce to the counties of Yamaska, Verchères, Chambley, St. Hyacinthe, Bagot, and several other counties in the valley of the Richelieu, which have an extent almost as large as the provinces of Nova Scotia or New Brunswick. For years and years the people of these counties have been anxiously waiting for this accommodation. Sorel is their natural harbour, and I appeal to every member of this House who knows anything about the locality, if this is not a desirable and useful work. The ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) rightly thought that Sorel was destined to be one of the great harbours on the River St. Lawrence, and he was enthusiastically in favour of the scheme.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it an ocean port or merely intended for local trade ?

Mr. GEOFFRION. We have first to equip it for the trade of the surrounding counties, and when that is done there is nothing to prevent us building wharfs and elevators, and shipping from Sorel for export. There are already four or five railroads centering there. It is true that so far they have not been a success, but every day we expect to make arrangements with other companies, and to get these railways into such shape that they will be paying concerns. What is an expenditure of two or three hundred thousand dollars, compared with the advantages that will be gained by making Sorel a first-class port ? We have spent larger sums on other ports which serve only the interests of small localities, but this port will serve a district almost a province in extent. Sorel is our natural port. It is more costly to take our produce to Montreal, and it is not natural we should have to convey our freights up against the current. At Sorel we have a deepwater harbour which only awaits proper facilities to make it a splendid port, and as we hope, an ocean port. When our railway difficulties are settled, I have not the slightest doubt, that a very considerable trade will be developed at Sorel.

Mr. SPROULE. If Sorel is going to be as important a port as the hon. minister intimates; then a great deal more money will be required than is provided here; but if it is to be an ocean port it must have over eighteen feet of water. The hon. gentleman states that the railways there are not paying at the present time, although he hopes that other companies will take them over. But is this not reversing the natural order of things ? Is it not usual to have trade at a certain port before we provide facilities for trade ? Are we to build these wharfs here, and then look for the trade afterwards ? Let me point out, that if elevators are to be built there, and if ocean going vessels are to trade at that port, you must have more than eighteen feet of water. If you have it planned out that it will be an ocean port with only eighteen feet of water, it simply shows that all ordinary business precautions are discarded in reference to this scheme.

Mr. GEOFFRION. The money is almost all spent, and only a small sum is required to complete the work.

Mr. SPROULE. If the object of this expenditure is to make Sorel an ocean port, all the circumstances show how unwisely the work was undertaken.

Mr. BRUNEAU (Richelieu).—(Translation) : Mr. Speaker, as a member for the county of Richelieu, in which the town of Sorel is situated, I consider it part of my duty to offer a few suggestions regarding the item of the estimates now under discussion. I really fail to undertand what reason there can be for objecting, after the work has been going on for two years, to the grant which the government ask for the completion of the wharfs at Sorel. This is the more incomprehensible to me, that when the late Conservative government were in power they had surveys and soundings made, plans and specifications drawn, for the dredging of the harbour of Sorel. Their friends at the time urged again and again on the government the importance of carrying through the work in the harbour of Sorel with a view to rendering it a suitable shipping port.

When the present government came into power, we took up the scheme and we are at the present time carrying it through to successful completion. Consequently, I am satisfied that when the people are called to decide upon the action of both governments, they will be astonished to learn that the hon. members on the other side have stood up against the development and progress of the whole region of the Richelieu.

My hon. colleague for Chambly-Verchères (Mr. Geoffrion) has given a very full presentation of the case; but I think it proper to draw the attention of the House to the geographical situation of Sorel. That town is situated at the confluence of the River Richelieu, which is, in the east, the only waterway leading into the United States. Our whole export trade passes through the port of Sorel, ascending the Richelieu and Lake Champlain up to the Whitehall canal. There are at present over 700 vessels on the River Richelieu, calling at Sorel, and carrying our traffic to the United States.

The port is almost wholly taken up by the boats of the Richelieu Company, of the Sincennes-McNaughton Company and of the government. As everyone knows, Sorel is the winter port for about 300 boats. The whole river fleet of the province of Quebec takes up its winter quarters there; and for the time being, there is no accommodation in the port for United States vessels trading with us. The new wharf referred to, while providing accommodation for those vessels, will at the same time be of immense benefit for the trade which will develop rapidly there.

The ex-Minister of Public Works spoke of the export trade which is being carried on at the port of Sorel. I may say that this year and last, one company has exported ore in considerable quantities. That company had in the first place begun operations in Three Rivers, but finding subsequently that Sorel offered greater opportunities, they transferred their business to our side. They are exporting their ore through Sorel just now.

I may add that, a few miles away from the town, are to be found the Tourville mills, which turn out yearly over two million feet of lumber. We have reason to hope that the Rutland, Canada Atlantic and Quebec Southern railways, under certain agreements, will contribute to develop trade at this point and will, before long, draw to it considerable traffic from the west. Reference has been made to some difficulties in connection with these railways. I may say that the roads in question are to-day in full operation and will increase the amount of business done in the port of Sorel, provided the improvements destined to develop the export trade are effected, and Sorel is made a seaport.

Mr. WRIGHT. It may not be clear to some hon. gentlemen in this House why a member living so far away from Sorel as I do, in the town of Renfrew, should have any special interest in the equiping of that port. As a matter of fact it is of great interest to us. Not over three months ago a trader in that section of my riding came to me and said : 'Look here Wright, if there is anything you can do to assist us to obtain the full advantage of the Canada Atlantic Railway, we wish you would do it ; we do not have the same advantages shipping by that road to Montreal as we would have if that road were extended to Sorel.' I said : 'I have myself resided in Berthier en haut, near Sorel; I know something of Sorel, and anything I can do to assist in improving that port and in allowing the railway which goes through our town to be extended to it, I shall be glad to do, as it will afford very much better means of shipping from this district.' The small amount that will be expended in the improvement of Sorel harbour will benefit the people not only of the Richelieu valley, but of the valley of the Bonchère as well. The avenues of trade are far-reaching and those who take this narrow, small provincial view are not the men whom we want. I am glad to raise my voice and to do all I can in favour of this work.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I want to say once more that it seems to me a most remarkable thing that the government proposes to enter upon this expenditure, which if the right hon. gentleman's views are carried into effect will involve over $1,000,000 without the slightest estimate being made of the trade which will develop there in the future. No one wants to minimize the importance of the country adjacent to Sorel or of Sorel as a harbour. My hon. friend from Chambly and Verchères (Mr. Geoffrion) took the position that because this was a good, natural harbour it must be equipped. I can tell my hon. friend that there are at least twenty-five harbours in Nova Scotia which are as good as this harbour of Sorel, upon which not one dollar of public money has ever been expended, and on which it would be absolutely absurd to spend money because the public interest does not demand such an expenditure. There are dozens of these harbours all around the maritime coasts, but because you have a good harbour it does not necessarily follow that you should spend $1,000,000 in equipping it. I would like to know before I go any further, whether or not the view suggested by my hon. friend two years ago, as to the railway situation, has been in any way realized? The hon. gentleman, as reported on page 4799 of 'Hansard,' first explained that Sorel was a growing and thriving town of 8,000 people that at one time it had considerable importance, and he continued as follows:

> That was previous to the era of railway transportation. Since the railways have been established, the trade of Sorel has gone down, and has been transferred to Montreal, which is allied with that section of country by railways. After the railways were built, the counties which I have named had no means of export except by railway to Montreal.

Has there been any complaint that that has resulted in any disadvantage to these counties? My right hon. friend has explained that railway transportation is much better than water transportation, and therefore one would suppose that those countries could not be put under any such disadvantage for that reason. Then my hon. friend goes on:

> Some of the lines of railway have been consolidated. The South-eastern Railway, the United Counties, and the Rutland system are all concentrated under one management.

Is that the case to-day? Are they consolidated under one management, and has the statement been carried out? I ask this for the sake of information, because I do not know whether that has been accomplished or not, but I have heard that it has not been accomplished and is not likely to be:

> It is manifest that a great trade must be carried on by that system of railways to Sorel if, instead of finding entrance to Montreal over the Victoria bridge, it can find a harbour at Sorel.

The object of my right hon. friend seems to be to prevent the trade from going to Montreal, and to send that trade, for some reason, to Sorel. No one would object to that if he could show that it was to the public interest that trade should be diverted from Montreal and sent to Sorel, but unless you can show that it is largely in the public interest, I do not see why we should undertake to spend a million dollars for that purpose. My right hon. friend continued:

> This will be the case not only with the trade in agricultural products, which is large, but with the trade of several thriving towns on those lines of railway, such as St. Johns, St. Hyacinthe and Iberville. But above all things it is an agricultural country, productive of all cereals except wheat, as well as butter, cheese and hay. I do not believe there is a more thriving population anywhere in Canada than in the valley of the Richelieu river.

We must remember also that this splendid agricultural region has excellent communication by railway with the city of Montreal, that Montreal is being equipped as a port and his facilities for shipping, then consider whether you can find in all that any legitimate reason for spending a million or even a quarter of a million dollars at Sorel. Would it not be better in the interests of the people in that locality to spend it in some other way? Can you not do more good to the people of that locality. Can you not spend a quarter of a million or even a million dollars to better advantage than by sending to Sorel the traffic which could just as well be handled at Montreal? The hon. gentleman continued:

> It is also connected with the Canada Atlantic, the Intercolonial and the South Shore Railways. Then, besides the counties I have mentioned, all the border counties of the St. Lawrence—Yamaska, Nicolet, Lotbinière—will be connected by railway with this harbour. When it has the facilities which it will have when this work is completed, it must have as a natural consequence a very large trade.

Then my right hon. friend refers to the fact that the province of Quebec up to this time has had only two harbours and that it is desirable that it should have more; he refers to the fact that the maritime provinces have several. I do not think we can deal with matters of that kind according to the number of harbours one province or another may have. The maritime provinces have natural harbours, not by the dozen, but by the hundred, yet no one in the maritime provinces pretends that it would be in the public interest to equip every one of these harbours so as to make them ports for export. I would like to know from my right hon. friend whether or not his expectation with respect to railway consolidation—and it was upon that that his scheme of two years ago was largely based—has been realized, or whether there is any reasonable prospect that that scheme will be carried into effect? Some reference has been made to these matters by some other hon. gentlemen who have spoken, but we would like to know the exact situation.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend it seems to me takes a very erroneous view of this question. First of all he said that this involved an expenditure of over one million dollars. I repudiate that statement altogether. There is no question here of spending one million dollars. The hon. member for East Toronto (Mr. Kemp) a moment ago read a report of the chief engineer, to the effect that to complete the works at Sorel as he indicated it would require an expenditure of $1,900,000, but if I correctly understood the report, as I think I did, this was simply a preliminary report, and he said that before committing himself the figures would have to be revised and reduced, and further examinations would have to be made. I do not know whether that has been done by the Public Works Department, but he said that would be necessary before a final report could be made. But all this is very remote from the subject, and it is not germane to it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think it is germane for this reason, that I distinctly heard my right hon. friend say only a few moments ago, what he had already said in 1901, that the object of this expenditure, in part at least, was to bring by means of the Canada Atlantic Railway, a considerable portion of the western trade in grain to the harbour of Sorel. Then looking at the estimate brought down to the House, I saw that an elevator was contemplated at an expenditure of $250,000, that crib-work and sheds necessary for the same purpose were to cost $430,000, and that in addition to that there was the expenditure which has already been entered upon. I do not see how you could accomplish what the right hon. gentleman has in view unless you would bring that expenditure up to about $1,000,000. If I am in error in making that deduction I shall, of course, be very glad to be corrected.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend from Chambly and Verchères (Mr. Geoffrion) gave an answer to my hon. friend (Mr. Borden); he said a moment ago that this harbour of Sorel would get local and ocean traffic, and so far I agree with him, but it is also reasonable that local traffic will have to be accommodated first, and perhaps it will be necessary to go on with this further expenditure later on. But the purpose of this vote is to complete a work which will cost $300,000. I cannot understand the object of this criticism in anticipation. Hon. gentlemen criticise these figures as if we were rushing into this expenditure before the trade was contemplated. Even if we were to rush into this expenditure, as has been hinted on the other side, I am not sure whether such action would not be justified and proper, although we do not propose to do so. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) stated that it would be very unwise to take such action, because this would be creating facilities before the traffic was created. My hon. friend should not forget that in order to create traffic it is sometimes sufficient to create facilities. Let me call his attention to a fact which has been mentioned on the floor of this House more than once, and which was brought out in the discussion on another matter. That is that the Canada Atlantic Railway was created for the purpose of anticipating traffic, and creating it; it was taken to the shore of Georgian bay where there was not even a hut of an Indian, in the anticipation that traffic would develop. If we should go into this expenditure now with the view of developing the traffic of the Canada Atlantic at Sorel, I do not know that we would be far wrong. However, we do not propose to do so at the present time, although we may think it advisable to do this very thing in the future, and if we do so, we will be prepared to meet criticism of our course. In the speech which I delivered upon this subject some two years ago, to which attention was called by the hon. leader of the opposition, I recalled the fact that in the early history of the colony, the valley of the Richelieu was the centre of communication for the province of Quebec between the east and the west, as the east and the west then existed, and enjoyed a trade greater than in recent times. But when railways were introduced, a good deal of the trade left that valley and went to Montreal. My hon. friend asked whether the communications with Montreal are not sufficient and whether there has been any complaint. There has been none, but while it is true that some forty years ago, when the era of railway construction was inaugurated in Canada, the Richelieu valley was left and the trade went in a direct line from Montreal southwards, since then there has been considerable railway development in the valley itself, and roads have been constructed all along the river from its source almost to its outlet in the St. Lawrence. Shall we be told that these railways are not to be furnished with the necessary terminal ? If my hon. friend takes this position, we differ with him and on that ground we will have to be judged by the masters of us all. It is true that the expectations we had of a consolidation of the different railways from Vermont through the Richelieu valley have not been realized, owing to the failure of the project of the Webb Syndicate, but no doubt that consolidation will take place at an early day. At all events, whether it takes place or not does not alter the importance of the position we take. These railways will go on doing their work, though not so successfully as though consolidated under one management. My hon. friend says that there are twenty-five harbours in the maritime provinces just as important as Sorel which are not developed and which have not received any railway facilities. That is very true, but railways are being built everywhere in the maritime provinces, and no doubt at an early day we will have to do there what we are now doing in the town of Sorel.

Mr. KEMP. The first objection of this expenditure was said to be the obtaining of facilities for local traffic at Sorel and later on to provide facilities for ocean steamers. Well, I am under the impression that ample facilities were already in existence at Sorel for the local traffic. I do not know what is the depth of water at the harbour there, but I have gone into that harbour on steamers and it appeared to me that its facilities were ample for the local traffic. We must therefore look at this question from the standpoint of creating an ocean port at Sorel. We are told that the Canada Atlantic Railway is to have a terminal there. We have not heard very much of this matter until this morning. If the government intend to provide an ocean port for the convenience of the Canada Atlantic Railway, we should have been informed of their intention at an earlier day. As the Canada Atlantic Railway has no terminal in Montreal, it may be the ambition of that railway to have an ocean port at Sorel. But we have a report of the engineer of the department in whch he says that to get eighteen feet of water at Sorel, will cost $935,000, including $250,000 for an elevator. Deduct the $250,000 for the elevator, and you have what it will cost to get eighteen feet of water. If it requires that amount in order to get eighteen feet of water, what are you going to get for an expenditure of only $300,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My chief engineer informs me that the depth of water is thirty feet now. I do not know where my hon. friend gets his eighteen feet depth.

Mr. KEMP. Does the Minister of Public Works say that we have thirty feet of water at the wharf and that the approaches to the wharf from the channel of the St. Lawrence are also thirty feet deep ?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is what I understand.

Mr. KEMP. There is no such informaton in the report.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The report to which my hon. friend refers is a provisional report, and not directly connected with the work as carried out, and I think it was to be subject to surveys to be made. This wharf has been built on a different plan and according to a different report. The engineer informs me that the contract provides for thirty feet of water, that the work is nearly completed, and that there is thirty feet of water now at the wharf.

Mr. KEMP. There were three reports. The one I read to the committee is the one I understand the engineer recommended as giving the most feasible way of doing the work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We are dealing with the one that has been carried out.

Mr. KEMP. Which one is that ? Does it include the cribwork and the sheds and the dredging ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will read again what the chief engineer says about it :

> This is a wharf which is being built parallel to the south shore of the St. Lawrence, opposite the town of Sorel, immediately below the mouth of the Richelieu. The structure consists of ballasting and crib-work 700 feet long, 20 feet wide at top, 40 feet at base, 46 feet deep, and stands in 30 feet depth at low water.

Mr. COCHRANE. The crib might be 30 feet and the water not.

Mr. KEMP. The papers in regard to this matter were asked for and were brought down. I understood that everything in connection with this work up to date was included in the papers laid on the Table. There was no report to the effect that this work, which was to have cost $935,000, would cost only $300,000. I looked over the papers carefully and could see nothing of that kind.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Do I understand that a part of this project is to have a 30-foot navigation up to the wharf ? If so, that is in direct contradiction of the statement of the hon. Minister of Public Works, when he brought this estimate in the first instance. He said :

> I had an investigation made, and the chief engineer reported that the expenditure would be a great deal higher than the amount voted. Then I contented myself with asking for tenders without awarding a contract before asking parliament for the money necessary. . . I may say that the lowest tender that I received is $225,000, which, with incidental expenses such as engineering, superintending, &c., will bring the cost up to about $265,000 in round numbers.

And then he goes on to say :

It is also necessary to dredge a pretty large area in order to give 30 feet of water so as to allow big ships drawing 30 feet of water to reach the wharf.

—Altogether independent of the contract.

Mr. KEMP. With regard to the observations made by my hon. friend from Chambly and Verchères (Mr. Geoffrion), I do not see the force of his argument as to these counties being tributary to Sorel rather than to Montreal. There are two of these counties that lie adjacent to Sorel and border on the St. Lawrence, but the others are farther to the south, and their southern portions are nearer to Montreal.

Mr. GEOFFRION. But they are separated from Montreal by the Richelieu and the St. Lawrence. It is more natural for them to come to Sorel down the river with the current, or even by the railways that come to Sorel.

Mr. KEMP. I quite understand that that argument would apply very strongly in the early days, when there were no railways. But all the produce is transported in these days by the railways. There are no boats of any account on the Richelieu carrying grain and——

Mr. GEOFFRION. My hon. friend (Mr. Kemp) is mistaken, there is a great deal of grain trade on the Richelieu river. All the produce comes by steamers on the Richelieu river through the canal—they are obliged to—and there is an immense amount of trade in butter, cheese, hay, grain and other things, coming to Sorel by the Richelieu river. If they go to Montreal, they have to come to Sorel and around the point to Montreal.

Mr. KEMP. I understand that those villages that lie on the river find it more convenient to send by boat. But that trade is limited. When you go back from the river a few miles, it is more convenient for the people to put their produce on the trains and let it go by the usual way of transport. That is the way the traffic goes in these counties. The natural thing is for it to go to Montreal, the port we have already made. I am sure that the railways will find it more to their advantage to carry it to Montreal and ship to Sorel. I have no desire to criticise this matter from a narrow standpoint. I have thought that too much money was being spent for the results which could be expected. We are told now for the first time that there is an idea of making the Canada Atlantic terminal at Sorel. But when this expenditure was at first proposed we were told that the New York Central would make its terminal there. Are we more certain that the Canada Atlantic will go to Sorel than we were that the New York Central would do so ? In any case, is it necessary that this money should be expended for this purpose ? The hon. leader of the opposition has spoken of twenty-five harbours in Nova Scotia which could be compared with Sorel. The hon. member for East Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) has referred to a harbour in his constituency, a very important one, and one that could be used with advantage for the trade of a considerable area of country, if it were improved so that steamers plying on the lakes could reach it conveniently. There is another harbour lying alongside a city in Ontario, with a population of 250,000 people, on which the government of this country has never spent a single cent. We have asked for improvements, and have protested time and again. The centre of population to which I refer is known by the name of Toronto, and to it an enormous amount of produce finds its way. It would be a benefit to a great area of country if we could get our harbour properly equipped. But we have never been able to impress this government with the idea that it should be equipped. Since the St. Lawrence canals have been deepened to 14 feet, it can be easily seen what an advantage it would be if the harbour of Toronto were improved——

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. But you will not give me time to attend to it. I am anxious to look into that matter and see what ought to be done.

Mr. KEMP. As the hon. minister wishes time, I will not extend my remarks if he will promise to provide proper facilities for Toronto. But, at the same time, I cannot withdraw anything I have said with regard to Sorel. I cannot see that the government's theory is correct in regard to this matter.

Mr. SPROULE. I wish to refer to some remarks of the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) in answer to what I said. I suggested that it was not the best way to build harbours first and then hunt for trade for them. The Prime Minister cited Parry harbour as an illustration of the truth of his colleague's contention—because it was the contention of an hon. gentleman behind him—that trade might be expected, and so it was wise to build this harbour. He said : There was no trade at Parry harbour, but the business foresight of Mr. Booth led him to build the railway, and afterwards the trade came. But there is no analogy between that case and this. Mr. Booth built for a trade already in existence. And, before building, he either had made, or knew he could make, commercial arrangement with men in the western states and the eastern states to supply his route with trade ; and it was to handle that trade that the railway was built. Then, in order to enable him to handle the trade, the harbour had to be built. Mr. Booth merely arranged to handle a trade that was already waiting. He established himself, as it were, upon a great artery of trade. But it is entirely different in this case. I speak from personal knowledge when I say that when we in our part of the country have asked the government for money to improve our harbours, the first question asked was as to the trade to be handled—what was the population of the town; what trade was waiting to be handled; what district was to be served? And if we suggested that we should have the harbour first and would look for trade afterwards, we were told that it was time enough to spend money on harbours when the trade was there waiting to be handled. This is true of all the ports on the Georgian bay, Collingwood, Parry Sound, Goderich, Kincardine and the others.

But here it seems to be for an entirely different purpose. First, you expend the money and make a harbour, and then you hunt up trade. I regard that principle as radically wrong. There is another feature wrong as well. This harbour must either be, as the item in the estimate says, a deep water harbour, that is an ocean port, or it must be for local purposes. Now, if it be for local purposes only it would not require to be arranged on the large lines that would be necessary if it were for ocean purposes, and the expenditure would not require to be as large as if it were meant for ocean purposes. But we are told that this was first intended for local purposes, and afterwards it can be developed for ocean purposes. While I admit that it would be necessary to provide for the needs of local traffic, I do not agree to the opinion that it would be wise to map out a scheme upon that principle if it were ever expected in the future to be an ocean port. It might be proper to construct it on an extensive plan if it were intended to accommodate ocean freight. Most of our local boats require only eighteen feet of water as their greatest depth, but that would not accommodate ocean going vessels. They want not less than twenty-five or thirty feet. But if you make your harbour eighteen feet for local needs, then you will have to change it almost entirely if you propose to provide for a depth of twenty-five or thirty feet. We found that to be the case in the Georgian bay. At first we only required fourteen or fifteen feet, but afterwards we required a greater depth. But when you come to dredge down to a greater depth it was found that the crib work had not been put down deep enough, the piling had to be torn out, you had not your docks, crib work and your other structures put down deep enough in the first place, and the consequence was that when you dredge down to a greater depth you undermined your own work. From a business standpoint it is important to decide at first whether you want your wharf for ocean purposes or for local purposes.

There is another thing that we cannot overlook. It is said that this trade goes to Montreal when the railway is built. But why should it go to Montreal? The trade belonging to that portion of the country ought to go eastward instead of going to Montreal. The trade of that country must ultimately find its outlet towards Europe, and we are shipping it back towards Montreal. Is it not a fact that a large percentage of the produce that is shipped, even from Nova Scotia and a part of New Brunswick, is first brought to Montreal, thence to be shipped to Liverpool? I am told by men who have been in business for years that trade practically travels first to Montreal and then goes to Liverpool; that people who sell their produce in those provinces find it advantageous to take that route, because there are greater conveniences for shipping at Montreal and a greater number of commercial men who are competing for the trade. When these roads were built they were useful to transport freight to the great emporium of Montreal. It may be that trade did not take the direction which we desired it to go, but that is because people did not find it to their advantage to send that trade by way of Montreal. Trade is taken to the larger centres with a greater population, where there is a larger number of shipping people to compete for trade, and therefore they pay larger prices. I complain that in the first place that was not intended to be a terminal of the Canada Atlantic Railway for the purposes of an ocean port to handle the trade going to Europe; I complain that the design was not mapped out for that purpose in the first instance. I say it was not wise to begin an expenditure of that amount, an expenditure which was going to reach to one or two million dollars, without having that information from the first, in order to lay out your design for that purpose. But to commence an expenditure upon the assumption that it would only involve an outlay of two or three hundred thousand dollars, and that it was necessary for local purposes, and then to say that it was only a beginning of an undertaking which was to be developed into an ocean port—I say that does not show the highest type of business intelligence. I think the government should always be ready to submit their plans and specifications to the House, with a report of an engineer, before they commence an expenditure.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As I have another matter which I would like to submit to the House after recess, I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again this day.

Some resolutions reported.

At one o'clock, House took recess.

House resumed at three o'clock.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR GENERAL—FURTHER SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) presented a message from His Excellency the Governor General.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER read the message as follows :

MINTO.

The Governor General transmits to the House of Commons, further supplementary estimates of sums required for the services of the Dominion for the year ending 30th June, 1904, and in accordance with the provisions of 'The British North America Act, 1867' the Governor General recommends these estimates to the House of Commons.

Government House,
Ottawa, October 1, 1903.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved that the message of His Excellency together with the estimates be referred to the Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

SUPPLY.

House again in Committee of Supply.

Sorel—deep water wharf, $37,600.

Mr. SPROULE. I would ask the hon. Minister of Public Works when the last report was made upon this harbour and by whom ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). The report I have is a quite recent one from the chief engineer of the department who informs me that the work is practically completed.

Mr. SPROULE. As I understand the situation, in the event of it being decided to provide an ocean port there, the plan would have to be mapped out upon some different scale for that purpose and the work commenced anew ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No new work will be undertaken without submitting to the House all particulars in connection with it and asking for the authority of parliament for such vote as may be necessary.

Mr. BROCK. The course of action which was marked out this morning by the right hon. leader of the government (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) was one suggesting most elaborate changes at Sorel. Sorel was to be made an ocean port. The Canada Atlantic Railway and other railways were to be taken down there and were to have their terminals at that place. I notice that the hon. Minister of Public Works is not as enthusiastic as his leader upon this matter and I was wondering if probably he could not bring his influence to bear upon his leader to have a little of the gush taken out of this particular scheme. We are waiting for the commission which has been appointed lately by the government to take into consideration the whole transportation scheme. We have the announcement that it is necessary to make Sorel an ocean port in order to develop the trade of the magnificent country tributary to that point. It is a magnificent country west and south of that place but you must remember that the total exports from this country are not more than ten per cent of the whole consumption and that the home consumption of places like Sherbrooke, Richmond, and the great city of Montreal actually takes the whole produce of the country with the exception of ten per cent, so that all but ten per cent of what the people of this district raise is consumed largely by the manufacturers of Sherbrooke, Richmond and Montreal. We cannot prevent the spending of money after it is already spent and money due for work done must be voted. The right hon. Prime Minister in justifying the expenditure said that a larger expenditure was likely to be gone into there because he spoke of this being an ocean port, mentioning that the Canada Atlantic Railway would likely be taken there. On that account he might say next year, as he has said this year : You are speaking too late. You should have spoken of this at its inception. Therefore, having received from the right hon. Prime Minister an idea of what it is proposed to do at Sorel we on this side of the House enter our protest against a great scheme of this kind being gone into as another great scheme has been gone into, off his own bat. We contend that if he will not take the members of his cabinet into his confidence he should at least take into his confidence the commission which has been appointed to look into this question.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No work will be undertaken for the extension of the improvements at Sorel without the matter being first submitted to parliament. We all hope that the development of the country may make it necessary to further improve that harbour, that the trade will demand it and I am sure that my hon. friend (Mr. Brock) would support any improvement necessitated by such an expansion of trade as readily as I would. In view of the discussions that take place in this House in regard to the various harbours on the lakes, and rivers of this country and upon the coasts it is desirable that a commission composed of practical men should inquire into these questions. While a commission might pay attention more particularly to the larger ports of the Dominion where trade would concentrate from the producers throughout the various sections of the Dominion, we must all remember that a great amount of trade is gathered from the smaller places and that we cannot afford to ignore any of these various places in any proper expenditure of money made with a view of encouraging trade. Because in the expenditure of money in former times at various places we have probably taken too optimistic a view as to the results which we believed would follow, we are not justified in coming to the conclusion that an improper expenditure has been made. This is not a political question at all, and it should not be regarded as such because mistakes may have been made in the past although the work was undertaken probably in good faith by all parties. I have thought in regard to a general scheme of transportation, that, if the matter were looked into and the best routes and ports picked out and if the report of the commission met with our approval, we would get greater value for the money and greater benefit for the people of the Dominion if we expended the money along the lines which had been determined upon. If we can get a commission which will go into the question and which will direct us in the way in which the expenditure will bring us the greatest benefits a great deal of good will be accomplished. As far as this particular item is concerned I think it is thoroughly understood that the work is practically completed and that this is the balance of the contract. This will complete the work as far as I know from the information which has been brought to my attention. However, that may be, no new work will be undertaken without all the necessary explanations being given and without it first being submitted to parliament.

Mr. BROCK. Would you make the same promise as to submitting it to the Transportation Commission ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. While nobody perhaps ever expected that the large question of railway development would be subject to or depend upon the report of the commission, I can easily see why, after having come to certain conclusions as to certain ports, either lake or river, which might be brought to the consideration of parliament and if the commission can show that the rate of transportation can be cheapened by the improvement of these ports, parliament would be perhaps justified in taking action. This certainly is one of the questions which the commission would be expected to look into.

Mr. BROCK. We are beginning to get a little light as to the reason it was so difficult to get competent gentlemen to serve on this Transportation Commission. Indeed, in view of what the Minister of Public Works has said, that they are merely to look into suggestions made by the government, I am surprised that the government got as good men as they did to take positions on that commission. I had thought that this commission would be a very good thing, and that the better the men on it, the better for the country, but it is difficult to get good men to act in a subservient capacity. I had hoped that they would be enabled to get the best expert evidence, and that they would be allowed to judge whether railways should be built, or whether harbours should be built, in the best interests of Canada ; but it now seems, according to the Minister of Public Works, that the commission is going to be of very little account. I had hoped that the government would be glad to get rid of such responsibility, which so often leads to a great deal of log-rolling. We had an example of that this morning, when we were told that if we voted against the item under discussion the public would understand why we voted against it. That is where this unfortunate petty politics comes in. I had hoped that the Transportation Commission would be able to submit recommendations to us as independent men, free from political bias and governmental influence ; but now it would appear that such is not to be the case. We have had this Transportation Commission launched, first by Order in Council, and then by the announcement in the speech from the Throne, but, after all, it is to be of little account. I am surprised, under the circumstances, that the government were able to get men of such high standing to tolerate, for one moment, occupying such a position.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Brock) has either misunderstood my statement or he has put an unwarranted interpretation upon my words. I did not say that this commission would only deal with what the government suggested, nor did I say that it would be in any way subservient. On the contrary, if the hon. gentleman will read the commission, he will find that they have the whole Dominion as a field, and that they can report without any regard to the wishes of the government or any member thereof. What I said was that no scheme recommended by the commission could be carried out until parliament voted the money for it. Surely the hon. gentleman (Mr. Brock) would not take from parliament the power to conduct the affairs of the country ? The Transportation Commissioners will have the greatest possible freedom and latitude in dealing with all matters within their jurisdiction throughout the Dominion. They are no more subservient to the government than they are to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Brock). If he has any recommendations to make to them, I am sure they would be just as much pleased to hear him as they would be to hear the views of the cabinet ministers. The only limitation on the commission to make inquiry and to take as long as they consider necessary in doing so, is the amount that parliament will place at their disposal for that purpose. The commissioners are independent politically and in every other way, and it is unfair for the hon. gentleman to make any statement to the contrary. I have always believed that nothing but good can result from this Transportation Commission, and I am sure that a great many members of the House concur in that view.

Intercolonial Railway—collection of revenue, $5,200,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is the general vote for the working of the Intercolonial Railway. In former years we have asked for an appropriation, which time proved to be considerably less than the service required, and we have had to ask for more in the supplementary estimates. We think that this present vote will, in all probability, cover the working expenses for the whole year; but of course that cannot be accurately determined until the accounts are made up. So far as we can judge, the present vote will cover all the expenses for the year. While there has been a very considerable increase from year to year in the working expenses of the Intercolonial, there has been also a very considerable increase in the business of the road. The gross earnings of the Intercolonial from 1895 until the present year were as follows:

1896	2,957,640 10
1897	2,866,000 00
1898	3,117,000 00
1899	3,738,000 00
1900	4,552,000 00
1901	4,972,000 00
1902	5,671,000 00
1903	6,324,000 00

The working expenses have correspondingly increased and last year the working expenses were $6,196,653.19 against gross earnings of $6,324,323.72. It will be seen, therefore, that in asking for an appropriation of six and one-half million dollars for the present year we are allowing for a very moderate increase in the business as compared with those of the year recently closed. If we may judge from the increase of business of recent years this sum will be required for the expenses and will be fully met by increased earnings.

Mr. SPROULE. You did not give the net earnings.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Last year, 1902-3, the net earnings were $127,670.53.

Mr. BARKER. I see no objection to this item being charged against revenue; my objection has been rather the other way, that the government have year after year, asked for too small an amount to be charged to revenue and have managed to get on by charging to capital what ought to have been included in this item. I have no doubt that the hon. gentleman will require the money for which he is asking provided he charges to revenue everything that ought to be charged to revenue. I observe that he is charging to capital in the estimates at page 42, $320,000 for rolling stock. Looking at the stock account in the last report, June, 1902, I think it is highly probable that every dollar of that $700,000 should be included in the item now under consideration. However, that may be, I think the hon. gentleman is doing right in increasing the amount of this vote for working expenses for the reason I have mentioned, that in the past the government have asked for too little, charging too little to this particular item in order that they may show a fictitious net earning.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I would ask the hon. minister if in this increased item for working expenses for next year he has included anything for the trackmen in case he decides to give them an increase. I understand that the trackmen on the Intercolonial have made an application for an increase, and in case he decides to grant their request is there sufficient in this vote to provide for that increase?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, these estimates were prepared rather on the basis of the present rates of pay, as respects the officials generally. But it is in a general estimate that if it is determined to increase the pay of any class of servants we would have ample authority under this vote to pay the men but it might necessitate our coming to parliament for a supplementary estimate at a later stage.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There is an increase of $1,000,000 over last year.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not over the working expenses of last year. The actual working expenses last year were $6,196,653; we had to take a supplementary estimate.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The object then is to include in this estimate the total amount, including what was in the supplementary estimates last year.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, if possible.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has business on the road developed to such an extent as to justify this?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, the earnings have increased very considerably. For the year 1902 they were $5,671,000 and for 1903, $6,324,000. The increase for that year was very considerable.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). May I be allowed to divert the discussion from this point to an item which was passed last night in my absence in reference to the vote of $83,600 for increased accommodation at Halifax? I have already pointed out, both in previous sessions and during this session, the desirability of acquiring certain property at Halifax, immediately south of the present passenger station. I do not wish to repeat what I have already said two or three times in the House, but I believe that if the Intercolonial is going to have the increased business which we expect, it will be necessary to acquire the properties from North street to Cornwallis street, fronting on Water street and extending westward to the rear of the lots on Lockman street. The property has deteriorated to some extent owing to the fact that a portion of Water street has already been taken up by the Intercolonial Railway. Claims for compensation on that account have been made by the property owners. These claims they attempted to enforce in the Exchequer Court, but unsuccessfully. I have always thought that although there was a legal defence to their claim under the statute of limitations, nevertheless they were claims that might very properly be taken into consideration by the Crown, notwithstanding that they are barred by the statute of limitations. Although I myself, acting as solicitor, had to raise that point I have felt that it was a point whch the Crown might very well waive. I do not know that there would be any legal claim ; the solicitors of these parties think there would be, and it is certainly an arguable question, outside the statute of limitations. These claims, which are regarded as a grievance by the people interested, could no doubt be adjusted on very easy terms if these properties were acquired by the Crown at a fair valuation ; in fact that would result in a settlement of that kind being made with these parties. It seems to me that unless the advice of the experienced officials of the department is absolutely against the view I entertain, it will be in the interest of this country to acquire these properties. If that is likely to be the case I think that measure should be taken to acquire them as early as possible. It will not be very expensive to acquire them, and their acquisition may lead to decreased expenditure elsewhere. I am not familiar with the details of the work at Halifax, but now and then we have items for blasting and filling in, and it seems to me that that work could be decreased if we acquired this property.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The estimates now before the House do not contemplate the acquisition of that property. The damage said to have been done to it by the extension of the railway down to deep water was done a long while ago, and the government of that day were not able to recognize any of the claims set up. I do not think that we can view the matter from the standpoint of any claim these people may have, but it might possibly be wise to acquire the land for railway purposes. We need some land at present, but for immediate necessity that property would not be suitable; and, even in its present depreciated condition, it would cost a very considerable sum. For these reasons we have not undertaken to acquire it. Still there is much force in the contention that as the property is close to the railway, it might be well to acquire it if we can do so at a fair and reasonable cost. But the difficulty is the moment the government try to buy a piece of ground, its value becomes very much enhanced. This property is not likely to be valuable for other purposes, and probably at no distant day it might be advisable for the railway authorities to purchase it, but it would only be purchased at a fair value, and not at the extravagant prices which property owners attach to their land as soon as they hear the government may require it. It is not wise therefore that we should bring down an appropriation, but if, as the result of negotiation, we find that the property can be obtained at anything like a fair and reasonable price, we might another session consider the advisability of buying it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would not ask anything more at this stage. I quite understand that high values are sometimes put on property under certain conditions, but of course the Crown always has a certain control by exercising the power of expropriation. I know what that leads to sometimes. We often find great differences in opinion among experts regarding values. In the case of one property, which was expropriated in Halifax some years ago, the value put upon it varied from $15,000 to $90,000, and there were about fifteen or twenty witnesses on each side. With regard to the claims for damages by the owners of this property, I have not very much to say. The Exchequer Court held that under the statute of limitations, the parties had no claim, and apart from that, there was a question whether the Crown had not a defence under certain legislation passed by the province of Nova Scotia. But while these people may not have a legal claim, their property was very much damaged in value by the fact of a railway running along the opposite side of the street. And in matters of that kind, where damages have resulted to the individuals, the Crown does not usually stand on its legal rights. Take, for instance, the sum paid Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann. They had certainly no legal right to compensation. They made a claim against the Crown on account of the failure of parliament to ratify a certain agreement. They had incurred certain expenses and took the risk of that agreement not being ratified, but nevertheless parliament thought it right that they should be recouped their expenses. Therefore, while these parties may or may not have a legal claim, still they have a moral claim, and I would be inclined to think that the Crown should take into consideration the question of giving them some reasonable compensation.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Why is there such an increase in this item ? I understand that this vote is not for the purpose of giving to the department the expenditure of anything for expropriations, where land may be needed, or for rolling stock, but only to make available for book-keeping purposes the amount of revenue likely to be received from the Intercolonial.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The two items of revenue and expenditure very nearly balance, and in that sense perhaps the hon. gentleman is correct, but as a matter of fact the one does not necessarily relate to the other. This is an expropriation for the expense of working the Intercolonial, and whether the revenue equals that or not, we still need it.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. It is limited entirely to that ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Entirely to working expenses.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Anything out of ordinary expenses, such as harbour improvements, cannot be paid out of this fund ? But the amount seems an abnormal one. Do you expect an increased business ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I see that there are resolutions brought down for the stores account, I should judge that that is merely a book-keeping vote also.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Quite correct.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Which is not intended to give to the stores management on the Intercolonial the right of purchasing locomotives or anything else but the intention is simply to balance the stores account.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Inasmuch as the stores on hand and the amount of the vote in the Bill are substantially the same, it may be treated as a mere book-keeping account ; but it fixes a limit within which the department may hold stores. On the other question, the hon. gentleman is right.

Mr. SPROULE. With regard to many items there is a difference of opinion as to whether they should be charged to capital account or to income. Has the minister directed his attention to the revision of the book-keeping in order to decide which items should be charged to one or to the other ? For, so long as there is no definite understanding, it is impossible to tell whether the road is growing better or worse. It seems to me it should be understood what items are to be charged to capital and what to running expenses. And, if that cannot be done under the present system, we should have a new system of book-keeping altogether.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have tried to look into the matter a little, not with a view to these estimates, which were prepared by my predecessor, but because of my own interest in the matter. I am inclined to think that in many of these charges there is room for differences of opinion as to the account in which it should appear. A good many years ago, I had occasion to seek the advice of an eminent railway man as to what a certain railway would earn, and he asked me how much I wanted it to earn. I admit that, in the accounts of any large undertaking there is always room for differences of opinion as to what should be charged to capital. There have been such differences of opinion between the late Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Blair) and hon. gentlemen opposite. But I think that, after all, the amounts involved are not so great as to materially affect the result. I can only say that, so far as I am concerned, I desire to see sound methods of book-keeping. But I may say frankly, that I am not so anxious as some parties to make a profit or showing a surplus. I do not see why we should insist on having a surplus out of the Intercolonial any more than out of any other public work. We should see that the money is wisely and fairly expended, and if we can make ends meet, and show a balance, that is satisfactory. But if there is not a balance on the right side, I do not admit that that necessarily shows that there is anything wrong. In the case of another class of great works we do not even raise the question whether there is to be a profit or a loss. I speak of the canals. We do not attempt to make the canals pay even working expenses—and never did. We are content to lose, if it can be called a loss, the interest on the investment. Of course, it is not a loss, because it helps on the business of the country. But, so far as immediate return is concerned, the canals not only do not pay a profit, but do not even pay working expenses ; and, this year, without a moment's hesitation, we have thrown off the canal tolls altogether, and so have cut off our revenue from canals. So, I would ask the hon. gentlemen on both sides not to be too anxious about making a profit out of the Intercolonial, or even showing a surplus over working expenses. If we can make it, we will do it ; but, if we expend the money wisely and faithfully and give the public the accommodation they require, the public gets the benefit just as in the case of a canal. I would not say this was a reason why we should be indifferent as to the balance. We should have a balance if we can. But, if, as a result of the operation of the road there is a balance on the wrong side, it is not reasonable to assume that the country is the loser.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. There is only one way by which we can be enabled to judge fairly of the work of the Intercolonial, and that is by following the course recommended by the late Alexander Mackenzie when Minister of Public Works, and often discussed since. Here is a road finished a number of years ago. Unless there is an addition to the road in the shape of a building or purchase of some other railway, or something of that kind the capital account should be closed entirely. An expenditure at Halifax or St. John for terminal facilities or any similar expenditure should not be charged to capital, but to ordinary expenditure. The reason why it is desirable to have the same system of bookkeeping by one Minister of Railways as by another is that only in this way can we make comparisons. The making of a comparison does not necessarily mean that fault is to be found with the expenditure. We are not finding fault with the expenditure. But there may be on that road a number of employees that are not necessary, there may be lavish expenditure upon the road itself which is not justifiable. The only way by which we can judge of that is to compare one management with the other; and, if this is to be done the capital account should be closed entirely, so that all expenditures will be charged to current account. If one Minister of Railways, anxious to balance his accounts or make a favourable showing, charges to capital items which his predecessor charged to current expenses, comparison of the two administrations is quite impossible. This adds to the temptation to make unjustifiable expenditure, for the minister who makes it knows that his account can be so doctored that he cannot be compared with his predecessor. A minister may run the road in an economical way, while affording the public every accommodation, and his predecessor may be lavish in his expenditure, yet, by having recourse to charging his expenditure to capital, he can make as favourable a showing on revenue account as the other. This temptation to lavish expenditure would be removed if the capital account were closed.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. So far as concerns my hon. friend's (Hon. Mr. (Haggart) remark that the purpose of a uniform system is that comparisons may be made, I think that is quite reasonable. But I think he goes too far when he advocates the closing of the capital account. He himself qualifies that by saying that in case of the building or acquiring of new railway there could be a charge to capital account. There have been considerable additions made to the Intercolonial since the construction of what may be called the original road. For instance, there was the St. Charles branch—that, the hon. gentleman will admit might properly be charged to capital. Then there was the short line—the so-called short line, for it did not prove to be very short. There was the Cape Breton extension. That is an addition to capital account. There was the Drummond County road, built to extend the Intercolonial to Montreal; and there are various other small branches and lines, additional sidings——

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. No, additional sidings should not be charged to capital.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Well, the items I have given, together with others that do not occur to me at the moment, are fairly chargeable to capital account of the Intercolonial, and fairly increase that capital account, though the road is sometimes referred to in the course of discussion as being the same property as was brought into existence by the original construction. Let me show my hon. friend that we could not possibly justify the closing of the capital account even without constructing a new road. It is known to all men of experience in railway matters that during the last ten years there has been a revolution in regard to railway construction. Railways which were equipped in a very light manner are now putting on heavy equipments. A road with 56-pound rails fifteen years ago is to-day putting on 90-pound rails, some are putting on even heavier rails. A locomotive a few years ago cost only a small sum, but to-day you are paying practically double the price for it, and you are getting double value. Without the addition of a single mile to the length of that road, you might find it necessary in the case of a road like the Intercolonial Railway to expend several millions in the way of betterments, something which any railway manager would consider as betterments, in the shape of heavier rails, in the shape of improved grades, in the shape of better rolling stock. In all these things railroad construction and operation have been revolutionized in the last ten years, and you would find it necessary to have a capital account from which to purchase these things, because no railroad could purchase them out of its revenue. If the capital account were to be closed, it would mean that there could be no advance with the times at all. My hon. friend presses the matter too far when he says that the capital account should be closed.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. It is for the very purposes that the hon. gentleman has mentioned that I wish the capital account to be closed. This is not my own idea alone, but it is the idea of the friends of the government when they were in opposition. I have heard Mr. Mackenzie state again and again in this House that the only remedy for the unsatisfactory state of affairs on the Intercolonial Railway, and the charges to capital account, was to close that account altogether. I differ with the Minister of Finance in that respect. On an ordinary road, if you take up a 56-pound rail and put on a 90-pound rail, the difference is charged to capital account. My opinion is that if it is necessary for a road to put on a 90-pound rail, it should be charged to the ordinary revenue of the road—it will earn more afterwards; but do not charge it to capital account. I know that railroads ordinarily proceed as the hon. Minister of Finance has stated, and I tried to adopt that system, which I thought was the correct one. I think now that when you change a locomotive from a lighter type to a heavier type, the difference should not be charged to capital account, and the same with rails. The only true remedy, and the Finance Minister ought to insist upon it, is to give no latitude of that kind to the department. If they want to improve the road let the bald statement be made to the public that there is a certain expenditure in excess of revenue, and let the company judge whether that is justifiable or not; but keep them strictly to this principle, that everything that is expended on the road, either for terminals, or for improvements in the way of better locomotives, better track and so forth, shall be charged to the ordinary revenue of the road. Then you will have a management better than any devices that you can imagine in arranging the accounts.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend is asking us to go a great deal further than, I am sure, his friends generally would ask us to go. The most that anybody could claim is that we should keep the capital account confined strictly to betterments of the road. Now, I think that the principle the hon. gentleman has laid down is one that practical railway men do not agree with. There are differences of opinion as to whether a given expenditure is a mere renewal or a betterment. I think it can be safely laid down as a principle that if you add something which increases the value of your road, and if you make two blades of grass to grow where only one grew before, if I may use that illustration, you have a betterment for your road, and you have value for it, and that is a proper addition to your capital account. My hon. friend says: Charge these larger locomotives and everything of that kind to the revenue account. But there is no revenue account to bear it, and there will be no such revenue account. Any railroad that has to provide all these things out of revenue would not get them at all. It would simply mean coming here and asking, on revenue account, for large sums of money which would not be fairly chargeable to revenue.

Mr. COCHRANE. What is the difference, so far as the country is concerned, since the country has to pay it ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, I can answer that. That is a rough-and-ready way of looking at it, and if that is the correct way, then you might as well say, What difference does it make anyhow whether you charge an item to capital or revenue since the country has to pay for it ?

Mr. COCHRANE. The country would know how to compare the management of the road under one minister with its management under another. Now we do not know what one minister charges to capital account and what another minister charges to revenue. I would like to ask the Finance Minister how an ordinary railway corporation would furnish the money, if they kept the account as he proposes. I may be wrong, but I am asking for information. For instance, if the hon. gentleman was managing the Grand Trunk Railway and he required betterments in the cars, in the weight of rails, &c., how would the Grand Trunk raise the money if they did not pay it out of revenue ? Would you have to issue new stock all the time ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Most certainly, that is exactly what any railway company would do. If it requires anything in the way of betterment, it must issue new stock. If the road is very prosperous and has the revenue to pay all its dividends and leave a handsome balance, it might use some portion of that for improvements. There is many a corporation which is making a good deal of money, but is only paying moderate dividends, because it applies its profits to improvements all the time. But no ordinary railway company can do that. Railway companies generally provide for betterments by the issue of capital stock. I think I can show my hon. friend that what would be done in the case of a great railway company is what we are willing to do in the case of the Intercolonial Railway.

Mr. SPROULE. I was not complaining that we could not understand whether the road was paying or not, nor was I complaining because the road is not paying. But it seems to me we ought to have some barometer to tell us whether the road is running behind, or whether it is managed in such a way as to make it a paying road. We ought to know whether there is business enough in that part of the country to make the road pay expenses. The minister says : Suppose you wanted betterments on that road, out of what account are you going to pay them, if you do not charge them to capital account How do we pay them now ? We vote the money here, and could we not do that with regard to betterments in the same way as we do with deficits ? It makes no difference. I agree with the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals. I have always thought, though not knowing much about the methods of keeping railway accounts, that that was the only solution of the situation, namely, to close your capital account. Then the country will know whether it is wise to run such a railway. I never imagined that the railway ought to be run so as to bring in a big revenue, I always understood it was constructed for the benefit of the country. The earnings of the railway, however, ought to be somewhere near enough to pay the running expenses, otherwise there is evidently no need for that railway. Now, if it does not pay running expenses, certain things are lacking, either the freight rates and the passenger rates are too low, or else the railway must be running through a portion of country where there is not sufficient trade, or it must be managed in such a way that other railways are taking trade away from it. On the other hand, the government ought to be able to make a comparison as between its management by different administrations. When you have the road badly managed it does not pay, when you have it well managed it does pay. The country requires to be able to make some comparison, and the object of keeping the books should be that a fair comparison may be made, that there may be some barometer to show how the road is running. I suggest that, but if any other means can be devised that would be better, it is most desirable that they should be adopted.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It certainly would not be a fair means of comparison if we were to undertake to charge all these things to revenue account, because they have not been charged to revenue account in the past. The points of difference between the classes of items charged to capital now and in former days are not very wide. The same classes of items were charged to capital account in former days as are charged now. It may be that in late years, owing to the increased business, the items have been larger, but that items of the same class have been charged to capital account in past years is beyond all question. Keeping accounts in the way suggested by my hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) would not be fair for the purposes of comparison, not fair as a means of keeping railway accounts. He perhaps knows that last session the Grand Trunk Railway Company received authority from us to issue a large amount of new stock, and that the Canadian Pacific Railway increased its stock by $20,000,000, although I do not think they added a mile of road to their system. They used that money in providing betterments and improvements upon the road. Certainly the greater part of it went into rolling stock. So that my hon. friend will see that he is asking us to adopt a system of keeping the accounts which would not be accepted by any great railway in the country.

Mr. SPROULE. That might be the case, and yet it might not be a proper course to adopt here. There has been a great deal of difference between the two sides of the House as to what should and what should not be charged to capital account. We have that contention up every year, and it is for the purpose of doing away with it that we should adopt a system that would enable us to make a fair comparison. The hon. Minister of Finance says that the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway have been obliged to issue new stock, the proceeds of which have been expended on betterments to the roads. That is true, but the roads are worth more money, and they have thus added to the value of their properties. If our property were made more valuable by a million dollars than it is it would be quite different, because you would have an asset to offset the expenditure. But, in regard to ordinary running expenses, taking betterments into account, we should be able to have these accounts kept in some more simple and understandable way than that in which they are now kept.

Mr. BROCK. I notice that the hon. Minister of Finance, in defending the present plan, states that the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway have been adding to their capital account. These railways would have a very poor show to get money upon the money market if they could not show that they were being operated at a profit. They must show a profit, and that being so, they are run much more carefully than a road which is being operated without any expectation, not only of making a profit, but of paying running expenses. I contend that this is a very vicious system. It may be excused by going to some localities and telling the people that: We are carrying our freight at rates at which we would otherwise be unable to carry it for. This is a most unbusinesslike thing for the government to do. We have been floating our bonds in the old country, and we have been representing that we are going to pay interest upon them. Just fancy going to the old country with a railway deal involving a hundred million dollars and say, taking into consideration the way in which the Intercolonial Railway has been managed, that the concern is not going to be able to pay interest on the capital invested in it. Although we are rich, and although the country is progressing, we cannot hope to keep it up for all time. We cannot have too many Pacific cables thrown upon this country when we have to pay $150,000 as our share of the loss yearly on working expenses in connection with the concern. Now, we are considering a railway out of which the hon. Minister of Finance tells us we should not expect to get anything. We are not getting anything out of our canals. There are no competing canals, and therefore we cannot tell what they might do. But I contend that after building a railway which is competing in many cases with other railways, it should be maintained on business principles, and the first business principle for any man who goes into any kind of business is to make a profit upon his investments. Otherwise, why go into business at all? Why not let private enterprise take hold of it? Yet the government have gone into a railway upon which they have expended $80,000,000, and the hon. Minister of Finance tells us that the intention was not to make a return upon it. If they had to raise that money to-day in England, and if they went before the financiers of England with the statement which has been made by the hon. Minister of Finance, that they were going into an expenditure of $80,000,000 out of which they did not expect to make the interest or the running expenses, what would the financiers of England say ? It is all very well, with an abounding revenue, to take that view of the question, but when a period of depression comes, as the hon. Minister of Finance told us three years ago that it would come, how are we going to stand in the money markets of England ? We have been paying off some of our four per cent debentures. Let us go to England to-morrow and try to raise $100,000,000, even if the loan had the endorsement of the government of Canada. The endorsement of the province of Ontario could not get money the other day at three and a-half per cent. If we could apply business principles to all the dealings of the government the better it would be, not only for the government, but for the country as a whole. The government are an example to the country, and if large corporations are going to go into business upon the same principle, that is to say, that they not only do not expect to get any return upon the money they have invested, but that they are not going to pay running expenses, it will prove to be a vicious principle in connection with the business of the country. I can understand that in exceptional circumstances, such as the building of a railway for military purposes, that you might not expect a return in money from that. That is, to a large extent, the position of the Intercolonial Railway, but we are going to parallel that railway by another railway, and we do not expect it to pay running expenses for years. Under these circumstances, I contend that the less we do of this kind of thing the better, and quite endorse the contention of the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Haggart) that the time should come soon when we should stop all further expenditure on capital account, particularly when we are getting no return upon it. I contend that is the plainest and the best way. A man does not require to be a bookkeeper to understand that if there is a capital account of $100,000,000 which is stationary it should not be added to, but the balance over and above that should be paid out of revenue or by vote here.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am afraid I cannot quite see the bearing of my hon. friend's argument, or what real connection it has with the question under discussion. I pointed out that the Canadian Pacific Railway had issued a large amount of stock for betterments on its road. The hon. gentleman's reply to that is that the Canadian Pacific Railway could not have issued that stock unless it could have shown that it was going to earn the profit upon it, and he says that no capital should be expended in a transaction of this kind unless you can show that it is going to make a profit. I beg to differ with my hon. friend there. This country would never have been built up on any such principle as he has enunciated. We have spent $83,000,000 upon our canals, and we never expect to get one dollar of return in the way of interest upon the money. Does my hon. friend say that it is wrong for us to carry on these canals unless we are going to have a book-keeping account and show every year that we are dragging money out of the canal traffic to pay for it ? I want to tell my hon. friend that this country was never built up that way.

Mr. BROCK. That is the way it was built up.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman insists that you must have profit in cash in the treasury, but the policy of the country has been to get the profit in the development of the business of the country. We do not expect that you should get the revenue into the treasury, because if the country prospers by the development of public works, the country reaps a rich reward ; and even though you get no profit on a particular railway or canal, if these are instruments for the development of the trade of the country, it is absurd to say they are unprofitable investments. All the same, I have not said that it is not desirable to get a fair return where you can, without oppressing the business of the country ; I have not said that we should not have any advantage out of the Intercolonial Railway ; I have not said that we should not have a balance on the right side ; but I do say, that I would apply to any public work the larger view, namely, let us see that it is honestly and faithfully and justly administered, and let us get a balance on the right side if we can, but if we fail, let us comfort ourselves with the thought that by means of that railway system or canal system, we are getting our profit in the development of the trade of the country.

Mr. SPROULE. It seems to me that there is no fair comparison between a railway and a canal.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Why ?

Mr. SPROULE. Because the canal is a water-way which every man who wishes to build a boat can take advantage of, whereas, a railway is given over to one individual or corporation and no others can take advantage of it. You do not give running rights to all other roads over the Intercolonial Railway and not charge them for the privilege, but our water-ways and our canals are open to all the world. The canals of Canada and the United States are as equally available to the people of one country as of the other. A railway is entirely different.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The Minister of Customs recently denied a statement made by my hon. friend (Mr. Osler). I say that the capital expenditure on the Intercolonial Railway is $68,645,852, or an increase of over four and a half millions on capital account last year. My hon. friend (Mr. Osler) made the statement that when the Intercolonial Railway was finished, according to Sir Sandford Fleming there was about $14,000,000 charged to capital account, and the Minister of Customs said he was wrong. Can the Minister of Railways, through his deputy minister, inform the House whether the amount expended on the old European and North American road, and the Halifax-Truro section is included in the capital account of the Intercolonial Railway ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The deputy minister says that it is included.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Are you certain of that ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I was not present when the discussion arose, but I am so advised by the deputy minister, who speaks from recollection.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. If that be the case, then I do not see how you can possibly balance your public accounts.

Rental to the Grand Trunk Railway, $112,000.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I thought this was a statutory payment.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Now, that the hon. gentleman mentions it, I think it is covered by the statute, but the practice has been to vote it.

Mr. SPROULE. We were informed on a previous occasion, that we would be given figures to enable us to ascertain whether the Drummond County Railway has enabled the Intercolonial Railway to pay better than it did before the extension to Montreal.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have no statement which will enable me to answer that question. Possibly that is a little like the man who advertises and who cannot just tell on what particular advertisement he has had his order ; although he knows that his business has increased generally. We know the business of the Intercolonial Railway has largely increased, and I am inclined to think that a very considerable portion of that increase is due to the extension to Montreal.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. There should be divisional accounts kept, and we ought to be enabled to make a comparison.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They do not separate the different divisions, but I suppose a general idea could be had as to which section of the road has the largest traffic. I do not think it is possible to give exact information.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Any railway manager would be able to give that information. He is able to take the different stations along the road, make allowances for through-traffic, and tell to a dollar the earnings on each division.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Haggart) never had such a system in his day.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. You can tell it from the present system of bookkeeping on the Intercolonial Railway.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The accounts are kept precisely the same now as in the time of my hon. friend.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I know that the accounts are kept in the same way, or nearly the same way, and I say that from those accounts you can tell the earnings of each division on the road.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It could be only an approximate statement.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. No, you can give it almost exactly.

Mr. SPROULE. We were assured over and over again by the ex-Minister of Railways, when he proposed to extend the Intercolonial to Montreal, that the future earnings of the road would show that the investment had been profitable. We desire to have this information now, in order to ascertain whether that statement was justified or not. Judging from the Canadian Pacific Railway report, this information ought to be easily ascertained. From that report we can ascertain the earnings and expenses, the profit or the loss on any portion of the road. If it can be done in the case of the Canadian Pacific Railway there should be no difficulty in doing it in the case of the Intercolonial.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I can see that it may be necessary to keep a separate account of the earnings and expenses of a leased line. All I can say with reference to the Intercolonial is that such statements have not been kept in the past and are not at present available.

Mr. WILSON. In view of the debate which took place at the time the Drummond County Railway was purchased by the government, and the predictions then made as to the great increase in traffic that would come to the Intercolonial, it was naturally expected on this side of the House that the government would keep a separate account for that railway and be able to verify the statements they made at that time by producing the accounts. That can be done and ought to be done and we are entitled to receive that information from the Minister of Railways and Canals at any time, but especially when he is getting his estimates through.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am afraid I cannot give it.

Mr. WILSON. If that account is kept distinct that the minister promises to bring it down another year as a matter of course, we will close up parliament and go home.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Slow to promise, sure to perform.

Mr. WILSON. I think we should have the promise.

Mr. BROCK. I am sure the Minister of Finance would be willing to do this if he realized how easy it is. Every station has a statement of the freight and passengers handled at it, and that information is easily accessible. It is a simple thing when you come to look into it and the minister might fairly promise to do this. It would be of interest to know what part of the road is profitable and what part is unprofitable. You could tell what the working expenses of each station are and the amount of freight handled at it, then you know the amount of through-freight that is shipped over the line and you can get the number of passengers who have bought tickets at each station and who arrived at each station. I think if the hon. Minister of Finance will think it over——

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will promise to think it over.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. We got a promise of this kind from the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals when we were voting the money for the purchase of the Drummond County Railway. The whole question was threshed out then and it was shown how easy it would be to keep an account of this and we had a promise that we would know whether the purchase of the Drummond County Railway proved profitable or not.

Mr. SPROULE. This is important to our side of the House because we venture statements on certain questions which only time can prove to be correct or incorrect. Our reputation is at stake and for the purpose of ascertaining whether our statements or those of the government have proved to be correct we should have that information. It is only a matter of a little book-keeping, because whether it is through-freight or local freight you know how many miles it has been hauled over the road and we also know exactly the passenger traffic that has taken place on it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Supposing you had fifty passengers from Halifax to Montreal under the present system, how could you tell how many of these you would have had if you had not secured the connection through to Montreal ?

Mr. SPROULE. You know how many miles it is from Halifax to Quebec and how many from Quebec to Montreal and you deduct the one from the other ; you know the number of passengers passing over the Drummoned County Railway; then you credit a part of the price of each ticket to the Drummond County Railway in proportion to the length of that line so it is an easy matter to keep the account. Supposing you are sending a quantity of freight ; it passes over the whole road or over a few miles of it, but you know the train mileage and you know the earning per train mile on that road.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend missed my point. Given the fifty passengers whom I have taken for illustration then you can make a division of the probable portion of their fares which should be credited to the different sections of the road, but how can you tell how many of these would have left Halifax for Montreal by the Intercolonial if you did not have any road to Montreal and they were able to go only as far as Quebec.

Mr. SPROULE. Surely that would be all to your benefit because the more traffic there is the more credit it is to you.

Mr. BARKER. I have no doubt it would be of interest and value to the country if the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fielding) would order, that for the next few years at all events, separate accounts should be kept for that division of the road. I quite admit that as the minister has said, it does not follow that although you know a particular section of your road has been worked at a loss you would have got as much traffic on your main line if you had not had that section of road. A railway company may have a feeder and although the feeder may itself be worked at a loss it may bring in profit to the main line. Apart from that question, it may be of very considerable benefit to the country to know exactly what such a line as you now have running into Montreal costs you as a portion of your main system. It would be valuable especially if the government were disposed on some other occasion to enter into a similar contract. I did not understand the minister to dispute that it is possible to keep such an account with accuracy, there cannot be any doubt upon that point, both as to earnings and expenses. We want no better evidence on that point than the clause inserted by the government for the protection of the country in the Bill which we passed through the House last night in which it is provided that separate and distinct accounts shall be kept of the earnings and expenses of the eastern section and the western section of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. It is possible to keep a distinct account of the earnings and expenses of the section of railway entering Montreal that has been the subject of discussion for the last half hour. There is no trouble about keeping the accounts ; the extra expense would not involve more than the salary of one clerk during the year. The value of the accounts will be very great indeed, and I think it would be well if the minister would order that they be kept during the next year or two so that the country may know whether the acquisition of that line has been a benefit of not. After we get the accounts it will open to the government to argue that although they may lose money on the particular section, that fact does not settle the whole question, because the road may be of value for other purposes than simply the revenue derived for traffic over that section.

Prince Edward Island Railway, $256,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We are asking an increased appropriation for the working expenses. The vote last year was $275,000. The $320,000 asked this year, of which one-fifth has already been voted, has some reference to the working of the new branch, the Murray Harbour Branch, but as the construction of that branch has been somewhat delayed, we shall not need so much for operating expenses as we are asking. I propose to reduce the item by $20,000. The earnings last year were $217,714.24 and the working expenses $259,637.82. While the Intercolonial proper shows a considerable balance, the Prince Edward Island Railway is operated at a loss, and I am afraid that for the present we shall have to anticipate the same result.

Mr. HACKETT. Is it the intention of the government to have a second train a day between Summerside and Tignish during the coming winter, as was instituted by the Minister of Railways last year and which proved of such great advantage to the people.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have not had before me any question of changing the general arrangements of the Prince Edward Island Railway. Whatever the present accommodation is will be continued; and if necessity be shown for anything more, we shall be glad to consider it. We do not in the estimates contemplate any change.

Mr. CARGILL. What is the length of the road ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. 210 miles besides 50 miles of the new branch.

Mr. CARGILL. Does the hon. minister think it prudent to construct a new railway to Moncton in the face of the results shown by the Intercolonial and the Prince Edward Island Railway ? What is the reason that it is not possible to derive a revenue from the Intercolonial, which traverses such a magnificent country as the provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and from the Prince Edward Island Railway which runs through what an hon. gentleman described last night as the garden of the Dominion ? We find private corporations investing hundreds of millions of dollars in railways and paying large dividends every year, and in every case the capital is very much watered. I have here the report of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The aggregate capital of that road is said to be $341,000,000. I do not know how much of that is water, but we know that the capital stock of $25,000,000 was originally issued and subscribed for at twenty-five cents on the dollar, so that out of that amount of $25,000,000, $18,750,000 is water. I do not know how much more of the $340,000,000 is water, but according to its report of 1903 the net revenue of that company gave five and nine-tenths per cent on its capital. If that be the case, there must be some extraordinary leakages on the Intercolonial which prevent its yielding any profit, and that shows the necessity of adopting some method of book-keeping which will show where those leaks take place. We ought to know what portions of the road are earning dividends and what are losing money. When a business man opens up a new branch he keeps a separate account for it. If he finds that it yields a profit, he keeps on working it ; but if not he gives it up. There are certain works on which the public money is expended in the interest of the people, in order to develop the resources of the country, and without any expectation of realizing a profit in cash. In this category are our canals, which are great national outlets for our commerce, and which could not be constructed by private enterprise. But the railways are in a different position. They may be constructed out of private capital, and the railway magnates become millionaires in a few years. I am satisfied that the promoters of the Canadian Pacific Railway have all become multi-millionaires. But what I fail to understand is why the government should not be in a position to secure the services of men just as competent as those who built the Canadian Pacific Railway. We are in a position to borrow money at a lower rate of interest. My idea would be for the government to build a road from Quebec, north of lake Winnipeg, thence through the prairie and the Rocky Mountains to Port Simpson. Such a proposition would have received my support. But this lengthening of the tail was what I seriously objected to, because I believe the present Intercolonial road is good for all the requirements of the section of the country through which it runs. And, with an expenditure of twenty-five per cent of the money which the government will spend in making the road from Quebec to Moncton, they could maintain a splendid harbour at Quebec which would enable them to do the business and would save the haul from Quebec to Moncton in the transportation of grain—if they ever hope to carry grain by that road.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I am afraid the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cargill) is wandering a little from the question——

Mr. CARGILL. I beg your pardon, Mr. Chairman. I had asked the permission of the committee, and I was just going on to——

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not object.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Of course, if the committee does not object.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cargill) is in order. He is discussing the Prince Edward Island Railway, and by way of comparison, to show what might be done under good management, he is quoting the example of some other roads.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I think it would be better to put it in this way—that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cargill) is not in order, but the committee will hear him.

Mr. CARGILL. I thank the committee and you, Mr. Chairman. In the calculations I have made I assume that the road will cost this country $100,000,000—that that amount will construct and equip the road. If the cost is more the figures will have to be revised accordingly. I have here a table which I have prepared, showing the cost to the country of this road at the end of 50 years. I assume that it will take five years to build the road, and that for ten years thereafter we shall receive no rent, as for seven years no rent is charged, and for three following years rent is charged at the rate of three per cent on the cost, but if not earned by the road it is added to the capital account, and on that total capital the Grand Trunk Pacific pays rent thereafter at 3 per cent. I have proceeded on the basis of the experience of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Though that road has not yet been in operation for 20 years it is paying interest or dividends on the capitalization of $320,000,000. I have estimated that, for the first five years, after the ten years the proposed road should pay 3 per cent interest, the next five years 4 per cent interest, and so on, adding 1 per cent every five years up to the end of the fifty year period. This does not mean that a larger amount would not be earned, but that, as the capital expendture would be reduced by the difference between the interest we would have to pay—3 per cent—and the returns of the road, the amount of the capital account would be progressively reduced. With this explanation, I submit the figures to which I have referred :

$100,000,000 at 3 per cent capitalized half yearly for fifteen years..	$156,308,000
Three per cent on $156,308,000—$4,689,240, for five years with interest..	25,093,811
	$131,214,189

$131,214,189 at 3 per cent for five years..	$152,279,316
Four per cent on 131,214,189—$5,248,568, for five years with interest..	28,086,977
	$124,192,339

$124,192,339 at 3 per cent, for five years	$144,130,178
Five per cent on $124,192,339—$6,209,617, for five years with interest..	33,229,896
	$110,900,282

$110,900,282 at 3 per cent, for five years..	$128,704,211
Six per cent on $110,900,282—$6,654,017, for five years with interest..	35,608,040
	$ 93,096,171

$93,096,171 at 3 per cent, for five years.	$108,041,830
Seven per cent on $93,096,171—$6,516,732, for five years with interest..	34,873,379
	$ 73,168,451

$73,168,451 at 3 per cent, for five years..	$ 84,914,914
Eight per cent on $73,168,451—$5,853,476, for five years with interest..	31,324,057
	$ 53,590,857

$53,590,857 at 3 per cent, for five years..	$ 62,194,333
Nine per cent on $53,590,857—$4,823,177—for five years with interest..	25,810,556
	$ 36,383,777

$36,383,777 at 3 per cent, for five years..	$ 42,224,829
Ten per cent on $36,383,777—$3,638,378, for five years with interest..	19,470,270

So, at the end of 50 years the country would own the road at a cost of $22,754,559, with an earning capacity of $19,470,270 per annum, figuring it out on the basis of the Canadian Pacific Railway. I do not put any water into this $100,000,000 of capital expenditure—it is all cash properly and legitimately expended. It will be observed that I have shown an increased rate of dividend. So I cannot see anything wrong with the proposition. If I were in the position of the government and going into the building of this railroad I would look around and find some such man as Van Horne and get him to direct the affair. Supposing that, at the end of the period, the government were to give a man like Van Horne 51 per cent of the stock, retaining 49 per cent, they would have a 7 or 8 per cent dividend on the balance of the money, so that the road would be a good source of revenue. I am very much obliged to the Finance Minister and to you, Mr. Chairman, for giving me permission to present these figures.

Now, I believe the acting Minister of Railways and Canals will see the propriety of adopting some system of book-keeping by which he will be enabled to know how the operations of the road are being carried on. As a business man in a small way, I could not get along if I did not know at the end of each month how my business is going. I have to know how much I owe and how I am going to pay it, and then I can go to bed and sleep at night. But if I did not know that, I would worry all night. Which reminds me of a story. There was a man who had given a note which was about due, and he had no visible means of paying it. He was very much worried over it, so much that he could not stay at home and face the trouble, but went away to a neighbouring town. He stopped at an hotel, but at night he could not sleep—turned and tossed in bed and at times got up and walked about his room and up and down the hall outside. The gentleman sleeping in the room alongside was prevented from sleeping by the other's restlessness, so he rose and asked the disturbed one what was the cause of the trouble. 'I don't know that its any of your business,' was the reply. 'Well,' said the good-natured neighbour, 'I thought perhaps I might be able to help you or afford you relief, so that you might get to bed and sleep.' Feeling that he had a sympathizing listener, the debtor said, 'I have a note coming due to-morrow, and I do not know where I am going to get the money to pay it.' 'Is that all,' said the other; 'well, you had better go to bed, and let the other fellow do the walking.'

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am afraid, Mr. Chairman, you will not be so indulgent with me as you have been with our respected friend, therefore, I shall not be able to follow him in these figures. I am glad, however, to have his endorsement of the policy of building a transcontinental road, at all events through the northern part of the provinces of Quebec and Ontario. The only fault he seems to find with us is that we go a little too far south; that is to say, that while this has been called a sub-Arctic scheme, he wants it to be an entirely Arctic scheme. But coming back to the Prince Edward Island Railway, my hon. friend asked for an explanation why we have a loss on that road. He gave us some information about the Canadian Pacific Railway, and he said there was a lot of water in that. Well, in the case of the Prince Edward Island Railway, there is a lot of water round it, and this is largely the explanation why the Prince Edward Island Railway can hardly be expected to be a profitable enterprise. A very large part of the traffic of Prince Edward Island is served by water communication. Still, a railway was necessary for the development of that portion of the country, and I do not think we can look forward at any time to finding it a very profitable undertaking. Many of the people live on the sea-shore, and their means of communication are by water.

Item, as amended, agreed to.

Cornwall canal, enlargement, $64,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This item is to pay for the cost of necessary works now under contract, protection to the north bank, installation of an electric system for operating the lock gates, new works, and repairs and enlargement, and regulating weir at lock 17.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Will the minister please give the name of the contractors to whom this money is to be paid, and the total cost of the electric light plant?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The contractor for the mechanism of the lock gates is M. P. Davis. Mr. J. J. Fallon is the contractor for some work on the wharf. I do not find the cost of the installation of the electric system separately. That is not for an electric light plant but it is for operating the lock gates, valves and workshops of the canal by electricity. The contract price is $35,496. That work is finished. There is an additional work of the same character going on by the same contractor. I will get the cost of the electric plant later, if the hon. gentleman wishes.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I understood the work on the Cornwall canal was completed some time ago. Will this finally complete the whole work on the canal?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, the work that is contemplated this year. The shops are not yet done, but the canal work proper has been done.

Mr REID (Grenville). A few years ago when these works were undertaken, and after they had been in progress for some time, the government decided that it was necessary to have a steamer to run from one end of the works to the other, that is from Cornwall to Prescott, through the Cornwall, Farran's Point, Rapide des Plats and Galops canals. That was for the superintending engineer, Mr. Rubidge, and when I asked for an explanation, some years ago, the answer was given that it was necessary for him to travel over these works. It cost $8,000 or $10,000 a year to keep that boat in operation, and now, although the works are practically completed, the boat is still employed. The boat is really idle as there is nothing for it to do. In fact, as I understand it, the only works that it would be necessary for the engineer to visit occasionally would be those in the north channel, which are being carried on by Mr. W. A. Cleveland, and I do not think that the engineer in charge, Mr. Rubidge, visits them very often. Now, there is an expenditure, I suppose, of from $7,000 to $10,000 per annum for the maintenance of that boat. I may say also at the same time that the position that Mr. Rubidge has held for so many years has been really abandoned, because of others being appointed to take charge of certain parts of the work. I want to ask the hon. acting Minister of Railways and Canals now, if, when the works are practically completed, this expenditure should not be done away with? I do not think it is further necessary. The hon.

acting minister will quite understand that we have another steamer in lieu of the 'Scout' that runs up and down the river, and that can readily do this work whenever necessary. I am not saying anything now in the way of fault finding with anything that has been done in the past, but it does seem a little unfair that this steamer should be allowed to lie at Cornwall practically all summer with a staff employed, and nothing to do. I would like to ask the hon. acting minister if it is intended to continue that condition of affairs? I quite understand that he is not fully cognizant of the whole situation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think perhaps the explanation of the boat not being so busily occupied is due to the fact that Mr. Rubidge has not been in good health. The 'Scout' has been transferred to the Marine and Fisheries Department and is being devoted to the lighting service. It will probably be necessary that there shall be a boat for the canal proper and it is very likely that the boat will be required for the superintendent after the work of construction is over and Mr. Rubidge no longer needs it.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Of course, as far as Mr. Rubidge is concerned, I can quite understand that he is not probably in good health. He is over eighty years of age, and I believe that he has arrived at an age when he is hardly fit for the position. I would suggest that he be retired even at his salary for the balance of his days. I am not saying anything against Mr. Rubidge but the hon. acting Minister of Railways and Canals states that the boat may be required by the superintendent. I can hardly see how that will work because I understand that there is a superintendent who has charge of the Cornwall canal only. Then there is a superintendent who has charge of the Williamsburg canal, so that it would be impossible to manage this boat in that way and there could not be any possible use in simply having this steamer running up and down the canal. If it were necessary to have a superintending engineer for works of construction it might be quite different, but, these works are all completed now and there is no actual necessity for the steamer. I would like to have the hon. acting Minister of Railways and Canals explain how the superintendent could use the steamer in that way. There are two superintendents now.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend has referred to the local officers. There is a general superintendent of the St. Lawrence canal system and if he is to continue his work and to examine the various canals he will probably need a boat for that purpose.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I would like to know who the general superintendent is. I never heard before that there was a general superintendent of canals.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I never had the pleasure of seeing him, but I am informed that his name is Stewart.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The hon. acting minister states that Mr. Stewart is the general superintendent. Mr. Stewart is in charge of the Williamsburg canal and there is another gentleman in charge of the Cornwall canal. I think his name is Lally. So that, there are two superintendents. Has Mr. Stewart charge of the Cornwall canal as well as charge of the Williamsburg canal?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am sorry, that, not having visited these canals myself, I am not as well informed as I would like to be in regard to them, but I am advised that Mr. Stewart's duties include the supervision of the Cornwall canal as well as of the Williamsburg canal.

Mr. REID (Grenville). That is news to me because there was a superintendent appointed for the Cornwall canal and he believes he is in the same position as Mr. Stewart. Is it the intention that Mr. Stewart is to have charge of this steamer for use on the Cornwall and other canals?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. For the present the steamer remains in charge of Mr. Rubidge. But, if anything should occur that Mr. Rubidge retires from the service and does not longer require the steamer we shall have to consider what shall be done. I would not like to make a definite statement to my hon. friend.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I can understand that the hon. acting minister is not thoroughly acquainted with the situation there. The people along the river have been making complaints for some little time about this steamer and I am satisfied it is not a necessity. I am, however, satisfied that if the matter were brought to the attention of the Minister of Railways and Canals, whoever may be in charge of the department, it will be looked into and perhaps remedied.

Farran's point canal—enlargement, $9,600.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is for work which has been done by the Canadian Construction Company for lowering the old canal bottom, repairing sills and pier and providing one pair of larger gates for old lock No. 22. The appropriation is $12,000, from which we have taken one-fifth.

Mr. REID (Grenville). This is to complete the contract?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. REID (Grenville). That is wound up?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Rapide Plat, $20,000.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Who is the contractor?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. One of the Gilberts.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is that at the upper entrance ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Upper entrance ; extension of south pier.

Galops canal, enlargement, $102,400.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This expenditure is for the Iroquois section, $17,268 ; the Cardinal section, $39,000 ; the upper entrance, $46,350 ; and $25,000 to meet possible claims ; making $127,618.

Mr. REID (Grenville). What was done with regard to the slide that took place on the Cardinal section ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The contractors, Wm. Davis and Sons, are making it good at their own cost.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Has the leakage on the bank between Iroquois and Cardinal been repaired ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That has been repaired by the government.

Mr. REID (Grenville). There has been quite an agitation at Cardinal to have the government install some kind of machinery to swing that bridge, which is now being done by hand. If you do not put in a plant you should have two men more there, so that the work can be done faster than at present. It would be a great convenience.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It certainly would be desirable if some better arrangement were made for the swinging. That matter is now under consideration.

North channel and dam, $64,000.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Since I spoke on this matter early in the session, I have been consulting prominent engineers, contractors and marine men with regard to the dam on the Galops rapids, I do not recede from the position I have always taken, that as the Galops channel was being built, it never would be of any use. However, I am informed that by building this dam it would bring the water west of the canal to its normal level, and that for this reason it will be a useful work. If this dam should succeed in stopping the currents in the rapids, then there is no question that the further work can be done much cheaper, and for that reason I am satisfied that the item should go through in this form. I trust that the minister will strike out the item which will necessarily follow this and defer it until it may be seen what the results of building the dam will be. This work has been going on since 1878, and the north channel, or what is known as Cleveland's work, is in first class condition, and is being used by the large steamers of the Wolvin fleet. The other work to which I have referred is not urgent, and I appeal to the minister to postpone it until next session, so that we may ascertain what the effect of the dam will be. If the government then should decide to go on with the work, it can be done much cheaper, and the people would not have the fault to find with it that they have now.

Surveys, lifting boulders, &c., $28,000.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Where is this work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Between Prescott and Coteau Landing. Except for some surveys made by our own officers, no part of the work has yet been done.

Mr. REID (Grenville). In former days the steamer 'Alert' was used for this work, and there is no better steamer on the river for that purpose. I think that the government might very well use the 'Alert' for the sweeping of the channel. No doubt she would come in very useful but she would be hardly adapted for the purpose mentioned by the acting minister. I quite understand that next year she can be employed very usefully in doing something of this kind and save the expense that would unquestionably be caused by employing another steamer. The hon. minister might use her for that purpose.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is one of the services in which the boat might usefully be employed.

Welland canal, to provide electric light plant, $44,000.

Mr. LANCASTER. Is this being done by contract and has the contract been let ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It will be done but the work is not yet commenced. We propose to take in this item $55,000 but we have asked in the supplementary estimates a further sum of $45,000, making the estimated cost of the whole undertaking $100,000 which we believe will furnish a complete electric light plant for the whole canal. This estimate is made on the report of an electrical engineer. We expect the work will be done by contract.

Mr. LANCASTER. Has the contract yet been let ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Mr. LANCASTER. Will it be completed in time for use this season ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am afraid it is too much to expect it for this season.

Mr. LANCASTER. It is not a kind of work that will take a great deal of time to install.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It would not take a very long time but it is hardly probable that it would be done this season. It will be done probably during the winter and will be ready in time for the opening of navigation next spring.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I would ask the hon. minister if there is any possibility of placing an electric light plant on the Iroquois and Cardinal section of the St. Lawrence canals at the present time. The Lachine canal, the Soulanges canal and the Cornwall canal all have electric light plants and I see by the supplementary estimates that the Farran's point canal is to have an acetylene gas plant installed on it, although I understand the electric light is best. When this is done the only canal which will have no lighting system at all will be this Iroquois and Cardinal section and I think that it is absolutely necessary, especially that at the head of the canal where the boats are coming in and out, that there should be good light.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No doubt the hon. gentleman is correct in the suggestion that an electric light system would be the better and I have no doubt that we will gradually introduce electric light on all the canals. In some instances we will be able to make arrangements with neighbouring towns having electric light plants to supply the light and in others we will have to establish our own plants, but the aim of the department is to have the electric light system generally employed upon the canals.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is it not a fact that when this plant is placed on the Welland canal, every canal will have an electric light plant from the Lachine to the Welland except the two I have mentioned ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The Welland canal is lighted by gas at present.

Mr. REID (Grenville). When this is done will not every canal have electric light except this one stretch to which I have referred ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am told that the Rapide Plat and Galops canal have no electric light. Of course the Iroquois and Galops are interchangeable terms. The Farran's point canal is being lighted by gas. The Rapide Plat has no electric light. However, there is no doubt that the electric light system is very useful and that it will be applied generally.

Mr. REID (Grenville). These two stretches which are on the Morrisburg section are the only two not lighted by electricity. There are electric light plants in each place, the electric light system could be installed at very little cost and there is no doubt that it would be of great benefit to the maritime men. It could be done quite easily and it would complete the whole system.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will have to consider it.

Mr. LANCASTER. Is it the intention of the government to purchase the electrical energy necessary for the lighting of the Welland canal from one of the several electric light producers in the neighbourhood ? Is it the intention of the government to produce its own electricity or to purchase or lease from one of the companies that are in the locality ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This estimate is for the plant, but it contemplates obtaining the power to supply that plant from one of the companies in the vicinity.

Mr. LANCASTER. The contract has not been let to anyone ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Mr. LANCASTER. Nor have tenders been called for ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, nothing has been done.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is the lighting of all these canals done by contract, that is the installation of the plant ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think it has been done by tender and contract generally.

Mr. REID (Grenville). What is the cost per annum of lighting the Coteau, Lachine and Cornwall canals ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will get that statement for the hon. gentleman; I have not it at hand. I will try at a later stage during the consideration of the supplementary estimates to furnish the information.

To remove obstruction and make other improvements, $173,600.

Mr. LANCASTER. What obstruction is this ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is to deepen the rock cut at Ramy's point, the only shallow rock cutting left in the canal, which is the cause of considerable trouble in times of low water.

Mr. LANCASTER. Is it expected that that will cost $217,000 ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is to cost only $5,000. In addition to that there are the votes.

To remove the centre pier of three bridges on the long level and to rebuild the bridges at Welland, Quaker and Port Robinson, estimated cost, $130,000.

To build new weir at Allanburg, estimated cost, $10,000.

Spillway old lock No. 2, $2,000.

This makes the total estimate of $217,000.

Improvements, Port Colborne entrance, $240,000.

Mr. REID (Grenville). What depth of water will there be when this is done ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Sixteen feet.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Does that include the building of an elevator at Port Colborne ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, we are asking an estimate in the supplementaries to build elevator foundations on the two piers with a view to making some arrangement at once with some of the transportation companies for the erection of elevators. We propose to put in the foundations immediately, that is to ask the appropriation at once.

Mr. LANCASTER. Will this complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This will not finish it.

Mr. LANCASTER. How much is it going to cost ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The total cost of the improvements at the entrance of Port Colborne is fixed at $1,067,856. It would take another year to finish them.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Does the government intend deepening and enlarging the Welland canal ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is work for the deepening of the canal at several places where it was found the water was becoming low.

Mr. LANCASTER. There is no intention to make it permanently deeper, generally speaking ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not generally.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Has the hon. minister any statement showing whether there has been any increase of the tonnage through the Welland canal on account of taking off the canal tolls ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have not particular figures, but there has been a considerable increase in the canals generally.

To deepen portion of summit level between Port Colborne and Thorold, $40,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That deepening already done has proved of great benefit. It will have to be continued until the very shallow portions are deepened. This work is necessitated by the fluctuations in the level of Lake Erie, and is intended to provide 14 feet navigation at all stages of low water.

Lachine canal—enlargement and improvements, pontoon gates, $116,800; slope walls, $17,600.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Who has the contract ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It has not been let, but will be by public tender.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Does this dry-dock at Montreal come under the Railway Department ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. REID (Grenville). What rental does the government get ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is under lease, and I will bring down a statement.

Lake St. Louis—Hydrographic survey, sweeping channel, removing boulders,)c., $6,280.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Has this work been transferred to the Marine Department ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The lighting has been. The Railway Department still has the hydrographic survey.

Sault Ste. Marie canal—construction, $75,200.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is for extending the lower entrance and deepening it, and also deepening and widening the upper entrance.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Does that complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Rideau canal—to rebuild swing bridge across the upper lock at Hog's Back (steel span), $2,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There was an old wooden bridge there, over twenty years old which requires to be rebuilt.

Mr. CLANCY. What is the total cost for rebuilding it ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Two thousand five hundred dollars will complete the whole work.

Welland canal—stone protection to banks of old canal, $4,000.

Mr. LANCASTER. I would ask the hon. minister if he would give consideration to the principle on which the government are to lease the water-powers of the old Welland canal? The old canal is not used for navigation. But there is a lot of valuable water-power on that canal, some of which is leased to manufacturers, and more may be leased in future. I think it would be in the interest of the country if the government had some stated scale of prices, so that those intending to go into the business of manufacturing and in a position to use this water-power, might be able to calculate on a certain scale of expenditure for power. If this canal were in the hands of a private corporation, of course it would be managed in that way. As matters are managed by the government in regard to this canal, those who think of locating on the canal are not able to know exactly what they will be called upon to pay. I do not wish to take up time discussing the point, but I would urge upon the minister to look into this matter. Or if he has looked into it and can tell me now what the policy of the government is in regard to it, I would be glad to have him explain.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not know whether it will be found expedient to have a fixed scale. Certainly, there is none now. Still, no doubt, the matter is worthy of consideration. We are receiving better rates for water-power now than we did some years ago, but fixed rates might not be advantageous under the varying conditions. For example, we are generally disposed to give power to municipalities for their own purposes on more generous terms than those on which we give it to private parties. The mattter will receive consideration.

Welland canal—to change valves and hanging gear of new lock gates, $12,000.

Mr. LANCASTER. What changes are these ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This expenditure is to change the Townsend valve, which never was satisfactory, as it is complicated and frequently out of repair and slow to operate. It is to be replaced with the Butterfly valve. The $15,000 asked for will complete the work.

Mr. LANCASTER. Is it proposed to make the change all through the canal ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Welland canal—to survey and delimit government lands along the canal, $1,600.

Mr. LANCASTER. This is a small item; still, I would like some explanation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The canal boundaries along the old and new canals are very indefinite in many cases and require re-marking. A complete plan of the canal is needed to show the government's property and leaseholds.

Mr. LANCASTER. I do not understand in what way the boundaries are indefinite. I never heard that we had any difficulty in ascertaining which was private property or the boundaries between the lands of private owners. I thought the lines were pretty well ascertained. They are magnetic bearings, and that ought to be sufficient.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a considerable quantity of land under leasehold, and it is deemed desirable by the officials of the department that the boundaries may be marked with stone monuments, as in the case of the Lachine canal.

Welland canal—to improve drainage along feeder, $1,200.

Mr. LANCASTER. Does the hon. minister know what part of the feeder this is ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This amount is required for cleaning and improving back ditches in order that land may be properly drained, and so avoid complaints of land owners with regard to drainage of their lands.

Lachine canal—to renew masonry wall basin No. 2, $5,600.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is to renew and rebuild the old locks 1 and 2, Montreal. They are falling into decay.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I see a lot of work going on there. Will this expenditure complete it ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes. The work has been going on for some time.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Who are the contractors ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Coulson, Quinlan & Robertson.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Was this let by tender ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Chambly canal—electric station by-wash, Ste. Thérèse, $4,800.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is a by-wash ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This sum is to be used to provide for rebuilding by-wash at Ste. Thérèse and at electric power station for lighting the canal and furnishing power for the work shop. It is estimated for each by-wash, $3,000. The work will be done in concrete.

Mr. LANCASTER. What is a by-wash ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I heard the question asked before, but I was doing my best to dodge it by pretending that I did not hear. But my hon. friend (Mr. Lancaster) compels me to admit that I do not know what a by-wash is. The chief engineer tells me that it is something to let the water out.

Mr. LANCASTER. How does it work.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am sorry that I must acknowledge ignorance.

Mr. LANCASTER. Well, I am in the same position.

Chambly canal—macadamizing tow path, $6,000.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Will the minister macadamize the tow-path on the Iroquois and Galops section of the canal ? This canal has been built, and it is all clay.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is a highway, this is a regular traffic road.

Mr. CLANCY. In that case, it is being done for the municipality.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is claimed we have spoiled the road and we must make it good.

Mr. CLANCY. Spoiled the road by using this tow-path. There are no wheels going over it by reason of its being a tow-path.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is a general public highway.

Mr. CLANCY. The minister said the road was spoiled by reason of our using it as a tow-path. Is that by reason of hauling heavy loads over it in vehicles ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The chief engineer informs me that we used their highway, and we are practically replacing it in this way.

Mr. CLANCY. I understood the hon. gentleman to say a moment ago that we had spoiled the road and this was done to repair it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We spoiled it by taking possession of their road, and we are now giving them this one.

Mr. CLANCY. This is not the same road, then ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We are allowing them to use our tow-path as their highway, inasmuch as we took possession of their road.

Mr. CLANCY. Does the municipality contribute anything towards this work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No. The department thought that inasmuch as we had taken possession of their highway we should give them a substitute therefor. We give them the right to use the tow-path, and we macadamize it for them.

Mr. CLANCY. Was it used in common before ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It was used as a highway until we damaged it or destroyed it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not quite understand how it was that we took possession of and destroyed their own road.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The damage to the road took place years ago, when the department used a portion of it. That was macadamized before, and we are now adding to the macadamized portion. That is the explanation of the department. It is not so clear as I would like it myself.

Mr. LANCASTER. How many miles of this road are macadamized ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Three miles, at $2,500 per mile.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Of course it may be all right, but I think we ought to have a little more information about it. We ought to know why so many years have elapsed without doing this. It is perfectly plain, I should think, that if you took a highway belonging to the municipality you should either put it back in the same condition, or give them another one. But I do not see that there is any obligation on the government to keep it macadamized. We have discharged our duty by giving the municipality another road in the same condition.

Mr. REID (Grenville). We had a case in Cardinal where the government took the whole road, by the route of the canal, and it was absolutely necessary to make a new road. In that case it was macadamized.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The information is not as complete as I would like to have it, and I will let the item stand.

Item allowed to stand.

At six o'clock, Committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Chambly canal—land damages, $400.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This item is not correctly expressed. It is not actually for land damages, but for a wall to prevent land damages. I therefore beg to move :

That the words 'land damages' be struck out and that the words 'wall to prevent land damages' be substituted in lieu thereof.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Who owns the land ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I cannot tell the hon. gentleman.

Mr. REID (Grenville). It is understood that the item just before that one shall be allowed to stand ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. MONK. Is this to begin a wall or to cover the whole work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. To cover the whole work.

St. Ours lock—stop logs, $800.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is to renew the stop logs which are at present decayed.

Landing wharfs, $1,280.

Mr. REID (Grenville). What is the cost of the landing wharfs ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The item for landing wharfs amounts to $1,600. It is proposed to replace the present wooden wharfs with concrete piers and iron and wooden superstructures, which will make it a permanent work.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Are these wharfs owned by the government ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. FOWLER. Is that the total cost ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. When these estimates were prepared, some time ago, only a small appropriation was asked for this work, but since then it has been represented that we will have to engage in a much larger amount of work. It is almost a pity that this item is taken at all, because we will have to ask for a further amount. I see that there is an appropriation in the supplementary estimates for $4,400, which will have to be added to this. The figures I have in regard to the item are not satisfactory, and I will have to ask it to stand.

Mr. MONK. I am not aware that there is any wharf at St. Ours excepting the wharf of the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company. There is no government wharf at that point. If it is contemplated to build a new wharf there, when the item comes up, will the hon. minister have a little more information as to where that wharf is to be ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes. It is represented here to be a government wharf.

Mr. MONK. I do not think there is a government wharf there.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will let the item stand.

Item allowed to stand.

Carillon and Grenville canal, $18,400.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is to construct a guide pier at the entrance of the canal and to renew the wharf at Grenville. The wharf or pier has been built twenty-one years, and the part above water is urgently in need of being renewed. It is proposed to substitute concrete for cribwork. The estimate is $23,200, and we are asking in this vote for $23,000.

Mr. BROCK. In spending this $23,000 I hope the minister is keeping in mind, that before very long we will have the Ottawa ship canal built, and that this lock should be made of a capacity to suit that canal. This wooden pier having lasted for twenty years; I suppose this new one will last for one hundred years, so the government ought to take into consideration that in five or six years perhaps, it may have to be utilized for the Georgian bay canal. Will the minister put that consideration before the transportation commission ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The commission will have a free hand.

Mr. BROCK. If you build these walls and spend money, the commission will not have a free hand except to tear them down again.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is this a new work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is an old work which is being reconstructed.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Will it be let by public tender ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is under contract now to Messrs. Martineau and Lemoine. It was let by tender and the lowest was accepted.

Mr. REID (Grenville). When was the work commenced ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It began last year.

Mr. REID (Grenville). This is the first vote.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, there was an appropriation of $10,000 last year.

Mr. REID (Grenville). That is not shown in the estimates, and there do not seem to be any details regarding it in the Auditor General's Report.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is evidently a printer's error in the estimates. The actual expenditure last year was $9,776.53.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is this contract given for a lump sum ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The contract is for the whole work on schedule prices. The total estimate for the work was $60,000. I should have said that the work commenced in 1901, and that it has been going on since that time.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Then it should be referred to in the Auditor General's Report.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It ought. There was an expenditure in the year ending June 1902, of $16,998.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Why should a comparatively small work like this take five or six years to complete ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As a matter of fact it is only two years under construction, but a good part of the work can only be done when the water is out of the canal in the spring.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Could it not be done in winter ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. You cannot do concrete work in the winter very successfully. I admit that it is a good deal of time for a small work.

Mr. REID (Grenville). It certainly is.

Miscellaneous—miscellaneous works not provided for, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. These items are the usual votes.

Salaries of engineers, draftsmen, extra clerks and messengers, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $23,200.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This difference is accounted for by several increases given to various persons.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I understood that all of these engineers, draftsmen and clerks were paid out of the appropriation for any special work. For instance that the engineers and draftsmen on a canal or a particular piece of railway were paid out of the estimate for that particular work.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. These are officers on the headquarters staff, and that does not apply to them.

Mr. REID (Grenville). That is in Ottawa?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. REID (Grenville). And they do not come under any other vote, do they ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Cost of litigation in connection with railways and canals, $4,800.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. These are costs which are incurred by the department in disputes which may arise in any part of the country which are taxed by the Justice Department, and then charged against the Department of Railways and Canals.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I would like to make an appeal to the acting Minister of Railways and to the Minister of Justice on behalf of a gentleman, a clergyman, residing in the village of Cardinal, who had a claim against the government for damages to his property. The case was tried in the Exchequer Court, and judgment for, I think, $1,200 was given in his favour. I understand the government are disputing his case in the Supreme Court. The appeal to the Supreme Court is, in the opinion of a great many people, very very hard, as the gentleman is not a man of means. I would like to appeal to the hon. minister to try to see his way clear to accept the decision of the Exchequer Court and to pay this man the amount awarded to him. Could not the minister let this matter pass and give this gentleman the amount to which he is honourably entitled ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. If this were an isolated case, I think the appeal of my hon. friend (Mr. Reid) should be entertained. Unfortunately the case in question was a test case, and on the judgment rendered in that case a great many other claims depend. The difficulty with respect to the particular case which my hon. friend has put to the Minister of Finance is that if we were to acquiesce in the judgment in this case the government would find itself condemned to pay a very large amount as the result of other claims which have not yet been disposed of. As the result of representations made by my hon. friend, I think it will be found that the case will not be tried at the present sitting of the Supreme Court, and some effort may be made in the direction of settling the other claims before this matter is allowed to go any further. That I think is the object which my hon. friend has in view.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I understood from this gentleman's solicitor that this case might be settled without prejudicing the other cases to which reference has been made.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. That statement was made by the solicitor of the reverend gentleman, but after considering the matter thoroughly I concluded that the interests of the government would be to some extent jeopardized by settling this claim, however, as I said a moment ago in consequence of representations made by my hon. friend, the matter is being inquired into further, and an effort is being made to arrive at some settlement.

Mr. LANCASTER. I am frequently asked by the electorate to explain on what principle these law costs are paid, and I would like to know from either the Minister of Finance or the Minister of Justice if they can tell me in what way this money is expended. Of course, I can tell at a glance that the amount being only $6,000, this cannot be more than the amount paid for the services of outside lawyers, and I therefore ask in what way business is given by the department to outside lawyers. I suppose that most of this money goes in counsel and solicitors' fees, and as it is a small amount in comparison to the amount of litigation every year, it is evident that some work must be done in the Railway Department and in the Department of Justice, where we know they have able lawyers engaged. As the electors frequently ask me and as I am unable to state on what principle the government act in having this business done by solicitors who are not permanent employees of the department, I would be glad if one of the ministers would give me as much information as possible on the subject.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Of course there is a law branch in the Railway Department, but in all matters of great importance we consult the Department of Justice. A good deal of the money is paid outside of Ottawa where it is necessary to obtain legal services. For instance very recently we had to send a representative over to the state of New York to interest himself in a very important matter with regard to the Galops dam, a part of which rests upon American territory. Occasions of that kind sometimes arise.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I see that you employed as a medical man, Dr. T. C. Gaboury, to act as attorney in re Lafleur et al.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. That was a case of land damages, and Dr. Gaboury, who lives in the locality, was employed specially to go about and settle claims so as to avoid lawsuits. He was not employed as attorney at law but as agent, with power of attorney to act for the government.

Mr. BENNETT. In a certain case of Stewart against the King, over $2,000 were paid Blake, Lash & Cassells for fees. Were they acting for the government ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes, this was an unfortunate case which arose out of Stewarts quarry on the Soulanges canal. It went to the Exchequer and the Supreme Courts and we succeeded in getting the claim reduced by a very large amount.

Mr. BENNETT. Was the Deputy Minister of Justice associated with Mr. Blake ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No, not in that case. A conflict had arisen between himself and Mr. Stewart, and it was alleged at one time that Mr. Newcombe had shown personal hostility to Mr. Stewart, and we thought it was well to allow the matter to remain in the hands of a third party.

Mr. BENNETT. Did the Solicitor General act ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No, none of the officials of the department.

Mr. BENNETT. Was there a junior counsel ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes, a man named Lawlor, who was connected with the case at the locality where the work was done.

Mr. BENNETT. He drew $1,500 in connection with this case. $3,500 were paid out in law fees by the department in this matter although we have the Minister of Justice, the Deputy Minister of Justice, and the Solicitor General, and one of the pledges made by the hon. gentlemen when in opposition was that the law costs would be very much reduced. Are they decreasing or increasing ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The business of the country in litigation, as in other respects, has increased very considerably, but with respect to law costs there has been a gratifying decrease. When I was Solicitor General, I appeared in almost every case for the Crown, which I could attend to personally, and my friend the deputy minister has appeared to such an extent that it is a grievance to the bar at large that he is employed too frequently. As far as I am personally concerned, it is looked upon as improper for me to go to court, although my desire is to appear as frequently as possible.

Mr. MONK. Is this six thousand dollars more than the amount paid last year for law costs ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have not the figures paid last year. But the preceding year the expenditure was close upon the $6,000. This has been the annual vote for several years.

Mr. MONK. Before 1896, one of the great grievances in the province of Quebec was that there was the amount of money spent on law costs despite the fact that we had a perfectly organized Department of Justice. I recognize the propriety of what the Minister of Justice has said with regard to his not appearing in every case in which the Crown is concerned, but it seems to me that that reason existed before 1896 as well as to-day. Very far from decreasing, the amount we expend in law costs has increased considerably. Last year over $87,000 were paid to legal gentlemen, and I notice that friends of the government were employed exclusively. Whether it be that they are better versed in the law than Conservatives I cannot say, but out of that $87,000 only $5 were paid to a Conservative, a lawyer in Montreal. I shall not go as far as my hon. friends opposite did in 1896, when they utterly condemned the late government because it spent a much smaller amount under this head, but $87,000 paid out in law costs during the year appears to be a very large amount, and we are justified in asking if this $6,000 is over and above the $87,000.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. It is part of the $87,000.

Mr. MONK. I do not think so. I think that $6,000 is over and above the $87,000 paid last year, and I have no doubt the amount will be considerably increased this year. In that connection I would ask the minister to give us the names of the parties to whom this $6,000 was paid last year.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. My hon. friend (Mr. Monk) must not be alarmed at the magnitude of the costs last year, for, after all, $87,000 is but a small sum compared with the $116,000 paid in 1896.

Mr. MONK. Not as much as that.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Just as much as that.

Mr. MONK. I contradict my hon. friend.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. And in 1897 the sum was still larger, because we had to clean up the old accounts. If my hon. friend will bring this up on the supplementary estimates, I will give him the facts and show the decrease in these costs, although the business has increased. When I speak of costs, I mean solicitors' fees. Seventy-five per cent of the solicitors' work that used to be done outside exclusively is now done in the department. The enormous fees, amounting to as much as $18,000 paid in one year to a firm in Ottawa—and running each year from $15,000 to $18,000—are not seen any more. My hon. friend says that we limit ourselves to our political friends in the distribution of this patronage. Of course, other things equal, he would not blame us for preferring our friends. But if he will look at the items of expenditure, he will see the names of a good many gentlemen who do not belong to the Liberal party.

Mr. MONK. Precious few.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. A good many, and some of the largest items. And my hon. friends behind me are constantly reminding me that there are too many of these names. I have to stand the assaults of hon. gentlemen opposite and of those on this side, too. I think I will have to get my back to the wall——

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Or take to the woods.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I am not sure that the grievance is not on this side.

Mr. MONK. This subject was such a constant theme of discussion in the province of Quebec before 1896 that my memory of it is thoroughly good. We were told on the platform that we were actually keeping alive a number of these dangerous people called lawyers, and I recollect that the sum we were said to have spent was much smaller than $116,000 mentioned by my hon. friend. But, if it was wrong then—and that is the point I wish to make—to carry on these expenditures, if it was a scandal then to spend the money of the people in maintaining lawyers when it should be devoted to public improvement, why is it right now? We have a long list in the Auditor General's Report, making up a total of $87,341.53 paid to lawyers. Here is one lonely Conservative lawyer in Montreal, who, probably, had a claim against the government which they could not dispute, and he received $5. This list appears at B—27-28 of the Auditor General's Report. Messrs. Blake, Lash & Cassels, of Toronto, received $4,030. I notice that Mr. F. C. Wade, of Dawson City, was paid the trifling sum of $7,768. Evidently there are many disputable matters arising in Charlottetown, because there are lawyers there who have drawn considerable sums of money. Charlottetown seems to be prolific of government litigation.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. In connection with the new branch railway.

Mr. MONK. That may be correct. Mr. Congdon, of Dawson, received $2,476; Messrs. McCarthy, Osler, &c., Toronto, $3,000. Mr. McKenzie, of Macleod, defended the government, and was rewarded with $1,089. Then a patriotic gentleman in Edmonton, by the name of C. de W. MacDonald, received $2,280; Messrs. Langley & Martin, Victoria, $1,842; Messrs. Lafleur, McDougal & McKay, Montreal, $1,822; T. C. Johnston, Regina, bore up against the enemy and received $1,456. Mr. W. B. Ross, of Halifax—I suppose, not a relative of my hon. friend from Victoria (Hon. Mr. Ross)—was paid $4,524. Hon. A. Peters, Victoria, received $1,750. My friend Mr. Gouin, the provincial minister, and other provincial politicians, received a share. Mr. Cloran, now a senator, got something also, but not so much as many others.

Mr. COCHRANE. Was that after he was appointed senator?

Hon. Mr. FITZPATRICK.

Mr. MONK. No. If the custom which the hon. gentlemen opposite so violently condemned is to be kept up, I would suggest to my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) that there are in Montreal, and no doubt elsewhere, competent lawyers of a Conservative faith, and that he ought to divide this patronage between the parties.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. How many of us got a chance previous to 1896, except when we came with our guns after the enemy?

Mr. MONK. But my hon. friend knows the golden rule.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The Minister of Justice says that the payment of amounts to legal gentlemen in Ottawa has been done away with.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Not done away with, but the amounts largely decreased.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Quite a large amount was paid to one firm—several thousand dollars.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Chrysler & Bethune, I suppose, the hon. gentleman refers to. But the amount was not $18,000 or anything like it.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I see that Hon. A. S. White was paid $2,375 for drafting the Railway Act.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The hon. gentleman does not hold me responsible for that?

Mr. REID (Grenville). Surely that work could have been done in the department. And in comparing amounts spent by this government and the previous government for legal fees in Ottawa this amount should not be overlooked.

Mr. BENNETT. Do I understand the Minister of Justice to say that all the law costs paid by the different departments are summarized under the Justice Department?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The practice is that when an account is rendered for professional services for any department the account goes to the Department of Justice; we tax it, and then it goes to the particular department that is charged with the case and that department pays it. But it is all under the head of legal expenses, and legal expenses are all summarized on page 327.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is this account of Chrysler & Bethune on page W—54 of the Auditor General's Report, $615—is that included in the summary?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. That would appear to be an item in connection with the arbitration in the case of Mackenzie & Mann vs. The King, the judge of the Exchequer Court acting in that matter.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is there any regular fees that we pay solicitors ? That some are paid at the rate of $25 per day.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The amount varies. Some receive $100 a day ; but the regular agents of the department, those who do solicitor's work for us in different parts of the country, are supposed to receive $25 a day. But when you come to employ counsel they charge much higher. Christopher Robinson, for instance, who acts for the department occasionally, Mr. Sam Blake, and Mr. Aylesworth, get $100 a day. There are others who get smaller fees, varying from $25 to $100 a day.

Mr. REID (Grenville). In this case of the Hon. A. S. White, we are entitled to some explanation why the department had to send so far to get a gentleman to draft this Railway Act. I should think that required some gentleman with exceptional ability. But when he is only paid $25 a day, it would seem to indicate that he was not considered a light in the legal profession.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The drafting of the Railway Bill required to be done by a specialist. In the Department of Justice our hands are very full, and none of us would assume the responsibility of drafting an important Bill of that sort. There might be gentlemen in Ottawa capable of doing it, but it is not unusual to take professional men elsewhere. For instance, the Manitoba School Bill was prepared by a gentleman who came to Ottawa from Winnipeg for that purpose.

Mr. REID (Grenville). In that case it was the province of Manitoba who was interested, and therefore it was proper to send for a gentleman from Winnipeg.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. He was paid by the government, though.

Mr. REID (Grenville). That may be, but inasmuch as it was the Manitoba people who were interested, it was perfectly right to employ a gentleman from Manitoba where the Act was to be enforced.

Mr. COCHRANE. I do not think the Minister of Justice is doing justice to himself in his explanations with regard to the legal expenses. It is a very flimsy excuse for him to make, when he is challenged in connection with the expenditure of public money, and in failing to employ local talent, to say that the old government did the same thing. He might do something and be perfectly conscientious in doing it, but when the Minister of Justice sees fit to condemn something that we did, and when he does the same thing, I think he is a double-dyed hyprocrite to pretend to say that he was justified because we did it. Where is your Solicitor General now ? Where was he all this time ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. During part of the time that these expenditures were being incurred the Solicitor General was busily engaged in the Supreme Court and in the Exchequer Court. I happened to be Solicitor General myself at that time. The present Solicitor General is now absent attending Exchequer Court cases that are being tried in Manitoba and the North-west Territories. He was away during the past summer attending the Privy Council in England on government business. I may add to that, and I make the statement in all seriousness, that in my opinion it is in the interest of the government, and it is desirable, to concentrate as much as possible the litigation of the government in the hands of the Department of Justice. It has been my desire to do that, and I venture to say that seventy-five per cent of all the litigation in matters that are now pending, is controlled in the Department of Justice here. The solicitor's work is done by the Deputy Minister of Justice and it is only when it is necessary to engage counsel outside that we engage them. I would like to go further and say that it is impossible, when you have cases from Halifax to Vancouver, and when local knowledge is necessary, when you want a local solicitor who knows local conditions, I say it is impossible for all that work to be done here, and it is in the interest of the government that local men should be employed. Still, it is made a grievance against the government that we keep too much of the work in our own hands.

Mr. COCHRANE. I sympathize with the Minister of Justice. I understand how his followers are very hungry to get their share of what is going. But that does not justify him in doing what he condemned when we were in power.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. You did not do any of the legal work.

Mr. COCHRANE. That is rather a sweeping assertion, as I think the Minister of Justice will find if he looks over the Auditor General's Report.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No, I know what was done in the department.

Mr. COCHRANE. But I was not inquiring where the Solicitor General was now, I was not finding any fault that he was not doing his duty. I was only pointing out that when we are paying these enormous fees for legal counsel, it seems to me the Department of Justice might do some of that work themselves. If litigation is increasing so fast, that shows the government must be at fault ; they must be doing business very loosely, or they would not have so much litigation. They cannot be a business government as we have been led to believe they are or they would do the business in such a way that they would not have so much law.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I can see where the seriousness of this legal business comes in. It might be well to have two or three very able gentlemen connected with the Department of Justice to look after the government's interest at the courts which are held. It is a well known fact that when a case is tried in the court the hon. Minister of Justice employs a local solicitor to take charge of the case in the interest of the government. I think I can safely say that in many cases the solicitor employed is not generally the ablest solicitor in the locality and is not able to cope with the gentlemen who are employed in opposition to the government. If this were all centered in the department at Ottawa and gentlemen of ability were employed to plead the case on behalf of the government I think it would pay the government better even to pay the local solicitors the amounts that they receive now, because, I believe in a great many cases, the judgments rendered against them would not be rendered if the government employed men of ability to plead their cases. I know of cases in which men have been employed on behalf of the government that I would not have employed on my own behalf and I say that without saying anything disrespectful to these gentlemen. I knew the men who were employed on the other side and I knew that those employed on behalf of the government were not able to cope with the situation. I believe that two or three men should be employed to do nothing else but plead the cases of the government. Of course, it might be necessary to have the assistance of a local solicitor to get up the brief. At present the government do not send any person to do that. They allow the local solicitor to go ahead and carry on the case and in nine cases out of ten judgment is rendered against the government.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is it not a fact that in nine cases out of ten judgment is rendered against the government, whereas it would be rendered in favour of the government if they employed men of the ability of those whose names have been mentioned, such as Mr. Christopher Robinson, Mr. Aylesworth and men of that calibre ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I do not know about the local cases. Perhaps my hon. friend may be correct because I suppose he would not speak without knowledge, but I can tell him in reference to the cases that I have personal knowledge of that you can go to the Supreme Court and find that 75 per cent of the cases have been successfully contested by the government.

Mr. REID (Grenville). In the Supreme Court.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The government have generally turned the other side down pretty successfully.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The gentlemen who have looked after the interest of the government in the Supreme Court are gentlemen like Mr. Aylesworth and Mr. Robinson.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Not always ; there are others.

Mr. CLANCY. I would like to ask the hon. minister if Mr. Lawlor was employed in any other cases beside that of Stewart vs. the Crown.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I think that was the only case he was in.

Mr. CLANCY. I see that the following sum was paid to Mr. Lawlor.

Advances on account of services and expenses, November 15, 1901, $500 ; March 26th, 1902, $1,000—$1,500.

Is that the whole sum paid to Mr. Lawlor ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I do not remember that he was engaged in any other case but the Stewart case. In that case his fees were fairly large and then there were considerable travelling expenses because he had to prepare the whole case which was a very complicated and difficult one. The amount involved was exceedingly large and on the other hand we had against us Mr. B. B. Osler, Q.C. assisted I think by Mr. Hogg and another legal gentleman in this city. On our side we had Mr. Blake and Mr. Lawlor. In the result the government did not fare very badly because we had the amount of the claim reduced from over $70,000 to something in the vicinity of $28,000.

Mr. CLANCY. What was the result of this case of Battle vs. the Crown ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I do not remember the details of that case, but I think the case never went to judgment. I think the case was compromised and as a result of the compromise a very large reduction was made in the claim.

Mr. CLANCY. I see here that a lawyer was employed, Mr. C. B. Smith and that an engineer was also employed at $25 a day and travelling expenses. I see also that a gentleman named Mr. P. A. Peterson was employed and that there was a large amount of cost in the case.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. It was in connection with the arbitration that Mr. Peterson was employed, was it not ?

Canals — repairs and operating expenses, $585,540.

Mr. LANCASTER. There is an increase of $54,216. We would like to know what this is for ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The increases on the Cornwall canal amount to $5,270, and the decrease to $2,264. leaving a net increase of $3,006. I have the details of the increased cost of the services on each of the canals here. While the total increase of $54,000 is in one sense considerable, yet it is a very small percentage of the aggregate.

Mr. LANCASTER. I understand that the minister is not providing for an increase in the salaries of the lock tenders on the Welland canal. If that be the case, I want to put in a word for them, because I believe they are the most underpaid men in the services of the government; too much underpaid in fact, to enable them to render proper and efficient service. We have heard a lot of the prosperity of the country and the increased cost of living, and while I do not object to increasing the salary of a civil servant who gets $2,000 a year, if the increased cost of living requires it; yet, I think we begin at the wrong end, when we leave the men who are only getting $400 a year out in the cold. These men who receive small pay, feel the cost of living much more than the gentlemen who get high salaries. I would remind the minister that several petitions have been sent here from the Welland canal employees, urging on the government that they are justly entitled to an increased wage. As these employees cannot come to the House themselves, and as they are my constituents, and whether they voted for me or not, are entitled to justice, and, as I am the only person who can represent them on the floor of the House, I want to impress upon the government some reasons why these men should get an increase of pay. To commence with, they are getting exactly the same pay as they got twenty-five years ago and we all know that $400 does not buy as much today in the Niagara district, at all events, as it could buy a quarter of a century ago. Other employees than the lockmen on the Welland canal have had their wages increased. I do not believe that the carpenters are paid as much as they ought to be. They get less wages than are paid by contractors, and they get less than the union scale in St. Catharines, Merritton and other places along the canal. I believe that this government can afford to pay its servants just as much as any private contractor pays them. It is a poor government if it can not. While saying that, I must add that the carpenters and labourers have had their position improved during the past fifteen years, by shortening their hours as well as increasing their pay. The labourers on the Welland canal get $1.50 for nine hour's work, which is 16 2-3 cents an hour, but the lock tenders, who require to be more skilful men, get $45 a month for a day of twelve hours, which is only 14½ cents per hour. The lock tender at $45 per month can only get about eight month's employment in the year, and the minister can see what that figures down to. I do not think it is in the interests of the country that these men should be kept at such low wages, while civil servants in Ottawa who get five times their pay, have had their salaries raised because of the increased cost of living. The lockmen must be sober and steady men; their eyesight and their hearing must be good, and they must be trustworthy. To pay men of that class $45 a month for eight months in the year is penurious, is mean and is stingy. My remarks will apply to the bridge tenders as well. Let me point out also that the government have now made the canals free, no doubt with the object of getting more vessels to pass through them, and that being the case, it must necessarily increase the work of the employees to whom I refer. These men, when they are at work, have to work extremely hard, and their calling is only made comparatively easy because of the fact that many vessels may not lock through in quick succession. I can assure the minister that if he lived on the Welland canal and saw those men at work he would come to the conclusion that they have no easy job of it. The fact remains then, that the pay of these men has not been increased for twenty-five years, and as you have lately adopted a policy which increases their work, they, therefore have a double claim to the consideration of the government; first, because of the increased cost of living; and second, because the canals having been made free, their duties will be largely augmented. The matter I suppose will receive the attention of the government; but I am bound to say that I do not think that the ordinary justice is being done these men which they have a right to expect. If we are to err at all on the side of liberality it should be in regard to the $300 or $400 men and not the $1,500 or $2,000 men. You talk about the increased cost of living and increase the salaries of the judges who are receiving $5,000 or $6,000. I am not objecting to that, I am in favour of increasing the salaries of county court judges particularly, but while I am in favour of increasing the salaries of county court judges, we must remember that they get from $2,400 to $3,000, and I am that much more in favour of increasing the salary of the man who gets $300 or $400 and has to support a wife and children. If we are to err on the side of liberality let us begin with the poor man to whom $25 is a great deal and not with those who receive much larger stipends. The lock tender on the Welland canal gets $45 a month. If you multiply that by eight you get his annual income, or less than $400 because a man who is working on the canal cannot expect to obtain employment in the winter months. If he is working for the government during the summer he is not the subject of much commiseration and people naturally give the preference to the men whom they want to work for them in summer so that practically the income of these men for the whole year is simply the $45 a month which they get for eight months of the year. It is sometimes said that it does not take much of a man to be a civil servant. That ought not to be the case and I do not think it is. I think we should have the best men in the country as civil servants, and I say that you cannot retain good lock tenders unless you pay more than $45 a month. Many of these men have become accustomed to this work and I think in all fairness they should have an increase. I would not object to a higher standard of qualification, and if the government think that some of these men should not be employed because they are not fit for the work, I would say that the proper business method would be to get rid of them and to get others but while the government are employing these men to do the work and are increasing the salaries of gentlemen in the civil service running up into the thousands, I think they are making a mistake and doing an unfair thing to the workman in not increasing his salary. The government should begin with the $400 men and not with the $1,500 or $2,000 men. It is not alone these men who are interested in this; the whole shipping interest of the country is concerned in the proper tending of these locks and swing bridges. If a man is careless in looking after one of these swing bridges where a railway crosses the canal an awful loss of life and property may result and carelessness in working the locks might also result in flooding of the adjoining lands and in great destruction. It must be remembered too that these men are on duty in twelve hour shifts night and day and the salaries which they receive are not at all fair in proportion to their work.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I understand that the workmen on the Welland canal had the good fortune to get their increase in advance of the others. I think my hon. friend must be mistaken when he said that they had received no increase for twenty-five years. I understand that complaint was made that the lock tenders on the other canals were not receiving the same pay as those on the Welland canal and that the increase had to be made to bring them up to the standard of those on the Welland.

Mr. LANCASTER. The Welland canal lock tenders did not receive an increase.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They were getting higher pay than those on the other canals and the increase had to be made to bring the others up to the Welland standard. However, I have not had this matter brought under my consideration since I have been at the head of the department and I quite sympathize with the view that those who are receiving very low salaries should be considered. We are making the labour of these men less arduous by the use of the electric system, but that makes no difference as their time has to be considered and they are entitled to fair remuneration for their work.

Mr. LANCASTER.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The hon. minister says that the increase in the repairs to the canals is very slight. I would like to call his attention to the fact that last year the total paid for repairs on the Morrisburg canal, with which I am more familiar, was $13,700 and the total amount paid to the Morrisburg staff was $14,403, altogether in the neighbourhood of $28,000. At the time the Liberal party came into power the amount expended on repairs was about $8,000 and the amount paid the staff was about $7,000, or a total of $15,000, so that the expenditure has been actually doubled. Now, there is no excuse why the repairs should be doubled. During the last three or four years these canals have been in the hands of the contractors, and have all been put in good order. There was no necessity for placing a dozen more men on the repair gang. I know for a fact that pressure was brought on the government from the local committee in each village, and the result was that from each and every one so many men were taken and employed on the repairs, and in addition the government put more men on the locks than were actually required. Take the locks at the head of the Galops canal, they have got an overseer there and a lockmaster as well, or more than they actually require. That is one of the reasons why the repairs staff have increased, and I think that the acting minister will also find very material increases on the other canals because I hear the same remarks about them. He will find too that in distributing the patronage, the government are very good to their friends. I see no objection to that save in this respect that they go outside my constituency, in which this canal is situated, for supplies, and I think it is hardly fair to do so when they are not inviting public tenders. And they pay big prices when they go and give the orders to their friends. For instance white pine timber sixteen feet long at $25 per thousand feet, and pine plank $26 per thousand feet.

Mr. BENNETT. Knots included.

Mr. REID. Yes, knots included. These prices were paid to the Alexandria Wood Exporting Company of Alexandria, and if report be true, the Alexandria Wood and Export Company is the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. Schell).

Mr. SCHELL. The report is not true.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I see that this company received a large amount in connection with the Cornwall canal, and in connection with the Williamsburg canal it received $813.18. Here is Mr. Cameron of Iroquois who received $602.47. He lives along the line of the canal, and I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that he could have supplied all that stuff. But Mr. Stewart, the superintendent, came from the county of Glengarry, and I have not the slightest doubt that the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. Schell) recommended him for the position, and he has returned good for——

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. For evil.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Yes, probably good for evil. This expenditure has increased materially, and if the acting minister will not do something to check it, it will grow to a very large amount. I would like to know whether we have reached the outside figures or whether the expenditure is to still go on increasing from year to year ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I can give no other assurance than that whatever is necessary to maintain the canal in good condition, we will have to provide. The mere fact that somebody supplied lumber at certain prices does not show that the lumber was too high or not needed. But my hon. friend has helped me to meet the argument of the hon. member for Lincoln and Niagara (Mr. Lancaster) who says that the men on the canals are worked too hard. My hon. friend says that, on the contrary, there are too many men for the work.

Mr. LANCASTER. I spoke of the Welland canal.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. member for Leeds and Grenville (Mr. Reid) spoke of all the canals.

Mr. LANCASTER. He does not know how his neighbours work on the Welland canal.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I referred entirely to the Cornwall and Williamsburg canals, the only ones I know anything about. There are practically double the men on the Williamsburg canal to-day compared with six years ago, and there is no more to do. The canal is in first-class repair, and there is no reason why the number of men on it should be doubled. I might also draw the attention of the acting minister to the fact that there are several men who were employed on the construction staff—I do not refer to the engineers themselves because they have to be kept on to finish their final estimates—but there are several men kept on the staff drawing their salary when the works are practically completed and their services might be very well dispensed with. There are none really necessary except the engineers and their assistants. Are those men to be continued right along indefinitely ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If I find any men employed on the canal unnecessarily, of course they will not be kept on.

Mr. REID (Grenville). They will be kept on unless the department takes some action, because a great many of them are members of the Liberal committee in that locality. It is on the recommendation of that committee that they were appointed and will be dismissed.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is where my hon. friend is wrong.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I know of one Liberal committee, composed of about six men, of whom five are employed by the government. They appoint themselves each and every time and they are still on duty drawing their salary and doing no work whatever. The work is practically completed. In the village of Curran where that work is going on, is it necessary to have any men employed around there now ? The work is practically done, there is nothing but a dredge there, and yet the staff is kept on. I do not refer to the engineer himself. I think that there are two or three engineers who have to be kept on to finish the final estimates.

Mr. SCHELL. The hon. member for Leeds and Grenville (Mr. Reid) has been kind enough to mention my name in an entirely unwarranted manner. He said that he supposed I had recommended the present superintendent for his position. I never did anything of the kind. That gentleman was appointed before I knew anything about it. Then he said that, according to his information, the Alexandria Wood Export Company was myself. Well, I hold $1,300 stock in that company out of $18,000 paid up capital. It cannot therefore be my company. If the hon. gentleman would confine his remarks to the business before the House, instead of trying to cast a slur upon me, he would better consult his own dignity and show greater regard for the responsibility of his position as a member of parliament. If he has any objection to the prices paid that company, he is at perfect liberty to state his objections and furnish the proof. But in endeavouring to cast a slur upon me on hearsay information, which is entirely unwarranted, and the utter lack of foundation of which he could easily have ascertained, he is certainly not injuring me or gaining any credit for himself.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I am glad that the hon. member for Glengarry repudiates the appointment of the gentleman who is superintendant of the Williamsburg canal.

Mr. SCHELL. I do not repudiate it.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I understood from the marine men that this gentleman lived in some small village back in the county of Glengarry, and the marine men told me that they hardly believed he had ever seen a canal before. He certainly was not qualified for the position, and I am glad that the hon. member repudiates his appointment, and thus virtually acknowledges that he is not fit for the position.

Mr. SCHELL. Will the hon. gentleman allow me to explain. I did not repudiate the appointment, and did not insinuate that the gentleman was not fit for the position, or anything of that kind. I simply said that I had not recommended him for the position.

Mr. REID (Grenville). If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Schell) says he had nothing to do with the appointment, he does not assume responsibility and virtually says that he acknowledges that he would not agree to such a recommendation——

Mr. SCHELL. I do not acknowledge anything of the kind.

Mr. REID (Grenville). So far as this is concerned, my attention was drawn to the fact that they were supplying articles along the canal, and I was told that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Schell) was largely interested in the company. The information came to me from friends of the government, who think it hardly fair that those living along the canal and trying to make an honest living, find themselves prevented from getting this business because a member of the House has used his influence to sell goods from a constituency not adjoining the canal, and at prices higher than those that people on the canal would have sold for. And the facts have been borne out to a certain extent by the statements of the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. Schell). He states that the capital of his company is $18,000, and he has $1,300——

Mr. SCHELL. It is not my company.

Mr. REID (Grenville). But the hon. gentleman is interested in it. I think it would be much better if he would not use his influence to interfere with constituents of mine. I believe that in the constituency I have the honour to represent there are gentlemen supporting the government who will supply anything that is necessary and at prices no higher than those charged by the Alexandria Wood Export Company. My main object was to draw attention to the increase. It may be very slight this year, but if the hon. gentleman will compare the expenditure with what it was in 1895 or 1896, he will see that the increase is very large. Now that his attention is drawn to it he should be able to reduce the expenditure to what it should be.

Mr. BENNETT. When is it expected that the lift-lock at Peterborough will be in working order ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In about six weeks, I am informed.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Why is it necessary to have a superintendent and an overseer on the Williamsburg canal ? In former days there was only one man, and there is not more than enough work for one man. The minister will remember that Dr. Hickey, ex-M.P., was superintendent of the Williamsburg canal, and he was dismissed and Mr. Stewart appointed in his place. In addition, there is a superintendent drawing $1,200 a year.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I understand that Mr. Rubidge does not merely the engineering work, but in a certain measure, the work of superintendence also. But, owing to his advancing years and ill-health, it was necessary to appoint some one to assist him. The overseer was appointed by my predecessor, and I assume that he had good reasons for the appointment. I know nothing to the contrary.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Before the present government came into office, Dr. Hickey was the superintendent, and there was a superintendent on the Cornwall canal; also Mr. Ross. The government decided to reduce expenses and dismissed these officers, and placed the whole canal under Mr. Rubidge as superintending engineer. But, after a few months they decided to have the superintendents again, and Mr. Stewart was appointed superintendent of the Williamsburg canal and Mr. Lally of the Cornwall canal. Mr. Stewart has an overseer under him at a salary of about $1,200. This kind of thing explains the increase in expenditure on the canal. Why is an overseer necessary ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have already given the reason. He performs a portion of the duties which were assigned to Mr. Rubidge, who still is engineer of the work. This gentleman has been appointed with general supervision of the canal.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Mr. Stewart performs the duties of superintendent of these canals. He has nothing to do with Mr. Rubidge's work.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Mr. Stewart's work is that of general supervision over the work. He has two overseers, each of whom has a local district.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Does the hon. minister know what position Mr. Stewart occupied before he was appointed superintendent ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Mr. SCHELL. He was in the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway in Montreal.

Mr. REID (Grenville). What were his duties ?

Mr. SCHELL. I do not know.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I understood he had been a school teacher, and at the time of his appointment was a clerk in the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Montreal. Marine men are anxious to have a man appointed who is qualified for the position. If the hon. minister could hear the opinions expressed by Liberals along the canal, as well as by all marine men, it would not take him very long to make up his mind to get some person qualified for the work.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am suspicious of the Liberals who would complain to my hon. friend (Mr. Reid, Grenville).

Mr. REID (Grenville). They are members of the Liberal committees in towns between Cornwall and Kingston.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They should keep better company.

Additional to pay persons employed permanently in the public service and remuneration to any other persons for services rendered for and in connection with passing vessels through the canals of the government of Canada from midnight on Saturday to midnight on Sunday, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $14,400.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is the usual vote.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is this for lock labourers and lock-masters, to pay them extra ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes. They are paid extra when employed on Sundays.

Mr. CLANCY. Is that the sum that is expended each year, or approximately so ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have not the actual expenditure of last year. It is the regular sum taken year by year.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Now that the canal tolls are abandoned, is it necessary to keep a collector at the head of the Cardinal canal ? There is no duty for him to perform there.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The making of the canals free, as announced at the time, was more or less experimental, and it has been thought well to keep the collectors there to keep accounts as usual, so that we may ascertain what the revenue would have been. But I think the increase of trade has been so considerable that we may look forward to adopting that policy as a permanent one.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Do they sign the shipping reports and make reports exactly the same as they did previously to the tolls being abandoned ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The accounts are kept in precisely the same manner.

Mr. MONK. What is the object of keeping a collector if there is nothing to collect ? Could not a tally of the boats passing up and down be kept just as well by some other employee on the locks ? The function of a collector is to collect money, but if it is merely a question of counting boats, cannot that be done by the lockmaster ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Well the functions of a collector are not entirely to collect, that is a part of his duty. A collector is also an accountant, and it may be that a man who is otherwise well qualified to be employed on the canal might not be an accountant. However, no definite policy has been adopted.

Mr. MONK. I understand that the government are going to carry out the policy of freeing the canals from any tolls whatever. A collector has only one duty to perform, and that is to collect tolls and to account for them to a government official who goes around from time to time and examines his books. That is what the collector does on the Lachine canal, on the St. Anne's lock, and every other canal. If you abolish the toll what is the object of keeping a collector ? There is no object except that you do not wish to dismiss him.

Mr. REID (Grenville). In this case at Cardinal, all the steamers go straight through to Montreal, and there is a collector at Cornwall and one at Lachine, and the latter gentleman could do all the work that is necessary. The collector at Cardinal would simply issue a pass and the collector at Montreal would pick it up. It seems to me it is really a useless expenditure to keep a collector. The lockmaster could keep an account of the one or two local boats that pass up and down. I would like to know if it is the intention of the government to keep that office going ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. For the present we think it is desirable to have collectors there for statistical purposes. The lockmasters may in some cases be able to keep these statistics, but not in all cases. I am not prepared to say what the policy may be in future. I shall give the matter consideration, or whoever may have charge of the department will do so.

Mr. MONK. This is not a large item, but it seems preposterous to keep collectors of tolls after you abolish the tolls. The reason is probably because the government does not like to abolish the office. If you give as a reason for keeping the collector that it is for the purpose of collecting statistics, that can be done perfectly well by the lockmaster. I can tell the minister that there is not a lockmaster who is not able to furnish these statistics to the government, not one of them, I believe, who does not do that duty at the present moment. If these collectors are kept on, it is because the men who were collectors in 1896 were dismissed without any reason, and partisans were put in their places, and the government do not want to dismiss them, although they have abolished the tolls. So the country is put to the expense of paying collectors who have nothing to do.

Mr. REID (Grenville). In this case at Cardinal, the collector lives a mile and a half from the locks ; the lockmaster is the one who collects the statistics for him now. You are simply paying the collector a salary for doing nothing, at this point in particular, where the vessels go right straight through.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is the toll abolished on the Murray canal ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. On all the canals.

Mr. COCHRANE. Then I presume the collector is kept on there also ?

Mr. CLANCY. I hardly think the explanation the hon. gentleman has given is quite satisfactory. Now, the hon. gentleman has some policy on the subject, we have a right to suppose. I do not know whether he is to continue to hold his present dual position of Minister of Finance and Minister of Railways and Canals. It is difficult to say just when the government will have sufficient courage to appoint a Minister of Railways. It is currently reported that the Minister of Finance is about to give up the position that he has adorned for some years, to become Minister of Railways. If he thinks of retaining the position of acting Minister of Railways which he now holds, has he formed any policy as to what he is going to do with regard to these collectors ? Now I do not advocate the taking away of a man's position from him unnecessarily, if he is required in the public service. Even though he may not be employed all the time, I would not think it the proper thing to take his living away from him. But this is a case in which it seems, as far as the discussion has gone, that there is no necessity for it. The hon. gentleman, looking forward to possibilities, probably, will tell the committee what his policy is.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I must confess that I have not given any special personal attention to the matter. I am simply adhering to the policy which my predecessor established, assuming that he had good reason for it. If it be found that there are persons who do not perform any work and are still drawing salaries, I think that is a matter that should be looked into and if a case of that kind is brought to my notice I will make inquiry into it.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I have given the hon. minister a case to inquire into now on the Williamsburg canal.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will see.

Mr. MONK. Will the hon. minister say that we are going to keep on paying collectors of tolls during the whole of this year on the canals when my hon. friend is surely aware that these men will have nothing to do ? It seems to me, that, although, as indicated by my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Clancy), my hon. friend the Minister of Finance is on the eve of assuming a different department, he would not be so indifferent to the policy of the department which he at present occupies and it seems to me that some kind of defence ought to be given to the committee for the fact that the salaries of the different collectors of tolls on the canals are being continued although the tolls themselves are abolished. My hon. friend says that these officials are retained for the purpose of keeping the statistics, when he knows perfectly well that these statistics are kept irrespective of the collectors. We know even without the collectors exactly what traffic passes through the canals because these statistics are kept by other officials.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have already stated, without undertaking to define a policy for the future that for the present it has not been thought well to dispense with the services of these officials and that we are utilizing them for statistical purposes. If these statistical purposes can be as well served without those officials that is a matter that I am willing to inquire into, but for the present we do not feel warranted in dispensing with the services of these men without inquiry.

Mr. MONK. What statistics ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They keep precisely the same accounts of all transactions which take place on the canals as if they collected tolls. They keep accounts of the vessels which pass through and of what the dues would be if they were charged, so that we will have at the end of the year an idea of what the dues would have been and of what the concession is that has been made.

Mr. COCHRANE. Do boats have to stop and report to these officials just the same as if they collected tolls ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no change whatever in the manner of operating and keeping the accounts. It is the very same as if the tolls were collected.

Mr. TAYLOR. How about the case of the collector at Cardinal who lives two miles away from the locks, and never goes near them ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I confess I cannot answer that. That is a proper subject for inquiry.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for Cardinal says that he never goes there. His office is at the locks, he visits his office only once in a while and draws his pay.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That we will have to look into.

Mr. MONK. I would like to ask the hon. minister if there are any reports made by collectors since the tolls have been abolished.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, they are making the usual reports.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Would it be asking too much of the hon. minister, as he is going to bring down some information before the supplementary estimates are passed, to bring down a memorandum, showing the amount of the tolls that the collector at Cardinal would have collected from the 1st of May to the 1st of October of this season ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will inquire as to what reports are made by the collector and I will be very glad to bring them down if they are there.

Mr. REID (Grenville). If he makes out the reports as heretofore there should be no trouble about it. These reports are sent every day to the department, and the department could tell up to last night what he should have collected. One of the clerks could get it in ten minutes.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not anticipate any trouble. I will try to have the reports.

Mr. MONK. Would the hon. the minister bring down the reports of the collector at St. Anne's and the collector at Lachine, so that we can see what has been done by these officials ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Salaries and contingencies, collectors offices, $28,546.40.

Mr. CLANCY. I notice that there is an increase for these collectors who are not performing any service.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is an increase of $464.

Mr. CLANCY. It is not very great, it is true, but it is not the sum that is involved.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This increase is divided as follows : Williamsburg canal, $238; Soulanges, $550 ; Lachine, $100; Chambly, $5; St. Anne's, $1; an increase of $494, less a decrease of $30, making the net increase $464.

Mr. MONK. Is this $35,683 paid for the salaries of the collectors ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Salaries and contingencies.

Mr. MONK. Connected with the collectors' offices ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. MONK. I heard the hon. minister mention that there was an increase in the salary of the collector at St. Anne's ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, the item of salaries and contingencies shows an increase of $1. The amount of the estimate happens to be $1 above last year.

Mr. MONK. Are the salaries of collectors in no cases increased this year ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In Montreal, I am told, some of the clerks may have been increased.

Mr. MONK. Surely we are not increasing the salaries of collectors when there is nothing to be collected ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There are several clerks in the office at Montreal and it is quite possible that some of the salaries have been increased. They are keeping statistical accounts.

Mr. MONK. Is the salary of the collector at St. Anne's to be increased ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I should say not. The increase for salaries and contingencies is $1 and I am sure that the collector has not got the $1.

Mr. MONK. Has the salary of the collector at Lachine been increased ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is an increase for salaries and contingencies of $100, but I have not been advised as to whether the increase is in salaries or contingencies. I will have to ascertain.

Mr. REID (Grenville). There is an increase on the Williamsburg canal of $238. What is that for ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I cannot say what part is for salaries and what is for contingencies.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Then the item should stand until we get the information, because I think that the salaries should not be increased under the existing circumstances.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think there is any increase in salaries, but I will bring down the informaton.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Last year the collector got a salary of $700, Sundays, 345 hours at 20 cents an hour, making $69, rent, $53.87 ; postage and express, $9.84 ; and horse-hire, $169.75 ; I cannot understand how he could have worked 345 hours on Sundays. That lock is closed on Sundays from 7 a.m. until 9 p.m. It seems impossible that he could have put in that many hours.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In the latter part of the season the canals are open on Sundays without limit as to hours.

Mr. REID (Grenville). This would pay him for every Sunday during the whole season. Was his horse-hire to take him up and down from the village to his office, which is about a mile and a half.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He is allowed a dollar a day for horse-hire.

Mr. REID (Grenville). And in addition to that he is apparently paid $5 a month rent for his own house down in the village.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In some cases houses are furnished to the canal employees and it may be that he is allowed rent.

Mr. CLANCY. This seems an extraordinary case. Why should he be allowed rent for his own house ?

Mr. REID (Grenville). It was never allowed before this gentleman was appointed.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If rent is to be allowed at all, I do not think that $5 a month can be complained of.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is he allowed to attend to his medical duties as a doctor, and is this horse-hire for driving him to his patients or to the canal.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The deputy tells me that the understanding with these officials is that they are to give their whole time to the public service.

Mr. LANCASTER. Is the rent not allowed on the theory that a man should be where his work is ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Probably that was the origin of the system.

Mr. REID (Grenville). For thirty years the former collector got a small salary, and of course the government could not give the new collector an increase and so they got over the difficulty by giving all these extras which makes the salary over $1,000. I do not refer to this case in particular. There are other cases of the same kind. There are employees on the work of construction that has been practically completed, and if the minister wishes to find out he can ascertain that the increase is accounted for by employing men who have been forced on the government.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will make inquiry into all these things.

Mr. CLANCY. This is rather a fishy case. It appears that this gentleman is employed as collector, and that he is at liberty to practice his profession as a physician. The canal tolls have been done away since that gentleman was appointed and he has no longer any duties to perform as collector. He lives in a house of his own and receives rent for it, a thing hitherto unheard of and he is paid $1 a day for horse-hire. Is that to go to see his patients or is it to go up and collect tolls where there are no tolls to collect ? The acting Minister of Railways had better allow that to stand until he gives us that information.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will give the hon. gentleman the information, but there is no reason to let it stand.

Mr. CLANCY. I am afraid that after the item is passed it will be a little too late. It might be a proper thing to strike out this whole item and the acting Minister of Railways might come to that conclusion himself. I can hardly think that he is prepared to justify a case of that kind ; I am sure he would not and I think he had better let that item stand.

Mr. TAYLOR. According to the Auditor General's Report that gentleman has charged for 345 hours of Sunday work, at 20 cents per hour, $69. During the seven months which constitute the season of navigation, the canals are open on Sunday from 12 to 7 and 9 to 12 o'clock, making ten hours on Sunday. That for thirty Sundays would make the total number of hours of Sunday work 300, but this gentleman charges for 345 hours, and yet no boat could pass through that canal on a Sunday night or any other night in the dark. Therefore there was no necessity for night work at all. I think the minister should allow this item to stand until he finds out why this gentleman put in a charge for 345 hours when he did not put in an hour's work. Why should he go up there and sit from 7 until 12 o'clock in the morning for the sake of drawing his pay when this canal is so situated that a boat must approach and leave it by daylight.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If I should find that any officer on the canal had been guilty of misconduct that would not be a reason why the others should not receive their money. These are proper matters for inquiry, and I shall see that they are inquired into.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is there anything in the Order in Council appointing this gentleman providing that he should be paid for house rent ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not know.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Would he be entitled to house rent if it was not provided for in the Order in Council appointing him ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not unless the minister of the day allowed it to him. I am not sure if he was appointed by Order in Council, but it would not be a very great stretch of authority for a minister to allow house rent ; that is speaking on the principle, not on the merits of the case.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is the minister going to allow this item to stand ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think so. This is the last item in the estimates, and I would like to have it cleaned up.

Mr. TAYLOR. You will have a similar item in the supplementary estimates, and perhaps the hon. gentleman will then bring down the information asked for, and give to the House the number of hours of Sunday labour that this gentleman put in on the canal.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will give the hon. gentleman whatever information we have in our possession.

Mr. REID (Grenville). We have been very fair to my hon. friend and he might drop the two items which have been allowed to stand and clear the thing up.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend is right, the criticisms have been fair, but if there are two or three cases where some one gets $10 or $100 more than he should that is no reason why the rest should not have their money.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The hon. minister did not catch my point. I stated that as we have been fair in the criticism of his estimates, he might allow these two items to be dropped, and then he could clear up the whole thing now.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will have to come back with some information for the hon. gentleman in any case, so I think it is better not to drop them.

Some resolutions reported.

ADJOURNMENT—BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. MONK. Before we adjourn, I would ask the minister what business will be taken up to-morrow.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have made such good progress in the last day or two that the Order paper is pretty well cleared. There are several Bills on the Order paper which are not yet printed, and therefore we are not in a position to proceed with them, but so far as possible, we will take up the Bills which are in order before the House.

Mr. TAYLOR. Shall we take up the Audit Act amendment Bill ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not to-morrow, we will postpone that perhaps until the first of the week. If there is no objection we can proceed after disposing of these Bills to deal with the supplementary estimates, although they were only laid on the Table to-day.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 10.35 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, October 2, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Twelve o'clock.

DEATH OF HENRY CARGILL, ESQ., M.P.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Mr. Speaker, I deem it my very sad duty to refer to the lamentable event which took place last night, and which has deprived us of the companionship of one of the most esteemed members of this House. The Conservative party were certainly fortunate in having in their ranks such a man as Mr. Henry Cargill, for he was in every possible sense of the word a good man—a good citizen, a good father, a good husband, a good and warm-hearted friend. During the long years that he was associated with us in this House he had endeared himself to the hearts not only of his own political associates, but of those who held different political views. Not only was Mr. Cargill a good citizen, but we know from long acquaintance with him that he was a man of exceptional ability in the profession which he followed, and followed with much success. His sudden demise, coming under such sad circumstances, is another lesson to us, which is as old as the world, but always new, of the uncertainty of our lives. Those who apparently are frail and seem to live under the shadow of death may live long, while those who appear to be in robust health may be suddenly called away. We on this side of the House join sincerely with our hon. friends opposite in conveying to the mourning family of Mr. Cargill the frank and true expression of our deep condolence with them in their sad bereavement.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the members on this side of the House, I thank the right hon. gentleman most sincerely for the very kindly words he has uttered. Coming as we do from paying the last tribute of respect to a very dear friend, we are reminded, I am sure, how frail and uncertain is our tenure of this earthly life. Yesterday Henry Cargill stood amongst us in all the vigour and strength of mature manhood ; he spoke in this House with unusual animation, and none of us would have supposed for a moment that within a few hours we would be following his remains to their last earthly resting place. He has been a member of this House since 1887, with the exception, I believe, of one session ; and during all that time I am sure that not one word nor one act of his failed to inspire the deepest respect and confidence of every member of this House. His great generous heart was perhaps not known except by those who were most intimate with him ; but those who had that privilege knew of many acts of whole souled kindliness on his part which were not known to the public at large. I am sure it can be said of him that against his warmest political opponent his soul harboured no bitterness. He was too great a man for that. He was listened to in this House with deep respect. His great abilities, as a business man, and the sound common sense and breadth of view which always characterized his remarks earned for him the sincere respect of every member of this House. I join heartily in the kind and generous words of my right hon. friend the First Minister, and in the assurance which he has conveyed to the bereaved widow and family of Mr. Cargill that they have in this hour of their affliction the deepest and most sincere sympathy and condolence of every member of this House.

THE DISTURBANCES AT THE SOO.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Sir. F. W. Borden). I would like, Mr. Speaker, to bring to the notice of the House a paragraph in the Montreal 'Star' of yesterday, alleging negligence on the part of the government with reference to sending military protection to Sault Ste. Marie.

The paragraph is as follows :

> Much indignation is expressed among all classes of citizens over the manner in which the Dominion government ignored the repeated demand that the troops be sent to protect the town properly, as it became apparent that the presence of the militia was necessary. That the troops are now guarding the town and the company's property is something for which the militia authorities at Ottawa are not entitled to any credit. In fact the Ottawa authorities have not even yet countenanced the sending of the militia. The story of the government's negligence to comply with the town's request for troops is an interesting one, as related by Mayor Plummer. When the attitude of the men began to predict trouble the mayor promptly wired to Ottawa, asking that fifty troops be sent without delay. He received a reply directing his attention to a clause of the Act which empowered him to call out the troops on his own responsibility.

I think that the question is of sufficient importance to be brought up in this way, because it is not a party question and it is exceedingly desirable that the community at large should understand what the law is, and that the government has not been negligent. This paragraph admits that the mayor of the 'Soo' did receive an answer to his telegram. As a matter of fact, telegrams were sent by the representatives of the company there and the mayor, to the Prime Minister and myself, and the only answer was sent which could be sent, and that was an answer calling to the attention of the authorities that paragraph of the Militia Act under which they could claim and secure the protection of the militia. That telegram was promptly sent and others were received afterwards, but they were all to the same effect. I would like to read the provision of the Act to which the authorities at the 'Soo' were referred :

> 1. The active militia or any corps thereof, shall be liable to be called out for active service with their arms and ammunition, in aid of the civil power in any case in which a riot, disturbance of the peace, or other emergency requiring such service occurs, or is, in the opinion of the civil authorities hereinafter mentioned, anticipated as likely to occur, and, in either case, to be beyond the powers of the civil authorities to suppress, or to prevent or deal with,—whether such riot, disturbance or other emergency occurs, or is so anticipated within or without the municipality in which such corps is raised or organized:
> 2. The senior officer of the active militia present at any locality shall call out the same or such portion thereof as he considers necessary for the purpose of preventing or suppressing any such actual or anticipated riot or disturbance, or for the purpose of meeting and dealing with any such emergency as aforesaid, when thereunto required in writing by the chairman or custos of the quarter sessions of the peace, or any three justices of the peace of whom the warden, mayor, or other head of the municipality or county in which such riot, disturbance or other emergency occurs or is anticipated as aforesaid, may be one ; and he shall obey such instructions as are lawfully given to him by any justice of the peace in regard to the suppression of any such actual riot or disturbance, or in regard to the anticipation of such riot, disturbance or other emergency, or to the suppression of the same, or to the aid to be given to the civil power in case of any such riot, disturbance or other emergency.

The civic authorities acted under this provision of the law. They applied to the senior military officer on the spot, Col. Elliot, and Col. Elliot took such steps as he deemed necessary to deal with the situation. As a matter of fact, the government has no authority to do anything. The power is given, under the Act, to the civic authorities who are on the spot, and who must be presumed to know best what the requirements are and what the necessity is for taking a certain course. The government is powerless to act at all. One can see how absurd it would be otherwise. Suppose that riots were imminent or believed to be imminent and some alarm was felt, are troops to be sent hither and yon throughout the Dominion ? The thing would be utterly absurd and never was contemplated by the law. As a matter of fact, the law has been literally complied with, the government has done its full duty, and I think it is in the public interest that this matter should be understood once for all.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the municipality be expected to pay the cost of transportation and maintenance of these troops ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That is a matter of law.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Surely the government, under the Act, are responsible entirely for the number called out to suppress a riot. The mayor makes a requisition, and then the military officer on the spot has the authority to call out, not the number of troops required by the mayor, but the number he thinks may be required. The responsibility is upon him.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Certainly.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. He calls out the number required for the suppression of the trouble so that the responsibility as to the number and the time they will be engaged is entirely in the hands of the military authorities.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). As a matter of fact, the requisition does not necessarily call for any particular number of troops ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That must be determined by the senior officer. Would the minister read the portion of the statute which places that within the discretion of the commanding senior officer and also the portion which limits the period during which the troops are required ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. There is no limit.

Mr. CLARKE. Have the government taken any steps to do anything towards providing that these unfortunate men shall be paid their wages ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I need not tell my hon. friend, for he is aware, that the government can do nothing of that kind. But I may say that I have information from a private source this morning that arrangements have been made, and the men will be paid to-morrow.

PRIVILEGE—NATIONAL TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY—PETITIONS FROM BAGOT.

Mr. JOSEPH EDMOND MARCIL (Bagot). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I rise to a question of privilege. And before going into the matter to which I desire to draw your attention, I beg to ask the indulgence of hon. gentlemen on both sides of the House, as I intend to speak in the English language, with which I am not so familiar as with French, my mother tongue. Last week several petitions were presented from different constituencies of the Dominion asking this parliament not to proceed further with Bill (No. 235) relating to a National Transcontinental Railway, as the petitions pretend that this parliament has not enough information——

Mr. SPEAKER. I may call the attention of the hon. member (Mr. Marcil, Bagot) to the fact that, in a few moments, there will be a motion for Committee of Supply, and, if he does not intend to conclude with a motion, he might wait for the motion for Supply, when he will be free to speak.

Mr. MARCIL (Bagot). At the conclusion of my remarks, Mr. Speaker, I shall move the adjournment of the House. I was saying that the petitions presented pretend that this parliament should not proceed with this Grand Trunk Pacific Bill. Many such petitions have been presented, particularly from the county of Bagot which I have the honour to represent in this House. Amongst the petitions from the county of Bagot there is one from the parish of St. Théodore d'Acton, with whose electors I am well acquainted, and in which I have the honour to be well known. One reading these petitions and assuming them to be correct would, no doubt, form the opinion that a certain number in the county of Bagot are opposed to this transcontinental railway. Let me say that I was particularly surprised to read a petition from St. Théodore d'Acton presented to this House by the hon. member for Dorchester (Mr. Morin).

Mr. MORIN. I have not done that Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MARCIL (Bagot). The name of my hon. friend (Mr. Morin) is endorsed on the petitions.

Mr. MORIN. I did not put the names on the petition.

Mr. MARCIL (Bagot). I say the hon. gentleman presented the petition to the House. Knowing the opinion of the farmers of St. Théodore d'Acton, I was much surprised reading these names, particularly :—Damase Gregoire, Alexandre Vanasse, Ovide Tremblay, Isidore Jodoin, Laurent Brodeur, Victor Laliberté, Alfred Benoit, Octave Picard. Having remarked that most of the names on that petition were in the same handwriting, I thought it would be well for me to ask one of my friends in the town of Acton to make a little inquiry in the parish of Théodore d'Acton to see if these people had signed that petition. The time has been so short, my friend told me that he had not been able to see all, but that he had gone to the village of St. Théodore d'Acton and had seen some of those whose names appeared on this petition. I may be permitted, Mr. Speaker, to read to the House a statement showing the result of the inquiry made by my friend Mr. Bordua, secretary of the town of Acton, in the parish of St. Théodore d'Acton. The statement is in French, but I translate it :

We, the undersigned electors of the province of Quebec, for the county of Bagot, certify by these presents :

That we have never placed signatures, nor authorized any person whomsoever to inscribe our names on a petition addressed to the honourable Senate and House of Commons of Canada in parliament assembled, protesting against a measure now submitted to parliament concerning the subject of transportation facilities. We declare that we approve of the attitude taken by the government of the right hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier in regard to this project. We have entire confidence in his administration, and we confidently hope that the line of railway proposed by the government will be the object of a law before the prorogation of the present parliament. And each and all of us make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing it to be true, and knowing that it has the same force and effect as if it were made under oath, and by virtue of the Canada Evidence Act, 1893.

Declared before me at Acton, this 30th of September, 1903.

The hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) drew your attention to this matter, Mr. Speaker, and I thank him for having done so. In 'Hansard' of the 30th of September, I find the following attributed to yourself, Sir, in reply to the hon. member for Bellechasse :

Mr. SPEAKER. It certainly would be irregular that the signatures on petitions presented to this House should be signed by the same person. Petitions should be signed by those whose names are supposed to be attached to them. Rule 84 says :

Petitions to the House shall be presented by a member in his place, who shall be answerable that they do not contain impertinent or improper matter.'

If an hon. member when presenting a petition is answerable that it does not contain anything impertinent or improper, I should think he should be responsible if there is anything impertinent or irregular in the petition presented by him. I have no doubt that these petitions have been sent in order to mislead the House and the hon. the Senate; and I may be permitted to say that if enough time were allowed to see all those whose names appear on these petitions, I am sure it would be possible to obtain from a great majority of them the same testimony as I have read here from some. I should think that, for the honour of the hon. member for Dorchester it would be well for him to ask permission to withdraw these petitions. If the law of our province permits of the vindication of the honour and the rights of the electors of the county of Bagot, I may say at once that as soon as the session is over, I have the intention of taking the opportunity to do so. This is all I have to say, and, I hope that, in saying it, I have not been offensive to anybody. I move the adjournment of the House.

Mr. MORIN. I would like to say a few words in regard to these petitions. I may say to the House that in regard to this Transcontinental Railway Bill I took no part directly or indirectly in any of the counties of this country. Petitions have been sent here from the county of Dorchester, but I know nothing about them, I do not know who sent them here, I do not know who wrote to the county of Dorchester to have these petitions signed. Some days ago a gentleman was here who had a handful of those petitions, and he said to me : Will you present them ? I never read them, I do not know where they came from. I took no part whatever in procuring those petitions, and I have nothing to be sorry for. I can throw the first stone therefore in regard to that matter.

Mr. TALBOT. Before the hon. gentleman takes his seat, I desire to ask him if he knows anything about these petitions from St. Prospère and from St. Malachie, in the county of Dorchester, which petitions I now hold in my hand ?

Mr. MORIN. Very well, am I guilty because the hon. gentleman holds them in his hands. I have already stated that I took no part directly or indirectly in procuring these petitions. I have said that petitions have been sent here from the county of Dorchester but that I know nothing about them. The hon. gentleman may hold whatever he pleases in his hands or in his hat, he is responsible for them himself.

Amendment (Mr. Marcil, Bagot) negatived.

SUPPLIES FOR GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS.

Bill (No. 258) to amend the Act respecting the Department of Railways and Canals, was read the second time, and House went into committee thereon.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. We have no copy of the Bill.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This Bill is in the exact words of the resolution (page 11189 of the 'Hansard,' which has already passed the House.

Mr. MORIN. Is the Bill printed in French ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

On section 1,

1. Advances may be made from time to time, out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada, to the Minister of Railways and Canals, to enable him to obtain, produce, manufacture, use and dispose of all necessary materials, equipment and stores required or used in connection with the construction, renewal, maintenance and operation of the Canadian government railways, and for the establishment and conduct of railway stores.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. It seems to me this is giving new powers to the minister. I understood that everything used in the construction and maintenance of that railway, that was ordinarily charged to capital account, would have to be voted by the House. This is simply for the purpose of balancing the stores account. You did not intend to make any purchases unless the money was voted by the House, purchases either chargeable to capital account or for improvements.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am afraid that is hardly the correct way to describe it. Assuming that the stores account stands at this date at a million and a half dollars—I have not the latest figures, but the latest return in the blue book is about a million and a half—assuming it stands at that figure, this Bill will not give us power to purchase one penny's worth, it will simply legalize the existing stores account which has been in operation for many years. It will not give us power to add one penny to it any time. As these stores pass out into the general service and are paid out of the appropriations, then we will have a standing credit to buy other goods ; whether they be for revenue account or for capital account, they would go into stores for the time being, in certain cases, and when they are charged out of stores, into track for example, they will then go to reduce the stores account. So this is not an enlargement of the powers of the government in any way, it does not increase the purchasing power by one dollar beyond what we have already, but it gives legal warrant for a practice which has existed for a quarter of a century.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. When stores account is depleted, then there is a credit to the Intercolonial to the extent of the depletion.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Charged to the Intercolonial. If goods are taken out of stores then they are charged against the revenue expenditure or capital expenditure, as the case may be, against the appropriation of the year.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. No, you get a straight credit of the stores account. Suppose there is $1,200,000 at the present time, and you deplete that stores account by $300,000 ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. How ?

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. In any manner you like, by payment, or sales, or in any other way, out of stores account. Does not that leave you a credit between the difference of the sales and the actual amount of the credit ? Then you have the absolute disposition of that.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. You would credit the stores account.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. You have the absolute disposition, for the use of the Intercolonial, of the difference.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We cannot spend any money for any purpose that has not been appropriated by parliament. What we do by this Bill is simply, if I may use a homely illustration, to open a shop. We have goods in stock for which we get credit, and as they are used out of stock, they are charged up against the particular service in which they are used, and when they are so taken out of the stores account and charged against working expenses or construction, as the case may be, there is a credit to the stores account.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). In connection with what my hon. friend from South Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart) has just said in connection with the statute, it may be as the hon. Minister of Finance has sugested, but I would hardly think so. The words of section 1 of the Bill are very plain, it seems to me. They are :

> Advances may be made from time to time, out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada, to the Minister of Railways and Canals, to enable him to obtain, produce, manufacture, use and dispose of all necessary materials, equipment and stores required or used in connection with the construction, renewal, maintenance and operation of the Canadian government railways, and for the establishment and conduct of railway stores.

Is that not equivalent to a parliamentary appropriation ? Does it not permit the government, in the absence of an appropriation, to make advances to the Minister of Railways and Canals out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is correct, but the advances have already been made and the goods are in store now.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). While there may be some goods in store as to which some advances may have been made, the section seems to be a general one which would operate at any time in the future, and which would therefore permit future advances to be made out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund as advances without a parliamentary appropriation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The only authority that would be given the government would be this : Suppose the stores account is $1,500,000 to-day and we took out of it $100,000 and put it into the track, it is credited to the stores account and charged to working expenses or capital account, as the case may be, according as parliament has appropriated the money. Then we have reduced the stores account to $1,400,000 and if we desired to do so we would have the right to put in another $100,000, but as long as the stores account remained as it is at present, we would not have purchased anything on this account. It is intended to give the government a standing credit for the Intercolonial Railway, but we cannot take out of the stores one penny's worth of goods except it be applied for the purpose for which parliament has appropriated the money, unless we sell the goods to outsiders, in which case they become a credit to the stores account. We might sell our goods and credit them to the stores account, or, if we take rails out of the stores and put them into the track, we charge them against the appropriation for the year for that purpose.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Where is the limitation in the Bill to which the hon. minister refers, to the effect that if there is a balance to the stores account of the Intercolonial Railway the balance shall only be applied to the ordinary working expenses of the road, or to capital account, as parliament has authorized ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. You cannot use the stores account for any other purpose than for the purpose of the Intercolonial Railway, and you must charge it against the particular service for which the money has been appropriated. This account is not a new one. There is absolutely nothing new in this proposal.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I know there is not.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We are simply doing what my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Haggart) did for many years without law, but we are now proposing to do it with law. He had his stores account for a long number of years. He bought what he liked, and charged it to stores account. He did not require an appropriation from parliament to buy goods and put them into the stores account. That method has prevailed for a quarter of a century, and under our system of government anything which has become a custom begins to be almost regarded as a matter of law, but when my attention was called to this matter, I thought that it should be put in a proper legal shape. We have exactly the same principle now, though on a smaller scale, in connection with the King's Printer. The King's Printer has to buy and keep on hand a stock of materials for which he has no especial parliamentary appropriation. The appropriation for the printing is given to each department or to parliament, as the case may be, but the King's Printer must have his material on hand to do the work, and therefore he has a standing credit. He has had it for years, and last year we gave him by statute a credit of $100,000 for this purpose. He is authorized to buy goods, and these goods are charged to the stores account. If in my own department, for instance, I want some printing done, I have a vote of parliament to provide for the printing, and I buy that printing from the King's Printer, just as if I bought it from an outsider. In that way we simply provide the King's Printer with a means of carrying his stock. The same principle applies to the Railway Department. We provide the Railway Department with the means of keeping a stock on hand.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. There is no doubt as to what the intention of the hon. Minister of Finance is. The only doubt in my mind was as to whether when there was a credit to the stores account you limited the expenditure on the Intercolonial Railway to the amount which had been appropriated to operating expenses or capital account. I suppose it is so, as the hon. minister says that any credit that is given to the stores account should be used for the purpose only for which it is voted, that is to say, for the ordinary expenses of the Intercolonial Railway, or to be applied to something for which it has been voted on capital account.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Certainly, it cannot be applied to anything except that for which parliament has made an appropriation—either to working expenses or to capital account. There is no qualification as to that.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I really cannot so understand it. It seems to me to be in the same position which was mentioned the other day by the hon. Minister of Finance when he inquired whether the statute for enabling the government to make certain increases in salaries would enable payments to be made without a special appropriation. The hon. Minister of Finance took the ground that the Bill itself was a parliamentary appropriation, and that no further parliamentary appropriation would be required. I am not dealing with the book-keeping methods of the Intercolonial Railway, but I think I can understand the words of the statute fairly well, and while section 2 deals with some book-keeping matter in connection with the Intercolonial Railway which I do not profess to understand as well as the hon. Minister of Finance or my hon. friend from South Lanark, nevertheless, section 1, which stands by itself distinctly states, that advances may be made out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada to the Minister of Railways and Canals for a certain purpose, and there is no limit upon it. It is true that you have at the end of the section the words :

> And for the establishment and conduct of railway stores.

But the use of these words does not place any limitation whatever upon the words which precede. These are supplementary to the language which precedes, and not in limitation of it. You have the distinct provision, as far as the word 'railways' in the last line of the clause is concerned, that advances may be made, and if you have a statute to that effect, what need is there of any parliamentary appropriation ? It stands in the place of a parliamentary appropriation. I do not know anything about the usage or practice itself. If it be true that moneys have been used in this way in the past without parliamentary appropriation, that is a matter to be considered. What we are dealing with now is the question as to whether or not we shall authorize that by statute. I must confess that, after having given the best possible consideration to it, I am still unable to construe the statute in the way in which my hon. friend has done.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If we had section 1 authorizing the advance without section 2, I think the criticism of my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) would be just. There must be a parliamentary appropriation to allow of the purchase of goods to the extent of $1,500,000. Section 2 goes on to say that the existing stores account is to be taken as part of this. It says :

Stores accounts shall be established, as of the date 30th June, 1903, in connection with the Intercolonial Railway and the Prince Edward Island Railway.

And that these accounts shall be charged with all the different items in the different accounts as respects that. Section 2 is intended practically to say that it is not intended to enlarge your powers of purchase, but it gives you in addition the power to take your existing stores into account, and when you have taken your existing stores into account you have exhausted your powers of purchase. That is what it means, and if there is any doubt about the matter, I shall be only too glad to accept any suggestion that will make it clear.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am most anxious to appreciate the arguments of the hon. minister, but I cannot see anything in section 2 which limits the broad language of section 1 in the way he thinks it is limited, and I would suggest to my hon. friend, in order to make plain what he desires, if I thoroughly understand his intention, that we should add a clause to the Bill providing :

Nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize the advance of moneys in the absence of parliamentary appropriation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Oh, no, that would not do ; this is a parliamentary appropriation, but we have already expended it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am dealing with the future. We can arrange about the past as you like. I think that in the future we should provide that no money shall be paid out for capital account or operation of the Intercolonial Railway, or anything else, unless you have a parliamentary appropiation for the purpose. It seems to me to be a perfectly workable proposition to add a provision to the clause of this Act that in future advances shall not be made in the absence of the parliamentary appropriations.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That would not do ; that would defeat the purpose of the Bill. It would not do to say that no purchase shall be made without a special parliamentary appropriation. Undoubtedly if we did not have the stores on hand, this would be a credit in advance for the Intercolonial Railway of one and a-half million dollars. The only reason why it is not now an advance is that the expenditure has been made without any legal authority. Under the old system the goods are now in store. But it is intended to be, and should be, a credit to the Intercolonial Railway to the extent of a million and a-half dollars. That is to say, the officials of the Intercolonial Railway should not have the right to pay out money to the extent of one dollar without a parliamentary appropriation, but it will not do to say that they cannot have a stores account until you have provided for every particular item. The Intercolonial Railway officials must be able to carry on their business just as a merchant does. A merchant must have stock on hand to meet the demands that may arise. Just as the King's Printer, for instance, must have stock on hand to do business, so must the Intercolonial Railway, and it is now intended to give, in a legal way, the credit which they have had for twenty-five years past. But the Intercolonial Railway has no right to apply these goods to any purpose until parliament has authorized their use. The fiscal year closes on the 30th of June, and let us suppose that you have then a large stock of coal on hand. That stands in the stores account, and you have no authority to pay that out of the appropriation of that year. You can only take out of the appropriation for that year as much as will pay for the coal used up to the 30th of June. You must have the balance of the coal on hand, and where is your parliamentary authority ? This is your parliamentary authority ; by it the Intercolonial Railway officials are allowed to keep on hand a stock of various articles aggregating $1,500,000.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. How would it do to put at the beginning of the clause :

For the purposes of a stores account advances may be made.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have no objection to that, but it will not make it any better.

Mr. TAYLOR. Will the acting Minister of Railways tell me that this is not placing in the hands of the Minister of Railways power to spend $10,000,000, or $15,000,000, or $20,000,000 every year, if he sees fit to do so, for the purposes of the railway, without coming to parliament and asking an appropriation ? You have $1,500,000 capital in stores on the first of July.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They are not necessarily on capital account.

Mr. TAYLOR. But they are paid for and are there in store. During July the minister can use half a million dollars' worth of these stores, spreading them out over the different works. On the first of August he can go to one of his political friends and buy that half a million dollars' worth of stores and put them in store. On the first of September again the stores may have run down $1,000,000, so that there will be only half a million dollars' worth on hand, and then the minister can go to another friend and buy one million dollars' worth of stores, put them in store, and he can repeat that month after month.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. What is he to do with the $15,000,000 of stores after he takes them out of the store ?

Mr. TAYLOR. He takes them out for the purposes of the road.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. But he cannot do that unless this parliament has appropriated $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 for that purpose ; he cannot take a dollar's worth of goods out of store except for the purpose for which parliament has authorized the expenditure.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does the Minister of Finance mean that the proposition is to convert a portion of the consolidated revenue fund of Canada into a supply of stores for the Intercolonial Railway, and then to use the stores only so far as you are permitted by a parliamentary appropriation ? Is that practically the object ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is it. That has been the practice for twenty-five years, but there has been no authority for it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What I want to know is why there should be power to convert a portion of the consolidated revenue fund of Canada into stores' supplies for the Intercolonial Railway without a parliamentary appropriation for that purpose ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is the parliamentary appropriation ; this Bill is a parliamentary appropriation.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Then, I was right in the view I first took, that you are doing away with the necessity of a parliamentary appropriation for the purpose of converting a portion of the consolidated revenue fund of Canada into a supply of stores for the Intercolonial Railway. I am not criticising the proposal, I am only endeavouring to understand.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. A merchant will not sell all his stock within one year ; he must have a surplus to carry him over the year and to meet new conditions that arise, and just in the same way the Intercolonial Railway could not possibly order exactly the quantity of goods required to serve it for the twelve months after the end of the fiscal year, closing on the 30th of June. The fiscal year closes on June 30, and in May or April you may find yourself in want of coal. You could not figure out the exact amount you would require for the balance of the fiscal year, so you buy a lump amount, and if you are wise you look a little ahead. How are you to pay for this coal ? We want to give a legal authority for carrying it in stock, but before one ton of it can be taken out of store and used on the Intercolonial Railway there must be a parliamentary appropriation.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The difficulty, suggested by hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Fielding) is the difficulty of knowing the quantity of stores that will be required ; but is that not a difficulty which we meet every day in making parliamentary votes ? We are told by the government : We do not know how much will be spent, but every dollar will be accounted for. Could you not do the same thing with stores, making a liberal appropriation, and then using such stores as may be necessary? You would, of course, have to make a generous appropriation, and then if an emergency occurred, could you not resort to Governor General's warrants ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. What we are now proposing has already been done in another branch of the service, and it seems reasonable that it should be done with regard to the Intercolonial Railway. The condition in regard to the railway service is not exactly the same as in those services to which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden, Halifax) has just referred. We have had to do, in the case of the King's Printer, what we are now proposing to do in the case of the Intercolonial Railway. The two cases are exactly alike only that the appropriation for the King's Printer is a modest sum, and for the Intercolonial Railway you must have a larger amount. With regard to the particular words of section 2, to which my hon. friend has referred, I am afraid I am open to the criticism—although I may not get the credit for it—of allowing the Auditor General to have his own way. It is his suggestion that a clause should be worded in that way. In this whole matter I am trying to meet his wishes.

At one o'clock, committee took recess.

Committee resumed at three o'clock.

Mr. BARKER. With the explanations that have been given of section 1, so far as I have heard them, I do not see any great objection to it, except that I think that the words in the last line, ' and for the establishment and conduct of railway stores,' are somewhat indefinite. The words, ' produce and manufacture,' in the third line seem to me to cover everything that is necessary. I do not know what is meant or intended by establishing and conducting railway stores.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not attach any importance to those particular words. I think they are superfluous. I may say, however, that the clause was largely the work of the Auditor General himself.

Mr. BARKER. Then I would suggest, so as to bring all the advances and payments that may be made clearly within the provisions of the Consolidated Revenue and Audit Act, the addition of these words: 'The making of such payments shall be subject to all the provisions and regulations in that behalf of the Consolidated Revenue and Audit Act.' I think that is important, because there are provisions made for the safety of the government and the people with respect to advances of all kinds, and it would be well to use such words here so as to make the meaning perfectly clear. If it is essential that there should be the utmost care and scrutiny about anything it is with regard to stores.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is certainly the intention of the Act, and if my hon. friend thinks the addition of those words will make it clear, I have no objection. As I have said, the wording of this Act is largely that of the Auditor General, and I thought that if he was satisfied with it, the rest of us might be. But I have no objection to the addition of those words.

Mr. BARKER. I spoke to the Auditor General about them, and he thinks they would be an improvement.

Amendment agreed to, and section as amended agreed to.

On section 2,

Mr. BARKER. I think that this section requires more consideration than would at first sight appear necessary. 'These accounts shall respectively be debited with the balance of stores then held on account of each railway.' I presume that means that the amount of stores to the debit of the accounts shall be accepted under this new arrangement as final.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not necessarily. They will be subject to audit like everything else.

Mr. BARKER. They were audited presumably in the past. On the 30th of June, 1903, say there is $1,000,000 of stores to the debit of stores account. That will have to be transferred at once to the debit of the new account. It is quite true that every year an audit takes place when the Auditor General counts the stores on hand, what may be called an ordinary stock-taking, but that goes on generally speaking in all railway companies. Yet I think there are very few companies that will not find, in the course of years, a large amount of material on hand which may be worth only one-third or one-fourth of what they are valued at in the accounts. I very little doubt that if a thorough stock-taking of all the materials in the stores on the 30th of June, 1902 were made by an expert railway man, he would cast aside all obsolete materials as so much waste iron, and there would be found an enormous difference between what appears in the stores account and the actual value. I would therefore object to this clause being supposed in any way to settle the stores account. I would object to its being held, assuming that $1,500,000 be transferred to stores account in pursuance of this resolution, that that should end the account. I think it is of the utmost importance that there should be a thorough stock-taking of all the materials in the stores of these two railways. I would prefer that the hon. minister had provided in this section that before a new account is established, there should be that thorough stock-taking, and placed to the credit of the stores account only the actual value for railway purposes of every article. I recollect very well that on the change of administration in the Western Railway a thorough stock-taking was made of every item in the stores, and it certainly did a very great deal of good. I think that there ought to be such stock-taking on the Intercolonial and the Prince Edward Island Railway at present. No merchant or manufacturer would be content with a perfunctory stock-taking, just carrying the items on from year to year at cost price, though many of them, may have become obsolete and have to be sold as old scrap. It does strike me that this second clause may be used as a very convenient way of getting over that under the plea that the Act of Parliament authorizes the amounts to be passed and charged up as they stand on a particular day. I would therefore suggest that this clause should be revised, and that before the new Act is started, there will be a thorough stock-taking, under the supervision of the Auditor General, and that the accounts shall then be started with the actual values of the materials.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I fail to see that there is any need for a revision of the clause in order to serve the purpose which my hon. friend has in view. That there should be frequent stock-taking at proper intervals and that these should have due regard for depreciation, I admit. This is not the creation of a new account. This account will have in the books precisely the same value, force and effect as it has to-day. It has been examined and audited by the Auditor General, with all the unlimited powers he possesses, and we have no reason to doubt that it is fair and correct. We propose to take that account because it represents the cost of these stores to the department and has been examined in the usual way. We are opening a new account but giving legal authority to the account as it exists. My hon. friend says we should take stock and see whether there is depreciation, and he adds that that would be a very proper thing to provide in connection with this Bill. I do not see that by opening up a stores account under the name of 'new stores account' you do wrong by taking the figures exactly as they are in the old stores account, unless you suppose that those figures are not correct. But we have no reason to doubt their correctness. We are simply taking an existing account and giving it legal authority. It does not diminish anybody's rights to examine, criticise and condemn. We have to take the account as it stands until somebody shows there is something wrong in it. All that my hon. friend says with regard to stock-taking I admit, but I cannot see that it has any particular relation to this Bill.

Mr. BARKER. The reason I suggest that there should be stock-taking, now that the hon. gentleman is making a new departure——

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, he is mistaken.

Mr. BARKER. I regard it as a new departure. The hon. gentleman tells us that an audit has already taken place under the supervision of the Auditor General. Well, the Auditor General told us in the Public Accounts Committee and he has told me outside that he has nobody who knows anything about the value of these things capable of going into the stores and picking out what is obsolete and what is not. Such an audit for the purpose of stock-taking is absolutely valueless, and as you are passing an Act of parliament to start a new stores account and are making a new departure, starting fresh in the year 1903, upon a balance appearing on the 30th of June, it is important that you should start that account upon a proper footing and that the debit to it should be the actual value of the stores taken over. That is especially necessary having regard to what the Minister of Finance says, that in the past everything has been accurately audited by an auditor who tells us he knows nothing about it. If it has not been audited by the Auditor General that is the Auditor General's own fault. This happens to be in that branch of the Auditor General's business in which we admit his right to deal with matters as he pleases. There are some things in which, I think, the Auditor General takes authority which does not belong to him, but, in this case he has complete authority to deal with the matter, and, if he has not carried out the audit, the fault is his own. Of course, I do not say this as reproaching the Auditor General. All I say is that he is responsible. If he says he does not know anybody who can do that work, that is not the fault of parliament or of the government. The statute—and we are dealing with amendments to the statute—gives him unlimited power in this matter—there is no limitation as to time or the person he shall engage for the work. If the audit is not satisfactory, we shall be glad to have him make it satisfactory. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Barker) is quite mistaken when he says we are opening a new account or creating anything new. There is nothing new proposed. This account has been in existence for years. But attention has been called to the fact that it rests on no statutory authority, and we seek to amend the law in that regard. But, by creating statutory authority for the account, you do not create the account. That account is there, and we take it as it stands. If there is anything wrong in it, hon. gentlemen are as free to point it out in the future as they are to-day. The passing of this Bill does not change the situation one iota.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The object is plain. Those stores stand charged to the Intercolonial according to their valuation in the stores account. I can see that there would be a difficulty as the stores account has been kept in the past. Suppose that there is a sale of stores to the Canadian Pacific or the Grand Trunk. The amount of money received for the stores is paid into the consolidated fund of the Dominion, and not into the fund for stores. How are you going to get it back to the stores account unless you have a credit? You must have a credit account somewhere.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have it now.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. You are constituting it under this Bill.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, we have it. We are giving it legal authority by this Bill.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I do not see how you can possibly have it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Haggart) may not see how we can have it, but all the years he was a Minister of Railways he had exactly this system to such an extent as he saw fit to use it.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Then, the government seek to legalize what was in vogue before. I can see the need for the system in order to get money back into the stores account in case of a sale.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We are not worrying about the legal authority to sell, it is the legal authority to buy that is causing the difficulty. If we had $1,000,000 worth of stores and sold $100,000 worth to a railway or anybody else, that money would go into the consolidated revenue fund, as the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Haggart) says. It is then credited to the stores account of the Intercolonial, and we have the right to buy $100,000 worth of stores in place of what we have sold.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. That is what you want to do—to give credit to the stores account. You may have done that before, but you have no legal authority.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have no legal authority to buy—to spend the money. We do not worry about legal authority to receive money; we are ready to receive it without legal authority, if the owners will give it to us. But the legal authority to buy is what worries us.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The hon. Finance Minister has stated the course pursued in these matters in the past, and, no doubt, has stated it accurately. I can understand, as I say, that this credit has been necessary in order to get back money into the stores account in case of a sale. To give legal authority for that, I understand to be the object of the Bill.

Mr. BARKER. I do not know whether the last words of section 2 of the Bill are intended to carry out what the Minister says:

> And shall be credited with the values of materials, equipment and stores as issued and charged to proper appropriations or otherwise disposed of.

I suppose these words were intended to cover the case of sale?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. There is no doubt about what the intention of the Bill is. The minister has been speaking of what has been done hitherto.

Mr. BARKER. I would again call attention to the question of the audit of railway stores and other matters of that kind requiring technical knowledge. The Minister of Finance tells us again and again that the Auditor General has had every officer, every clerk that he requires for the purpose of such an audit. I can only say that the Auditor General tells me the direct opposite of that. He says that he considers it of very great importance that he should have an auditor of technical knowledge for such work, and that he has no such officer. It is absurd to say that you can take a clerk out of a merchant's office or a bank and set him to audit a railway stores account. He does not know that he is dealing with. You might as well ask me to go down and audit a druggist's stock in trade. I might find some stuff in a small bottle worth $10, and in the next bottle, twice as much in bulk worth 10 cents, and, having no technical knowledge of the value, I should have no means of knowing that there was a difference. You may send an ordinary bookkeeper to audit the stores of the Intercolonial if you like, but you might as well keep him at Ottawa and save his expenses. The store-keeper might show him thousands of tons of metal represented in the books by a certain amount, and the auditor might take that material as good value for the money, and yet, it might be mere scrap iron and unfit for use upon a railway or in railway construction. For a thorough audit there must be technical knowledge on the part of the auditor. The Auditor General has no such officer. And I wish to say further, on this question, that we do want the audit of an officer of the government. The Auditor General is not a servant of the government, but a servant of parliament, and so represents the whole people. The auditor at Moncton is simply an officer of the government of the day, and can be dismissed by the government of the day. He has no independent authority.

What we want is an officer, a clerk, an auditor, solely under the authority of the Auditor General, that he shall have such a man on his staff as will have sufficient knowledge to enable him to make an audit such as is required here. Now, the Auditor General has not such a man, he has told us in the public accounts that he has not any expert of that kind; he has told me personally that he has no such person. Yet the Finance Minister speaks as if the Auditor has everything he requires. The Auditor General perhaps has not asked for another clerk. We know the difficulty that heads of departments have in asking for extra expenditures for their staff. Even if the Auditor General has neglected to ask for it, in parliament we have the right to ask for it, and I say that the Auditor General should be supplied with an officer of that character, and that the accounts of the Intercolonial and the Prince Edward Island Railway should be audited in the future in a way they have not been audited in the past.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have not made any allusion to the audit of any government official at Moncton or elsewhere. My observations this afternoon have reference to the auditing of the Auditor General. Now, there is a question of fact between the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) and myself. I stated the other day that we had supplied the Auditor General with all the officials he had asked for. My hon. friend says the Auditor General tells him now that is not true. Now I am bound to say that if the Auditor General stated that to my hon. friend, I cannot understand it, for it is at variance with the Auditor General's own statement to me within the last fifteen minutes, and I am bound to believe that there is a misunderstanding between the Auditor General and the hon. member for Hamilton. I again say that we have supplied the Auditor General with every official that he has asked for. Now he is the judge of how many officials he wants. We have a right to refuse, we have not exercised that right. But I say that the auditing of the public accounts is the business of the Auditor General; I say that while there are certain things that I think the Auditor General is undertaking which do not properly belong to him, in this particular business he has a right to determine how he will audit the accounts of the Intercolonial, and they have been audited in the way that suited him. I say he has asked for no official who has not been given to him. If he says, I have not got an official—I cannot help that. We cannot go and thrust officials upon the Auditor General, we have no desire to do so. I say that he has audited all these accounts in such manner as he thought proper, and if he wanted any more officials it is not my business to go and thrust officials upon him, it is his business to say, I require further help. He has not been unduly modest in the past in asking for help—I do not say he has asked it improperly; but whenever he has found it desirable to have an additional staff he has asked for it, and got it. I want to repeat again without equivocation, that we have given the Auditor General every official he has asked for. He has audited these accounts in the past in the way that was pleasing to himself, and it will be quite time enough when he asks for further officials to supply them.

Mr. BARKER. I did not say that the Auditor General had complained that he had been refused any official by the government, any clerk, or any auditor—I said nothing of the kind. I simply said that the Auditor General had told me, and he had told the Public Accounts Committee, that he had not an auditor of the expert knowledge that was necessary to inspect these particular accounts.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Does not the hon. member for Hamilton mean to say that the Auditor General told him that he had not an officer who was a judge of the value of material, instead of saying that he had not an officer capable of auditing the accounts?

Mr. BARKER. Precisely, that is what I am talking about. I have endeavoured over and over again to explain what the Auditor General says with regard to the auditing and inspection of the railway accounts, that he has not an official on his staff with the technical knowledge necessary to enable him properly to audit those accounts. I have never said nor pretended to say that the Auditor General has asked anything that had been refused. He has stated in the Public Accounts Committee that he had no person with a technical knowledge that would enable him to do this, and I claim it was the business of the government, having heard that, to provide him with such an officer. Has the government done it? I have taken the opportunity on more than one occasion, both in the committee and in the House, to say that he ought to be supplied with such an officer. I say it is a farce to attempt to audit railway accounts by a man who is a mere bookkeeper, without any railway knowledge. A man cannot audit these accounts without information that would enable him to do so. I endeavoured to point out a few minutes ago cases where his audit would be absolutely useless unless from want of knowledge. As I said, he may come across tons of materials in store that are absolutely obsolete; he has no knowledge whether those should be classed as scrap-iron or not, or whether they should be charged up in the accounts for use upon the railway. He should be a man able to say to the general manager: Are not these obsolete articles? are they of any use? what is the use of lumbering the stores with them? should they not be sold as scrap-iron? Naturally a general manager may say: I do not want to sell these articles as scrap, they stand in my stores at five cents a pound, and if I sell them I will only get three-quarters of a cent a pound. But that is just what we want an auditor for. He should say: I cannot value these as railway articles, as railway appliances, they are of no value except for scrap-iron. That is the kind of audit we want. I am not complaining that the Minister of Finance has refused the application of the Auditor General for such a man, I say we ought to have such a man, and I say again that the Auditor General has told me several times that such an auditor would be of great value to him, because he himself is entirely unacquainted with that subject, and he has nobody in his department that is acquainted with that subject.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend appears to me to have extraordinary views of the duty and jurisdiction of an auditor of accounts. Take his own illustration. He says: How could any one audit the books of a druggist without expert knowledge. Now does my hon. friend say that a professional auditor must have expert knowledge of the values of every item that a druggist would purchase? A man who has experience in the prices of all kinds of goods may not be able to make up a financial statement, may not be able to go through those books. I think my hon. friend will admit that the officials of the department are responsible for the purchase of these things needed on the railway, they are responsible for the prices they pay for them. It is not the duty of an Auditor General to go over the accounts and say whether he thinks the prices paid were fair market prices; that is surely not what an auditor is for. The banks have a professional expert auditor, but he does not go over all the securities of the bank and say whether they are good or bad; the auditor of a loan company does not inquire into the value of the assets or the nature of the securities.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Does he not inquire into the value of the securities ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The auditor does not value the securities. How could any professional auditor go over every item of the stock and say whether it was purchased at the proper value ? That is not his duty.

Mr. BARKER. If an auditor is going over the books of an investment company and he finds stocks valued in the security list at par, and he knew that they were only worth fifty cents on the dollar, do you mean to say that it is not his duty so to report them ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think my hon. friend would, if he was an auditor. My hon. friend being an honest man, if he was drawing money from a company to audit its books, and he noticed anything of that kind, no doubt he would report it to the president and directors of the company. That is the only duty he would have to perform. It always appeared to me that the Auditor General does not need a staff of experts for each department.

Mr. BARKER. I did not say that.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Practically that is what it comes to. My hon. friend knows very well that an auditor of an investment company does not go over the value of each piece of property on which they have a loan, and say whether the value is a fair one or not.

Mr. BARKER. Is the hon. gentleman not aware that the expenditure on both capital and income account for one year on the Intercolonial Railway is about $10,000,000, and should we not have an expert auditor for that one item alone ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. You might keep an expert auditor for one item and not for another. The officials of railway departments are charged with the administration of the department. They are responsible for the conduct of the department. The auditor audits the accounts to see whether the stores have been purchased and the accounts properly kept. We are to be the judges of the conduct of the officers of the department. I think it would be a very proper thing for the Auditor General, if any of his staff in going over these accounts noticed any amount as having been paid which was excessive or extravagant or irregular, to report the fact to this House. But to say that the Auditor General should be the judge of the prices is an altogether different thing and it would be impossible that such a state of affairs could exist. In each department there are officers specially attached to each branch who have to certify before the auditor will pass an account that the price paid is fair and just. It is upon that expert that we place the responsibility and the minister assumes responsibility for his official. The minister comes before parliament and the country and is required to justify the conduct of his department. The Auditor General could not very well be called upon to judge in regard to every item as to whether the price paid is too much or not.

Mr. COCHRANE. How should I know as a member of the Public Accounts Committee anything about the values of the commodities in store if the auditor did not act as an expert and did not know the values ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The official of the department has to sign the account. He is an expert. He is our employee. He is the man we hold responsible.

Mr. COCHRANE. If he is the man who is held responsible what is the use of sending an auditor there at all ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The auditor has a different duty to perform. It is his duty to audit the accounts but that is a different thing from fixing the values. Each department could not wait to consult the auditor as to the price or value of goods before making a purchase. If the auditor notices anything excessive or unfair it would be his duty to report, it would be the duty of the officer who is responsible to give an explanation to his minister and the duty of the minister to explain to the House as to whether there was anything in the charge or not. The conditions and circumstances are so different in different sections of the Dominion and in different seasons of the year that nobody not familiar with the conditions at a particular time could judge as to whether the prices were fair and just or not. The chief engineer of the department is responsible for that. He has under him on the spot, in the locality where the work is going on or where the purchases are proposed to be made, a man in whom he places confidence and who reports to him as to values and whose accounts he endorses. It seems impossible to hold the Auditor General responsible for the conduct of every department. There would not be much use in having any departments at all if he were to be the sole judge as to how, when and at what prices articles are to be purchased. We have a large staff in each department and it is to the judgment of these men that we must look to determine whether the accounts are fair or not. The Auditor General simply deals with the money part of it. My hon. friend (Mr. Barker), on second thought, must see that the proposition which he makes is thoroughly impracticable. There is a responsibility upon the head of the department to see that his department is properly and economically managed and he has to answer to the House for the expenditure of the money which is appropriated to his department. The Auditor General should not be expected to become responsible for the prices paid for goods. If, as the hon. member for Hamilton suggested, they were taking stock and if for that special purpose the Auditor General wanted a technical officer to place a value upon the stores at the time of stock-taking I could understand that there might be some force in what he has said, but to make a general proposition that the Auditor General is to be responsible for the prices paid for stores is to suggest something which is impracticable and impossible.

Mr. CLANCY. It does not seem to me at all impossible because the auditor might be an officer who had all the qualifications of an auditor and still have in addition to those technical knowledge that would enable him to perform the duties that have been referred to by my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker). My hon. friend pointed out a very striking case, namely, that in the stores account there might be the accumulations of years that were charged at the price at which they were originally purchased. Every person knows that many of the stores might not be worth one-tenth of what they cost. During the time that the accumulation is going on there must be a false account in regard to them.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They might be worth more.

Mr. CLANCY. Possibly, they might be in some instances. My hon. friend from Hamilton pointed out that there should be a technical officer who was an auditor as well. It is a case of stock-taking once a year. It is just the same as if an auditor were auditing the accounts of an insurance or a loan company. One of the things he would look into particularly would be the securities and the values of these securities and he would have to value them for what they were worth at the time. Why should we not have the same system in connection with the Intercolonial Railway? It is a very large concern. There are immense sums of money expended from year to year. I can quite understand that neither the government nor the general manager is at all anxious that these accounts shall be cut down. It is no reflection upon them at all when I say that. The general disposition is to make the best showing possible. The hon. Minister of Public Works says that the government are responsible, but I think he is going too far with his responsibility. The responsibility of the government only goes to the extent that we can turn them out of office when they do wrong. They do not redeem the losses that are made; their responsibility is not in dollars and cents and therefore there should be an officer to stand between the people and the government, I do not care how well meaning they may be. To have a healthy state of things you must have business carried on in a business way. There is absolutely no difference between auditing the Intercolonial Railway accounts by a technical officer who understands values and who would go into the stores and take stock, valuing the goods that were there, separating those goods that might be sold for purposes other than scrap iron from those that will be nothing more nor less than scrap iron——

Mr. HEYD. That would not be an auditor.

Mr. CLANCY. My hon. friend (Mr. Heyd) does not seem to understand yet. He would be an auditor with technical knowledge.

Mr. HEYD. Where can you find an auditor with that technical knowledge? You cannot do it.

Mr. CLANCY. My hon. friend has a very much smaller opinion of the possibilities of men of ordinary intelligence than either I or this committee have.

Mr. CHARLTON. Will the hon. gentleman tell us the difference between the functions of an auditor and of a valuator? It strikes me that he is confusing the work of two different classes of officials.

Mr. CLANCY. The difference is, in general terms, very distinct. The valuator is one who has a knowledge of the goods he is valuating. He must be an expert and a man of knowledge in that particular line, but it does not follow that he may not be a first-class accountant, an auditor in every sense of the word. Auditing is not a mere matter of seeing whether there are receipts for all the expenditures; an auditor must see whether the accounts were authorized how the money was provided, and whether the payments were legal or not. It does not follow that because a valuator has technical knowledge he may not be an auditor as well. It is possible to have a trained officer, as the member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) has pointed out. It may be quite true that we have no officer of that kind now, but I reiterate what I said before, that it is very easy to get a man who is a first-class auditor in the true sense of the word who would at the same time go into the stores and say: Here, we will take stock; we will go through your accounts afterwards, but let us see what your stores are like. This seems to me so plain that it is not worth arguing.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I would again place myself on record so that there may be no misunderstanding that on this question there has been no difference whatever between the Auditor General and the government. The Auditor General has unlimited power to audit these accounts. He has exercised that power. He has had all the officials he has asked for, and has had the most full and complete control of the accounts. I do not admit that it is the duty of this government to thrust officials on the Auditor General if he does not want them.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is not a question of what the Auditor General wants, but of what is most in the public interest.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not in this instance, because he is the party who must make the application.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not think the fact that the Auditor General has not made an application to the present parliament would prevent parliament from doing what it thinks to be most in the public interest. I do not propose to give up my independent judgment. There may be things that are in the public interest for which the Auditor General does not ask, and he may ask for things which I would think were not in the public interest. The question is whether or not there should be some audit with respect to stores and supplies of the Intercolonial Railway, made by an officer who is independent of the government.

Mr. CHARLTON. That would be a valuator, not an auditor.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does not the hon. member recognize that the present functions of the Auditor General are something more than what is popularly called auditing ?

Mr. CHARLTON. Would my hon. friend say that the Auditor General is called upon to value the supplies covered by the accounts which he has to audit, and has to decide whether the beef, the pork, and the various other articles were bought at proper prices ? He has nothing to do with that. He simply audits the accounts, sees that they are entered properly and that there are vouchers for the payment. He has nothing whatever to do with the values of the articles to which the accounts relate.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I desire to express as distinctly as I can my absolute divergence from the view expressed by my hon. friend (Mr. Charlton). Not only has the Auditor General that power, but he has exercised it over and over again. If my hon. friend will look over the Auditor General's Report for the last half dozen years he will see that the auditor more than once has sent out officials to measure work which has been done, and has made a report that he does not think that it is worth the amount sought to be exacted from the government. Did he not, under the late administration, send down to value some work on the Curran bridge.

Mr. CHARLTON. He was not called upon to say whether the work was worth so much a yard, but to ascertain if the work was performed. It was a scrutiny of the accounts.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) is not aware of what the Auditor General has been doing during the last eight or ten years. If he will look up the Auditor General's Report, he will find that whether or not the Auditor General has the power to do it he has at least been exercising that power frequently. The hon. Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) seems to think that because there was an auditor in the Department of Railways and Canals, there was an end to the question. It does not put an end to the question, because the functions of the Auditor General are entirely different from those of an auditor who is under the control of the government. If the argument of the Minister of Public Works were carried to its legitimate conclusion, it would result in the abolition of the Auditor General, because every department of the government has its auditor. The Auditor General is the servant of the people through parliament, removable only by parliament, and not by the government. The point taken by my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker) is that we should have an audit of the same kind as that made by the auditor of the department performed by an officer who is not dependent on the government, and who cannot be dismissed at the will and pleasure of the government. That seems to me to be a reasonable proposition. I do not suppose the Auditor General can value every dollar's worth of supplies, he cannot push this work to extremes, but you can give the Auditor General power to investigate where he has reason to believe, for example, that work at a particular station is being done at an excessive price or that the work for which a claim is made has not been done, or that the work is being improperly divided as between capital and maintenance accounts. Investigation of that kind must be performed by some one if you are to have any check. It may be done by officers of the department at the present time, but there should also be power in the Auditor General to supervise that work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is very little, if any, difference between the hon. leader of the opposition and myself. In closing my remarks, I said to the hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) that if he had advocated for this stores account a valuation by an officer not under the control of the Railway Department, but under that of the Auditor General, I did not think there would be any difference between us. But he spoke of an audit in a general way, and it is in a general way that I thought and stated that it would be impracticable. The hon. leader of the opposition and myself agreed ; I did not take the position which he says I did. The logical conclusion of the principle he has enunciated in his remarks would be to abolish parliament and the departments, and to leave the whole thing to the Auditor General. That would be a more logical conclusion than the conclusion which he drew from what I said. I quite agree with my hon. friend that if the Auditor General thought it desirable in any particular matter to have a valuator in his department, he should have one. I can quite understand in this particular case that if parliament was not satisfied with the way that stores account was being kept, or with the values put upon the stores by the department, parliament should ask their own official to make a valuation and report. But it seems to me impracticable, and ridiculous for any one to argue that the Auditor General and his branch must be held responsible for the value of the goods purchased, &c. I agree with my hon. friend the leader of the opposition, that the people of Canada do not want to have the Auditor General control all the affairs of this country; they look to parliament, to their representatives here. They must leave the power in the hands of parliament, even over the Auditor General.

The officials of the various departments, who are supposed to be perfectly capable and honest, must certify the accounts before they are passed by the Auditor General; just as every business man has to depend on the officials of the various branches of his business to certify to the correctness of the accounts for goods purchased. I would go so far as to say that if, for example, the Auditor General found accounts coming to him from the Public Works Department for lumber at $30 or $40 a thousand, which was purchased at some point where the ordinary price was $20 a thousand, I think he would be neglecting his duty if he did not report the matter to the minister, and inform him that he would report it to parliament if it were not properly explained. But to say that the Auditor General must be responsible for the prices paid by the department, I think every one will admit is a ridiculous position to take.

Mr. THOMSON (North Grey). Do I understand the minister to say that a proper inventory of these stores is made at stated intervals?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I presume there is. In so large a department as the Department of Railways and Canals, there must be a proper set of books, and the accounts must be properly kept, although they go through the Auditor General's department. The hon. member for Hamilton (Mr. Barker) suggested, as did the hon. member for Bothwell, that the officials of the department, or the minister, would desire to show that their purchases had not been improperly made, or that they had not bought more than they required.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman, I think, misunderstood me. I did not enter into the question of whether purchases were wisely or unwisely made.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That would be the result.

Mr. CLANCY. No, no.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was suggested that if they had overbought, and prices afterwards went up, they would try to hide the fact. In such a case the Auditor might appoint a valuator to go over the account; but as an expert book-keeper he could not value the goods. A man might have an expert knowledge of certain goods and be unable to read or write. In the same way, it would be improper to hold the Auditor General or his department responsible for the prices paid. On that point, there is no difference between the hon. member for Hamilton and myself, that if in stock-taking there was any doubt about the prices paid, the Auditor General might appoint an officer separate from the department to report whether the prices charged were fair or not.

Mr. CLANCY. Nobody would pretend to go so far in either direction as the Minister of Public Works has suggested. No one would go so far as to take away ministerial responsibility by making the Auditor General responsible for anything but neglect of duty. The Auditor General cannot be responsible for the payment of excessive prices. All he can do is to call attention to it. It is no new thing to have an account certified with the statement that the prices are reasonable and fair. I have often seen that certificate when I knew that the prices were not fair. Without attempting to place any wrong-doing at the door of any minister, we know that the tendency under all governments is to pass these accounts. It becomes largely a mere matter of form. The hon. gentleman may ask, have you no confidence in the officers? I do not think I need enter into a discussion of that phase of the subject at all. Confidence or no confidence, goods have been purchased, under former governments as well as under the present government, for which too much has been paid. That will always be the case under our system, where party favouritism is shown in the purchase of supplies. Let us not close our eyes to that fact, it is one of the evils of our system. It seems to me that it is a fair proposition that when goods are purchased at an excessive price, the minister and the general manager should be informed of the fact. The officer who makes the purchase or the officer who values the goods in the store, is not going to call attention to it; and the minister and the general manager will have no means of knowing it unless they get the information from some other source. It seems to me it would be of substantial benefit to both to have a technical officer who knew values. I think it is going too far to say that you could not get a man who had technical knowledge and was an auditor as well. There would be no difficulty about that. The hon. member for Hamilton has pointed out the great advantage of such an officer in the department, where there are so many chances of leaks, and great leaks, in spite of the energy and close scrutiny of the general manager, upon whom the minister must rely. We must give him very wide scope. It is a very natural state of things. You destroy his usefulness if you do not do that. He cannot always run to the minister for advice. He must be a man capable of taking responsibility on himself. The minister, it is true, is responsible for the conduct of the general manager, but would not this greatly facilitate the work in the department? Let us shake off all the old usages that cease to be useful and enter upon a new, enlightened and intelligent method which will best serve every interest in the department. I think my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker) has called attention to a question which is not to be disposed of by saying: this is impossible. It is quite possible. Everybody knows that there is not one department in which goods are not purchased at too high prices. It is not possible for the minister to always guard against that, but let us guard against it as far as we can.

Mr. BLAIN. Do I understand the Minister of Public Works to say that the Auditor General has no responsibility as regards the fairness of the prices charged?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think parliament would expect him to be responsible for the prices. If he had reason to suppose that the prices were not fair, his duty would be to report that to parliament if he did not get satisfaction from the department; and it is for the people to punish their administrators for having paid excessive prices. Nobody would hold him responsible, except for not reporting.

Mr. CLANCY. He exercises his powers in every case to prevent a recurrence?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Of course.

Mr. BLAIN. I thought his duties extended further than that. In looking over the Auditor General's Report of last year, I see some correspondence that indicates something altogether different from the understanding of the minister. For example, some printing was done outside the Printing Bureau. The account was sent into the Auditor General, bearing a certificate that the prices were fair and just, but he refused to pass it, because he said it required another certificate.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. From the King's Printer.

Mr. BLAIN. It had a certificate from the King's Printer, but he said it required a further certificate that the prices did not exceed those which would be charged in the Printing Bureau. Therefore, the Auditor General must consider that he has some responsibility with regard to the prices charged by outside parties. If that be not the case, the officer of the Railway Department, whose duty it is to find out if the prices are fair and just, could send in an account in which the prices were double what they should be, and the Auditor General would be justified in paying it. Surely he must have some option, or he would pay every account that came along, and the responsibility would not rest in his department.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman says that the Auditor General would pay the accounts. It is not his business to pay accounts at all.

Mr. BLAIN. The hon. minister will admit I am right in saying that no accounts are paid without the Auditor General's certificate?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The point taken by the Minister of Public Works, that the Auditor General ought not be held responsible for prices is correct. If the other view is correct, if he is responsible for the prices, and if what the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) says is correct, that many claims have been paid where the prices are excessive, then the Auditor General should be dismissed as incompetent. But he is not responsible for the prices. In the case of the King's Printer, the Auditor General claimed that a certain certificate was required; and if that had been attached, he would have passed the account.

Mr. BLAIN. What certificate was it?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The Act requires that the prices should not only be fair and just, but correspond with the prices at the Printing Bureau. A certificate to that effect was not attached; but if it had been, the Auditor General would have passed the account, and nobody would say that he was responsible for the prices. All he had to do was to see that he had the proper vouchers according to law. To hold him responsible for the prices would be to impose on him a responsibility which was never intended, and which he would not accept himself.

Mr. BLAIN. That contention is not justified by the letter of the Auditor General himself. The Auditor General did receive a certificate that the prices were fair and just, and still refused to pass the account.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He required another certificate that the prices were not in excess of those charged by the Printing Bureau. Under the Act, he must have that certificate, and it had not been given him.

Mr. BLAIN. That is what the Auditor General's letter says: I quote only part of it:

Please make no further payments for printing out of your letters-of-credit, except on vouchers whose certificate includes the fact that the prices do not exceed those which would be charged for such printing at the Government Printing Bureau.

I do not understand that the Act under which the Auditor General discharges his duties calls for such a certificate. If it does, the responsibility for correct charges of goods rests with the Auditor General.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In that particular case.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a distinction between being responsible for the charges and being responsible for the getting of a certificate. One involves judgment as to whether the prices are reasonable or not, and the other involves seeing whether the certificate is attached or not.

Mr. BLAIN. Of course, I do not wish to enter into controversy with the Minister of Finance on this subject, but I would like to understand it. I take it, from the letter I have read, that the Auditor General felt responsible for the correct prices in the accounts which I have referred to, for the reason that the account, when it went to the Auditor General, bore the certificate of the officer whose duty it was to certify that the prices were fair and just. That measured up to the requirements of the law——

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The Auditor General says it did not.

Mr. BLAIN. I feel sure that I do not misunderstand it, because the Auditor General does not say that the law requires a further certificate, but, as an officer feeling some responsibility in respect of the prices, he calls for a further certificate, not only that the prices are fair and just, but that they do not exceed those charged in the Printing Bureau.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Blain) has misunderstood it. The Auditor General sometimes claims pretty wide and generous powers, but it is only just to him to say that I do not think he claimed in this case to judge whether the prices are fair and just. I speak from recollection, and, having none of the papers before me, subject to correction, but I think I am correct when I say that the Auditor General had been passing these accounts for many years with the certificate in the same form in which the hon. gentleman has quoted it, but it suddenly occurred to the Auditor General—I do not say he was wrong—that the statute under which he was acting required another certificate, and that certificate he demanded. We have passed an Act this session to make it clear that the additional certificate is not required.

Mr. CLANCY. The point that my hon. friend from Peel (Mr. Blain) has raised is this : This was a class of work similar to that being done in the Printing Bureau, and it was being done outside. As a gauge of what was a fair and reasonable scale of prices, he fixed the prices that would have been charged had it been done in the Printing Bureau.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Parliament fixed that.

Mr. CLANCY. I quite understand. My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) has not enlightened me at all by his remark. The Auditor General is not guided merely by the statutes, but he must have some discretionary powers which it would be impossible to embody in a statute. This printing was being done outside, and the Auditor General said : I do not care what your certificate may be as to prices being fair and just, what I want to know is that the cost to the country is not more than it would have been if the work had been done in the Printing Bureau. It was not a question of complying with the statutes——

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). Will my hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) permit me a question ? Is he sure that the Act does not require that the certificate accompanying these accounts should be that the price is not in excess of the price that would be charged in the Printing Bureau ? I am not certain of the matter, but my recollection is that the Act under which printing is done outside the Bureau, as it was before the amended Act of this session was passed, required that the prices for work done outside should not be in excess of those in the Printing Bureau. That was got over by the legislation of this session.

Mr. CLANCY. If that were the law, it is not necessary to cure a difficulty or an imaginary difficulty——

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, it is necessary to cure an imaginary difficulty. I will give my hon. friend the case.

Mr. CLANCY. I was pointing out to the Minister of Finance that the Auditor General might take the course he has taken in the exercise of powers which should properly be his. Where work is done outside, he should make sure that it does not cost the country any more than work done in the Bureau. No one would imagine that it would require a statutory enactment to authorize the Auditor General to do that—it would be within the proper exercise of his powers. And the case to which the hon. member for Peel calls attention seems to show that the Auditor General felt that it was not enough for him to see to it that the prices were reasonable, but that the cost to the country was not made greater through the work being done outside. That is the essence of the whole thing. If the hon.

minister will point out where I am wrong I shall be glad to be set right.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think it would be well to be drawn into a discussion of the merits or demerits as to this question of the cost of the printing. But I state my recollection of the case. Many years ago, in the time of the late government, an Act was passed intended to permit certain printing to be done in portions of the Dominion far from Ottawa, and it was provided—or seems to have been so intended—that if the prices were deemed fair and reasonable from the point of view of the local conditions under which the work was done, they should be accepted and approved. That appears to have been the spirit of the Act, and for many years the Auditor General allowed that spirit to prevail, under the late government and under the present government, and accepted and approved accounts which bore the certificate that the prices were fair and just. The accounts did not bear any certificate comparing the prices with those in the Printing Bureau. In fact the whole intention as I understand it was to recognize the fact that the prices might not be those of the Printing Bureau, the work being done under different conditions. But the Auditor General, after passing such accounts for many years, came to the conclusion—I do not say he was wrong—that the statute under which he was acting required a further certificate, and he recently demanded that certificate, claiming that it was required under the statute. I have not the Act under my hand, but I think he was correct. This year an amendment was introduced to carry out what was intended to be the spirit of the Act from the beginning, the spirit under which the Act was administered for many years under both governments.

Mr. CLANCY. Does that mean that excessive prices may be paid for the work done outside. If I understand the Finance Minister correctly, it means that the Auditor General has lost control in these matters. It means that the Auditor General has passed accounts for years, possibly at excessive prices—I am going to admit that, for, these things are as likely to have happened in the past as to happen now; let us be fair and frank about it. The Auditor General of course, like any other man, learns from experience. He had passed accounts year after year under both governments without inquiring whether excessive prices were being paid. Then, I fear, he made the discovery—a very useful one and one that should be within his powers without direct statutory authority—that his duty was, not to prevent work being done outside the Bureau, but to see to it that the cost of the work to the country should not be more than if it were done in the Bureau. That is plain. The government has relieved the Auditor General of that portion of his duty and of the exercise of that authority. It means no more and no less than that they have taken away the power from the Auditor General, and that now accounts are to be paid at such prices that, I repeat—and I regret to repeat it—the certificate is little more than a matter of form in some cases. But the conditions may have been such as did not warrant any government in getting it done there. The Minister of Public Works tells us that the government is responsible. That is a kind of responsibility we do not understand as having force in this country. Ministerial responsibility never repaid nor restored one cent to the people from whom it has been taken away, under any government. The more power you give an officer to prevent these excesses the better for the country and the more will the ministers be relieved of trouble.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We are getting away from the real point involved. But I may inform my hon. friend that the change that was made with regard to the printing did not necessarily imply that an excessive price had been paid. This printing being done in different portions of the Dominion at places where it suited the convenience of the department to have it done, prices that were fair and just according to the rates current in the place where the work was done, would be the fair and just prices for that work. That is the point of difference. The Auditor General understood it that way for many years, and approved the accounts as not excessive, as being fair and just according to the standard prices of printing in the places where the work was done. That was the spirit of the Act, that was the way in which it was interpreted for many years. But when the Auditor General took it into his head to make a different interpretation, even though he had a statute to support him in doing so, it was thought well to make a change. However, that is going into the merits of the question. The origin of this part of the discussion was whether the Auditor General was responsible for the prices being fair and just. I say I do not think the Auditor General is responsible, or should be held responsible; that a part of ministerial responsibility. His duty undoubtedly will be to call attention to any case in which he thinks there was fraud, or dishonesty, or excessive charges, and so forth. But the responsibility is not his, the responsibility is the minister's. His duty is to call attention, to remonstrate if he likes, to blame, to spread the story out before parliament—that is the limitation, in my judgment, of his authority; he is not responsible whether the prices are fair or not.

Mr. CLANCY. I think the Minister of Finance will agree with me that it is the duty of a responsible minister of the government to place every power in the hands of an official to prevent these improper practices. That is the best way for the ministers to shield themselves, to protect themselves from the matters to which we are now calling attention. I quite agree that it would be impossible to make the Auditor General responsible for the prices. He could not help excessive prices being paid, and to censure him for that would be wrong, and impossible to carry out in practice. But what my hon. friend from Hamilton is pointing out is the desirability of placing at the disposal of the Auditor General every means of preventing these improper practices.

Mr. BLAIN. As to whether the accounts require a further certificate, as the Minister of Finance thinks they should, let me read three or four lines from a letter from the King's Printer, Mr. Dawson :

> I have given the certificate the Audit Act requires. I have certified that the prices are fair and just. According to the rules of equity there should be no hesitation to pay such prices.

The King's Printer says that he gave merely a certificate that the prices for printing were fair and just. I do not know whether the minister would go so far as to say that the King's Printer is wrong, and that it does require a further statement that the prices do not exceed the prices that would be paid for such printing elsewhere. The King's Printer says that he has been doing this for ten years.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Speaking from recollection, I think, the Auditor General took the ground that there was another Act somewhere dealing with the matter, which required an additional certificate, and that was the certificate he demanded.

Mr. BLAIN. When was that Act passed ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I cannot say, it has been in operation for many years.

Mr. BLAIN. The King's Printer says there is no such Act.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think the Auditor General was able to show that there was an Act somewhere which required that. He was merely acting, as he claimed, within the limits of some statute, and asking for certificates in accordance therewith.

Mr. BLAIN. The point is that the King's Printer says, over his own signature, dated December 26th, 1902, that the accounts have been paid continuously upon the simple certificate that the prices were fair and just.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is no doubt correct, that was the form of audit for a while. While the Auditor General accepted that certificate for many years, he recently required something else, and claimed that he had statutory authority to demand it.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). My opinion is that the Auditor General was quite right in requiring that the prices should not exceed those of the government office. I can understand that if the printing was given by tender there would be no necessity for the Auditor General making such a reference ; but from the fact of the printing being farmed out, it was necessary to have some basis upon which to arrive at the proper cost. Would the acting Minister of Railways and Canals tell me when the last inventory of stores was made, what was the value of the stores, and by whom was it made ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The inventory is made on the 30th of June every year. According to the books of the Auditor General for 1901-2, the value was $1,500,000; the value at the last inventory, at the close of the year 1902-3, was about $917,302.24.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). By what official was that inventory made ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The manager informs me that the inventory of the track stores along the line is taken on the 31st of October, and of the rest on the 30th of June. The general stock-taking is on the 30th of June but they prefer to take stock of the track stores at the end of the season.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). The hon. gentleman has not yet given me the information I have asked for. Who has charge of the stock-taking ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The accounts are taken by the officials of the Intercolonial Railway, men in the department specially assigned to make that investigation.

Mr. BARKER. I have sent for the Act respecting the Printing Bureau, and I see that there is nothing in it requiring a special certificate, and that the amendment made this session does not do away with such a certificate, because there was no certificate required. The amendment made this session provided that :

> Nothing in this Act shall require that stationery and printing for the purposes of the Intercolonial Railway or the Prince Edward Island Railway shall be obtained or done in the said establishment in any case where such stationery and printing may be more conveniently procured elsewhere at a cost not exceeding customary and fair commercial rates for similar work or supplies in similar quantities.

That section was brought in, not to do away with any certificate that had previously been required, but to enable the government to get its printing done apart from the Printing Bureau. Therefore, the Auditor General was acting within his right in demanding the certificate required by the statute.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My recollection is that the Auditor General d'd claim that he was acting under the statute. However, the point is not of much importance, because I am simply contending that the House cannot expect to hold the Auditor General responsible for the prices paid for stores being fair and reasonable. All you can expect the Auditor General to do is to see that the accounts are correct, and that if in any case he has reason to believe that the accounts are improper, it is his duty to call attention to them and to investigate. But we could not hold him responsible for the prices paid for goods throughout Canada, and I do not think he would be willing to accept that responsibility.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I cannot understand who the official is who makes the inventory of stores. There will no doubt be an official in charge for the stores department, but these supplies will be scattered along the railway and will be at the different stations. Who makes out this inventory ? Is it the gentleman in charge of the stores or some other official ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The inventory is taken by the store-keeper, with the assistance of such officials as he has in his own branch and of others from other branches of the railway service as may be required.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Who fixes the valuation of these stores ? Is it the gentleman in charge of the stores ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The valuation of these stores is based on the prices which were paid for them, subject to any loss that may occur in keeping or handling them. The general manager has given me this illustration for instance : If a quantity of oil was placed in the store, in measuring it out there would be a certain amount of loss that would be charged up against revenue. You could not measure out exactly the same quantity of oil as you put in. In that case, the books would be balanced by charging the loss against the revenue account for the year.

On section 3,

Mr. BLAIN. I would like to ask the hon. minister if there is any classification of this large amount of money that is expended on the Intercolonial Railway ? If there is placed to the credit of the Department of Railways and Canals $1,500,000 for the Intercolonial Railway, do I understand that the minister would have the right to say that it should be expended in any way he wished ? Would it be apportioned in such a way that so much money would be voted for the purchase of steel rails and so much for the purchase of locomotives ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, it would be general.

Mr. BLAIN. Could the minister take the million and a half and purchase whatever kind of goods he wished ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is a very extreme case, but he could. But what would he do with them afterwards ? He would have to make use of these goods. There would be no great pleasure in having them in store, and he could only use them on the Intercolonial Railway at such places and for such purposes as parliament had authorized.

Mr. BLAIN. I do not think it is fair that the department should have the right to apportion the full appropriation made by parliament, or that the minister should have the right to expend the money in any manner that he wished. The minister should come forward and say that so many thousand dollars should be applied to one part of the railway and so many thousand to another part. But to give the minister carte blanche to expend this money seems to me to be giving him very extended powers.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think, if my hon. friend were starting a shop and wanted $100,000 to carry his stock, that he would find it convenient to state that so much should be devoted to goods of one colour and so much to goods of another colour. I would like to call the attention of the committee to the wording of the Act of 1893 respecting the Department of Public Printing and Stationery. It contains these words :

> Provided that nothing in this Act shall be held to require that the printing for the purposes of the Intercolonial Railway or the Prince Edward Island Railway shall be done in the said establishment in any case when such printing may be more conveniently done elsewhere at a cost not exceeding that which would be charged for such printing at the said establishment.

Therefore, what the Auditor General asked was that a certificate should be given in accordance with the words of the statute. His demand rested on the statute.

Mr. BLAIN. May I ask if the Auditor General objected to these accounts without that special certificate ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not know what the Auditor General did before the Act was passed in 1893, but I know that for long years afterwards he passed these accounts without the certificate.

Mr. BLAIN. The Auditor General did not enforce the Act in respect to the special certificate which the hon. gentleman has referred to ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I believe that is the fact.

Mr. BLAIN. That is rather suspicious. It looks as if somebody was trespassing in regard to the accounts, when there was no such trespassing in days gone by. Perhaps my hon. friend can tell us why the Auditor feels it to be his duty to enforce this law to the very letter now, when he felt it to be his duty for many years not to enforce it at all ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Prices were fixed by Order in Council, and that Order in Council was passed by the late government.

Mr. CLANCY. And these were to be the prices not exceeding those charged at the Bureau ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, they were not.

Mr. CLANCY. That is what the Act says, and they could not pass an Order in Council contrary to the Act.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman says they could not. An hon. gentleman said a few minutes ago that whether the Auditor General has power to do a certain thing or not, he does it. That Order in Council was passed. We will take another illustration. Twenty years ago the Superannuation Act was passed, whereby a man was entitled, upon his retirement, to receive an allowance in proportion to the number of years of his service. After the Act was passed a case arose where a man had a few months over the year to his credit, and the question came up as to how it should be dealt with. The government of the day passed a very sensible Order in Council to the effect that if the number of months was less than six they should not be counted, while if there were more than six they should count as another year. For twenty years the Auditor General accepted that Order in Council as a good law, but a few months ago it occurred to him that it was not good in law, or in common sense, and he cut down the allowance of a lighthouse keeper, saying that this was not what the law, said, and this year we have had to change the law.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman will, no doubt, find cases of that kind. It is not to be expected that after years of experience, the Auditor General would not find out that in some respects he was not acting strictly according to the law, but the strange thing about the matter now is that just as soon as the Auditor General acted up to the law passed in 1893, the Minister of Finance comes in with a Bill and says to the Auditor General : The law of 1893 provides that while printing may be done outside it shall not cost this country any more than it would cost if it were done at the Printing Bureau at Ottawa ; it will not do for you to insist on a strict observance of the law, for if you do we will repeal that law so that we can close your mouth, and we will give such prices as may be charged to suit the conditions in outside towns. The government of the day is not justified in getting one line of printing done where the conditions are as favourable for economical work as they are in the Printing Bureau. You may say that it is more convenient to have it done here or there, but hon. gentlemen opposite know very well the evil tendency of pursuing a course of that kind. The pressure of party friends under our system is a great danger to the public, and the moment you take away the Auditor's power, and say to the Auditor General : True, you are living up to the Act of 1893, but under such circumstances we cannot give our friends any printing because their conditions are such that they cannot compete with the Bureau, and therefore we cannot give it to them. The government are not justified in doing this. There can be any number of conditions under which you can pay anything you like, and say that it is a fair price, that a man is not making any undue profit. One man may not be able to make even a living where another man can make a profit. The minister is taking a dangerous step in this, and one that he will have reason to regret.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman finds great danger in things that are done by this government, in which he saw no danger when his own friends were in power.

Mr. CLANCY. I am talking on general principles, and I said it was wrong if it was done under the late government.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The merits of the printing question do not happen to be connected with this Bill, but let me state briefly the facts of the case. The late government passed an Order in Council; the hon. gentleman said they could not do so.

Mr. CLANCY. I said they had no authority to do so.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman is now proving that his friends set the law of 1893 at defiance when they passed an Order in Council declaring that this work might be done in different parts of the country on certain terms and conditions having regard to local conditions. For years that system was carried on under both governments and the Auditor General allowed it to be done, accepting the certificate of the King's Printer that the price was fair and just. Then the Auditor General makes the discovery that this was not consistent with the statute, and says : I will live up to the statute. Then, we come in and say —I did not introduce the Bill, but I accept my share of responsibility--that that which was the understood policy of both governments for many years, and to which the Auditor Genereal did not object, should continue to be the system in force. In regard to the superannuation, much the same thing occurred. For 20 years the Auditor General paid the odd months to the poor lighthouse-keeper, but at this late stage he awakens to the idea that it is not legal and refuses to give the lighthouse-keeper the benefit of these months. We step in and say that we will give the lighthouse-keeper the odd months, because it is fair and reasonable.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman cannot take shelter under that. The hon. gentleman is too intelligent not to know that when I said the late government could not pass such an Order in Council, I meant that in so doing they exceeded their authority. The Auditor General had a perfect right to call attention to the fact that if such an Order in Council existed it was contrary to the statutes. The fact that the former government did that does not justify the present government in doing it. We should adopt such a policy as will inure to the best interests of the country. I am not here to defend any act of the former government that is not defensible, I do not think it is the business of any man on either side of the House, because his party may have made mistakes or have gone too far, to justify these mistakes. Let us, I say, adopt such a policy and such rules as will inure to the best interests of this country. The hon. minister is trying to take shelter behind what? Behind the fact that the former government did it. Is he adopting all the virtues as well as all the vices of the former government? Has he laid down the rule that because a former government did this, whether it be good or bad, that he is to adopt it. Is it in the interests of the country to take this power from the Auditor General by repealing the Act of 1893, notwithstanding that the Order in Council has no legal effect? I ask him, too, if it is in the public interest to take that power out of the hands of the Auditor General and to permit printing to be done anywhere in Canada at prices which, under the conditions, can always be justified as being fair?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) has criticised the action of his friends in the late government. I will be more generous. I am going to defend the late government. I will not allow them to be maligned by the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy). When the late government passed the Order in Council—for, I think, the Conservative government dealt with both of these questions, with printing and superannuation—it was a common sense Order in Council. In relation to superannuation, where the statute had failed to take account of the odd months, it was reason and common sense that the government should say: where a man has seven months to his credit, we will count it as a year, and if he has only two or three months to his credit we will not count it at all. That was common sense and in carrying that out we have been simply doing what is fair and reasonable. The late government for years allowed their friends to do the printing. Our predecessors did it as we do it. I am here to defend the principle of giving our friends the preference every time provided the prices are just, and I am not in favour of concentrating all the work into the Printing Bureau at Ottawa If a portion of that work has in the past been done in other portions of the Dominion, I do not think we should concentrate it all in Ottawa. There has been no change in regard to method or price. The Conservative press did a certain amount of work for the Intercolonial Railway at a price settled by Order in Council. If that system has been continued by the present government at prices which are fair and just, I say there is no wrong to the public treasury, and I am here to defend the action of the late government in that respect.

Mr. BLAIN. I wish to differ from the policy of the government in respect to giving out printing to any other office than the Printing Bureau. I am not here to say whether the late government did what was right or what was wrong. In my humble opinion they did what was wrong, and I believe that where the government has a Printing Bureau, as they have in the city of Ottawa, capable of doing a large amount of printing, it is not wise to give the Railway Department authority to get their printing done in any part of Canada they choose. Whether the prices are fair and just or not, I do not express any opinion at the moment. I wish to express my dissent from the policy of the government in this respect. I do not think it will receive the endorsation of the people of this country.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is a little late; the Bill is passed.

Mr. BLAIN. I think it is the duty of the government to take away such power from the department.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think there was a division on the Bill; so I am afraid my hon. friend is bound by it.

Mr. BLAIN. Perhaps I should not say what is in my mind about that sort of criticism. The hon. minister sought to drag the superannuation question into this discussion. We are not responsible for that. I want to remind him of the promise he and the minister who sits behind him made to this country, that if they were put in power they would abolish the Superannuation Act. Yet, the charges to the country under that Act are now greater than they were under the late government.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I have been waiting with great patience and expectation for the last ten minutes, thinking that the committee would stop this irrelevant discussion; but finding that they are widening it, I am constrained to ask them to be good enough to return to the question.

Mr. COCHRANE. I hope the Minister of Finance will take notice.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Yes, both sides.

Mr. BLAIN. It is very kind of the chairman to show so much patience ; but I notice that his patience generally ceases when a member of the opposition has the floor.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. BLAIN. However, I bow at once to his ruling. I do not think the superannuation question should be discussed at this time. We are not responsible for the introduction of that question, and I have said all I have to say upon it. In my opinion this Bill gives too wide powers to the Railway Department. I do not think that department should have placed to its credit $1,500,000, with the right to purchase for the Intercolonial Railway whatever kinds of goods they wish, in whatever quantity, wherever they wish, and at whatever price they wish. I think the Act should specify that a certain amount should be placed to the credit of the department to purchase steel rails when required, a certain amount to purchase locomotives when required, and so on. I do not think such great powers should be given to the minister. The new minister seems to require very great liberty. I do not know whether his predecessor would think this a proper measure ; he is not in the House. For myself, I think it is very dangerous legislation, and I wish to express myself as against it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This morning I raised a point with regard to the first section, which I did not press very strongly, because the Minister of Finance and my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Barker) both seemed to entertain a somewhat different view to that which I expressed. But I must say that I am not quite convinced yet. I think I understand the intention of the section, and the difficulty I have in regard to it is owing possibly to some lack of care in the way in which it is drafted. As the section reads at present, with the last line struck out, it provides that advances may be made indefinitely. There is no necessary connection between section 1 and sections 2 and 3. My difficulty would be to a great extent eliminated if you added after the word 'advances,' in the first section, the words 'on railway stores account.'

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have no objection to adding these words though I do not think they change the meaning of the section. I move that section 1 be reconsidered, and that these words be inserted.

Motion agreed to ; Bill reported, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER.

PILOTAGE ACT AMENDMENT.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. Raymond Préfontaine) moved second reading of Bill (No. 261) respecting the pilotage district of Montreal, and the port and pilotage district of Quebec.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I may say to my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that I have a communication from my hon. friend for Montmorency (Mr. Casgrain), who says he cannot possibly be here to-day but that he will be here on Monday, and he would be greatly obliged if this Bill were held over until Monday. It concerns the interests of his constituents to a certain extent, and he would like to be present.

Motion withdrawn.

NAVIGABLE WATERS.

Bill (No. 260) to amend the Act respecting certain works constructed in or over navigable waters, read the second time, and House went into committee thereon.

On section 1,

Mr. TAYLOR. I would ask the hon. minister to let this stand over until next session so that we may have time to consider it. This government has never given a dollar for the purpose of erecting a wharf on either side of Howe island there. The farmers, in order to get over from that island, have established a ferry service operated by cable, and have built a row of docks along both sides. Why should the government compel these people to take out a license and pay $5 for permission to use the ferry they have established themselves? This Bill will apply to ferries which have been running for the last fifty years.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. Raymond Préfontaine). I do not see why we should not have a law to regulate the use of these cables in order to protect life and property. In the case of certain ferries which have been long established, we might not charge any license, but it is necessary that they should be subjected to some regulations. There have been a number of accidents owing to the absence of any regulations. Nearly a whole family was drowned at Bout De L'Isle near Montreal a few months ago. A cable had been stretched across the channel without license. It was under water, not seen, and there was nothing to indicate its presence. These people came across this obstacle and their boat was upset and they were drowned. The only recourse their successors have is to sue in damages the parties who laid the cable. In Manitoba repeated accidents of a similar kind have happened.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. gentleman's argument is not sufficient justification for the course he intends to take. There are many accidents on steamboats which are licensed and carry licensed engineers, captain and pilots. I do not see how there can be any danger in leaving these cables undisturbed, because they run along the bottoms of rivers. If the hon. gentleman will allow the Bill to stand, he will find that he will get representations against it from many of the provinces.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Does this Bill refer only to navigable waters ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, I do not intend to regulate the use of cable across waters which are not navigable. I am going as far as it is possible to go under the present circumstances, and am acting on the recommendation that has been made. If the hon. gentleman wishes to apply it to non-navigable waters, the Bill will be found still more objectionable to the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor). The principle is not new at all, but is involved in chapter 92 of the Revised Statutes of Canada respecting certain works constructed in or over navigable waters. This Act was passed in 1886, and the present Bill only expands the powers which are given under that Act and provides for the regulating of some things which are not regulated under the law as it stands. The non-regulation of which has led to loss of life and property.

Mr. CLANCY. I have in mind navigable rivers on which ferries are established by municipalities. If the present Bill becomes law, these municipalities will have to get licenses from the minister for a ferry, and, no doubt, he will send out an inspector to see that the work is done according to his regulation. If the hon. minister wishes to apply this to the North-west Territories, where they have no municipal institutions, I personally, would have no great objection. But if he wishes to interfere with the work in this respect now carried on by the municipalities in Ontario, I think he is going altogether too far. How does the hon. gentleman intend to provide for the proper arrangement of these cables ? Is he going to send out a travelling inspector ?

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). A lot of them.

Mr. CLANCY. I am afraid it is only a means of providing offices. I have not had an opportunity to study the Bill closely, but from the hon. minister's explanation, I am led to believe that he is not warranted in taking charge of ferries now controlled by municipalities and properly managed. Nor is there any reason why he should demand a license fee of $5 from a municipality for carrying on such a work.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Supplementing what the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) has said—the hon. minister can answer both of us when he speaks. I understand that in the North-west Territories they establish these ferries and maintain them for the convenience of the settlers. Would not the hon. minister run foul of the North-west council there as well as of the municipalities in the case my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) has referred to ? And, if a license is charged, would not the government be responsible for seeing to it that these ferries are kept in proper condition, and be liable in case of accidents ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes, Victoria) surely is not serious. If a bridge is constructed over a navigable water according to plans which have been submitted to the Governor General in Council and approved, and an accident occurs, would the hon. gentleman contend that the government is responsible ?

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Certainly.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He will not pretend that before a court, I am sure.

Mr. TAYLOR. In support of what my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) has stated, I may say that one of the cables from Howe island to the main shore is owned and controlled by the municipality, and a man is paid by the municipality to operate it. The other, at the end of the island, is owned by a private individual. I do not know whether the hon. minister intends to provide that these ferries cannot be operated without making application to his department and paying $5. He says that this does not apply to non-navigable waters. Will the hon. gentleman define navigable and non-navigable water ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman must know that as well as I do—everybody knows what is meant by navigable water.

Mr. TAYLOR. Well, will the hon. minister explain ? In referring to the remarks of my hon. friend from Victoria (Mr. Hughes) he spoke of non-navigable waters. What are non-navigable waters ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Waters on which boats cannot be used for regular transportation. The statute makes it very clear what is navigable water and what is floatable water. I do not see any object in having a debate on the subject.

Mr. TAYLOR. What, in the hon. minister's opinion, is a non-navigable water ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. One that it is not possible to navigate.

Mr. TAYLOR. With what kind of a boat ?

Mr. HEYD. With a canoe ?

Mr. TAYLOR. Even the smallest pond in the country can be navigated with a boat of some kind. So this would apply to every patch of water we have.

Mr. COCHRANE. The minister ought not to dismiss this question with a nod of his head. He seems to think that everybody ought to know what is a navigable water, but, being a layman, I confess that I do not know as much as the minister does on these matters. What is a navigable water ? The hon. member for South Brant (Mr. Heyd) suggests that any water is navigable on which you can float a canoe. Does the minister agree to that ? Take the case of a river with an island in it. On one side is the boat channel, but on the other, between the island and the shore, boats do not go. Would the part not used be navigable under law ? Or, take the case spoken of by the hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor). The island he mentions, if I remember well, is at the foot of Lake Ontario. The farmers have stretched a cable across to the shore in order to work a ferry. That channel may not be used for steamers, but is it or is it not navigable water ? Where municipalities have established these ferries, of course, the ferries are as well managed as they could be by the Department of Marine and Fisheries or any officer the minister might send. If the minister takes this under his control, would he insist upon the municipalities carrying out certain regulations made by his department, and would he insist upon their getting a license ? These are questions which should be answered before we pass this legislation.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that nobody will deny that the Dominion has jurisdiction over all navigable waters, and that it would be a defiance of Dominion authority for any person to lay a cable in navigable waters that would interfere with navigation. As I understand it, the object of this Bill is to fix the liability. If my hon. friend or some of his friends happened to be navigating a river and met with an accident in consequence of these cables, and if he could not fix the liability anywhere, he would say that the government were neglecting their duty. As I understand the object of the Bill, it is simply to provide that these people shall pay a nominal fee, so that there will be some responsibility, and in order that this work may be carried on without interfering with navigation.

Mr. COCHRANE. Would the minister consider the River Trent, for instance, a navigable stream ? It is not navigable in its present state, but with certain improvements it may be made so.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Laymen like the hon. member for Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) and myself would get into deep water if we undertook to explain the legal meaning of a navigable stream. It may be, as the Minister of Marine and Fisheries says, that a stream is navigable on which navigation can be carried on for commercial purposes, unless it has been declared not to be so by Act of parliament.

Mr. CLARKE. Declared to be a work for the general advantage of Canada.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are streams that are navigable, and might be construed to be navigable unless they have been declared by Act of parliament non-navigable streams. In such a case the jurisdiction over them would fall within the province instead of the Dominion. There are other streams where, at certain seasons of the year, not even a canoe could be paddled over them, and yet they are legally navigable streams, as I have found in my experience.

Mr. TAYLOR. As I understand the Act defining navigable waters, it places jurisdiction over them in the Department of Public Works. Now, why is the Minister of Marine and Fisheries going to take charge of these ferries when they properly belong to the Department of Public Works ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That may be correct in a general sense, but my hon. friend knows that fisheries and navigable streams are under the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and the old government, I think, put ferries under the Inland Revenue Department. But in a general way, I think my hon. friend is right, and it would be better, in the public interest, that the granting of licenses to these parties should be in the Marine Department rather than in the Public Works Department.

Mr. TAYLOR. If a party wants to build a wharf on any navigable water he must make application to the Department of Public Works, which has control of all navigable waters. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries may think that these cables are interfering with the fish that may resort to these waters. That may be the object of introducing this Bill, for fear that these cables stretching across these waters may interfere with the fisheries; otherwise, I do not see that it has any justification unless it is to bring some grist to his mill, and give him some more patronage. I do not see why we should have legislation spliting up departments, putting one part of a navigable stream under the control of Public Works and another under Marine and Fisheries. If the government have promised to give the Minister of Marine and Fisheries more patronage, let them come down with an Act and define what jurisdiction he has, instead of running in these little annoying Bills, taking parts of jurisdiction away from the Department of Public Works that properly belongs to it. But aside from that, take the Rideau canal from here to Kingston, I know several of these cable ferries running from one side of the Rideau canal to the other, that have been working for years. Have these people got to stop using these ferries ? I ask the minister to point to a single accident that has ever happened to anybody navigating the waters of the St. Lawrence or of the Rideau canal, in consequence of these cables, or point to any other place in the Dominion, or cite one case where a family was going across in a row-boat and ran against one of these cables and were upset. That happens every day in the week without a cable. People get upset in row-boats and lives are lost. But merely on account of one accident, is he going to put the people of this country to this great inconvenience ? Does he pretend that if a rowboat is paddled over the water that makes it a navigable water ? Then, every stream in the Dominion is a navigable water. I never heard of an accident happening to a steamboat or a sail-boat coming in contact with one of these cables. These cable ferries are a great convenience to the people in all parts of the country, and the people, in order to have communication with each other, have a little boat which they pull across with a cable. That cable lies at the bottom of the river when it is not in use, and will not interfere with anything except when it is used to pull the boat across. Then the people see the ferry moving and can keep out of its way. But the minister wants to make a place for some half dozen men to go round and inspect these cables and collect tolls, putting the public generally to great inconvenience.

Mr. CLANCY. Has the minister had any demand from the province of Ontario for this legislation ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This legislation is not new at all, the principle was adopted nearly 20 years ago when the first Bill was passed regulating the use of navigable waters. That was a consolidation of many previous laws then existing. I refer to chapter 92 of the Act respecting navigable waters, which provides that bridges, booms and so forth shall be regulated in a certain manner, and when a bridge is destroyed and has to be renewed, or when a bridge needs repairs, the plans therefor must be submitted to the Governor General in Council, who will not sanction them unless it is made clear that they will not interfere with navigation or render navigation more difficult. Therefore, this legislation is not at all new. I did not expect, of course, that all these questions would be raised, otherwise I could have looked more deeply into past legislation. But I find that chapter 35 of 49 Victoria, refers to a number of Acts previously existing, which it repealed. Those Acts are the following : 45 Vic., c. 37, respecting bridges over navigable waters constructed under the authority of provincial Acts; 46 Vic., c. 43, respecting booms and other works constructed in navigable waters, whether under the authority of provincial Acts or otherwise ; 46 Vic., c. 44, to amend an Act of the present session respecting booms and other works constructed in navigable waters, whether under the authority of provincial Acts or otherwise; 48-49 Vic., c. 6, to amend the law respectng bridges, booms and other works constructed over or in navigable waters, under the authority of provincial Acts. This law of 1886 is a consolidation of all those statutes.

Mr. COCHRANE. Not a word in those Acts about ferries.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Not about ferries, but about all the rest. At that time probably accidents which have occured since had not occurred and it had not been deemed necessary to pass such a law. I have cited accidents on the St. Lawrence river. There was also an accident on the Red river by which a man in a yacht lost his life because the yacht passed at a point where a cable was laid and there was no notice that the cable was there. I do not see that it would be a bad principle to protect the life of a citizen against such accidents as these if at the present time it is a good principle to protect the property only of the people. The law regulating booms, bridges, &c., on navigable waters is in the interest of protecting the life of citizens. It is in the interest of navigation pure and simple. I do not understand the hon. gentleman's argument. The hon. gentleman says that this law is introduced to create some patronage. I do not see where the patronage comes in. You might as well use the same argument whenever you undertake to regulate any matter affecting the public interest. In cities you might as well contend that there should be no police to maintain the law because it might involve a question of patronage. Some one has to see that the law is executed. It is not provided in the Bill that any officers shall be appointed to enforce the Act. It will be executed by the officers of the department. We have officers all over the Dominion and it will not be very much trouble to see that these cables are laid in accordance with the regulations. At the present time telegraph companies lay cables across rivers and streams and for their own protection they lay them in such a way as not to interfere with navigation because it would only be damaging their own property if their cables were interfered with. But, it is not so in regard to movable cables. The hon. gentleman says that they remain at the bottom of the river. That is not so. When the ferry passes from one shore to the other the cable is lifted and that is where the danger comes in. The hon. gentleman says it is very easy for those who navigate those waters to see when the ferry is coming across and that they should guard against danger. Perhaps it is impossible for them to guard against danger if there is a very swift current because there may be no indication that there is a cable at the point at which their vessel or boat is. I think, for all these reasons that this legislation is reasonable and that the objections raised by the hon. gentleman should not be allowed to stand in the way of it. I think that he makes these suggestions only for the sake of wasting time.

Mr. TAYLOR. Because legislation has been passed regulating booms and bridges it is no justification for this legislation. We all know that if a man puts a boom across a navigable water a boat cannot pass. The boom is there and may be an obstruction. The same remark applies to a bridge. Legislation had to be passed to regulate the building of bridges over navigable streams in order that they might be placed at a proper height above the water. But, these cables do not interfere with navigation at all. They are generally put in a narrow stream and not in swift waters.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have seen them in swifter waters than are to be found any place in Ontario or Quebec. I have seen them across the Yukon river and if there is any swifter river in the Dominion of Canada I would like to know it.

Mr. TAYLOR. If they cannot get them anywhere else they may put them in a swift current, but they are generally put in a narrow stream and where the current is not swift. Those at Howe island are less than one-eight of a mile long and there is no boat navigating that water except possibly a row-boat or sail-boat. They can see the ferry as it is starting out and they can remain where they are until the boat reaches the opposite shore. The ferry at Howe island has been operated for the last thirty years by the municipality. I think the city of Kingston furnished the cable and that the municipality of Howe island operates it. At the lower end of Howe island a farmer has a little ferry operated by a cable and if any one wants to get off the island he runs the boat over. It is not operated every hour of the day but only as there is a demand for it. It has never interfered with navigation, there has never been an accident and why should this poor farmer be obliged to come down to Ottawa to see the Minister of Marine and Fisheries in order that he may keep up this ferry for the purpose of accommodating the people of this little island? Why should he have to come down and ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to give him a license and pay him $5 in order that he may be be able to oblige the farmers of Howe island? This government has never contributed a dollar to build a wharf for the poor people of Howe island. The Municipality of this little island built the wharf there, and the hon. minister now says that he will oblige them with a license and take $5 from them. I think it is an outrageous proposition. What is happening there will happen in almost every municipality in Ontario where the people have these little ferries which are operated with a chain or wire cable. I think, as I have said, that it is an outrageous proposition to demand that these people must take out a license to operate these two ferries or be liable to a fine of $100 or more if they fail to do so.

The PRIME MINISTER. I am at a loss to understand the opposition to this Bill. This Bill provides that nobody shall interfere with navigable streams or navigable rivers. Any man who puts a chain across a navigable river puts an obstruction in the river which is liable to cause accident. There may be places where this may be tolerated without any serious inconvenience being caused to anybody, because, although the stream is navigable, it may not be navigated, but there are places where it would be a serious inconvenience to the public if a party were allowed to put such an obstruction in a navigable river. Under such circumstances it seems to me to be only a wise precaution that nobody should be allowed such a privilege without having permission from some authority who can go and look into the circumstances of the case and see whether it is advisable to grant such permission or whether it is inadvisable to allow such a cable to be laid. There may be places where it is advisable and there may be other places where it would not only be the reverse of advisable but perhaps dangerous. Nobody could find fault that it should not be within the power of any man, however meritorious his intention might be, to put an obstruction in a navigable river because the consequences might be very injurious. The statement made by my hon. friend from Leeds (Mr. Taylor) that there are places where little ferries are kept is very true. It does not follow that the owners of these ferries shall be obliged to come to Ottawa and take out a license. It does not follow that they will be obliged to pay $5 for it because the Bill says that the license fee shall not exceed $5. It may be $1, or it may be twenty-five cents. But, the principle of the Bill seems to be a proper one.

Mr. CLANCY. I do not think that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, or perhaps the right hon. gentleman (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier), has quite considered how far-reaching this is. I may point out a case that comes under my notice almost every day. There are two branches of the river Sydenham, which is navigable for from 12 to 16 miles of its length, and on each of these branches boats are being operated constantly during the season of navigation. This river does not separate municipalities, but it runs through municipalities, and each municipality maintains ferries instead of bridges, as the construction of bridges would entail a greater expense on the municipalities than they could undertake. Under the Ontario Act, there is a provision by which ferries may be established and controlled by municipal councils, and provision is also made for the establishment of ferries between two municipalities, but in that case, of course, the assent of the Lieutenant Governor in Council is necessary. I am putting the simple case where the ferries are established by the one municipality, and on this river there are five or six of these. That is not an interference with navigation, and these ferries are under the control of the municipality, which is responsible for them, and is more concerned than even the department here could be to secure the safety of life and property. The intention cannot be that the municipality, after operating one of these ferries for half a century, having the greatest care for the protection of life, should have to come down here to ask for consent.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I desire to move that the committee rise and report progress, because the hon. member for Two Mountains (Mr. Ethier) has a Bill from the Senate which he desires to put on the Order paper before six o'clock.

Progress reported.

OTTAWA VALLEY RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. ETHIER moved for leave to introduce a Bill (No. 264) respecting the Ottawa Valley Railway Company.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first and second times, and referred to the Select Standing Committee on Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

NORTH SYDNEY HARBOUR.

Bill (No. 262) to amend the Act respecting the harbour of North Sydney, in Nova Scotia, read the second time, and House went into committee thereon.

On section 1,

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This is the style of drafting which I think is objectionable, inasmuch as looking at the Bill one has no idea whatever as to the effect of the amendment proposed. Would the hon. gentleman be good enough to read to us section 8 as it will read after this amendment has been passed ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (reading) :

The salary of the harbour master shall be at the rate of not exceeding five hundred dollars per annum.

On section 2,

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This section is open to the same objection. Will the hon. gentleman be good enough to read section 10 of the Act as it will be after this amendment is passed ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (reading) :

The said harbour dues shall be collected by the collector of customs at the said port, who shall not grant entry inwards or clearance outwards to any ship until the harbour dues on her are paid ; and shall, after deducting five per cent for his remuneration, pay the balance.

Bill reported, read the third time, and passed.

SHIPPING CASUALTIES ACT.

Bill (No. 263) to amend the Shipping Casualties Act, 1901, read the second time, and House went into committee thereon.

On section 1,

Mr. CLARKE. What does that mean.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It means that in case of stranded vessels there shall be an investigation held. That has not been provided for before.

On section 2,

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman was to give us the recommendations of the British Board of Trade in regard to this matter on the second reading of the Bill, or, as we would have preferred, at some previous stage.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The object of the amendment is to enable the minister to appoint a permanent commissioner. An accident happens, it is reported to the department, and the minister happens to be absent, or for some reason or other he cannot be reached at once, and the matter is delayed. On the representations made to the department by the British Board of Trade, we have thought that it would be in the interest of navigation and for the improvement of the St. Lawrence route if in such cases it should not be necessary for the commissioner to wait the arrival of the minister to get the necessary authorization. I think the members of the committee will see that no harm can result from this, because the officer who is charged by the department to hold these investigations is generally the same officer, and he appoints his assessors. By this amendment he will not be delayed in holding the investigation.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend promised us, when the resolution was going through the Committee of the Whole, that he would produce the request of the British Board of Trade. It is that I was referring to.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have not with me to-night, owing to the absence of the deputy minister, the representations which were made to the department on this subject. But I suppose the hon. gentleman will take my word that this amendment has been demanded in the interests of navigation and shipping.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Of course, I would be happy to take my hon. friend's word, although he has hardly kept his promise with regard to producing the document. We might look at the suggestions of the British Board of Trade from a different standpoint; and, as the hon. gentleman was making some material changes in the Act, I thought it would be just as well to have their recommendation before the House when considering the Bill. Perhaps we might let it stand in committee until my hon. friend brings down this document.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. We might delay the third reading, in order to produce this correspondence. After all, this is only a domestic Bill. It is only a matter of organization in the department. I will bring down the demands that have been made and the suggestions regarding the amendments which are considered fair and reasonable.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think that would be satisfactory. If my hon. friend will undertake to produce those suggestions and let me have an opportunity of looking at them before the third reading, that will suit. Will he be good enough to let me know when he does lay them on the Table, in case I should not be in the House at the time, so that I may have an opportunity of reading them before the third reading.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I will send them directly to the hon. gentleman.

On section 3,

Mr. CLARKE. This is intended to apply to masters, mates or engineers. Why not apply it also to pilots ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Because there is a Pilotage Act which deals with them.

Mr. CLARKE. What provision is there in the Pilotage Act to cover such cases ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Chapter 180 of the Revised Statutes of Canada contains all the provisions respecting pilots.

Mr. CLARKE. As I understand it, this Bill is intended to provide speedy means of inquiry into marine casualties, but the power given the officials appointed to investigate only covers certain officers. Why not make it competent for them to inquire into the conduct of the pilot ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Because all that is dealt with in the Pilotage Act. We have special legislation as regards pilots.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Take the case of a stranded steamer in which it is perfectly clear the stranding is due to the fault of some one. There is a dispute as to whether it was due to the fault of the pilot or the captain or some of the officers. You are taking power to investigate the conduct of the officers, but can you use the investigation for the purpose of dealing with the pilot. If not, why should you make any distinction between the masters or officers and the pilot.

Mr. CLARKE. Especially as it is not likely you could know in advance who is responsible. It might be the pilot.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Investigation into the conduct of pilots is provided for in chapter 80 of 49 Victoria. And I may say that one of the reasons advanced in favour of the Department of Marine and Fisheries taking charge of the pilotage between Montreal and Quebec and the River Saguenay is precisely the reason advanced by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke). In order to put the whole thing under one control, another Bill has been introduced ; the consideration of which has been postponed until Tuesday next. This Bill will have the effect of putting under control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries investigations to be held as regards the conduct of pilots. That is under chapter 74 of 49 Victoria.

Mr. CLARKE. But this Act contemplates the appointment of an official to inquire into cases of stranding and so on. Why not give this officer power to deal with the pilot as well as with the master, mate and engineer ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I cannot do it under this Bill, and that is why another Bill has been introduced. If that passes, then, under the amended law, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries would be authorized to make regulations and give power to an officer to investigate casualties, and to take cognizance of offences of the pilot as well of the other officers. I think it is a good move and, as I stated when that Bill was under discussion, it has been recommended by the Board of Trade of Montreal, the shipping interests, and the harbour commissioners. And, to the credit of the pilots of the district, I must say that they have unanimously asked to be taken under control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. That is the reason for bringing the Bill before the House.

Mr. CLARKE. Suppose that an investigation is held under the provisions of the Bill now before us and the investigating officer finds that the master, engineer and mate are blameless, but that it is the pilot who is responsible, what will be the modus then ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Under the Act which I am proposing to amend by this Bill, the investigating officer will have no authority, because it is a different class of people who have to be dealt with and they must be dealt with in a different manner and under a different law. But, in order to attain the end that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) desires, the Pilotage Act also will be amended so that the commissioner who is called upon to investigate casualties under the Act may investigate, at the same time, the conduct of the pilot but with a little difference because there are certain provisions which will be followed.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is the Bill to which the minister refers printed ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes. It is the Bill, the consideration of which has been postponed until Tuesday, at the request of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden, Halifax), in order to allow the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. Casgrain) to be present when it is discussed. Under that Bill the pilotage authority which now rests with the Harbour Board of Montreal, will be transferred, with the consent of everybody, to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. And Quebec too ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, as regards Quebec, I have to say that we have been unable to come to an understanding. And we do not care to coerce them. After all, as everybody consents to the change that is proposed respecting pilots between Montreal and Quebec, it might be just as well to wait and see how this law works. If it is satisfactory, no doubt the pilotage authority of Quebec will come to the same conclusion as that of Montreal, and so the authority of the Department of Marine and Fisheries will be extended, with the consent of the harbour board and pilots of the district of Quebc.

Mr. CLARKE. Does the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Prefontaine) refer to Bill (No. 261) respecting the pilotage district of Montreal and the port and pilotage district of Quebec, as the Bill that has been fixed for consideration for Tuesday next ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. In what way do the provisions of this Bill bring the pilot who m y be in charge of a vessel below Quebec, for instance, and who may be found to have been derelict in his duty in case of stranding or other accident, under the discipline—if I may use the term—of the commissioner who is to inquire into cases of marine accident ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It will not bring the pilots below Quebec under the authority of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, for the reasons I have explained, that we could not come to an understanding with the pilots and harbour commissioners of Quebec. So, the law regarding casualties cannot be adopted to apply to those pilots. But, under the authority of the law that is proposed, it will apply to the pilots from Montreal to Quebec.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not think the hon. minister has quite met what is suggested by my hon. friend form West Toronto (Mr. Clarke). The Bill (No. 261) will place the pilots between Montreal and Quebec under control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, but not so the pilots below Quebec. This Bill that we are discussing will have no effect upon them.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Of course not. If I had succeeded in getting the control of all the pilots on the St. Lawrence route I could have consolidated the two laws. But, as the control by the pilotage authority of Quebec over their own pilots remains, including the control of investigations, I thought we might as well leave the two laws existing, but change the authority vested in the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal to the Department of Marine and Fisheries. If, in a year or two, it is possible to come to an understanding with the pilotage authority of Quebec, we can consolidate the two laws, and have authority which will deal with faults or negligence on the part not only of masters, mates and engineers, but of pilots as well.

Mr. CLARKE. I believe the hon. minister is working in the right line. Personally, from all I have been able to gather concerning the state of affairs, I think it is better to have the authority vested in the Department of Marine and Fisheries. But take section 21 of the Act as it is proposed under this Bill :

> The certificate of a master, mate, or engineer may be cancelled or suspended by a court holding a formal investigation, if the court finds that any loss, or damage, or the abandonment or stranding of any ship, or any loss of life has been caused by the wrongful act or default of such master, mate, or engineer—— and so on. I would ask the minister if it is not possible and practicable to add the word ' pilot ' either before or after ' master,' mate or engineer,' so as to give the commissioner who is to be appointed under the provisions of this Act, power, after having made an investigation if he finds a pilot guilty of dereliction of duty, to impose a penalty upon him ? This Bill only gives the commissioner power to impose a penalty upon a master, a mate or an engineer ; why not include the pilot as well, if he is the officer of the ship who was primarily responsible for the accident ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. For the reason I have explained. On account of the misunderstanding that exists we have to keep the two statutes separate. I have explained that the Harbour Commissioners of Quebec, and the shipping interests as well as the pilots, who are a corporation, were strongly opposed to any change.

Mr. CLARKE. Have we not power in this parliament to make any regulation we please ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Certainly we have, but it would be a change involving the obliteration to a certain extent of a corporation which has existed for nearly a century. The pilots are jealous of their rights and privileges, and think they can manage their own affairs better under present conditions than the Department of Marine and Fisheries could do it for them. Well, after studying the question, we thought the present was not an opportune time to force them, especially in view of the fact that the shipping interests were not favourable to a change. If the shipping interests were favourable to the change we might then have concluded that, in the interest of transportation and of the safety of the St. Lawrence route, we would be justified in ignoring the prejudices of the pilots, and passing such a law as we thought proper. But none of the interested parties were willing that we should make the change, in fact they all opposed it ; so we concluded that if we could not get a whole loaf, we would take a half loaf. In the city of Montreal the case is different, for there all the interested parties acceded to the wish of the government, and we are proposing a law which will be discussed by this House in a few days that will apply to Montreal. We could have included in the provisions of that Bill the Quebec pilots as well as those of Montreal, and bring them all under the control of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, but, as I have explained, the Quebec pilots and the shipping interests there were opposed to it.

Mr. CLARKE. Then this Bill does not interfere with the pilots, and does not apply to any investigation into their conduct ? Is the government afraid to tackle the question ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, we are not afraid of the pilots, but when we found that all the interested parties, all those who were interested in making the navigation as safe as possible were opposed to the change, we did not insist upon making the change.

Mr. CLARKE. Did the harbour commissioners and the shipping interests oppose this Bill, or did they suggest that the government should not make provision in this measure for the appointment of a commissioner to inquire into the conduct of the pilots as well as into that of the masters and mates ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. They did. The harbour commissioners, the shipping interests as well as the corporation of pilots all opposed any change. I sent the same memorandum to the harbour commissioners at Quebec, to the pilots and the shipping interests of Quebec, that I sent to the shipping interests in Montreal, to the board of trade and to the pilots of Montreal. In Montreal everybody consented to the change and approved of it, asked that it should be made ; in Quebec, on the other hand, they all opposed it.

Mr. CLARKE. If it is in the public interest that a speedy and efficient means should be adopted to ascertain the cause of marine accidents and to impose penalties upon the officer responsible therefor, whether it be a master, a mate or an engineer, why should it not apply as well to the pilot, if he is the person in charge at the time the accident takes place ? Why not make a provision in this Bill to impose a penalty upon him ? I presume the minister is not consulting the interests solely of the pilots in Quebec or Montreal, but of the shipping interests generally, and endeavouring to improve the reputation which the St. Lawrence has. I think this is a very commendable Act, and I cannot understand why the government did not include pilots in the list of officers who may be dealt with by the commissioner.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It appears that I have failed to make myself understood by the hon. gentleman. I said that the pilots of Quebec, the harbour commissioners and the shipping interests of Quebec were all opposed to any change.

Mr. CLARKE. Opposed to the government providing a simple means of having an investigation speedily made into the cause of accidents to vessels ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. They have that already in Quebec.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this Bill to apply only to the river between Quebec and Montreal ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. With respect to pilots, yes.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This Act does not apply at all to pilots, but only to masters, mates and engineers. The corporation of pilots is dealt with by a different law. The pilotage authority will be amended as regards the district of Montreal, but it will not be amended as regards the district of Quebec, because in the latter place everybody is opposed to it.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I may be allowed to say a word with respect to the conditions existing at Quebec. The pilotage authority for the St. Lawrence is divided into two parts. For that part of the St. Lawrence extending from Quebec eastward to the gulf, it is under the control of the harbour commissioners of Quebec. The harbour commissioners of Quebec have succeeded to what was formerly known as the Trinity Board, and they are now the pilotage authority. They are the authority having absolute control over the pilots' certificates, and they alone can grant a certificate to a pilot, they alone can withdraw the certificate in case of default or misconduct on the part of the pilot. With respect to the pilotage between Quebec and Montreal, heretofore the pilots were under the control of the Montreal harbour commissioners. The Montreal harbour commissioners, as I understand it, granted the pilots' certificates and also had control over the pilots in case of an accident in the river. My hon. friend introduced this Bill for the purpose of dealing with masters, mates or engineers. These are under the control of the Marine and Fisheries Department, their certificates are under the control of that department who can deal with them under the law, and they now have the power of appointing a commissioner, acting under the Department of Marine and Fisheries, for the purpose of dealing with their certificates. They can deal with them in so far as they deal with the certificates of masters, mates or engineers who are under the control of the Marine and Fisheries Department. But, take a certificate of an English captain who comes out here. This certificate can only be dealt with by the board of trade on the other side. In so far as pilots between Montreal and Quebec are concerned, my hon. friend intends by the Bill that he proposes to deal with on Monday next (Bill 261) to place the pilots between Montreal and Quebec under the control of the Marine and Fisheries Department. If that is done, then, it will be optional with him to allow this officer, whoever he may be, to investigate all matters connected with the pilots there because they will be under his control. But, as the pilots below Quebec are left under the control of the Quebec Harbour Commissioners, the investigation in the case of an accident is held by the Harbour Commissioners. I may say that the investigation is as speedy as could possibly take place here, because the Quebec Harbour Commissioners are made up of a certain number of gentlemen who are appointed by the government, men representing the city of Quebec, the ship-owners and the merchants and for the purposes of pilotage there is added to the board the president of the corporation of pilots, a gentleman possessing expert knowledge. So that, there is a very speedy mode of dealing with the pilot at the time the accident occurs. The captain is obliged by law to report the accident forthwith and the Quebec Harbour Commissioners are obliged to hold this investigation. They have held these investigations and the results have been fairly satisfactory. As my hon. friend pointed out, when it was suggested to make a change all those interested in Quebec opposed any change. Speaking for myself personally I think it would be in the interests of the shipping of the St. Lawrence if all these accidents which occur on the St. Lawrence below as well as above Quebec were investigated by a court of competent jurisdiction, or by the admiralty court. I would like to place these investigations absolutely beyond the control of such a thing as local influence and I think it would be a step in the right direction if my hon. friend could see his way clear to make a change so that whenever an accident occurs on the St. Lawrence it would be promptly investigated by the admiralty court, a court which is absolutely qualified to investigate these measures, and the judges of which court have power to appoint assessors for the purpose of assisting them in work of that sort.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Do the Harbour Commissioners of Quebec get power to deal with these matters under the Pilotage Act or under some special legislation applicable to them ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The Act which is applicable to the harbour commissioners gives them power to deal with these matters independently of the Act respecting pilots.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is not under the general Pilotage Act that they proceed ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No. Chapter 80 of the Revised Statutes provides for the functions of these commissioners and they get control of the matter under their Act.

Mr. CLARKE. Am I correct in saying that the hon. Minister of Justice has just stated that the powers of the Quebec Harbour Commissioners are limited to investigating the conduct of pilots ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes, they have no jurisdiction to deal with engineers, mates or masters, because they have no control over their certificates.

Mr. CLARKE. May I ask the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries if there was an investigation held into the accident to the Carolina wrecked in the Saguenay some time ago ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Not yet.

Mr. CLARKE. Is there going to be an investigation ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, instructions have been given.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. That does not come under the control of the Pilotage Act.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The difficulty about the position, notwithstanding what the hon. Minister of Justice says, is this : I have had some experience in connection with the investigation of accidents under the very Act which is now being amended. Take such a case as that of the French steamship La Burgoyne which collided with the English ship Cromartyshire off the coast of Nova Scotia. We had an investigation under this statute and examined a number of persons who were not ordinarily resident in the province. They were witnesses who were going away in two, three or four days. They could never have been made available for an investigation by the Pilotage Commission, because the commission would not act quickly enough for that. The investigation was held two or three days after the arrival of the damaged ship in the Halifax harbour. If the suggestion of my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) could be accepted, the evidence obtained in that way could be made available not only for dealing with the masters, officers and engineers, but for dealing with the pilots, whereas under the law as it stands at the present time, you cannot thus deal with the pilots. Suppose a collision should take place off the harbour of Halifax and the witnesses left in, two, three or four days, or immediately after the investigation under this statute, how are you to get your evidence for the purpose of the investigation into the conduct of the pilots before the Pilotage Commission ? There should be no need of doing the work over again because the evidence which is available for dealing with the masters, engineers and officers should be available in considering the case of the pilot. You close your investigation and the commissioner reports. You can deal with the masters, engineers and officers, but you cannot deal with the pilots. You may go on and hold your investigation before the Pilotage Commission but you cannot make the same evidence available and that seems to be a strong feature of the suggestion which my hon. friend makes. The pilots stand apart—in a different class altogether.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I admit that the difficulty exists. We are trying to correct these difficulties but it takes some time to convince people that certain things should be done in a certain way. That is the reason why we have been obliged to proceed slowly, but we are moving as quickly as possible towards the point that we desire to attain. In regard to the pilotage of the Montreal district, if the department had gone into this question without a spirit of conciliation or without a little diplomacy we would have been face to face with very great opposition. The Harbour Commissioners of Montreal might have been as jealous of their privileges as the Harbour Commissioners of Quebec have been, and they might have said : You are taking away part of our privileges and we object to it. The pilots might have said : We would rather be under the control of the Harbour Commission of Montreal because we know the members of the commission and the result would have been that this change might have been delayed for two or three years more. Instead of that we used persuasion, and we tried to convince them that it was in their own interests and in the interest of shipping that this change should be made. They have consented with a good grace and I hope this will be found to be a move in the right direction. I hope that the district of Quebec will come to the same conclusion, especially if this law gives satisfaction to the shipping interests.

Mr. CLARKE. I notice in to-day's paper an account of an accident which occurred to the steamer 'Hibernian' leaving the port of Montreal, within a mile or two of her dock. An accident of a similar nature occurred to another steamer about two months ago right in the harbour of Montreal. Was there an investigation into the circumstances of that accident ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There was.

Mr. CLARKE. Might I ask the result ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The accident was found not to be the result of any fault of any of the officers ; it was a pure accident that might happen at any time. The accident was due to the fact that at the moment when the steamer was turning around to take the channel, when it was essential that the pilot should be able to see in order to clear his course, a very heavy storm broke over the ship so that the pilot could not see ten feet before him ; the boat sheered and went aground. There was no fault on the part of the officers. It appears from information I have gathered in the department that the accident this morning occurred under somewhat similar circumstances. I do not wish to pre-judge the case, but it seems from information we have received that possibly those in charge of the steamer allowed the tug to leave her at a point too high in the channel. An ordinance has been adopted by the harbour commissioners providing that steamship companies are not to allow the tugs to leave their steamers until they come to Maisonneuve, about a mile below the point where the accident occurred this morning, and it may be discovered that the accident was due to the fact that having full confidence that everything was all right, the tug let go and the steamer took a sheer. These accidents are sometimes due to special circumstances, and in this case it is stated that the steering apparatus became entangled in some way just at that moment. Of course, we will know the cause of the accident after the investigation has taken place.

Bill reported, read the third time, and passed.

SUPPLY—RAILWAY SUBSIDIES.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved that the House go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the motion passes, might I again inquire as to whether the government proposes to bring down any railway subsidies, and if so, when we may expect to have them ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, railway subsidies will be brought down, I hope on Monday, certainly not later than Tuesday.

Motion agreed to, and House went into committee.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We will take up an item in the main estimates that seems to have been overlooked.

New Brunswick—harbours and rivers—Campbellton wharf, extension and repairs, $14,400.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that this item was passed in a previous sitting but there seems to be a misunderstanding about that. It was allowed to stand at one time. The question arose as to whether the property was being acquired by the department by purchase or whether it was being acquired by expropriation. The information was not furnished to me by the officers of the department at the time, but I find that the property is being acquired by expropriation, and the matter is now in the Justice Department. They were served with notice under the Act and the property was taken over by the government at the time, but we have not yet had a report from the Justice Department regarding the matter.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Might I ask the minister why the item stood ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, I was not able to inform the House how the department was acquiring this property which belonged, I think, to a Mr. Shives, of Campbellton, New Brunswick.

Mr. CLARKE. The government is acquiring it in the regular way ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The government is acquiring it by expropriation and the property is now occupied by the Marine Department. It is returning good revenue.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will take up the supplementary estimates for the Public Works Department at page 9.

Public buildings, Ontario—Ottawa Parliament Buildings—additional accommodation, &c., $7,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is intended to cover some further improvements in the attic of this building, which have been asked for by the senators. They complain that their committee room is rather small, and they have made application to the department for a larger one.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). In this connection I would like to ask the minister to put the lavatories and bathrooms of the House of Commons into a somewhat more modern condition. There is not a shower bath in the whole establishment.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will ask the engineer to look into that matter.

Mr. CLARKE. I must say that the senators set us a good example. When we go to that end of the building and see what commodious accommodation they have, they put us to the blush.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We are living in hope that we may reach there some day.

Mr. CLARKE. In the meantime, it might be well for us to pay a little more attention to the accommodation we have here, though perhaps some of us may not require it very much longer. In this connection I would like to draw the attention of the Minister of Public Works to the atmosphere that permeates some of the rooms. Through the courtesy of the hon. gentleman, several of us have a room up stairs ; but that room, after it has been closed for ten or twelve hours, is positively not habitable for some time after the door is opened. There must be something radically wrong with the ventilation, not only of that room, but of several other rooms and of this Chamber as well. If the hon. minister would look into the subject of the ventilation of all the rooms of this building, he would do the members a substantial service.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The ventilation of this building has been a subject of discussion almost every session. I think there has been some improvement in this Chamber from the fans which have been put in. I am inclined to think that while the air is close, we get more fresh air than formerly, and without a draft. Owing to the construction of the building, it seems impossible to keep the air fresh. I will bring the remarks of my hon. friend to the attention of the chief architect.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The accommodation around the House of Commons for people who have to do any work is very bad. I have got so tired of calling attention to the kind of accommodation we have in the vicinity of No. 6 and No. 4 that I am almost ashamed to mention it again. My hon. friend from Toronto (Mr. Clarke) comforts me with the assurance that No. 6 and No. 4 will not matter much to us after this session, whatever he means by that. If there is to be any additional accommodation for the Senate side, I would be inclined also to put in a claim for the House of Commons side. We have 214 members here, some of whom have to do a good deal of work during the session, and they have their choice of doing it either in the House, when they should be listening to what is going on, or doing it under circumstances of very great inconvenience. Members are frequently obliged to hold interviews with people in the hall or in one of the corridors; and when I hold an interview with any gentleman who comes to see me I have to do it to the accompaniment of the click of the typewriter, or else the stenographer in my room has to go out into the hall and wait till the conference is over. While I do not know very much about the disposition of the rooms available at present, I certainly do think that the House of Commons side is in need of additional accommodation, perhaps to a greater extent than the Upper House.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no doubt considerable lack of accommodation. The ministers themselves have not the proper accommodation to receive those who want to see them. Parties desiring to interview the ministers have to wait out in the corridors. We are proposing, however, to give from six to eight additional rooms for the accommodation of members by fixing up the upper flat. There are some rooms to be fitted up on the commons side in addition to enlarging the committee room on the Senate side.

Mr. BELL. The most important change required is the ventilation of this chamber. Although this subject has been discussed hundreds of times and efforts made from time to time to improve the ventilation, still it is very bad. After the House has been in session a number of hours, and particularly when the gallaries are filled, the air is almost poisonous. I would suggest that the Minister of Public Works should get some of the chemists in the department to test the air after the House has been some hours in session ; and if they demonstrate that it is dangerous to human life, possibly something may then be done to improve it. A good many years ago, while the subject of ventilation began to attract attention in London, specimens of the atmosphere were collected in some of the court houses and houses of parliament and other public buildings, at certain hours when the ar was in a vitiated condition, and analysed, and it was found that it was a source of danger to the lives of those who were compelled to breathe it. A good many of our members can obtain relief by remaining away, but those who desire to attend public business steadily, have to sit here almost continually when the House is in session and there can be no doubt that they suffer from the bad effects of breathing a vitiated atmosphere. So far as I can judge by my sense of smell, it is certainly not advisable to breathe the air of this chamber any length of time. Still, as one may be deceived by his senses, I would suggest that we should utilize the services of some of the skilful chemists in the government departments and get them to inform us of the exact character of that atmosphere in this chamber. Almost every prominent public man in Canada, ever since we have had a parliament has complained from time to time on this subject. I remember reading a speech of Mr. Edward Blake, in which he complained that he was actually suffering from a species of poisoning when condemned to spend long hours in the House. He was afflicted with head-aches, which he had every reason to believe were caused by the impure air. It is notorious that a great many members suffer from illness during the session. Any one who comes in here from the pure fresh air, after the House has been in session some time, can satisfy himself that it must be the cause of a great deal of the ill-health of members of parliament. It is discreditable to us that such a condition should not be remedied. No man can do his best work intellectually when he is not breathing pure air. A foul atmosphere causes excessive drowsiness which is a species of poisoning. If we are to do our best in this parliament, the atmosphere must be purified.

Mr. CLARKE. Especially the political atmosphere.

Mr. BELL. I am not going to introduce anything of a partisan character. I am very much in favour of having something done. For the last thirty-six years this subject has been discussed but nothing satisfactory has as yet been done. No doubt the officials in charge of the ventilation are doing their best with the facilities at their command, still no reasonable man who has to spend hours in this chamber can fail to feel the ill effects of this vitiated atmosphere. But unless some demonstration be obtained, which can easily be had by making use of skilful scientific men, of the actual condition of affairs, we will go on suffering the same evils.

Mr. CHARLTON. This question of the ventilation of the chamber has provoked a good deal of discussion. The problem of securing adequate and proper ventilation is indeed a most difficult one. This chamber in which we are assembled is a box surrounded by passages, with no sunlight except at these upper windows, and they are made as dark as possible. The radical defects in the construction of the building are so great that it is, perhaps, almost impossible to thoroughly remedy the difficulties under which we labour. I imagine that if we had these passages taken out and had this room extended to where we could get sunlight in through the windows and get air when we need it, a great improvement would be affected.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is this change the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) suggests ?

Mr. CHARLTON. I am about to suggest a slight amelioration of the condition. We have at last, I believe, adopted a plan that I advocated for years, of forcing air into the Chamber by means of fans. Formerly the air was brought in by subterranean ducts from openings at the side of the hill. Thus, the air came to us practically through sewers, and it was poisonous and deleterious to our health. A good many long discussions had to take place before we could secure the remedy of that evil. I believe the air is brought in now from where it is pure and forced in by fans. If we would adopt the precaution of allowing the air to escape, and so establish a current through the building, we should have tolerably fresh air. But there is a singular dislike on the part of many individuals to the feeling of a current of air. I have noticed it in crossing the continent on the train. If an attempt is made to ventilate the car, about half the inmates object, the ventilators have to be closed and the air left vitiated and impure. We used to have windows opened at the top of this Chamber. I am told that, in consequence of putting in the fans, the opening of windows is not advisable, because the fresh air escapes by the windows, while the foul air settles near the floor. If we could have the doors and the outside windows open, and allow the air to pass in and out, the air in the Chamber would be improved. I frequently secure the privilege of having that done, and when it is done, I can realize almost instantly the improvement of the atmosphere in the Chamber. But when it is done persons in the Chamber complain of draught ; then the doors must be closed and the current of air stopped. The atmosphere is allowed to stagnate and so to become foul. I advise that the doors be kept open when the weather is moderate enough to allow of this being done without danger. If the doors are kept closed, the air that is forced in lies dead and grows stagnant, carbonic acid gas is formed and the atmosphere grows more and more deleterious. And the consequence is, as my hon. friend from Pictou (Mr. Bell) suggests, headaches, lassitude and depression, and all the other results that attend foul and vitiated air. Whether we can ever thoroughly remedy the defects of the ventilation of the Chamber is a question ; but the simple plan I have suggested would give relief. Why it is not permitted, I am unable to understand. Of course, there may be a little current of air in some part of the Chamber that may not be pleasant, but that can be met by putting on additional clothing if a person feels the draught. I secure the opening of doors when Mr. Speaker is in the Chair, and I hear no complaints. If we were simply to allow the air to enter and leave the Chamber that would be a partial remedy of the evils from which we suffer.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say a few words on this subject of ventilation, as I think the remarks of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) who has just taken his seat are directed at me. When the windows and doors are open, there is, as you can well understand, a draught passing through the Chamber, and those of us who sit at the Table have our legs bathed in cold air. All three of us, after some hours of such an experience, have had our legs as numb as they can be to the knee. The hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat is not very often in the House, nor does he remain very long when he comes. He is free to come in and go out as he pleases. And I have told him, when he has come to me to have the doors open, that it is well enough for one who is free to enter or leave the Chamber, but that I was nailed to my seat for about seven hours a day for months past. The hon. gentleman could go out and get fresh air if he wanted it, without compelling myself and others to sit in a draught that would bring on illness. Regarding the thing simply as a matter of self-preservation, I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) is safer in his seat than I in mine, and he should have some compassion and pity on those of us who are forced to remain in the Chamber.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Might I ask why Mr. Deputy Speaker does not, under such circumstances, call the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) to the Chair ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I think that is what I shall have to do.

Mr. CHARLTON. I shall be glad to show that it can be done without injury to one's health.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Let me tell hon. gentlemen of another thing which nearly destroyed us who sit at the Table. Under the Table is a box that covers a register, through which a fan down below drives cold air. The cold air, striking the under side of the Table, was carried along so that we who sat at the Table had our legs bathed in it constantly. The 'Hansard' reporters were often forced to raise the lid of the letter-box at the end of the Table so as to keep this cold air from blowing in their faces. After two or three sessions, I discovered by accident last year that there was such a trap for our health, and, of course, I went to the engineer and had it closed. I believe I have the thanks of the parties who were being destroyed by this system of ventilation for what I did. Unless a better system of ventilation were adopted I certainly would resign my position and go home, rather than stay in the draught between the doors and windows. Then, if the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) were appointed to my place, he also would go home, not to his own house, but to his long home.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Eight or nine years ago this matter received a good deal of attention, and I was requested by some hon. gentlemen then on the government benches to look into it. As a result of suggestions of mine, some improvements were made in various parts of the building. My object was to draw the foul air off. That was the proper principle. The foul air could be drawn out below and the pure air sent in higher up. You will find that the case at the present moment. At times the atmosphere is almost unbearable in this Chamber. The temperature at the present time is nearly 70; that is too high for men to sit long in one room. I am satisfied that a very simple principle of ventilation could be evolved. The system at present in vogue appears to be this: The air is forced in over the towers from the underground ducts below. It enters the Chamber from above the galleries. It is bumped over the towers on the sides of the Chamber at both ends. I do not know where it comes in, but it should come in from points high up in this Chamber, and should come in in good volume. If necessary that air could be warmed in cold weather, so that it would not be dangerous to hon. gentlemen who are getting baldheaded. But if taken hold of in a business-like way, I think a satisfactory system could be evolved, and I trust the Minister of Public Works, before he leaves the office, will secure for us a modern system of ventilation by which the air is drawn out at the bottom and brought in, either cold or warm, at the top.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will bring the remarks of the hon. gentleman to the attention of the chief architect, who I know has given a great deal of attention to this matter. I am afraid that it is owing to the peculiar construction of the building that we have this difficulty.

Mr. WILSON. I have not heard any very lucid explanation of this $7,000 that is asked for. I have not heard of any plan being submitted. I think the minister ought to give us some idea of what is to be done with this money. He says in a general way there is some fixing up to be done in the third or fourth stories.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not got detailed plans and specifications.

Mr. WILSON. Tell us how you got that $7,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have taken $10,000 in the main estimates, and I then gave all the information of the purposes for which it was required. In addition we are asking for this $7,000 with which the chief architect informs me he can fit up additional rooms in the attic, I think three or four. Then a committee of the Senate consisting of the Speaker, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, and the Clerk, I think, waited upon me and asked that some change should be made in the Senate Committee Room. The chief architect thinks that with this $7,000 additional he will be able to make the improvements that were asked for.

Harbours and rivers—Port Arthur and Fort William, additional dredging, $75,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the amount which the chief engineer thinks should be spent at present in these harbours under the plan we have adopted. All the details of the plan have not yet been worked out. The total cost at Port Arthur under the general plan will be about $163,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Is that all for dredging?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Practically. It gives twenty-one feet clear.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this work to be done both in the harbour at Port Arthur and on the river?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does it involve any work on the Mission river?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. I gathered together all the plans and asked the engineer to make a report. The general plan as outlined here is being carried out. All the appropriations have been spent under a general plan at Port Arthur and Fort William. These improvements will cost in the neighbourhood of $500,000. Those to be done with this money are the most urgent, so that boats may be enabled to get up to the present wharf.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does the present expenditure involve the deepening of the Mission river, or is that only part of the larger plan ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. All this work is being carried out under a general plan, and includes the deepening of the Mission river and of the Kaministiquia river, and the dredging for the wharf. I do not think any work will be started on land this season.

Mr. CLARKE. How much is to be spent on the Kaministiquia river ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think, to make all the improvements provided under that plan, it will take about $115,000.

Mr. CLARKE. What depth of water will there be in the river ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Twenty-one feet clear.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Is this work being done by contract or by day labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think most of the dredging is done by contract, at fifteen cents a yard.

Mr. BROCK. I would like to ask the minister if this sum is in addition to the large amounts of money that have been spent in these harbours during the last five or six years, now amounting to an enormous sum. This is in addition to the very large amount of money that was spent on these harbours during the last eight or ten years. You are going to spend a large amount of money on this harbour. I suppose this is to accommodate the large vessels going in there and taking cargoes of grain from that port. I did expect that the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) would rise up in his might and say that we are wasting the money of this country, because we are going to be able to carry such enormous quantities of grain by the cheap route that he is advocating that this harbour will become useless. You must accept one horn of the dilemma or the other. We must understand whether we are going to spend this money well in improving our water-ways or whether we are going to spend a large amount of money badly so that as the hon. member for North Norfolk has said grain can be carried so much more cheaply by the all-the-year-round route that he speaks of. I do not know why we should go on and spend so much money on a harbour which is going to be closed up during a portion of the year. Either one plan or the other must be at fault and I would like to know which plan is at fault.

Mr. CHARLTON. The hon. gentleman should bear in mind that the blessings to be derived from the transcontinental railway, which will be all that I have depicted, cannot be secured to the country for five or six years yet. In the meantime, we will need to improve our present methods of transportation from the west, and I apprehend that we shall never entirely dispense with the lake route for reaching the sea. In looking to the future, we have the fact before us that in all probability we shall have a very large market for our food products in the United States. The tendency in the agricultural states is to lessen, year by year, the produtcion of wheat. I remember when the state of Illinois and the state of Iowa were great wheat-producing states, when these two states made a leading business of the production of wheat. To-day neither of these two states grows its own bread.

Mr. BROCK. Does our grain go in there duty free ?

Mr. CHARLTON. You can travel over both of these states for hours and hours without seeing an acre of wheat. It is said that the state of Minnesota will cease to produce its own bread within 25 years. Under this condition of things, with the urban population of the United States increasing as rapidly as it is, and there being ten millions or twelve millions of inhabitants in the cities of the central and middle states, we look forward to the time when the United States will be a very large consumer of the food products of our western prairies. Already there is an agitation in the United States for the removal of the duty upon wheat. The removal of the duty upon wheat will be secured in a comparatively short time. When we reach that enormous market we will not reach it to any great extend by the transcontinental railway. The transcontinental railway will serve the purpose of carrying our export wheat on its way to Europe, but with the cities that are now existing, the cities that are growing rapidly, and with the towns of over 4,000 population, having a large number of inhabitants in New England and the middle states, the time is coming when they will depend very largely upon the prairies in the Northwest for their food, and while building the transcontinental railway will improve our facilities for reaching the market of the world and will secure, as far as circumstances will allow, the trade for our own seaports, we will still have in that great country, which has now a population of eighty millions, and likely to be one hundred millions within the life of some men in this House, an ever-increasing market. The shackles placed upon the trade of these two countries will be removed to a large extent, and we shall need the great lakes, we shall need the harbour of Port Arthur with 21 or 22 feet of water, we shall need improved facilities for navigation upon the lakes, and this will not interfere with the operation of the transcontinental railway or with any other mode of communication that we may adopt for reaching our own seaports for the purpose of exporting our food products to Europe.

Mr. BROCK. We are really grateful for this essay, this delightful word picture, from the hon. member for North Norfolk. While it is not very practical, it is certainly very pleasing to listen to. We are going to have the markets of the United States as a result of the deepening of the channel that we are now speaking of. This is going to afford us a market in the United States of one hundred million people. We have it on authority of the hon. member (Mr. Charlton) that the United States are going to remove the duty on wheat and breadstuffs and allow the products of this country to go in free, and on that account we are required to deepen the waters of Port Arthur. I do not know what traffic that magnificent railway he has advocated that can draw such an enormous number of trains, each of 2,000 tons of wheat the year round and every day in the year, is going to secure, but he promises to develop the North-west country to a most extraordinary extent. I think that the government should be startled at the extraordinary development that is to be brought about by the hon. gentleman in connection with this railway scheme. I do not think anything could bring home to the minds of the people more clearly the ridiculousness of the project which has been advocated by the hon. gentleman than the statement that we are going to have a market of one hundred millions of people to the south of us for our breadstuffs.

Mr. CLARKE. Why not take it round by way of Quebec, and send it from there ?

Mr. BROCK. I think our friends at Quebec will find that they are going to have a lean time with that road north of the height of land, up in that magnificent clay belt. I say we should call a halt, because we must accept either born of the dilemma. Either we are doing wrong in building that railway or we are doing wrong in expending a lot of money in improving our navigation. I contend that the government are perfectly right, and that the country is perfectly right in going on and improving the navigation of our water-ways and in providing every facility for getting our grain out in that direction. I believe that we should adopt the plan that was suggested not only by the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden, Halifax), but by the hon. ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte), and spend our money in our own country to bring out our grain to our own ports. I contend that we should spend our money on such projects as are before us, and that we should not go ahead and spend money upon the projects which has been advocated so loyally, so strongly and so learnedly by the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton). I have no objection to spending money on the harbour of Port Arthur and upon the harbour of Fort William. This is in the right direction.

Mr. BENNETT. Will that $160,000 to be spent at Port Arthur give a depth of 21 feet of water ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is the estimate of the chief engineer of the department.

Mr. BENNETT. Then, as to Fort William, how much is it proposed to spend there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Including the river, and to give a depth of 21 feet all around, it is proposed to expend $300,000, and probably a little over that.

Mr. BELL. How much has been spent in the past ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Since confederation there has been $550,000 expended.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I do not object to the expenditure in connection with the deepening of these harbours, but do think that where so much money of the people is expended that it should be expended in a proper way and under proper supervision. A large amount of money is paid out for the dredging of these rivers. Would it not be better to have a proper plan for the whole work, and to let it by contract ? I am satisfied that in that way it could be much more cheaply and satisfactorily done. I do not see why, on an important work of this kind the government of Canada should find it necessary to do part of this work by the day and part of it by the yard, instead of having a proper plan and estimate made, and then letting the work by contract. I am satisfied that a great deal of money would be saved if that were done. I do not object to the expenditure, but I think we should have some better system. I would ask whose dredges are doing this by the day or by the yard. I have been talking with contractors about this work at Port Arthur and they say that we are not getting the best value for our money, and that the work there is costing too much.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think my hon. friend has been misinformed. I know Mr. Boone, of Toronto, and I think he has the best dredging plant in Canada. From the reports of the auditors of the department, I learn that no contractor has given better satisfaction than he has. I may say that I have heard from parties who have been pressing for this work, absolutely no complaint. Neither the mayor, nor the members of council, nor leading citizens, men interested in the shipping irrespective of political parties who have been here have complained to me of the work that is being done. The hon. member finds fault with everything we are trying to do. I admit as he does that possibly we may not get the best value for our money owing to the fact that we have not a plan, but I am having a plan and survey made and then perhaps we may be able to let the work by contract and perhaps get it done at a cheaper rate, but so long as we have no survey and no plan it will be understood that owing to the great variation in the nature of material to be moved you cannot very well make a contract except at various prices, because any person knows that you cannot move hard-pan and rock, &c., for the same price as you can earth, so that we either have to have it done under our own supervision and pay for it according to the material moved or have a plan and survey and let a contract.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I can quite understand that where there is a small contract there can be no objection to the department letting the work by the yard or by the hour, but where nearly half a million dollars is being expended it seems to me to be remarkable that we should have to farm it out by the yard. It is not that the work is not properly done, I suppose you can always get the work done, but at a great cost; my objection is to the amount the work is costing when let in this manner. I suppose that this gentleman is a competent contractor, and that his plant is a good one, but that is not the question. Sixteen cents a yard seems to be an enormous price, more particularly when there is such a large amount of work to do. The department have under contract the dredging of Owen Sound harbour, and I am satisfied that if the department had done that by the yard it would have cost them twice as much as they are paying by contract. Hence I think it would be better for the government to either cease work or to do as little as possible until they have prepared plans and specifications in order that a contract may be let for this work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is exactly what I am trying to do now.

Mr. BENNETT. We are approaching, if I understand the minister's estimates, an expenditure of $660,000. First there is the work at Fort William costing half a million dollars and then there is the work at Port Arthur costing $160,000, but the vote asked up to the end of June of next year is altogether only $75,000. It seems to me that such a trifling estimate can only be a drop in the bucket for such a large expenditure and I would ask the minister how he proposes to apportion this $75,000, what proportion he intends to spend at Port Arthur and what at Fort William and whether the work will be done this fall or next spring.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman has rather exaggerated the figures I gave.

Mr. BENNETT. I think $500,000 was the right amount for Fort William; I took it down at the time.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total estimate of the engineer was $593,000. My hon. friend's error has arisen through his taking the $600,000, or properly $593,000, which is the total estimate for both, Fort William and Port Arthur and adding to it the $163,000 which is the estimate for Port Arthur. It is true that this is a very large expenditure, but my hon. friend will see that we have an amount in the main estimates, I do not remember exactly what amount, and between that and the $75,000 I think we will make very fair progress in that work. This vote is only until the 30th of June of next year. The work is going on now under the estimate. I agree with my hon. friend, I would like to have been in a position to have plans for this work which will be of great assistance in improving our transportation facilities. When we have completed our improvements there and at Port Colborne I have every confidence that we will reap very material advantage. After we have perfected our plans and completed the surveys we will probably get a great deal more value for our money, but at the same time we could not afford not to go on with this work now because we have had boats standing outside the harbour in the deep water lightering into the wharfs because they were not able to come alongside. Therefore a certain amount of this work had to be proceeded with and I am pleased to know that it has been done on plans that are part of the general plan so that there is no wasting of money in the works that are now going on and they are giving great satisfaction this season because they enable the boats to get up to the wharfs. This is very important as some of the finest elevators on the continent are now being built there. We are pressing the work. I am unable to say how much is being done at each of these two places because the chief engineer places the dredge wherever the work is most urgent in order to enable the boats to get to the wharfs.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Does the hon. gentleman not think that 16 cents a yard is an enormous figure for dredging at Port Arthur? I am satisfied as I said that Mr. Boone is competent to do the work and that his plant is all right, but the price that is being paid is extremely large. Is work being done at as high prices in any other place? The ex-Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) expressed the opinion that it was much cheaper when the work was done by dredges owned and controlled by the government. He said that in that way the work could be done for one-half what contractors charge. I believe that and I think he estimated that dredging could be done by the government dredge for 3 cents per yard. If that is the case, 16 cents a yard is an enormous price.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I did not say 16 cents; the average rate estimated by the chief engineer is 15 cents. The price depends altogether on the materials and the conditions under which the dredging is being done. I do not think that any one who is an authority on these matters would be able to stand up and say whether it can be done better by contract or by government-owned plant; the cost will be regulated altogether by the conditions. Some material at Port Arthur costs as much as $1.25 to move, some costs 40 cents and the average is 15 cents.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). The dredging at Port Arthur is not hard as the material is principally mud, and therefore I think that 16 cents is a very large amount. Have you any similar work being done on the Georgian bay except at Port Arthur where the price is as high as 16 cents a yard?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The price is fifteen cents not sixteen cents. The chief engineer informs me that that is the average price for the same kind of work all over the Dominion. The prices on the American side are very much higher—so much so that some of the dredges have left Canada, and we had to offer extra inducements to keep some of the plant here.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I am surprised that any one in the department should say that the government are in the habit of paying fifteen cents per yard for dredging on the Georgian bay. Four or five years ago it was done at half that price. I think it is desirable that all these harbours should be deepened to twenty feet. At the same time, I think we shall get very little for the amount of money we are spending. The contractors will make immense profits. Who is doing this work?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Great Lakes Dredging Company.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Is that the only company you have at work at Port Arthur?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, we have also Mr. Boone, of Toronto. There are four dredges at work. I am anxious to press on the work faster, but it is impossible to procure more dredges at the present time. I am acting under the advice of the chief engineer, and according to his estimate, these amounts of $85,000 and $75,000 will cover all the work for which we can procure plant.

Mr. WILSON. Will the minister tell us how the prices he pays for contract work will compare with what it costs to do the work with our own dredges?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am unable to tell the hon. gentleman, the conditions vary so much.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey).

Mr. WILSON. The officials of the department should be able to keep track of the work, so that the hon. minister could tell.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If we had a systematic set of books we could probably make comparisons. But my hon. friend is asking me to give him the information now.

Mr. WILSON. When may I expect it, if not now?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I can give the hon. gentleman the cost of dredging at any particular place.

Mr. WILSON. I think the minister will admit that the question is a fair one, and is not at all captious. I simply wish to know whether it pays better to do the dredging by contract or with our own dredges and under our own supervision.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not able to answer that question.

Mr. WILSON. Can you do it during the session?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot say. It would require considerable experimenting. For instance, the work in the St. Lawrence channel is estimated to cost three cents a yard. That of course does not include interest on the plant, expenses during the winter, payment of officers, and many other things; nor are the conditions there to be compared with the conditions in small harbours. If a dredge is sent to do dredging for a week at a small port, the expense of its going and coming would form a large part of the cost.

Mr. WILSON. I quite understand the statement made by the hon. minister. I know that he pays more for a small job than he does for a large one. At the same time, we have owned some dredges for a good many years, and it seems to me that the department ought to be able to give some information as to the cost on this point.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not consider my hon. friend's question a captious question at all; but if my hon. friend understood the conditions as I do, he would see the difficulty of making the comparison. I do not know of any work that has been done for some time which would afford a basis for comparison.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). The ex-Minister of Public Works gave a good deal of attention to this matter. He made a statement to the effect that the government with their own dredges could do this work at half the figures the contractors charge. The dredging at Port Arthur is not difficult because it is soft substance and ought to be the cheapest class of work. The hon. gentleman is paying fifteen cents per yard while the ex-Minister of Public Works said that the government dredges would do the work for three cents a yard. There is an appropriation of $75,000 here. No doubt it is a year or more since the government entered into a contract to pay fifteen cents per yard, and this is for additional dredging. Does the hon. gentleman purpose asking for new tenders in connection with the expenditure of this $75,000, or will he simply hand it over to these people and pay them the same prices they have been charging all along ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The intention is to go on with this work at the prices arranged for. I have already explained that some dredges have left Canada already because they get better prices on the other side. That applies to the northern and southern districts.

Mr. CLARKE. Are Canadian dredges allowed to work at American ports ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, in bond, under the same regulations as American dredges are subjected to here.

Mr. CLARKE. Are the government satisfied with the work 'J. Israel Tarte' is doing this year ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The dredge or the gentleman ?

Mr. BENNETT. The gentleman is turning up more mud than the dredge.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman quoted the ex-Minister of Public Works, I am not going to assume responsibility for statements made by the ex-minister. Any statements I make with regard to this or other matters will be on information obtained by myself and for which I will be responsible. Sometimes the dredge 'Tarte' does very good work.

Mr. BENNETT. Has the government dredge which was lost on Lake Ontario at Bowmanville been taken up yet ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have already stated several times that no government dredge was lost at Bowmanville. There was a dredge called after the First Minister lost there but it had no connection directly or indirectly with the government.

Mr. BELL. Is this the only item for dredging in the supplementary estimates ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I am sorry to say it is not. We will come to Nova Scotia by and by.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). The minister has not answered the question I have put him. Is it his intention to spend this $75,000 by handing over the work to the companies doing it at their present prices ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not exactly like the term used by my hon. friend. It is not the intention to hand this money over to anybody, but to have the work done under the contract made with the department.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). When was it made ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This season. It was a renewal of the prices last season.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). It is simply a renewal of the contract at the same prices. Did the hon. gentleman ask anybody else to tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, we have been very active in asking all over the country, and I am sorry to say we had to go to the other side of the line to get some of our work done.

Mr. CLARKE. Who are the partners in this Great Lake Dredging Company ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know, but I will get the information and bring it down.

Mr. BELL. In view of the fact that there is difficulty in getting dredges, is the government considering the propriety of building additional dredges ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that is a matter of very great importance. I am asking several votes which I hope will meet the approval of the House.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Is not this firm an American one ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that Mr. Bowman, of Southampton, is the principal man, but cannot say positively.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Are they Canadian or American dredges ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Altogther Canadian, so my chief engineer informs me. I shall get the information and bring it down.

Mr. CLARKE. The names of the partners —and where the headquarters are ?

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Is Mr. Connolly or Captain Sullivan in that company ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not that I am aware of. I know nothing directly or indirectly, but they may be.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does the department know whether or not the deepening of the Mission river will result in lengthening the season during which grain can be carried from Fort William and Port Arthur to the Georgian bay ports ? Last year I went to the mouth of the Mission river in a tug boat, and it was pointed out to me that the opening of the river and the use of the new channel created in that way would result in lengthening the season by ten or twelve days.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Representations have been made to the department that that would be the result, but the chief engineer will not take the responsibility of endorsing them. When we have these surveys completed, we will have more definite information to work on.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I understand that the hon. minister has promised to bring down the names of those who were in the firm, where their headquarters are and who are connected with this Great Lake Dredging Company.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Kingston graving dock—to pay amount of award made in favour of contractors Connolly & Co., by Mr. Justice Burbidge, July 2, 1896, under Orders in Council of January 29, and May 7, 1896, together with price of steam derrick purchased from said firm, interest thereon to be paid at the same rates as that received by the government on their counter claims against Connolly & Co., $46,096.12.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I found that Connolly & Company had several claims against the government and the government also had claims against them, some of them under judgment. This vote really represents some $5,000 or $6,000, being the difference between the amount which Connolly & Company owe the government and the government Connolly & Company. As I understand it, the position the Auditor General took was that the so-called judgment against us that Connolly had was an award of the judge of the Exchequer Court, and not a judgment, and that it was still at the discretion of parliament to pay the amount of that award or not. This matter has been standing for a long time, and I thought it unfair both to Mr. Connolly and the department, that these claims should remain so long. I referred the matter to the officials of the department, and they arranged with the Auditor General and the Finance Department and all matters between the government and Mr. Connolly were adjusted, the balance being something between $5,000 and $6,000. The reason I cannot give the exact amount is that the Finance Department objected paying the interest that Connolly claimed, the award —or judgment, as he called it—of the Exchequer Court carried with it. I believe it was finally decided that on the judgments that we had against Connolly and the amounts due to him the rate of interest should be the same. This item is put in the way the Auditor General and the Finance Department worded it. So, I cannot give, to a few dollars, exactly what the difference would be, but it will not be more than I have stated. Practically we are voting this to ourselves.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Why does not the hon. minister take a vote only for the amount to be paid ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax).

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Because the Auditor General objected to having it that way, and I am anxious to meet his views.

Mr. CLARKE. What work is this award for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The principal amount due to Connolly is in connection with the Kingston graving dock, and the principal judgment we have against Connolly is in connection with the Quebec harbour works. And there is another in the hands of the Justice Department, in connection with some security given by Connolly for some person.

Transportation facilities—Port Colborne improvements—South-east breakwater, $25,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This item will involve considerable discussion.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There will be another item with relation to this work.

Mr. CLARKE. And the subject of this item can be discussed when the other comes up ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, if hon. gentlemen wish it.

Some resolutions reported.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What business will be taken up on Monday ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We shall proceed with supply.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 10.30 p.m.

QUESTIONS.

CALGARY AND EDMONTON RAILWAY.

Mr. SCOTT asked :

1. Is it required by law or regulation that mortgage deeds, such as are executed to safeguard the purchasers of the bonds of a railway company, shall be deposited in the office of the Secretary of State?

2. Is the mortgage deed, executed in favour of the trustees for the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railway bondholders, and is the mortgage deed executed in favour of the trustees for the Calgary and Edmonton Railway bondholders, so deposited in the office of the Secretary of State ?

3. If so, does the mortgage deed relating to the Calgary and Edmonton Railway indicate that the money to construct the road was obtained by 'sale of the land grant and the sale of the bonds,' or does it indicate that such money was obtained by sale of bonds only ?

4. Is it stated in such mortgage deed and in the bond certificates, that the bonds are secured by conveyance, by way of mortgage, to the trustees of the company's railway, with its revenues, &c., including an annual subsidy of $80,000, 'it being, however, expressly understood that the subsidy or land grant from the government, excepting as it forms an actual part of the company's line of railway, shall be excepted from the operation of the said mortgage and shall form no part of the security for the payment of the said bonds or the interest thereon '?

5. What amount of money was obtained by the sale of the Calgary and Edmonton bonds, and what sum of money was actually expended in construction of the railway ?

6. What area of land was granted to the company under its Land Subsidy Act, and to whom was such land actually granted or patented ?

7. What proportion of the land grant, if any, was utilized in aid of construction of the railway ?

8. Who obtained the portion of the land grant, if any, which was not so utilized in aid of construction ?

9. If any such portion as mentioned in question 8 was obtained by the Calgary and Edmonton Land Company, what persons compose the said Calgary and Edmonton Land Company, and who are the officers of the company ?

10. In the aforementioned mortgage deed is it recited that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company should, after notice, have an option, on July 1, 1896, to redeem all the bonds at ten per centum premium on the face value, to the extent of $18,500 per mile, and acquire the capital stock of the company ?

11. What was the amount of the paid-up capital stock of the company, and of such amount, what proportion was paid in cash ?

12. Has the attention of the government been called to section 6 of the twenty-second annual report of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, which recites that the said Canadian Pacific Railway Company have made arrangements to lease the Calgary and Edmonton Railway for ninety-nine years, guaranteeing in rental 4 per cent per annum on the Calgary and Edmonton Company's debentures, amounting to roughly $5,500,000, and to purchase all the capital stock of the Calgary and Edmonton Company for the sum of $500,000 ?

13. In chapter 84, 53 Victoria, 'An Act to incorporate the Calgary and Edmonton Railway Company,' does the name of Edmund B. Osler appear as one of those originally incorporated as the company, to which, by chapter 4, 53 Victoria, was voted a land grant of 6,400 acres per mile for 340 miles of railway, and to which, by chapter 5, 53 Victoria, a further guarantee of $80,000 per annum for twenty years was voted ?

14. What amount of money was obtained by sale of Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan bonds, and what sum was actually expended in construction of the railway ?

15. In subclause (e) of section 1 of an agreement between the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Company and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, confirmed by chapter 82, 53 Victoria, is it recited that the former company 'shall not issue any bonds secured, directly or indirectly, on its land subsidies or any portion of such land subsidies, except so much of those lands, if any, as shall be actually taken for the line of railway and stations '?

16. By subclause (c) of section 3 of the aforesaid agreement, is it recited that 'it is understood and declared that the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Company may transfer one-half of the land subsidy from the Dominion government, from time to time, as it shall be earned, to any person or persons, as it may deem proper '?

17. What area of land was granted to the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railway Company under its Land Subsidy Act, and to whom was such land actually granted or patented ?

18. What proportion of the land grant, if any, was utilized in aid of construction of the railway ?

19. Who obtained the portion of the land grant, if any, which was not so utilized in aid of construction ?

PORTRAIT OF HIS MAJESTY KING EDWARD.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria)—by Mr. Ingram—asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to have a portrait of His Majesty King Edward painted and placed on the north wall of the House of Commons Chamber opposite that of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria ?

2. In the preparation of the portrait will the government give consideration to one of Canada's many fine artists, such as Sherwood, Forster, Harris, Grier and Shannon, of London, England, all distinguished Canadians ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). The matter is receiving consideration.

COAL MINING ON BANFF RESERVE.

Mr. NORTHRUP—by Mr. Ingram—asked :

1. Has the government leased any rights of mining coal on the government reserve at Banff to any person or company ?

2. If so, to whom, and what rights ?

3. What limit, if any, has the government placed upon the price to be charged for coal so mined ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) :

1. Yes.

2. Lease issued to W. H. Merritt, of Toronto. The lease gives the lessee the right to mine coal upon the land therein described for a period of twenty years, in accordance with the provisions of the regulations of the lease. An annual rental of thirty cents per acre, payable half yearly in advance, and a royalty of ten cents per ton on all coal taken out of the mine. The lease to Merritt is dated 1st July, 1903.

3. No limit mentioned in lease as to price of coal mined.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES.

Mr. WILSON asked:

1. What amount of bonuses or subsidies have been voted by parliament each year to railways during the years 1900, 1901 and 1902?
2. How much of the said bonuses or subsidies has been paid during the said years, and up to 1st September, 1903?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). Would the hon. gentleman let that stand? That appears to be a repetition of a previous question.

CONTRACTS FOR THE TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

Mr. GRANT—by Mr. Calvert—asked:

1. Is it the intention of the government, in building the eastern portions of the proposed Transcontinental Railway, to favour the letting of construction contracts for short sections (say, of fifty miles each), rather than for long stretches?
2. Is it the opinion of the government that it would be desirable to avoid the usual subletting that takes place when contracts are let for long stretches of work?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). The question seems, in the present condition of legislation, to be premature.

DREDGING IN THE GRAND RIVER.

Mr. LANCASTER—by Mr. Ingram—asked:

1. Is the government aware that a dredge is now at work in the Grand river at Dunnville?
2. Under what conditions or arrangement is such work being done?
3. Has any contract been let, and if so, to whom and at what price, for such dredging?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland):

1. Yes.
2. It is removing obstructions to navigation at the mouth of the river.
3. The work is being done for $12 an hour.

THE TRANSPORTATION COMMISSION.

Mr. CLARKE asked:

1. Have the transportation commissioners recently appointed by the government held any meetings yet; and if so, when and where were such meetings held?
2. What business has been transacted up to date by the commissioners?
3. Do the commissioners propose to take evidence respecting the transportation question; and will the meetings of the commissioners be open to the public?
4. Will citizens who desire to testify before the commissioners be entitled to be heard by the commissioners?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). The commission has not yet been organized, as the commissioners are waiting for a vote of parliament, and have not yet met. Without being able to state definitely, I am of the opinion that the commissioners will take evidence from all parties from whom they think they can get information, and that the meetings will be open to the public.

MR. BORDEN'S (HALIFAX) RAILWAY POLICY AND PETITIONS.

Mr. DAVIS—by Mr. Calvert—asked:

1. Has the government received any petitions in favour of Mr. Borden's (the leader of the opposition) alternative railway policy?
2. If so, how many?
3. What parts of the Dominion did they come from?
4. How many names were subscribed to each?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). No petitions have been received.

SUPPLY.

House again in Committee of Supply.

Public buildings, Nova Scotia—Sydney Mines, $8,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). Sydney is the headquarters of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company, and is a very important place of 4,000 inhabitants. They have been pressing strongly for further accommodation. The proposed public building will be used for a post office, custom-house and other government purposes. Judging from the cost of buildings elsewhere, I should think the total cost would be between $15,000 and $20,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has the site been obtained?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No; there has not been any previous vote for this work.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The building will be erected by tender and contract, I suppose?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). No site has been chosen, no plans prepared, and no estimate made as to the cost, except that it will not exceed $15,000 or $20,000—that is all the information we can get.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We can hardly buy the site, or go to the expense of preparing plans or making estimates until we have a preliminary vote by parliament.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). At any rate, that is all the information that the minister can give?

Mr. BLAIN. How will the minister go about the purchase of the site?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The officials of the department will purchase the site at the lowest possible price. If the price of the site chosen is not deemed satisfactory the property will be expropriated.

Mr. BLAIN. Is there any estimate as to what the site will cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. As in any other case, we obtain the site on the best terms, sometimes we ask the town in which the building is to be erected to contribute to the cost of the site.

Mr. CLARKE. Does the estimate the minister has given include the site as well as the building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. That is, the site and building together will cost, at the outside, $15,000 to $20,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Of course, Sydney Mines is an important and growing place, largely for the reason the minister have given, namely, the development that has taken place through the operations of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company. It seems to me, however, that the better course to pursue in matters of this kind is that which used to be followed some years ago by the department. The minister should give the House the plans of the proposed building and some more accurate estimate of the cost than my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works has been able to give. The House having been in session for so many months, one would think that, this estimate being now brought down, a little more information might accompany it. I do not see, for my part, why the estimate should not have been included in the main estimates, if we are to have no more information than that now given us. I am not objecting to the vote because I know this is an important town and one that, I believe, will largely increase in population. But I do think it is a little irregular for the minister to come down with practically no information either as to the plans or as to the cost of the building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has been the custom of the Public Works, or, at least, for many years, to provide for new works in the supplementary estimates of the year. As I said before, I do not see how the department could either procure a site or make plans and estimates until it is authorized by parliament to proceed with the work. I do agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) that there ought to be as definite information as possible as to the cost of any proposed work. Under the advice of the chief architect I think I am safe in stating that the outside cost will be $20,000. In giving information, the main point to be considered and observed, it seems to me, is that parliament and the country should be advised as to the total expenditure that is to be undertaken. I have found fault in the past with ministers who have failed to give that information, but I think that when it is given the information as to details is not so important.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). I may be permitted to say, in regard to the procuring of a site, that I have given some little attention to the matter and have made inquiries about it. I have the assurance of the general manager of the Nova Scotia Steel Company—and the rapid growth of the place is largely due to the enterprise of that company—that a site can be secured for a reasonable amount. I am not authorized to say what figure they will ask, but I feel assured that the department will find the figure very reasonable indeed.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the size of the site ?

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). When discussing the matter with the gentleman I refer to, I spoke of a site about 100 feet square, which I thought would be a fair size. I need not say anything of the necessity for this building, for that is generally recognized. I think the work had better be proceeded with at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. CLARKE. Better get the plans first.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). Better get the money first.

Mr. BLAIN. The minister tells us that $15,000 or $20,000 will purchase the site and construct the building. Does that estimate include heating and other equipment ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think probably it would.

Halifax quarantine station, Lawlor's Island—improvements, renewals, repairs, &c., $4,500.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the need of this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This includes partitions and other changes in the detention building; rebuilding walls of hospital ward, detention building; fitting up two rooms in the hospital; and general repairs. There is due for plumbing, $1,700, which comes out of this vote of $4,500. The money was spent, not for new plumbing, but for overhauling plumbing which was out of repair.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose that work was done by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. That was not found possible. The work was done under the superintendence of Mr. Dodwell, the engineer of the department in Halifax.

Halifax—new Public Building, $20,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for work now under contract.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the total cost of this building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total probable cost of this building, exclusive of site, will be $318,000.

Mr. CLARKE. How much will the site cost ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The site was purchased some years ago at a cost of, I think, $25,000, if I remember.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Twenty-four thousand. I find that the $318,000 is the estimated total cost including the site.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). When is it anticipated that this building will be finished?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contract calls for its completion on the 15th September, 1904. There was some delay, but the chief architect tells me that they are making very good progress now.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I have not been in Halifax for a good many months, and I do not know from observation what progress they are making. The progress did not seem to be very rapid up to the time I left. I suppose this vote of $20,000 is in addition to a vote already in the estimates ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How much is the total vote ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. One hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it anticipated that the work will be finished at the time fixed for completion ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief architect thinks it very doubtful if the work will be finished by the 1st September, 1904, but he thinks it will be finished by the first of the following year.

Mr. CLARKE. What departments of the public service will be accommodated by this building ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is nominally a customs house, but the building will also be available for other branches of the public service. No building has been erected for the general offices of the Dominion in Halifax since confederation. The officers of the Dominion have been in the building which was erected before the union, and various buildings have been rented from time to time for the accommodation of the public service, but no general public building has been erected since confederation. This is intended to meet the difficulty and to obviate the necessity of renting buildings for the different offices. Though it is called the customs house, it will also provide accommodation for other officers of the public service.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How many stories will the new building be ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Four stories above the basement.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will there be an elevator ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, two elevators.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose no arrangement has been made as to which of the officers now in the other building will be removed to the new building. Of course, the customs house officers will go. The post office, I suppose, will be continued in the present building ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As the post office is very much cramped now, the intention is that it shall have the main floor of the present building, which is at present divided between the post office and the customs house, the customs being entirely transferred to the new building, and probably the Marine and Fisheries Department also. Except as to the customs no definite policy has been determined upon, although I think it will be found convenient to also transfer the Marine and Fisheries Department to the other building. The idea is to afford the customs house sufficient accommodation in the new building, to give the space made by the removal of the customs house from the old building to the post office, and then to distribute the rest of the space amongst the other officers. A portion of the present post office might be assigned to the savings bank, which is now in a private building, and that will give the bank a front upon Hollis street, which is in the centre of the business district of the city. Subject to that qualification that we hope to give the post office the space which was formerly divided between the post office and the customs house.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). If I remember rightly on an upper floor of the present building there is a collection of some objects of interest in connection with the province of Nova Scotia. It is at present in a very inaccessible place.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The museum has been removed. While it occupied the Dominion building it was always a question whether it belonged to the province or the Dominion. The province owned the museum, but it claimed that it had the right to a place for it in the building. For a long time the museum occupied a place in this building, but the local government procured accommodataion for it in the old Burns building opposite, the museum has been transferred to that building, and I believe that under the care of Mr. Piers it is now in very good condition. I do not know what the space thus vacated in the old building is applied to at present, but while in that building the museum was inaccessible and unsatisfactory in all respects.

Halifax immigration building — additional story over the one story portion, &c., $11,000.

Mr. CLARKE. What is that for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The improvements to this building are being made at the request of the immigration branch of the Interior Department. An additional story is being put on the one story part of the building. It has been represented that they had not sufficient accommodation for immigration work and on account of these representations the improvements are being made.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the additional accommodation required for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. More accommodation is required for immigrants. This is partly a one-story and partly a two-story building, and we are putting a second story on the part which is now one story.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think I saw in one of the newspapers that some examination had been made of this building, and that it had been reported unsuitable. Is not that the case ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It lacks sufficient accommodation.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it because the examination which has been made of the building by some official or officials that this additional vote is being asked ? I do not know anything about it, except that I saw it referred to in the public press.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In regard to buildings of this description which are under the control of other departments, we go very much on the representations of the officials in particular charge of the work. No information is given to the chief architect or to the deputy minister to show that the building is not in good condition, and suitable for the accommodation of this branch of the service, but the trouble is that it is too small. Since this matter has been considered, we have had further representations made to the department that even with this proposed improvement there will not be sufficient accommodation. But, as far as I know, the accommodation they have is very good.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This application was made by the Department of the Interior on behalf of the immigration branch, during the present session of the House, and it has recently appeared that these representations are confirmed and that more accommodation is needed.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). By whom was this examination made ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think it was by some medical gentleman connected with one or other of the provinces. I forget whether it was by an official of our own government or not. At all events it was stated in the public press that there was a need of greater accommodation, and when I noticed it I was glad to know that the Department of the Interior had already asked for this accommodation, and that the hon. Minister of Public Works was about to provide for it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will the additional story be constructed by tender and contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, I may say that. We are to expend $11,000, and it is quite a sufficient work to have detailed plans drawn and the work let by tender.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is $11,000 expected to be sufficient to complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief architect informs me that it is sufficient according to the plan.

Digby public buildings—improvements, $1,800.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This provides for a clock in the tower, and some improvements in the public buildings.

Antigonish—new fittings for post office, $1,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for general improvements. Some of the floors are in bad condition and the letter-boxes are very old. This is to provide new floors, screens for the public lobbies, two hundred new letter-boxes, and general repairs to the building.

Mr. CLARKE. What kind of letter-boxes?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They will be the ordinary brass letter-boxes.

Mr. CLARKE. I have noticed different kinds of letter-boxes, some very much more convenient for the use of the public than others. I have seen some in the Northwest which are a great improvement on any that I have seen down here. The letter-box which I think should be put in is one to which the owner can have access at any time without having to go to the wicket to inquire.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We are putting in the improved kind.

Mr. CLARKE. Who supplies the boxes ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Rubenstein & Co., of Montreal, make the most of the boxes for the department.

Sydney—addition to public building (revote, $5,000), $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to provide an addition to the present building 40 feet by 30 feet, with two stories, attic and basement. It is represented to be necessary on account of the growth of the place. The postal revenue is between $17,000 and $18,000 and the customs revenue about $150,000, and the money orders issued amount to nearly $200,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this to be the entire cost of the addition ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, the total cost is estimated by the chief architect at $15,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How is the work to be done—by tender and contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

North Sydney public building, $1,100.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for general improvements. Some of the brick walls are out of condition, iron columns have to be taken out and some doors changed, modern letter-boxes are to be placed in the building, and other repairs are to be made.

Charlottetown armoury—additional accommodation for orderly rooms, &c., $2,550.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This has been expended by the department in accordance with a request from the Department of Militia.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Are all militia expenditures by the Department of Public Works made on the requisition of the Militia Department ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think all of them. I do not know of any exception.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this work going on at present ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, it was undertaken some time ago, and is practically completed.

Mr. HACKETT. This work was very much required, and I must compliment the department on having it done.

Mr. CLARKE. Is the work done by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, it is done under the superintendence of the militia officer in Charlottetown.

Mr. CLARKE. Who did the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have the details of the cost of the work, but not the names of the different parties who did it. I would be pleased to have a memorandum made giving the information the hon. gentleman asks for. I imagine that it was so general that the militia officers did the overseeing themselves.

Mr. CLARKE. That is a new role for militia officers.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not sure that it is not a good plan, as they have an interest in seeing that the work is well done.

Charlottetown Dominion building—improvements, additions, &c. (revote, $8,000), $12,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for the construction of an annex in the rear of the Charlottetown Dominion building, also for alterations, repairs and renewals. The estimated cost is $12,350.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Is this annex something new put in the estimates this year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, there was a vote taken for this some time ago.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Has this annex been proceeded with yet ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No ; the plans were prepared and tenders advertised for, and the contract was let a short time ago.

Mr. LEFURGEY. To whom was the contract let, and at what figure ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The tenders were received only a few days ago and the information is now in my notes. The deputy does not remember the name but I will bring it this afternoon.

Mr. CLARKE. Has the lowest tender been accepted ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The lowest tender was accepted.

Mr. LEFURGEY. What is this annex to be used for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Generally in connection with the post office.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It seems to me that this is a large amount for an annex to the post office in Charlottetown.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I had myself the pleasure of being in Charlottetown a year or two ago and complaint was then made of the lack of accommodation in the post office. I am told that the improvement is very urgently required. I think almost all of the officers connected with the department are in the one building. It contains the post office, savings bank, customs and inland revenue offices, weights and measures office and the marine office. I think this addition is being made principally on the strong recommendation of the postmaster there, Mr. Brecken, an old friend of ours who used to be in this House. He has written to me several times in connection with this matter since I have been in office.

Mr. CLARKE. Will this vote cover the amount of the tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The amount we are now asking will cover it. There is a revote of $8,000 and a new vote of $4,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Will this complete the annex ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It will complete the work.

Public buildings, New Brunswick—Campbellton public building, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. An application was pressed on the department for a public building at Campbellton, New Brunswick. I looked into the matter personally and found that it was quite a growing and thriving place. The postal revenue has increased until last year it was nearly $4,000 and the customs duty nearly $7,000. It is a seaport town and the business has very largely increased ; I thought I was warranted in asking parliament to authorize me to construct a public building there.

Mr. CLARKE. What will the total cost be ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Between $20,000 and $25,000.

Mr. CLARKE. What will be the price of the site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot give the price of the site as it has not yet been purchased.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What is the population of Campbellton ?

Mr. HENDERSON. About 7,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I am sure it is not 7,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry to say I have not the population here.

Mr. CLARKE. Have the plans for the building been prepared ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. General plans have been prepared.

Mr. CLARKE. General plans for this building, and these plans show that the building will cost $20,000 or $25,000 but the site has not yet been looked up.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has not yet been purchased. I may say that if parliament authorized me to undertake any public building and I found that the price asked for a site was not reasonable I would not go on with the work. I think that parliament has a right to expect to acquire a site at a reasonable price. Such as other people would have to pay. We all know that when the government undertake a work people seem to think they can get an exorbitant price for their property. I have several times taken the position that if I could not acquire a site at a reasonable price I would not go on with a work and have found it to work satisfactorily.

Mr. EMMERSON. Campbellton is a terminal point on the Intercolonial, a very large seaport town with large shipping interests, with large lumbering operations, and it is also the centre for a large section of New Brunswick and for a section of Quebec. A portion of Bonaventure is tributary to Campbellton and its business centres in that town. It is a very enterprising town ; there are large milling establishments and it is deserving of recognition in this way if any town in the Dominion of Canada is deserving.

Moncton public building—improvements, $1,200.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for general improvements to this building. I find the postal revenue is something like $16,000, and the customs revenue between $38,000 and $40,000. This is for small improvements at Moncton.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will this be put under contract and tender or will it be done by the department ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think this can hardly be done by tender.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The preceding item will I suppose be by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, certainly.

Newcastle public building—improvements, $800.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to provide for 272 lock-boxes which will cost a couple of hundred dollars and some other improvements which will aggregate about $800.

Tracadie Lazaretto—improvements, &c., $1,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is asked to make provision for a small steam disinfector. We had application from there for a number of other improvements but we thought they might stand in the meantime.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Does the minister know anything about the condition of the Lazaretto and how many persons are afflicted with leprosy. Are they increasing or decreasing ? This Larazetto has been in operation for a long time and it is nearly time that the disease was cleaned out of that locality.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman might renew his question when the estimates of the hon. Minister of Agriculture are under discussion.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has the government any information as to whether this disease is increasing or decreasing in Canada? Statements are made from time to time in the public press as to its increase and it would be desirable for us to know whether there is any official information which can be communicated to the House with regard to it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I said before it will perhaps be better to ask this question when the estimates of the Minister of Agriculture are under consideration.

Mr. TURGEON. I may state in answer to the inquiry that leprosy has been decreasing for some years in that locality. Sometimes when the doctors grow jubilant in the belief that no more cases will be found, a case may arise in a family which has been free from it for a generation. The children escape the disease, but their children become its victims. Still the number is decreasing. When this Lazaretto was transferred to the control of the Dominion government there were about twenty-three or twenty-four cases, but now the number arising in the locality is fourteen or fifteen. The number has been added to by the importation of three or four cases from British Columbia and Manitoba, and I believe that one of these died last year.

Mr. CLARKE. How many are there altogether?

Mr. TURGEON. I do not know the exact number, but I believe it is about 19 or 20, of whom 14 or 15 are from the locality. I believe that the Department of Agriculture has all that information.

Mr. CLARKE. Of what nationality are the people who were brought from British Columbia?

Mr. TURGEON. Swedes or Norwegians, I believe.

Mr. CLARKE. No Chinese among them?

Mr. TURGEON. No. I believe that the Dominion government refused to accept the Chinese for this Tracadie hospital.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). It would be advisable that the Department of Agriculture should be ready, when its estimates are before the House, to explain how the lepers were transported across the continent and what means were taken to disinfect the cars in which they were carried.

Mr. EMMERSON. The disease is not contagious.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The hon. gentleman (Mr. Emmerson) is mistaken.

Woodstock—armoury and gun shed, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Originally it was proposed to ask for $11,000. But at that time it was intended to provide a new building. Since then we have been informed by the Militia Department, which has requested this expenditure, that there is a building there which can be utilized, with some alterations and repairs. So, this estimate of $5,000 is proposed, which, it is expected, will cover the expenditure for the present year. The total cost is estimated at $11,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the work be done by contract?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. What would have been the cost of the site and new building?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About $25,000. That was the original estimate.

St. John immigrant building, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to provide additional accommodation in the St. John immigration building. The estimates as originally prepared to meet the requirements of the immigration department provided for a two-story addition to the present building, to cost $6,500; furniture, $1,500; superintendence and incidentals, $2,000; making a total of $10,000. But, this estimate was made before the fire took place in the freight shed of St. John, burning part of this building. This will make necessary a new arrangement, but it is estimated that the sum of $10,000 will still cover the cost. I understand that a joint arrangement is made between the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Interior Department for an extension.

Mr. CLARKE. That will probably be a further supplementary estimate.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). No, I understand that this is to cover the cost of repairing the damage done by the fire, as well as the improvements?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. All the expenditure by the Public Works Department will be covered by the amount I have stated.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the work be done by tender and contract?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, our work will be let by contract. There may be some small repairs outside of the contract, but this contract will cover the main part of the work.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Permit me to draw attention to a point which was under discussion a little while ago—the public building in Campbellton. Now, Campbellton is a nice little village. The hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson), as I understand it, stated that the population was 7,000.

Mr. EMMERSON. I said 7,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The whole population of Restigouche county is about 10,000 and Campbellton is between 800 and 1,000.

New Brunswick—Woodstock public building —improvement, $3,900.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to provide for new letter-boxes and to make some repairs to the building.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this the drill shed again ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, this has nothing to do with the drill shed. We have a public building in Woodstock. About $2,000 had to be spent in repairs, including the building of a retaining wall.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has the work been done by contract or by day labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There will be a contract for the boxes, which will be the principal amount. The work already done was done by day labour.

Fredericton military buildings—officers' stables (revote, $1,500), $2,400.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to build a stable in place of one that was demolished as useless. This is under contract now. The revote of $1,500 was not paid out at the end of the year. It is let by contract to C. J. B. Simmons.

Fredericton military buildings—Sergeant-major's quarters, $2,300.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a revote of $1,000 and $1,300 additional, and is to make provision for the sergeant-major.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). How many sergeant-majors are there ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I suppose there is only one, but he may have a large family. I think it includes sergeants as well as the sergeant-major.

St. John quarantine station—water service, &c., $7,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost is estimated at $24,000. We had a long discussion on this quarantine station when the main item was up. This is simply a revote of an amount which was not spent at the end of June last. The station is on Partridge island. The water supply comes from the city.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Can you not get an adequate water supply on the island ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am told by the deputy minister that they have expended a lot of money in sinking artesian wells, and they cannot get any fresh water.

Mr. CLARKE. Has that quarantine station been used at all ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot give the details I would like to. This expenditure is made by the Department of Public Works at the request of the Department of Agriculture. I have no doubt that in the winter time this is much used.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I presume the minister has taken precautions that the pipe should not form an obstruction to vessels when the tide is low. There was some difficulty in Toronto on that account.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The work is being done under the supervision of the engineer for the province of New Brunswick, and I presume he will look after that.

St. John drill hall, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is put in at the request of the Department of Militia and Defence. Judging from my experience of such buildings in other places, I would not take the responsibility of saying that this building, when completed, will cost less than $100,000. The drill hall in Windsor cost $75,000 and that in London considerably more. I do not believe a suitable drill hall in the city of St. John could be erected for less than $100,000 in round figures.

Mr. EMMERSON. I wish to make a correction of a statement I made with respect to the population of the town of Campbellton, which I gave from the impression I obtained from visiting it and seeing that it was an important place. I find that Campbellton has a population of about 3,000. It is an incorporated town, and comprises almost the whole of the parish of Addington, in the county of Restigouche. It has been incorporated for a number of years, and has a mayor and council and a water system.

Mr. CLARKE. It is an ocean port, is it not ?

Mr. EMMERSON. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). When the hon. gentleman makes a statement in the House that the town has a population of 7,000 inhabitants, when at the outside it has not more than 1,200, naturally I feel a little delicate in pointing out that the hon. gentleman is in the wrong. He says that it is incorporated. It is not incorporated ; if it was, it would be put down in the census as incorporated.

Mr. EMMERSON. It is incorporated by special Act of the legislature of New Brunswick, and has been for a number of years.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). If it was incorporated as an ordinary town, it would be put down in the census as a separate municipality, whereas it is not mentioned in the census as a separate municipality.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. We have passed the item for Campbellton, and the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) having made his explanation, we cannot say any more on this item.

Mr. CLARKE. I would like to get some more information about this St. John drill hall. The Minister of Public Works has told us, with his usual candour and lucidity, that it is likely to cost $100,000. Have we got a site purchased yet? Have we any engineer's estimate? Do we know where we are at? He is asking us for $10,000, not knowing what the ultimate expenditure will be.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I was about to explain to the committee that a site had not yet been purchased. Some of the officers in St. John think that a new site should be purchased and that the government land should not be used. Others of the officers are of the opinion that a site located upon the land at present owned by the government is satisfactory. I have not had an opportunity yet, personally, to look into the question, but I intend to do so at an early date. I am not able to offer an opinion, but we have a good deal of land which was formerly occupied by the British government for military purposes and handed over to the Dominion at the time of confederation, and I had hoped that it might be possible to find a suitable site on that land. The cost of a suitable drill hall for a city like St. John cannot be less than somewhere about $100,000. That would be the figure I would name. Cities of similar population, such as the city of Halifax and other cities, have had drill halls erected at somewhere near that amount. The Halifax drill hall cost a good deal more—probably more than it ought to have cost. I will put the cost somewhere between $50,000 and $100,000, not to exceed $100,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Have there been any plans prepared yet?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. We have had general plans for such a building, but the particular plans that would be used in the city of St. John have not yet been completed.

Mr. CLARKE. It would cost from $50,000 to $100,000?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Hon. Mr. TISDALE. How many regiments have their headquarters at St. John?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. There is the 62nd, a large infantry regiment, and there is a large garrison artillery regiment. I am not sure that there is any other regiment at present at that place, but in addition to that there are the field hospital and the bearer company.

Mr. COCHRANE. In connection with these estimates, if the hon. Minister of Public Works would take a suggestion from me, he would come down and tell us the amount that it will take to complete the building. I have in my mind cases in which some innocent looking estimates have come down for a few thousand dollars, and the expenditure terminated in about ten times as much as it was expected the building was going to cost. I think the question of the cost of a public work should be settled by the department before the hon. Minister of Public Works comes down and asks for any money at all. I do not think it is necessary to take the whole amount at first, but it appears to me that it would be more satisfactory to the committee to first determine the cost and then to carry out the plan as originally intended. In this case, they tell us that the building may cost $100,000, and they are only asking for $10,000 to commence with. The hon. Minister of Public Works will remember some similar cases in which small amounts were first asked, but in which the buildings cost a great deal more than the committee anticipated before they were completed.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I had thought that I should rather have received a compliment from the hon. member from Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) than criticism. He and I are agreed that such a full statement should be given of a work that is intended to be undertaken that parliament cannot be deceived, and I think in this case that I have only been carrying out my promise to the House in that regard. These works are undertaken on the representations of the Department of Militia and Defence, and they have estimated that the cost of this building will run between $50,000 and $100,000.

Mr. BELL. The hon. Minister of Public Works states that this building is now estimated to cost between $50,000 and $100,000. Has there been any estimate made?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The department in preparing the plans has the experience of the cost of buildings similar to the one which it is now proposing to erect. The department, having stated that the cost of the building will not exceed $100,000, if the plans are not in accordance with that estimate, it has no right to go on with the work.

Mr. BELL. What did the Halifax drill hall cost?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Speaking from memory, it cost between $250,000 and $300,000.

Mr. BELL. Why is it estimated that you are going to provide St. John with a drill hall with an expenditure of from $50,000 to $100,000?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think they have other accommodation in St. John. Our effort, which is seconded by the Department of Militia and Defence, is to try and keep down these large expenditures as much as possible and to spread the expenditure more wisely over the country. If we can get sufficient accommodation for a reasonable expenditure, I do not see why we should go to any more expense than is really necessary.

Mr. CLARKE. Would it not be a better business proposition for the Department of Militia and Defence, if they want a drill hall at St. John, to ascertain what the strength of the force that will require accommodation is likely to be, and then prepare plans and give the committee the actual information as to what the cost will be? In four or five cases this morning votes of $5,000 or $10,000 have been asked for public buildings, and when we have asked if a site had been procured or if plans had been prepared, we have been answered in the negative. The department are in blissful ignorance as to what the cost will be, and we have to go it blind. Of course, we can assume no responsibility for such a lavish and reckless expenditure as this.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I hope my hon. friend will not object to this vote. It is not a large vote. It is true that all the data may not be forthcoming that ought to be available, but I think the committee can trust the minister and the government not to proceed with any expenditure until all the information has been obtained that is necessary, and until proper plans have been made. I am satisfied that additional accommodation is necessary at St. John. Recently the district officer commanding that district has been moved from Fredericton to St. John. Therefore, it has become a more important military centre. I am satisfied that if proper accommodation is provided the active militia at St. John will be increased, and I think it is desirable that at a point like St. John, which is a point of strategical importance, the strength of the militia should be increased. It will not be increased until sufficient accommodation is forthcoming. I will hope that as an earnest of what is intended my hon. friend will not object to the vote of $10,000. My hon. friend will find in the estimates later on an item which he will approve of, an item for the extension of the drill hall at Toronto. The necessary plans for the expenditure of that vote have not yet been matured. It is in very much the same position as the vote for St. John. I hope, therefore, that my hon. friend will not object to this.

Mr. CLARKE. I am sure the Minister of Militia does not want to misrepresent my course in this matter. We do not object to constructing drill sheds at these different strategic points, but we think it is very bad strategy and very bad business for the government to come to parliament and ask for a vote of $10,000 for a building which every one knows will cost perhaps ten times more, and at the same time, give us no information whatever about the matter. We want to know what kind of a building it will be; what it will cost; whether a site has been purchased and what is its cost, and whether the municipal authorities of St. John have been approached with the view that they might donate a site. All this information should be given by the government.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. They do not know even where the building is to be situated.

Mr. CLARKE. As a matter of fact the government give us no information whatever, although they are pledging parliament to what may ultimately be a very large expenditure. I might be called to order were I to discuss the item further on in the estimates for the extension of the Toronto drill hall, but I may say here that the militia force of the city of Toronto will appreciate the action of the minister in asking an appropriation of $20,000 for that purpose. Whether the vote is sufficient or not, I cannot say at the present moment, but if the department has not had proper plans prepared for the extension of the Toronto drill hall they are open to just the same criticism as in the case of the St. John drill shed. What we object to is that we are voting this money practically in the dark.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I must take exception to that.

Mr. CLARKE. To this method of doing business?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. It is impossible for us to do what the hon. member (Mr. Clarke) suggests. We cannot purchase a site until we are authorized by parliament to go on with the work, and purchase that site. Then, as to the character of the building, a good deal would depend on what site is selected. It is impossible to ask the chief architect to draw a plan, except in a general way for a public building, until he knows on what kind of ground it will be erected. We are asking here for authority to undertake a certain work, and we state what that work is estimated to cost, and there can be no deception in the matter whatever. I agree that if we ask for a further vote, after the original vote is taken, we should be able to give details.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Are we to understand that this money is to purchase a site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It can be used for that.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I think the minister will find that the present military property owned by the government at St. John it not well situated for a drill shed.

Mr. CLARKE. Why ?

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Because the land owned by the government is situated on the sea coast, and also because it is too far removed from the centre of the town.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That is what some of the military gentlemen in St. John say.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). If the government property were selected, the men would have to walk from a mile to three-quarters of a mile from the centre of the town. I think the minister will find that it is advisable to build the drill shed in a more central location.

Mr. BELL. The point has been taken by other oppositions, as well as the present opposition, that such a vote as this is simply committing the country to an expenditure as to the ultimate amount of which we have no idea. The government are to be authorized to spend $10,000 by this vote and year after year further sums are asked, until in the end the cost may be $150,000 or $200,000. When a further vote is asked, the argument is used that the $20,000 or $30,000 or whatever it may be, must be voted, or otherwise the original expenditure is useless, and so we are led on step by step into an expenditure, which perhaps parliament would not consent to if it knew in the first place what the total expenditure would be.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not in the case spoken of to-day.

Mr. BELL. The only case cited to-day was the case of Halifax. Halifax is a city of not much more importance than St. John—perhaps the hon. gentleman from St. John will not admit that it is of any more importance. A small sum was originally voted for the drill shed at Halifax, and year after year other votes have been taken, until the amount has reached nearly $300,000.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. There has been a change of government since then.

Mr. BELL. And I presume there will be another change of government before this building at St. John is finished, which might be a reasonable guarantee that the cost will be cut down. I have no doubt that the great cost of the drill shed at Halifax is to a certain extent attributable to the change of government, while another change may work reform in the opposite direction. What we are objecting to is the principle on which this is done. The government ought to be able to inform parliament as to the site which will be chosen, and then if there is an architect of experience in the service of the department, he should be able to estimate within $10,000 or $15,000 the cost of the building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is exactly what we have done in this case. As minister, I should feel that if it were found that the expenditure would be considerably in excess of the amount which I stated to parliament, I would not go on with the work until parliament had sanctioned that change. I have always contended that it is wrong to do anything else, and I expect to have the support of my hon. friend (Mr. Bell) now. I have stated to the House about what the cost will be, but it is impossible to bring down a detailed plan until the site has been purchased.

Mr. BELL. I do not think, that the criticism of the minister on my course is justified. What I maintain is, that we should not be drawn into large expenditures by these small degrees. No business man or no business corporation would embark in an enterprise, under such circumstances as confront parliament in this case. The government do not know the cost, and actually, they do not know where they are going to erect the building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. But we are not doing that.

Mr. BELL. We have been told here to-day that this building will cost from $50,000 to $100,000. That is an enormously wide margin ; it is in fact no estimate at all. The Minister of Public Works would not transact his own business in that way. The procedure in this case is utterly unbusinesslike.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think so. If you are putting up an addition to a factory and you know the maximum amount it will cost, then any business man would be safe in proceeding with the purchase of the site, and the details could be figured out afterwards.

Mr. BELL. Would a business man be satisfied that an estimate which varied from $50,000 to $100,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I quite agree that it would not be right to take a vote for $10,000, and after the statement is made that the work would only cost $10,000, then proceed to spend $100,000. But in this case, we have given the maximum cost as nearly as possible.

Mr. BELL. Then I suppose we must accept the statement of the minister ; that so far as he is concerned, and if he remains in office, he pledges the government to the statement that this expenditure will not exceed $100,000; of which we are now asked to vote the first instalment of $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Having made the statement to the House that the estimated cost will not exceed a certain amount; then, if when the plans are made out it is found that the building would largely exceed that amount, I would not feel justified in going on with it until I asked the sanction of parliament to the change. That is the position I take.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the $100,000 include the cost of the site? The hon. member for Victoria (Mr. Hughes) points out, that because of strategic reasons, the government land is not suitable on which to erect this building; and also because the men would have to walk a mile, or three-quarters of a mile, from the centre of the town to the drill shed, if it were erected on the property owned by the government. In view of this, another site may have to be purchased, and I would ask if the $100,000 estimate includes the cost of that site?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. One of the reasons why we have not decided as to the site, is that objection is taken to the land owned at present by the government as not being suitable. Perhaps the Minister of Militia might dispose of the government land if another site is purchased.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No, I do not think so.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As the Militia Department has not come to a decision, of course, I cannot speak as to that.

Mr. CLARKE. We are fortunate in having both the Minister of Militia and the Minister of Public Works in the chamber at the present time, and I would ask, is it not a fact that the city of St. John offered a site some time ago, for the purpose of erecting a drill hall thereon?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It is not a fact. There has been correspondence between the department and the militia officers in St. John, and the department pointed out, that if it is not in the public interest to construct a building on our own land, then the municipality ought to provide a site. I regret to say that I have not discovered from the correspondence between the city authorities and the government, that there was any desire on their part to purchase a site and hand it over. A site has been selected by them which they would like; it is not a very expensive site, but up to the present there is no agreement between the department and the civic authorities as to who should pay for it.

Hon. Mr. TISDALE. We do not object to having proper drill halls erected for the accommodation of our militia in the different centres of the country, but we do object to proceeding with such works without the government giving adequate information to parliament. We have in this case, a vote for $10,000. It goes to the public that this is all that will be voted for that purpose, and the electors never dream that in the end the cost may be perhaps $150,000. The Minister of Militia ought to be able to lay before the House all particulars with regard to this drill shed. This is a very loose way of undertaking a work of this kind. I am quite prepared to justify any reasonable expenditure for the accommodation of our militia force, but I cannot approve of the government proceeding in this way. The minister knows very well, that if we pass this vote now, there will be no hope of getting a site from the municipal authorities of St. John. If the government brings down a matured scheme there will be no difficulty in getting a vote passed through this House. We are not objecting to the expenditure of $10,000, or $100,000, but we do object that the country should be committed to a large expenditure without being placed in possession of the details.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I do not think it is desirable that we should threaten the city of St. John, that they will not get a drill hall, or a vote for one, until they agree to give us a site. If that is a good policy, then we have the cards in our own hands, and we can say: Unless you give us a site we will build on our own property. I can tell my hon. friend that I have satisfied myself that the present accommodation in the city of St. John is inadequate, and the military authorities have informed me of that fact. I have further satisfied myself, that a suitable drill hall can be erected for $100,000. We have general plans, which can be adapted to the city of St. John when the site is secured. It would seem to me that the information which has been given with regard to this vote, is far more ample than has been usually given with regard to similar votes. The criticism made by my hon. friend from Pictou (Mr. Bell) has no doubt a good deal of force; but if he will go back during the whole time since confederation, he can apply that criticism to almost every public work that has ever been proposed in this House. I admit with him that it is a question for consideration; but if we are to reform our course, I suggest that we put it off until next session, and allow this item to go through.

Mr. BELL. I think I suggested that the argument I used was one which had been used not only by this, but by previous oppositions. I think I was laying down a sound basis as to the mode in which these moneys should be voted, and I am glad to have the assurance of the hon. Minister of Public Works that he feels seriously disposed to look on the statement he makes in the House as made on his responsibility as a minister. I suppose we may consider that a limit has been fixed to this expenditure by one who is authoritative.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). My own idea is that when a particular item is brought before the House, it should be explained at the time; but with regard to the purchase of a site for a public building, I think the proper plan is to be ready to close the purchase as soon as the land is selected, which could not be done if the minister had to wait till he could come to the House for a vote. With regard to a new drill shed for the city of St. John, I have no doubt that if the members from that city were here, they would admit the necessity of a new drill shed being erected in a suitable place in the centre of the populous part of the city. At present it is off at one side, and it is not convenient of access.

Mr. CLARKE. Is there a drill shed in existence in St. John now ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. Is it practicable to use the site on which the present drill shed stands ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Possibly it may be, although I think the department would first have to consider the question whether it might not be advantageous to dispose of that building and realize upon it.

Mr. CLARKE. Is the present drill hall up in the city or down near the water front ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It is not in the centre of the city.

Mr. BLAIN. There seems to have been some correspondence with respect to the site. Perhaps the government could tell us what amount of money this site will cost.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no correspondence in the Public Works Department except what we have had with the Militia Department.

Mr. BLAIN. The Minister of Militia said that there had been some correspondence between his department and the municipal authorities, and that the site had partly been selected. If that site or some other like it is to be purchased, what amount of money will be required for it ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am not able to give my hon. friend a figure; but I will make a note of it, and when my own estimates come up I shall be able to tell. There is correspondence, and a site has been selected, which is approved of by the city and by some of the military men there. I think one of the military officers secured an option upon it in his own name. The government is in no way bound by that however. I presume that the price is named, but I do not remember it at this moment.

Mr. BLAIN. Did the municipal authorities refuse to purchase the site, and do they expect the government to purchase it ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think they do.

Mr. BLAIN. If that be correct, then I suppose some portion of the $10,000 now asked for will go towards the purchase of the site ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Not necessarily As I have already explained, the government own land there. I do not care to give an opinion with reference to it, but a very prominent officer in the city of St. John has assured me that the land owned by the government is perfectly suitable for a drill hall, and I propose to investigate that question carefully by sending down an officer from the headquarters staff before I advise the Minister of Public Works to purchase a new site.

Mr. EMMERSON. Before this item is passed, I would crave the indulgence of the committee to make an explanation, although it is not in order. I want to be correct in all my statements in this House; and if I find that I have made an incorrect statement under misapprehension, I want to be the first to correct it. I made the statement that the town of Campbellton was incorporated, and that the number of its inhabitants was about 3,000.

Mr. CLARKE. 4,000.

Mr. EMMERSON. My last statement was that it was about 3,000. My hon. friend from North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) questioned my statement that the town was incorporated, and said that it was not. I have in my hand the statutes of the province of New Brunswick, by which I find that the town of Campbellton was incorporated in the 51st year of the reign of Victoria—that was in 1888—and it has continued to be an incorporated town down to the present moment. It has grown largely in population during that time. I believe it has grown very materially since the last census.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Might I ask why Campbellton does not appear in the census as an incorporated place ?

Mr. EMMERSON. If you refer to Westmoreland——

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Order. I do not think I can allow this to go any further.

I have allowed the hon. gentleman to make his explanation that Campbellton is an incorporated town, and the discussion must end there.

Mr. CLARKE. I submit, with the greatest possible deference and respect, that the hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) was asking a very pertinent question. He has the official census, and he points out——

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. We cannot go into the question of the correctness of the census at this moment.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I have made all the statement I want.

Lévis—public building, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a supplementary vote in addition to what has been taken in the main estimates.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is that a new building or an old building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A new building.

Mr. CLARKE. What is its total cost to be ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have forgotten. I made the statement about a year ago, at the time the first vote was taken. I think it is about $25,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this building under construction ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. CLARKE. Has the site been purchased ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We intend to use a site owned by the Crown, under the control of the Railway Department. We have not yet had it transferred.

Mr. CLARKE. The work will be done by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Quebec marine and fisheries stores building, $1,200.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This $1,200 is to instal electric light and fixtures in the public building used by the Marine and Fisheries Department at Quebec.

Quebec Citadel—drill shed for school of gunnery, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to build a school of gunnery at the citadel at Quebec. It is being erected for the Department of Militia and Defence. It is most important that this should be provided for the next fiscal year, as new guns have been ordered, and accommodation should be provided for that.

Mr. CLARKE. What will this cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the item is allowed to stand I shall bring down that information this afternoon.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it a permanent school ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand that this building is required on account of the new guns.

Item allowed to stand.

Quebec military buildings—main store building at Dominion arsenal, $11,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in connection with the Dominion arsenal. It is really a stores building for extra stores there, required on account of the increase of the work.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this to give additional accommodation for the storage of military supplies ? I would like to ask the minister in this connection if there are other stores departments where separate supplies of ammunition may be kept ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. My hon. friend will find in the estimates that provision has been made for the construction of a magazine in the city of Toronto, and for a large storehouse and magazine in Winnipeg, and I think for one at London, Ontario.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Early in the session I drew the attention of the minister and of the House to the necessity of having not only stores at various points, but also arsenals, and I pointed to the example set to us by the United States. All their arsenals are inland ; Springfield is in the centre of Massachusetts, and Rock Island is on an island in the Mississippi. Nearly all their private manufacturing arsenals are located remote from the sea-coast in order that in case of necessity they can be used by the United States government. It would be really advisable that arsenals should not be established even in Toronto because it is on the coast of Lake Ontario. They would be better at inland centres, at Ottawa, or some place remote from the shore.

Mr. COCHRANE. I would like to ask the Minister of Militia if these premises will be occupied by the troops which the hon. member for North Norfolk is going to send down ?

At one o'clock, committee took recess.

Committee resumed at three o'clock.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am advised that this amount will cover the total cost of the main store building. That is the answer to the question I was asked before recess.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Some question was asked, just before the committee rose for recess, whether anything similar was being done for general stores elsewhere.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Minister of Militia pointed out that in the estimates there are amounts to provide places at Toronto, Winnipeg and some other points.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What are these general stores ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. Sir Frederick Borden). This is for the cartridge factory chiefly.

Mr. MORIN. I was not present when the item for the Lévis public building was under discussion. If the Minister of Public Works will bear with me, I would like to ask some questions. What is this public building for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. For all the services of the government, particularly post office and customs.

Mr. MORIN. We voted an amount of $5,000 last April, I think, for a public building in Lévis.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes ; I explained that this was an additional vote.

Mr. MORIN. How much will the building cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My recollection is that the estimate was $25,000.

Mr. MORIN. Has the government purchased the ground ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We do not need to purchase it, unless we have to pay the Department of Railways and Canals, in whose name it is now held.

Mr. MORIN. Has the minister received tenders for this building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not yet. I explained that there had been delay in making over the site from one department to the other.

Mr. MORIN. Does the hon. minister know when he will commence construction on the building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry there has been delay, but I think we ought to be able to begin at once.

Mr. CLARKE. The Minister of Militia made some statements with regard to buildings in London and Toronto, in which military stores, ammunition and military supplies, are to be stored.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think my hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) misunderstood me. In these estimates we are asking, I think for the first time, to make provision for the establishment of stores buildings at different points throughout the Dominion.

Mr. CLARKE. Can the hon. minister give further information on the subject ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax).

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. There is provision in these estimates for the construction of a store building at Winnipeg and magazine at Toronto, a magazine at Winnipeg and a magazine at one other point, I think London. There is a general store building, as my hon. friend knows, at Toronto. Perhaps I might explain, with regard to Toronto, that it is quite possible, in fact quite probable, that there will be a new building constructed for the city of Toronto if certain negotiations, which are now pending, come to a successful termination. Therefore, probably, any estimate for the construction of a building will be delayed for a short time.

Mr. CLARKE. These magazines will be for arms and ammunition ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. For ammunition.

Quebec Citadel—drill shed for school of gunnery. $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The estimated cost of this building is $30,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is the school of gunnery permanently established at Quebec ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it a compulsory course ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It will be. We have never had a suitable building for carrying out this sort of instruction, though it has been carried out, of course, to some extent. But now, in connection with the arsenal at Quebec, we are able to carry out the repairs of all the guns used by the artillery throughout the Dominion. If anything goes wrong with a gun we send it there, instead of having to send it back to the old country. We are putting in all the necessary machinery to repair the most delicate guns in use. It is, therefore, convenient to have a school of gunnery at that point. The very fact of carrying on this work of repair enables the teachers to illustrate and explain the different parts of the gun. We are having this building constructed, which will cost $30,000, to enable this to be done efficiently.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Of course, I understand this does not include instruction in musketry, but does it include light field guns as well as heavy guns ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Guns known as guns of position —the 7·5 and a larger class of guns.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Would this include the guns used by field batteries ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes, field guns or heavy artillery.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Including such arms as gatling guns ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Well, no ; that would hardly be included. Although it might be. This building would be sufficient to do that ; but I think that what is particularly had in view is training with reference to the different parts making up the field guns and larger pieces, and the use of such artillery.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Are you getting the new class of guns that have been adopted in the British army—the latest ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Of rifle ? Yes ; we have ordered half a dozen of these guns, and we expect them here very shortly.

Mr. CLARKE. What are they for ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. We are ordering them for the purpose of comparing them with our own rifle which is being constructed by the Ross Company.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I mean heavy guns —artillery. There is a new gun lately adopted by the British army, and I think we ought to have the same.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. A fifteen-pounder ? Of course, we have no official information that the War Office have decided on any particular gun, although I have seen the statement in the newspapers which the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Haggart) refers to. We have ordered, subject, of course, to the decision of the War Office. I understand that the one likely to be adopted was the 18·5 pounder.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Have any of the new rifles being manufactured in Quebec been finished yet ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. When does the hon. minister expect them to be delivered ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. They should be delivered at the rate of 1,000 a month. I am told that before the end of the year they will be delivered.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Can that rifle use the same ammunition as the British arm ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes—·303.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose the difference between the Ross rifle and the British arm is not very great ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It is very trifling indeed. The Ross rifle is what is known as a straight-pull rifle ; the other pulls back with a twist.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Are any of the parts interchangeable in the two rifles ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Not as between the Lee-Enfield and the Ross, but the Ross rifle is being manufactured so that all the parts are interchangeable. I mean to say that, taking a dozen rifles and separating the parts, you can make a new lot of rifles with the interchangeable parts. They are not made for an individual rifle but for any rifle.

Mr. CLARKE. How do they compare as to cost ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. We think the Ross rifle is the better of the two, I think it is quite as good. The contract laid on the Table of the House shows that the cost of the Ross rifle is $25. I had a communication the other day from the War Office offering a new rifle, and I find that if the expense of inspection, freight, &c., were added, it just about comes up to the cost of the Ross rifle, possibly a little less.

M. BORDEN (Halifax). Does this company supply the rifles to people generally or only to the government of Canada ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. They are not under restriction not to furnish it to any one else, but I think that our requirements will probably test their capacity to the full extent. They have agreed to supply us 1,000 rifles a month.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). In England, is the production of the rifles supplied for the British army restricted to that purpose alone, or can it be sold to others ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It can be sold. Most of the rifles used in the English army are made by the trade, as it is called. During the South African war the trade was restricted.

Montreal examining warehouse, additions and alterations, including fittings, furniture, &c., $20,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in addition to the $15,000 previously voted for repairs and alterations in the examining warehouse at Montreal. I may say that the principal item is $21,000 for freight elevators. This work has been under way for some time. The total cost will be $35,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has this been reported as necessary by the officers of the department ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. The old one was discarded at the request of the Customs Department. Most of the work is being done by contract. Some small repairs are being done otherwise. The contract for the elevator has not been given out yet.

Mr. BLAIN. I noticed when this matter was up last year the minister stated it would cost $30,000, now he says it will cost $35,000. Can the minister explain the reason of the different estimates ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know that there is any explanation that I could give. The difference is not large in an estimate for repairing a large building like this.

Terrebonne, public building, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to provide for the erection of a new public building in the town of Terrebonne. Although a small town with a population of only about 2,000, according to the last census. I understand it is the most important place in the district. The post office revenue is about $17,000. The money orders issued amounted to $9,670, and those received to $34,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Has a site been provided by the municipality ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The site has not been provided. The total cost including the site will not be over $12,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it to be used for any other purpose than that of a post office ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to be used for customs and excise as well as a post office.

Acton Vale public building, $6,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a new building. I understand that Acton Vale is the principal town in the county of Bagot. The population according to the last census was 1,175. It is estimated to cost about $10,000.

Mr. BENNETT. It is refreshing to see a large sum like this voted for a public building in a village of the population mentioned, while the promise made by the Minister of Customs and others that the large and flourishing town of Owen Sound should have a public building, has been entirely overlooked.

St. John's—public building, $6,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This building is to be used for the customs and other government officials as well as for a post office. It will be situated in the central part of the town. I believe there is no other public building in the country. If will cost about $10,000. The population of St. John's is over 4,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Does the minister say there are no other public buildings in the county ? What about the barracks?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I mean for a post office.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Further down in the same list I see there is a vote proposed for an examining warehouse.

Mr. CLARKE. Has the site been procured ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The site has not been procured.

Mr. CLARKE. And the plans have not been prepared ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, they are prepared.

Mr. CLARKE. Of course, the work will be let by tender?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BLAIN. Have there been any negotiations with or propositions from the municipality in respect to a site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I am informed there has been no correspondence in regard to that.

Mr. BLAIN. What proportion of this amount will go to a site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The deputy minister informs me that the site will cost over $1,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Will the balance complete and equip the building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief architect thinks that this amount will complete it, but my experience is that the fittings generally are extra.

Mr. MORIN. Have they not a drill hall in St. John's already ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. They have a barracks, but no drill hall. They have a military school there.

Mr. CLARKE. The plans of this building have been prepared. It was thought wise to prepare plans for this building and not wise to prepare plans for other buildings?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend has misunderstood me. The plans were only prepared for this building because we are erecting similar buildings in other places. In speaking of the St. John, N.B., drill hall, or of any other large building, it is necessary to prepare special plans, but in this case the plan which is available for other buildings only requires to be changed to suit the site.

Mr. CLARKE. Then, as a matter of fact, the plan has not been prepared ? It is a general plan ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The plan is prepared for similar buildings, and that is the plan we go upon in making this estimate.

Mr. CLARKE. A model plan ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A model plan.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the post office and customs revenue at St. John's ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The postal revenue for the last year was $6,912 and the customs duties $119,549.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). For Acton Vale also.

Mr. BENNETT. The post office revenue at Acton Vale is $838.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $838.23.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). And the customs revenue at Acton Vale ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is an outport.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is that not a pretty large building for an outport?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A public building there is only defensible under the policy which has been adopted of giving one building to the shire town of each county.

Mr. CLARKE. The case is a desperate one.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are just a few counties which have no buildings, and it seemed rather invidious to have these counties without a building. The policy which I have indicated was adopted rather to give the shire town or county town, as we call it, a public building ?

Mr. CLARKE. Why does not Owen Sound get one ?

Mr. BLAIN. What is the policy in respect of caretakers in public buildings in Quebec ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In a great many cases the officer in charge lives in the building and takes care of the building at an average cost of about $60 a year.

Mr. BLAIN. Will there be a caretaker appointed for this building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think that there is any doubt that the postmaster will be called upon to be the caretaker of this building, whether he lives in it or not. In some cases where the postmaster does not live in the building, he has to take care of it, for which he gets this allowance.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The building at St. John's and the building at Acton Vale are practically to cost the same?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They are practically to cost the same, but my hon. friend will notice that there is a very large postal and customs revenue at St. John's. It is now proposed to erect a new building in a more central part of the town for the accommodation of the people using the post office.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is to be used for a post office only ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Assuming that it is, still the postal revenue of St. John's is eight or ten times as much as that of Acton Vale. If a building of that character is sufficient for St. John's, one would suppose a very much less expensive building would be needed for Acton Vale. What is the revenue at St. John's ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Nearly $7,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). And the revenue at Acton Vale is $838. Why should you have two buildings at practically the same cost ? If a building of this character is reasonably sufficient, and I have no doubt it is, for the post office at St. John's, where the postal revenue is nearly $7,000, upon what principle do you spend the same amount of money at Acton Vale, where the postal revenue is only $838?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If we had been putting up a government building for all the officials of St. John's, the building which we propose to erect would not be large enough, but this is wholly for a post office. At Acton Vale I do not think we could put up a suitable public building for much less than the figure I gave. The population of the town or village does not indicate the number of people who use the post office. People come in for half a mile or more from the surrounding country.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). One would think that the postal revenue would indicate that. I think we started with the same premise that each of these buildings is to be used for the purpose of the post office. There is a separate building at St. John's for the custom-house. If you can erect a post office building at St. John's which is reasonably sufficient for the public needs for $10,000 to transact a business of nearly $7,000 a year, how is it that you are spending the same amount of money for erecting a post office at Acton Vale, where the total postal revenue is less than one-eighth of that amount ? I am afraid the hon. minister has not made himself very clear upon that point.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend perhaps is right, but a man could build a house for the accommodation of two people which would have the same capacity as a house built to accommodate ten people. When we want a certain number of offices of practically the same size, the difference in the cost of the two buildings is not material for that reason. I do not know whether we could expect to have a permanent and substantial building erected for much less money.

Mr. BLAIN. What rent does the government pay for the public building at present in use at Acton Vale ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We do not pay any rent.

Mr. BENNETT. An allowance for rent is made to the postmaster ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The post office is furnished by the postmaster, unless there is some special arrangement which I do not know of.

Mr. BLAIN. What allowance is made to the postmaster at Acton Vale for supplying the building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in the Post Office Department, and I know nothing about it.

Mr. BLAIN. It is information we should have when you are taking a vote for such a large sum for a public building.

Mr. BENNETT. This post office has a revenue of $838 a year, and probably the postmaster is allowed $50 a year for rent. Therefore, we are spending $12,000 for a building when we can rent a suitable one for $50 a year. And yet, in the town of Owen Sound, where the postal revenue is $14,500 a year there is to be no public building erected. This is a shame. The Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson) should take some interest in this. He ran an election in North Grey one time, and he promised that Owen Sound should have a public building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. So far as I am personally concerned, I am prepared to admit that the town of Owen Sound should have a public building. There is no town in the province of Ontario, and no town that I know of in the Dominion, that is more entitled to a public building than Owen Sound. I am prepared to take that up later on.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Is it the intention of the government to bring down a vote this session for the erection of a public building in Owen Sound ? I gathered from a remark made by the Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) earlier in the session, that it was the intention of the government to place a sum in the estimates for that purpose. I do not see any appropriation in this batch of estimates for Owen Sound, and I wish to know whether any further estimates will be brought down ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Thomson) will find any statement of mine in 'Hansard' to that effect. Speaking for myself, I said I was in favour of making a recommendation for an appropriation to erect a public building in Owen Sound, but it is impossible for me to say what will be in the estimates before they are published.

Mr. COCHRANE. Owen Sound is entitled to some consideration from the Minister of Customs. His supporters promised during a certain by-election, that if the Minister of Customs were elected a public building would be given to the town. They voted for the Minister of Customs, but instead of getting a public building they got cold justice. The Minister of Customs is under an obligation to Owen Sound, to implement the promise of his supporters. I can assure him, that though he may fool the people some time he cannot fool them all the time, and if he goes back there for an election he is sure to get beaten.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). It is to be regretted that the government have not submitted an appropriation for the erection of a public building in Owen Sound. In 1896, when the Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson) came there to seek election, distinct promises were made that there would be a public building erected in Owen Sound if the hon. gentleman were returned, and in consequence of those promises he received a large majority. I regret to say that the riding of North Grey never received so few favours from the government, as when the Minister of Customs represented it. At a later election, similar promises were made, and Dr. Horsey was returned. During the late by-elections supporters of the government swarmed the riding, and they declared openly that a public building would be erected in Owen Sound if a supporter of the present administration were elected. I may tell the Minister of Public Works, that notwithstanding that Owen Sound is Conservative, it gave a Liberal majority in 1896, for the Minister of Customs on the basis of the promises then made. There is a normal Conservative majority of from 100 to 150 in Owen Sound, and yet Dr. Horsey, in 1900 secured a majority. In the last by-election the promises were repeated and Owen Sound again gave a Liberal majority of 33. Thus, on three occasions, Owen Sound, although a Conservative town, gave a Liberal majority, because of the promises held out by the government. It is time that these election promises were done away with, and that Owen Sound should receive a public building on its own merits, irrespective altogether of political considerations. It shows base ingratitude to Owen Sound, that the government have not carried out their promises. The postal revenue of Owen Sound is about $15,000; the customs revenue, $40,000; the Inland Revenue, $100,000; and notwithstanding that over $1,000 a year is paid in rents for the accommodation of the officers of the government, it is left without a public building; while a little place like Arichat, in Nova Scotia, with 600 inhabitants and $600 postal revenue gets a $22,000 post office. All through the supplementary estimates the same thing occurs; the government are erecting public buildings in small towns, and side-tracking an important commercial centre like Owen Sound. For instance, Campbellton, New Brunswick, with a population of 2,000 inhabitants, and a postal revenue of about $3,000, gets a public building costing $35,000, and the Minister of Public Works justifies his policy by saying that it is a seaport town and gives so much revenue. But, here is Owen Sound, with 10,000 inhabitants; with a postal revenue of $15,000 a year, and the Minister of Public Works, and the government of which he is a member, refuse to erect a public building in it. Well, the government have fooled the electors of North Grey two or three times, but they cannot continue fooling them for ever. When the next election comes around, the electors of Owen Sound will not fall so easily into the Liberal trap as they did on the past three elections, and the government will have to try some other electioneering dodge. I exceedingly regret the conduct of the government in this respect because I would far rather see Owen Sound with a post office and giving a Liberal majority, than without a post office and giving a Conservative majority. I hope that even at this late hour, the government will bring down an estimate to erect a public building in Owen Sound, I trust that they will not longer neglect so important a town in the great province of Ontario.

Mr. CLARKE. I understood the Minister of Public Works to speak very nicely about Owen Sound, and to be in favour of giving a public building. Does he intend to make any recommendation now, so that an estimate may be passed for the work this session ? Is it not time to fulfil the promises, solemnly repeated again and again to the electors of North Grey ? Surely the Minister of Customs will use his influence to get an appropriation for Owen Sound, which is one of the finest towns in Canada ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no knowledge of any promise having been made with regard to the erection of a public building in Owen Sound. I did say, speaking for myself, personally, that I was in favour of the erection of a public building at Owen Sound. My hon. friend knows that I am not in a position to say just now what I can do. My hon. friend brought politics into the matter. I have no knowledge of that nor of any promise having been made. All I know is that the town of Owen Sound, from its commercial importance, is entitled on its merits to a public building, and it will have my best assistance in that direction.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I have said all I desire to say about the town of Acton Vale. It seems to me that the building proposed to be erected there is rather large, considering the revenue, especially as compared with the town of St. John's. My hon. friend the Minister of Public Works a moment ago said that he would take up the town of Owen Sound as soon as he came to it. What I cannot understand is why he should come to the town of Acton Vale, which has a revenue of only $838, and a population of only 1,175, so long before he comes to the town of Owen Sound, with a postal revenue of $15,000, a large revenue from customs and excise, and a population of about 10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend must know that it is impossible for any minister to meet all the applications at one time. However, I have not changed my opinion with regard to the claims of Owen Sound.

Montmagny—public building, $6,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Is this a new building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. This is an unfortunate building. It did not belong to the Dominion, and it collapsed in a storm. There were certain conditions with regard to it between the municipality and the department, which seemed to me to be objectionable, and I did not feel like rebuilding it unless those conditions were removed to some extent. It is also a question for the chief architect to decide whether that would be the most economical course. I am taking this vote for the purpose of leaving the matter in the hands of the department, and seeing whether satisfactory arrangements can be made with the municipality. It will cost between $5,000 and $7,000 to erect a building, and it would probably cost about the same amount to reconstruct the old building.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the population of that town ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About 2,700.

Mr. MORIN. Does the minister remember that some time ago there was $2,800 voted for that building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, and the money was not spent for the reasons which I have just stated.

Mr. MORIN. The minister should have sent an engineer to examine the building. In 1897 the member for that county at that time got $7,500 voted for the purchase of this building, and he knew very well from whom he was buying it. The building cost $7,494.75. That building was built on props, right over a mud hole, and that is the reason it went down last winter. There are many buildings about it which did not go down. The fact is the man who put up that building was sick of it, and he sold it to the government five or six years ago. There is almost $5,000 gone, and the minister asks the House to vote $6,000 more; that will be $11,000 for a population of 1,119.

Mr. CLARKE. I think we ought to have a fuller explanation from the minister after what the hon. member has said. Is it the intention of the government to erect another building on the same site or to purchase a new site?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend says the officials should examine these buildings. He will at least commend me for having taken action in not spending money to repair it. The chief architect examined the property and reported this to me, and that is the reason this money was not spent before. Unless the conditions are changed, we shall not perhaps repair that building, but may find it more economical to build a new one. My hon. friend's statement is quite right, so far as I have been able to investigate the matter.

Mr. TALBOT. I would like to ask the hon. member for Dorchester (Mr. Morin) what he means by saying that the post office of Montmagny is erected over a mud hole and on piles, which I suppose he means when he speaks of props?

Mr. MORIN. In the first place, that building was not built for the post office. It was 25 or 30 per cent too large for that purpose. If I am not mistaken, it was used as a club or as a place where music was taught. If you put up another building there, do not build one as large as that.

Montreal post office—improvements, $13,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for putting in an elevator, improving the two passenger elevators, constructing a new street receiver, and making small repairs running from $400 down to $150.

St. Hyacinthe drill hall, $15,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total estimated cost of this building as furnished by the Militia Department is $24,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What regiment occupies this drill hall?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The 84th regiment of infantry of St. Hyacinthe which is now a city battalion of four effective companies.

Mr. CLARKE. Has a site been purchased?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No site has been purchased. Negotiations were going on some time ago for a very fine site, a large piece of ground on which we had an option at $4,000. A disastrous fire took place in the city, and the municipal council approached us with regard to another site near the river. Negotiations for the purchase of the original site would probably have been concluded before now but for that fire.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I would like to have a statement prepared showing what drill sheds have been established in military centres in each of the provinces, giving by numbers the regiments occupying them, and the cost of each. I think that the province of Ontario has acquiesced in the spending of more money for this purpose in other provinces than in Ontario, although these provinces have not as strong militia forces as we have in Ontario.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will get the information in detail, but I have some votes in Ontario coming up later on, and on them I will be glad to explain our policy in regard to this matter.

Mr. BLAIN. I notice that a small amount of money was voted in 1901 for the purchase of the site for this building. In 1902 that amount was increased to $5,000, and now we are asked for $15,000. This seems a strange condition of things as the $5,000 has not been spent and the site is not yet purchased. Does the minister regard that as being consistent with the principle he laid down last session, that he would deal with matters of that kind on business principles?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think my hon. friend (Mr. Blain) did not hear my explanation. When I asked for a vote of $5,000, we had an option for the purchase of a site, but after the disastrous fire in that city the municipal council approached us with regard to the purchase of a site. If the original site is purchased, this would be all we could possibly spend between now and the end of the fiscal year. The estimated cost of the whole building is $24,000. My idea is that we will be able to prepare specifications, advertise for tenders, and start this work early in the spring, and that $15,000 will be all that we will require for the work to be done up to the end of the fiscal year. The balance will be asked for at a future session.

Mr. BLAIN. What amount have we to pay for a site?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Four thousand dollars was the amount of the option we had on a site before the fire.

Mr. BLAIN. Is the proposition now to change the site?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The municipal council proposed purchasing some property near the river, and they want us to take a portion of it. They have submitted a by-law to the people, and we are waiting for the result of that vote before we decide definitely on the purchase of a site. My hon. friend will understand that in a large place like that the government and the department are anxious to meet the views of the municipal council, representing the views of the people.

Mr. CLARKE. I think that this is a case where we can congratulate the Militia Department. The site has not been procured yet, but I understand the plans are ready. If the Militia Department had the plans ready in advance in some other cases, work would get on more rapidly. I commend the action of the Minister of Militia in having the plans of this building prepared in advance.

St. John's—examining warehouse, $3,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a revote of $3,500 to provide for the erection of an addition in rear of the St. John's public buildings for examining warehouse purposes. The present examining warehouse is an old wooden building set up on blocks; neither wind nor water-tight; unfit for use and beyond repair.

Mr. BENNETT. Is this the same town in which the new public building is being erected?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. Are there to be two distinct and separate public buildings there? Why cannot they be combined?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I explained that two or three times.

Mr. BENNETT. Why, the item has just been called, and I do not see how the hon. minister could have explained it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I explained it on the other item, that for the post office building. This is an annex to the public building for an examining warehouse.

Mr. BLAIN. When the department is putting up a new building cannot they make it sufficiently large to meet the requirements of this branch of the public service also?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I explained, this building is not suitably situated for the post office. The customs business there is very large, yielding a revenue of $120,000 a year.

Three Rivers customs house, new heating apparatus, $1,600.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to reconstruct the heating apparatus.

Mr. CLARKE. When was the old apparatus put in?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief architect tells me that it was put in more than twenty years ago.

Longueuil public building, $5,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Is this a new building?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, this is in the county of Chambly. The population of the town is 2,757, and the postal revenue $612.92.

Mr. BENNETT. What is the cost of the building and site?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The building will cost $10,000. The cost of the site will be small.

Mr. BENNETT. Will this building serve any other purpose besides that of the post office?

Mr. CLARKE. It will serve election purposes.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for a post office only. In customs, this town is an outport of Montreal.

Mr. BENNETT. This is even worse than the other case we have had under discussion. The appearance of this in the estimates is due to the fact that this town is in the district to be presided over by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Préfontaine) in election time, and he is going to be true to his record in the past to make elections not with prayers alone, but with something else. I have looked up the report of the Post Office Department, and I find that the public are being served there in a building for which a rental of $40 a year is being paid. There is no complaint that the building is not sufficient; nor does it appear that the postmaster makes any complaint that $40 a year is not a sufficiently high rent. And the total revenue of this post office is $612. I am surprised that the Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson) sits there with no word of protest against what he would have called in the old days a scandalous and outrageous expenditure. I remember one occasion, under the previous government, when the hon. gentleman who is now Minister of Customs and others of the opposition of that day held the House for a whole night to discuss a proposition that was much more defensible than this one. I know by the way in which you are looking at me, Mr. Chairman (Mr. Macdonald) you would like to have an opportunity to protest against this expenditure. It is refreshing to see these gentlemen, so blatant in the past in their professions of economy, proposing an expenditure of $10,000 for a public building in a town like this. Not only must that building be paid for, but it must be heated and lighted and a caretaker for it must be paid. I congratulate the Minister of Marine and Fisheries on securing this grant, and I sympathize with the Minister of Public Works, because I know that it is against his will that this grant is going through.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Not only is this a violation of the professions of hon. gentlemen in times past, but it is also an injustice to many of the larger towns in the province of Ontario. There has been added to my constituency another township and town, a very important town—Meaford. The population is about 2,000 and the revenue from the post office is between $3,000 and $4,000. Money orders to the amount of $25,000 are issued there yearly. That town is left without a post office. There ought to be some principle or rule to guide the government in making these grants for public buildings. It is to be regretted that such grants as these are proposed. They involve a flagrant violation of the promises made by hon. gentlemen opposite when in opposition. They may think it very clever; they may think they can 'fix' a constituency by this means. But it is no credit to the Liberal party. It is something that they will have to defend, and that will always furnish ground of attack on the part of their opponents. It is a shame that a government that came in under such splendid auspices should descend to such a despicable means to keep themselves in office.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The town of Bracebridge which has 3,000 or 4,000 inhabitants was promised a post office building. I see the promises made to that town are being carried out in part by giving them a dock. But they were promised a post office during the last election. I regret that the hon. member for North Ontario (Mr. Grant) is silent, and that the Postmaster General (Hon. Sir William Mulock) is not here to insist on the Minister of Public Works putting in an item for that building. I trust we shall yet hear from the hon. member for North Ontario.

Mr. CLARKE. Is it not possible to get a little more light on this subject? We are putting these estimates through with very inadequate information. What is to be the total cost of this building? Has the site been secured? Are the plans prepared? We seem to be going it blind in most of these cases.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) must admit that I have given that information already.

Mr. CLARKE. I did not so understand it. What is to be the total cost?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I gave that, but I will repeat it. It will cost $10,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Ten thousand dollars. In a place with postal receipts of only six hundred dollars?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Its being the only building in the county is the only defence I can put in, aside from the population and the receipts.

Mr. BLAIN. Perhaps the minister will give us the policy of his department on this question. It is rather difficult for us to understand why very much larger towns in other parts of Canada, having a much larger revenue, are overlooked. Now, the minister feels it his duty to grant this request made to him, and we are not complaining of that; but we think the public should understand what is the policy that guides the minister in the erection of public buildings, whether it is the population, whether it is the revenue that is paid into the Customs and Post Office Departments, or whether it is merely a political reason. It is very important that the public should know what policy is guiding him, so that they may know when to come to the government for a public building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have explained to the committee the policy with regard to the erection of these buildings. I am willing to admit that the revenue and the population should be the principal considerations. My hon. friend knows that it has been the policy to give at least one public building in each county.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I may say that the receipts of the post office at Longueuil, my native town, have been a disgrace to the place for years. To my knowledge petition after petition were sent to the Conservative government during many years, asking for a public building there. But no attention was paid to them, for the reason, I believe, that the town was Liberal. I cannot see any other reason. Since the advent of the present government, in 1896, petitions have been presented time and again, and the people have been promised a new post office. The fact that the town is situated on the south shore of the St. Lawrence, opposite the city of Montreal, probably accounts for the revenue being so small, because the people who go over to Montreal in the daytime take their letters with them and deposit them there. The letters would reach their destination sooner if deposited in Montreal than if deposited in Longueuil. Also many people receive their letters in Montreal instead of Longueuil. The grievance complained of by the people with respect to their post office ought to be remedied and is going to be remedied by the present government. For myself, I have had nothing to do with it. I no longer represent Chambly since 1896, when that county was joined to Verchères.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is it not a fact that a great portion of the people of Longueuil work in Montreal and cross over every day by the ferry?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is what I have just explained.

Mr. BENNETT. It is plain from what has been said by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that this is more of a job than ever. He says that a good many people living in Longueuil have their business connections in the city of Montreal as a matter of course, and as a consequence there is little or no necessity for a post office building in that town. He also says that for the last seven years—I suppose he is now taking a fling at the Postmaster General in his absence—in saying the post office in Longueuil has been a disgrace to that town.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I did not say for the last six or seven years. I said that for years gone by, for the last twenty-five or thirty years.

Mr. BENNETT. That only makes it worse. The hon. gentleman says that for many years the people have been complaining of this grievance. There was a course open to them, simply to make a complaint to the Postmaster General that the premises were not sufficient for the post office business, and then it would have been the duty of the Postmaster General either to provide suitable premises or to resign. It was not to be expected that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries would be looking after matters so trivial as the public good of Longueuil, seeing that the more important interests of Montreal took up his attention. Being a suburb of the city of Montreal, the people cross over to Montreal to do their business, and consequently we have only the trifling receipts of $600 at the post office. Yet now the country is to be plunged into an expenditure that will probably run up to $15,000. Moreover, you will require a caretaker for that bulding, you will have to pay the interest on the money, and pay for the heating, lighting and so forth. Once more I congratulate the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that, if he is not given more patronage in his department, he is at least allowed the privilege of dispensing the loaves and fishes to the electors in the district of Montreal.

Mr. COCHRANE. I wish to draw the attention of the Minister of Public Works to a very important town in East Northumberland, the town of Campbellford. The post office receipts at that office are $3,241; money orders, $20,870; and the allowance for rent is $140. I am safe in saying that is one of the most flourishing manufacturing towns in that section of the country. I know it has been said that Cobourg has a public building, but I want to draw the attention of the minister to the fact that Cobourg is the county town of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham. Campbellford is between thirty and forty miles from Cobourg, and I think it has strong claims upon the department for additional public buildings. I think there has been a vote this session for Bowmanville, in the county of Durham. I want to draw the hon. minister's attention to the fact that as there are three or four manufacturing industries at Campbellford, there must be quite a large revenue from the customs and post office. I am satisfied that if the hon. minister will agree to put an amount in the estimates for a building there the town will gladly furnish a site.

Mr. BLAIN. I notice that when the hon. minister was in opposition he had a principle in respect to the expenditure of money for public buildings, and perhaps, although the hon. gentleman has been in office for some years, it might be well to refresh his memory in regard to it. In discussing the vote for a post office in 1895, the hon. minister said:

> The hon. minister disregards altogether the amount of revenue received under the various departments but that should be recognized as a principle governing the erection of these public buildings irrespective of party reasons.

May I ask the hon. gentleman if he holds the same opinion now?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, I hold the same opinion still, and I am trying to carry it out as far as I am personally concerned.

Mr. BLAIN. The hon. minister has not changed his policy in so far as his statement goes, but the practice does not quite live up to the statement. If that be the policy of the hon. gentleman now, would he be good enough to tell us why he has not considered it his duty to recommend an appropriation to erect a public building in Owen Sound, which has been referred to by my hon. friend from North Grey (Mr. Thomson), and which has a population of 10,000 and a revenue of $15,000, while he has conceived it to be his duty to recommend an appropriation for a place which has a revenue of $600 and a population of 2,400? The hon. minister has made the statement that it is the policy of the government that one of the principal points, the shire town in each county shall be recognized. May I remind the hon. gentleman that Owen Sound is the county town of Grey. This matter was brought to the hon. gentleman's attention at the last session of parliament, and he is very well informed as to the condition of things there. Would he be good enough to tell us why it is that in making these further appropriations, Owen Sound has been overlooked?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have already told the hon. gentleman that it has not been overlooked. The matter is under consideration, and I did say that the policy which has been laid down by a majority of the members of this House, and which I think is a good policy, that the revenue should be the most important factor in connection with these public buildings, ought to be considered. It seems also to be the idea of the majority of the members of the House that one public building should be given to a county. My hon. friend has said that Owen Sound is entitled to consideration from both of these standpoints, and I acknowledge it.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. How am I going to explain to my constituents the principle upon which money of this kind is allocated? Here are two little towns in lower Canada, Longueuil and Acton Vale, one with a population of 1,200, and the other with receipts altogether from customs, excise and post office of less than $600. The government probably get about $100 a year of revenue from Longueuil. Yet they are building a post office which will involve an expenditure of anywhere from $10,000 to $15,000. The town of Perth has no public building of any kind erected by the government. The receipts from the post office are nearly $6,000 a year, the amount deposited in the post office savings bank is larger than that deposited in any town of a like population in Canada; the population is a little over 4,000; it has inland revenue receipts of $95,000, and customs receipts of about $30,000. The government are receiving in all about $126,000 a year from the town of Perth, and there is no sum at all given for a public building. If this happened to be located somewhere near Terrebonne or in some of the maritime provinces there would have been a large allowance for a public building. If the proportion of population and revenue considered sufficient to justify the erection of a public building in Nova Scotia or New Brunswick were applied to the town of Perth, nearly every third building would be a public building, but, there is no public building at all.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are not many more counties to be supplied and the town of Perth will have to be considered.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I would like to ask the hon. minister if he proposes to bring down further supplementary estimates this session? I can scarcely realize that in face of all that has been said, they will not include so important a town as Owen Sound. I felt very confident that the government would make some provision this session for a public building there, and I am very much disappointed that it has not been included in these supplementary estimates. I would therefore ask the hon. minister if he is going to bring down further supplementary estimates this session?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot answer that question at the present moment.

Mr. COCHRANE. The hon. minister did not give me any consolation about Campbellford.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Cochrane) certainly made out a very good case. I have noted the matter, and it will receive consideration.

Hon. Mr. SUTHERLAND.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). The constituency of my hon. friend (Mr. Cochrane) is in Ontario. I notice that at Campbellton, where they have a revenue of $3,800, just the same as Campbellford, and a population of about 1,000, they are spending about $35,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Where do you get the population from—the census?

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). It is not an incorporated town as far as is shown by the census, but it is an unincorporated village. Yet, the government purpose spending $35,000 for a public building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is in New Brunswick.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). It is very similar in name to the town that my hon. friend (Mr. Cochrane) brings to the attention of the hon. minister, but the fact of my hon. friend being in Ontario seems to debar him from getting any assistance towards the erection of a public buillding in Campbellford.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend from South Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart) has referred to the maritime provinces. I would like to inform him that the maritime provinces are not in this class at all. I have been looking at the post office revenue in Nova Scotia, and I find that there are thirty or forty places without public buildings in that province which have a larger revenue than these two places which are now to have public buildings.

Montreal—barracks for permanent corps, $20,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Would the hon. minister please give a full explanation of this item?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a new vote of $20,000 for the erection of a barracks for one unit of the permanent corps at Montreal. The estimated cost is $126,000. We own the site, and the city of Montreal, as I am informed, have placed to our credit $25,000 to be devoted to this object.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Where are those barracks to be?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. On Lafontaine park, formerly known as Logan's Farm.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What corps is to be brought there; is it to be a new addition to the strength of the force?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The idea is to have a battery of garrison artillery and a detachment of infantry—in all, 200 men. It is estimated that the accommodation for these will cost from $100,000 to $125,000, of which the city of Montreal has voted $25,000. It would seem to me very desirable, in the public interest, that in a great city like Montreal there should be at least a small detachment of the permanent force. It has been found to be very useful in Toronto.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Does the minister purpose retaining the corps at St. John's ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It is proposed to transfer the infantry from St. John's to Montreal and to establish a cavalry corps at St. John's.

Mr. CLARKE. There will be an addition to the permanent militia force ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. There is an addition of 200 involved in this.

Mr. CLARKE. The building is to cost $125,000 and $25,000 of that is provided by the municipality of Montreal.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That is it, and the site is now owned by the government.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I heartily endorse the idea of having an institution in Montreal, in which officers, or non-commissioned officers or cadets, could get a military training. As the minister knows, I do not believe that the proper plan for giving that system of instruction is to have a permanent corps, in the ordinary sense of the word. I think it can be accomplished much more economically and much more efficiently by the means which I have already explained to the House.

Quebec drill hall—addition to building, $20,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to provide for additional ground adjacent to the drill hall

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). You cannot get any more ground than you have there.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think that is an error. There may be a small corner in front of the drill hall that ought to be acquired, but I do not know that it is necessary. The explanation is this. A certain sum of money was contributed by the Quebec government and by the city of Quebec towards the construction of the drill hall originally, and it was understood that the city should have the right to use the building for exhibition purposes, &c. This dual ownership has not worked satisfactorily, and as the military corps have increased in Quebec, it has been found impossible to give them the accommodation they ought to have. The local government and the city have intimated to us that if the government will give the increased accommodation, which is very desirable, they would absolutely give up their title to the drill hall. There are now in the city of Quebec no less than eight different military units.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Not counting the permanent corps ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Not counting the permanent corps.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the total strength?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I cannot remember. There is a battery of field artillery; two squadrons of cavalry, the Queen's Own; a regiment of garrison artillery; the 8th and 9th battalions of infantry, both first-rate regiments; No. 1 company, A.S.C.; No. 5 bearer company, and No. 3 field hospital corps. It is absolutely necessary that additional accommodation should be provided, and it seems to me that the offer made by the provincial government and the city of Quebec ought to be accepted.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). It is stated in an evening paper that No. 3 battery is to be removed from Kingston to Ottawa.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That statement is without the slightest foundation; there is not a word of truth in it.

Mr. CLARKE. Is $20,000 the total sum required for this purpose ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I would not like to say that it will be sufficient.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is the explanation given to me.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Of course, the Minister of Public Works would know, but I should think that it would cost more.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What is the status of the government of Canada in relation to the Plains of Abraham ? That ground is being rapidly handed over for building purposes, and this historic spot, in which the people of Canada have some interest, is being hedged around with houses, so that you can hardly see Wolfe's monument at the present time. It is needless to remark that both the English and the French people regard the Plains of Abraham with some veneration.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The Plains of Abraham were purchased by the Dominion government and handed over to the city of Quebec for a park, to be used only for the purpose of a park, and subject to the right of the Department of Militia and Defence to use the grounds for military purposes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There is no building going on upon the plains under these conditions ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I do not think there is.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The city of Halifax has certain rights in the northern common of Halifax which are subject to certain conditions imposed by the imperial government, namely, that no buildings shall be put up within a certain distance; and this condition is rigidly adhered to, so that when a little temporary shed was erected on the common a few years ago the imperial government got an injunction to prevent it being continued, although it was of the most flimsy character and was intended to be kept there only a few weeks. If the government have similar rights with respect to the Plains of Abraham, I think these rights should be enforced, and no buildings should be allowed to be erected there.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I will make inquiries at once. I think our position with respect to the Plains of Abraham is as strong as the position of the imperial government with respect to the Halifax common.

Sherbrooke drill hall, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is one of a number of votes which I am asking the House to authorize for the purpose of furnishing proper quarters for the militia force throughout the Dominion. I feel that we might almost as well give up our organization unless we provide better accommodation, both for the men and for the arms and accoutrements. The present lack of accommodation has been discouraging to officers and men who give of their time and means for the maintenance of a militia force in Canada. We have had a good deal of complaint in the House from time to time as to the expensiveness of our system, and I think the provision of better quarters for the care of arms and accoutrements will be a measure of economy. We have given the subject a good deal of attention, and, as the result of conferences with the officials of the Militia Department, we have come to the conclusion that we can erect a building which will be permanent, substantial and suitable in each of the larger places throughout the Dominion for about $25,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I might point out that Sherbrooke is the largest centre in the eastern townships.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not speaking specially of Sherbrooke. I am speaking generally. My hon. friend will agree with me that we cannot spend from $125,000 to $150,000 in each of these places.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What is the St. Hyacinthe drill hall to cost?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $24,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). And you propose to spend the same amount in a place like Sherbrooke?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that in places like Sherbrooke, Belleville and Stratford we can erect a building which will give satisfaction at a cost of about $25,000. It will be an encouragement to the officers and men of the militia force to have this accommodation, and it will protect our property. We all know that many of our valuable guns have been destroyed and the accoutrements have been injured for want of proper care, sometimes before they could be used in a second camp.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Sherbrooke is the centre of what the minister is very properly turning into a cavalry district; so that there will be infantry, cavalry and artillery there, and the town occupies a very important strategic position. I think the minister should make provision for a drill hall suitable for the wants of the whole district. If he can afford to vote $24,000 for a small centre like St. Hyacinthe, where there are only four companies, surely he ought to be prepared to appropriate $125,000 for a large centre like Sherbrooke, which is surrounded by cavalry, infantry, and artillery.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Not artillery. I may say that it is intended to carry out at St. Hyacinthe the very scheme of organizing cavalry to which the hon. gentleman refers. I believe it will be an admirable district for recruiting at least one cavalry regiment. In Sherbrooke there is at present one cavalry regiment and one infantry regiment.

Three Rivers custom house—retaining wall, $2,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to pay the balance of the contract. The work is completed.

St. Louis de Mile End—public building, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to make provision for the erection of a public building for post office purposes. The population is 10,933.

Mr. BENNETT. It seems extraordinary that the post office receipts at that point are only $640.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The receipts go into the Montreal office. The policy of the department seems to be to accommodate the people with these postal stations.

Mr. BENNETT. What will the total cost of the building be?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About $15,000, including the site.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This town will be annexed to the city of Montreal in a short time. Its population is increasing at the rate of about 1,000 a year. It is where the Canadian Pacific Railway locomotive works are situated.

Montreal new postal station—fittings and furniture, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In this particular case we rented a building on very favourable terms on St. Catharines street, and we are establishing a postal station there. This vote is for the fittings and furniture.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is a postal station as distinguished from a post office ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I understand it the idea is that instead of having all the mail sent to the head office, as at present, involving delay in sorting, the mails will be sorted on the train or at the railway station, and sent to the postal stations for distribution, each station serving a certain district of the city.

Magog—public building, $5,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is there any other public building in the same constituency ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is to make provision for the purchase of a site for the erection of a public building in the town of Magog for post office and customs purposes. The population at the last census was 3,515, the postal revenue $2,500, and the customs revenue, $6,312.

Mr. BENNETT. What are the site and the buildings to cost respectively ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This building will cost about $12,000.

Mr. BENNETT. And how much for the site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I suppose the site will cost between $500 and $1,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is there any other public building in the county ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand there is one at Coaticook.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I think there is a public building at Coaticook, although I am not quite sure. The two towns are at the extreme ends of the county.

Mr. CLARKE. Which is the shire town ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There is no shire town. A circuit court is held for each place, but municipal meetings are held at Ayer's Flat, which is mid-way between the two places, and has a population of 100 or 200.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). How does the minister explain his rule that he will only give one public building in each riding ? He seems to be departing from it in this case.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are exceptions, and as the Minister of Agriculture has pointed out, there seems to be a town in each end of this riding.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). In order to justify these votes, I think that more than one reason is necessary.

Public buildings—Ontario, Belleville armoury, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The armoury at Belleville was condemned and ordered to be pulled down. This vote is in accordance with the policy of the department of establishing these headquarters for the militia throughout the province.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I do not see any item here for a drill hall for Lindsay. While I had command of the regiment there, I felt more or less delicacy about asking for the drill shed. I may call attention to the fact that the town has furnished many good military men, and is nearly three times as large as some of the towns in other provinces to which $10,000 and $25,000 halls are being given. I trust the Minister of Militia and the Minister of Public Works will not allow many more estimates to pass through without placing in them an item for a drill shed in Lindsay.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Did I understand my hon. friend to say that Lindsay was considerably larger than towns to which military appropriations are given ?

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). It is about three times the size of St. Hyacinthe.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think St. Hyacinthe is much larger than Lindsay.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is nearly 15,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I hope the hon. minister will be good enough to take this into his serious consideration and let us have a drill shed.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What will this building cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This building is expected to cost about $25,000. I wish it to be distinctly understood that this is one of those buildings that will come under the category of which I have spoken. My chief architect tells me that probably we are making too low an estimate, but I think the architects ought to be able to make arrangements for good headquarters for about that money, and I think that my hon. friend will admit that the Militia Department in making these recommendations and carrying them out has had regard to the necessities of the militia, and has made the recommendations without regard to political considerations. The recommendations made are generally for places where the necessities are urgent, and these are the larger places.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Belleville is headquarters for two infantry regiments and will require a good armoury.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In these places some distinction has to be made. More or less room is required in the armoury according as they are to be used for infantry, or for cavalry and artillery.

Mr. BLAIN. Will tenders be publicly called for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. All these, Mr. Chairman, will be built by contract after tenders are publicly called for.

Mr. CLARKE. We ought to be able to see the plans.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The plans are under consideration between the Militia and Public Works Departments.

Peterborough—armoury, $10,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The present building in Peterborough is quite unsuited for the requirements of the militia there and the minister is perfectly right in building this drill shed. There are two corps there, in fact, there are parts of three corps, an infantry regiment, one section of artillery, and a couple of squadrons of cavalry.

Mr. CLARKE. What will the building cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About the same as the others—$25,000.

Guelph—armoury, $10,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Will this building be of the same size and cost as the others ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At Guelph there are two batteries and one of the largest rifle regiments in the district. In that case there will be additions necessary for the artillery. Except for this, the building for the armoury will be about the same.

Mr. CLARKE. What about the site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There will be no difficulty about the site.

Mr. GUTHRIE. I may say that this building is very badly needed, as the militia in Guelph are not at all well provided for. There are ten companies there. The present building used for the storage of guns is so completely filled that it is difficult to pass through it. There are twelve guns, with limbers, wagons, harness and accoutrements. It is proposed also to have in Guelph a branch of the Army Service Corps, and it will take a building of considerable size to store their equipment. The rifles are now stored in the cellar of the drill shed. It is headquarters also for the regimental band.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Does not the hon. gentleman (Mr. Guthrie) think that he has neglected his constituency when he has allowed this state of things to continue ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Thomson, Grey) were Minister of Public Works or Minister of Militia, he would acquit the hon. member for South Wellington (Mr. Guthrie) of being at all neglectful. He has been very persistent in his demands.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). There are two batteries in Guelph, and excellent batteries they are. No doubt the Minister of Militia and the Minister of Public Works will allow for the fact that it will require a larger building than an ordinary drill shed to accommodate the guns ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I explained that that was taken into consideration.

Mr. BLAIN. I see that very considerable sums are to be voted in these supplementary estimates for the construction of new armouries in certain towns in Ontario. I would be glad if the hon. Minister of Militia would give us a statement of the policy of his department in connection with the construction of buildings for our militia in central towns in this province. A considerable number of towns have been recognized but a still larger number seem to have been forgotten.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. My hon. friend (Mr. Blain) will understand that it is impossible to do this work all at once. It will involve between one and two million dollars, and perhaps more, to properly house the different militia corps throughout this country. We are going on as rapidly as possible throughout the country, and I assure my hon. friend that we are selecting the places in which these buildings are to be constructed on the advice of military men and from a non-partisan, a purely military point of view. With regard to the rural districts and the smaller towns where there is only say, one unit, my idea is that we should construct a substantial building which can be headquarters, armoury and storehouse, and with a room sufficiently large for a lecture room, where the officers who take an interest in military matters can bring their men together in the evening, and, by means of blackboards and so on, illustrate military affairs and give necessary instruction. This is the idea I have, and that I hope to be able to begin to carry it out in the near future. My plan will include every village of any importance in the Dominion of Canada.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. How many years will it take to carry that out ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think it can be done in five or six years, and that the total cost will be in the neighbourhood of a million and a quarter or a million and a half dollars.

Mr. COCHRANE What has been done with reference to the armoury in Cobourg ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The site has been procured, the plans are about complete, and advertisements for tenders will appear at an early day.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I should have added that there is a vote in the estimates of a lump sum for the Public Works Department for the construction of smaller armouries.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not the Public Works.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. At any rate, the places have not yet been selected, all of them at any rate. If my hon. friend has any particular place in mind, if he will bring it to my attention, I shall be glad to consider it.

M. BLAIN. I brought this matter to the attention of the government at two former sessions of parliament. I may say that the Minister of Militia has been very very kind in the matter. I would like to know if the town of Brampton, the headquarters for the 36th Peel Battalion, which is a rather important militia corps in Ontario, has been provided for in the general vote ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENSE. I have not the information at hand, but I will make a note of the matter and will be able to give my hon. friend the facts when the Militia estimates are before the committee.

Mr. BLAIN. I may say that the 36th is a very large and rather important corps. At present they have practically no place for the storage of their arms, and the officers are complaining constantly. They find the membership of the company is decreasing because of the difficulties under which the corps labour. I do not wish to complain, but it does seem that some one must be at fault if even a small amount cannot be appropriated for the purpose of remedying this state of affairs. I think the suggestion of the Minister of Militia is a very good and reasonable suggestion, and I hope he will be able to carry it out in the near future, and that some appropriation will be made for the corps I have referred to.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I would point out that the regimental district joins the city of Toronto and the county of York, and the very fact that he complains of in relation to the regiment, is verified by the condition of affairs there. Many of the officers of that regiment belong to the city of Toronto, and the entire absence of armouries or places where the officers can meet and instruct and drill their men, has a tendency to diminish greatly the number of officers from the county, and the young officers in the city have taken the places of those who belong to the county. I know of no place in the rural districts where an armoury is more needed than in the county of Peel.

Mr. BENNETT. I hope the minister will take into consideration the claims of Orillia, where no less than three companies have their headquarters.

Mr. COCHRANE. I desire to draw the attention of the minister to the fact that there is a cavalry company and an infantry company having their headquarters at Colborne, and who complain of insufficient accommodation. Colborne is so far away from Cobourg that the cavalry have to have a storage room of their own.

Mr. BENNETT. The minister, I hope, will also provide for the filling up of that 'skeleton of a skeleton' of a regiment that is centred in the county of Haldimand.

Mr. CLARKE. I think the member for Haldimand (Mr. Thompson) hit the nail on the head when he said that it was simply ridiculous to expect men to go to drill for 50 cents a day.

Mr. RICHARDSON. While provision is being made for drill sheds in various parts of the country, I would call attention to the condition of the drill shed in the town of Flesherton, which is now getting into a bad condition of disrepair from leaky roofs. It was erected by the government a number of years ago, and the officers have repeatedly made application for money to repair the roof and to put the building in fair condition for drill. They have an armoury in the building well fitted up but unserviceable owing to leaky roof. I have heard the officers complaining again and again that they cannot get an appropriation for repairs.

Toronto drill hall—additional accommodation for new corps, $20,000.

Mr. CLARKE. We are obliged to the hon. gentleman for this appropriation. Is it expected that this sum will be sufficient to give the additional accommodation that is required ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No, I do not think it will. I feel strongly on this question, and I think that we should do something and do it promptly, and in order to make a beginning we are asking for this vote.

Toronto military buildings—building for storage of wagons, &c., of engineer, $3,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Where is this to be erected ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. On a site provided by the Toronto University. This building is required for the storage of the baggage of the Toronto engineer corps.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The engineer corps is a new college corps, and the university is providing the land.

Mr. CLARKE. I drew attention to the fact that there are some small store-rooms in St. Andrew's hall being used by the militia authorities for storing supplies. Is any provision being made for the construction of a building in which to put these stores?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am not able to answer that question.

Ottawa departmental buildings, Western Block, overhauling heating apparatus, &c., $6,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This heating system has been in operation for 40 years and is working very unsatisfactorily. The air accumulates in the radiators, and the consequence is a terrible noise, which is a great nuisance. This work is intended to be done by the present staff. The chief architect has made up a detailed estimate of the cost, and he thinks this will complete the work. The noise is something fearful, and the clerks are complaining all the time. In addition to that, it does not give the heat it should.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). In this connection, I would point out that the ventilation of this House could very easily be changed for the better, the only drawback to a perfect ventilation being the fact that the fans make a little noise. I have examined the apparatus since the subject was up the other evening, and I am satisfied that the system is almost perfect as it is, if it was only put into operation, but it is never operated because the fans make a little noise; therefore, the machinery is shut off, and the consequence is that we sit here breathing foul air. The thermometer at this moment registers over 70. I would suggest that the fans be removed a little higher up, and we can change the air every two minutes.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The attention of the chief architect will be called to the matter.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I may say, at the same time, that I do not think the lighting is as good as it should be. The lighting of this chamber is not at all as good as it was under the former system.

Rideau Hall and grounds—repairs and improvements, $4,500.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will the hon. gentleman explain that.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Sixty-two square yards of galvanized roof, $775; shingling, $302; painting, $1,280; sidewalks, $750; kitchen equipment and other items, making altogether $4,500.

Ottawa departmental buildings—steel drawers and rollers, shelves, &c., $63,000.

Mr. BIRKETT. Have tenders been asked for these steel drawers and rollers?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We do not advertise for tenders. There are only three manufacturers in Canada making these things.

Mr. BENNETT. Where are they?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At Gananoque, Ottawa and Toronto.

Mr. BENNETT. What about the Newmarket one?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That has its head office at Toronto. When the different departments apply for equipment these firms are asked for figures, and they give us quotations on the specifications and requirements of the different departments.

Mr. BIRKETT. I understood that there was not a fair distribution of these contracts, that the Ottawa manufacturers were not satisfied with the proportion of the cabinets that they were asked to supply to the government.

Mr. BENNETT. What amount of goods of this class was purchased from the Newmarket Company last year, or from the company which has its head office in Toronto?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not that information here. But I will have a statement made out and lay it on the Table of the House, or I will give it to my hon. friend, of the different purchases that have been made.

Mr. BENNETT. Is it a fact that the hon. Postmaster General (Hon. Sir William Mulock) is a large stockholder in the Newmarket Company?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know, but I would assume that there would not likely be any foundation in the fact for the statement that the hon. Postmaster General is interested in that company in any way.

Mr. BENNETT. I am sorry that the hon. Postmaster General is not here at the present time, but it must not be assumed that the hon. minister cannot be interested in that company. In the first place, Newmarket is in the hon. gentleman's constituency. The hon. Minister of Agriculture was interested in a stock company that had very large transactions with this government, in a company that was taking thousands of dollars from a department. It is quite true that the hon. Minister of Agriculture transferred his stock to a near relative. Perhaps the hon. Postmaster General may have followed the good example of the hon. Minister of Agriculture, and transferred his stock to a near relative before having any dealings with the government. Perhaps, when the matter comes up again, the hon. Postmaster General may be here, and we can renew the question.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, let him speak for himself.

Mr. BENNETT. I may say that in the town of Newmarket the hon. Postmaster

General is credited with being interested in this company.

Mr. CLARKE. I would like to ascertain just what the plan is that has been adopted. There are three firms manufacturing these steel drawers and rollers. It is proposed to take $63,000 for the purpose of purchasing this equipment for the departmental offices. What plan is adopted ? Are public tenders asked for, or are circulars simply sent to these three firms ? Sixty-three thousand dollars is a very large item.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Most of this money is to pay for orders that have been given. Since I have been in the department I have not given orders to any of these firms. I think when there are only three manufacturers if they are all asked for prices, we can get as low a price as if we advertised in the papers. There is quite as good competition as if we spent money advertising in the papers.

Mr. BLAIN. Surely the hon. minister does not understand that to be the proper policy in respect of public competition ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What would my hon. friend do if he wanted to buy cheaply and there were only three manufacturers in the country ? Would my hon. friend spend $40, $50 or $100 for advertising in the papers instead of asking the three manufacturers to submit prices ?

Mr. BLAIN. I would. I would have no hesitation, and I think the country would justify the hon. minister in spending $40 or $50 in advertising and asking for tenders for supplies involving an expenditure of $63,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Let me inform the hon. gentleman that this is made up of 25, or 30, or 40 items. This is not for $63,000 worth of supplies to be furnished at one time. The various offices apply for small quantities at different times.

Mr. BLAIN. I understand that. I think the equipment is about the same in each of the offices. I am not complaining about that. It seems to be modern and up to date. But surely, when the hon. minister asks for $63,000 to be appropriated for a specific purpose, the public would expect that he should ask for public tenders. The hon. minister will not say that he is always posted as to how many firms are in a position to supply these goods. It may be that there are many others than the three manufacturers to whom the hon. minister has referred who are in a position to supply them. It will be quite within the range of possibility that these three manufacturing establishments may hear of this discussion and will understand the policy of the government. We can readily understand that it would be an easy matter for them to come to an arrangement whereby each would supply $20,000 or $25,000 worth, and there would be no competition at all. I think the public will expect the hon. minister to change the policy of the department, if that is his policy at the present time, and that when he is going to ask for supplies to the value of $63,000 he will put an advertisement in the papers and allow all the people that are overdue ? If I understood the supplying this class of goods to tender, so that the public will understand that there is public competition rather than that three manufacturers in this country should simply be asked to submit prices for the supply of these goods.

Mr. BENNETT. Are we to understand that the hon. minister during the coming year is going to expend $63,000 on these articles, or is this vote applicable to articles of this class that have already been supplied, and if they have been supplied, to what extent ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will have to have a full statement made out in the accountant's branch as to what is due and what orders have been previously given. Applications come from the various departments. This would not supply all the applications of various departments for these equipments, but it will cover the most urgent ones and pay the orders that were previously given. I will make inquiry and bring down a memorandum.

Mr. BENNETT. For the orders that were given in the past, is the House to understand that no tenders were called for, but that the hon. gentleman's department obtained a certain portion from each one of these three companies, and that the three companies settled the price that they were to uniformly charge ? Is that correct, and if so, is it to be the practice this year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was suggested that the department should ask for quotations from all parties in the business, and where a special article is being manufactured by three or four firms only, I think every business man will agree with me that better results are obtained from this system than from advertising in the public press, unless it be that you purchase in the United States. The Auditor General, who is very strict in regard to accounts of this kind, holds that where there are only a few well known reputable firms manufacturing special articles, it is quite sufficient to ask them for tenders by mail. The officers of the department would be able to judge if the prices were fair, and they would know if there was any attempt to unduly enhance the prices.

Mr. BENNETT. The majority of these post office fittings are imported from the United States, and are not made in Canada.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Since I have been in the department, I have never given an order outside of Canada.

Mr. BENNETT. The postmaster in my town supplies them himself, and he brings them in from the United Statets.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is not done by the department.

Mr. BENNETT. But here is a supply costing $65,000, and instead of publicly calling for tenders, you ask three firms to make offers, and leave it to some gentleman in the department to decide whether or not the price is fair. Suppose you carry that principle out further; if there are three mail routes running out of a village, the Postmaster General will not arrange privately to have the service performed, but will call for tenders, even if the cost is only $50 a year. Here is a contract for $65,000, and no tenders are asked. It is strangely suspicious that the company that is getting the largest end of the order, is a company which I am informed the Postmaster General is supposed to be interested in; and even if he is not so interested, they carry on business in the leading town in his riding.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no order given for more than $2,000, unless the department were fitting up a very large building and it would not be more than $5,000 at the outside. I have no particular objection to advertising, but I believe it to be a waste of money.

Mr. BENNETT. I am rather suspicious that there is something in it, for the reason that I am bound to say that there are no tenders called for these large red boxes on the street corners in which you put newspapers. They are made up at a little foundry in Aurora, in the riding of the Postmaster General. I know that, because I saw one of them placed on the train the other evening, when I was coming through. The Postmaster General is simply bringing grist to his own mill in every direction. We had an example of it here a few weeks ago, when he was dragging and collecting mail bags from one end of the Dominion to the other. I am still strong in the suspicion that the Postmaster General is one of the stockholders in this company and that he has been using his influence not to have public competition, but to be able to place the orders for these goods at their own price.

Mr. BLAIN. What proportion of this $65,000 has already been expended?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will bring down that statement.

Mr. BLAIN. I differ from the minister with regard to the method of purchasing these goods. I admit, that if tenders are called for, they should specify that the goods should be manufactured in Canada, but I do not think that the minister or his department should be the judges as to how many firms in Canada are in a position to supply these goods. Whether that be right or wrong in the interests of the government, it is certainly not in the interests of the people. The practice advocated by the minister in this respect will at least be always open to suspicion. I think the minister should state to the House now, that in future, he will ask for public tenders and give every man in the country an opportunity to supply these goods. How does the minister know that there are only three manufacturers of these articles in Canada? I think I could put my finger on half a dozen manufacturers in Ontario alone, who would be able to turn out these goods. It may be said that these three are the largest firms, but if it is understood that the government will put this contract of $65,000 a year up to competition, and give it to the lowest tenderer, there is no doubt in the world but that others will engage in the business.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As this was a special line I got my information from the chief architect, and the deputy minister that there were no other firms in this business in Canada; but after the assertion of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blain), I certainly shall try an advertisement, and see whether we get any returns from it or not. I have no desire to favour one as against another.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Hear, hear.

Mr. CLARKE. The minister said he thought the public interest would be protected, because the officers of the department would be able to judge by the prices asked, as to whether there was any attempt on the part of the manufacturers of these articles to unduly increase the price. What experience have the officers of the department had in the matter of the manufacture and procurement of articles of this class? How do they know that there is not a combination, or whether the prices are proper prices?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They can make the comparison only from their experience and by getting prices from other countries where these goods are manufactured, and comparing them.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the minister also bring down copies of any circulars or price-lists the officers have obtained from foreign countries respecting the value of these goods? I would also like to have information as to the quantity of these goods purchased, the names of the firms who have supplied them, and the prices in each case.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will bring this return down. My hon. friend asked how the officers could make these comparisons. I did not say they had made them, still the chief architect tells me that he is sometimes called upon by representatives of foreign firms, and he may have some of their price lists. If he has any price-lists or circulars from foreign firms, I will have them brought down.

Mr. CLARKE. It is a fair business proposition that if these goods are manufactured in Canada, Canadian manufacturers should have the preference, but it is not a sound business proposition to say: There are only three firms manufacturing these goods in Canada, and we will not advertise for tenders, but will send a circular to these firms, and buy from the firm putting in the lowest tender. I would ask what proportion of the vote asked is to pay accounts that are overdue? If I understood the minister, he has not himself contracted for any of this work, but is asking for this money in order to pay accounts outstanding.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will bring down the information.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How much of this vote is intended to be expended for this purpose? The sum of $63,000 should furnish a very considerable amount of space. It is not intended to provide fire-proof accommodation, I presume. I have seen these steel drawers in the safes of municipal and other large corporations where there are a great many documents to preserve, and I should think some system of that kind would be much better. With $63,000 worth of drawers you should accommodate a great many documents, and I will ask how much my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works expects to expend in that way?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The instructions to the officers are that after paying the accounts that are due and settling for the orders given, the expenditure is to be kept within the amount voted. The amount would be divided amongst the partments according to the judgment of the officers as to which is the most urgent. The system referred to by my hon. friend is a good one, but it would be very expensive. This is intended more for files; the shelves are equipped with rollers for handling heavy books. With steel instead of wood fittings they are much more satisfactory, and are, to a great extent, fire-proof. The accumulation of dust, &c., on the wooden shelves makes them very inflammable.

Mr. BLAIN. Will the minister also bring down a statement of the full amount that has been expended for these modern office furnishings during the five or six years since their introduction.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have promised to bring down the first memorandum immediately, because it is one that I can have made in an hour or so. The second one I will also bring down, but it will require a little more time.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose there must be some fire-proof accommodation in some of these buildings for certain documents.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think there is any fire-proof accommodation in Ottawa outside the vaults in the Department of Finance. The intention is to ask parliament at an early date for a vote for the construction of a fire-proof building, not necessarily a large one, in which the records and archives of the country may be kept without danger of destruction by fire.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I thought that in the repairs to the west block after the fire, the building was made fire-proof.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The building is supposed to be fire-proof.

Kingston—Royal Military College drill hall, $6,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is included at the request of the Militia and Defence Department for the erection of a hall at the military college to be used as a drill hall and skating rink combined.

Mr. CLARKE. For the amusement of the cadets?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Both for their amusement and their instruction.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I notice the absence of any item providing for the furnishing of a water supply for the college. The present water supply is very inadequate. As the Minister of Militia and Defence knows, a number of the students were attacked with typhoid owing to the fact that they were using water polluted by the drainage of the city of Kingston. The engineer of the Militia Department is proposing to employ a suction system of water supply. He proposes to have a station near the college buildings, to extend the in-take pipe out in the water, and to draw the water to the college by suction. For all the difference in the cost, it would pay the government to place the pumping station over on Garden island, to have the in-take pipe in the pure water beyond the island, and to force it across to the city. The only extra cost would be an additional half mile of pipe, and as the pressure on the pipes would be from within, no pollution could enter them through any leak that might occur in the pipes under the bay, whereas the suction under the system proposed by the engineer would draw any impurities into the pipes.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am very glad the hon. gentleman has brought this matter up, and I will call the attention of my officers to it. I had understood, however, that the water which it is proposed to bring in had been tested, and had been found satisfactory. I may say also in this connection that I think that there was some slight doubt as to whether the fever was due to the water supply or to the milk supply, or some other cause. At any rate, it was found that the milk supply was not what it should be. To remove any possible doubt, we decided to change the water supply, and while there is no item for the purpose here, there is an estimate in the main estimates providing for this change. The engineers and scientific people connected with the college, as well as the officers of the department, have looked into this matter, but since my hon. friend (Mr. Hughes) has referred to it—and I know he was on the spot not very long ago as one of the visitors of the college—I shall call the attention of my deputy to it.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The United States have recently voted $5,500,000 for additional improvements at West Point and they propose voting during the coming vear another $8,000,000 for the same purpose. Now for an institution like the Royal Military College, where the finest young engineer officers are being prepared for civil and military life in Canada, I would recommend the minister not to do any cheeseparing in providing this water supply. If he places the pump-house, as I may call it, on Garden island and has the in-take pipe on the other side of the island where he can get absolutely pure water, he can force it across the bay. Then, whether the pipes leak or not the water will go through pure, because the pressure will be outward. The system proposed by his engineers is to put a pipe out into the bay on which the military college stands, and have the in-take beyond what is called the danger limit. Then, with the pump house on the main shore, the water will be drawn in. Experience shows that these pipes are never water-tight. The movement of the waves, a touch by an occasional vessel, the dragging of an anchor, will cause leakages, and then, with the suction, the foul water will be drawn into the pipe. I trust the hon. minister will bring this matter before his engineer. And let him not be content with the report of his own officer. The engineer is not specially informed about these matters. If he will not take into consideration the elements of a proper water supply let the hon. minister consult any sanitary engineer. I am sure that such a man will not endorse for a minute the proposition of the engineer of the department, but will insist on having the other method; and I am sure that the House and the country will support the minister in any additional expenditure that may be necessary.

At six o'clock, committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Sir F. W. BORDEN.

Toronto post office—additional story over the rear one story part of the building; furniture, fittings, &c., $20,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to cover the cost of an additional story over the rear one-story part of the Toronto post office, 104 feet by 72 feet; also for the furniture and fittings for it.

Mr. CLARKE. Were tenders asked for this work?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Tenders will be asked.

Mr. CLARKE. In the early part of the session a vote was taken for repairs and alterations in the Toronto post office. Tenders were asked for that work, and, if I understand the situation correctly, three tenders were received. One of them was from Mr. A. B. Coleman, another from Mr. Carlyle, and the third from Messrs. Brown & Love, all reputable and well-known contractors. Mr. Coleman's tender was by some $500 lower than either of the others. He received no intimation as to the reason why the work was not awarded to him; but he received back his deposit, some $1,000 or $2,000, without any explanation. When we were discussing the matter before, I asked the Minister of Public Works why Mr. Coleman's tender had been set aside, and he informed me that the action was taken upon the advice of the architect of the department, that the work which was to be done in the Toronto post office was of a peculiar nature, consisting largely of repairs and alterations, having to be done at night, and that, as Mr. Carlyle had done work for the department before, he recommended that his tender be accepted. It was also stated that Mr. Coleman had had difficulty in completing some contract on other Toronto public buildings. That was the statement made, so far as I can recollect it. I have looked into the matter somewhat, and, so far as I can find, there was not sufficient justification for setting aside Mr. Coleman's tender. Mr. Coleman is a reputable and well-known contractor, having the necessary means and experience, and all the qualifications to fit him for doing that work as well as either of the others. Of course, it is a perfect farce to ask for public tenders, especially where a deposit of 10 per cent of the amount has to accompany the tender, if the lowest tender is not accepted. A very strong case should be made out for not doing so. I think the evidence goes to show that Mr. Coleman was very unfairly treated. I made inquiries of the architect of the building in the exhibition ground on which Mr. Coleman did the carpenter work, and asked him if Mr. Coleman was to blame in any way for the delay which had taken place in the completion of that building, that having been one of the reasons given by the architect of the department why Mr. Coleman was not awarded the contract; and I received this reply from Mr. Gouinlock, who is one of the leading architects in the city :

Toronto, June 8, 1903.

E. F. Clarke, Esq., M.P.,
House of Commons,
Ottawa.

Dear Sir,—Your favour of May the 26th received. Replying thereto, would state that Mr. A. B. Coleman, contractor for the carpenter and joiner work on the Manufacturers' building, Industrial Exhibition grounds, is not responsible for the delay caused in connection with the erection of this building. The delay in this work is almost entirely due to the contractors for the structural iron and steel work. Mr. Coleman's contract on this building is about $18,000, and he has given the work every attention and carried it out in a manner satisfactory to myself. He has carried out under my instructions smaller contracts, but has one at the present time for the carpenter and joiner work on the Alexandra apartment building, University avenue, in this city, for the Union Trust Company, his contract alone amounting to $30,000. He has also given this work the very best attention. I consider him a thoroughly capable and competent contractor. I feel certain that had the work on the Toronto post office been given to him, he would have given it every attention and carried it through as successfully and expeditiously as any other contractor in the city.

Trusting this information is satisfactory, I am,

Yours truly,

GEORGE W. GOUINLOCK.

From this it is evident that the reason given for setting aside Mr. Coleman's tender must fall to the ground. I make bold to say that before that reason should have been accepted by the head of the department, he should have seen that closer inquiry was made as to the real cause of the delay in the construction of that exhibition building. He should have made inquiries from the architects and builders of the city of Toronto as to Mr. Coleman's standing. I think that under the circumstances a very grave injustice has been done to Mr. Coleman. I have a lot of information respecting Mr. Coleman's status, and it is of the most satisfactory character. Mr. Coleman stands the peer of any other contractor in the city of Toronto in his line of carpentering. I will read another letter :

Hamilton, Ont., April 17, 1903.

To whom it may concern :—

This it to certify that we, the undersigned, have been doing business with A. B. Coleman, general contractor, lately of the village of Burlington, during the past ten years or more. He has carried out a large number of contracts from out of our office, and carried them out well and faithfully and fully up to the requirements of the plans and specifications and to the terms of his contracts, and to our entire satisfaction in every case. We have always found him to be a pleasant and an honest man to deal with, never found him trying to shirk any of his responsibilities with us, and we would without any hesitation upon our part give him any contracts from our office that he tendered upon, provided he was the lowest tenderer.

We highly recommend him to any party or parties who may be intending to build any structure. We may further say that during these many years of business with him we have never been under the unpleasant necessity of speaking an unkind or unpleasant word to him on account of any of his contracts from our office.

This document is signed by W. H. Stewart, architect, Hamilton, formerly of Stewart and Strickland, architects, Toronto. I have also a communication from Richard A. Waite, architect of Buffalo, N. Y. The Minister of Public Works knows the reputation and standing of Mr. Richard A. Waite as an architect. He stands very high in that profession, is one of the foremost architects in the United States, and has carried through to completion some of the finest buildings in Canada, amongst others the parliament buildings in the city of Toronto. This is what Mr. Waite saye :

To whom it may be of interest :

Within the past few years, Mr. A. B. Coleman has fully carried out several contracts both large and small under my supervision, and in the matter of time as well as competency and responsibility, highly commendable.

This is dated from his office in Buffalo on the 22nd of April, 1903. I have another one from Mr. C. J. Gibson, known, I presume, to the minister as another one of our leading architects. This is dated from his office in Toronto on the 23rd of April, 1903.

To whom it may concern :

This is to say that Mr. A. B. Coleman, general contractor, has within the past ten years put up a great many buildings for me, some of them very large and important, and he has always carried out his contracts quickly and intelligently to my entire satisfaction, and I can confidently recommend him as competent to complete any contracts he undertakes expeditiously and conscientiously.

I will read one more communication in connection with this matter, as I do not wish to take up the time of the committee—I will read a letter from the city clerk of Toronto, Mr. W. A. Littlejohn, dated 27th of May, 1903 :

My dear Mr. Clarke,—I have your favour of the 26th instant, asking whether Mr. Coleman, the contractor for the carpenter work on the main building in the exhibition grounds, has been reported as being derelict in his work or not. Mr. Geo. W. Gouinlock is the architect for the building, and in reply to an inquiry told me over the telephone to-day that he had a line from you and would write you to-night giving the fullest information possible on the subject. I may say that there has been no formal complaint laid against Mr. Coleman. There has undoubtedly been delay in the completion of the building, but other trades seem to be responsible.

I do not think, Mr. Chairman, that I could make out a much stronger case than I have made. I present these documents to the committee and I enter an emphatic protest against the action of the department. Here is a case where public tenders are asked for and where responsible contractors reply to the advertisements calling for tenders, and put in their bids on work the department contemplates, giving their marked cheque as security for completion of the work. I say I emphatically protest against the course that has been pursued in this case, a course that must be inimical to the public interest, in ignoring the lowest tenderer and giving the contract to another one who is probably $400 or $500 higher. I make no complaint at all against Mr. Carlyle, for I am fully convinced that Mr. Carlyle has had a good deal of experience, but in fair competition his bid was some $500 higher than that of Mr. Coleman. I repeat it is most unfair and unjustifiable under these circumstances, in view of Mr. Coleman's experience and reputation, to have put his tender aside and given the contract to another contractor.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would be very sorry if any injustice has been done to the gentleman who tendered. When my hon. friend brought the matter to my attention I furnished him with a copy of the report and other evidence of what the architect actually did. I had no knowledge whatever of Mr. Coleman myself. At that particular time it was notorious that the city architect asked a committee of the council, I think, who had this work in charge, for Mr. Coleman's dismissal from the work. There was considerable difficulty between them.

Mr. CLARKE. The hon. gentleman is thinking of another work entirely different from this one.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Who was the engineer in charge ?

Mr. CLARKE. Mr. Gouinlock.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It would have been a great mistake on the part of the architect, for the sake of a few hundred dollars, not to have brought this matter to the attention of the department. There was no feeling in the matter, and any action that was taken was based upon these reports. I am sure the chief architect had no feeling at all against Mr. Coleman, and he was guided in his action by the conviction that Mr. Coleman was not able to carry on the work. My hon. friend perhaps has forgotten the reports that appeared in the papers at the time, of the discussion over the difference that existed between the architects in charge of that work and the contractors.

Mr. CLARKE. There was no architect that I know of.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend will remember that I handed him a report at the time, showing there was great difference between the architect himself and the contractor.

Mr. CLARKE. There was a difference of opinion between the architect and some of the contractors for other portions of the work that were required to be put into this building. There was no difference, so far as I remember, between the architect and Mr. Coleman. The fact that the architect has given me the letter that I read is the strongest proof that I am right in my contention. I have read for the information of the minister the statement from the city clerk of Toronto, I have also read the opinions of leading architects, men who are in the front rank of the profession, to show that the reasons urged, at least one of them, that this man was dilatory in his work, was not well founded. It may be merely a coincidence. There were three tenders presented for the work. Of course politics would not enter into consideration in awarding the contract. There were three tenders submitted in response to the request of the department. Mr. Coleman's was the lowest. The next was Mr. Carlyle's and the next was from Messrs. Brown & Love. Mr. Coleman's was set aside, Mr. Carlyle was given the contract for the post office at his own figures and Messrs. Brown & Love were given a contract to repair, alter and block up the custom-house without any tenders at all. It may have been only a coincidence, but still it does not look very well, to say the least of it. It is a matter, I respectfully submit to the hon. minister, that ought not to be permitted to occur again in his department, if there are going to be bona fide public tenders for public work. If people are invited to tender, if they give the security and they have a reputation for doing good work, their tender being the lowest, they ought to get the contract.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Whether it is a coincidence or not, I can only say that I have given the committee the reasons that influenced the architect in coming to the conclusion that he did arrive at. It may be, as my hon. friend says, that it was not the fault of the contractor that delay was caused at the exhibition building, but that it was due to delay on the part of some other contractor. It certainly appeared by the newspapers as if it were the fault of the contractor.

Mr. CLARKE. Mr. Gouinlock, the architect, pointed out that the delay was entirely due to the contractors for the structural iron and the steel work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would be very sorry if it should appear from the evidence that he was a very capable man and that there was no reason why he should not have carried out the work satisfactorily, but it was only on account of the difficulties that were found to exist, and that were reported in the press, between this contractor and the architect that this action was taken in regard to the work on the post office.

Mr. CLARKE. The secretary of the exhibition board, in a statement regarding the matter, says that the work was :

In no way delayed by any lack of ability on the part of Mr. Coleman. I believe him to be thoroughly honest and in earnest and in this case working against very great difficulties.

One of the difficulties being the failure of the Canada Foundry Company to complete their contract for the structural iron work. While having the greatest possible respect for the permanent officials of the department, I hardly think that sufficient investigation was made by these gentlemen. I think if they had gone to Mr. Gouinlock, who was the architect under whom Mr. Coleman was doing this work for the Exhibition Association, or if they had gone to the secretary and manager of the Exhibition Association, who was vitally interested in having the work done as speedily as possible, or if they had gone to the city clerk of Toronto, who is responsible for the accuracy of the minutes of council and the care and filing of any documents which are presented to council, he might have obtained reliable information. I think the chief architect was not justified in making the report that he did against Mr. Coleman, which gives Mr. Coleman such a black eye, and which resulted in having his tender set aside, without having gone to the officials who are directly responsible and who are interested in the matter. He should have applied for a statement of the facts to the secretary of the Exhibition Association, Dr. Orr, or to Mr. Littlejohn, the city clerk of Toronto. Before Mr. Coleman was turned down either one of these officials should have been consulted about it. I have presented the facts, and I will leave it to the hon. minister to say whether he thinks Mr. Coleman was fairly dealt with.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This letter admits that there were difficulties, but the only question is as to whether there were such difficulties as Mr. Coleman could control.

Mr. CLARKE. Your architect might have found out if he had gone to the proper person and inquired.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The city architect did not seem to know that, because he had taken the unusual step of taking the work out of the contractor's hands. It was on that action that this recommendation was made.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I did not quite gather what the reason was for not accepting the lowest tender, because it seems to me there is something more in this than has yet appeared. There is a question as to why the lowest tender should not be accepted. Was the reason given in the report of the chief architect ?

Mr. CLARKE. I will read the report which the minister sent to me :

Public Works, Canada,
Chief Architect's Office,
Ottawa, November 6, 1902.

Sir,—Referring to the tenders for the additions and alterations to the Toronto post office.

Tenders were invited for the works referred to, by public advertisement, and three tenders were received as follows :—A. B. Coleman, $21,470; David Carlyle, $21,949, and Brown & Love, $22,238.

The principal work to be done consists in taking down the present vault, removing the greater part of the basement and the first floor rear main walls of the building, putting in foundations and the provision of iron columns and girders to carry the upper stories of the rear main wall.

As this class of work is both difficult and dangerous, proper precautions will have to be taken, otherwise serious results to the building might follow.

There being only a difference of $479 between the two lowest tenders, as above shown, I would strongly recommend the acceptance of Mr. D. Carlyle's tender. Mr. Carlyle has done considerable work for this department in the past and he has been found an efficient and reliable contractor. Further, as the work will have to be done so as to interfere as little as possible with the post office officials and the public, and part of it will, in all probability, have to be done at night ; any delay or dispute that might arise with the contractor would be a very serious matter.

I have been informed that Mr. A. B. Coleman is the contractor for the Industrial Exhibition building at Toronto fair grounds, and that the said building was to have been completed for the fair held in August last, but at that date it was not ready for the roof owing to misunderstandings and disputes with the contractor.

The foregoing are my reasons for recommending the acceptance of Mr. Carlyle's tender.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Sgd.) D. EWART,
Chief Architect.

Fred. Gelinas, Esq.,
Secretary, Department of Public Works.

The only reason given was the alleged delay on the part of Mr. Coleman in completing the work at the exhibition building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There were these two reasons : First, at the time it was urgent that this work should go on. It was important when dealing with a large building and removing some of the stone and iron pillars, that the work should be placed in the hands of an experienced contractor. Secondly, it was a matter of public notoriety that Mr. Coleman was at serious variance with the architect in charge of the work at the exhibition grounds. I am sure my hon. friend would say that under these circumstances we would not be warranted, even if he were a good contractor, if he had more work than he could do, in giving him this contract. The explanation which the hon. gentleman has given to some extent puts a different face on the matter, but this serious difficulty seemed to exist between the architect and the contractor. These two reasons, that is the reason of urgency and the difficulty which I have mentioned, no doubt influenced the chief architect in recommending the acceptance of Mr. Carlyle's tender.

Mr. BORDEN (Halfax). I would be inclined to think that the matter had been dealt with in a very casual way, in so far as inquiry into Mr. Coleman's ability is concerned. There are two reasons assigned for the course which was adopted. One is that the highest tender was from a contractor who had already done considerable work for the department and had been proved an efficient and reliable contractor.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is no reason as against Mr. Coleman. That is no reason why he should not have got the contract.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I quite agree. I quote the language of the gentleman who makes this report.

> I have been informed that Mr. A. B. Coleman is the contractor for the Industrial Exhibition building at the Toronto fair grounds, and that the said building was to be completed for the fair held in August last, but at that date it was not ready for the roof owing to misunderstandings and disputes with the contractor.

That deals with the matter in a very casual way indeed. He does not tell us from whom the information came, but he simply says, that he has been informed of so and so. The fact that Mr. Coleman was contractor for a building that was not ready at the time agreed on, is no basis for a charge against Mr. Coleman, unless he were in default in some way. There might be a dozen reasons why the building was not completed in time, none of which would in the slightest militate against the acceptance of Mr. Coleman's tender in this case. I do not think the minister was justified in accepting so indefinite a charge against Mr. Coleman as a reason for putting aside the lowest tender. It would be the duty of Mr. Ewart or any one else, before making a report on which the lowest tender was rejected, to inform himself explicitely as to the facts. If loose methods of this kind are to be followed, you could set aside almost any tender. You could get such a report against almost any contractor who ever did any work in Canada. We discussed in the House last year a case where a contractor had hardly commenced some work in Manitoba at the time the contract should have been completed, and I do not think anyone would venture to say that that gentleman is not an efficient, and able, and capable contractor. There is only one reason given in the letter, and it is a mere hearsay reason and after all it does not charge anything. It says, that the building was not ready for the roof owing to misunderstandings and disputes with the contractor, but it does not necessarily follow that the contractor was not perfectly right in every position he took with regard to that matter; it does not follow that the people with whom he was dealing were in the right and yet on a casual, indefinite, inconclusive statement of that kind, this man's tender has been set aside, and the next highest tender has been accepted. I do not know anything about Mr. Coleman; I never met the gentleman; I never heard of him before to-night, bnt I do say that in the public interest, it is not right that the tender of Mr. Coleman or of any one else should be set aside by the minister, or by any of his officers, by reason of any such inconclusive and casual statement as is contained in this report.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will admit that the delay in carrying out the work would not of itself be a sufficient reason, but there was evidence attached to that memorandum which I think will change the opinion of that gentleman very much. They wanted this work done immediately and if my hon. friend himself knew that a man had more work than he could do, he would not likely employ him to do work which had to be done in a hurry. There was a statement originally appended to that report which showed that the architect had publicly asked the committee for the discharge of that contractor.

Mr. CLARKE. I suppose the minister will produce the document containing that statement?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) must have forgotten that it was pinned to that report when I handed it to him.

Mr. CLARKE. I handed the hon. minister back the documents which he gave me, and I was afterwards sent a copy of the letter which has been read.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was reported in the newspapers that the architect in charge of that work was asking the committee for the dismissal of the contractor on account of these delays and disputes and misunderstandings, and for other reasons. I will give my hon. friend a copy of the document which was attached to that, and I think he will see that our action was perfectly warranted. I would be sorry indeed if any injustice had been done to Mr. Coleman.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am dealing with the case presented in that report, which does not refer to any other evidence being attached to it. I can hardly understand how the architect, Mr. Gouinlock, could have been calling for the dismissal of Mr. Coleman in view of this letter which is produced by my hon. friend (Mr. Clarke):

> Toronto, June 8, 1903.
> Dear Sir,—Replying to your favour, I would state that Mr. A. B. Coleman, contractor for the carpenter and joiner work on the manufacturers' building, industrial exhibition grounds, is not responsible for the delay caused in connection with the erection of this building. The delay in this work is almost entirely due to the contractors for the structural iron and steel work. Mr. Coleman's contract on this building is about $18,000 and he has given the work every attention and carried it out in a manner satisfactory to myself.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Was that the architect who had charge of the work ?

Mr. CLARKE. He says so.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not know whether Mr. Gouinlock was the architect or not, but my hon. friend from Toronto is of opinion that he was, and Mr. Gouinlock himself states that he was. Whether or not Mr. Gouinlock was the architect at that time I do not know.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I suppose I have a copy in the department of the report, showing the proceedings before the committee, and if I have I will bring it down, and the hon. gentleman can judge for himself.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The rest of this letter of Mr. Gouinlock, refers to other work which Mr. Coleman is said to have performed in a satisfactory manner under the superintendence of Mr. Gouinlock. If Mr. Gouinlock's statement can be relied upon, it is absolute proof that Mr. Coleman was not responsible for the delay charged against him.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the statement as reported in the papers is correct, it would put a different phase on the question.

Mr. CLARKE. I do not wish to take up more time now, but I present this view of the case to the minister : Mr. Coleman is a well known contractor in the city of Toronto. If reports appeared in the newspapers condemning the work done by Mr. Coleman, and if the officer of the department thought these reports were sufficiently important to justify him in making the report he did, it was only fair to Mr. Coleman that the officer of the department upon whose recommendation he was turned down should have gone, first to the architect who had charge of the building for the city and the Industrial Exhibition Association, or second, to the city clerk, or third, to the secretary and manager of the Industrial Exhibition Association. The architect of the department, so far as I know, ignored these gentlemen, who were in a better position than any one else to give him reliable information. Suppose the most inflamatory statements against Mr. Coleman had appeared in the newspapers. Even that would not have justified the architect of the department in making a report derogatory to Mr. Coleman without being advised by the gentlemen most intimately connected with the work that those reports were accurate. If the hon. gentleman will bring down the information he has, we shall learn what allegations were made against Mr. Coleman by the architect of the exhibition building ; because I shall be surprised to learn that Mr. Gouinlock asked permission to dismiss Mr. Coleman, and afterwards wrote the letter to me which I have read. Under whose supervision, may I ask, is this work being done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Curry, I believe, is the local architect.

Mr. CLARKE. Had the department any communication from Mr. Curry advising that Mr. Coleman's tender be not accepted ? Was it upon his advice that Mr. Coleman was turned down ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, there was no communication from Mr. Curry.

Mr. CLARKE. The more this thing is investigated, the less creditable it appears. Mr. Curry was the local architect, the gentleman who looked after the construction work on government buildings in the city of Toronto for years before this contract was given to Mr. Carlyle. As a matter of fact, Mr. Curry was an alderman of the city of Toronto at the time, and I believe is yet. Was it not extraordinary that the chief architect of the Public Works Department would pass over Mr. Curry, the local architect, and take a newspaper report as his reason for asking the minister to turn down Mr. Coleman ? He did not consult Mr. Curry, a local architect of standing, under whom the work was being done, nor the secretary of the Industrial Association, nor the city clerk. Might I ask the minister, when bringing down this information, to ask the chief architect why he did not think it worth while to obtain information from Mr. Curry ?

St. Catharines drill hall (revote, $10,000), $20,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A vote was taken for this work some time ago, but a dispute arose as to the site which had been chosen being unsatisfactory ; and after some delay, the city secured another site which met with the approval of the Department of Militia and Defence and the Department of Public Works. The contract amounts to $56,000, and the work is now going on.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is the city furnishing the site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, a fine site.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What will be the total cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost is estimated at $85,846.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How many regiments does it accommodate ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think there is only one regiment at St. Catharines.

Sault Ste. Marie—public building (revote, $10,000), $25,000.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the cost of this to be ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is estimated by the architect to cost $88,395. Tenders are now being advertised for.

Mr. CLARKE. Has a site been secured ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. It was procured in January, 1902. It cost the department $8,200, and the locality contributes something. There are 84 by 100 feet at the corner of Queen and East streets ; also lots five and six on East street, 56 by 81 feet.

Mr. THOMSON (North Grey). For what reason are you erecting a public building of this kind at Sault Ste. Marie ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no proper accommodation there. My hon. friend knows that the place has grown very fast and that there are some very large manufacturing institutions there. Last year the postal revenues amounted to $18,551 and the customs duties to nearly half a million dollars.

Mr. BENNETT. What purpose is the building intended to serve in addition to a post office ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Customs and Inland Revenue Departments.

Mr. BENNETT. In what part of the town is the site, and from whom was it purchased ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is in the old part of the town. It was purchased from Mr. J. Dawson and Mr. W. H. Plummer. The marine office will also be in this building.

Mr. CLARKE. Is that building of stone ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Stone and brick.

Mr. BENNETT. Is the time for receiving tenders yet up ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No ; the tenders are due some time this month.

Mr. BENNETT. $85,000 seems an extraordinary expenditure for a town the size of Sault Ste. Marie, when towns of the importance of Owen Sound and Peterborough and others throughout Ontario have no public buildings, and others of equal importance have buildings costing from $15,000 to $20,000.

Hon. Mr. SUTHERLAND.

Mr. WRIGHT. I might say that three weeks ago a friend of mine called on me and I asked him how things were getting on at the Soo. He said that the worst feature was that they could not get their mail matter delivered. A number of families had to club together so that the ladies of these families would get the letters in turn during the day time, because when night came the post office was so crowded that they could not begin to get the mail. Such a condition of things as that should be remedied.

Woodstock—public building, $5,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is under contract.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I understand that this is in the constituency of the hon. minister. What is the necessity for erecting this building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The necessity is that Woodstock is the most important town in Ontario. The revenue is also larger than that of any other town. I suppose that the government some years ago thought that it was proper to have a public building there. It is a very modest building, and this is to pay the balance on the contract.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I would not have mentioned this matter if the hon. minister had been as generous with his gifts to others. The only thing I regret is that he did not consider North Grey.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that Owen Sound must rank next in importance to Woodstock.

Brantford drill hall—additions and alterations, $15,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to make provision for additional accommodation for armouries to be built along one side of the drill hall. The addition is to be two stories high. It is also to provide better sanitary arrangements. Brantford is a very important and growing city of some 15,000 or 16,000 people. The city have expended a very considerable amount of money in connection with this work. They have contributed $10,000 to the building and site, and now they have purchased a piece of ground beside this building and are turning it into a park ; I think the monument to the volunteers who went from that district to South Africa is being erected there. It seemed, from some representations made by members of parliament and by the people of Brantford, that we should make the improvements, which are really required in the interest of the local militia.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the size of the addition being made to this hall ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. One hundred and seventy-five feet by one hundred feet. The city allows us to extend the building twenty feet on the side of the park. This provides a band-room, shooting gallery and other improvements.

Mr. INGRAM. Is it the intention of the department to level the armoury grounds at St. Thomas ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Neither the chief architect nor myself has any recollection of that matter being brought to our attention.

Mr. INGRAM. The armoury would be almost useless if the grounds are not levelled.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will bring this matter to the attention of the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence and see what report he has received. We deal with matters of this kind in connection with the Department of Militia. Representations are made to them by the local officers.

Mr. INGRAM. I am simply drawing the attention of the minister to the necessity of this work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They appear to have taken it off our hands as satisfactory ; the St. Thomas building was completed some time ago.

St. Mary's—public building, $8,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a new work, which it is estimated will cost between $20,000 and $25,000.

Mr. BENNETT. St. Mary's is in Perth and so is Stratford. Stratford has already a large public building. The minister had better give up that rule as an excuse.

Mr. CLARKE. Has a site been purchased for the St. Mary's building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). The population of St. Mary's is 3,400 and the total revenue derived by the postal authorities is $6,000. I would ask the hon. minister what justification there is for this building, and what it will cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total estimate, including the site, is between $20,000 and $25,000. This is not for a post office alone, but for all the departments of the public service.

Mr. INGRAM. Has a site yet been selected ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Would the minister explain why he is spending $25,000 in St. Mary's—not that I at all object to St. Mary's having this public building. St. Mary's has a revenue of only $6,000 and a population of only 3,400. Why does he give it a public building at a cost of $25,000, when he refuses a public building to Owen Sound, with nearly 10,000 inhabitants and a revenue of about $15,000 ? The minister lays down a principle as justifying the building a post office in one place, and yet refuses to recognize that principle in other cases. There is something very unsatisfactory about the way the money is distributed for public buildings.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have already said that if the hon. gentleman thinks I have left Owen Sound out of consideration he is mistaken. I do not leave unconsidered the case of Owen Sound.

Mr. BLAIN. How much will the site cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no figures on that subject. The amount I have quoted includes the cost of the site.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not think it will do Owen Sound a great deal of good to have my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) merely consider it ? He considers Owen Sound, but when it comes to the other places he gives them appropriations. We have had instances of town yielding not one-fifteenth of the revenue yielded by Owen Sound and to which the public buildings are given. We had one in which the revenue was $612 and another in which the revenue was $838. As my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) has got beyond the consideration stage with regard to these towns, why is it he cannot do the same with regard to Owen Sound ?

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). It is all the more to be noted because, as I said this afternoon, the town of Owen Sound, which is really a Conservative town, has, since 1896, given Liberal majorities because hon. gentlemen opposite have been promising them a public building and public works. Even in the late election, Owen Sound gave a Liberal majority of 33. They gave the late representative, Dr. Horsey, a Liberal majority. And when the Minister of Customs ran, they gave him a majority of over 100, because he promised them something in the way of a public building and public works. But now, when they see some of the smaller towns, such as St. Mary's and Woodstock, and other places, having large sums of money spent on them, while Owen Sound, the most important town in Western Ontario, receives not a single dollar, they begin to wonder what the promises of hon. gentlemen opposite are worth.

Oshawa—public building, $8,000.

Mr. BENNETT. This is a new work. What is the building to cost when completed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Between $20,000 and $25,000. The post revenue is $7,000, and the customs duties nearly $28,000. Oshawa is a very prosperous town.

Mr. BLAIN. Is there a public building in Whitby, in the same county ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think so.

Mr. BLAIN. Whitby is the county town, a very important town, and larger than Oshawa.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am afraid my hon. friend is not always precise in his information. I think he will find that Whitby is not so large as Oshawa.

Mr. BLAIN. It is the county town and an older place than Oshawa, and a very important town.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is a very important town and a very pretty town, and some day——

Mr. INGRAM. I understood some time ago that we were going to have a new system, and that when a public building is proposed to be built we should have a proper estimate of its cost, instead of carrying on the old system of having a certain sum voted and then coming down year after year for more money to complete the work. I hope the Minister of Public Works will inaugurate the new system and stick to it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In every one of these items I have given the committee the maximum estimated cost, and I have stated that if, on completing the plans and getting tenders, the price greatly exceeded the estimate, I should not feel justified in going on until I had further consulted parliament.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). What will the electors of South Ontario think of their representative, who lives in Port Perry, not securing a public building for Whitby, the county town ?

Mr. ROSS (South Ontario). I think I am quite capable of looking after the interests of South Ontario. I am very pleased to be able to say that Oshawa should have a public building. We in South Ontario are very proud of Whitby and Oshawa, particularly proud of Oshawa as an industrial centre. The hon. minister gave the returns for Oshawa for 1902. I have the returns for the year ending the 30th of June, 1903, and they show that both the post office and customs revenues are increasing rapidly. While, for 1902 the post office revenue was about $7,100, for 1903 it was over $7,900—or nearly $8,000. And, while the revenue from customs for 1902 was $28,000, last year it amounted to about $35,000, showing a splendid growth. The town has an electric railway and its industries are going ahead very rapidly. They have an old shack of a post office there, in fact the post office is kept in a store. The accommodation is not at all suitable for the town, and I have been able to convice the minister that Oshawa deserves this public building. While Whitby is the county town and while we are very proud of it, while, as the hon. member for North Grey (Mr. Thomson) says it is an old and important town, and in my opinion it should also have a public building, still, Oshawa seems to need this building at the present time. I think this vote will meet with the approval of the people of South Ontario.

Mr. BLAIN. Has there been any correspondence between the municipality and the government with regard to the site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. BLAIN. What proportion of this money will be paid for the site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think I am in a position to give the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blain) any direct information. It is a growing town, but I should think a site would not cost more than $4,000, or $5,000 at the outside.

Mr. BLAIN. Perhaps the hon. member for South Ontario who is familiar with the locality would be able to give us that information. No doubt he has been consulted.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. He wants to boom prices; we want to keep them down.

Mr. ROSS (Ontario). The hon. member for Peel (Mr. Blain) asked me a question about the site. There is nothing definitely settled that I am aware of regarding the site. I think it would not be wise to say where the site is to be, because perhaps the price of the property might advance. But I am advised that the prices of property have been rapidly advancing in Oshawa during the past year or two. A good many buildings are going up, but no doubt the government will be able to get a site suitable for the purpose.

Mr. INGRAM. How many sites has the hon. gentleman in view ?

Toronto—additional postal station, $25,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Where is this branch post office to be constructed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This appropriation is made on the request of the Post Office Department, carrying out their policy of spreading out these branch stations. This will be station D, I think it is on Yonge street.

Deseronto public building—to pay balance due on contract, &c., $1,500.

Mr. BENNETT. What does that building cost altogether.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is estimated that $25,000 will cover everything, including the site, furnishings and so forth.

Mr. ALCORN. I notice on page 7 of the supplementary estimates, sessional paper No. 5, there is an item of $4,500 for a Deseronto public building. Does one item include the other, or are they separate ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was for the year 1901-2, and was to pay a contract then entered into. This is to complete the whole work.

Bridgeburg—public building, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to build a custom-house at the end of the International bridge. The building is estimated to cost $10,000.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). What is the population ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Less than 2,000. But it is not built on account of local business, but at the request of the custom-house authorities there. Officers are stationed day and night at the end of the bridge, where a good deal of travel takes place between the United States and Canada.

Hamilton public building—alterations and improvements for inland revenue purposes, $5,000.

Mr. BRUCE. Are these improvements to be made on the new property that has been recently acquired ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Windsor public building—repairs, improvements, &c., $1,300.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is practically for new letter-boxes.

Mr. BLAIN. Are they put in by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. All by tender.

Picton public building—to complete, $1,000.

Mr. ALCORN. Could the minister say what work has been done on this building, if any ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was for levelling, sodding and a sidewalk. The retaining wall is to be paid out of this. This will complete the whole work.

Mr. ALCORN. The laying of this sidewalk is a very small affair, and the levelling and sodding amount to next to nothing. The whole job could not cost $200, but I see the appropriation is $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The sidewalk, including the excavation and the levelling, cost $460.

Mr. ALCORN. There was no excavation. only a little sand had fallen in, that is all. Was this part of the original contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, this was not done by contract, it was done by some of the local authorities, at so much per foot.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). How much per foot was paid for it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief architect thinks it was eighteen cents a foot.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Is not that an extraordinary price ? There is hardly a town in Canada pays more than ten or twelve cents a foot for a concrete sidewalk.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend had better look at the city of Ottawa and see what they are paying. I think he will find that they are paying over eighteen cents.

Mr. ALCORN. Was there any tender for this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, not exactly. Prices were asked for. As this is only to pay a balance due, I have not got the detailed information, but I can get it for the hon. gentleman.

Mr. ALCORN. This cannot possibly be the balance due on the work the minister mentions. I would not consider the whole work was worth more than $200.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will give my hon. friend a memorandum, and he can see what it is.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I think this is a justification for the argument which was set up here a while ago, that asking for prices from contractors is not quite satisfactory. There is nothing like public tender. Asking for prices leaves an opening for extortionate charges, and I am sure the hon. minister must admit that 18 cents a foot for this work is entirely too much. It is 50 per cent higher than is paid in almost any town in Canada, and it must be very unsatisfactory to the people of Picton, who are having this work done. They are charged $400 odd for work which might have been done for two-thirds of the amount.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I agree with my hon. friend that up west they have been getting these sidewalks built for an average of from 12 to 14 cents a foot, but down here it seems to be more expensive. I was rather surprised to notice a few days ago that in the city of Ottawa they are paying 18 cents a foot. However, I will get my hon. friend the information he asks.

Mr. ALCORN. I am quite sure the town has not paid nearly that price for a large amount of similar walks laid down during the past couple of years.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Then I must be mistaken, because I am sure the chief architect would not, unless some misrepresentation was made, pass an account which exceeded the municipal price.

Ottawa departmental buildings—new elevator for west block, $6,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. Who is putting that in ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This will be let by contract.

Toronto drill hall and armouries—contribution towards paving Armoury street with brick and laying a concrete sidewalk on University street, $2,645.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We intend to make a contract for these improvements.

Toronto military buildings—magazine, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These magazines are being erected at the request of the Militia Department.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this to be constructed on the old ordinance reserve land at the west end ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would not like to speak with certainty, but I think so.

London military buildings—magazine, $3,000.

Mr. GILMOUR. Is that to be built on Carling Heights ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I expect it will be built on Carling Heights.

Mr. GILMOUR. Will this $3,000 finish the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These sums are put in at the request of the Militia Department, which says that $3,000 will be the cost of these magazines.

Ottawa public buildings—new coal shed, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand that as a result of the improvements which are going on, the property which has been used for this purpose has been confiscated. It will be necessary to build a coal shed somewhere on the canal basin for our supply of coal. It will be built on our own land.

Mr. CLARKE. Will it be built of cut stone ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief architect thinks we ought to build it of stone. Perhaps it would last longer, but I do not think it will be cut stone.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Would it not be better to put this building up in cement blocks ? It will be much cheaper than stone, and it will be quite as substantial. If you had a sample building in Ottawa, it would be an advertisement for what is becoming a very important industry in this country. They are manufacturing cement in Ottawa, and it would be well for the government to put up a building of cement blocks.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am very much in favour of cement work. It is getting to be a very important local industry, and I shall certainly have the chief architect ask for a report in regard to the price of cement. If it is as satisfactory and cheaper than stone, I would be very glad to adopt it.

Mr. TAYLOR. Why is it necessary to have a coal shed at all ? I thought the government purchased all the coal supplies by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. But we must have some place to store the coal. We use between 6,000 and 8,000 tons, and we must store it somewhere.

Mr. TAYLOR. Why do you not require the contractor to deliver it as needed, and to store it until delivered ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We would pay a great deal more for it. It is brought in by water, stored in our own sheds without any cost either to the contractor or to ourselves, and delivered by the contractor from time to time as wanted.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Would it not be rather unwise for the hon. minister to advocate the use of any particular cement stone until it has been thoroughly tested in this country ? I do not think we have had enough practical experience of it to warrant its being used even upon coal sheds.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry my hon. friend (Mr. Lefurgey) lives so far back in the country that he is not aware of the value of cement for building purposes. In our part of the country we have been using it for years, and we find it very satisfactory.

Mr. CLARKE. We have two cement buildings on the Toronto exhibition grounds, and I would invite the hon. minister, if he has not seen these buildings, and if he can spare the time, to go out and see them.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I was through them, and I was very much impressed with them.

Mr. CLARKE. They are using cement for curbing and other purposes that it was not thought possible to use it for a few years ago. There is a splendid proposition across the river in Hull, where the finest quality of cement will be turned out. I think the House will strongly support the hon. minister in putting up a building with this cement. It will be an object lesson, and it will give a satisfactory opportunity of testing it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is better cement at Owen Sound.

Mr. CLARKE. You can put up the public building at Owen Sound in cement. I certainly think that there should be some public building erected of cement, because this country is going to develop a great business in the production of cement, and if the government will put up one building in cement, it would be an object lesson.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am quite serious in regard to this matter. I will ask for a special report from the chief architect's department.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). For the information of my hon. friend from Prince Edward Island (Mr. Lefurgey), I would say that Owen Sound is the original home of the cement industry in Canada, and that some of the finest residences that we have in Owen Sound are built of cement blocks. They are in appearance handsomer than stone, and certainly they are substantial. They stand our climate excellently, and are very durable. I hope the hon. minister, when he is in Owen Sound, will take a look at some of these buildings, and I can assure him that there is nothing in stone that can compare with them.

Mr. BLAIN. Do I understand the minister to say that the department purchases a large quantity of coal and stores it away ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. You have to buy coal in Ottawa when it can be carried by water. We receive it in the coal shed, and then the contractor delivers is as it is wanted by the different buildings. It would cost a good deal more unless we had some place where we could store a large quantity.

Ottawa post office and customs-house—improvements, $16,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this work to be done by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work has all been done under the supervision of the officers of the department, and by the men in the employ of the department.

Mr. BLAIN. Do I understand the minister to say that the work has been done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The work has not been done. The estimated cost of this work is a little over $15,000, composed of a number of small items. it is done under the supervision of our own officers.

Kingston Royal Military College—stable, $5,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. Will this be let by tender?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. I questioned the estimate of the Militia Department, but they told me they could get the kind of stable they wanted for this sum.

Sarnia—public building (revote), $13,800.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the explanation of this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has already been voted, but the work was not completed in time to pay it before the end of the fiscal year.

Mr. BLAIN. Was it let by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. The contract was $62,000, and this money is to pay the contractor.

Toronto examining warehouse—addition to, $25,000.

Mr. CLARKE. What kind of an addition will be erected ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to build an addition to the warehouse 70 feet by 44, and four stories high. The estimate of the chief architect is $30,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Of course, the work will be let by tender ?

Cobourg—improvements, $5,000.

Mr. ALCORN. What is this money for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for changes and improvements in the Cobourg post office. The hon. gentleman knows that this is a building which did not receive any attention for a long time, and it had fallen into a bad state of repair. This will cover the total cost of the work.

Mr. CLARKE. Is it to be done by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Kingston—barracks for Royal Canadian Field Artillery, $25,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This makes provision for the construction of new barracks at Kingston, with the understanding that the money will not be spent until after the sale of the present barracks which are reported to be unfit for occupation, owing to the impossibility of affording proper drainage. The Tête du Pont barracks are to be disposed of for the benefit of the crown.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is the minister going to dispose of the site of the Tête du Pont barracks ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am taking this vote on that condition.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Where are the new barracks to be located ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think the city offers a new site, and speaking from memory, it is on the present fair grounds, which is said to be very suitable. I estimate that the present property will bring us $40,000 or $50,000, so that the whole change can be made at a cost of some $40,000 or $50,000 to the country. However, I will ask the Minister of Militia to give further information when his estimates are under consideration.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the total cost of the building to be ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Do you mean the total cost to the country ?

Mr. CLARKE. That is what we are interested in.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand it will be $40,000 or $50,000. The total cost of the work would be three times that, including the site and so on.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Fifty thousand dollars would not commence to erect a barracks with the necessary buildings, and so on. It is a reflection on Canada that new barracks have not been provided in Kingston years ago. The present barracks have no sanitary arrangements ; they are old buildings some of them dating from the time of Frontenac. The minister should be very careful about these plans, and he should have them examined critically by more than one authority before adopting them. Does the hon. gentleman intend to restore old Fort Henry, so as to make it habitable, or at least presentable ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no appropriation for that purpose at present.

Mr. CLARKE. This building is costing between $45,000 and $50,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, it is costing between $100,000 and $150,000. I am taking this vote on the condition that the arrangement is carried out. I said that the city would present a valuable site, the old exhibition grounds, and the present barracks are to be sold, and, I understand that the difference between the value of that and the total cost will be $45,000 or $50,000. We are doing this, as hon. gentlemen know, at the request of the Militia and Defence Department.

Hawkesbury—public building, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is quite a prosperous place. The last census gives its population as over 4,000. We have not been able to lease or rent any accommodation for the post office, and the people have sent in a large petition for a building. We propose to erect one costing $6,000 or $8,000. The place is a large manufacturing place and the revenue is very considerable.

Mr. BLAIN. What about the site.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The site will be very cheap.

Ottawa public buildings—paving front of parliament building, tar macadam, $6,900.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is an item in which all the members of the House are very much interested. I think the matter has been brought up in the House at different times, and strong representations have been made as to the disagreeableness of the dust. We think that may be overcome by having the ground paved with asphalt or tar macadam. We have taken a vote for the cheaper pavement, tar macadam.

Wingham—public building, $8,000.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Give us some information about this building. Wingham is a very important town doing a good business.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER (speaking from the floor, Mr. Holmes in the Chair). I will take the minister's place, if any information is necessary in regard to the Wingham building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The population of Wingham is 2,392, the postal revenue $4,507 and the customs revenue $6,449.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). In what riding is Wingham ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In the riding of the chairman of the committee.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I would just say to the members of the committee that Wingham is one of the best commercial centres west of the city of Toronto.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Chiefly Tory, isn't it ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I will come to that. It is one of the best commercial distributing centres. It is served by two branches of the Grand Trunk Railway and one branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway. We have no less than six passenger trains leaving and six arriving each day, in addition to freight trains. It is also a large manufacturing centre. It has a large foundry and stove factory. It has several woodworking factories, furnishing material for house building. It is also one of the largest furniture manufacturing centres in the Dominion of Canada, employing in that industry between 300 and 400 hands. There are four furniture factories, though they are now combined under the furniture syndicate of Ontario. We have also very fine buildings, including three banks. It is one of the prettiest towns that any of you ever saw. Our streets are veritable avenues, lined with beautiful maple trees. We have no less than fourteen miles of granolithic sidewolks, for which we paid $25,000.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). How many hotels in the town ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I am not so much interested in the hotels as I am in the general welfare of the town.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). To whom does the hon. gentleman assign that work in his campaign ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I get very little support from the hotels on the Tory side. If I were asking for this on political grounds, it would be different ; but the town has only one public building. Unfortunately for themselves and the welfare of the country, a majority of the people of Wingham vote against me ; but nevertheless, I am not going to forget them in the days of their necessity, and I am asking for a post office, not for any political or personal purpose but because the town needs a public building.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Has the Deputy Speaker purchased a site yet ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I will come to the site. I have been serving my party here for the last seventeen years, and I may say that if this grant is given it will be the first public money that has ever gone into East Huron since the first tree began to grow there.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). You had the rake-off in some other way.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Therefore I do not ask it for political reasons ; I ask it because we need it. The present post office is situated in an inconvenient locality, and it is not adapted for post office purposes. For the year 1901-2 the postal revenues amounted to $4,500 ; for the year ending the 30th of June, 1903, we collected $4,806. In addition to that the customs collections for 1901-2 were $6,500 and for 1902-3, $9,303 ; and so far this year they amount to $1,000 a month. When a town of that size and character demands a post office, I do not think there is a single man on the opposition benches who will say nay. I leave it in their hands. With regard to the site, we have several available. I do not think the site is going to be very dear, though I would not like to mention any sum. There is a site in view which I think will be selected if the owner is willing to sell it at a reasonable price. If not, the council will probably look elsewhere. I may say that this vote is only an instalment. To put up a building that would be in keeping with the other buildings that will surround it, would involve an expenditure of from $16,000 to $20,000. The bank of Hamilton stands on one corner, a magnificent structure, and the Dominion bank has fitted up a building across the street from it in a style that is equalled by very few banks in the city of Toronto. It is a brick building, which the bank has rented for twenty-five years. These bank buildings are covered with slate. On the other corners there are splendid buildings, and we want the government to erect a building that will be in keeping with them. We take a pride in keeping our town as clean and neat as possible, and if any of you visit it, you will come away with the impression that it is one of the prettiest and neatest towns west of the city of Toronto.

Mr. RICHARDSON. We have listened with some interest to the very eloquent address of the Deputy Speaker regarding the town of Wingham. I may say that we have in the constituency of Grey three towns that can claim everything that has been said on behalf of the town of Wingham, and in some cases a good deal more. Something has already been said about the town of Owen Sound. I doubt if there is in the whole of Canada a town of its population, with such important manufacturing industries and with such a great commerce, that has not had one dollar of public money expended in it for public buildings. Then I come south to the town of Durham. I asked last year for a public building there. It is a thriving and prosperous town, with a population of double that of some towns that are getting handsome buildings. And a little further west of Durham we have the town of Hanover which has no less than four furniture factories and other manufactories as well, yet it has never had a dollar of public money expended in it for public buildings or for any other purpose. While lake ports claim a good deal for their harbours, or docks, or elevators, or dredging, inland towns like Durham and Hanover have no claims of that kind, and therefore no public money is expended in them. I would again ask that they should have some fair consideration. In some cases too much money is expended on large ornamental and expensive buildings for post office and custom-house purposes to the detriment of other smaller places. The hon. member for North Grey (Mr. Thomson) has already spoken for Owen Sound. I doubt if there is any town of its size in the whole of Canada which has been so neglected as it has been in regard to public buildings.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). What is this building in Wingham to cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Between $20,000 and $25,000.

Mr. BENNETT. The minister will remember that he is breaking the rule he has laid down. There is already a public building in that constituency at Goderich.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Goderich is thirty-five miles away.

Mr. BENNETT. The minister should admit the principle that their votes are all based on political expediency and necessity.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I find that the members of the government are being provided with public buildings in their own constituencies. The Minister of Customs has a building at Brantford, the Minister of Public Works at Woodstock and the Deputy Speaker at Wingham. I do not know how they have come to side-track the Postmaster General. I would again point out the inconsistency of erecting a public building in a place of 2,200 inhabitants, with a revenue of about $4,000 or $5,000, while no public building is erected in the county town of Grey, with a population of 10,000 and a revenue of $10,000.

Mr. MACLAREN (Perth). I would ask the hon. minister if he has received any application for a public building from the town of Listowel? Listowel is not very far from Wingham, and is one of the most important towns in that part of the country. If Wingham and other towns are to get favours of this kind, Listowel should have some assistance in the way of a public building; a post office and custom-house are badly needed. It is a large shipping and manufacturing centre, and I would like to see something done for Listowel.

Mr. TAYLOR. I think it is a wilful waste of public money to spend such a large sum as $20,000 or $25,000 in building a post office in a small town containing 2,000 or 2,500 population, which has no prospect of becoming a very large town. This is an inland town, and a post office costing $10,000 would be quite sufficient. When the Conservative government was in power I asked for a public building in my town, which is a large manufacturing town, and a post office was built costing $10,000 or $12,000 at the outside. The town gave the site and the government put up a building at that price. To spend $20,000 or $25,000 in a little village like Wingham is a wilful waste of public money. The government should establish a rule that unless there is a population of a certain number and a revenue of a certain amount the town has no claim at all. In the case of a frontier city like Toronto or Montreal we should, in the interests of the country, make our buildings respectable buildings, but to meet all the requirements of a post office building, which is all that is needed at Wingham, a building costing $8,000 or $10,000 would give all the accommodation required.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Listowel has a revenue of $4,496.77 and Wingham a revenue of $4,507—a difference in the revenue of about nine dollars.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I have a statement from the Post Office Department showing the statistics for Wingham for this year. It is as follows:

Gross revenue	$ 4,805 85
Number of money orders	2,066
Amount of money orders	$22,411 00
Number of money orders paid	1,237
Amount of money orders paid	$20,157 00
Amount of postal notes	2,116 00
Customs in 1902	6,900 00
Customs in 1902-3	9,300 00

And during the last three months, $1,000 per month.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I might say that Listowel is a magnificent town, equally entitled to a post office, and I would be glad if the minister could see his way clear to gratify the request of my hon. friend from North Perth (Mr. MacLaren).

Mr. CLARKE. I had the pleasure of visiting Listowel the other day in company with the hon. member for North Perth (Mr. MacLaren), and I was delighted with my visit. It is a right smart town, the very centre of the great cheese industry. Experts in the cheese business come from the old country to visit its great cheese market very frequently. It is growing steadily, it has many fine business establishments, a great many beautiful private residences, and is in fact a thoroughly modern up-to-date town. Everything that has been said for Wingham can also be said for Listowel. If there should be a public building in Wingham, Listowel should stand a good chance also. It is a great manufacturing centre in a fine agricultural district, with large cheese, butter and other products. I strongly support the proposition of the hon. member for North Perth (Mr. MacLaren) that something should be done in this case.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I agree with the representations made as to the importance of Listowel. It is near my own home and I know it well. We are proud of Listowel. I had not thought particularly before of the matter to which my hon. friend from North Grey (Mr. Thomson) drew my attention, but I think he will find there is not very much party politics in this list of public buildings. If he will run his eye over the list, I think he will find that very little favour has been shown to the Liberal constituencies to the neglect of the others.

Mr. TAYLOR. You are bribing the others.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I think the applications have been considered very fairly. Going over the list, I think any impartial man would be surprised to see how many strong Conservative towns represented in this House by Conservatives are receiving post offices or other public works. I shall be glad when I have an opportunity, to remember the requirements of Listowel.

Mr. BENNETT. Every new public work in this list is for a riding represented by a Liberal in this House.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Who is the Liberal member representing Stratford?

Mr. BENNETT. There is no new public building there.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. An armoury. I was speaking of the list of post offices.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I am going to make a strong appeal on behalf of Meaford which has been added to the constituency of North Grey. Here is a splendid town, situated in my constituency as at present constituted which, I think, should have a special claim. It has a population of 1,916, and a postal revenue of $3,199, while the amount paid in post office orders is $26,000. It is one of the most important towns on Georgian bay and is the centre of a splendid agricultural district. Its inhabitants are a fine, industrious class. The town has a splendid harbour and I am glad to say, the government have done something to improve it of late years. I would make a special appeal to the Minister of Public Works for a building for Meaford.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think we are dealing very liberally with the harbour of Meaford and my hon. friend (Mr. Thomson, Grey) must give some of the inland people a chance. I know Meaford is a fine growing town, and after some of the inland towns have been provided for, I hope we shall be able to meet the requirements of Meaford.

Stratford—armoury, $10,000.

Mr. BLAIN. What is to be the cost of this building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About the same as the others.

Woodstock—armoury, $10,000.

Mr. BLAIN. What is to be the total cost of this building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About $25,000—the same as the others, Stratford, Sherbrooke, &c.

Mr. BLAIN. Has the site been purchased ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I think the county council will contribute to the site. They have communicated their intention of doing so. There is a first-class regiment there of eight companies.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). In Woodstock, or in the county ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In and around Woodstock.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I would point out to the minister what was incidentally touched on before, that in centres like Stratford, and Woodstock too the militia is growing. In a short time Stratford will have a city battalion of its own, and, likely a battery of its own. Woodstock should have cavalry, being in the centre of a fine agricultural country where many people own horses. I think the minister would do well in preparing the plans, to provide, as far as possible, for housing the artillery, and for storing the saddlery in case cavalry units should be formed.

Mr. BLAIN. Do I understand the county council will furnish the site in Woodstock. If this is so, who furnishes it in Stratford ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What I said was that we had had a communication from Woodstock asking with regard to the plans, showing the local interest in the militia there. The county council, irrespective of politics, are anxious to contribute something, as they do from time to time, in the payment of the militia.

Public works—chargeable to income—Manitoba—Winnipeg—district military stores building, $10,000.

Mr. PUTTEE. Where is this building to be erected ? At Fort Osborne ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to provide for the erection of a building for military stores, district No. 10, Winnipeg, to contain (A) the mobilization stores for troops of the province of Manitoba, and (B) quarters for the foreman of stores and district offices This is to be constructed at the request of the Department of Militia and Defence.

Winnipeg—new immigration building and postal station, $60,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to provide a new immigration building for the reception of immigrants in the city of Winnipeg. It will contain also Dominion land offices and accommodation for the Post Office Department for sorting mails, &c. The intention is to erect this building near the Canadian Pacific Railway station. This is represented by the Department of the Interior to be a matter of most urgent necessity. They are suffering now for want of accommodation in this respect.

Mr. McCREARY. Is this building intended to take the place entirely of the present immigration hall ? Is the present immigration hall to be dispensed with ? If so, this amount is entirely inadequate.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say to my hon. friend that we are adopting a scheme submitted by the imperial authorities. The total cost of this building is $125,000.

Mr. McCREARY. The present immigration hall is about 60 feet by 250 feet in length, three stories high. This $60,000 will not build a building one-half that size.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). By what department has the plan of this building been prepared ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. By the Department of the Interior.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The present building, as any one knows who has visited Winnipeg and seen it, is unfit for the purpose to which it is assigned. The compartments in which the immigrants have to sleep are placed around the sides of the wall, and are much like stables. In these narrow compartments the immigrants and their children have to sleep and dress. There is no ventilation, and very little light. I trust that in the plans that are being prepared, some attention will be paid to these requirements. The present immigration hall is situated on a low flat spot, which is very muddy in wet weather. Some attention should be paid to the sanitary condition of the buildings.

Mr. McCREARY. The building the hon. member speaks of is merely for the temporary detention of immigrants on their way through. They remain over night and pass on the next morning. This new building should not be so close to the station, but should be one or two blocks removed.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. Hughes) says is quite correct, that every provision should be made in the form of bath rooms, closets and that sort of thing, for the sanitary welfare of the immigrants.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). Is it the intention to retain the old buildings and to make a separation between the immigrants, some of them being of an inferior class ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understood that in the plans submitted it was the intention to retain only the hospital building.

Winnipeg—addition to public building, $40,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If there is any place in Canada which requires increased accommodation frequently it is the post office at Winnipeg. The chief architect has reported plans for building two additional stories, a new stairway and an elevator, in the Winnipeg public building, at a probable cost of $65,000.

Mr. PUTTEE. Will you be able to start on this work at once ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The plans are being prepared, and as soon as this vote is given, instructions will be given to proceed at once.

Winnipeg military buildings—quarters for non-commissioned officers including guard-room, &c., $6,000.

Winnipeg military buildings—magazine, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Does the Minister of Militia and Defence know where this magazine is to be situated in Winnipeg ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I cannot give the exact point, it is near the city of Winnipeg. I may say with regard to these three votes at Winnipeg that that city is becoming an important depot, a point at which military stores must be placed. At present we have no suitable buildings there for that purpose, and it is absolutely necessary, as the country is filling up, and if we are to pretend to defend it, or to assist the civil power, that we must be in a position to do so. These buildings are being constructed for the purpose of holding military stores which will be sent west. As to the magazine, I cannot give the exact location, but it is at or near the city of Winnipeg. The previous item of $6,000 is for the accommodation of non-commissioned officers who are now living, some of them in rented houses ; and as we have plenty of ground, it is thought much better to build our own houses for these men.

Mr. TAYLOR. As this is a military item I want to ask the Minister of Militia a question relating to the item of $25,000 for the barracks of the Royal Canadian Field Artillery at Kingston. I want to ask if there is in that appropriation an amount included for repairing the martello towers around the harbour at Kingston? They were dismantled by storms two or three years ago, and have been allowed to fall into disrepair. At Fort Henry also the walls are tumbling down, and everything is becoming dilapidated. I think in the interest of the country these martello towers should be kept in a first-class state of repair. I drew the attention of the department to it last year, and fully expected that provision would be made this year for taking proper care of that property.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. There is a vote for general repairs out of which a sum might be taken for the purpose the hon. gentleman mentions. I quite agree that these repairs should be made, unfortunately, we have not had money to do it with. With respect to this vote of $25,000 at Kingston, I would like to explain to the committee that the city of Kingston has offered the government a block of land, some twenty-five acres, used now for exhibition purposes. The city offers that as a free gift to the government in the event of our wishing to construct new barracks. The present barracks are found to be unsanitary, and productive of fever. There appears to be some difficulty in disposing of the sewage of the city in such a way that it will not be a nuisance to these barracks. It is intended to sell the property there and realize what money we may, and to construct a new barracks probably on this land, although I may say that at this moment the question is being considered of restoring the Fort Henry property. I know that the deputy minister who has been there and has examined the property thinks that we might occupy that with great advantage. I spoke to General Lord Dundonald the other day about it, and he is very much inclined to that view, so that it is possible that this vote may not be used. I think it is only fair to the committee to make this statement as to what is going on.

Mr. TAYLOR. I fully agree with the view of the hon. minister, because the government have any quantity of land east of Fort Henry, and it will be a better site than that in the city.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think so, too.

Mr. TAYLOR. If you want a healthy location, you have it at Fort Henry and upon the ground east of it, along the river front.

Mr. ALCORN. In regard to this group of items, will these buildings be erected by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, except the repairs to the immigration building.

North-west Territories—Edmonton jail—(revote, $5,000), $35,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is under contract.

Prince Albert court-house and post office, $10,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is that the total amount ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is being erected on the recommendation of the Department of Justice, and it is a necessity there.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). As soon as the territories get provincial autonomy the new provinces will erect their own court-houses. A post office is certainly necessary there, but I think the court-house part of it might be reconsidered, as it is a provincial more than a Dominion building. It is quite evident that the hon. minister does not intend to give the territories provincial autonomy.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not say that. So long as the territories are under the jurisdiction of the Dominion, and as the country is filling up very fast, we must of necessity meet their requirements. I have not the total cost of this building.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). It looks as if it was going to be one building—a court-house and a post office.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). If a province is created there this building will have to be handed over to the province as a court-house, or else retained and used for some other purpose.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Even if it is, at an early day more space will be required at that place.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Certainly.

Moose Jaw—public building, $5,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. What is this building for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A post office. We will have to make some provision here, as there is a rapidly increasing population at Moose Jaw. I understand that the post office receipts increased by over a thousand dollars last season and they will have increased this season probably by a very considerable amount.

Mr. TAYLOR. How expensive a building are you going to put up ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This building will cost between $15,000 and $20,000 ; but in view of the rapidly growing population, I will have to ask the House to give me sufficient latitude to enable me to reconsider the matter.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Has Moose Jaw no public building at all ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. The customs receipts increased by $2,000 between 1901 and 1902. When I get a full report from the officers, I propose to recommend the erection of a building suitable to that growing place.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). This is the headquarters of the Pasqua branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway, although it really branches off at the junction a few miles down. I think this is a very small building for a town like Moose Jaw.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will take that into consideration.

Barracks for permanent corps (Strathcona Horse), $10,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Where is that to be located ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not prepared to say. The Militia Department made representations that it is desirable to erect a barracks at some place in the North-west Territories.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is it to be in Edmonton or in Strathcona ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Some representations were made that Calgary would be a good point, but no decision has been come to in regard to that. It depends on the representations made by the military authorities.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is there going to be an increase in the permanent force ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes, by about 100 men.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Are you going to retain the police force in the same region ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The police force is gradually being moved to the northward, and as it is moved forward the militia will take its place in the southern portions of the territories. The police will vacate the barracks at Calgary. It is intended to establish a new militia depot at Calgary, and the police will be moved northward from Calgary to Edmonton. The police will transfer, I expect, their accommodation at Calgary to the new military depot, and it is probable that this accommodation will be quite sufficient.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Oh, no; not for a hundred men.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Well, for eighty men. It is sufficient at any rate for a good start. Perhaps it would not be inopportune to say now that the depot which is to be established in the west will perpetuate the name and fame of the Strathcona Horse. All the contingents which served in South Africa have their names preserved in different branches of the permanent force, except that of Lord Strathcona. It was thought fitting that the memory of this one should be perpetuated, and it is proposed to call this one the Strathcona Horse.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I think this is very proper. There is at present a squadron of Canadian Mounted Rifles in Winnipeg.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes, they are called the Mounted Rifles.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Officers training for certificates for the mounted corps, can obtain them either in Winnipeg or Calgary.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Nelson public building—to complete, $18,200.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete the contract. The total cost is $84,230.60.

Rossland—public building to complete, $8,000.

Mr. BENNETT. When I was there last fall, the building was about to be occupied and appeared to be completed.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to pay the contractor for fittings for electric light, &c.

Mr. BENNETT. What was the total cost.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $76,666.

Mr. BLAIN. The Minister of Public Works stated last year that the work was under contract for $49,000, and now we are told that it has cost over $76,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was the contract price for the building, but the cost of the site, fittings, furniture, letter boxes, heating, electric light, &c. had to be added to that.

Vancouver—public building, $60,000.

Mr. BENNETT. What will the total cost of this be?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It will probably cost in round figures $100,000. The city is growing very fast and accommodation to about that extent is required. We are now paying very heavy rentals and I think it is a good business proposition to have all our offices in one building in Vancouver.

Mr. BLAIN. Last year we had a statement that a certain building would cost $49,000, but we now find that it has cost over $80,000. Is the minister giving us the same kind of an estimate with regard to this building?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I must be fair to the late Minister of Public Works, and state, that in that case he gave the contract price. If he were asked about the site and so on he would have given the information. I have stated on several occasions to-day, and I repeat that my desire is to state to parliament the maximum estimated cost in each case. I have said that if after we advertised for tenders it was found that the cost would be considerably more than I stated, I would not go on with the work before coming back to parliament.

Mr. BLAIN. What does the minister mean by saying that the Vancouver building will cost $100,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Plans have not been prepared for that building, but I consider that a building suitable to the requirements of a growing city like Vancouver will cost about $100,000. If it shall be found to cost very much more than that, I would feel that I should come back to parliament.

Mr. BLAIN. Does the Minister mean that $100,000 will include everything?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, no. I understood the hon. gentleman to ask the cost of the building. The total cost including the site and everything will be more than that. I will not ask parliament for another vote for this until I give full information.

Mr. BLAIN. That is where the misleading part of it comes in. The minister should give us a plain matter of fact statement as to what the total cost to the country will be. Every one knows that a building in this country has to be heated and equipped. If that equipment costs about as much as the building itself, the public are misled.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In almost every case, I have endeavoured to give a fair estimate of the total expenditure. This is the first instance to-day in which we have not sufficient information to give that estimate, and I say that if it exceeds greatly the amount I have stated, I will not go on with the building until I inform parliament what the estimate is. In almost every case I mentioned to-day, I have included the total cost.

Rossland armoury, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These buildings in British Columbia will cost about $10,000 if built in wood, and $15,000 if built in brick. The Rossland building is expected to cost not more than $15,000.

Mr. BENNETT. How many companies are in the town of Rossland ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think only two.

Mr. ALCORN. With regard to these public buildings in British Columbia, will tenders be advertised for, and will the work be given to the lowest tenderer ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That has been done in the case of all the works under construction. The two new works will be let by tender and contract.

Yukon Territory—White Horse public buildings—post office and customs fittings, &c., $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete post office and provide fittings.

Mr. BENNETT. What is the total cost of the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not the details here, but the deputy minister tells me from memory that its total cost is $18,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Is it brick or frame ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A wooden building.

Rents—Dominion public buildings, $13,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in addition to the vote in the main estimates.

Mr. ALCORN. Has the minister any objection to placing before the committee a statement showing the various buildings rented in Ottawa, and the rents paid ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A return giving that information was brought down this session. If the hon. gentleman does not find it in the office and will let me know, I shall be glad to bring him a duplicate.

Some resolutions reported.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. TAYLOR. What will be the business to-morrow ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I expect that we shall go on with the Public Works estimates at least part of the day, perhaps all day.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 10.55 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, October 6, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

TREADGOLD COMMISSION.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). I would like to inquire from the government whether or not any report has yet been received from the commissioners who were appointed to investigate certain matters in connection with the Treadgold and other concessions in the Yukon ? If the report has not been received, I would like to inquire whether or not the evidence has been received, and in either case I would like to know the intention of the government as to printing that evidence in full.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS Hon. James Sutherland). The right hon. the Prime Minister is not at present in the House, but I will mention the matter to him, and my hon. friend might renew his question when he is present.

SUPPLY—MAIL SERVICE AT PICTON.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock) moved that the House go again into Committee of Supply.

Mr. G. O. ALCORN (Prince Edward). Before the House goes into Committee of Supply, I desire to call the attention of the hon. the Postmaster General to the very unsatisfactory condition of affairs at Picton post office. The mails for Picton are delivered from the Grand Trunk Railway over the Central Ontario Railway. The trains over this railway arrive very irregularly, and in consequence the mails are not delivered in the post office until long after the proper hour. The railway company carries the mail on the same train that they use for shunting and handling all the freight at the stations along the line, so that its arrival at Picton is very irregular. While the railway company is largely to blame, the staff of the post office is also highly inefficient, and the time occupied by them in the sorting and distribution of the mails is utterly unreasonable. In fact the staff has never been an efficient staff. The postmaster has had no clerical training and the hands in the office have been boys, also without training. With the exception of one young man named Belch, there has never been a really efficient or competent official in that post office under this Government. I hope the Postmaster General will find means to remedy this evil, which is a cause of inconvenience to all of the inhabitants of Picton. Mails which should be delivered at 9 a.m. o'clock, or 9.30 a.m. at the outside, are frequently not delivered until 11 o'clock, and a similar state of affairs exists in the afternoon.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am sorry to learn from my hon. friend (Mr. Alcorn) that any cause for complaint exists, and I will take all possible means to remedy any evil. As to the first portion of the hon. gentleman's complaint, that mail trains are used for handling local freight as well as for handling passengers, I fear the remedy is beyond the control of the government. As to any inefficiency on the part of the post office staff, that is a matter for which the government is responsible, and if this condition should continue it would be a ground of complaint against the government. Therefore, I assure my hon. friend that any ground of complaint of that kind will cease at the earliest possible moment. As to the former ground of complaint, I will bring that matter to the attention of the railway in question and ascertain whether it would be possible for them to improve their methods.

AMERICAN COASTING LAWS.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. William Paterson). I wish for a few minutes to allude to a question on which some difference of opinion occurred in the House the other day, and which I think it is desirable to have cleared up. I refer to the differences of opinion between the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) and the right hon. Prime Minister and myself with reference to the bonding privilege and coasting laws as exercised by the United States. It will be remembered that the Prime Minister thought that goods could not be shipped from one point or place in the United States to another American port or place except in American vessels. The hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) thought he was wrong in that, and that it might be shipped in Canadian vessels as well as in American vessels. On that occasion I read the law of the United States, which is :

> Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled: That no merchandise shall be transported by water under penalty of forfeiture thereof from one part of the United States either directly or via a foreign port or for any part of the voyage in any other vessel than a vessel of the United States.

The leader of the opposition on that occasion said it would depend upon what interpretation might be put upon the word 'voyage,' and asked if there had been any decisions of the Supreme Court in that case. I said I was not aware, that the commissioner of the department was looking to see. Well, the commissioner has not been able to find any decisions. But we have here the customs regulations of the United States, the instructions given to their officers by the Treasury Department, which they are to carry out in this respect, and they are set forth in article 707 :

> Merchandise in transit from one port or place within the territory of the United States to another by a route a part of which is by land carriage through the Dominion of Canada, and a part by the great lakes and the rivers connecting the same, or by the River St. Lawrence, may be transported by water in American vessels only from ports on the northern frontier of the United States to ports on the Canadian frontier for transhipment to railway cars, from points on the Canadian frontier at the termini of railway transportation, to ports on the northern frontier of the United States.

It is as the Customs Department thought, and as the Prime Minister thought; it is absolutely forbidden by their statute as interpreted by their customs regulations, to carry goods otherwise than in American vessels from one American port to another. However, while the department felt sure, it did not like to speak too positively, and we thought we would find out positively how this matter stood, and for that reason the Commissioner of Customs wired Mr. Drewitt, who is Canadian Customs Officer at Depot Harbour, on October 1st, 1903 :

> Regarding freight originating in Boston destined for Duluth, carried by railway to Depot Harbour, will American officer allow this to be carried from Depot Harbour to Duluth in British vessel, wire reply.

The reply is as follows :

> Depot Harbour, Ont., October, 1903.
>
> To John McDougald,
> Commissioner of Customs,
> Ottawa.
>
> American customs officer will not allow freight originating in Boston destined for Duluth to be carried in British vessels from Depot Harbour to Duluth.
> (Sgd.) F. J. DREWITT.

While that has reference to package freight, we wanted to be sure. It was suggested then that they might allow it to be carried for export, that grain originating at Duluth or Chicago might be sent to Liverpool via Boston. I said at the time that I did not think that could be done. But I did not wish to speak too positively, and in order to find out that point positively, the commissioner, on the 1st of October, wired Mr. Drewitt, the customs officer at Depot Harbour, Ontario, as follows :

> Regarding American wheat from Duluth to Liverpool transported by railway from Depot Harbour to Boston, will American officer allow this wheat to be carried in British vessel from Duluth to Depot Harbour ? Wire reply.

This is the reply :

> Depot Harbour, October, 1903.
> To John McDougald,
> Commissioner of Customs,
> Ottawa.
> American customs officer will not allow American wheat from Duluth consigned to Liverpool via Depot Harbour and Boston to be carried on other than American vessels.

(Sgd.) F. J. DREWITT,
Customs Officer.

Now, I think that places the question in such a clear light before the House, that there can be no further doubt, and I have read these telegrams thinking they might be useful to the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman has made a portion of that matter fairly clear, but there is one aspect of it which he has not made clearer than it was before, and as to which I do not think his references have any application. It is perfectly clear, notwithstanding what the hon. gentleman has said that we can bring grain or any other freight capable of being stored in an elevator, from Duluth or Chicago to Depot Harbour, consigned to Depot Harbour, and store it in an elevator there; then, after it has been so stored, we can route it thence either by Boston or by any port in Canada. But I would like to point out to the Minister of Customs that what the right hon. gentleman said in the course of the debate to which he has made reference, is something very different from that which the Minister of Customs has placed before the House to-day. Here is the language of the right hon. gentleman to be found on pages 12647 and 12648 of 'Hansard':

> We would have to manag a fleet of steamers. There is something more. The fleet maintained on the lakes for the purpose of supplying traffic to the Canada Atlantic Railway is composed in part of American bottoms. It would be impossible to have the trade we have to-day unless it was carried in American bottoms. We can carry Canadian freight in Canadian bottoms, but you cannot take freight at Duluth, Chicago or Milwaukee or any of the western ports and bring it to Depot Harbour except in American bottoms.

The PRIME MINISTER Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). That was qualified.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The right hon. gentleman did not qualify it at all. I am reading his own language.

The PRIME MINISTER. That is not all.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I will read it all:

> The bonding privilege of the Americans has been so devised as to make that a necessity. Therefore the Canadian government would have to become the owners of a fleet of steamers under American register.

It is perfectly obvious, not only from the fact that the right hon. gentleman did not qualify his language, but from another circumstance, that he was under that impression at the time; because we were not proposing to acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway or any other extension of the Intercolonial to the Georgian bay for the purpose of taking freight to Boston, we were proposing to acquire that railway for the purpose of taking freight to Halifax, and St. John, and Quebec, and Montreal. That is what my right hon. friend was dealing with, if he was dealing with anything. Nothing could be more absolute, nothing could be more unqualified than his language which I have just read. The right hon. gentleman was dealing with a railway which, we will say, transports a considerable portion of grain from Duluth and Chicago to Depot Harbour. That grain, so far as I am aware, is carried principally if not altogether from Canadian ports. I asked my right hon. friend the other day whether he was aware that any considerable portion of this grain was exported from United States ports—I am referring to grain brought to Depot Harbour and carried by the Canada Atlantic Railway to Montreal. My right hon. friend was not able to say that any considerable portion of that grain did go by American ports. What we were dealing with was bringing American grain to Depot Harbour and transporting that grain to Europe via Canadian ports. My right hon. friend obviously was of the opinion that that could not be done, otherwise he would not have used the absolute and unqualified language which he did use with regard to that matter.

The PRIME MINISTER. I have only one word to say. I cannot find at this moment my language, but I am satisfied that if my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) will look again and see what I said, he will find that I stated that the traffic of the Canada Atlantic Railway was American traffic passing from American ports to American ports and that that traffic could not be carried on the lake except in American bottoms to be bonded on the Canada Atlantic Railway. That is the statement which I made at the time, certainly which I intended to make and I am pretty sure that I did so in so many words in some part of the remarks which I made.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My right hon. friend (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) stated that two days afterwards in reply to a question put to him, but I do not think he stated it at that time. May I be permitted to bring another matter to the attention of the government, and it is the very negligent and careless way in which the returns have been brought down in compliance with an address of the House of Commons dated the 11th of May, 1903. I moved on that date for copies of all Orders in Council, memorials, letters, telegrams and other correspondence relating to the granting of provincial autonomy to the North-west Territories. On the 19th of June, I directed the attention of the government to the fact that these documents had not been brought down. On the 26th of June my right hon. friend the Prime Minister brought down certain documents and said that there were some more to follow. On the 29th of June I moved that these documents should be printed. On the 20th of July, after having examined these documents which had been brought down, I spoke of this return and pointed out a very long list of documents which I had been at great pains to tabulate, and which had not been included in the return brought down. Some of the documents which had been omitted were of the most important character. My right hon. friend said that these further documents would be brought down. On a subsequent occasion the hon. Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Sifton) made a request for the postponement of the discussion of certain financial questions touching the North-west Territories to which I agreed. This was on the same day, the 20th July, and I suggested that the documents should be put in chronological order and should be printed. On the 24th July the hon. Minister of the Interior brought down a further return. I pointed out to him once more that a number of documents which were of very great importance had not been included in the former return. He stated that certain of these documents could not be found, and I offered to supply copies of the documents which could not be found, because I had obtained them from the printed proceedings of the North-west Territories. The first return which was brought down is printed as Sessional Paper No. 116, and the second return is printed as Sessional Paper No. 116a. These returns are still imperfect as a very large number of letters have been omitted and particularly two letters of very great importance, one from the right hon. Prime Minister to Mr. Haultain dated the 8th of June, 1903, and Mr. Haultain's reply dated 15th June, 1903. Besides those I believe from the very hasty examination of the return that a very considerable number of other letters to which I called the attention of the government have not yet been brought down. I do not know whether they are of great importance or not because I have not had time to go over the matter again. I spent half a day in July in going over the documents, and I gave a long list of the letters which were required and which will be found at pages 6891-2 of the revised 'Hansard.' The right hon. gentleman will find that I gave a list of between thirty and forty letters that have not been included in the first return brought down. I do not know whether it would be possible at this period of the session to bring down these documents and have them printed. I do think a little more care should be exercised in regard to these matters. I know there was some difficulty because a certain portion of the correspondence was in the Department of the Interior, and a certain other portion was in the hands of the right hon. Prime Minister. The return which has been brought down is in a most embarrassing condition. You look for a letter of June, 1901, and you find it at the end of Sessional Paper No. 116a, the second return, while you find another letter of a subsequent date at the beginning of the first return. The letters seem to have been thrown together in a confused heap and printed just as they were brought down. To place these important documents before the House in that way is of no assistance to any member of this House who desires to understand the position of affairs as disclosed by this correspondence. If there is not enough clerical assistance in the service of the government or in the service of this House to see that the returns are put in proper order, I think we had better make a sufficient appropriation to provide for that work. I would be ashamed as far as any work in my own business is concerned, and I think any corporation would be ashamed to have documents brought down in so irregular and confused a condition for the purpose of discussing a business question of any kind, and why we should have to submit to this in connection with the public business is more than I can understand. It is not for want of attention on my part, because I spent nearly a whole day some time before the 20th of July for the purpose of ascertaining what documents had not been brought down and of suggesting to the government the importance of having these documents brought down in an orderly arrangement. I trust that when documents of great importance are brought down in the future there will be some attention given to the work of having them arranged in chronological order. It would not be out of place where documents are somewhat voluminous to have the return accompanied by an index and to have the printed return accompanied by an index, so that we could readily get at any document that we require. But really a great waste of time is imposed upon those members who desire to study documents brought down in this manner and there must be an absolutely unnecessary waste of time under the circumstances of this case.

The PRIME MINISTER. There are two documents which perhaps my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) would like to have; those are the letter of myself to Mr. Haultain of the 8th of June, and the answer of Mr. Haultain of the 15th of June. I can bring these down this very day. In regard to the remarks made by my hon. friend, I must admit that the returns are brought down in a very slovenly manner. I shall give directions at once that an officer shall be appointed whose duty it shall be be to prepare all documents properly for presentation to this House. In former years I had often to complain of this matter. I am very sorry that we have not made very much improvement in this regard. I agree with what my hon. friend has said.

If I may be permitted to revert to the subject which was mentioned a moment ago, I would call my hon. friend's attention to page 12647 of 'Hansard,' where he will find the remark that I made:

I come now to the main proposition of my hon. friend. He proposes to acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway as it exists to-day. But though the government may acquire the Canada Atlantic Railway, it certainly could not operate it. How could you expect that a Canadian government could possibly, with any advantage to the country operate the Canada Atlantic Railway. It is within the knowledge of everybody that at this moment three-fourths at least of the business of the Canadian Pacific Railway and three-fourths of the business of the Canada Atlantic Railway is American business. It is business connected with the western states and carried to its destination in the eastern states. The Canadian government could not compete for that business if we were to acquire that railway.

Then I proceeded to give the reasons.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Abbott's Harbour, N.S., $700.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. James Sutherland). This is to build an addition to the beach protection 30 feet in length. This is the amount estimated to complete the work.

Mr. CLARKE. What county is it in ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yarmouth.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Would the minister be good enough to state what county each work is in ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). And the object of the expenditure in each case.

Abram's river—wharf, $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for rebuilding a small stone wharf in Yarmouth county which was built 25 years ago. This is the total amount estimated by the chief engineer. These repairs will be done under the supervision of the engineer in charge.

Mr. CLARKE. Who fixes the wages when it is done by day labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The engineer in charge.

Mr. CLARKE. Does the fair-wage officer interfere in any way ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I suppose he would if there was any complaint, but we have never had complaint.

Mr. CLARKE. I suppose the fair-wage officer is held in reserve in case of emergency.

Bayfield harbour works—repairs and improvement, $6,850.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Antigonish county, and this sum is the total estimated cost.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is there any considerable commerce at Bayfield, or is this for the benefit of the fishermen?

Mr. McISAAC. This is a very important harbour. To show how important it is, I may say that the Conservative government in 1889, voted $3,500 to commence the building of a wharf, and between 1889 and 1896 they expended $40,000 on this wharf.

Mr. CLARKE. Is not that enough ?

Mr. McISAAC. Since the Liberals came to power only $1,000 has been expended. This present expenditure has been reported by the engineer to be urgent, in order to keep the work from going to decay. There was a breakwater built by the Conservative government, and there has been since no expenditure on that work until now. The engineer has reported that the whole covering has been swept away by the storm last year, and it is to rebuild the covering of the breakwater that the sum is necessary.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the vote be sufficient ?

Mr. McISAAC. So the engineer reports.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is there any considerable commerce at this point ?

Mr. McISAAC. Before the building of the Intercolonial Railway to the strait of Canso, it was the most important shipping place in the county, and although it is not so important now, still there is considerable business done in the shipping of cattle to Newfoundland. As Antigonish is almost entirely a farming county, that is an important industry with us. During the summer, two or three vessels make fortnightly trips between Bayfield and St. John's, Newfoundland. It is the chief port for Newfoundland vessels.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How will this money be expended ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is practically for repairs, and it will be done under the supervision of the government engineer.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is Mr. Dodwell the engineer ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Milledge is in charge.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How many resident engineers are there in Nova Scotia ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are two, Mr. Dodwell and Mr. Milledge.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think Mr. Locke has jurisdiction in the western part of the province.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, there are three altogether.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does the minister think that there is necessity for three resident engineers for that province—there may be ; I am only asking for information ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer says he should have more. Now that the matter has been brought to my attention, I will inquire into it at an early date. I can understand that when a lot of money is being expended at different places it would be a saving to the country to have a responsible man in charge.

Baxter's Harbour—reconstruction of breakwater, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in King's county. It will cost $3,000 to reconstruct the work, and put it in good shape. There is considerable local trade from fishermen and farmers in that district. The money will be expended under the supervision of the local engineer. This is practically repairs, and cannot be done by contract because you do not know when you commence how much work you will have to do.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will this vote cover the total expenditure ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, the total cost is $3,000.

Benoit's Cove—improvements to boat landing $800.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the total cost of improvements that have been made at this point—the removal of 183 yards of boulders and the placing of 183 yards of stonework.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). For what purpose is the boat landing used ?

Mr. McISAAC. This is for the benefit of a large fishing district. There has never been a wharf on the east side of Harbour Bouche. Although there are forty or fifty large boats engaged every year in the fishing industry in that part of the harbour, there is no protection whatever for them. Benoit's Cove affords splendid natural protection for boats except for a number of boulders which obstruct the navigation. An investigation was made by the resident engineer last year, and he has reported that by the removal of these boulders very safe and secure shelter would be afforded to the fishermen in that locality.

Big Harbour (Port Bevis)—wharf, $3,700.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to cover the cost of building a wharf 80 feet long and 12 feet deep at low water on the west side of the harbour. It is in Victoria county, N.S.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this a new wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, this is a new work, and this $3,700 is the total cost estimated by the engineer.

Mr. CLANCY. I am not going to find fault. I merely wish to say that there is a disposition to extend works in many cases and to build new works, which no doubt the people of the localities served may not object to ; but the question is whether they are of a character so pressing that they should be undertaken. These works not only involve present expenditure, but they become a public charge for all time. Our experience under all governments has been that once you construct the most useless work, the people of the locality will never listen to the suggestion that an end should be put to it, though they know it is useless. I am not sure that the governments of the day are inclined to turn a deaf ear to these demands, especially on the eve of elections. Only a short time ago the Minister of Labour, Postmaster General and acting Minister of Public Works—I do not know that that trinity exists now—sent out a circular inviting applications for works, I presume, of this kind. I would like to ask the present Minister of Public Works if this work is the result of that invitation, or if it is a work of absolute necessity. While I am not prepared to say that it is not a necessary work, because I have no information on the subject, I do say that this committee should scrutinize with great care any expenditure of this character, unless it is shown to be of some importance and of some lasting benefit. Will the hon. minister give us some statement as to the necessity of this, and what the engineer reports.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The representation made to the department is that the farmers and other inhabitants of that district can only dispose of their produce by taking it to Baddeck, a distance of nine or ten miles, and that this small work will give them accommodation by water.

Mr. CLANCY. What is the report of the engineer ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am reading now from the report of the engineer.

Mr. CLANCY. When was that report made ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. On the 14th of April last.

Mr. OSLER. How many people are tributary to that part ? What is the nature of the country around ?

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). As one who knows a little about the district, I may say to my hon. friend that this is not a useless work by any means. The community that is to be served by this wharf is a rather important community. It is a good farming district, and there is considerable fishing besides. The people live in a part of the country which is not served by a railway, and there is no likelihood that there will be a railway in the near future. Their only means of communication is by water. I repeat that it is not by any means a useless work, but is a necessity to accommodate the farmers and fishermen of the district.

Mr. CLANCY. Can the minister tell the committee how near this harbour is to other harbours ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I have already informed the hon. gentleman—I suppose he is only asking for fun——

Mr. CLANCY. I want the hon. gentleman to understand that there is no fun about this.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I thought it was for amusement, because I have already within five minutes stated twice that at present the people have to haul their produce to Baddeck, which is nine or ten miles away. I am not able to say how far distant the nearest harbour is.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). The nearest harbour is Baddeck.

Mr. BLAIN. Might I ask the minister if there is any revenue derived from any of these wharfs ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. When the work is completed by the Public Works Department, it is transferred to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, which collects the revenue. I should fancy that the revenue in this particular district would not be very large.

Mr. BLAIN. I suppose the question whether there will be any revenue is taken into consideration by the government ? I notice that in these supplementary estimates there are votes for 103 places in Nova Scotia.

An hon. MEMBER. There ought to be 203.

Mr. BLAIN. That shows the hon. gentleman's idea of public expenditure.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). How many harbours are there in Nova Scotia ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend the leader of the opposition said the other day that there were several thousand.

Mr. CLARKE. In what county is this wharf located ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In Victoria. It is to connect the government wharf with the public highway, and the cost is $5,528.29.

Mr. BLAIN. Was there any contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The work was let by contract.

Mr. BLAIN. When this item was up for discussion last year the minister said that the contract was let and that the work would be completed in June.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My information is that it was completed in June.

Mr. BLAIN. The statement was made last year that the vote then taken would complete the work.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer informs me that the statement then made was that the vote being taken would complete the work then under contract. The estimate now asked is for the building of a road 2,100 feet long connecting the wharf with the public highway, this being a different work from that to which the hon. gentleman refers.

Mr. BLAIN. Might I ask the hon. minister how much money has been expended in the past few years on this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am most happy to repeat again that the amount is $5,520.29.

Mr. BLAIN. The $4,000 voted last year was the first investment in that wharf and this is an item to complete it, making the total cost over $5,000 ? Does the hon. gentleman expect there will be any revenue from this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I should think there should be some small revenue from this wharf.

Mr. CLANCY. Is that roadway a new work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLANCY. Was the land on which it is built purchased ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the chief engineer informs me it cost $70.

Mr. COCHRANE. I would like to ask if this is not a new departure, building wharfs and also highways to connect them. I should think that when the public of Canada contribute money to build a wharf the people of the municipalities might build a road to connect with it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a good deal in what the hon. gentleman says, but it is not a new departure. There is a great deal in what my hon. friend says that localities might do some of this work.

Mr. LANCASTER. Has the minister considered that by undertaking to build highways which are properly within the control of the municipalities by virtue of the delegation of control over highways to provincial governments and the municipal authorities, this government may become responsible for the maintenance and repair of these highways and for any accidents that may occur upon them ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I suppose that if the work is done on our own property the liability of the government will not be the same as if this was on a public highway.

Mr. ROSAMOND. Would the hon. minister kindly give us some idea of the principle underlying the distribution of this public money all along the Nova Scotia coast? It seems extraordinary that a public wharf is built on the coast where there is no means of access to that wharf.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have made as great an effort as has my hon. friend from Lanark to find out what principle has governed in this matter in the past. I am sure that he must know, as a man of great experience, parliamentary and otherwise, that I found difficulty in discovering what principle has governed in the past. However for the present these works have been governed by the principles of the public necessities and the development of trade in the different sections.

Mr. FRASER. I may say in reference to the vote for Nova Scotia generally that these works are certainly required in the public interest. A wharf for example may be required in a fishing village. The highway runs parallel to the coast and between it and the shore there may be small cultivated pieces of land. The wharf is located at the place where it will best suit the people of the district. There may, however, be no road running down to it and it may be necessary to build a road from the highway to the wharf which may be some little distance.

Mr. ROSAMOND. I would like to know whether a public port must be constructed for every one or two farmers along the coast. It seems to me an extraordinary thing that public money should be squandered in this manner, frittered away—I can only say it is—by building wharfs and places that require to be kept up later by the government, for which there is so little public use that there is no roadway into them at all, and the government have not only to make the wharfs but to build a road to them for the benefit of one or two farmers. If public money is to be squandered in that fashion, and if claims like that are to be set up for one province, why not for every other province? Why should not wharfs be built along little rivers? There are rivers running through my county, and lots of places where it would be convenient for the farmers to have a wharf.

Mr. FRASER. Simply for the reason that these wharfs are built on the seaside where they are the only modes of communication the fishermen have. Besides, the sum total for these little wharfs is not equal to one single expenditure made in some of the other provinces. Here is a district, we will say, where 500 fishermen live by the seaside, and the only mode of communication they have with the outer world is by one of these wharfs. When they get the wharf they need a roadway running from it some distance to a highway in the country. The most suitable place is selected for a wharf, and then in order to get to it or from it you have to have a road. As to one of these wharfs being for only one or two farmers, I trust the hon. gentleman's intelligence will not allow him to speak in that manner.

Mr. ROSAMOND. Does the hon. member for Guysborough mean to say that the fishermen on that coast have a right to have wharfs all along the coast? That is an absurdity.

Mr. FRASER. How could a schooner get to land unless there was a wharf to which she could be attached? If the hon. gentleman understood anything about the lower provinces he would know that wharfs are the only method of communication the fishermen have with the inland. It is not at all like a river in Ontario, it is a coast where storms are frequent and violent.

Mr. ROSAMOND. Does every fisherman require a wharf for himself? It seems to me an extraordinary proceeding to build wharfs all along the coast for objects of that kind, as if these fishermen were not clever enough to get from the coast inland, or to go to some neighbouring town where there is a wharf already built.

Mr. COCHRANE. I did not raise this question as to the advisability of building wharfs, I raised a question in connection with the road to the wharf, and there has been no explanation given why we should build roads as well as wharfs. Now where a wharf is necessary I do not object to furnish the money. But there is a question in my mind about building such a great number of wharfs—we have built hundreds of wharfs, I think I am safe in saying, since the present government came into power. And I want to remind you, Mr. Chairman, when the Conservatives were in power, how your heart was grieved at seeing the government buying up the people with their own money. I remember how the heart of the Minister of Trade and Commerce used to be grieved, and his righteous soul was vexed from day to day, with the unholy acts of the Tory party, when the people of Ontario were being 'bled white,' as he used to say. Now he is not only willing to sit in a position that he used to say was a sinecure, and that never should have been created, but he remains perfectly silent and is willing tamely to submit to this iniquity being perpetrated year by year to a still greater extent. I know, Mr. Chairman, that you feel grieved about it, but the Minister of Trade and Commerce takes it very coolly, he never says a word against it. He is not only willing to see the constituencies bought up by the building of wharfs with the people's own money, but he is willing to sit by and allow the hard-earned money of the people to be used to build roads down to the wharfs. Now I say that we on this side are willing, as a general thing, to vote money for the erection of wharfs where they are necessary, but we draw the line there, and we say that we should leave to the municipalities or to the local legislatures the charge of building roads for the public to get to these wharfs. I hope that the Minister of Trade and Commerce will come to the rescue of the public exchequer on these lines, and not allow it to be robbed, not allow the farmers of Ontario to be bled white as he said they used to be in days gone by.

Mr. LANCASTER. I understand the member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) to say that these roads are necessary to connect with highways at some distance from the wharf. I would ask that hon. gentleman in what position that will put this government after it has constructed a road from an existing highway to the wharf. Now the Dominion government, as has been pointed out by my hon. friend from Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane), should build a wharf where it is necessary, but after we have built the wharf for Dominion purposes, in the interest of the whole of Canada, I would like the hon. member for Guysborough to tell us who becomes responsible for keeping up that road to the wharf. I do not care whether the road is short or long. The hon. member for Guysborough says some of these highways are a long distance from the wharf, I presume he means a mile or two away. Now is that connecting road under the jurisdiction of the provincial legislature, or of the municipality, or does it remain under the jurisdiction of this parliament, and is the Dominion of Canada responsible for keeping it up, and responsible for all the accidents that may occur upon it? This involves an important principle, and now is the proper time to discuss it. In what position is the province, is the municipality, is the Dominion government, going to be in regard to liability for accidents as well as for keeping this roadway in repair? Why should not the municipality build this roadway, expropriate the land for the purpose, and keep control of it? If a municipality which expropriates the land and builds the highway in the public interest, thereafter becomes responsible for keeping it up, on the same principle does not the member for Guysborough think that the Dominion government becomes responsible for keeping up a highway that it has constructed? Does he not think that the municipality can say: We did not construct this highway, you did it yourself, and you must be responsible? Cases have arisen in the province of Ontario where a municipality being asked to take over the control of a highway have said to the government: You must give us a sum of money which, capitalized, will allow us sufficient income to keep this in repair. For instance, we want $50,000 from the Dominion of Canada to furnish us an income with which to keep this highway in repair. I can assure the hon. member for Guysborough that this is not as light a matter as he thinks. There is a wharf, and some distance away there is a public highway, and now the Dominion of Canada is asked to build a roadway to connect the two. Who is to be responsible for keeping that up? I want the member for Guysborough to enlighten us on this point, if he can.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not a lawyer——

Mr. CLARKE. The Minister of Justice is a lawyer.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I submit as a layman that the action which we may take under a vote of this kind does not in any way affect municipal rights, or Dominion rights, with regard to our responsibility for highways. That question is not involved at all. My hon. friend from Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) is like myself, he does not understand the legal aspects of the question.

Mr. COCHRANE. You had better let somebody answer who does understand it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There will be no different responsibility on the part of the Dominion in reference to this property than in reference to any other similar property in the country. The property will belong to the Dominion.

Mr. BLAIN. I wish to point out the reckless manner in which the government is voting this public money. The hon. minister stated a few moments ago that the total amount required to construct this wharf would be a little over $5,000. I asked the hon. minister if there had been any revenue from this wharf and he said no, that it was a new work last year. Do I understand the hon. minister correctly in making that statement? The hon. minister shakes his head. I would be very sorry to misquote him. Perhaps he would make a statement as to whether this was a new wharf commenced last year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman is mixing the discussion of this item with that of other votes. I said this wharf was completed in June, 1902.

Mr. BLAIN. But I understood the hon. gentleman to say that the first expenditure was the $4,850 voted last year. When we were asked to vote this sum last year the then minister said:

> The work is not completed yet and there is no revenue from it. It will be completed on June 30th.

The hon. minister said in discussing this vote that $4,850 was the whole sum voted for the wharf. I turned up 'Hansard' of 1901, the session previous, and I find that the minister asked for an appropriation of $1,100, and that when this was given he said:

> This will complete the work.

The government came forward and asked for $1,100 and the then minister made the statement that it would complete the work.

On the following year the minister came forward and stated that he had the work under contract and this year the hon. minister says that the amount of the expenditure upon it is $4,850. Now, the hon. minister comes forward and says if you vote this $670 the work will be completed and it may be that we will get some revenue from it. That is the ground of complaint we have on this side of the House. We have the promise of the hon. minister that in no case will he ask for an expenditure until he is prepared to give the committee a proper estimate of the cost of the work. I hope that when this $670 is expended my hon. friend will not come back next year and ask for another vote.

Breton Cove—boat landing, $4,600.

Mr. CLARKE. What county is this in ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Victoria county. This is to provide a boat landing at Briton's Cove. It is practically a wharf for the fishing industry that is going on at that point.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this a new work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a new work.

Mr. CLANCY. What is the character of the boats that land there ? What class of people are being served now that were not served before, and how were they served before ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I believe these people unfortunately had to get on shore by clambering on the rock or in any way they could manage it. The desirability of having this work constructed is greater now than in the past, because a lobster factory has been established at this point. Ten regular fishing boats are employed and the industry will give employment to quite a large number of people.

Mr. CLANCY. If I correctly understood the hon. gentleman he said that a packing establishment had been recently established there. How long is it since that was established ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was established during the last season and it was enlarged during the present year.

Mr. CLANCY. Who are the parties interested in it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no infomation.

Mr. CLANCY. How much capital is invested in it ? Is it a very large establishment or a very small one ? If it is a very large establishment there can be no complaint about expending money there and I suppose the hon. gentleman is prepared to give that information.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have given all the information I can in regard to it. I do not know what amount of capital is required to start an establishment of that kind. They have ten regular boats engaged in the fishing industry. The agricultural pursuits in the district, the fishing industry and the establishment of this factory give employment to a great many men and a large number of fishing boats ?

Mr. CLANCY. Are these large or small fishing boats ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am unable to give my hon. friend the size of the boats.

Mr. CLANCY. Can the hon. gentleman tell the size of the factory or the amount of business done at that point ?

Mr. ROSAMOND. It seems to me that this is a proposal to spend public money for the benefit of that company or individual who has established this lobster factory. Is there any authority for the government spending public money to benefit private individuals ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is very difficult to pass any legislation here that does not more directly affect one citizen than another. Even our tariff legislation has sometimes that effect. This expenditure is for the agriculturists and fishermen of the county, and while this factory may benefit, there is no doubt that the people of the locality will reap the greatest benefit from this work.

Mr. HACKETT. How far is this harbour from the nearest place of refuge which fishermen might use ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am informed that the nearest refuge is about fifteen miles distant.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the name of that nearest point ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Ste. Anne's, in Antigonish county. This is in Victoria county.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the minister read the salient points of the engineer's report on this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The report says that this is in Victoria county, on what is called the north shore, the residents being engaged in agriculture and fishing. Some of them fish off the shore near their homes, and others at French river, which is quite a distance.

Mr. CLARKE. Who is that report signed by ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Milledge reports to the chief engineer, who is responsible to me. There is a lobster factory employing ten regular boats and buying fish from others. I suppose these are the salient points.

Mr. CLANCY. Did the engineer report on the number of men employed in the lobster factory, or the magnitude of the business ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Perhaps, as an engineer, he would hardly be expected to report on these things. I understand that the extent of a lobster factory is judged by the number of boats more than by the capital invested.

Mr. CLANCY. While the engineer might not be expected to report on these things, yet the minister ought to be in possession of information to justify expenditure on this harbour. The minister does not know the value of the output of this factory, and he does not even know who the owners are. The minister has a great many items before him, and it would be just as well that the committee would look with some anxiety for information regarding these very large expenditures.

Mr. BLAIN. How far is this cove from Livingstone's Cove, in the same county ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Is Livingstone's Cove in the same county ?

Mr. BLAIN. Is it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot find from the map that it is.

Mr. McISAAC. Livingstone's Cove is on the mainland in the county of Antigonish, and this is in Victoria county.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not think that any hon. gentleman in this House would object to giving reasonable accommodation for the boats of the fishing population in the province of Nova Scotia, or in the province of Quebec, or in the province of New Brunswick, or elsewhere in Canada. The difficulty about these appropriations is that they do not seem to be brought before the House upon any definite principle, and that they are brought down with a very considerable lack of the information which the minister should supply. We could get along a great deal better in committee if the minister would give the House all the information which we eventually do elicit by asking a great number of questions. The minister will recognize that in these supplementary estimates, he is asking for an enormous number of appropriations for harbours and rivers in the different provinces, and when such appropriations are brought down in the closing days of the session, it is the duty of the opposition to try to get some information about each item, in order that they may understand how that item can be justified in the public interest. So far as our fishing industry is concerned, I doubt very much whether even all the members from the maritime provinces realize the very great importance of our fisheries to the people, not only of the maritime provinces, but to the people of all Canada. So far as my limited research has gone, it would lead me to believe that we have perhaps not kept pace with modern methods in the development of the fishing industry, such as obtain in other countries. We pursue, to a certain extent, the methods of fifty or sixty years ago, and those who have made themselves acquainted with the latest appliances for catching and curing fish have assured me that our methods might be very much improved with great advantage, not only to the fishermen of the maritime provinces, but to the people of Ontario and Quebec, who at present are not supplied as they might be with the splendid fish which swarm around our eastern coasts. Let my hon. friends from Ontario and Quebec realize that it is within the bounds of possibility that in a very few years they can have a daily supply of the very best fish in the world from the maritime provinces.

There is no reason why they should not have it. But let them also remember that in order to ensure that supply, we must have in the first place better means of communication between the upper provinces and the maritime provinces. We must bring the fish along more expeditiously. In the next place, let them remember that in order to build up a trade of that kind, it is absolutely necessary that there should be a constant, regular and abundant supply of fish to the merchants who engage in that trade. That is an absolute requisite. Nobody can undertake to supply the needs of a great city like Montreal or Toronto, unless there are fishermen around the coasts on whom he can depend for a regular and abundant supply of fish every day in the week. And in order that there should be that regular supply, there should be a large number of fishermen engaged in the industry, and these in turn must be afforded the necessary facilities for sheltering their boats. In that way this expenditure can be justified, if it is justified at all. It should be made, however, upon some principle, some plan or some system. But, granting all that, granting that it is not made for political purposes, granting that it is not made in the interest of a political party in one district or another, I do not think we should object to it, although I concur in the view that on all occasions of this kind we should have the very fullest information from the hon. gentleman who is presenting these estimates to the House. Around the shores of Nova Scotia there are not only abundant supplies of the fish with which we are all familiar, but by adopting modern methods of fishing, I believe we may find there many other varieties of fish which are used for food in other countries, and which, if they could be supplied abundantly, regularly and constantly, could be sent from Nova Scotia and the other maritime provinces to the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, and even to the west. We have done a good deal in this country to encourage other industries. We have provided bounties for manufacturing industries; we have regulated our tariff so that these industries should be developed; we have done a good deal for the farming community in the way of providing experimental farms and bringing experts into the country to teach the farmers how to make butter and cheese and how to utilize their dairy products. But it seems to me that up to this time we have not devoted the attention to the fishing industry which the importance of that great industry demands; and for my part I am prepared to support the government in dealing with this matter on a fair, comprehensive, systematic basis not only by providing the fishermen with adequate accommodation but by giving them assistance in improving their methods of catching and curing fish, and especially by improving the means of transportation by which the magnificent products of the sea, which are swarming around all the coasts of the maritime provinces, could be brought into the homes of the people of Ontario and Quebec. I assure my hon. friends from Ontario and Quebec—I need not assure the members from the maritime provinces—that in seeking to develop this great fishing industry, we would not be spending public money unwisely. I believe that we have in the fishing industry of Canada, referring more especially to the fishing industry of the maritime provinces, one of the greatest sources of wealth which are the heritage of Canadians at the present time. I do not underrate the magnificent wheat lands of the west or the agricultural resources of the provinces of Ontario and Quebec; but the fishing industry of the maritime provinces will, I believe, in the future, if properly developed and sustained, yield in importance to none of these. Therefore, I think it is wise for my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works to make such of these provisions as are necessary. At the same time, in presenting them to the House, I think it is very desirable that he should show the members from Ontario and Quebec and the west who are not as familiar as some of us from the maritime provinces, with the importance of this great industry, that it is absolutely necessary, in order that the fishermen may furnish a constant, regular and abundant supply, that they should have suitable shelter for their boats not only during the summer season, but also during the winter season ; because I believe the fishing industry can be prosecuted up to a much later date than it is at present. These men who pursue their labours around the coasts often in tempestuous weather, have sometimes almost at a moment's notice to seek refuge in some harbour. I am sure that what I have said here to-day with regard to the importance of this industry is the view of all my friends from the maritime provinces; and I know that some of them, who have made this matter much more of a study than I have and who are much more familiar with the conditions, would be ready and glad to say a word in support of the views I have endeavoured thus briefly to present to the House.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sure that the House must be well pleased with the remarks of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition with regard to the importance of this industry to the Dominion of Canada. I am free to admit that I find in this House and out of it a considerable want of knowledge as to the importance of this industry—an industry which is now bringing to the Dominion treasury a revenue of over $20,000,000 a year; and I am satisfied, from my experience of a year ago, and from the opportunity I have had of looking into the matter, that, with a little assistance and encouragement, the trade could be increased to bringing a revenue to the Dominion of over $40,000,000. I do not make that statement without having given the matter considerable attention. I am pleased that my hon. friend has to-day drawn the attention of the members of this House and the people of the country to the importance of this great industry. As to the point at issue, I will submit to my hon. friend the leader of the opposition whether I have not given satisfactory information in a general way as to the necessity for this work to the fishing industry. My hon. friend has made a very good point, which is not generally understood, namely, that fishermen cannot catch fish wherever they choose to go; but that the fish are to be found only at certain points along the coast, which may be unimportant, so far as population and the presence of other industries are concerned, but which may be important places for the fishermen to land their fish. I am sure the hon. gentleman would not expect me, as the minister in charge of this work to give information as to whether it will change the relations between the municipality and the Dominion in regard to the highway. I could not be expected to give the capital invested by the people who established a factory or any details of that kind. In a general way I would be supposed to give information, as for instance the population to be served and the public facilities to be afforded. In that connection the work will be judged on its merits.

Mr. CLANCY. How are we to tell its merits unless we know what is the nature and magnitude of the business to be served, the amount of capital to be invested, and why it should not be done by the municipality ?

Mr. COCHRANE. As one having considerable experience in municipal work, I do not see why this government should build roads to public wharfs. If the government expropriate the land and build the road they will be responsible for damages should any occur.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not if we hand it over to the municipality.

Mr. COCHRANE. But you are taking it out of the hands of the municipality. When a private company expropriates land and builds a road, it is not the municipality, but the private company which is responsible for damages. If the government were to build the wharf in the constituency I represent for the fishermen, the municipality would be only too glad to build a road leading to it from the highway.

At one o'clock, committee took recess.

Committee resumed at three o'clock.

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). Before recess I was about to remark that it was a great pity that the observations of my colleague for the city of Halifax (Mr. Borden) were not made at an earlier stage of the discussion, as it would have saved some gentlemen opposite from the great province of Ontario, from the disagreeable necessity of either supporting the remarks they made or retiring from them, which they cannot do gracefully. The reason why gentlemen from Ontario have objected to these small votes for the maritime provinces, and especially for Nova Scotia, is that they do not understand the conditions there and that they are so enamoured of their splendid and beautiful province of Ontario that they think that all of the expenditure of this country should be devoted to that province. We cannot judge small expenditures of the kind we are now discussing by analogy with the agricultural provinces and those that enjoy other resources. Let us take for example my own constituency, which is typical of other counties, such as Guysborough, Lunenburg, Shelburne and Yarmouth. It is on the Atlantic sea-board, and these harbours are along the ocean shore. Every ten or fifteen miles there is a deep inlet which may run into the land ten or fifteen miles. On each side of these inlets are the fishing villages and the coast outside of them is surrounded by reefs through which these fishermen navigate their craft in pursuit of their fishing operations. Up the side of these harbours are the roads that have been spoken of, which meet the municipal roads at the head of the harbour, perhaps ten or fifteen or twenty miles distant from the place where the fishermen operate. Therefore it is easy to understand the difference between these roads and the connecting roads in Ontario, Quebec or any of the other provinces. These fishermen are very poor and it is all they can do to maintain these municipal roads. They receive very little money and their life is a precarious one. They may not have a school of fish this year and have to live on what credit they can obtain from the merchants in anticipation of the fish they may catch next year. But next year again the fish may not strike in to the shore. Between the dog fish and the Ontario members, the fishermen are living a most precarious life indeed. It is necessary that the fish should be transferred from the boats to the shore as quickly as possible and without these wharfs they have to be carried to the shore in small boats, a condition that ought not to exist. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) wanted to have some principle laid down on which these grants were made. It may be said that as these fishermen contribute to the public revenue and receive no other benefit whatever, they have a right to have a portion of the public revenue dispensed in their interest in order that they may conduct the business on which they are dependent for a living. I would suggest that these gentlemen from Ontario should visit one of these fishing districts. The Americans come down these and revel in the beauties of the scenery and of the ocean, in the primitive people and in the customs and habits of those who dwell there. If these gentlemen could see the precarious and hardy life which is lived by these fishermen we would not hear another word in criticism of these votes. It is essential that the fishermen should be able to reach the great highway of the ocean both to ship their produce and to receive the goods which they consume. It is becoming necessary year by year for the fishermen to go farther out to sea in pursuit of fish. They are equipping themselves with larger boats and better nets and gear and will soon be in communication with the fast steamers which are being subsidized to ply along the shore in order to bring the fish from the fishing grounds to points from which they may be shipped. The government is to some extent aiding in this work but in the main the people are conducting their own industries and are entirely dependent on their own efforts. During the past year or two the government have been aiding the fishing settlements by constructing small local lights. It may be supposed that the fishermen have an immediate interest in the large expenditures that have been made for the great lighthouses. That is not, however, the case; these larger expenditures are mainly for the general interest of commerce and for international purposes, but these small lights which are being erected in the neighbourhood of the fishing harbours are for their benefit and they are proving of great advantage to the fishermen. If the Ontario members who criticise these expenditures could see the change that takes place in the Atlantic ocean during a storm and could realize how important it is that the fishermen should reach a place of safety, I am sure that we would hear no further criticisms of these votes. Unless they can make a harbour at the first attempt they must either put out to sea again in the face of the storm or be dashed to pieces on that rock-bound coast. Sometimes almost the entire male population of a village is lost in this way, and the visitor to the shore sees the bodies of the drowned men and hears the wails of their kindred. An understanding of the conditions is essential and it must be understood that these roads connecting the wharf with the highways are exactly what is required to give the people the facilities they need and to aid them in successfully carrying on their business. I hope we will hear no more criticisms from the gentlemen from Ontario whose opposition I am sure results from imperfect knowledge of the conditions.

Mr. FRASER. I wish to say in this connection that I think perhaps we are only beginning to do what must eventually be done. I know there is good reason why the fishing business in Nova Scotia has not been better aided than it ought to be, and that is because we were expending large sums upon the training of the farmers of this country. That was all right. I was at an exhibition not long ago in the town of Orillia, and I was delighted to find there that at given times all the farmers were called to certain points and there they were taught how to pack apples. A man went through the packing process and gave full explanations. After a little while the wives and daughters were called to another place, and there they were all taught how to make butter by some one who went through the whole process. At another point the farmers' sons and daughters were called together and were taught how to feed poultry, even so small a matter as the best way of killing poultry was not overlooked. Now that was teaching the farmers, and that was all right. Now there are two or three things that must be done in the lower provinces, and everywhere else in Canada where people are fishing, they must be taught the best way of conducting their business. Speaking particularly of Nova Scotia, it is a hard thing for example for men living in a small district to change their methods of putting up fish. The salt fish business particularly is not as well attended to as it ought to be, and I would suggest to the government that one of the best investments they could make would be to have various stations, just as they have in the great province of Ontario, wherever fish packing is carried on, centres where the fishermen could be brought together, and taught the best method of curing salt fish, the amount of salt that ought to be used, and all that ought to be done to put fish up in the best method. We suffer in our fish business particularly when we come in competition with fish that is put up in the old country. There is no people in the world that know how to put up salt fish better than the Scotch. That goes without saying, because they know how to do everything better than any one else. But when our fish come in contact with the fish put up by people who have been taught with great care the best methods of curing fish, our fish suffer from the comparison. They are fairly well put up, our fishermen are as intelligent as any fishermen in the world. But if the intelligent farmers of Ontario need assistance and training to conduct their business, it will not be surprising when I say that the fishermen living along the coast, and who follow largely the methods pursued by their fathers and grandfathers, are not able to put up fish as well as they ought. That is one thing. Now training of that kind would be an excellent thing for them, and I am sure there would be no better investment on the part of the government, because every body knows how much fish are put up each year in Nova Scotia. We are now changing our methods somewhat, and we can sell all the fresh fish, if it is properly put up, that we can catch. I make bold to say that from Halifax down to Louisburg there is the best fishing in the world. Taking Canso as a centre, I think that is the best fishing district in the whole world.

The second thing the government ought to do is this: The Intercolonial has been a little slow in giving facilities for shipment. Now there is one firm in Canso in my own county that pay the Intercolonial nearly $30,000 a year in freight. Well, they cannot get their fish sent off promptly. I have been talking to the department about it, but it takes a long while, as in every department, to get them fully interested. They will furnish a car or two, but if the fish could be got off immediately after they are caught, there is an unlimited market for them in Canada and the United States. The market cannot be too large for the ability of the lower provinces to supply the demand. The ocean is full of fish, they are not decreasing. It takes about thirty-five hours to transport fish from Canso to Ottawa, and we ought to have it carried on express trains, and in that way there is no reason why the whole of Canada could not be supplied with fresh fish within three or four days after they are taken out of the ocean. Now that business can be extended to any extent.

The third thing I would recommend is just what other people are doing. It has been brought to my attention that even in South Africa they have voted quite a large sum to bring a trawler from the old country. That is a thing this government should do. The wonderful thing about the operations of that trawler in South Africa was this, that they discovered fish there that were never caught before, excellent fish were caught in the deep sea that were before unknown. You must remember that at our present rate and mode of fishing we are only skimming the surface. Of course, when you go out to the banks you get all these, but I am speaking of inshore fishing. Now this government has done a great deal in supplying freezers for the inshore fisheries, and they are now projecting—and I want to thank the government for that—one or more stations for the bank fishing. The members from Ontario will understand that within the three-mile limit the inshore fisheries are conducted altogether by people who live on the land near by. But the people are becoming wealthier every day, and they are now able to send out schooners 15, 20 or up to 100 miles. In this respect the county represented by my hon. friend from Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach) takes the lead. They build schooners and send these out on the banks. This year, for example, the people lose between two and three months because they could not get sufficient bait anywhere, and the idea of the government now is to build a large freezer so that vessels from the bank can go in at any time and get their bait. Enough bait can be put up to supply the six or seven hundred vessels in Nova Scotia that are fishing on that bank, a sufficient amount of bait to last the season. Now that is the next move that the government of this country should undertake so far as fishing is concerned. They should undertake to train the fishermen, as they have been doing the farmers, in the best methods of putting up fish; secondly, they should provide every facility of transportation and of cold-storage, so that immediately the fish are caught they can be put aboard steamers to be taken to the railway stations and carried off in cold-storage. Thirdly, they should find out more about the fish that are in the ocean. I join with my hon. friend from Halifax in saying that after voting this money we have only taken the first step. I speak so far as these estimates are concerned, because the county I represent is not largely interested in the fisheries. We have done a fair share, and I am not complaining. But considering what could be done with this investment in one of our districts; I know a district where we have now a breakwater, and where men could not get in at all with their boats if there was a storm, they would have to go nine miles to another harbour and stay there all night. My hon. friends from Ontario will understand how pathetic must be the situation of the wives and mothers and sisters of those men who are out all night, and they do not know what has become of them. You will understand the difficulty. The fishermen of Nova Scotia are not coming to this parliament in forma pauperis. It must not be forgotten that the fishermen, man for man, pay more revenue into the treasury than any other class in the Dominion of Canada, for this reason, that they purchase everything that they require, so far as food is concerned, except fish. There they have small pieces of land. I know district after district in which there are men who would be very glad to have as much good land on which to raise vegetables as the space of the floor of this House. Then, it is with very great toil that they take away the stones. I would appeal to the fair-minded men of Ontario to remember that things have changed and that just as the Nova Scotia fisherman is not able to form an intelligent idea or perhaps give an intelligent vote as to the wants, demands and conditions of the people of the great province of Ontario it takes a long time for a member from Ontario to understand the circumstances of the Nova Scotia fisherman. I know very well how it strikes a gentleman from Ontario in this House. He says: There are $4,000 or $5,000 to be expended in Nova Scotia. The first question naturally is: What are we going to get out of it? What are going to be the receipts? Why should we make this investment? I say, as the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Borden) said, that there is more than the simple return. There is the betterment of the whole fishing community, which is made up of a trained and stable population, a population that has a great future. and more than ever from the fact that it possesses the elements of forming a naval contingent such as no part of the world can produce. All these things I am sure will lead hon. gentleman, if they think over the matter a little to come to the conclusion that although the numbers are large the sum total is not. This is not done for political purposes at all. It is done by all governments. It must be under the condition of things and I know that my generous friends from Ontario look upon it in that light. After enforcing as strongly as I can that view upon the government I would say that the next move should be along the lines that I have indicated. I have no hesitation in saying that the municiaplities should keep up the roads when they are built, perhaps not to the extent that hon. gentlemen propose, but I think I would not find very much fault with the government if they made it a condition precedent that they should do that. But after all, it has been done and I was glad that the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster) gave an instance of what had occurred in Ontario. He said that because the government built a road and the municipality were asked to look after it the municipality insisted that they should get a large sum from the government for doing it. The fishing business is of such a character that it requires even more care than has been given to the agriculturists. The farmer is ten times wealthier than the fisherman. He can see what his neighbour is doing, and he can go to fairs and see what the farmers in other counties are doing. He has a better opportunity than the fisherman for becoming acquainted with the methods of others. If he receives assistance as he should, and I will vote for all reasonable assistance for the agriculturist, the fisherman should get an equal measure if not more assistance from the government. The best way after all is to put the fisherman in a position to produce an article of the highest character and to put it on the market in the best condition and if that is done it will be found that that money is well expended.

Mr. OSLER. The hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) and the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Roche) made an attack upon Ontario as objecting to these expenditures in Nova Scotia. I entirely deny that we are doing so. I say that Ontario has never objected and will never object to an expenditure that is good for any particular part of this country and good for the whole country.

Mr. FRASER. I did not attack Ontario. I said that no man coming from Ontario could understand Nova Scotia any more than the man from Nova Scotia could understand the conditions in Ontario.

Mr. OSLER. What I gathered from the remarks of these hon. gentlemen, and I think I was right, was that the Ontario members did not understand the position of Nova Scotia and that they were not just to Nova Scotia or to the fishermen. I resent that assertion or insinuation entirely. I say Ontario will always be and has always been just to Nova Scotia and has never begrudged any expenditure in connection with the fisheries. What we object to is that there is a constant frittering away of money without any definite object in view. I entirely agree with what my hon. friend from Halifax (Mr. Borden) stated that these fisheries should be developed and developed upon a system. I have no knowledge of Nova Scotia, but I have a knowledge of the conditions down the St. Lawrence river. For many years I have fished there, and there are no men in this country for whom I have greater respect than the fishermen who live along those shores. They are a fine class of men possessing virtues for which they are to be envied by the people of Ontario or any other part of the country. My own observations from driving along those shores as far down as Ste. Anne des Monts is that as much as 50 per cent of the money which is spent on wharfs is wasted. There has been no system adopted for the proper development of the fishing industry. There has been no systematic endeavour to find out where the wharfs should be placed or how facilities can best be given to the fishermen along the shore. I am quite sure that the same thing holds good in Nova Scotia, and I say that the government in reason cannot spend too much money in developing the fisheries on such lines that the money spent will be productive. It is not as productive as it ought to be now because of the manner in which it is spent. The fishery industry is a valuable one and may be rendered ten times more valuable than it is to-day if it is properly developed. One illustration is better perhaps than a lot of theories. I was last year at Matane, which is on the St. Lawrence thirty miles from the Intercolonial Railway. I was with a party on Friday morning and we caught salmon. We left on Friday, driving to Metis, and we were in Toronto at a quarter past four by the Grand Trunk Railway day express on Saturday, having the fish with us, which were cooked for dinner on Saturday evening, having been caught at Matane on Friday. If that could be done by an ordinary passenger, I claim that with a reasonable amount of investigation, care and judgment by the government, they could give a market for the fish that are caught there that would produce to the fishermen, two, three or four times the return which they get for their fish to-day. What I do complain of is that there is no systematic investigation as to how to spend the money in order to promote the interests of these fishermen and how best to develop the fishing industry, and I claim that as long as we continue to pass item after item for building wharfs here, there and everywhere, without following any systematic plan laid down by men who know their business and who know what is wanted, we are wasting the money of the country and not developing the fishing industry or doing the good to these men that can and should be done.

Mr. HOLMES. I was one of those who, like the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Osler), at one time thought that expenditures for Nova Scotia wharfs that were built were apparently made for party purposes pure and simple, but I want to say that I endorse all that my hon. friend from Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) has said, and that I believe that a great many of the wharfs that are built in the lower provinces are built from necessity.

I can easily understand the hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) or any of the members from the lower provinces, advocating the building of a large number of wharfs. I am satisfied that if more members from Ontario had an opportunity of visiting the lower provinces, they would be willing to admit that these items of expenditure are perfectly justifiable. I do not know that it is possible to follow out the suggestion made by the hon. member from Toronto (Mr. Osler), but, as the result of limited observation, my own conviction is that you cannot follow any definite system in the development of the fishing industries of these provinces. It seems to me that the whole province of Nova Scotia is one vast fishing area, and that you have to provide accommodation simply as the immediate necessities of a particular place require at the time being. Personally I endorse these votes for the province of Nova Scotia, believing as I do that they tend to promote the welfare of the great fishing industry of that province.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). The hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) seems to know all about Nova Scotia, and I would like to ask him if the legislature of the province has taken any steps to assist the fishing industry ? Of course, I believe it is the duty of this government to afford harbours of refuge and other accommodation for the fishermen, but the legislature of Nova Scotia has been remiss in its duty if it has not given some aid to its fishermen, and the member for Guysborough has been remiss in his duty if he has not insisted on the local government giving that aid.

Mr. BENNETT. He never dug a fish-worm in his life.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). Oh, well, I believe he is a fisherman, but that is not to the point just now. I have some knowledge of the farmers of Ontario, and I know that they are willing at all times to assist their fellow-countrymen in Nova Scotia, or in any other part of the Dominion. But the farmers of Ontario have been trying to help themselves. They have taxed themselves havily to establish agricultural schools and farmers' institutes, so that the people may better know the science of farming. The people of Nova Scotia should make an effort to help themselves, as the farmers of Ontario have done. I am sure that we in the upper provinces would be only too glad to get this cheap fish from Nova Scotia, and if the member for Guysborough has not advocated the running of a fish train, he has not done his duty. It would be far better for him to have a market for Nova Scotia fish in Ontario than to go begging for a market in the United States.

Mr. FRASER. I do not want to be misunderstood. I did not accuse anybody of not helping the fishermen of Nova Scotia. I would like the hon. gentleman (Mr. Robinson) to get more fish from Nova Scotia, because it is productive of very much that he has not got. What I did say was that this government has done a great deal to educate the farmers of Ontario, and I only suggested that they should do a little to educate the fishermen of Nova Scotia. I think that both the Dominion government and the provincial government should combine to make the lot of the fishermen as comfortable as possible. That is all I have advocated.

Mr. BLAIN. We who come from Ontario would not object to any legitimate expenditure for the fishermen of Nova Scotia, or of any other part of Canada. I am surprised that the government supporter from Halifax (Mr. Roche) should venture to assert that the representatives of Ontario are opposed to this expenditure. No one on this side of the House has objected to one dollar of expenditure for the fishermen of that province. But we do think that the government should be able to give us some idea as to the policy they are pursuing with regard to the expenditure of this money. The hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) has told us that the county of Lunenburg is the chief fishing centre in Nova Scotia, but I am surprised in looking over these 103 items that not a dollar is to be expended in that county.

Mr. FRASER. They are engaged in the deep-sea fishing, which is entirely a different thing. They go 500 miles away from home.

Mr. BENNETT. But they have to come back to port again.

Mr. BLAIN. Is it any wonder that the representatives in this committee would object to this kind of expenditure, which leaves that important fishing county, represented by a gentleman on this side of the House, out in the cold ?

Mr. FRASER. It was well looked after when his friends were in power.

Mr. BLAIN. Why, last session the hon. member (Mr. Fraser) condemned the hon. member from Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach) for not getting some money for his county when the Conservatives were in power. Here is a list of 103 votes for Nova Scotia, and the county of Victoria, represented by a government supporter, gets seven of these expenditures to my knowledge, and probably if I knew the topography of the district intimately, I would find that many more of these votes were for that county. I believe that it is a legitimate thing for this parliament to look after the fishermen, but how does it come that so little of this large amount is to be expended in counties represented by Liberal-Conservatives ?

Mr. FRASER. The leader of the opposition does not say so.

Mr. BLAIN. The fishermen of Nova Scotia will be grateful to the leader of the opposition for bringing the Liberal members of this House to their feet in defence of their interests. These gentlemen opposite sat quietly by, without uttering a syllable, until the leader of the opposition drew the attention of the House to the facts.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no foundation for the statement that these appropriations have been made with any regard to the political allegiance of members who represent these counties. It is true that every county in Nova Scotia is not interested in the fishing industry to the same extent, but the hon. gentleman will find appropriations for works whenever they have been asked for ; I do not know of any appropriation which has been asked for, and which was recommended by the officials of the department, that was not granted. Of course, a great many have had to be overlooked for the present, but the appropriations appear in the estimates irrespective of who represents a particular county.

Mr. BLAIN. I will accept the statement of the minister, but I will remind him that last session and the session before the hon. member for Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach) appealed from his place in this House for an expenditure in his county.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was in connection with dredging, and not in connection with the fishing industry.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The member for Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach) drew attention to the needs of his county in the matter of dredging, but that class of work is not covered by these items. To the best of my knowledge, the people of Lunenburg have not asked for any appropriation, except in respect to dredging, which the hon. member (Mr. Kaulbach) has earnestly pressed here.

Mr. BLAIN. Has the county of Lunenburg been taken care of with respect to dredging ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The vote for dredging is a general vote and does not apply to particular counties. We are at liberty to employ a dredge in any part of Canada where work is needed, and when we can get the dredge. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Blain) laid down the general principle that these votes were for counties represented by friends of the government. I point out to him that there are votes here for the county of Halifax, which is represented by the leader of the opposition.

Mr. BENNETT. And also by a government supporter.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a vote for the county of Colchester, where there is no government supporter. There are votes respecting the county of Pictou, from which there is no government member. My hon. friend the Minister of Public Works calls my attention to the fact that we made a special appropriation for dredging in the county of Lunenburg, and the only reason the work has not been done is that we have not been able to get the dredges. When my hon. friend states that these votes are only given to counties which support the government, he is entirely mistaken. If there are only a few counties in Nova Scotia which send gentlemen to the other side of the House to represent them, that is not our fault ; but these moneys have been distributed irrespective of politics ; and, apart from dredging in the harbour of Lunenburg, there was no application for any public work in the county of Lunenburg before these estimates were prepared.

Mr. KAULBACH. It is very natural that I should offer an expression on a matter of such vast importance as the fishing industry, in which I am very largely interested, coming as I do from the largest fishing county in the Dominion, and being the representative of a class of men who, for bravery and skill, have no superiors. For that reason I am here, and for that reason I am on my feet now to advocate the claims of the fishermen. As last expressions leave the most vivid impressions, I may refer first to the remark which has just fallen from the lips of the hon. gentleman opposite with regard to the county of Lunenburg. I consider that it is right, it is just, it is honest on the part of any government not to discriminate in regard to the distribution of public moneys in the interest of the fishermen ; yet it is a remarkable fact that not one solitary item, so far as I am aware, appears in these estimates for the county of Lunenburg. I must refute the statement that has been made that I have not asked for public benefits for the fishermen. I have asked at every opportunity this session, and have urged their necessity in strong terms. I have asked for a breakwater or pier at Mill Cove, St. Margaret's bay. The Minister of Public Works can find my remarks on that subject, both this session and last session. I earnestly advocated the claims of the fishermen in that district. They live on an exposed portion of St. Margaret's bay, and are entirely dependent upon the fishing industry for a living. They possess no land from which to gather any portion of their daily bread, and if their employment or occupation is in any way disturbed, or their rights, uncared for, they must necessarily suffer. I asked for that breakwater in order that they might have their little property, which has cost them many days' toil, protected in the event of storms. Very often these poor men are compelled to leave their homes in the morning before dawn, and perhaps by night they are compelled to take up their anchor and run for shore in, or fearing, a gale. There is perhaps no chance possible of their getting back to their homes till the gale subsides, and as a consequence they are compelled to seek refuge in some other harbour ; whereas a small expenditure would give them a harbour of refuge and protection for their property in the neighbourhood of their own homes. I therefore make the appeal now, and it is not too late this session to place a sum of money in the supplementary estimates for that purpose. I also asked for the repair of the breakwater at Petite Rivière in my county. This work was started some years ago as a stone structure, which was to have been of lasting benefit ; but it was only partly built when it was allowed to suffer serious injury by the action of the sea in consequence of the laxity of the government in continuing the work, so that a large amount of money has gone to waste. These people depend very largely upon the industry of fishing for their living, and although I made appeals from time to time on their behalf, I received no favourable response. I say that the fishermen of the county I represent, more than those of any other county in the Dominion, are entitled to redress, because they contribute more largely than any other county to the revenue. Our fishermen contribute more largely to the revenue of the country than any other class of men, because every article which they require for their daily food, (except a little fish) and their clothing, has to be purchased. When you consider that the fishing industry contributes $20,000,000 yearly to the revenues of the country, I think the county of Lunenburg is certainly entitled to a portion of that revenue. I am here for the purpose of demanding it, and I will never refrain from speaking for the rights of the fishermen, feeling satisfied that in so doing I am doing a God's service. I say that the expenditure should be made indiscriminately in the interest of all the fishermen. If these fishermen, with pride and an intelligent purpose, have returned me as their representative in the interest of the country, is it fair on the part of the government to treat them in the manner in which they are doing? I answer for them without any hesitation, certainly not. I say it is not only wrong, but it is unfair and unjust. Now, I respect the farmers as much as I do any other class of people. We have a bureau of agriculture, which is a sort of school to educate the farmers in the prosecution of their vocation. Why not also have a bureau of fisheries for the benefit of the fishermen, so that they may be taught how to pursue their industry in the most profitable manner? Fishing has become a science, and there is no reason why the fisheries on the Atlantic coast should not be developed as well as those in any other part of the world. A few years ago I complained that the farmer was in need of certain redress for wrongs done through the neglect of the government, in not making special inquiry as to the cause of the disappearance of kelp or sea weed.

This product of the sea, the kelp, has not been cared for in a proper manner. Experience had taught the most of our fishermen that the product kelp was destroyed—a sea vegetable matter—in consequence of the over catch of lobsters. I asked on a former occasion that a commission should be sent to the shores of the Atlantic—to my county if the government desired—to ascertain from the fishermen themselves the best method of protecting this sea fertilizer or weed from being completely destroyed. There is a sort of egg or shell fish found on our shores which lobsters feed upon, but in consequence of the depletion of these waters, of lobsters, those egg or shell fish have become more numerous and a sort of calcareous substance or excrescence or salvia covers the whole bottom of the shores and causes it to be unproductive of this weed. As a natural result there is no manure of this kind to be found for use as a fertilizer for the farmer. Such results might have been lessened had the government appointed a commission. The farmers are suffering to this day for want of this weed. If we had a bureau of information for fishermen, and a system of correspondence held between the fishermen and the department we would have gained a certain amount of valuable knowledge which would have enabled us to add to the welfare of both the fishermen and the farmers to a great extent. We want a certain distribution of benefits for the deep sea fishermen. We have along the shores at present—although my county has not availed itself of the privilege of shore freezers for freezing bait in small quantities to supply the shore fishermen. We want as well a supply of bait for the deep sea fishermen. We want the same conditions and the same privileges extended to the deep sea fishermen as are enjoyed by the shore fishermen, which gives them fifty per cent of the entire cost of the construction of freezers, and I think a bonus of $5 for every ton of bait for three years, which is placed in those freezers. If that same benefit were extended to the deep sea fishermen, we would contribute in return a certain amount of benefit to the revenue which otherwise is lost. No doubt the revenue of the country would be greatly benefited this year by the fishermen had they had the benefit of freezers for bait, but the want of that commodify has caused almost a total failure this year of the fisheries in the deep sea. I find that it was not only the fishermen in my own province who have suffered but also the fishermen in Newfoundland. This year in all probability they shall have to come to the rescue of some of the fishermen in order to give them relief. I would not be at all surprised if an appeal should be made to the government, or by others on behalf of these fishermen to enable them to support their families this coming winter. Why should the government be so obdurate, why should they turn a deaf ear to the appeal I am making now on behalf of the fishermen. I am anxious also that the system of fishing should be improved, and if the government would establish a bureau for the fishermen, there would be no difficulty in reaching the desired end, and every one would be benefited. We can have incubators all along our shores for the reproduction of fish. At present a very large amount of the ova or fish egg goes to waste. Why? Because of the lack of care shown by the government. Those incubators, as far as lobsters are concerned, could be placed wherever there are packing establishments or canneries, but I would advocate more strongly that we should use natural ponds where they can be found where the seed lobsters could be placed and where they could deposit their eggs and undergo the natural process instead of a method that is absolutely artificial.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). Is the hon. gentleman not aware that that is being done ?

Mr. KAULBACH. In one county, Cape Breton; but that is no reason why we should not have one in Lunenburg and other counties. I do not think my hon. friend has gained much comfort by his inquiry. I also would advocate the freezing system for the reason that we could utilize those places for the storage of fish and for shipments to the west. That would benefit the fishermen all along our shores from Shelburne to Halifax in the east, and from Cape North to Halifax in the west. By that system they would be able to ship direct by the Intercolonial at Halifax without any interruption to the centre of this Dominion and get in return the products of the west. The farmers in the west and the fishermen in the east would have thereby the benefit of a larger and more profitable trade. At present we are deprived of that opportunity because we have not the facilities for transportation. Would it not be infinitely better for us to have an amount included in the estimates to enable the fishermen to market their products so that after they have spent their hours, their days, their weeks, their years, their lives in the employment of fishing, they would have a better market for their product than they now have. I would also advocate—although in this perhaps I am in advance of my rights—the granting of a bonus by the government to a specially constructed steamer in order that it might convey bait from these freezers to the banks where the fishermen frequently rendevous and there distribute the bait to those who wish to take it, and also receive the catch of fish and convey them to the freezers. This would be a general benefit. I offer this to the Minister of Public Works merely as a suggestion.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would suggest that this discussion might be more in order when the estimates of the Marine and Fisheries Department are under discussion.

Mr. KAULBACH. My hon. friend the Minister of Public Works will remember that I am only commenting on what has been stated by the gentleman who preceded me.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would not have raised the point except that I think the remarks of the hon. leader of the opposition and the gentleman who followed him were more in reference to the facilities for the transportation and landing of fish.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I was loath to interrupt and was waiting patiently until the hon. gentleman (Mr. Kaulbach) had finished, but then we shall have to adhere more closely to the matter under discussion.

Mr. KAULBACH. Mr. Chairman, I am much obliged for your kind consideration, but I think it is in the interests of the general public as well as of the fishermen that a public wharf be built on the shores of this Mill Cove harbour. What would be the use of the wharf, if the fishermen had no fish to land and if no boats came to it ? I am dealing with the matter in that way. Not a dollar is included in the estimates for Petite Rivière or for Mill Cove, although these places are deserving of a very great deal of consideration and would have had it long ago had it not been for interference. I have asked for a buoy off the eastern entrance to our habour, Lunenburg. This is necessary in the interests of the fishermen as well as for shipping generally, and also for the protection of life and property. Two steamers went ashore at this point within a very short time of each other, and several sailing vessels have been wrecked for want of a buoy; but I have not been able to obtain this necessary article. The constituency I represent pays into the treasury a large amount of money and to be told that we shall not receive one dollar is almost enough to set the people in revolt. I feel that we have not received justice, and it would have been better for the government themselves if they had not discriminated so conspicuously between my constituency and other constituencies, one of which, the constituency of Victoria, has nine votes in the estimates, but where is Lunenburg ? I feel I would be recreant to the trust imposed in me if I remained silent and did not give expression in the most earnest manner to this protest on behalf of the fishermen. I still trust that the government will come to the rescue of Lunenburg ; it is not too late for them to include items for these purposes in the supplementary estimates that are yet to come down.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman will excuse me, but I certainly was perfectly in earnest when I said that I did not know that there was an urgent application for the works he has asked. If the hon. gentleman will let me have a memorandum of the particular one to which he referred, I will have a report on it made at once.

Mr. KAULBACH. And an amount placed in the supplementary estimates for this year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot say that.

Mr. MATHESON. It is unfortunate that some of our friends opposite do not know more about Nova Scotia. One gentleman asked if the local government are doing anything for the people. He also said that they have a school in Ontario. I am sorry that school does not teach more than it does; if it did he would know that the government of Nova Scotia is doing all that it should do for that province and is appropriating about as much for school purposes as any government in the world. That government also gives the people of Nova Scotia roads and bridges, good iron structures, and before the Dominion of Canada took their revenue they also gave to the people wharfs and piers. It will not do that to-day because the people of Nova Scotia are paying another government to do it. To hear some members talking in this House about the poor fishermen of Nova Scotia you would almost think that they were the recipients of something that did not belong to them. I venture to say that one fisherman in Nova Scotia will contribute to the general revenue of the country as much as half a dozen of your farmers, for the very reason that the fishermen import and buy more of the goods which they consume. I presume that a farmer in Ontario can live largely out of his farm. Our fishermen have to send their fish abroad and get cash in order to buy the produce of Ontario. You will not buy it, and it is a great pity that the people of Ontario will not buy fish—they need it.

Now, what we want from this government is harbours; let them improve our harbours, improve our piers; in other words, do for us what we were doing for ourselves before the Dominion government took away our revenue. I think that is very reasonable. When the hon. gentleman across the way was talking of the injustice that was done to his county, I was reminded how often we were told, in the old days, that we could not expect anything from the government, because we were not sending a supporter of the government. That is what we were always told in the past, and in fact we learned not to look for anything. We did not look for anything during eighteen years, because we were taught that we had no right to expect government favours, that this heaven-born right belonged only to those who were supporting the government of that day. Let our friends understand that the fishermen of Nova Scotia are not entirely dependent on the paltry help they may get from this government. The great trouble with our fishermen is that they have not received the attention that the farmers of Ontario have received. They are scattered over the face of the Atlantic, and they do not often meet together to concoct plans and to send resolutions to the government asking for assistance. It would be well for them perhaps if they did. At the same time, I hope that the hon. member for West Elgin (Mr. Robinson) will travel a little more. He will find that there are schools in Nova Scotia as well as in Ontario. He told us there were schools in Ontario for farming. Well, they might teach their children a little of something else, so that they might know that there are other places in the world besides Ontario.

Mr. BLAIN. The Hon. Finance Minister made the statement that one of the reasons why Lunenburg county was neglected was that the member for that county had failed to put in his requisition for help. I wish to read from the 'Hansard' of last year a few words of the hon. member for Lunenburg. He said:

> I observe quite a number of estimates for different counties in Nova Scotia. Annapolis appears not to have been overlooked. Neither have Richmond, Guysborough, Victoria, Inverness and other counties. The two counties west and adjoining Lunenburg, not excepted, or in other words, all are included in the roll for benefits. But I am afraid that the Minister of Public Works has forgotten the most important part of the entire coast. He says he is very desirous of forwarding the interests of the fishermen. . . . I may tell him that there is a long stretch of coast in St. Margaret's bay where, for twelve or fifteen miles, there is almost a continuous town, house almost against house for that entire distance, with an immense population. I have been asking for a number of years for a breakwater for Mill Cove, St. Margaret's bay. The property of the fishermen there is in jeopardy every time there is a storm. They have to fish in large boats; smaller boats would not do because they are exposed to the open ocean.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I submit whether that is not an open request to the government for some aid to be given to the fishermen in the county of Lunenburg. I may say for the information of the hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) that when an item was up for discussion last year in connection with the same county, my hon. friend from Lunenburg asked this:

> I hope the minister will expend that sum this year.

And the hon. member for Guysborough said, 'Strike it out.'

An hon. MEMBER. It ought to be struck out.

Mr. BLAIN. Well, I am not here to say whether it ought to be struck out or not. I am only pointing out that the hon. member for Guysborough, who is so anxious about the counties in the province he represents, when an item was up in the estimates for the county represented by an hon. gentleman on this side of the House, the hon. member for Guysborough so far forgot his interest in the fishermen for that county as to say 'Strike it out.' I might ask the hon. member for London (Mr. Hyman) why he wants it struck out?

Mr. HYMAN. The hon. member is mistaken, I made no interruption.

Mr. BLAIN. I am just pointing out to the Finance Minister that my hon. friend from Lunenburg has not forgotten his duty. And perhaps the Minister of Finance will say why it is that that county has been overlooked?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I did not make any charge of neglect against the hon. member for Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach). I stated that I was not aware, except as respects dredging, of any application that my hon. friend had made from his county. The hon. member for Peel (Mr. Blain) now calls attention to something my hon. friend said a year ago. Well, I can only say that when these estimates were being prepared I sent to the Public Works Department and asked if there were any applications from Lunenburg, and I was informed there were none. I do not want to find fault with the hon. member for Lunenburg; he has been here for seven months, and I think that if this matter was of such vital importance, he might have taken the trouble to place it before the department. However, I am not making any accusation against the member for Lunenburg, far from it. Since I am speaking on the subject, let me say that there is a great difference between the county of Lunenburg and some other counties, notably the county of Victoria, in respect to fishing. Lunenburg is a county in which the great mass of the fishermen are deep-sea fishermen, who go away in fine vessels. They are not so much concerned as the boat fishermen in the matter of small breakwaters and works of that character, and it might follow that the member for Lunenburg would not want works of this character at all, though there is one particular place the hon. gentleman now speaks of. But there is that important difference. There is another difference. The county of Victoria has no railway, not a mile of railway, and no prospect of any. This county, thus isolated, is exposed to the ocean and there is no other county in the province which is at such disadvantage in regard to the facilities for travel and the means of communication. It is only by such aids as these that have been granted that the people of that county can really carry on their business as boat fishermen. There is a very important difference, and nobody knows it better than the hon. gentleman from Lunenburg. The fishermen of his county are of a different class, as respects the majority. There are some boat fishermen, but the great majority of the fishing population in the county of Lunenburg, and the most prosperous fishermen in Nova Scotia, are the deep-sea fishermen, whose condition is not exactly the same as that of the boat fishermen.

Mr. KAULBACH. I beg slightly to differ from the Minister of Finance in one particular. From the border of the county of Queen's, which he represents, to the county of Halifax, there is one continuous line of habitations of fishermen who are dependent very largely upon shore fishing for their living. There is another class of fishermen, known as deep-sea fishermen, most of whom live along the shore, and a large number of whom depend entirely upon that kind of fishing in the summer time. But as soon as spring and autumn come they are then dependent upon the shore fishing, and look to that largely for their living. This year they are compelled to look to it entirely in consequence of the failure of the deep-sea fishing. Now, with regard to the appeal for assistance, the Minister of Finance must know that it was only two months ago I said to him, when meeting him: 'You will not forget me in the estimates.' Well, I will not say a great deal about that. I do not want to make an appeal from day to day, and make myself appear ridiculous, and get an answer by way of a refusal, but I certainly, from the friendly remark that was made at that time, expected that I would see something in the estimates for the county of Lunenburg.

Mr. HACKETT. I would like to refer to the statement made by the hon. Minister of Finance in regard to the county of Victoria. I think he said that it extended from the gulf on one side to the Atlantic on the other. Is that correct?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I said that Victoria had the sea on two sides of it. Cape North is in the county of Victoria and part of it in Inverness. The county of Victoria is one of the most isolated counties in Nova Scotia, having no railways whatever. That was the point of my observation.

Mr. HACKETT. I would like to ask the hon. minister what kind of a structure he is going to have at Briton Cove for oats to land at?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is proposed to construct a wharf 200 feet long by 16 feet wide. It is to be built of both faced and round timber and to have ballasted cribwork.

Mr. HACKETT. What depth of water will there be at the end of the wharf?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Four and a-half feet at low water.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the rise of the tide there?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About four feet.

Mr. HACKETT. Is it intended specially for the accommodation of the lobster-packing industry which has been erected there lately?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, there is the lobster factory, but there is quite a large number of people interested besides those engaged in the lobster factory.

Mr. KAULBACH. You will pardon me, Mr. Chairman, if I refer to a matter which is of very material importance to the interests of the shore fishermen as well as the deep-sea fishermen, and it is the menace offered by the dog-fish frequenting the waters of Nova Scotia in certain seasons of the year. This is a matter that should be looked into very carefully. I know that petitions have been circulated through the various counties in Nova Scotia—I am not sure about the adjoining provinces—and forwarded to the Department of Marine and Fisheries in the early part of this year. I am sorry that the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Préfontaine) is not present. I would like to know what has been done in that respect. Something ought to be done, because, during the past two years the dog-fish have been in such numbers that they have driven every other description of edible fish out of the water. I think the government might take the matter up and view it carefully in the interest of the country generally.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Does my hon. friend mean that they will take this wharf ?

Mr. KAULBACH. No, I do not mean that, but if the hon. minister gives me the hint and says that I should bring it up later, I shall do so.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. All right.

Mr. HACKETT. Is it intended that the boats shall go and land their lobsters or other fish on the pier and then seek shelter elsewhere ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not understand my hon. friend's question.

Mr. HACKETT. In Prince Edward Island where we carry on such an industry I know gentlemen who built their factories on headlands 100 feet high, built their own accommodation, and did not come to the government and ask them for any assistance. These gentlemen found that by building their factories on these headlands, as high as this building, and placing their gear there to hoist the lobsters from the fishermen's boats, canning the lobsters and placing them on the market, that they could make money. Now, in this case, hon. gentlemen opposite are asking that an establishment having ten boats, which has been opened at Briton Cove, shall have the assistance of this government to the extent of expending $4,000 for the building of this wharf. This is only the commencement of this expenditure. I protest against this because I am aware that a fisherman in Prince Edward Island has to carry on his business through his enterprise and energy with whatever little capital he can put into it himself without receiving any government assistance. The gentlemen to whom I have referred and who have without any assistance established a business there, have found it to be very remunerative. They have carried it on for years without any assistance of this kind. The hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) spoke particularly of fish. I am not going to speak altogether of fish. He spoke of the great fishing industry of Nova Scotia. It is a great industry, and we are all proud of it. But it is not all fish there. If the hon. gentleman will look at the reports of a few days ago he will find that that province is about exporting to the old world one thousand barrels of apples, worth $4 per barrel. So that, when we arise here to speak of fishing matters, we are not speaking altogether of the resources of that great country from which we come. It is true that there may be some sectionalism. Our hon. friends opposite want to make it appear that the province of Ontario is directly opposed to the interests of the maritime provinces. I claim that is not correct. I have found that in all my intercourse with my friends from Ontario and Quebec on this side of the House they have always been willing to do what is right and fair by the people of the maritime provinces without distinction, whether it was New Brunswick, Nova Scotia or Prince Edward Island. I think it is a very bad policy for our hon. friends opposite to endeavour to place that particular province against the lower provinces in this respect. We are one people from the west to the east. We are endeavouring, as far as possible, to carry out the great object of confederation. There should be no rivalry between one part of the country and the other, and the man who raises that question—I do not care whether it is on this side of the House or the other—is an enemy to his country and not deserving of any praise from any person.

Cow Bay Run—breakwater to protect outlet of harbour, $4,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Would the hon. gentleman explain this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a vote of $4,000 to make provision for the construction of a breakwater at the outlet of Cow Bay Run, situated at the mouth of Halifax harbour. The outlet has for some years been a source of trouble to the people of that district who have been blocked on several occasions from getting into the shore of the lake, causing much inconvenience to the fishermen who use the outlet as an entrance to the lake which forms their harbour of refuge, and which affords safe anchorage during rough seas.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This will complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The report of the engineer says it will.

Cheticamp wharf, $11,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This will complete the work; the total cost is $15,000.

Cariboo Island causeway, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to form a harbour of refuge for fishermen in Pictou county. The estimated cost is $2,000.

Chegoggin pier, $1,400.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is in Yarmouth county. It is for a training pier to confine the water to the channel.

Mr. BLAIN. Will it be done by contract?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer tells me that it can be better done under the supervision of our local engineer. This vote will complete the work.

Drum Head breakwater, $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete payment on the contract. The total expenditure has been $5,500.

Donald's Head—repairs to breakwater, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Shelburne and Queen's. The estimated cost of the work is $3,000.

Duncan's Cove approach to wharf, $200.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this to be expended on a highway?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. HACKETT. I suppose it is between the wharf and the highway.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

East Jeddore wharf, $1,800.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This in Halifax county?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it a new wharf?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the total cost is estimated at $1,800.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will the work be done by contract?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer thinks that the work will be done more satisfactorily under the supervision of the local engineer.

Mr. BLAIN. Is the minister keeping in mind whether there is any appropriation in the main estimates for any of these?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

East end Cape Sable island—entrance to boat harbour, $2,200.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Shelburne and Queen's county. It is a harbour for the fishermen.

East Berlin breakwater—to complete, $700.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Queen's county.

East Bay wharf—to complete repairs, $300.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Cape Breton county.

Frudes Point wharf, $1,500.

Mr. BLAIN. Was there a petition from the people of the county for this expenditure?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is in Shelburne, and I am pretty certain there was.

Mr. BLAIN. Perhaps the minister could get the information from the department.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am pretty sure there was a request for it, because I see here that it has been referred to Mr. Locke, the local engineer, to make a report. That is the way we deal with these petitions as a rule.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is possible that representations may have been made to me by the people there, and I may have asked the department to inquire into it.

Mr. BLAIN. I would like to know the form of these petitions, because we on this side of the House, are not familiar with the necessary form to reach the government.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no special form.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A great many of these small works are petitioned for either to the department direct or to the members. We ask for a report from the engineer, and it is on that report, as a rule, that these estimates are made up.

Five Islands wharf—repairs, $700.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to raise the government wharf two feet and renew covering. It has been asked for by the people of Colchester county.

Mr. GOURLEY. It is a very proper expenditure. There is a good wharf there, and it ought to be repaired. Have you had a report from the engineer?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Dodwell made a report.

Mr. GOURLEY. Did he say $700 would be enough?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is his estimate.

Mr. GOURLEY. The people themselves thought it would cost about that.

Finlay Point wharf, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Inverness county.

Fort Lawrence landing pier, $11,400.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost of the work is $16,400, and this is to pay for the balance of the work under contract. It is in Cumberland county.

Mr. BLAIN. When was this work commenced ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contract was let during the present calendar year ; a vote was taken in the main estimates and this is to complete it.

Mr. HACKETT. What will be the depth of the water at the end of the pier ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know what the average depth of the water is. It is said at the spring of the year to be 45 feet. I do not know what it is at low-water.

Mr. HACKETT. It is in the Straits of Northumberland.

Mr. LOGAN. This work is not on the Straits of Northumberland, but is at the head of the Bay of Fundy. At high tide the depth of the water is sometimes 50 feet, and at low tide it is probably 12 or 15 feet. This landing pier is for the accommodation not only of Fort Lawrence, but of the town of Amherst as well. It is 2½ miles from that town. The manufacturers there have complained for many years that they have not had facilities for unloading materials brought from the United States, particularly southern pine. Then, there are shipments of apples from the lower part of the Bay of Fundy and other things brought to Amherst, for which there is at present no landing place.

Mr. BENNETT. Did the town of Amherst make any contribution towards the cost, or give a site ?

Mr. LOGAN. If I may be allowed to answer the question, I may say that the town of Amherst has contributed nothing. I do not think the site will cost anything, because it is to be built where the land is not valuable. I may say that the town of Amherst is a leading manufacturing town, and contributes largely to the revenue.

Mr. BLAIN. Has any work been done on the wharf so far ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I expect so, as the contract was let in June.

Mr. BLAIN. What was the amount ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Fourteen thousand, eight hundred and ninety-five dollars. It is estimated that this will complete the work.

Freeport—landing pier, $3,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Digby county. It is to provide for the construction of a landing pier at Freeport, on the east side of the Grand Passage between Long island and Brier island. It will reach a depth of 10 feet at low water in ordinary spring tide.

Granite village—mooring pier, $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Shelburne county. The vote is expected to cover the total cost of the work.

Gabarouse—extension of breakwater, &c., $6,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Is that for the completion or the commencement of the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for a continuation of a work that was under way. It is to be 80 feet long and 27 feet wide. This is the amount which the chief engineer estimates will complete the work now undertaken.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This is in the county of Cape Breton is it not ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is this being done by day's work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why are these works being done by day's work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They ar not all being done by day's work. It is to be done by tender and contract, except works which the chief engineer reports, for reasons given, can be better and more economically done by our own engineers buying materials and employing men, such as repairs and improvements, for which specifications cannot be made and which, if done by contract, would cost a great deal more.

Mr. COCHRANE. I can understand how the repairing of a wharf would be better done by day's work ; but where there is $6,000 for the extension of a pier——

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I find that I was mistaken in regard to this work. It will be done by contract.

Mr. BLAIN. There was $3,500 voted for this work last year. Is it the policy of the department to have an engineer's report for a work before any money is voted for it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In almost every case.

Mr. BLAIN. What was the vote of $3,500 for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There was an expenditure of $4,800 on this same breakwater, and $3,900 was spent on dredging at that point.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the call for this very great expenditure on this breakwater ?

Mr. KENDALL. I may say Gabarouse is the largest fishing district in the county of Cape Breton. For twenty-five or thirty years the inhabitants of that place have requested successive governments to construct a breakwater. I have myself seen six large vessels smashed on the shore for want of this protection. Three or four years ago the Minister of Public Works visited the place and became impressed with the necessity of a beakwater. The representatives of Cape Breton county for the present and the future will not be satisfied unless larger appropriations are made for the work. This amount of $6,000 will perhaps be little more than sufficient to buy the creosoted timber which is necessary, and next year I shall ask the government to make a further vote to complete the work. It is an important work, and as long as I represent the county, I shall urge the government to make a sufficient appropriation to afford the necessary protection.

Mr. BLAIN. Might I ask the hon. genleman if there was a petition presented to the government for this work ?

Mr. KENDALL. I may tell the hon. gentleman that petitions were presented to the late government again and again, but they turned a deaf ear to them. Petitions were made for this extension to my colleague and myself on several occasions and to the government, and we were determined to have this work constructed.

Mr. BLAIN. I would like to know how the ear of the government is to be reached in connection with works of this kind. My hon. friend from Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach) has tried to get the attention of the government on behalf of his county but without avail. The Finance Minister has told us that petitions have been sent in from time to time for this work, how did these get to the ear of the government ? Of course, my hon. friend (Mr. Kendall) made a little threat about next year. Here is an amount of $3,500 for last year, and $6,000 for this year, and the hon. gentleman representing the county (Mr. Kendall) has given notice that that is not nearly enough and that next year they shall come for a further amount. When will this cease ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am asking for a piece of work 80 feet long by 27 feet wide. If any further extension is required, it will be for the House to judge whether that will be granted.

Mr. BLAIN. What about the $3,500 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There was a contract for $8,500, and $3,500 is for the approach.

Mr. BLAIN. $3,500 was asked last year to vote a breakwater there. What became of the money ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was for a part of the breakwater, 190 feet long, which was under contract. It was to complete the contract under way.

Mr. BLAIN. There is a further expenditure.

Mr. KENDALL. Yes, and it does not go far enough.

Mr. TAYLOR. Has the hon. minister experimented in putting down some of these piers with cement instead of with timber as I suggested last year. By using cement, we would not have to spend so much money on repairs.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In some of the larger works, I have decided to use cement instead of timber. In some of the smaller works, I have asked the engineer to change from wood to cement when there is not too much difference in the cost.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Cement would last longer without repairs, would it not ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If cement is well done, it lasts almost for ever.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). And where you use creosote timber, you have to import it, whereas you can get the cement in our own country.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this work intended to concentrate the water of the river in the main channel or is it built into the ocean ?

Mr. KENDALL. It is in the ocean.

Mr. HACKETT. What will be the depth of water inside the breakwater ?

Mr. KENDALL. Ten to fifteen feet.

Mr. HACKETT. That would give protection in local shipping.

Mr. KENDALL. Yes.

Glace Bay, N.S.—wharf, $15,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There was a prolonged discussion on this subject last session. I am asking $15,000, and the money will not be spent unless an agreement, such as was then discussed in a general way, be entered into by the company.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think the point made was that the bay, once this wharf was constructed, should be the property of the Crown and that some arrangement should be made with the coal company to that effect.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. Were any moneys collected at this wharf ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The property is vested in the Dominion Coal Company, and the people have been asking for improvements which would cost a great deal of money. It was thought that some arrangement might be come to between the private owners and the department, which will be satisfactory and save a large expenditure.

Mr. INGRAM. Were no moneys collected at this wharf ?

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). The Dominion Coal Company are owners at present, and will collect the wharfage. The government have nothing to do with the wharfage.

Mr. INGRAM. But this company is asking for $25,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, it is the people of Glace Bay, and not the company, who are asking for this money. The company are indifferent. Glace Bay used to be a shipping point but the company constructed a line of railway and shipped their coal elsewhere and the harbour fell into disuse. In the meantime it has become the centre of a mining district, with a population of some 20,000 within a radius of three miles, and the people desire communication by water as well as by rail. The idea is that if the government will give something, the company will be induced to co-operate and the harbour may be opened and a public wharf established there.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the wharf belong to the public ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That will have to be a matter of negotiation between the company and the government.

Mr. INGRAM. Then it is not a public wharf and will not be until some future arrangement is made.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It will have to be a public wharf, but the company might have some privileges over it in return for its contribution. The opening of a harbour and general improvements will cost a good deal more than $15,000. It will be a wharf in the general sense. But there will have to be an arrangement with the company.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The contention of the company was that they owned this harbour. That is to say, it is not a harbour at all until made so by the company.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The old Glace Bay Mining Company.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Originally it was not a harbour, but it was made so by one of these companies whose rights are now vested in the Dominion Coal Company. A company could not interfere with a navigable water but it might be possible that this company having itself created a navigable water would have absolute control of it. When this vote came up before us, the point was taken by myself that before the government expended a large sum of money for the benefit of the public in Glace Bay they should see to it that the public would actually have rights in the harbour. It would therefore be necessary to procure from that company some assignment or conveyance of it rights so that when the harbour should be once established and the wharf built, the public would have the same rights as if the harbour had been a navigable water in the first instance.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is quite right.

Mr. INGRAM. I have here the Sydney 'Daily Post' and in it I find an article in which it is stated that this matter has been the subject of negotiations carried on by a civic committee of which Mr. D. M. Burchell and Henry McDonald, of Glace Bay, were members. The item reads :

> The supplementary estimates brought down in parliament contain an item of $15,000 for improvements of Glace Bay harbour. This with the $10,000 previously voted makes up the amount asked for by the Dominion Iron and Steel Company, lessees of the Dominion Coal Company.

That would be $25,000 altogether, including the $10,000 in the original and the $15,000 now asked for. A letter is published in this paper from Mr. C. Shields, late manager of the company, to the committee above named, in which he says :

> Sydney, C.B., March 9, 1903.
> Gentlemen,—Replying to your favour of the 4th instant regarding Glace Bay harbour :—
>
> As stated by me to your committee the Dominion Iron and Steel Company, lessees of the Dominion Coal Company, will build and repair its piers and wharfs at Glace Bay harbour, and also erect a coal shipping pier for the purpose of loading coal vessels coming to the port with produce or other freight and which desire a cargo of coal. It being understood, however, that we will not undertake to sell coal in order to find loading for such vessels, but will use them to move coal that we have sold as suits our convenience, or to sell them cargoes of coal if they desire it.
> The above offer is made providing the government will grant the sum of $25,000 towards the repairs, and rebuilding the piers and wharfs——

That would sound as if the government were rebuilding the piers and wharf.

—and also that they will dredge and keep dredged the entrance to the harbour.

Now what the company propose to do is :

The company will keep the harbour dredged inside of the piers, the rate of wharfage to remain as at present.

Trusting that this will cover your requirements and that the arrangements may be brought speedily to a satisfactory conclusion.

I remain, yours very truly,

C. SHIELDS.

This article goes on to say that through the work done by this committee the company is prepared to do this, provided the government carries out its proposition slated in the letter.

That would show that while the total vote at present is $25,000 the government are pledging themselves to keep this harbour properly dredged for this company for all future time. What the citizens of that section of the country would require is that they should not be deprived of the use of that harbour or that they would not be asked to pay unreasonably for privileges which they as citizens would require in connection with it. Therefore, I think this parliament should carefully protect the interests of the public and not allow any company, whether a coal company or a steel company, to monopolize that harbour to the detriment of the people residing in that locality.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). The opening of the harbour at Glace Bay has been an issue for at least four or five years. As has been stated, this harbour is the property of the Dominion Coal Company. A number of years ago the Dominion Coal Company abandoned that harbour as a port for shipping coal and the people of Glace Bay and the surrounding district have felt for many years that it would be to their interest to have this harbour reopened and to have the Dominion Coal Company induced to resume the shipment of coal from it. Negotiations were carried on for a number of years between the Dominion Coal Company and the town council of Glace Bay. The letter which the hon. gentleman has read was written by the late manager of the Dominion Coal Company to a committee of the town council of Glace Bay, who were conducting negotiations between the town and the company. In order that the harbour might become the property of the government it would be necessary in the first instance to purchase the harbour. I myself approached the Dominion Coal Company three or four years ago and conducted some correspondence with them ; at that time they stated that they would not sell the harbour. It was felt then by the committee, consisting of the mayor of Glace Bay, who is familiar with the interests and requirements of the people of that neighbourhood, and other gentlemen equally interested in the welfare of the town, that the best solution of this question was that which is set forth in the letter from the general manager of the coal company to the committee. That delegation was in Ottawa at one time. The gentlemen present being the mayor of Glace Bay, Mr. Henry Macdonald, who was a member of the council, and Mr. N. J. Gillis, one of the members of the local legislature and a resident of Glace Bay. They discussed this matter with the members of the government and with my colleague and myself and we all concluded that the interests of Glace Bay would be very well served by the government contributing this $25,000 towards the reopening of the harbour. The company estimate that in order to open the harbour and make it a fit place for the shipment of coal an expenditure of at least $75,000 would be required. For my part I feel that the mayor of Glace Bay and those who were associated with him in these negotiations will take good care that the rights of the people of Glace Bay are fully protected. Personally I will see, so far as I am able to see, that all possible rights are secured to the people of Glace Bay on these wharfs proposed to be rebuilt by the Dominion Coal Company. They have gone into this matter and have represented to my colleague and myself that if the Dominion Coal Company undertake to reopen the harbour and resume shipping coal it will be decidedly in the interests of the people at Glace Bay and at the surrounding collieries. Those who are acquainted with the situation know very well that this is a most important work and feel that the plan proposed and agreed upon between the committee of the town council of Glace Bay and the Dominion Coal Company, if carried into effect, would be perfectly satisfactory and I am satisfied that it would be perfectly satisfactory to the government.

Mr. INGRAM. Do I understand the hon. gentleman to mean that the people of this district prefer the arrangement as he has stated.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). I state without any hesitation whatever that the general opinion in the district as represented by the mayor and members of the delegation is overwhelmingly in favour of such an arrangement as I have indicated.

Mr. INGRAM. Is the entrance to this harbour on the property of the company, or is it public property ?

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). The entrance to the harbour is public property of course. It is on the shores of the Atlantic.

Mr. INGRAM. And is it properly protected so that the company could not monopolize the entrance to the harbour ?

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). There is no danger in the world of the company monopolizing the entrance, even if they wished to. The more trade comes to the harbour the better it is for the company.

Mr. BLAIN. Might I ask the hon. gentleman who represents the county why it was abandoned, why the original harbour was abandoned ?

Mr JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). It was abandoned when the property of the Glace Bay Mining Company, who were originally conducting the mining operations there, became the property of the Dominion Coal Company. In 1893 the coal properties in that region were consolidated, and as a result the Glace Bay Mining Company shipped its coal there. But the Dominion Coal Company constructed lines of railway between Louisburg and Sydney and concentrated as much as possible the shipping of its coal to Louisburg and Sydney.

Mr. BLAIN. Is there plenty of water ?

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). Yes.

Mr. BLAIN. When this matter was up last year the acting minister stated they had abandoned it for lack of water.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). It is not correct that they abandoned it for the sole reason that there was not sufficient water. They abandoned it for the reason I have stated.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There may have been a lack of water for the larger class of vessels which were engaged in the coal trade. The Glace Bay Company conducted its operations on a modest scale, and their coal was handled with small vessels. The new enterprise undertook to employ heavier vessels, and for that reason they could not send their larger vessels into Glace Bay harbour. So, in a sense, it was due to lack of water for the larger vessels engaged in the coal trade.

Mr. BLAIN. The Minister of Finance said last year there was formerly a coal mine at Glace Bay, and after it was purchased by the new company they ceased shipping there, owing to lack of water.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That would mean lack of water for the larger vessels.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I would like to know if the government has received any offer from the Dominion Coal Company as to the deepening of this harbour and the dredging and repairing of the wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No definite conclusion has been come to. As the member for Cape Breton Mr. Johnston) has said, negotiattions have been going on, and it is assumed that a satisfactory arrangement could be made from a public standpoint if we had a vote of $25,000. The matter has been gone into fully and discussed on the floors of the House. The local people have offered to make arrangements for the improvements. Of course it is for the government to say whether these arrangements are satisfactory before they will agree to them.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I understand that the Dominion Coal Company own practically the whole harbour front there, and that there is a good deal of dissatisfaction among the residents of Glace Bay and vicinity as to the handling of these properties by the Dominion Coal Company. I also understand that the late general manager of the company, Mr. Shields, agreed or proposed that the company should dredge the harbour and fix up the wharfs if the government would give them $25,000 as a bonus. Now, Mr. Shields has left the company, and we have no guarantee that the Dominion Coal Company will dredge the harbour and repair the wharfs.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. member will see that we submit this estimate provisionally. No part of this money will be spent unless a satisfactory arrangement is made.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Nothing should be done until some arrangement is made satisfactory to the people of that vicinity. I think, as I have said, that the proper way to deal with this question is to appropriate part of the harbour front for the people of Glace Bay. There is a population of 25,000 or 30,000 in that territory who want to use this harbour, and I do not think that a monopoly of it should be held by one large corporation, or that we should give them $25,000 to keep up that monopoly. I understand that when the harbour front was prepared they changed the road and took away part of the public highway in order to take in these rights.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). Let me say one word more. I would like to say to my hon. friend that his informant is not up to date.

Mr. LEFURGEY. My informant comes from Glace Bay, and possibly knows as much about it as the hon. gentleman.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). I know exactly where the hon. gentleman's information comes from. However, I want to say to the hon. gentleman that the successor of Mr. Shields, Mr. Duggan, has stated that he is prepared to carry out the arrangement entered into by his predecessor in the office as manager of the Dominion Coal Company. Only a short time ago he was waited upon by the mayor, Mr. Burchell, and Mr. Macdonald, and others, in connection with this very matter, and Mayor Burchell and his associates received the assurance of Mr. Duggan that he was prepared to carry out every proposition submitted on behalf of his own company by Mr. Shields.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I do not think that this government should spend $25,000 upon the faith of any verbal statements by the manager of the Dominion Coal Company, however respectable he may be.

Mr. COCHRANE. I would like the minister to tell the committee what he considers would be a proper arrangement to make with this company. We have had some explanations, but still the affair appears to me mysterious. I would like to know from the minister what arrangements he thinks should be made with this company, so that the interests of the public might be protected, and that we might feel sure in voting this money that it was going for the benefit of the community and not of a corporation.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The matter is somewhat complicated. These people put a high value upon their property. On a previous occasion the House seemed to be favourable to making a contribution, provided it could be done on terms that would be in the public interest.

Mr. INGRAM. Do we understand the minister to say that the negotiations that have taken place were of a verbal character ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There have been representations between the municipality and the company as I understand, and representations have been made to the government with regard to what the company were willing to do. I may say to the committee that the company's interests there are very large. It will cost the Dominion an immense amount of money to provide the same facilities that the company offer to provide. If an arrangement can be come to between the company and the department by which the public interest will be secured, we will carry it out, if not this money will not be used.

Mr. INGRAM. That is not very satisfactory to this committee. The hon. gentleman is asking for $25,000 for an entirely new work. Now, we are asking if this is a verbal arrangement entered into between Glace Bay and the government ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have already said that there is no arrangement.

Mr. INGRAM. Then what is the object of the government in putting $25,000 into the estimates ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. So that if we can make a satisfactory arrangement we will have this money to carry out this work. If not, it will not be spent.

Mr. INGRAM. The minister is not frank with the committee. Surely these people came to the government in order to induce them to put this $25,000 in the estimates. If they had a proposition to make to the government, either verbally or in writing, it should have been communicated to this committee. It is only fair we should know what the proposition is.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I could not state it half as well as the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden, Halifax) has stated it to-day. I am sure he grasped it thoroughly. My hon. friend from Cape Breton (Mr. Johnston) has explained in a general way the arrangement that is proposed to be made.

Mr. INGRAM. I may be thick headed enough not to understand it, and I do not believe that any hon. member on this side of the House can understand what the government anticipates in the shape of an expenditure for the dredging of this harbour. What obligation does the government undertake if we vote this $25,000, and what expenditure does the hon. minister anticipate that the government will be liable to make if this arrangement is carried out ? The hon. member for Cape Breton says that an arrangement has been entered into between these parties.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). The hon. gentleman (Mr. Ingram) has misunderstood me. I did not say there was an arrangement entered into between the Dominion Coal Company and the government. What I did say was that the Dominion Coal Company had submitted a proposition to the town council of Glace Bay. That proposition, as embodied in a letter written by the general manager of the Dominion Coal Company, the hon. gentleman himself read a few moments ago. The hon. gentleman will find that the substance of the proposition is that the Dominion Coal Company propose to do certain work, provided the Dominion government make a grant of $25,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Is that an answer to the question I asked, if these people were satisfied with what the government were doing?

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). They are perfectly satisfied. I have no hesitation in saying that if the Dominion government carry out the proposal embodied in the letter of the Dominion Coal Company, the overwhelming majority of the people interested would be perfectly satisfied that the government had done their duty. As far as I am concerned, I feel that I can speak for the mayor of Glace Bay and for others in the council, when I say that they will take every possible means in their power to have secured to the people of Glace Bay the same rights in respect to this harbour as if the property were entirely theirs. That is my own position, it is the position of my colleagues and the position of the mayor of Glace Bay and those associated with him in this matter.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I do not understand that the company have an exclusive right to the harbour at all.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). They own it. They constructed it.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. They cannot own it. Even if it were an artificial harbour, the moment they construct it it is dedicated to the public. The public have a right to pay for the user of it a fair remuneration.

No company can erect a harbour on the sea coast and have it exclusively for their own purposes. They could no more do that than they could have a navigable river exclusively for their own purposes.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand that they procured these rights before confederation, but whether it was before or since, they could have procured these rights from the Crown at the time, whether by provincial or Dominion legislation. That is the position of affairs.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. It could only be by Act of parliament. I do not understand how the provincial government would have the power to give over a harbour and the exclusive rights to it to an individual.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Haggart) is quite right as far as navigable waters are concerned. There has been a decision that the Crown cannot grant any right that will interfere with navigation without the authority of an Act of parliament. It may be that there was in this instance such an Act of Nova Scotia, perhaps, before confederation. I do not know anything about that, but I understand that the company claims to have exclusive rights in that harbour, because they have practically made the harbour themselves. What I was insisting upon when an item in connection with this work was up for discussion was that the government, after spending $25,000, should be the owner of the wharf. Further than that, I say that absolute rights should be conceded to the public in respect to this harbour.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was in view of the discussion between my hon. friend the leader of the opposition and my hon. friend the Minister of Finance that I undertook to bring down this vote, and it was with the intention of carrying out the arrangement based upon the remarks made at that time.

Mr. INGRAM. This is a question that must have been considered for some time, and yet we are now in the position that we have this supplementary estimate brought down asking for this increased sum of money. I have complained all along that one of the abuses that has been permitted in this House is that the government come down and ask for a sum to be placed in the estimates without informing parliament what the proposition is and what obligation the expenditure of the money will impose upon the government. The time of this House has been taken up session after session with the consideration of such votes as this. I had hoped at the early part of the session, when the hon. minister assured us that if any new work was to be undertaken, for which a large sum of money was to be asked, he would have full and ample information laid before the House showing the purpose to which the money was to be devoted. We are now told that unless there is a satisfactory arrangement entered into the money will not be spent. Lest this work should turn out a sink-hole for the expenditure of public money, it is time that we should pause before we proceed with it any further. Let us have the information, let us know what the probable cost of dredging this harbour is going to be. The government must agree to the arrangement before they can meet the views of the coal company, because the coal company say that the government must dredge out the harbour. They say that they are willing to dredge out between the piers inside the harbour. Before entering into an arrangement of that kind, we should know how much it would cost. It may require that a sum of money shall be expended every year upon the dredging of that harbour, or it may be that it will only be necessary to dredge the harbour once in two or five years. But if it is necessary that the dredging shall be done year after year, the money of the country will be wasted.

Mr. BLAIN. May I ask the hon. minister if any of the $10,000 vote of last year has been spent?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. BLAIN. And this vote is for $15,000 more, making a total of $25,000. I understand the hon. gentleman who represents the county to say that a certain letter was written by this coal company to the municipal authorities of the district. May I ask him if a similar letter was addressed to the government?

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). This communication, addressed by the Dominion Coal Company to the authorities of Glace Bay, was forwarded to me accompanied by a resolution of the town council, endorsing the proposition; and these communications I sent to the Department of Public Works.

Mr. BLAIN. Do we understand that this $25,000 will not be expended unless the coal company carries out what is contained in that letter.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). Certainly.

Mr. BLAIN. It seems to me that there should be a direct communication from the company to the government, and that the minister should submit to us that communication, so that the committee might have a fair understanding of what agreement was likely to be entered into. This expenditure may be in the interests of the people, but it is an unbusinesslike proposition for a private member to state to the committee that he received the correspondence on which this vote is based. Are we to understand that whenever a private company wants an expenditure by the government, whether it be legitimate or not, it is to communicate with the representative of the county and not with the government direct? Surely that is not going to be the policy of the government.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The great majority of these resolutions and representations made by municipal bodies throughout the Dominion come through the member of parliament, no matter on what side of the House he is. I think it is well that such should be the case. I do not see anything wrong about it.

Mr. BLAIN. I can understand that if a municipal body asks for an expenditure in the public interest, it should send that representation through the member, but when a private company asks for an appropriation, it is a different thing.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The company is not asking for any appropriation here, or any favours. It is the people of the locality who want this done.

Mr. BLAIN. I do not understand it that way, and the committee does not either.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). The committee does.

Mr. BLAIN. The committee does not. The hon. gentleman may have it in his mind, but if so he has not been able to express it to the committee.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think the leader of the opposition made it clear to every gentleman in this House what was the object of this expenditure.

Mr. INGRAM. The Minister of Public Works says that it is the usual custom for a private member to hand these documents to the government?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I did not say that. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Blain) criticised the municipality for sending this communication to the member for the county, and I said that in my experience that was the usual custom.

Mr. INGRAM. What does the member do with the communication?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I should think it would be his duty to forward it to the department, as my hon. friend did in this case. I think my hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) has often done so himself.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the minister state what reply was made to this communication? I suppose that as a matter of courtesy, some reply would be made.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The substance of the reply was that the matter would receive consideration.

Mr. INGRAM. And that is all the information that the department has to justify it in placing this $25,000 in the estimates. Are we to understand that this is a new-found practice with the minister? I can foresee that there is going to be a large sum of money expended on this harbour, rightly or wrongly, and I protest against the meagre information given to the House. It has been like pulling teeth to get the little information we have got. There seems to be something to conceal. If this is to be the course pursued, I can tell the government that they will not shorten the session in getting through these estimates. We have our rights and duties on this side of the House and we intend to perform them. We are not like some gentlemen on the other side who are ready to swallow everything holus-bolus. We are criticising in a much more gentlemanly fashion than did the Liberals when they sat in opposition, and I know that we have been found fault with because we are too mild in our criticism of the various expenditures that are submitted to parliament. I had great hopes of the present Minister of Public Works, and I trust that he will not persist in following the course he has pursued in regard to this item, but that he will retrieve his position and be more frank in giving us information. Surely an engineer was sent to examine this place as to the probable cost, before this item for $25,000 was inserted. If the Minister of Public Works thinks it wise to treat the House in this fashion, I would like to hear him say so.

Mr. KENDALL. If the hon. gentleman is anxious to know about the dredging of Glace Bay harbour, I may tell him that there is a good sound bottom right out to sea, but sand and gravel and sea-weed accumulates, and that harbour has to be dredged perhaps once in three years, or perhaps once in 15 or 20 years. The outside cost would be from $1,000 to $3,000 whenever the operation has to be repeated.

Mr. INGRAM. Was that the information the hon. gentleman (Mr. Kendall) gave to the government to induce them to put this $25,000 in the estimates?

Mr. KENDAL. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. I presume it met with the approval of the engineer of the department, who, I suppose, knows this particular harbour?

Mr. KENDALL. Even if the repairs to the harbour and the additional equipment which we expect to have made were not asked for and were not provided, in all probability my colleague and myself would have asked the government to send a dredge there, in order to make ample provision for the small schooners that now frequent the harbour.

Mr. BLAIN. Are we to understand that this $25,000 is to be expended for dredging?

Mr. KENDALL. None of it.

Mr. BLAIN. Then it seems a little difficult to understand. The Finance Minister last year said that Glace Bay had been abandoned, for the reason that there was insufficient water to carry on the trade. The hon. gentleman who represents the county says no portion of this money is to be expended for dredging.

Mr. KENDALL. I presume so. I am not the responsible minister.

Mr. BLAIN. Whether that be true or not, how does the hon. minister expect vessels to get in now when they could not get in last year ?

Mr. KENDALL. Large vessels cannot get in now, but small ones can.

Mr. BLAIN. When the $10,000 was asked for last year, the Minister of Public Works said :

We will build about 250 feet of breakwater for this amount.

Mr. KENDALL. That should be breastwork, not breakwater.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the difference ? Does the minister propose to use any portion of the $25,000 to construct this 250 feet of breakwater, or is there a change of policy now ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think there is any intention of using any part of this money, except in accordance with the explanation which I have given to the committee.

Mr. BLAIN. Mr. Chairman, you cannot but feel that the opposition have some duties here. The Minister of Public Works, last year, comes forward and says : Here is an important work, for which we want you to appropriate $10,000. The money was voted but not expended, and the present Minister of Public Works comes forward and says : We want that $10,000 and $15,000 more, and he says : We do not propose to construct the 250 feet of breakwater at all. There is a change of policy. This is one of the reasons why the opposition are compelled to criticise these items a little more fully than would otherwise be necessary—because the government come forward hastily asking for appropriations of this kind without sufficient information.

Mr. INGRAM. You had better let this item stand, and perhaps at eight o'clock the minister can have the information.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have answered as far as I can every possible question, and have brought down all the information it is possible to obtain. That has been acknowledged and endorsed by the hon. leader of the opposition. If there is anything that the hon. gentleman will ask me to bring down, I will be only too glad to bring it ; but the item must be considered and disposed of some time.

Mr. INGRAM. If there is a breakwater there, surely the government will do something ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What is the use of the hon. gentleman making statements which he knows are not correct ? That may have been a policy thought of at the time.

Mr. KENDALL. No, it is a printer's mistake. The word should be ' breastwork,' not ' breakwater.'

Mr. INGRAM. Are they not the same thing ?

Mr. KENDALL. No, no. A breastwork is to keep back the land.

Mr. INGRAM. I understand that the government are going to abandon the work that was spoken of last year. Hon. gentlemen do not feel inclined to answer the question.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have already told the hon. gentleman that if there was any such proposition, it has been abandoned.

Mr. INGRAM. I did not so understand the hon. gentleman. That is definite.

Grand Narrows—extension to wharf, $3,100.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to make provision for extending the government wharf a further distance of 57 feet. This is the total amount intended to be expended on this work.

Mr. BENNETT. Are there any buildings or storehouses on these docks ? If so, are they rented, and what is the amount of the rent ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are no buildings on this wharf.

Georgeville wharf—extension, $2,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to make provision for the extension of the wharf 50 feet in length and 25 feet in width. The total cost of the work is estimated at $4,000. It is in the county of Antigonish.

Mr. GOURLEY. I want to ask if the work at Five Islands has been c mmenced yet, or do you propose to do it this fall ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The intention was to have the work started immediately after the passing of the estimates.

Mr. GOURLEY. It should be done this fall, because in the spring it would not be possible to get at it early enough.

Hall's harbour—improvements, $2,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in King's county. The total cost is $4,600. It is for a breakwater.

Indian harbour—wharf, $1,200.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for the construction of a small wharf.

Mr. BENNETT. Will there be any revenue ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, it is a small landing for the fishermen.

Mr. INGRAM. Is there any wharfinger there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I find that on these small landings there is no wharfinger and no charges. They are kept in the Department of Public Works and not transferred to the Marine department. There are no expenses except for repairs.

At six o'clock, committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Inverness (Broad Cove) Mines harbour—repairs to harbour works, $10,000.

Mr. McLENNAN. This harbour is in the county I represent. During the past two years three large mining properties have been in course of development in the county of Inverness. One of these is situated near this harbour and for several years the company developing this coal property made use of this harbour as a shipping point. Subsequently, however, the harbour having an insufficient depth of water, the company decided that it was not suitable for large shipments and decided to build a railway from the mines at Inverness, formerly called Broad Cove, to the Strait of Canso, where they now have an excellent shipping pier. Owing to the construction of this railway Broad Cove harbour has been in a measure abandoned. Although the company have discontinued shipping their coal from this port the people along the shore of Prince Edward Island and the northern parts of Cape Breton, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick who find it convenient to carry any coal they require in small schooners find that this harbour comes in very convenient. Thus the public are more interested in the reopening and improvement of this harbour than the company and hence it is that I asked the government to place in the estimates an amount sufficient to render this harbour adequate for the accommodation of this local trade. I may say that there are points of resemblance between this harbour and the harbour of Glace Bay. It, like the harbour of Glace Bay, was opened up by a company, but in this case the company which opened the harbour are agreeing with the government to throw this harbour open to the public upon condition that the government improve the harbour for public purposes.

Hon. Mr. SUTHERLAND.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the depth of the harbour ?

Mr. McLENNAN. In some parts of it there is a depth of from 25 to 30 feet. Originally it was a very large pond and this company which was opening the mines there dredged it out. They secured a dredge themselves, dredged the pond to a considerable depth, had the neck of land separating this pond from the waters of the gulf cut out and built breastworks on both sides of this opening so that the harbour is rather a commodious one now, except that these breastworks must be extended by adding piers to them in order to prevent the entrance to the harbour from filling in owing to the shifting of the sand.

Mr. HACKETT. How far is it from Broad Cove to Canso ?

Mr. McLENNAN. About fifty miles.

Iona—extension to harbour, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This $5,000 is to make provision for the extension of the wharf at Iona, adding at the outer end of the wharf an extension 157½ feet long. The total cost is estimated by the chief engineer of the department at $16,000.

Mr. BLAIN. A contract was let for this last year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think a contract was let. I think this is the first vote and this appropriation of $5,000 is taken now so that the contract might be let and the timber and stone taken out during the winter.

Mr. BLAIN. There was something voted for this last year. The minister then said that a contract was let at $7,840. Was that contract abandoned ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer tells me that I was under a wrong impression. I thought the Dominion had spent no money on that property before, that there was simply the wharf which was built there by the government of Nova Scotia before confederation. The chief engineer now tells me that $6,000 was voted by the Dominion and that is the vote to which my hon. friend (Mr. Blain) refers.

Mr. BLAIN. Would the hon. gentleman say whether that contract was completed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, that contract was completed last year. There has been expended on this work, including $3,000 in the main estimates, $15,925.60. The estimated cost of the completion of the work is $3,065.

Livingstone's Cove—repairs to breakwater, $1,800.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in the county of Antigonish. This breakwater sustained considerable damage by storm. The wharf there cost $14,000 or $15,000.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this breakwater built for the purpose of deepening the channel in the harbour, or is it on the outside beach?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This was originally built, I think, only as a harbour of refuge.

L'Ardoise—extension of breakwater up to shore (revote, $6,000), $18,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Richmond county, and the work is undertaken in accordance with the report of the engineer. It is proposed to build an extension 1,190 feet in length.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the meaning of the words 'up to shore'?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was an isolated breakwater, and we are making a connection to the shore from the old block. This is in Richmond county. It will be let by contract.

Mr. BENNETT. What has been spent, approximately?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About $30,000 previous to this. The chief engineer expects this vote will complete the work.

McKay's Point—wharf, $6,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Is this a new work, and will this amount complete it?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the estimated cost to complete. It is in Victoria county.

Mr. BENNETT. Is there any town there?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry the member for this county (Hon. Mr. Ross) is not able to be with us. There must be a place of some importance there, because I find that a steamer makes two trips a day to this place, with passengers and mail.

McNutt's Island beach protection—extension of, and repairs to work, $500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for an extension, and for filling up the cribwork and making repairs. It is in the county of Shelburne and Queen's. It will be done by day work under the supervision of the local engineer.

Malignant Cove harbour—repairs to works, $600.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Antigonish county. The original cost was $13,266.

Main à Dieu—breakwater on west side of harbour (revote), $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Cape Breton county. The extension will be 320 feet long. This is a work on which nearly $150,000 has been spent in the past. The chief engineer informs me that he has no doubt this $2,000 will complete the repairs.

Margaretville—general repairs to breakwater, $500.

Mr. BLAIN. Then the proposition is to extend it further?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, 157½ feet.

Mr. BLAIN. Is the population in this section increasing?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is an increasing trade there, in general merchandise.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this in Cape Breton county?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, in Victoria county where the bridge crosses.

Ketch harbour—dredging entrance channel, $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This harbour is in Halifax county. The vote is for the removal of sand in order to allow boats to get in.

Kingsport—reconstruction of pier, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in King's county, Nova Scotia, and is to supplement a vote of $3,000 in the main estimates.

Mr. HACKETT. Will the hon. minister kindly explain the vote for Margaretville?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Annapolis county. This is for miscellaneous repairs to the pier. This pier cost over $38,000.

Middle river—Shear dam, $2,400.

Mr. BENNETT. What county is this in?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In Victoria county. This is to make provision for the construction of a pile brush and shear dam on Middle river, 518 feet in length by 15 feet in width.

Mr. BLAIN. Is this a new work?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A new work. The total cost is estimated at $2,400.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the purpose of this shear-dam?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to keep accumulations from going into the mouth of the river.

Mr. BLAIN. Was there any petition from this section of the country asking for this work?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The engineer's report does not say that there was a petition but he says that representations were made by the inhabitants.

Malagawatch—improvements of boat channel, $300.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Inverness county.

Musquodoboit harbour—to complete approach to wharf, $300.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Halifax county and it is to complete the work that is going on there. The total estimated cost is $5,800.

Melbourne wharf—improvements, $900.

Mr. GOURLEY. Where is Melbourne wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is in Yarmouth county.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the engineer's report on this Melbourne wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is on the east side of the estuary of the river. A wharf is to be built 100 feet long and 20 feet wide with a return 20 x 20 feet so as to give a length of 40 feet to the outer edge. The depth of water at spring tide is 9 feet. This is being done on the representations of the people of Melbourne.

Mr. BLAIN. Was there a petition from that county ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, a petition was received on February 28th from the residents of Melbourne.

Necum Teuch—(revote, $1,200), $2,000.

Mr. GOURLEY. Where is that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In Halifax county. This is to complete a work which will cost $5,800.

North Gut, St. Ann's—wharf at Morrison's point, $2,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Is this a new work and what will be the total cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, this is a new work and the total cost is estimated at $2,800.

Mr. BENNETT. What county ?

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Victoria county.

Mr. BLAIN. Is this by petition or through the member ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A petition was received from Mr. J. L. Bethune who was at one time a member of this House and others.

North river, St. Ann—repairs to wharf, $900.

Mr. BLAIN. What county is that in ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Victoria county.

Mr. BLAIN. Did all these wharfs give out at once ?

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These are repairs.

Mr. BENNETT. Are all these docks given to Victoria in compensation for losing a member ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think so.

Mr. BENNETT. There seems to be a kind of squaring away.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The great majority of these small votes are simply made on the report of the local engineer that these improvements and repairs are necessary.

Mr. HACKETT. Will the hon. minister explain the difference between the item for North Gut, St. Ann's, and North river, St. Ann's ?

Mr. KENDALL. These works are eight or ten miles apart.

Noel wharf—repairs, $1,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Are we still in Victoria county ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, we have struck Hants county. This is to complete this work costing altogther $3,345.

Mr. BLAIN. Is this work being done by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, this was done under the supervision of the local engineer. This work cost originally $27,000 and the repairs and improvements which have been put upon it require an expenditure of $3,345. This is to complete the work.

Mr. BLAIN. This work has been completed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is going on now and it requires this $1,000 to complete it.

Ogden's pond—to complete channel, protection works, &c., additional amount, $800.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Antigonish.

Mr. HACKETT. What is being done there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a crib work forming a harbour at this place.

Oyster pond—beach protection, spur at outer end, $450.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Guysboro county.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the meaning of the words 'spur at outer end' ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They mean that this is an extension at the outer end of this protection work.

Poirierville (lower D'Ecousse) wharf—revote), $1,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete a work under contract.

Mr. BLAIN. What was the contract price ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contract was $4,388 and its contingencies $612, making $5,000.

Prospect wharf, $1,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Where is this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Halifax county. It seems to be a race now between Halifax county and Victoria county, and some one might calculate which is ahead. This vote, like others we have passed, is to complete a work that had been under contract.

Pleasant Bay—boat harbour, $1,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this Pleasant Bay any where near Prospect wharf ?

Mr. McLENNAN. This is for a boat harbour for the fishermen of Pleasant Bay. There are thirty-five of forty families in that settlement, and it is separated from the rest of the community by twenty-five miles of dense forest. There is no landing place except what will be afforded them by this wharf.

Mr. HACKETT. How many boats and men are employed in the fishery at Pleasant bay ?

Mr. McLENNAN. They are all fishermen, and almost each family has a boat. They fish in small boats and dories because they could not pull large boats upon the beach. They fish salmon and lobsters, and mackerel in the fall.

Parrsborough—landing pier, $750.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Cumberland county.

Pugwash wharf, repairs, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Cumberland county.

Picketts pier, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in King's county.

Pictou light beach, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Pictou county ; this is the total estimated cost.

Pembroke breakwater, $8,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for the construction of a breakwater to provide shelter for the fishermen's boats and vessels.

Mr. CLARKE. In what county ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Hants county.

Porter's channel, to finish, $2,500.

Mr. BLAIN. Where is this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Halifax county.

Mr. BLAIN. What was expended last year for this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total expenditure up to June, 1903, was $17,480. This $2,500 is to complete the work.

Mr. BLAIN. Last year there was a vote of $2,500 to complete the outlet, and the Minister of Public Works then stated as reported in 'Hansard.'

This work is going on for the last two years, and this is to complete it.

Is this a new story, or is it the same old story as last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know anything about the story of last year, but I am advised by the engineer that this will complete the work.

Mr. BLAIN. What about the engineer's report last year ? Do I understand the minister to say that this vote will complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The engineer informs me that this will complete the work. The total expenditure will be $20,000.

Port Hood—repairs, $1,500.

Port Hood harbour—closing of northern entrance with brush and stonework, $20,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total expenditure on the Port Hood pier has been $61,855, and this $1,500 is asked by the local engineer for repairs. This is a large wharf which was taken over by the Dominion government from the provincial government.

Mr. CLARKE. There are two items for Port Hood and we had better consider them together.

Mr. KAULBACH. Is this large vote for the closing of the northern entrance to connect the island with the mainland ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is the proposition.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the object of all this expenditure ?

Mr. McLENNAN. The $1,500 is for the repairs of the government wharf inside the harbour. The harbour of Port Hood, some 50 or 60 years ago, was one of the best harbours in eastern Nova Scotia, and was the home of the American fishing fleet, when there was a treaty of reciprocity between the United States and Canada. On many occasions about 300 sail would take shelter in Port Hood harbour, coming in from the storms of the gulf of St. Lawrence. About sixty or seventy years ago Smith's Island which is about a mile from the coast, was connected with the mainland by a narrow sandy beach, including a sheet of water about two miles long and a mile wide, constituting the harbour of Port Hood. At that time it was an excellent harbour of refuge. But this narrow beach was at first broken up slightly by the waves, and a small channel was formed through it, which has continued from that day to this, though the waters of the gulf of St. Lawrence beating in through it every year since have made it considerably wider. During that time the government of Nova Scotia had this wharf, upon which repairs are now to be made, built inside the harbour. At the time of confederation the Dominion government took over the wharf and made repairs and extensions to it. But owing to the breach in the beach to which I have referred, the sand began to pour in along the coast and right up against the government wharf, rendering a great portion of the harbour useless. I may say that where about sixty years ago the admiralty chart showed forty or forty-five feet of water in Port Hood harbour, there is not to-day over six or seven feet. That portion of the harbour which is exposed to the northwest wind is especially filling up badly with sand. Some years ago a coal mining company took hold of the coal areas just at the entrance to this harbour, within 300 or 400 yards of the water's edge. For about twenty years very little was done in developing this property. But about six or seven years ago, certain gentlemen from the cities of Toronto, Montreal and Halifax, took hold of this coal property, and built a shipping pier along the southern portion of this harbour, at an expense to the company of about $60,000. But it was found by experience that year after year, the northern entrance being open, the sand was pouring in and was not only injuring the shipping facilities around the government wharf, but was also reaching the company's pier at the southern entrance to the harbour. This company, then, in common with the public, are pressing upon the government the importance of having this northern entrance closed, if not altogether, at least partially in the meantime, and a sufficiently long pier built from the shore to keep out the sand, for a number of years at least. It is supposed by the local engineer, and it is also the opinion of the chief engineer, that as the pier is extended out the sand will bank up against it, and thus make it perfectly safe to have this entrance closed with work composed of brushwood and stone. I may say that the importance of this harbour was considered to be so great in the year 1878 that Sir Charles Tupper spoke of it in this House in the following words :

Mr. Tupper said he would like to ask the hon. the Minister of Public Works if the government had arrived at any conclusion with reference to a work of considerable importance in Nova Scotia, which had been under the consideration of the late government, and which had been brought to the notice of this government from time to time. He referred to the closing of the Port Hood harbour, Cape Breton.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this $20,000 all that will be required to make the obstruction to which the hon. gentleman has referred ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. To close this gap would be a very expensive work. As my hon. friend has said, this has grown to be a very important point. I will read a short extract from a report of the collector of customs there :

During the month of July, 1902, sixty-six sailing vessels reported inwards at this port. Forty-one of them subsequently reported outwards laden with coal from the Port Hood colliery. In August, sixty sailing vessels reported inwards, fifty-five of which took coal outwards. In September, sixty-one sailing vessels reported inwards, forty-eight taking coal outwards, and in October, all of the same year, thirty-five reported inwards, twenty-eight taking coal outwards. During the same months of 1902, eighty-two steamers reported inwards. During the present month the following large steamers loaded coal here and reported outwards : Greetlands, for Three Rivers, Que., 1,400 tons coal ; Congal, for Portland, Me., U.S.A., 2,000 tons coal ; Polino, for Quebec, 900 tons coal ; Eros, for Halifax, 1,450 tons coal ; also fourteen sailing vessels taking coal.

So that my hon. friend will see that a very large trade is being done there. But I may say that the engineers have looked into this subject very carefully, and they recommend this work, costing some $20,000, which they feel will afford great protection and relief to the harbour. A permanent dam would cost some $300,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this intended as the first vote towards a permanent work ; or is it merely a temporary expedient, as the hon. member for Inverness suggests ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot speak for the future, but the present intention is to do exactly what we are proposing. It may be more or less of an experiment, but the local engineers and the chief engineer think this work may obviate the necessity of the larger work. Of course, if the large work should have to be under taken, it will be necessary to ask for an appropriation for it, and to give full information with regard to it.

Mr. McLENNAN. The hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) is certainly mistaken if he thought I referred to this as a temporary work. I meant nothing of that kind. I meant that the work would be carried out piecemeal, and this would be a very fair beginning.

Mr. CLARKE. We are getting at the bottom of it now. What will a work of the character proposed cost as compared with the more substantial work ?

Mr. McLENNAN. If I remember rightly, the estimate of the engineer was $150,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this the first vote towards the $150,000 for this brush and timber work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think the engineers consider that this work can be carried across the deep water, but they think it will afford great relief to the harbour.

Mr. CLARKE. I would prefer to assume my share of the responsibility of making a permanent work there at a cost of $300,000 rather than embark upon an expenditure that will run up to $150,000 and be only temporary in its character, requiring to be renewed perhaps in two or three years.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The experiment, if it is to be called such, is to cost $20,000. I stated most emphatically that in the future the work would have to be dealt with on its merits.

Mr. GOURLEY. Port Hood is going to be a very important shipping port, and if the government are going to spend money there it ought to be spent intelligently. The best means should be taken to formulate a plan and then spend the money according to it. Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann have opened up large coal seams, from which they will ship enormous quantities of coal, and the work should be done thoroughly.

Mr. McLENNAN. The engineer reported that the work could be easily carried out with brush and stone.

Mr. BLAIN. Do I understand that the engineer reported that the work would cost $150,000 ?

Mr. McLENNAN. The local engineer reported upon the various plans by which this work could be carried out. The cheapest was by brush and stone. Another plan was by crib-work and there was a third plan more expensive than either.

Mr. BLAIN. This $20,000 is to be expended in the manner recommended by the engineer, as a part of the $150,000 ?

Mr. McLENNAN. Yes.

Mr. INGRAM. What are the prospects of trade at this point ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend was not here when I read from the report of the collector of customs, showing the very large trade. In the month of May there were shipped in steamers 5,650 tons of coal and fourteen sailing vessels besides were loaded at that port. A year ago in the month of August sixty vessels came into that port and fifty-five went out.

Mr. McLENNAN. I may say that one of the directors of that company is the Hon. George E. Foster, of Toronto, and if he did not consider it a prosperous concern, he would not have invested in it.

Mr. CLARKE. We will have to foster that industry.

Port Greville—extension of breakwater and repairs, $12,750.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to make provision for repairs on account of damage done by storms. The work will have to be let by contract. This harbour is in the county of Cumberland.

Port Howe—wharf, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to be a reconstruction by raising the old pier thirty feet. The total cost will be $2,000. This port is in Cumberland county. The work will be done under the direction of the local engineer. It consists of adding thirty feet to the old pier.

Port Latour—breakwater, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Shelburne county.

Port George—repairs to main breakwater, &c., $2,100.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Annapolis county.

Mr. BLAIN. Was any money expended there last year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, I have not the amount.

Mr. BLAIN. By contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Under the supervision of the engineer. It is just urgent repairs. These repairs were so necessary that I gave instruction to go on with them at once to prevent the whole work being destroyed.

Mr. BLAIN. There was an item last year of $2,300.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was expended.

Port au Pique—wharf, $2,500.

Mr. GOURLEY. This work should be proceeded with promptly, because unless done in the fall it will be too late. You cannot get the work done in time in the spring to make it available at the season of the year when the people want it. I am very glad this item is in the estimates. I have been urging on the minister ever since I came here, to give us this work. We have forty or fifty miles of coast without a harbour, so that our people are compelled, in treacherous weather, to make for land without the slightest protection from being cast on the rocks. We want from ten to fifteen wharfs along that shore in the county of Colchester, and I hope the government will regard this simply as a beginning. This work should be proceeded with at once in order that it may be completed in the winter in time for the spring navigation.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say that this item would not have been placed in the estimates had it not been that it was necessary that instructions should be given for the work to go on at once.

Port Maitland—extension of buttress on seaward side western breakwater shorewards, $1,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Yarmouth county; we are building 21,600 cubic feet of cribwork towards the shore.

Scott's Bay—extension of breakwater, &c., $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in King's county, and is for the carrying out of desirable improvements in the harbour of Scott's Bay, in accordance with the estimates of the engineer. There is to be an extension of the south breakwater, 50 feet, $1,300; raising south breakwater 3 feet, $200; extension of north breakwater, $400; and contingencies, $100, making altogether $2,000, the total cost of the improvement.

Swim's Point wharf—extension of, &c., $1,600.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the extension of some works in Shelburne county.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Why is it necessary to extend the wharf?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. To afford accommodation for the south shore steamships. This is a new service that has been established there, and the department is doing this so that these steamships can land at this wharf.

Mr. BLAIN. Is any of this money being expended on private property, or is the property generally owned by the government?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. So far as the information I received from the chief engineer of the department goes, none of these appropriations are being spent on private property. In any case where such property was not vested in the Crown, I have given instructions that it should be acquired before any appropriation was made. As I have said, the number of items is very large, but a great many of these are for urgent repairs to protect our own property. With a very few exceptions, no new works are being undertaken that are not completed by the amount here appropriated. Thus, although the amount is something like $300,000, we are not committing the country to any large undertaking, except two or three works that cannot be completed this year, as I have already explained.

Mr. GOURLEY. My complaint is that all your votes are trifling. I want you to know that we in Nova Scotia are not going to put up with these little trifling votes of $300. You are not dealing with the public service of Nova Scotia in a liberal and decent way, especially in regard to harbours. The whole of Nova Scotia is practically a harbour; the people are scattered around on the coasts in little villages, and the only means of communication with Halifax and other cities in summer is by boat, and therefore these small harbours are necessary. Otherwise, the fishermen would run the risk of having their boats thrown on the rocks without any protection. My charge is that you do not grasp the situation at all. The country in the early days got into the way of dealing with little dribblets in the maritime provinces, but henceforth we are not going to put up with that treatment, but will demand liberal and just expenditures. There are a number of items, but they aggregate only $300,000 when they should be nearer $3,000,000.

Mr. EMMERSON. Address your remarks to the opposition.

Mr. GOURLEY. I am addressing the government. They should find out that every item is for some beneficial purpose. I am charging them, as the government of the country, responsible for dealing with this whole service, with doing so in a niggardly manner. I want to enter my protest against the niggardly way in which the whole public service in respect to wharfs in Nova Scotia is being dealt with.

Mr. BLAIN. Did I understand the minister to say that the money is not being expended on private property in any of these cases?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is my information. Some cases of that kind came under my notice, and before I recommended an appropriation I asked that the proper steps be taken by the Justice Department to vest the property in the Crown.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). In any cases where money was being expended on property which was not the property of the Crown, would it not be the duty of the minister to inform the House of that fact?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I fully agree with that statement, and, as I have said, in the one or two cases of the kind that has occurred I insisted that the property should be vested in the Crown.

Mr. BLAIN. What cases were these?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. One is the case where $25,000 were spent on property which was vested in the Dominion Coal Company, and the other case, which has slipped my memory, was dealt with yesterday.

Skinner's Cove—boat channel and protective works, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Digby county, and the total cost of the work is estimated at $10,500.

Sydney quarantine station—extension of, and repairs to wharf, $3,050.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is done at the request of the Quarantine Branch of the Agriculture Department.

Summerville wharf—addition, $1,600.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Why is it necessary to make the addition ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Hants county. The wharf is now 300 feet long and 9 feet wide. The engineer reports that by adding a block we will render it safe for the steamer which calls regularly at this wharf. The water at present is not deep enough.

Spry Bay—wharf, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Halifax county and is a new work.

Mr. BLAIN. Will the minister say how much the property cost, and when it was transferred to the Crown ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We do not anticipate that we will have to pay anything for the site.

Tenecape—breakwater, $7,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Hants county.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will the hon. gentleman explain that ? It is a pretty large item.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is called for by the engineer in a report of January 9, 1902. It is at the mouth of the Tenecape river. It will reach a depth of twenty-four and a half feet at high water in ordinary spring tide. The proposed structure is to be 200 feet in length. The nearest railway station is thirteen miles away. Most of the trading is done by water, the nearest wharf being six miles distant. The proposed breakwater will give ample protection to shipping, and afford suitable facilities for landing. It serves the purpose of a wharf as well as a breakwater. The work will be let by contract.

Victoria beach—wharf, $25,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a somewhat expensive work. The engineer reports that it is to construct a deep water pier on the north side of the Annapolis basin, two miles across Digby Gut. It extends from the shore in a southerly direction, a distance of 734 feet. It is primarily intended to serve the purpose of a railway terminal and shipping pier, and also for schooners and small craft. I do not think the railway is altogether completed, but it will be completed during the present season. The total cost of the work is estimated to be $74,000.

Mr. COPP. I would ask the minister if this work is to be commenced before the completion of the railway. I am very doubtful if the railway will ever be built, and if built, I am still more doubtful whether it will ever be operated. I think it would be wise for the government to wait until the road is built. The road has not been commenced yet from Bridgetown to Victoria Beach, a distance of 30 miles.

Mr. KAULBACH. I am somewhat of the opinion of my hon. friend from Digby (Mr. Copp). I doubt very much if the railway will ever be built, and I think the Minister of Public Works would be acting unwisely were he to expend this immense amount of money in the construction of a public pier before he is very certain that the railway will be built beyond this point.

Mr. LOGAN. I am sorry that I cannot agree with either my hon. friend from Digby (Mr. Copp) or my hon. friend from Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach). This pier will be built at the terminus, not of a road 30 miles long, but at the terminus of a system of railways operated by the firm of Mackenzie & Mann in the province of Nova Scotia. They are building a road from Yarmouth to Halifax along the south shore, and have purchased what is known as the Nova Scotia Central Railway. They have also purchased this property known as the Victoria Beach Railway, so when this road is built to Victoria Beach, it will be one of the termini of their system of railways in the province of Nova Scotia. I do not think myself there is any question but that this road will be built, and if built it will be necessary to build this wharf and pier, not only for the purpose of the railway but for the purpose of the general public.

Mr. KAULBACH. I do not wish to speak disparagingly of the road, but I have an opinion, judging from the geography of that portion of the province, that a road may be built from Middleton down to Granville, opposite the town of Annapolis. When they reach that, I think they will hesitate before they go down along the basin to Victoria Beach. For that reason I think it would be wisdom on the part of the government not to build the pier until they decide definitely whether that railway will ever be built.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Representations were made to me that there was no doubt about this railway being completed almost immediately. I have no reason to think that there ever was any doubt about the parties being able to complete that work. I understand the member for Cumberland (Mr. Logan) states now the road is in the hands of a very strong company who are building several hundred miles of railway, and that it is their intention to complete this work at once. But having these statements before me I shall certainly be careful before spending the money. Representations have been made to me that the road is necessary for the development of the country and for the shipping, and I have put this allowance in the estimates, but the money will not be spent before I am satisfied beyond doubt that this road will be completed.

Mr. KAULBACH. I have no doubt in regard to the ability of Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann to build the road, but I have doubt as to whether they will build the road from Granville opposite Annapolis to Victoria beach.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Victoria beach was the objective point of the original western railway construction in Nova Scotia. The original construction was proposed from Halifax to Victoria beach. Later the road was diverted in another direction, but I think Victoria beach has always been in the minds of the people in that region as the objective point, so that it is really taking up what is a very old project. The road was in the hands of some gentlemen in Montreal of good standing and there is no reason to doubt that they would have carried it out but I was advised recently that they had made an arrangement for the sale of the road to Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann by means of which arrangement the road runs down through Lunenburg.

Mr. COPP. The road is already built from Lunenburg to Middleton, and this is an extension from Middleton to Victoria beach. I do not want to be understood as opposing this grant, but I have a doubt whether the road will ever be built from Bridgetown to Victoria beach, and I think it would be wise for the hon. minister to satisfy himself as to whether the road will be built before this breakwater is commenced.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How far is Victoria beach from Annapolis ?

Mr. COPP. Seventeen miles down the Granville shore.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is on the Annapolis basin.

Mr. KAULBACH. I remember the history of Victoria beach. There was no railway down to Digby. Since then the railway has been built from Annapolis to Digby and this road is a parallel one on the opposite side of the river. I have no objection to the road on that account at all. I did not express myself as opposed in any way to the grant, but it would only be wisdom on the part of the government to ascertain if this road is going to be extended beyond the town of Annapolis before undertaking this expenditure.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the intention in regard to the wharf when it is constructed ? Is it to be used simply in connection with the railway or for other purposes ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to be a government wharf under the direction of the Department of Marine and Fisheries and will be for shipping and for the use of the general public.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Will you have trains running down on it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is the intention.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Trains run on the wharf at Digby now, but it is still a government wharf.

Mr. BLAIN. Are we to understand that if the road is not constructed the hon. minister will not go on with the wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have said most distinctly that unless I was perfectly satisfied of the representations made to me that I would not feel warranted in going on with that work. I will inquire and be satisfied beyond doubt as to that.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is the road in course of construction ?

Mr. COPP. Not from Bridgetown down. It is between Bridgetown and Middleton only.

Wallace harbour—improvements and repairs, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Cumberland county. These are two extensions of the ferry landings at Wallace harbour, to cost $4,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose this work will be done under the supervision of the engineer ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Wentworth—wharf, $3,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Hants county. This is to make provision for the construction of a crib-work wharfing 120 feet long by 20 feet wide. The total cost is estimated to be $3,500.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this a new work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it to be constructed by tender or how ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a new work and I would be in favour of letting it by tender.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Are you so strongly in favour of it that you will do it in that way ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am so strongly in favour of it that I will do it in that way unless the engineer reports to me any reason why it should not be done in that way. If it were merely repair work there might be some justification for not doing it by contract, but where it is a new work it is very much more satisfactory to me at all events to do it by contract.

Mr. KAULBACH. While referring to this item, I would ask the hon. minister if he is aware that the Tancook breakwater, which was repaired some two years ago, but which was very imperfectly repaired, requires attention ? I do not see any vote for it. It is sadly in need of repair in consequence of the work being imperfectly done. The piles placed there were too short and the ice and tide have lifted the breakwater up and destroyed it to such an extent that it is all but useless. I want to know why there has been no vote in the estimates for this breakwater.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The matter was not brought to my notice and the chief engineer says he has had no report from the local engineer. He has taken a memorandum and will make inquiry to-morrow.

Mr. KAULBACH. Representations were made, I am sure of that.

West Bay—wharf (revote, $2,000), $3,300.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total estimated cost of this work is $3,300.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What county is this in ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Richmond county.

West Arichat—breakwater, $700.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Richmond county, and it is for general repairs.

Wedge Point—extension of breakwater, $4,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Yarmouth county. The estimated cost is $4,500.

Wolfville—wharf repairs, $2,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in King's county.

White's Cove—improvements to breakwater, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Digby county.

West Chezzetcook—breakwater, repairs, $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Halifax county.

Mr. BLAIN. Will this complete the work ?

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). The present breakwater is ineffective, and this is to extend it in order that the harbour may not be stopped up by sand which accumulates there at present. This work will give more force to the current.

Yarmouth bar—repairs, &c., $1,500.

Mr. KAULBACH. Has the minister any idea of what the harbour of Yarmouth has cost for dredging and so forth.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total expenditure according to the memo. of the chief engineer is $117,476.

Mr. KAULBACH. It must be more than that.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That would not include the dredging. As I did not expect the question to be asked. I cannot speak with certainty.

Mr. KAULBACH. The dredging has been going on from year to year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I know that there are a great many demands for dredging. It is hoped that we may be able to get a dredge which will not only do the work in Yarmouth, but in other places in Nova Scotia.

Mr. KAULBACH. Lunenburg, I suppose.

Beach Point, P.E.I.—widening boat channel through bar, $900.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the explanation of this item ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to be applied to widening and deepening the channel. There is a good basin inside, affording a shelter for boats, but it cannot be reached at low water without inconvenience and loss of time. The total cost of the work is nine hundred dollars odd.

Mr. HACKETT. What depth of water will there be when this is completed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Five feet at low water.

Mr. HACKETT. How wide will the channel be ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Twenty-eight feet.

Canoe Cove—breakwater, repairs, &c., $500.

Mr. HACKETT. How does it come that this breakwater, which was only completed last year, requires repairs now ?

Mr. LEFURGEY. There were $3,000 spent on it last year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is very hard for me to explain why these breakwaters require so much repairs to keep them up. These are examined by the engineer and on the report that he makes, the department prepares these estimates. Probably it would be on account of the heavy weather and storms.

Mr. HACKETT. What part requires repairs ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The first section of 100 feet has been badly damaged.

Mr. HACKETT. Carried away by the storms ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think it has all been carried away.

Cape Traverse or Carleton Head—survey, $3,000.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Would the minister explain what has been done in regard to this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In the House and out of it, many representations have been made to the department in regard to the winter service there, and I thought it would be wise to take a small vote to have a survey made. The report of that survey must be of service to the country. I ask for this vote in order to have a survey made by some competent officer.

Mr. LEFURGEY. There was a survey made there last winter.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Who made that survey ?

Mr. LEFURGEY. Mr. Egan, the resident engineer, and he had several assistants. It is about time that report was before the House.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A report was made, but the chief engineer of the department was not altogether satisfied with the information furnished, and he thought there should be some further evidence from an expert with regard to this matter, before any expenditure was undertaken. The expenditure will be very large and the hon. gentleman representing the province will admit that it is important that we should have all the information that can be obtained with regard to this matter. I am personally in favour of doing something in the direction of meeting the wishes of the people of Prince Edward Island for a better service but with the difference of opinion that exists, the minister is at a loss to know what to recommend. I am sure the committee will agree, that it would be money well spent to gather whatever information can be obtained by an expert.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I am pleased to hear the remarks of the minister, but I would remind him that a survey was made there in 1894. The then chief engineer of the department resident at St. John made a very satisfactory report on a pier for Carleton Point. The report is a lengthy one, and the engineer recommends in the strongest language possible the establishment of a pier at Carleton Point for the winter service.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Does my hon. friend remember what the estimated cost of that work would be ?

Mr. LEFURGEY. It was somewhat in the neighbourhood of a million dollars I believe. It is not the cost we are talking about now, but the desirability of fulfilling the terms of union by giving us a pier at Carleton Point for the winter service. I do not want to go into the history of Prince Edward Island navigation just now, but I may say that it has been demonstrated, that Carleton Point is the best place to which the boats can ply during the winter. It is now ten years since the first survey was made when the engineer of the government recommended that a pier should be built there, and it is too bad that we should have to wait so long for that report to be carried out. The minister says that the survey of last year was not suitable, and now we are to have a third survey.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I did not say the survey was not suitable, but I do say that a difference of opinion exists, and the department wishes further information.

Mr. LEFURGEY. At all events we have had to wait nine years for the government to fulfil the terms of union by establishing a pier at this point, and now we do not know how much longer we shall have to wait. I trust that the hon. Minister of Public Works who I know is desirous of giving the island the best facilities for winter transportation, will take this matter thoroughly in hand and not let it drop until he finds that this is the proper place, and has the work pushed forward with speed.

Mr. HACKETT. I simply desire to emphasize the remarks made by the hon. member for East Prince. The hon. Minister of Public Works will remember that in the early part of this session, some five or six months ago, we waited upon him in his office and presented him with a petition signed by a large number of the people in all parts of Prince Edward Island, asking for the construction of a pier at Carleton Point, in order that the terms of confederation might be carried out, and that communication might be maintained between the island and the mainland during the winter season. The hon. minister received us very kindly, as he always does, and assured us that he would give the matter his best consideration. Now, the only consideration he gave us is to place $3,000 in the supplementary estimates to pay the cost of the survey carried on during last winter.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, my hon. friend is mistaken. It is all very well to blame the minister, but my hon. friend knows that I gave this matter a good deal of attention. There was so much difference of opinion between the engineers and the people of the locality that I am taking this vote in order to try to get information which we have not now in the department.

Mr. HACKETT. I remember that when I crossed from Cape Traverse to Cape Tormentine in the month of March last, Mr. Higgins was on the ice with two or three assistants making a survey. Has his report reached the department, and if so, what is the result of it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the report has been received.

Mr. HACKETT. And what does he estimate the cost of this work at ? The very life of the province depends on its means of communication with the outside world, and we want to be frank and plain with each other in this connection.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The cost estimated by Mr. Higgins is something like $1,300,000 for building a pier at Carleton Head.

Mr. HACKETT. I would ask the minister why he does not place an amount in the estimates for the construction of this pier ? Does he think that too large an amount to expend for the purpose of maintaining communication with the province of Prince Edward Island ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know that I do. If I had as much trouble proportionately to put it through as I have to put through a total of $300,000 for the maritime provinces, somebody else would probably think it too much. However, speaking seriously, my hon. friend will admit that if a better plan can be got at less cost, there is no reason why I should not get it; and if the engineer tells me that this work can be done on a different plan at less cost, I think I am justified in spending a little money to make inquiry into it.

Mr. HACKETT. The hon. gentleman speaks about $300,000 for the maritime provinces. What is he doing for Prince Edward Island ? Simply giving $31,000 for harbours and rivers. The total is $66,800, with revotes amounting to $35,000, making in all a new vote of $31,800 for the province of Prince Edward Island. He surely cannot say that we are delaying the committee very much when we insist on having more done than this. He is spending large sums of money in other provinces, and we must insist, as long as we are here representing the people of Prince Edward Island, on our rights being carried out. I trust that the hon. minister will see his way clear to bring down another supplementary estimate, in which we shall find the sum of $1,300,000 to build this pier at Carleton Point.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Did the engineer recommend Carleton Point for the construction of this pier and breakwater ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Instead of answering that question, I would prefer giving my hon. friend a copy of the engineer's report.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I would be very much obliged if the minister would give us a copy of the report.

Mr. HACKETT. Will the minister kindly bring down the report and lay it on the Table of the House ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, I shall be pleased to do so.

Cove Head harbour—improvement of entrance channel, $1,900.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is under contract, and this vote is to pay the balance due.

Higgin's shore—repairs to pier, $1,000.

Mr. HACKETT. This is in the riding which I have the honour to represent, and on a previous occasion I showed the hon. minister that these repairs to the shore pier are no good. Is it his intention to make further repairs, or to build a new pier at that place ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I dare say that the construction of a new pier might be more satisfactory; but our engineer reports that these repairs will make the pier very satisfactory.

Mr. HACKETT. We have already voted $1,000 in the main estimates for repairs to this pier, and I represented to the hon. minister on that occasion that they would be of no service at all. In the month of March last, previous to coming to Ottawa, I attended a meeting of the electors of that section, who agreed, almost unanimously, Liberals and Conservatives alike, that there would be no benefit whatever from spending money in repairs to the old pier, but that a new pier should be constructed about 100 yards east of the old one; and they forwarded a petition to the department to that effect. With the $1,000 voted in the main estimates and the $1,000 in the supplementary estimates, you could make a good start on a new pier, instead of throwing away money on the old pier.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think the hon. gentlemen brought this matter to my attention before, and I asked for a report from the engineer, and that report is the basis for this vote. I think my hon. friend had better allow the item to pass, and I will reconsider the matter and ask for a further report.

Mr. HACKETT. At the meeting I attended, Senator Yeo was present and he agreed with me. The Hon. James Richards, who is a member of the local executive, also attended that meeting and all agreed that there should be a new pier, and that it would be a waste of money to spend anything more on the old pier.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will have a further examination made.

Lewis Point pier, P.E.I.—repairs, $1,100.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in King's county.

New London harbour—improvement to entrance to Clifton and French river, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. According to the report of Mr. Simpson, engineer, the channel is obstructed by a bar, and since the dredging done in 1900, quite a change has taken place. The construction of a break-water dam will give sufficient depth of water.

North Cardigan—extension, $4,000.

Mr. LEFURGEY. What is wrong with the present pier ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The object of this is to get greater depth of water and furnish better shipping facilities.

Point Prim—wharf, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to be applied to the construction of a wharf 1,000 feet long and 20 feet wide, 6 feet deep at low water and 15 feet at high water. The cost will be $15,000.

Richmond Bay—reconstruction of wharf near Grand river ferry, $1,500.

Mr. HACKETT. Has this wharf fallen into decay or been neglected by the government ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for general repairs. The engineer reports that the works are required.

Mr. HACKETT. I would suggest that instead of reconstructing the wharf at Grand River ferry, the government should build a bridge across the Grand river. We have this afternoon passed a vote for the purpose of opening up a highway in the province of Nova Scotia between the main road and the pier. It is only a short distance between the Grand river and the wharf on the one side, and the pier on the other side, about one-eighth of a mile. I think that the government, instead of going on repairing the wharf in this way should build a bridge across the Grand river, and allow the people living in lots 12, 13 and 14 an opportunity of crossing over and doing their business in summer time instead of going around eight or ten miles by the upper bridge.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will have that suggestion brought to the attention of the engineer, and a report made with regard to it.

Summerside—breakwater (revote), $35,000.

Mr. LEFURGEY. We have had this matter up quite a number of years and it is getting to be an old story. I find in the votes in 1898, $30,000 for Summerside break-water ; in 1899, $3,000 ; in 1900, $20,000 ; in 1901, $20,000 ; in 1902, $35,000 ; and now we have another $35,000. In votes and revotes, we have had $108,000 voted for Summerside breakwater. I would like to ask how much money has been expended on it, and how much work done.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In reply to the hon. gentleman, I would say that $3,388 have been paid out on account of this contract, and about 250 feet of the breakwater built. In 1900 a contract was let, but for some reason the contractor has not been going on for some time with the work. I have not had time personally to take this matter up, and I am asking for a revote until I have had an opportunity of investigating and considering it. The intention is to go on with the work, but if the circumstances are as represented, it would be better to cancel the contract, and call for new tenders.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I think there has been ample time to do that. The work has been suspended over a year. Have the government taken steps to investigate whether this contract will be carried out or not ? The department has had correspondence from the contractors claiming that from the nature of the contract the plans submitted were not practicable, and they could not carry them out in ten years, with continuous work during workable days. It is claimed that the contract was stopped because the stones were not suitable, but I find that some of the correspondence between the engineer on the island and the engineer in Ottawa is conflicting on that point. The contract calls for a stone that is sound and of good durable quality, suited to resist the effects of the exposure and subject at all times to the approval or rejection of the engineer. The engineer did not reject the stone on the breakwater and the work went on for some time until an engineer came from Ottawa and condemned the stone. Then the contractors refused to go on with the contract, because the stones that had been passed by the engineer in charge of the work had been condemned by the engineer from Ottawa. It seems improper to me that a work which the government found desirable in 1898 should on every occasion be used for election purposes. In 1898, when I was running a by-election they published this big poster, and distributed it around the town :

HURRAH FOR BETTER TIMES.

Work ! Work !

And plenty of it this winter for the working men of Summerside and Outsiders as well.

The work at the breakwater goes on and the 'Stanley' is guaranteed to come to Summerside to test the feasibility of the Summerside and Cape Tormentine route.

An Outlay of $5,000 in cash Monthly.

Hurrah again for good times for Summerside.

Now, Mr. Chairman, this is the manner in which the public works which the government apparently found necessary are being exploited for party purposes, and I would say to the hon. minister that if it is the intention of the government to go on with this work, if it is found necessary or advisable to get the sand out of the harbour and to give a good deep channel and also to create a current through the passage in order to break up the ice and make the harbour an outlet for a longer time each year, I cannot see why it should be subjected to all of this waiting and foolery, and why it should be brought up on the eve of each election to be used for political purposes.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Does the hon. gentleman say that he does not approve of this work ?

Mr. LEFURGEY. I do not think that the hon. minister caught that from my words.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understood you to say : If it is thought to be advisable to go on with it.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I am not the engineer; I am not supposed to dictate to the engineers whether a work is advisable and should be carried on.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understood that this work is being pressed for in the public interest and not for political purposes and I was asking the hon. gentleman if he thought it is a work that should be gone on with.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I am simply stating that if the work is found necessary by the government it should not be used as a humbug for political purposes but should be pressed forward with all possible vigour. This matter has been up since 1898 and if it is a necessary work—and I presume it must have been or the government would not have undertaken to spend $50,000 or $100,000 on it—the contract should be gone on with and if it is not it should be condemned by the engineer and a new contract made.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot offer much explanation of the conduct of this work from 1898 up to within a few months of the present date. The matter has been brought to my attention by the chief engineer. The parties interested live a long way off and I have not had time to go into this case fully. I had an idea the work was one of necessity and of advantage to this district, and it was my intention at the earliest possible moment to have this work renewed and pressed forward.

Mr. LEFURGEY. In answer to the hon. minister's question as to whether I consider it necessary I may say that if a proper breakwater was constructed across from Indian Head to the lighthouse at Summerside harbour you would possibly obtain a greater flow of current and not only keep the sand from choking the harbour, but also would be able to keep the harbour open for a longer time without its being blocked with ice. I may say that I have a letter from the contractors written in March about the time they abandoned the work in which they say :

Ottawa, March 18, 1902.

Hon. J. I. Tarte,
Minister of Public Works,
Ottawa.

Re Indian Head breakwater—Summerside harbour, P.E.I.

Sir,—We commenced the construction of this work in June last and completed but 250 feet by the end of the season, the length of the breakwater when completed will be 3,150 feet, the progress has been as we could reasonably do; we employed thirty men and had two steam tugs, a steam pile driver with steam derricks and four large lighters, besides two schooners carrying stone ; we met with this difficulty, that we could place the brush and stone only when wind was off the shore, and at low tide ; this prevented the completion of this work as rapidly as expected, in many instances the lighters loaded with stone remained for four or five days at a time in the harbour waiting for suitable weather and very low tide.

We could only work three hours some days and not more than five hours a day, this was because the tide interfered.

We have an expensive plant, and keeping the men employed but four or five hours a day and some days idle, it will take a considerable time to complete.

If there is any remedy that you can allow, such as a change, by substituting a timber core for the brush and piling in the interior without additional cost the difficulty would be overcome, and we could proceed with the work rapidly.

Awaiting your reply,

Yours respectfully,
(Sgd.) HUGH McDONALD.

That was in March 1902, and I think the department has had ample opportunity to investigate the case in time for the people to have had a definite reply and to have knowledge as to whether they would go on with the work at the opening of operations in the spring. I trust, now that the Minister of Public Works has the case in hand, that he will see that it is pushed forward thoroughly.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will endeavour to straighten it out.

Mr. HACKETT. How much has been expended on this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Between $3,000 and $4,000.

Mr. HACKETT. And we have had votes in this parliament for $108,000 for this work. This is simply deception on the part of the government. I hold in my hand the issue of the Charlottetown 'Patriot' of October, the 2nd, and it has here :

Summerside harbour, $35,000.

It gives the greatest praise to the government and to the government's supporters from the Island because of the great work they are doing. Here too we have pictures of Mr. MacKinnon who has not been here for a long time and whom we have almost forgotten and also of Mr. Hughes the hon. member for King's whom we are pleased to see here with us all the time. These pictures are placed in the paper for the purpose of deceiving the people with regard to this work. These are both excellent young men; I have no objection to their appearance in the papers, and apart from their being young and fine looking they are jolly good fellows as well. But it is a serious matter and I find here in that very paper the proposition that a revote of $35,000 is to be taken in connection with the Summerside breakwater. I remember very well, as my hon. friend from East Prince (Mr. Lefurgey) has said, when he was running his election in 1898, that his opponents, on scores of platforms, said that Summerside harbour would be made one of the finest harbours in Prince Edward Island, and that the government were going to make a large grant for that purpose.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Is that what beat him, because he advocated this breakwater ?

Mr. HACKETT. There is no doubt it elected his opponent on that occasion. But I can tell you that afterwards at a local election, when Mr. Desroches was running against Angus McMillan in Summerside, Mr. McMillan was elected by two votes, simply because he told the people of Summerside and that section of the country that if they supported him there would be a tremendous boom at Summerside and great works would be carried out. Yet for five years nothing has been done, and now we find that, on the eve of another election, for the purpose of deceiving the people again, this amount is put in the estimates below the pictures of the two hon. gentlemen who care not one snap about Summerside.

Mr. HUGHES (King's). If our hon. friends opposite are not in favour of this item, I would suggest that it be struck out. There are many places in the county I represent which would be glad to get this money, and where it could be usefully employed.

Mr. HENDERSON. If this item is struck out, then the hon. gentleman opposite (Mr. Hughes) must take the responsibility of it.

New Brunswick—Black Brook — additional wharf accommodation, $5,000.

Mr. GANONG. Perhaps the minister will give us some information with regard to this work.

Mr. HACKETT.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is asked for to afford wharf accommodation, which is urgently needed in the interest of a rapidly growing trade. A government wharf had been built, and an effort was made to acquire the land. The department and the owner of the property were widely apart as to the price. After some negotiations, a few months ago we came to a satisfactory arrangement, the papers have passed the Department of Justice, and the land is now the property of the Crown. This $5,000 is asked to make the settlement, and to make some addition to the wharf that has been acquired.

Mr. GANONG. Are we to understand that the government built a wharf there on somebody else's property without acquiring it, and now they are paying the forfeit by asking this parliament to vote $5,000 to settle up for some of their mistakes ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am afraid that is about the state of affairs.

Cape Tormentine—improvements, $10,000.

Mr. LEFURGEY. What improvements is it proposed to make at Cape Tormentine ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a large and important place, as my hon. friend knows. This vote is asked principally for stone work. I understand that the structure is in a bad state of repair, and unless something is done immediately great damage is likely to be done to this important work.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Is a new pier to be built outside ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for a terrace alongside the present work.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Are they going to extend the wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not under this vote. This is only for protection to the present work.

Campobello—breakwater at Wilson's beach (revote), $3,000.

Mr. GANONG. Perhaps the minister would tell us how much this work has already cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In round figures $30,000.

Mr. GANONG. Is this $3,000 presumed to finish it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. GANONG. How far has the work proceeded already ? Can any one get near it with a vessel ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The work at present is 207 feet long, and when the additional work is done it will be 455 feet long. I do not see that I have any reference to the depth of the water.

Mr. GANONG. This is one of the votes that we had some talk of before. Some hon. members might think that it is unwise in me to criticise it because it refers to my county. But, I will criticise it very freely because I think if this system were followed throughout the country instead of having a vote of $67,000,000 we would require a vote of $367,000,000 to meet the requirements of the country. Instead of letting this work by tender so as to give the fishermen of that district value for every dollar that is expended the government have undertaken to do the work themselves and we have got about $20,000 worth of work for an expenditure of $30,000. Nineteen tiers have been put where there is a 30 foot rise and fall of the tide and yet after two year's work a vessel cannot approach the work. The total excess expenditure there of $10,000 has been used simply to furnish some work for good supporters of the present government.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no information except what I have read from the report of the engineer. My hon. friend is a very shrewd business man. I am informed that the department have advertised for tenders and that they have not received one either from the hon. gentleman or any of his constituents offering to do this work. Therefore, I suppose they would have to do it under the supervision of the engineer.

Mr. GANONG. There was not much effort made in that direction. However, as we have discussed it before it is useless to waste the time of the committee.

Campbellton—wharf extension, repairs, &c., $10,000.

Mr. GANONG. Was there not some grant made in the main estimates for this same purpose ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, we have $15,000 in the main estimates. This is to extend the present wharf at Campbellton a distance of 300 feet. This additional vote includes the payment, when the sum is known, to Mr. Shive, for the property which was purchased from him.

Mr. GANONG. Is this another instance in which the government are building a wharf without obtaining the property from Mr. Shive ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I do not think this is a similar case. It was not necessary to purchase the whole property. Expropriation proceedings were taken, the property has been taken over and vested in the crown but the settlement has not been made. The amount in the estimates will pay for the property when the award is made and it will carry out the improvements proposed.

Mr. GANONG. Is this all a new work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total probable cost of this work is $35,000.

Mr. GANONG. That is not just the point I was after. This appears to be an extension simply of the wharf. There must have been an original wharf to be able to extend it. Was the title to the original wharf vested in the government ? Do they own the property ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand that the crown do own the property upon which the new wharf has been built. They had not a title to the adjoining property which has since been taken over by expropriation.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why do the government want this additional property if they had the property on which to build the wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand that there is quite a large amount of shipping done at this point. It was necessary to acquire this in the public interest and it was very much cheaper than to have extended our own property.

Mr. COCHRANE. What I understand by the extension of a new work is that you extend it out into the ocean. Why do you want more land ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is not so in this case, and we are not requiring any more land at all. There was a wharf built alongside the government wharf but it was found insufficient for the trade of the place. Being alongside of the government wharf it was purchased and united with the government wharf so as to make one large wharf to furnish the necessary facilities for this port.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why does the wharf want to be so wide that you should buy more land ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We are not buying more land.

Mr. COCHRANE. If you are expropriating what are you expropriating ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Part of this wharf may be on a water lot. The wharf was acquired and the land with it.

Mr. COCHRANE. You have bought a wharf and then you have extended it.

Mr. EMMERSON. It was built years ago.

Mr. COCHRANE. We don't want to go back into ancient history. We are talking about what we are doing now.

Chatham—slip for lightship, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work was undertaken on the representations of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. It was represented that it would effect a large saving to the country if lightships could be taken in there, repaired and then taken out early in the spring.

Cocagne—wharf, compensation to Captain Antoine Arsenault of the schooner 'Morning Star' for damages to his vessel resulting from the failure of a defective mooring post, $250.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the explanation of this item ?

Mr. REID (Grenville). Who owns the schooner ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for damage done to a schooner owned by Captain Antoine Arsenault. This vote is asked for on the report of the officials of the department. I have no doubt it is a fair settlement of the damage.

Mr. GANONG. Do the government take the position that they are liable for all these troubles ? They might become liable for a buoy getting displaced ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not lawyer enough to tell my hon. friend how he will collect any claim against the government, but I always have taken the stand that if the government representing the country is responsible for anything it should be in very much the same position as any honest man would be. It should settle any claim that is a proper one ?

Mr. COCHRANE. How could the captain of this vessel have any claim against the government ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. He claimed that on account of some negligence in connection with the government works this schooner was damaged. The claim was for $500 but it was compromised at $250 by the officials.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Where was the mooring post ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At Cocagne.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Occasionally vessels have got into trouble in the locks and mooring posts have given way but in every case the government have claimed this was the fault of the vessel because of too heavy a strain being put on the post. This now forms a precedent for other vessels in the case of accidents of this kind happening in the canals. This establishes a very serious precedent for the future.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think so.

Mr. COCHRANE.

Mr. GANONG. This has the appearance of having a friend at court, and the country will view it in that light.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The precedent now established by the minister renders the government liable to this sort of damages for all time to come.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is an exaggeration to say that it will be a precedent. I do not see why the government should not be liable for damages the same as any one else. I have no personal knowledge of this ; it was referred to the officials and they reported in favour of paying it.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I agree with the minister that when the government causes damage they should be responsible, but as I understand it, such a case as this should be referred to the Exchequer Court. Has this matter been referred to the Department of Justice for an opinion, or why did it not go to the Exchequer Court ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a small matter, and the hon. gentleman knows that it would be cold justice to ask the claimant to go to the courts. I do not think he would have much left by the time he got his $250 damages. I have confidence in the officers of the department to which this matter was referred, and I believe they must have been satisfied that there was a just claim for this amount.

Mr. COCHRANE. If a private individual owned a wharf and if a vessel came up to it to load or unload, does the minister think that if a storm came and the vessel sustained damage, the private individual would be liable ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not a lawyer, but if the hon. gentleman asks me what would be fair between man and man, I would say that if the owner of the boat paid his fee—and I have heard complaints that the wharfage fees are pretty high on the lakes—and if the mooring posts were not sufficient, I imagine that the owner of the wharf would be liable. However, I do not care to offer an opinion on that.

Mr. GANONG. What revenue is derived from this wharf or is it a free wharf ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand it is a free wharf.

Mr. GANONG. Then we give this man the use of the wharf, free, and pay him for tearing it to pieces.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I am not objecting to the amount of this vote, but I object to paying this amount when you compel other people to go to the Exchequer Court for claims just as small. If there is a dispute about expropriation it has to go to the Exchequer Court.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is in a case where the officers will not recommend payment.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I object to this because it forms a precedent to which the government is bound for all time.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, no.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I certainly think it will.

Mr. GANONG. Here is a case in which the wharf is given free of charge, and if a man ties his vessel up to it, and takes all the advantages of that wharf free of charge, you pay him if he sustains any damage.

Mr. REID (Grenville). There are many cases of this kind in which the government has not paid damages. Suppose a vessel is loaded with a valuable cargo, and that the cargo is damaged, would not the government on the same principle be liable for a large amount to compensate for the cargo? I am afraid that the government has done an unwise thing in establishing this precedent.

Dalhousie harbour—improvements, $10,000.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to make improvements at this wharf so that ships may receive cargoes of lumber direct, without the necessity of using lighters.

Mr. CLARKE. What will be the total cost of this work?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The probable total cost is estimated by the engineer at $40,000.

Mr. GANONG. Is this the first amount that has been voted?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Dipper harbour—breakwater, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is asked by the chief engineer to make provision for the construction of a protection breakwater 235 feet long, 44 feet wide on top, and reaching to a depth of 32¾ feet high water in spring tide. The new work is to be built on the site occupied by the old pier on the western side of the harbour. The foundation of the new breakwater has already been partly prepared, and the work is to be done by contract. Its total cost is estimated to be $25,000.

Mr. BLAIN. Was any money expended at this point last year?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am informed that there was not.

Hopewell Cape wharf—repairs, &c., $5,800.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete the work under contract. The amount of the contract is $19,998.

Mr. BLAIN. When was this contract let?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. On the 8th of October, 1900, to be completed on the 8th of October, 1901.

Mr. BLAIN. Was it completed?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, it has only been completed recently.

Miscou harbour—wharf, $5,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Is this a new wharf, and will this complete?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a new work, and this vote is to commence it. The total estimated cost is $11,850.

Mr. BENNETT. What county is it in?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Gloucester county.

Mr. BENNETT. Is there any village at the place, and what object is to be served by the construction of the dock?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is an island on which there are about seventy houses and eleven lobster factories. The population is estimated at about 500. The occupation of the people is mostly fishing. Farming is carried on to some extent.

Mr. BENNETT. And is the government going to build a $11,000 dock on an island where there are only 500 people? Does anybody contribute anything towards the cost of the dock?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As there are eleven lobster factories, there must be considerable commerce.

Mr. BENNETT. If the trade is sufficient to warrant the construction of a dock, why do not the people in the business construct it?

North Head breakwater wharf, Grand Manan, $10,000.

Mr. GANONG. Perhaps the minister will advise us as to how large a work he purposes at Grand Manan?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a pretty extensive work. The total cost, as estimated by the engineer of the department is about $91,000.

Petit Rocher—breakwater, $6,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Is this a new work?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, this is a new work. This vote is to make provision for the construction of a breakwater 350 feet long. The total cost is estimated at $27,400.

Mr. BLAIN. What county is this in?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Gloucester county.

Pointe du Chêne—repairs to breakwaters, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is to make good damage done to the works caused by a storm last January, and to protect other breakwaters with stone ballasting.

Richibucto harbour—extension of north pier (revote), $3,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to pay the balance of the contract, which completes the work.

Mr. GANONG. May I ask if any report has been made as to the cost of dredging at St. Andrews ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say that a report has been asked for, but has not yet reached the department.

Amherstburg, Ont.—dredging, $15,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is rather an expensive and important work. It has been under discussion for some time. It is estimated that it can be carried out for $45,000, and I am asking for a vote of $15,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What is the general traffic at Amherstburg ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a very large amount of shipping there, and considerable amount of difficulty is found on the Canadian side in competing with the Americans, who have spent a good deal on improvements on their harbours.

Mr. BLAIN. Has the government dredge been working there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, this is for next season, and we intend trying to improve the facilities of the harbour.

Mr. BLAIN. There was an item voted last year, was it not expended ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, there were many difficulties about carrying on the work. We have adopted a plan by which I think we can, for the amount I have stated, do some good work for the harbour.

Blind river wharf—addition of head block, $3,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Is there any revenue at all from this dock? It is in the district of Algoma, I believe. What was the original cost of the dock ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $9,310. The wharf has not been completed and handed over to the Marine Department yet, so that there is no revenue. I understand that the country is developing fast.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Where is this river ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is eighty miles east of Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. BLAIN. Was there not money expended there last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contract was completed and the total cost was some $9,000.

Barry's Bay, Madawaska river—wharf, $1,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to provide for a small wharf there. There is a great increase in mining going on there and quite a settlement. After looking into the matter carefully, I found that a small wharf would be a great accommodation for that section and a great convenience for the shipping and mining industries.

Mr. BLAIN. What representations were made to the department by the citizens ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A very important deputation, including the head of the mines there, waited on me; and on their representation, I looked into the matter and am satisfied that this is a very proper work.

Mr. BLAIN. Will this complete the work?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BLAIN. How will this be expended?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By contract. I am letting the construction of all these small new works by contract.

Bracebridge—wharf, $5,800.

Mr. BENNETT. Will that complete that work, and does it include the purchase of a site, and is the town contributing anything?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in new Muskoka. I do not see any estimate made for the site, so I take it for granted that it is not costing anything.

Mr. BENNETT. Will the $5,800 complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). It is a very necessary work. Bracebridge is an arm from Lake Muskoka. There is a great deal of summer traffic there. The wharf was one of the promises given in the recent election, but for all that it is a very necessary work.

Bronte harbour—improvements, $6,300.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete the work going on.

Mr. BLAIN. Is that private property or do the government own it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Bronte harbour is in Halton county. I have not the information here, but it never occurred to me that it was not public property. A very considerable amount of money has been spent there. Probably my hon. friend knows. I will look into the matter. It never occurred to me that it is not public property.

Burlington channel piers—to complete works of renewal and repairs under contract (revote) $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is on account of work going on.

Mr. GOURLEY. Are these places to be found in the geography ?

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). It connects with Burlington Bay, and is the entrance to Hamilton at the bar.

Mr. GOURLEY. We regard ourselves as the maritime part of the country, and we only get $313,000 for expenditure on harbours and rivers. But when we come to an inland country like Ontario, we find an expenditure of $142,000 more. I do not want to complain, because if every dollar is rightly asked, it is my duty to vote for the expenditure, whether it be in Ontario or Nova Scotia; but after hearing from the other side, during the past ten or twenty years, constant abuse for the voting of money to harbours in a really maritime province like Nova Scotia, it seems a want of politeness for Ontario to get a half a million dollars for wharfs and harbours in a purely inland country. I merely want to bring that to the notice of gentlemen opposite from Ontario who spoke so vigorously about Nova Scotia votes. If these items are necessary, I will be glad to vote for them, but I hope that this talking about Nova Scotia or British Columbia votes, simply because these provinces are at the extremities of the Dominion, will cease. If they do not we will have to criticise items in Ontario. There must be absolute reciprocity in this matter. The only inquiry that should be made by members of this House is : Is it necessary and in the interests of Canada as a whole.

Mr. INGRAM. I quite agree with the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat (Mr. Gourley) but I wish to call his attention to the fact that we want to have the same rule applied to all the provinces. We have fishermen in Ontario. They are not along side the sea it is true, but they are beside waters that are as important to us as the waters of any other province are to it. When we find fishermen in other districts of Canada having harbours provided for them out of public funds we think it is hardly fair that our fishermen, who have paid their license fees to this government and are now paying them to the Ontario government should be refused a small sum like $1,000 or $1,500 to make their harbours safe. We have then reason to complain and I do complain. The hon. gentleman states that in Nova Scotia they have harbour votes of $314,000. Let me remind him that one of our large counties in Ontario is nearly as large as Nova Scotia. I think that Nova Scotia is getting its share of harbour votes.

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). How many harbours have you ?

Mr. INGRAM. I suppose as many as you have in Nova Scotia. If Nova Scotia is getting this money and it is properly expended there I am glad to hear it and I trust that it will be properly expended, but when we look at that expenditure we in Ontario are justified in pointing out that many ports, such as are helped in Nova Scotia, are not helped in Ontario.

Mr. HENDERSON. In connection with the vote for Burlington channel I wish to say a few words in answer to the hon. member for Nova Scotia who seems to think Ontario is getting more than its fair share. This is a work of great importance. Although it is called Burlington channel it is not in my county but it is very close to it ; it is the entrance to Hamilton from Lake Ontario. Vessels from Lake Ontario going into Hamilton harbour must pass through this Burlington channel. In the early days this channel was nearer to the south shore, but perhaps seventy-five years ago the government closed up the old channel and made this new channel. I believe the work was first constructed about 1825. It has, however, become very much out of repair ; in fact I think the government is making a sad mistake in not appropriating somewhere about $250,000 and making one complete job of the whole thing. By spending $10,000 this year and $25,000 next year I am afraid that this work will never be put in proper shape.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work was under contract just in the way that my hon. friend suggests and this extra amount of $10,000 is taken in the supplementary estimates in addition to $50,000 in that main estimate. This $10,000 is to be paid on account of the contract this year. The work is being carried on just in the way my hon. friend advises and I hope it will be completed early next season.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am quite sure that the money that has been appropriated during the last two or three years is not sufficient for the requirements and it will be necessary for the government to spend very considerably more to keep that channel open. It is an absolute necessity not only for the city of Hamilton but for the entire country around there that has its shipping interests bound up with the important city of Hamilton, that the channel should be kept open.

Cumberland wharf, $5,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is on the Ottawa river in Russell county ; it is a new work and this is the estimate which the chief engineer thinks will complete the work.

Mr. BENNETT. How much has the municipality contributed to this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They have not contributed anything to it.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What is the population ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I believe this is the only county on this river that has not one or more wharfs. The reeve called on me and I was perhaps a little weak, but I gave way. They have a large trade there. The place is about twenty miles from the city of Ottawa.

Mr. BLAIN. Has a site been procured ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The site will be given free.

Collingwood—improvements to harbour, $60,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In a general way this is to continue work that has been going on there in winding the channel from 110 to 220 feet principally by dredging.

Mr. BENNETT. To what width is it intended to widen the channel with this vote and will this complete the work ? The chief engineer tells me that this vote will go a long way towards completing work. It will make a bell shaped entrance of 300 feet long for the whole channel, 20 feet at low water.

Mr. BENNETT. $60,000 will make it a width of 200 feet all the way down ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is the estimate of the engineer.

Depot Harbour—breakwater, $20,000.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I see by the main estimates there were $75,000 and $25,000 more in subsequent estimates. Will the minister say what the total cost is likely to be, and how much has been spent already ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost is estimated in round figures at $195,000. In round figures about $60,000 has been spent, and $40,000 will complete the work.

Grand Bend—breakwater pier, &c., $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in the county of Lambton. A large deputation came to the department representing that this work was required, and that it would be a great convenience to a large population.

Mr. SHERRITT. What amount does the hon. minister propose to expend there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If we carry out the plan as formed by the engineer, the total work, bridge and all, will cost about $22,000.

Mr. SHERRITT. What will be the depth of water ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Twelve feet at low water. As soon as this vote is passed and the contract is let, the work will be commenced.

Goderich—breakwater off entrance to harbour, $20,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Representations have been made by the shipping interests that if a breakwater were built at Goderich that would become a first-class harbour. At present all the boats going up and down Lake Huron are forced to go to the American side when there is a storm, for want of a refuge. At present boats in a heavy sea have great difficulty in entering Goderich harbour. I was waited on personally by representatives of the shipping trade, who told me that if a breakwater was placed there it would be a great convenience and benefit to shipping. After consultation with the engineers, I came to the conclusion to make at first 200 feet as a trial, to see whether it would prove effectual and yield the benefits claimed by the representations made to me. This will only cost some $53,000. If it proves successful, we might extend the work. They asked for 1,700 feet, which would cost in the neighbourhood of $200,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What would be the depth of that 1,700 feet ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Twenty-five or thirty feet.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Would it not be cheaper to dig into the shore for your harbour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This matter has been taken up, not alone by the Goderich people, but by the large business and commercial interests of Ontario, especially from Toronto west, who represent in the strongest manner the importance of this work. I am asking for this vote of $20,000 for the purpose of making a trial of 200 feet of this breakwater. If it proves as successful as these gentlemen have represented, I am sure it will be a work much in the interest of Canada.

Mr. INGRAM. What is the total expenditure on Goderich harbour up to date ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This has nothing to do with the previous works. I know that a great deal of public money has been spent in Goderich on public works, but much of it, I fear has not been very useful for the want of this breakwater protection. I cannot at this moment give my hon. friend the amount expended by the Department of Public Works on the Goderich harbour. But this proposed work has nothing to do, except in an indirect way, with any expenditure that has already been made on that harbour.

Mr. INGRAM. This is a serious question for the shipping interests in the town of Goderich. They have had breakwaters built there. I do not know whether they have been successful or not. Perhaps the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Holmes) could tell us where this breakwater is intended to be built.

Mr. HOLMES. I may supplement the information given by the Minister of Public Works. The chief object in making this breakwater is to make Goderich a harbour of refuge. There is no harbour of refuge on the shores of Lake Huron within 150 miles. It was originally intended that Goderich should be a harbour of refuge, but that idea has never been carried out. A number of lives have been lost during storms, simply because the vessels were unable to get in during a heavy sea. The purpose is to build a breakwater out into the lake 700 or 800 feet from the entrance of the harbour, whereby vessels could safely enter during a storm. No breakwater has ever been built in that direction, but only at the side of the river. Originally the piers ran in a south-westerly direction, but twenty-five or thirty years ago, at a very great cost, the engineer ran the piers out straight, which was a mistake, because they allowed the full force of the waves to come in. I may say also that the deputation which waited upon the hon. minister did not happen to be headed by the 'admiral,' as the hon. gentleman calls him. It happened to be headed by the mayor of Goderich, who is not a political supporter of my own. In addition to that, representations have been made to the government by the shipping men from all sections of the province of Ontario. A large quantity of grain has been handled at Goderich during the past year. They have ample water in the harbour for the largest lake-going vessels, and I believe that many vessels which find their way to Detroit and Buffalo would, if a suitable breakwater were provided, discharge their cargoes at Goderich. The depth of water is greater at Goderich than it is at the Lime Kiln crossing.

Mr. GOURLEY. What is the depth ?

Mr. HOLMES. In the neighbourhood of 21 feet.

Mr. GOURLEY. Is that a natural harbour ?

Mr. HOLMES. Yes, certainly. Strong representations have been made to the government in the interest of this breakwater. As a matter of fact the delegation asked for a much larger breakwater than is being provided, but it is expected that this one, built as an experiment, will demonstrate its utility and warrant its extension later on.

Mr. GOURLEY. How is this breakwater to be built—on solid masonry?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My intention was, if found practicable, to advise the building of this breakwater with concrete.

Mr. CLARKE. I have a very kindly feeling for the town of Goderich, and if the hon. minister is acting on the advice of his engineers I think it will be money well spent. There has been a great deal of difficulty in the past in regard to the piers constructed there, but as the hon. gentleman (Mr. Holmes) says, perhaps, they were not constructed in the right way. They did not run at the right angle out into the lake. If the hon. minister has reliable information as to the practicability of making a harbour there, I believe it ought to be a good harbour of refuge and if it is found that vessels can make that harbour in any weather it will bring a great deal of business to that part of the province.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The hon. minister says he is going to make the breakwater of concrete. How deep below water level is he going to put the concrete ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As a rule we just put it below the extreme water level.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). If the breakwater is not put deep enough below the low water-level the waves will lift it. The hon. member for West Huron (Mr. Holmes) speaks of this being a great shipping port and says that grain is going this way. He evidently has given up his view in favour of the transcontinental railway and has gone in for the water route.

Mr. HOLMES. I think this will be part of the transcontinental route because that line of railway already runs to Goderich.

Mr. MACLAREN (Perth). I have had a lot of correspondence in reference to this work with people in Stratford, Mitchell and other places along the line and they are strongly in favour of something being done at Goderich. I am very strongly in favour of this vote.

Mr. SHERRITT. I also have a very kindly feeling for the old town of Goderich, because of the service that harbour renders to the country in the early days when we had no railways. I was born within a short distance of the place and know something about it. I think it is a very wise expenditure of money which has for its object the making of Goderich a harbour of refuge. It is important that this work should be proceeded with when we consider the distance that vessels have to go up Lake Huron before finding a harbour of refuge. I may also say in reference to this grant of $5,000 to Grand Bend, that I am pleased to see that the hon. minister has placed in the estimates a sum for the construction of a breakwater at that place. I was up there a few days ago and there are some people who are very sceptical about this item being spent. I hope the hon. minister will not disappoint them this time. An item was placed in the estimates upon a former occasion and just before the general election an engineer was sent up to make some surveys. I am not going to say that the surveys were so effective that they brought about the state of affairs that existed at the last election, but I will say that in the end of the township in which the work was proposed to be undertaken, every vote was polled for the government candidate against the hon. member for East Lambton (Mr. Simmons). Even some of the hon. gentleman's own friends are very sceptical to-day about that work. I am very pleased to find this estimate here, and I hope the hon. minister will not disappoint them and will let the contract for the work at once. This place is very much in need of a breakwater. We have heard a good deal to-night of the fishermen of different parts of the country but I think this is one of the best fishing poihts, if not the best fishing point, on the Lake Huron shore. The fishermen have no place to land their boats and there have been great complaints in the past from them. In addition Grand Bend is becoming very popular as a summer resort. Many people from different parts of Ontario go there to camp. The hon. member for South Huron (Mr. McEwan) knows something about this as do other hon. members. I think the hon. member for North Perth (Mr. McLaren) and the hon. member for London (Mr. Hyman) will bear me out in what I say. A great many people come from London and spend the summer in cottages there. We have spent about $20,000 at this place. While I was in the municipal council we had some dredging work done at the mouth of the Au Sable river and it does seem to be a natural harbour. I think $22,000 would be a sufficient expenditure to construct a work that would be a credit to the government and a relief to the people of Grand Bend.

Mr. GOURLEY. I want to suggest to the hon. Minister of Public Works that if money is expended well everybody is gratified and if it is lost everybody is discouraged. We had some experience in building a bridge over the Shubenacadie river some two or three years ago. Some American engineers came up there who were not acquainted with the Bay of Fundy tide. They said it was folly to go down to bedrock and they put their piers on the hard-pan without reaching the rock. The tides came in and every one of the piers were moved. They had to go down and reach bedrock and the work was then made permanent. If you are going to make a good wharf you should go down to bedrock and if you do anything else you will find that it will be a failure.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We are all interested in this work on account of the representations that have been made by the shipping and commercial interests of the province. As to the work itself it is probably to some extent an experiment as to what the results will be. I am confident from the representations made to me by practical men, captains of the large boats and others, that it will certainly bring many millions of bushels of grain to the Huron shore that now go to the American side. The trade of the whole Dominion will be very large if we are successful in establishing a good harbour of refuge at Goderich.

Gore's landing—wharf, $3,000.

Mr. BENNETT. May I ask the hon. minister, if, in regard to this item and also in regard to the next item of $4,000 for the Honora wharf, these amounts will complete the works ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost of the first one is estimated by the chief engineer to be $3,000. The Honora wharf work will cost $7,000 to complete.

Mr. BENNETT. Since the Liberals came into power these docks have been strung out all along the shore of the Algoma district. There were private wharfs there before, built by the enterprise of individuals, and fees were charged on the shipping, but the government entered into the business, and rendered useless the expenditure by private citizens on these wharfs. Is it proposed to charge rent for the use of these docks ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. You built a dock at Bruce Mines which cost $12,000, and last year you realized the paltry sum of $16.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a growing business in that district.

Mr. BENNETT. Yes, and there is a growing business in the city of Toronto, and vessels have to pay for the use of the docks there. It is all on a par with the building of docks at Hawkestone in East Simcoe, against which I protested. This government practically threw $3,000 into the lake for the purpose of getting a little political advantage, but it did not help them a bit, and that dock is rotting to-day.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not anxious to build any work without necessity.

Kingsville—filling superstructure of extension of breakwater with stone ballast, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The estimated cost of this is $3,840. This work originally cost $15,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Is this for the west pier or the east pier ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The west pier.

Mr. INGRAM. Was there not something the matter with one of these piers ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer tells me that some damage was reported, but he does not consider it very dangerous.

Little Bear creek—dredging, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Kent county, and it is a very necessary work.

Mr. INGRAM. Is it between Chatham and the lake ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The creek enters into the channel at the eastern side of St. Anne's island, Lake St. Clair, and is about ten miles from Chatham and seven from Wallaceburg.

Little Current—improvement of northern steamboat channel in Georgian bay, $15,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is proposed to have a channel 200 feet wide and 21 feet deep at lowest water. If that work were carried out for the whole distance, it would cost between $150,000 and $200,000. Large shipowners, the Messrs. Long, among others, have reported that some considerable improvement can be made by a reasonable appropriation from time to time.

Mr. CLARKE. How much has already been expended on that channel.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total expenditure up to January, 1903, was $83,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is that channel at Little Current the only place between Manitoulin and the north shore where there is not 20 feet of water ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is the only place, so far as my information goes.

Mr. CLARKE. I should say that on the Canadian side of the St. Mary's river, there are not 20 feet of water in some places, and even if you do this work, you would still be obliged to use Hay lake channel for freighters.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman is correct. I am informed by the chief engineer that in some places there is only 18 or 19 feet of water.

Mr. CLARKE. I do not think there are 16 feet in some parts of the old channel of the St. Mary's river, and we would have to complete all that work to make us independent of our neighbours.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no doubt that my hon. friend is right, but we will make this expenditure in the meantime.

Leamington—wharf, $3,800.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is in Essex county, and the work is undertaken under the report of the engineer.

Midland harbour—improvements, $12,000.

Mr. BENNETT. I saw last week in the town of Midland a plan of a proposed dock there. Is that the plan that is to be followed—the one that was sent to the town clerk ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer informs me that that is the plan on which tenders are being called for.

Mr. BENNETT. By way of explanation, let me state the position. Owing to the fact that docks were being built at a great many places, the town of Midland made this offer to the government of Canada. They said, we will purchase this water frontage for $10,000 and hand it over to the government on condition that the government will build a dock on it. That was agreed to, and on that understanding the town voted the $10,000, purchased the site, and handed it over to the government. By the plan which the department have sent to the town council it appears they have actually given a portion of this frontage to some party friends. I would ask the minister what consideration has been received by the government for this portion, on which these people have built a dock ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If there is any foundation for the hon. gentleman's statement that the government have given away to party friends or to anybody else any portion of the property which the town conveyed to the government, it would be a matter for inquiry.

Mr. BENNETT. I asked whether it was given for nothing, or whether it was paid for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was not given at all. It was not either sold or given. The facts are not as the hon. gentleman states.

Mr. BENNETT. The plan shows that a part of this property which was purchased by the town and handed over to the department has to-day a dock built upon it by party friends of hon. gentlemen opposite. I can tell the minister that the effect of this action is such that had the question to buy the site and hand it over to the government to be put again before the town of Midland, it would be voted down almost unanimously. I do not know who is to blame for it, but I suppose the Department of Marine and Fisheries. The little spur of dock which the town is getting to-day for the $10,000 which they gave is so trifling that I am sure if they had known what they were going to get they would never have voted the money. May I ask what rent is being received by the department for the use of the storehouses which are on this property that the government acquired from the town ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say that I have not looked into this matter personally, but either my hon. friend is greatly mistaken or the officials of my department are deceived. As the matter came up before, I asked them to look carefully into it, and they say that there is no foundation whatever for the statement, but that we have all the property that was handed over to us by the town. No rents have been received, and no action has been taken with regard to this property. The transfer was only completed a short time ago, and the plans have been prepared.

Mr. BENNETT. Do any of these parties who are in occupation of this government property pay any rent to the department ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The deputy minister informs me no.

Mr. BENNETT. Was not an application received by the minister from a firm in the town of Midland inquiring what rent was being asked by the department for this dock, and making an overture for renting ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will ask the deputy minister to make a memorandum of that. He says he has no recollection.

Mr. BENNETT. I can tell the minister that I saw the letter from his own department to those parties, acknowledging the receipt of their letter, and saying that the matter would be considered; but they heard nothing further.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Will the hon. gentleman give the name of the party ?

Mr. BENNETT. Stafford & Company—the Midland Mercantile Company. They wanted to rent the warehouse, and were willing to pay $500 a year for it; but one of the hon. minister's party friends has it, presumably for nothing.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not to my knowledge. My hon. friend knows that it is not in the plan or policy of the department to remove the old buildings.

Mr. BENNETT. I do not suppose the hon. gentleman will interfere with them. In fact, there is no room on the new docks to put any buildings. I can tell the minister that the handling of that dock has not been such as to win any friends to the government. One of their own party friends, Mr. Playfair, has possession of that dock without paying any rental. This is like some other actions of the government there. For instance the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, at my solicitation, decided to put up two range lights. The department had the lights sent to the town, and what do you suppose they did ? Instead of placing them where they should have been placed, they decide, because Mr. Playfair had a couple of electric lights, to send them back to Ottawa or somewhere else; and in the meantime the marine trade has had to depend on two little lights which the people there supposed were fire-flies among the trees. I suppose the government think that Mr. Playfair can help them. All I can say is that I court his opposition, and I court the opposition of the government if they conduct other matters at Midland as they have done this. When parties were willing to pay a decent rent for the property if they had a chance at competition for it, these parties have had the use of the dock and the warehouses without paying a cent of remuneration. It will be news for the people, and from that they will judge how the general business of the country is carried on.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think my hon. friend is mistaken, but I will have a further report made in regard to this matter.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It ought to be a simple matter to ascertain whether or not the land conveyed by the town of Midland to the crown is in part occupied by other persons, and I should think it would be advisable for my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works to bring the plan here and have some explanation of the matter placed before the House. I should think my hon. friend might bring the plan down to-morrow.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We will have a copy of the plan brought down to-morrow. I will have a report made on the other point, and if such a state of affairs exists as my hon. friend described, it is wholly without my knowledge. I am not aware, nor do I think that my deputy is, that any such state of affairs existed.

Pembroke—wharf, $10,000.

Mr. CLANCY. Permit me to ask the hon. minister if he intends to go on with the work at Little Bear Creek ? That has been in the estimates four or five years in succession and nothing done.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a dredge working in that locality, and I have given instructions to have it sent there at once.

Parry Sound—wharf, $8,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Where is that wharf to be located ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is to be built by the Parry Sound Lumber Company.

Mr. BENNETT. How much is the hon. minister giving the company for that dock ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Nothing; the site is free.

Mr. BENNETT. You have a very favourable proposition from the town of Parry Sound.

Point Edward—dredging, $6,000.

Mr. CLANCY. What is the extent of the work there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The work at that place is very important. Large boats could not get up to the wharf, and we are consequently having this work done. I think that $6,000 will finish the work under contemplation at present.

Port Burwell—improvement of harbour (revote, $5,000), $34,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This will complete the work under contract there. This is for all the improvements going on there under the Department of Public Works, and the chief engineer informs me that it will complete it.

Port Stanley—dredging, $4,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Does this involve the replacing of the gentleman who died a short time ago and who superintended the works there ? Is it necessary to re-appoint another man to look after the dredges?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I do not think it is.

Mr. INGRAM. Then, there will be no appointment made ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. None.

Port Perry—dredging harbour, $2,200.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is anything being done in connection with dredging the river leading up to Port Perry ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Perhaps if we had a dredge there we might do it out of the general votes.

Port Perry—dredging harbour, $2,200.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). This breakwater was built a number of years ago and badly wrecked. It should be lengthened very materially. In fact, a new one should be built further out.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am making an effort to improve the one we have.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has the dredging which was going on last year been finished, and what are the results ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is not finished, but the work done this season has given great satisfaction.

Rosedale—wharf, $1,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). This is a very necessary work, and I might point out in connection with that water-way now in the control of the Dominion government that there is a number of logs towed and brought through the locks from time to time, occasionally some fall out of the boom or crib and become water-logged and are a perfect nuisance. From time to time we expend money to clear these out of the channel. Logs 12 to 16 feet are sunk in ten feet of water, boats strike them, the screws and paddle wheels become broken and other injuries and accidents occur. The province has control of these logs, but inasmuch as the government has taken over these waterways, it should look into the matter and see if the Department of Public Works or the Department of Railways and Canals has not authority to have those logs taken away. That is to give any one finding a log in the water a right to take it as his own property. I can assure the minister that in that way the government would save a good deal of money, many accidents would be avoided and the channels and water courses would be cleared of logs. Another point is that the locks of all the systems operate very slowly. The gates should be changed and should be made to operate much more rapidly than they do. Then, too, a great deal of country in the northern half of Victoria and Haliburton, near the Trent river, could be thrown open to traffic by the construction of four locks opening from the water north of Balsam lake into Haliburton. This would throw open a tract of country over 100 miles in length, containing much valuable birch and maple, which cannot now be hauled out to the railways owing to the conformation of the country. But I have previously entered into this detail and the plans and data are always in the departments.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will be pleased to have this matter looked into.

River Sydenham—improvement of, $5,800.

Mr. CLANCY. How is that money being expended ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Principally in dredging. It is to improve the navigable channels of the Sydenham river. My hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) is familiar with these places. This is a work on which we made some representations. It is in the county of Bothwell, and this work is along the lines of representations made by a deputation introduced by the hon. gentleman.

Mr. CLANCY. I suppose this money is to be expended in the east branch of the river.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not sufficiently familiar with the river to say.

Mr. CLANCY. I call the attention of the hon. minister to this matter, because the River Sydenham includes the north and east branches. Wallaceburg is at the junction of the north and east branches, and I suppose this is to be expended between Wallaceburg and Dresden.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to carry out the work asked for by the deputation introduced by the hon. gentleman.

Mr. CLANCY. As that is a very pressing work, particularly at this time of the year, I would ask if it would not be possible to send a dredge in there at once ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will give instruction to the engineer to have it taken up at once.

Mr. CLANCY. There is a good dredge at his disposal, it is a very important work, and if some portion of it could be done during the present season it would be of great advantage to the people there.

Mr. BLAIN. During the last two sessions I drew the attention of the government to some work that was very necessary in the harbour of Port Credit, on Lake Ontario. Will the hon. minister state what is going to be done about that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman brought it to my attention, and I sent for a report. One of the great difficulties is that the harbour there is private property, and whatever may have been the policy of the department in the past, it is not now the policy of the department, except under exceptional circumstances, to spend public money on property which is not the property of the Crown. I intended to write my hon. friend about that in order that he might take it up.

Mr. BLAIN. Although that is the policy of the government, I do not think it has always been adhered to. There are other instances in Ontario where harbours are in exactly the same position. This is very close to Toronto, where the hon. gentleman has a dredge working all the time, and perhaps the hon. minister could allow that dredge to go to Port Credit and dredge out some of the sand that is continually drifting in there.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think no one would object to that, and I will see that it is attended to, if there is a dredge in that locality.

Ottawa river—improvement of narrows at Petewawa above Pembroke—to pay G. C. Poupore in full for work done previous to July 1, 1903 (revote of lapsed amount), $7,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is an amount of $7,000 that has been voted for several years. The contractor filed claims for a larger amount. This was in the main estimates, and I had it struck out, in order to look into it. After discussion of the matter the contractor has agreed to accept this, and I am asking this in order to make the settlement.

Mr. CLANCY.

River St. Lawrence—dredging steamboat channel through shoal at foot of Wolfe Island, $5,000.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I do not see anything in the main estimates for the Canadian channel through the Thousand Islands.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Is not this a part of it ?

Mr. REID (Grenville). I understand a survey was made with a view to running a channel there.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend knows that we must have our new Ontario dredge before we can do that.

Mr. AVERY. This work at the foot of Wolfe island is very useful.

Regulation of waters at Lake Simcoe and Couchiching—repairs to works at Washago, &c., $2,000.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A great deal of damage is done at this place from the overflow of the water in consequence of the government works. I find that $7,652 have been spent there in time past, and representations have been made to me that this $2,000 will renew this work in such a way as to protect the people of that locality from further loss.

Mr. BENNETT. At certain times in the past there was an overflow by the water of Lake Simcoe backing up on the south side. But since the stop-logs have been put in a few years ago, I understand no further trouble has been felt. I do not know what this $2,000 is needed for, unless it is to make a more perfect arrangement.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for repairs to those works, to those stop-logs.

Mr. BENNETT. I have always understood that the people of Orillia township were satisfied with the arrangement.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). There is a report in the Department of Railways and Canals showing that in certain seasons of the year the water rises on all these lakes, but there is no more overflow in this locality than anywhere else. But on account of the blasting that was done years ago, these stop-logs were put in. If the minister means that this money is to repair those stop-logs, that is all right ; but if it means that it is to reduce the present level of Lake Couchiching and Lake Simcoe, he will find the country will not tolerate it.

Sault Ste. Marie—harbour improvements, including dredging of approaches (revote), $18,300.

Mr. LENNOX. I would like to have some explanation from the minister of what is proposed to be done here. I was up at Sault Ste. Marie recently, and it appears to me a good deal of work needs to be done there.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Representations have been made to me that a good deal of work was required there, but I have had no money to do it with. With this money it may be possible to do some dredging this fall.

Mr. LENNOX. That is a place where I think the government will be wise in taking a comprehensive view of the matter, and in proceeding deliberately upon some careful system by which that river will be utilized, and by which we may have a channel that will compare with the American channel. At present docks are being built through private enterprise. A dock was put up recently by a private company, who claim that they have spent a large amount of money. I do not speak with any technical knowledge, but it appears to me that that dock is carried out into the river too far. I think the government would meet the wishes of the country if they proceeded in some comprehensive manner with their work on the water front, which is to serve as a dock along the Canadian Soo. There is no one who visits the American side and then comes across to the Canadian side, but must feel, if he is a patriotic Canadian, ashamed of the appearance of our own country, as compared with the American side. That remark applies particularly to the lack of dockage accommodation and to the slovenly condition in which the Canadian side generally appears. There is evidently an immense amount of shipping done there, and I should think that some such system as has been adopted at Montreal would be a proper system at the Soo, that is to say, that instead of running out these docks or piers into the river, we should have a dock extending along the line of the river parallel to the shore, to serve as a means of anchorage for all the vessels coming from the Canadian locks. There is another matter that deserves attention, and that is the condition of the land round about the Canadian locks. On the American side everything is in beautiful condition, there is a lawn and a park, but on the Canadian side everything is rough and unfinished. It is important that we should make our side compare favourably with the other side. Although I do not often advocate the expenditure of money, I think it is important that the Canadian side of the Soo should be considerably improved. The Canadian Soo has a great future before it, the trade through that channel is rapidly increasing, and the percentage of increase is now in favour of our locks. I think we would be justified in expending money on a well-considered plan, both as regards the dredging of the river and improving the land round about the locks. I might remind the hon. Minister of Public Works that the Americans are spending a very large sum of money almost every year, and there is a very large contemplated expenditure at the present time in improving their channel. When we are coming into direct competition with them, as we are at that point and at some other points on the lakes, I would be somewhat generous in the expenditure of money. Of course, I would advocate a very well-considered plan for the whole scheme before the expenditure is engaged in.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think on this matter we are almost unanimous and the only reason I did not take it up sooner was that I wanted to have a plan prepared before I asked for my vote.

Thessalon—breakwater, $5,000.

Mr. BENNETT. What is that for? You have a government dock there already that produces almost nothing in revenue.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to make provision towards the construction of a breakwater 420 feet long at Thessalon for the protection of all classes of vessels on the great lakes. Very strong representations have been made to me by people engaged in the vessel trade and by fishermen and others upon the subject and it has been pointed out to me that the wharf under present conditions is of very little use to them. It will be a great advantage to the district to have another harbour of refuge there and I have brought down a vote for this purpose.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What depth of water is there?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. From twelve to fifteen feet of water.

Mr. BENNETT. I do not know whether the hon. minister has been at Thessalon, but he must know that this has been a town for fifteen years. It has done business for the last fifteen years and there is a very expensive government dock at that point now and as there is little or no revenue why this large expenditure should be gone into now seems incredible. I am sorry that the hon. member for Algoma (Mr. Dyment) is not here because I would like to compliment him personally on being able to get more money expended in his riding than the most sanguine well-wisher for the distribution of public funds with the view of political advantage coming from it.

Toronto harbour—works at eastern entrance, close piling, channel face of east pier and levelling up pier, $20,000.

Mr. CLARKE. I observe there is nothing in the estimates for the dredging out of Toronto harbour. This work has been necessitated because of the persistent refusal of the government of Canada for the last sixty years to take steps to protect what was once a peninsula inclosing the harbour of Toronto. I have the documents in my desk now but I do not want to weary the committee about it at this time. It is really incredible when we look over the official documents in connection with the preservation of Toronto harbour for the last sixty years to see how impossible it has been, because of changing governments and changing opinions, to have anything permanent done in respect to the preservation of the harbour. These eastern works have been made necessary because all the recommendations made again and again looking towards the protection of the peninsula have been entirely ignored. The force of the waves of Lake Ontario destroyed the peninsula and formed the present island. Since 1833, Capt. Bonnycastle, who was then the harbour master, and his various successors have been recommending that something should be done for the preservation of the harbour. Capt. Bonnycastle's statement were prophetic, and unless the government do something at an early day in regard to the diversion of the channel of the Don, and in the way of dredging, there will be good grounds for complaint.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think we can take up the discussion at the present time of the improvements of the Don. Representations were made to me as to dredging at the eastern entrance. I was unable to get a dredge to do this work. It was only last week that I was able to get a dredge, the one that had been working for the city of Toronto and I gave the owners a contract. We happened to procure a dredge up the lakes but they got into some trouble and they were not able to fulfil their contract. As to the other work that will have to be taken up again.

Toronto harbour—works at eastern entrance—to pay Magann and Phin in full and final settlement of all claims in connection with their contract of February 10, 1900, for the extension of the western pier, $9,100.51.

Mr. CLARKE. How has this adjustment been arrived at ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This settlement was made with the officials of the department and on the report of our own officials.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the hon. minister bring the papers down in connection with this matter ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. I will be very glad to. I have not looked into them myself.

Victoria harbour—dredging, $4,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Will that money be spent this year and if so will it complete the dredging at that point ? This is an important point. This year 75,000,000 feet of lumber will be cut there.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This money will be all spent. There have been applications for about $3,000 or $4,000 more to complete this work, but I do not think we can take it up this year.

Wiarton—wharf, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for a new wharf at Wiarton.

Mr. BENNETT. What will be the total cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost will be about $11,000. My hon. friend is familiar with the conditions there. Owing to the establishment of new factories at that place strong representations have been made as to the necessity for this work.

Mr. BENNETT. Who furnishes the site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The site does not cost us anything, but the chief engineer tells me that he expects that will be given. I do not know whether it will be furnished by the provincial government or by the town, but at any rate it will be furnished.

Some resolutions reported.

ADJOURNMENT—PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved the adjournment of the House.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock). Mr. Speaker, before the House adjourns, I wish to refer to a matter that I understand was brought before the Committee of Supply last evening. The hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett), I understand, intimated to the committee that I was an interested party in a company at Newmarket which was in receipt of government work. I wish to say that the statement is wholly without foundation. I know nothing about the company's financial arrangements and I have never had any interest in it. I do not know whether it has shareholders or whether it has not. It is quite true that I have felt it to be my duty from time to time to endeavour to promote the interests of this company. It is carrying on business in a town I am interested in and for many reasons I wish that town well. I am pleased to be able to be of service to that town in promoting the welfare of a great industry like the Office Specialty Company. Further than taking a public interest in the matter, I know nothing in respect to it. I think it would have been fairer if the hon. gentleman had reserved his remarks till I could have been in the House so that my denial might have immediately followed his insinuation.

Mr. BENNETT. I happened to be in the town of Newmarket during the by-election last spring, and I heard a wordy altercation between two electors. One was pretending that the Postmaster General was the backbone of the town of Newmarket, and in support of his contention he announced that the Postmaster General was a stockholder in this company. The other contended that the Postmaster General was not interested in it, and that if the town had to depend on the Postmaster General, the office specialty works would not have been there. The Postmaster General's supporter repeated time and again that the Postmaster General was interested in this work, and the other gentleman, who was a Conservative, I need hardly say, asserted time and again that the town had not to thank the Postmaster General for this enterprising establishment. It now seems that this gentleman was right. This gentleman also asserted that the Postmaster General was never known to enter into any enterprise in the town. Be that as it may, since the Postmaster General says that he is not interested, I can only regret that he has not joined with other enterprising men in this concern, which is so creditable to the town of Newmarket. I hope the Postmaster General will follow at an early date, the example set by other gentlemen who have invested money in manufacturing concerns in that town.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The point of my observation was to deny the insinuation of the member for East Simcoe, that I had been—as he put it—sending grist to my mill, and using my position as a minister to enrich myself through the medium of this company. That was an unfair insinuation to make on the floor of this House. It is false in every respect.

Mr. BENNETT. It was the assertion of one of the Postmaster General's political friends, that his enterprise was so great, and that such was his admiration for the town of Newmarket, that he had been one of the gentlemen who had engaged in this enterprise. However, that appears to be untrue, and I join in wishing well to Newmarket.

ACCIDENT AT SPRINGHILL, N.S.

Mr. LOGAN. I regret to have to state that I received a telegram from Springhill this morning stating that a very serious explosion has occurred in the Dominion public building there, by which a gentleman named McDowell was killed, and a gentleman named Eaton and two boys seriously injured. I have received a later telegram saying that probably Mr. Eaton will die. I ask the Minister of Public Works to make an immediate investigation into the cause of this frightful accident, which has resulted in loss of life, and has wrecked the public building which has just been constructed in that town.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As soon as I heard of the accident, I saw the chief architect of the department, and I received from him the following report:

Re accident at the Springhill public building.

The Springhill building is a new one, having been completed and occupied in June, 1902. The caretaker had been in charge of the building since its occupation and had attended to the boilers and heating apparatus during the last firing season, in a satisfactory manner.

The furnaces put in this building were two No. 70 Robb furnaces manufactured by the Robb Engineering Company, of Amherst, N.S. The two furnaces were connected with headers by a gate valve so that only one or both furnaces could be used. The Robb furnaces have been used in quite a number of Dominion government buildings and they have always been found to work satisfactorily.

Mr. Cowan, our engineer who examined and tested the furnaces and heating apparatus at Springhill, and who also instructed the caretaker as to the working of the furnaces, &c., reported that the caretaker, Mr. McDowell, was an intelligent person.

From the information received we can form no idea of how this deplorable accident occurred.

Mr. Cowan, engineer, leaves here to-day for Springhill, with instructions to investigate the matter and make a report thereon.

(Sgd.) D. EWART,
Chief Engineer.

I regret to say that a telegram to the department confirmed what my hon. friend (Mr. Logan) has stated. The damage done to the building will, I am informed, amount to $5,000 or $6,000.

Mr. INGRAM. What fuel were they using?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Nova Scotia coal, I think.

REPORT OF TREADGOLD COMMISSION.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I was told this morning that I would receive an answer later in the day as to the report of Treadgold Commission, and the printing of the evidence.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I spoke to the Premier and he intended to give an answer, but I may say that the report has not been received yet.

AUDIT ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would ask whether the Bill to amend the Audit Act is to be proceeded with, and if so, whether any date has been fixed for its consideration?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am unable to fix any date with regard to that Bill at present.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman does intend to proceed with it this session?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have not given it consideration of late. I am not able to say anything more definite on that point than that the matter is still under consideration.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What business may we expect to-morrow ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Continuation of supplies.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 12.40 a.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, October 7, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

QUESTIONS.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES.

Mr. WILSON asked :

1. What amount of bonuses or subsidies have been voted by parliament each year to railways during the years 1900, 1901 and 1902 ?

2. How much of the said bonuses or subsidies has been paid during the said years, and up to 1st September, 1903 ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). This question, and also questions 5, 6 and 8, which relate to either railways or finance, I would ask the hon. gentlemen to let them stand, and I will have the information on the next question day.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY.

Mr. WILSON asked :

Is it the intention of the government to give any relief to the people living in the rural districts, by giving to them rural mail delivery ? If so, when may the people expect the said service to commence ? If not, why not ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock). This question is engaging the consideration of the government.

MEMORIAL FROM NORTH-WEST POSTMASTERS' ASSOCIATION.

Mr. LaRIVIERE asked :

1. Has the following memorial and supplement to the same, from the Manitoba and North-west Accounting Postmasters' Association been considered by the Honourable the Postmaster General ?

'Winnipeg, Man., February, 1903.

To the Right Hon. Sir William Mulock, Postmaster General, Ottawa.

Dear Sir,—We, the undersigned, accounting postmasters of Manitoba, beg to bring to your attention the following statement of facts regarding our work, which goes to show that the remuneration is most inadequate, in the hope that you may be able to grant us substantial and immediate relief. We do this the more hopefully in view of the stand you have taken on the question of hours of labour, &c., of the workingman.

1. The postmaster is responsible for the safe handling of many important letters and valuable parcels. In this country large amounts of money, formerly sent by express, are now sent by registered mail to wheat-buyers to enable them to carry on their business. In many places the branch banks remit to, or receive from, the head office large sums of money. This increases the postmaster's responsibility, and where help is employed, necessitates care in the selection. The money-order business necessitates the handling of large sums of money for the miserable pittance of 25 cents per $100. The amount of stamps kept on hand must always be large with the source of supply so far away. In no other line of work would persons be held responsible for the proper handling of such large amounts, with the same possibilities of irregularities and losses, without remuneration at least from five to ten times greater than the postmaster receives for his money-order work. In many cases there is added responsibility through the handling of customs parcels, for which there is practically no remuneration. The postmaster is expected to provide a roomy, centrally located office without any regard to the rental which that office would command if leased for other purposes. The necessity for the correct and prompt despatch of all mails, regardless of hours of arrival and departure, is in many instances a very grave responsability. Understanding that the present basis of remuneration has been in vogue for a quarter of a century or more, we would respectfully point out various increases in work which clearly show that, although it may have been sufficient then, it is utterly inadequate now.

Firstly.—In connection with newspapers and periodicals, we think it is a conservative estimate to assume that a family will now receive an average of six or eight times as many periodicals as a family would be receiving twenty-five or thirty years ago.

Secondly.—The use of the mails as a means of distributing advertising matter is a practice of recent years entirely, and the quantity handled is simply enormous and constantly increasing. These increases affect both local distribution and the sorting of matter for forwarding to outside offices.

Thirdly.—The recent reduction in the rate of letter postage necessitates (in the matter of Canadian and United States postage) an increase of fully fifty per cent in the number of letters handled before an increase of revenue can accrue, or an increase of salary be hoped for. In the case of British, and some other lines of foreign postage, the increase in the number of letters must be 150 per cent before we have established a basis for any possible increase in salary. A working out of the figures in this connection will establish that the postmasters are bearing from thirty to forty per cent of the expenses of the reduction so appreciated by the public. This appears to be an altogether undue proportion.

The introduction of the postal note system has increased the amount of labour out of proportion to the revenue attached. This method of remitting small amounts (chiefly to the city offices) has largely curtailed the sale of stamps, which were formerly used. At offices where customs parcels are handled and distributed by mail to smaller offices, stamps are usually sent in payment of duty, and cash is remitted to port of entry, again curtailing the sale of stamps received from the department.

2. An examination into the method of handling customs parcels and the remuneration (even where any is allowed) will reveal the fact that the work actually required to be performed, which is considerable, is practically unpaid for. This is one of the points which we desire to bring to your attention, that unremunerative work of this sort is being multiplied, while the revenue of the office is being held down by reduced rates of postage.

3. In a number of the offices, besides keeping the office open throughout the regulation hours, the postmasters are compelled to await the arrival of a late evening train, and again in some instances have to get up at five or six o'clock in the morning to despatch a mail, thus imposing unduly long hours of service, without any allowances for any class of assistance, to say nothing of a competent assistant. In some offices, owing to the arrival of several different mails, the public is entitled to call and demand individual attention several times during the day, whereas the basis of remuneration makes no special provision for this. In places where tri-weekly trains carry the mails, the postmaster is compelled to remain (if he would give the public anything approaching satisfactory service), to provide, for a portion of three days a week, one or more duly qualified assistants. His allowance is inadequate for his own support at present cost of living, thus providing nothing for the payment of assistants.

4. In view of the amount of mail matter to be re-sorted and forwarded, the forwarding allowances do not begin to pay for the work done or the extra office room required. Another department with a deficit.

5. The allowance for rent, fuel and light is decidedly inadequate. In practically every town where the post office is kept in a separate compartment, the room occupied could be leased for a rental in excess of the full allowance for rent, for heating and for lighting. In the town of Morris, the postmaster is allowed $100 for rent, fuel and light. For less space in the same building he receives from the Merchants Bank $350 a year for rent alone. At Melita the postmaster cancelled a lease bringing him a net annual rental of $180 to use the building for post office purposes on an allowance of $125 for rent, fuel and light. Other similar examples could be cited. Fuel and light are costly here.

6. In the matter of securing proper assistants, we would point out that labour readily commands far larger remuneration in any market than it did a few years ago. To have experienced help available is a severe drain upon the limited exchequer of the postmaster who is unfortunate enough to require it, as nearly all do. Even where help is not regularly required, competent assistance must be had, if the postmaster is ever to seek recreation or relief from duty.

7. There is another matter which affects postmasters in the west more particularly, namely, the increased cost of living. This has frequently been brought to the attention of yourself and colleagues in various ways, and we note that already you have conceded the point, as in the case of the 20 per cent increase allowed the letter-carriers of Winnipeg. In our opinion, this does not represent the actual amount of difference, but is a recognition of that difference. In all lines the cost of living has advanced during the past few years, while the postmasters are receiving less pay for more work.

8. A comparison with salaries paid in other departments of the public service, and even in other departments of the postal service, give an idea of our disadvantages. For example: First-class railway mail clerks receive $960 and mileage; second-class clerks, $880 and mileage. In the city of Winnipeg, the assistant postmaster gets $2,000; first-class clerks, $1,500; second class, $1,320; third class, $880, and letter-carries, $720. We do not think these are too highly paid, but an office with a revenue of $2,000 not only absorbs all of one person's time, but requires an additional clerk at least a portion of the year. The postmaster of such an office receives for salary, commissions and allowances an average of less than $700, or less than half the amount received by a first-class city clerk, $100 less than a second-class railway mail clerk, and a trifle less than is paid to the city letter-carriers, and out of this modest income he must employ whatever additional help is required, and furnish a suitable office and office equipment. In most cases, his hours are longer and his responsibilities greater than those of any of the officials referred to. In one town, where the train arrived late and departed early, the postmaster until recently received $3.50 per month for overtime, while the railway agent received $19 a month extra.

In view of the conditions and facts set forth above, we would respectfully suggest the following changes, as tending to bring about a redress of our grievances :—1st. That the straight salary allowance be based on 50 per cent on the first $1,000 worth of stamps sold, and 40 per cent on all additional sales. This would barely offset the loss resulting from the reduction of letter postage. 2nd. That in Manitoba a special increase of at least 20 per cent be allowed to cover extra cost of living. 3rd. That the allowance for rent, fuel and light be doubled, so as to provide a reasonable rent for the office, and a provision for the cost of fuel and light in this country. 4th. That the money-order system be simplified, so as to lessen the amount of work to be performed for the small remuneration allowed, and also to increase its popularity with the business public, who now object to the restrictions hedging it round. 5th. In addition to the regular and general scale of allowances, we would request that a special allowance be granted for each extra mail which tends to bring the public again before the wicket for individual attention during the day; that the forward allowance be materially increased to distributing offices; that a special allowance be given to postmasters who are compelled to work before 8 a.m., or after 7 p.m. Among the mechanical industries the special allowance for overtime is very marked. That in the case of offices where mails are so infrequent as to have large quantities of mail matter delivered at the office at one time, so that the public convenience really requires the employment of one or more assistants, an allowance be given towards the payment of such assistant or assistants.

6th. In addition to the above, we feel that there are a number of cases of special minor grievances which we cannot enter into in detail, but in which we think that a little investigation would show that redress could be effected, so as to relieve the postmasters concerned, without in any way impairing the efficiency and safety of the public service, which grievances have probably continued to exist because they have not been brought to your honourable attention.

And we would respectfully urge that the above matters be duly considered, and that a large measure of redress be granted in the very near future.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

MANITOBA AND NORTH-WEST ACCOUNTING POSTMASTERS' ASSOCIATION.

Supplementary suggestions passed by Executive.

1. That all accounting offices be given an allowance for rent, fuel and light.

2. That twine, mucilage, pens, ink, pencils, &c., for post office use be furnished by the department, and not at the expense of the postmaster, as at present.

3. That the department make it more clear to all publishers that newspapers must be suitably folded and that they must be addressed plainly. That where labels are used, they must be in large, clear type, and that if possible, uniformity of colour in labels be secured.

4. That a full list of 'Suggestions to the Public' be printed by the department and supplied to all postmasters for display in their offices, as tending to make it clear that certain regulations are found necessary by the department, and are not based on the caprice or convenience of the postmaster. For instance, that stamps and money-orders may be purchased during the distribution of a newly arrived mail, and that money-orders and postal notes are not available for purchase after the registered mail closes for an outgoing mail. Also, some suggestions as to the age of children who are to be considered as proper persons to receive mail from the wicket.

5. That when instructions are sent out for the weighing of all mails, that facilities for such weighing be afforded by the department.

6. That in view of the large sums of money at times in the mails in this country, and hence often stored in the post office, and in view of the value of the stamps and the importance of the books now to be kept, that safes be provided for accounting postmasters, or an allowance be granted to pay for use of same, when provided by the postmaster.

2. Is it the intention to accede to the request of the association ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock). This memorial has been received, and when the supplementary estimates for the post office are under consideration I will be prepared to discuss this question.

MAIL CONTRACT—BALACLAVA TO OWEN SOUND.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey)—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Who has the contract for conveying the mails from Balaclava to Owen Sound ?

2. What is the contract price ?

3. Was it the lowest tender ? If not, why was not the lowest tender accepted ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Sir William Mulock). The answer to this question is prepared, but I do not find it in my desk. Speaking from memory, the contract for conveying the mails from Balaclava to Owen Sound was made with the old contractor at the contract price of $250 a year. The next tenderer, whose name I am not sure of——

Mr. TAYLOR. Better let the question stand.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I think I am giving the whole information. The second tenderer and the lowest tenderer was, I think, a man named Hill, at $250. The next one above him was the old contractor at $270 odd. The department decided to accept the lowest tenderer, and in accordance with the usual practice the papers were handed to the officer to be completed. But on inquiry it was found that the lowest tenderer was a man advanced in years, about 73 years of age, and reported upon as decrepid and becoming too feeble properly to discharge the service. Accordingly the service was offered to the former contractor at the price of the lowest tenderer, and he accepted it. Therefore, the contract was made with him.

WEIGH MASTERS FOR GRAIN.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved that to-morrow the House go into committee to consider the following proposed resolution :

Resolved, that it is expedient to amend the General Inspection Act, and to provide for the appointment of weigh masters for the weighing of grain in any inspection district east of the inspection district of Manitoba, and for their remuneration by fees or otherwise.

Motion agreed to.

SATURDAY SITTINGS OF THE HOUSE.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved :

That when this House adjourns on Friday next, it stand adjourned to the following day (Saturday) at 11 a.m.; and that the order of proceedings will be the same as the order for Fridays. That this House will sit in the same manner on all subsequent Saturdays to the end of the session.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). As we are already sitting from eleven o'clock in the morning until one o'clock the next morning the addition of Saturday to these labours seems rather unusual. Could the right hon. gentleman (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) say what his proposition is in regard to the hours of sitting on Saturday ? Is it proposed to sit from eleven o'clock in the morning until twelve o'clock at night on the ensuing Saturdays ?

The PRIME MINISTER. We are now approaching the conclusion of the seventh month in the session, and I suppose the time has arrived when we might think of prorogation. Therefore, that is the end we have in view in following the course of preceding sessions by sitting on Saturdays. To-morrow, probably, I shall be able to make a communication to the House as to the legislation that is still to be brought to the attention of the House, and the orders on the paper that may be dropped. In the meantime it is our intention to sit all day Saturday unless the sentiment of the House is overwhelmingly on the other side.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). A number of members, not anticipating that Saturdays would be taken inasmuch as we are sitting in the mornings, have made arrangements for leaving town next Saturday. If the right hon. Prime Minister would make it the following Saturday, I think it would better suit the convenience of the House.

The PRIME MINISTER. No, I hope that hon. members of the House who have made arrangements to spend Saturday elsewhere will make arrangements to spend one Saturday in Ottawa.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE—PETITIONS AGAINST NATIONAL TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

Mr. O. E. TALBOT (Bellechasse). Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I beg leave to rise to a question of privilege. On Wednesday last, Mr. Speaker, I drew your attention to the fact that I had serious doubts about the authenticity of the signatures of certain petitions which were presented in this House in opposition to the construction of a new transcontinental railway. You were kind enough to tell me and tell this House that the hon. members who presented these petitions assumed in so doing full responsibility for everything in connection with these petitions. I had them published in the newspapers of the district in order to make sure whether my doubts were founded or not. I am now in a position to prove to this House and to the country that a very grave abuse of the honour and dignity of this parliament has been committed, and——

Mr. CLANCY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

Mr. TALBOT—the wholesale forgery——

Mr. SPEAKER. Order.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Talbot) has no right to read anything from newspapers reflecting upon the proceedings of this House or contradicting any statement made by any hon. member.

Mr. SPEAKER. I do not understand that the hon. gentleman is reading from newspapers.

Mr. TALBOT. These are notes of my own written by my own hand—and the wholesale forgery has been committed by over zealous partisans urged by unscrupulous though important newspapers of Montreal. These petitions contain the names of mere boys, names of people who live in the United States, names of people who have been dead for years, names of people who are in lunatic asylums, names of people, who, owinig to their advanced age, are absolutely irresponsible, names of people who knew nothing of these petitions and names of people who when asked to sign positively refused. In view of these facts which I am in a position to prove, I beg, Mr. Speaker, to submit a motion to the consideration of the House. My reason for doing so is that I consider that the right of petition is sacred, and I do not question for a moment the right of the gentlemen who signed the petitions to present and emphasize their objections to the government policy on this transcontinental railway question in that way if they chose to do so, but for my part, and I feel sure that this honourable House will endorse me, I must enter my most solemn protest against this audacious and monstrous attempt to impose upon the good faith of parliament and the country, by seeking to create the utterly false and erroneous impression that the people in the province of Quebec at least are opposed to this great national undertaking, and I say that it is a screaming farce and a most shameful departure from all principles of honour and dignity due to this parliament to present such petitions.

Mr. SPROULE. I want to ask your ruling, Mr. Speaker, as to whether this is a question of privilege or not. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Talbot) has a right to raise a question of privilege, but I do not understand it is a question of privilege.

Mr. SPEAKER. If some documents had been brought before the House, which documents were supposed to be petitions, but which turned out to be forgeries, I suppose it would be within the privilege of the House to inquire whether these documents were genuine or not.

Mr. SPROULE. It is only an allegation that the hon. gentleman is making.

Mr. SPEAKER. I understand the hon. gentleman is making a statement, and that he proposes that this statement shall be referred to some committee of the House.

Mr. TALBOT. I sincerely hope and trust that a thorough inquiry into this matter will be granted by hon. members on both sides of this House. I beg to move as follows :

Onésiphore Ernest Talbot, member of the House of Commons for the county of Bellechasse, having declared from his seat :—

1. That a petition of James V. Coté and others, of Cap St. Ignace, county of Montmagny, in the province of Quebec, has been presented and deposited by Mr. Alcorn, M.P., in the House of Commons, on the 30th September, 1903, asking that a Bill, now before parliament, concerning the new Transcontinental Railway, shall not become law ;

2. That the said petition was read and received on the 2nd October, instant ;

3. That on the 29th September last a petition of Thomas Coulombe and others, of Berthier, in the county of Montmagny, in the province of Quebec, had also been presented and laid on the Table by Mr. Alcorn, M.P., to the same effect ;

4. That this latter petition was read and received on the 1st October instant ;

5. That these two petitions contain false signatures, that several persons, whose names appear on the said petitions, never signed them nor ever authorized any person to sign them and that the said petitions contain the names of persons who have been long since dead ;

6. That by reason of these facts the dignity of the House of Commons has been outrageously offended :

Mr. Talbot moves, seconded by Mr. Carbonneau, that these petitions be referred to the Committee of Privileges and Elections, for investigation into the validity of the signatures which they contain and the circumstances regarding the preparation, fabrication and presentation of the said petitions ; with power to the said committee to send for persons, papers and records, and to examine witnesses upon oath or affirmation, and that the committee do report in full the evidence taken before them, and all their proceedings on the reference and the truth of their inquiries.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). If any petitions have been presented to this House, purporting to be signed by persons who have not signed them, I at once agree that it is a matter which must be investigated. I cannot however congratulate the hon. gentleman (Mr. Talbot) who has made the motion, on the judicial spirit in which he has presented the matter to the House. It seems to me that he has not acted as one who is desirous of upholding and maintaining the dignity of this House. His language did not impress me in that way. He has presented it apparently, in the belief that he could obtain some partisan advantage from proving certain facts in connection with these petitions, and he therefore seizes upon this occasion to indulge in very strong and violent language for party ends. With these observations, I desire to say that so far as this side of the House is concerned, we have not the slightest objection—in fact, I concur heartily in the proposal that this matter should go to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I am glad that the opposition have no objection to offer to this motion. Indeed I cannot see what objection could be offered, in the face of the statement made by my hon. friend (Mr. Talbot) that he has reason to believe that the dignity of the House has been seriously infringed on, and that an attempt has been made by false pretenses, to create a wrong impression. My hon. friend from Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) may perhaps have spoken warmly. He does not belong to the legal profession, and he is not perhaps trained to control his feelings as the members of that profession may be. But, as there is an impression growing very strong in the country, that in fact there has been an attempt at a conspiracy to impose upon this House, I am perfectly willing to excuse my hon. friend's language.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How many of these petitions have been referred to by the member from Bellechasse ?

The PRIME MINISTER. He has referred to only two, but I think he could refer to several, and perhaps to all.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Then I am perfectly willing to widen the motion and to enable an investigation to be made into every petition that has been presented. If the right hon. gentleman suggests that all these petitions are of a fraudulent character, let us by all means have an investigation into all of them. I am prepared to support a motion to that effect, if the right hon. gentleman moves it.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). It would be an insult to the intelligence and the honesty of the electors of Canada, to select a few of these petitions and examine them, and on the strength of that to allege that they are all of a fraudulent character. If any particular one so selected is to be regarded as typical of the whole, then it is a matter of the greatest importance that all of them should be scrutinized. I believe that a great many of these petitions can in no sense be characterized as having been obtained by any impropriety. If one petition goes before this committee then I suggest that all of them should be submitted.

Mr. W. H. BENNETT (East Simcoe). A few years ago in this House, there was presented the spectacle of hon. gentlemen from the province of Quebec, introducing affidavits and other proof to show, that there had been most gross frauds perpetrated in the taking of a census in that province. At the time, it seemed rather black, that if a fraud has been perpetrated, it should have remained for hon. gentlemen opposite to accuse their own compatriots of such frauds. This morning we have had a petition of that from an hon. gentleman opposite, who seems to be quite willing to be selected to make the charge; because nobody would blame the hon. gentleman for having moved of his own motion in the matter. The charge now made is : That in the province of Quebec, apparently it is a usual thing to commit forgery and to commit crimes of this nature.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Mr. BENNETT. I congratulate the hon. gentleman from Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) that he thinks he is fitted to be selected for the performance of the duty of making such gross accusations against his compatriots. A little time ago, when that celebrated plebiscite vote was taken in the province of Quebec, I regret to say that there were frauds perpetrated, and the people of Ontario will now have the statement of one member at least from the province of Quebec, that frauds of this kind are perpetrated in that province. We had it that deliberate frauds and disgraceful frauds were perpetrated in the plebiscite vote and that charge will go before the people of Ontario, backed up by this evidence of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Talbot). I congratulate the hon. gentleman on having been selected to assail, as he has assailed, his own compatriots in the province of Quebec. I can tell him furthermore, that in the constituency I have the honour to represent, there is a large French Canadian vote, and I invite him most cheerfully to come up there and assail his French compatriots in that riding as he has done in this matter.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). The French Canadians of the province of Quebec will be able, I thoroughly believe, to appreciate the attack that has been made upon them, and they will be able to distinguish between the responsibility of my hon. friend (Mr. Bennett) and that of my hon. friend from Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot). The hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett) has just referred to the plebiscite vote in the province of Quebec——

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Have they stopped voting yet ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Does my hon. friend from Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) refer to an affidavit presented by a man named Parent from Rimouski ?

Mr. BENNETT. I refer more particularly to the fact that more votes were cast in certain polling places than there were names on the voters' lists.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. That is not the case in the province of Quebec.

An hon. MEMBER. He is talking about Ontario.

Mr. BENNETT. And some of them in the city of Quebec.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I would like my hon. friend (Mr. Bennett) to particularize, because if my memory serves me he must base his statement on an alleged affidavit of one (Parent) of Rimouski. That was the only affidavit we had referring to such a matter that I can recall, and the result of the making of that affidavit has deprived this country of one citizen who has become a necessary resident of the United States.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BENNETT. I relied on the returns which show that in many polling places more votes were cast than there were names on the lists.

Some hon. MEMBERS. No.

Mr. E. HACKETT (West Prince). I presented a number of these petitions and I challenge the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) or any other hon. member to say, that I am not responsible for the names on these petitions. I endorse these petitions. Has it come to this, that in this free counry of ours, the right to petition parliament and our King, the highest right of the people is to be assailed in this way, and that we are to be draggged before a committee of parliament to be held responsible for the names on these petitions. Have things come to this pass in this free country ?

Mr. COWAN. Yes. You presented some very low class matter.

Mr. HACKETT. That individual over there is of a very low class himself. Sir, I stand here as an old resident of this country, I stand here as one who has represented the people for some twenty-five or thirty years, and I have never seen before such an exhibition; that the government of this country are endeavouring to prevent the people of this country from the right to petition parliament. It is a most disgraceful thing. and I would ask the hon. member from Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) to withdraw his motion and to have nothing more to do with this matter.

M. GEO. TAYLOR (South Leeds). I had the honour of presenting several of these petitions from my county. I scanned them carefully and I am certain that every name on them was genuine. I believe that these petitions should be included in the motion of the hon. member from Bellechasse. He has selected just a couple of these petitions and if any signatures on these are found not to be genuine, then an effort will be made to create the idea that all the petitions are of the same kind. That is not fair. Now, I want this motion to be broadened so as to include all the petitions that have been presented. Those from Quebec which were handed to my hon. friend from Prince Edward (Mr. Alcorn) were presented by him in the belief that they were genuine. It is possible that my hon. friend from Bellechasse sent some gentleman down there with one of these blank forms, knowing that this country from one end to the other——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. member has no right to say that a member might have been guilty of forgery.

Mr. TAYLOR. I did not say anything of the kind. I said that it might be possible that my hon. friend from Bellechasse might have procured these blank petitions and sent them to some friend down there.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Take it back.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman has no right to make such a statement against a member of this House.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I take it back; but I must say that in view of his having risen in his place and singled out two of these petitions from among those that have been presented here, it at least looks a little fishy, and as if there might be a job at the bottom of it; and unless he will broaden his motion sufficiently to include in it all the petitions that have been presented here, there can be no other inference taken. Therefore I suggest that all the petitions which have been presented be referred to that committee—and I am anxious to have those from my own constituency referred—because I know that the country from one end to the other is alarmed at the enormity of the scheme proposed by the government, and the people rose in their might and sent in genuine petitions, asking the governement to stay their hand until they investigated he matter.

Mr. D. HENDERSON (Halton). When the hon. member for Bellechasse read his statement in the House, I did not give very much attention to it. Evidently the hon. gentleman was selected by some pre-arranged plan to do something that possibly no other member would have done. But when the right hon. the First Minister enlarged the charge made by the hon. member for Bellechasse. and said that the same insinuation applied to all the petitions that had been presented, I began to consider the matter as very much more serious. I may tell the right hon. the First Minister that the imputation he has thrown out against many of my constituents who have sent in petitions will not be very kindly received by them; and I may say that amongst those petitioners are warm political friends of his own.

An hon. MEMBER. Not one.

Mr. HENDERSON. An hon. gentleman says not one. He is making a statement which he has no right to make, which is not in accordance with the truth; because I saw the right hon. gentleman's own political friends signing the petition. I think the right hon. gentleman has gone too far in making this broad statement, and I think it is his duty to have this investigation enlarged so as to make it apply to all petitions which have been presented, or else to withdraw the statement he has made.

Mr. TAYLOR.

Mr. E. F. CLARKE (West Toronto). My hon. friend who has just taken his seat has anticipated what I intended to say; but in order to give the right hon. gentleman, who is the guardian of the honour and the integrity and the privileges of this House, an opportunity of making good the insinuations which he threw out in replying to the hon. leader of the opposition, I propose to move, in amendment, seconded by Mr. Hughes (North Victoria):

That the words 'these petitions' be struck out and the following words be substituted therefor: 'All petitions presented during the present session relating to the National Transcontinental Railway.'

If the right hon. gentleman is so jealous of the honour of parliament, and if he is possessed of any knowledge or information that any attempt has been made other than that alleged by his follower from Bellechasse, to impose on the privileges of the House, he will surely accept this amendment, and give an opportunity to those who presented petitions to demonstrate their bona fides.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Carried.

Mr. CLARKE. If the hon. gentleman who says 'carried' is the fountain of justice, I wonder that he did not move in this matter himself.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Because when a specific charge of forgery is made, I like to deal with that specific charge. My hon. friend will find that there are others.

Mr. CLARKE. I hope the hon. minister will make good that statement.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I will. I refer to the case of petitions from Bagot.

Mr. SAMUEL HUGHES (North Victoria). I second the amendment with the greatest of pleasure. I had the honour of presenting some petitions from friends in my own riding, and I want to tell the Prime Minister that a number of Liberals signed those petitions. I never asked one of them to sign, but the signatures are genuine.

Mr. BELCOURT. That is not the charge. Nobody disputes that.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The statement was made in the House that no Liberal had signed one of these petitions. The hon. member for Bellechasse stated that the petition presented to the House to-day contained the names of idiots and lunatics. If that is so, I venture to say that friends of hon. gentlemen opposite were instrumental in having those petitions signed in that way in order that they might be presented to this House and be exposed. If that is the case, individuals will prove that the men who had that done were instigated by friends of hon. gentlemen opposite. I wish to say that a very prominent man in the province of Ontario, who had the offer of a Liberal nomination in the election for the last parliament, signed one of these petitions, and the name of a gentleman who has the refusal of a Liberal nomination to-day will also be found in one of them, signed not by another hand, but by his own strong right arm.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). I consider this a much more serious matter than it at first appeared to be. The allegations made by the hon. member for Bellechasse were so sweeping in their character and so specific in their nature as to demand prompt action to either establish or refute these charges against the petitioners, and the first minister alleged that the bulk of these petitions presented were of the same character, make this his charge a very important one for this House to consider. Following him, the right hon. the First Minister insinuates that all the petitions against the railway were of a similar character. Under these circumstances, it becomes a matter of the gravest importance that the inquiry should be of the very widest and most general character. From what I know of the signers of some of these petitions, I believe them to be men of high integrity and of sterling character, and so far as I know the petitions are truthfully and honestly signed. But the stigma cast upon these petitions by the right hon. First Minister applies to every petition which has been presented to this House, and therefore it involves the necessity of bringing the individual signers before the committee; and I demand, in the interest of justice and fairplay, and for the vindication of the character of the Reformers as well as the Conservatives who signed these petitions, that they be brought before that committee to give their testimony. It is too important to allow it to pass in that way, after the specific allegations of the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) that the signatures to these petitions were forgeries or signed by lunatics or aged people or people who were dead, especially we have the statement of the right hon. the First Minister, immediately following, that the petitions generally were of the same character. Such statements call for a most searching inquiry. The signers of these petitions should be brought from every part of the country, so that they may have an opportunity of vindicating their character.

Mr. R. BLAIN (Peel). I have had the honour of presenting a few petitions from the province of Ontario and I have some others which I have not yet presented. The right hon. the Prime Minister has insinuated that a very large number of the petitions have been falsely signed. I wish to say that I would like to have an investigation into the petitions which I presented from the electors of my county, and I would insist that the scope of this investigation be sufficiently wide to allow every man who signed one of these petitions to come here and make a declaration. I did not go closely into every petition which I presented, nor was it my duty to do so, but I have sufficient confidence in the electors of my county to feel assured that no signature is other than genuine. That is the way we do business in Ontario. Hon. gentlemen opposite laugh. They do not seem to care how long the session may last and I suppose we need not worry very much about it. I wish to say that I am in favour of the motion moved by the other side in so far as it goes. I am in favour of a complete investigation into this whole matter, but I am still more in favour of the resolution introduced by the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Clarke), that every petition presented to this House shall go before this committee and there shall be a complete investigation, so that the people will understand whether or not any of these signatures are false. I regard this as a most important question. Even at this late stage of the session, whether it should take several months or not, it is in the interest of the public that we should have an honest and complete investigation into the signatures to the petitions against this government project of a transcontinental railway.

Mr. M. K. RICHARDSON (South Grey). I had the honour, Mr. Speaker, of presenting several petitions. The first petition which I presented was accompanied with a letter stating that I would find on examination that it had been signed by Reformers and Conservatives alike. On glancing over the names, I found that statement correct, and I believe the same remark would apply to all the petitions I presented to this House.

Mr. G. O. ALCORN (Prince Edward). As it is concerning some petitions which I presented that controversy has arisen, I wish to state, Mr. Speaker, that I presented these petitions in the utmost good faith and belief that they were perfectly regular. And, Mr. Speaker, apart from the utterly unsupported statement of the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) we have no evidence whatever that there is anything irregular about them. In presenting these petitions I submit that I was certainly more warranted in assuming that the signatures were bona fide and genuine than the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) was in making use of the outrageously extreme language he has. After a reference which had been made by that hon. gentleman to these petitions in this House on a former occasion, I had a conversation with him, in which I called his attention to the fact that if some of the signatures were apparently written by the same hand, that gave no one any right to assume that they were not written in good faith at the request of the people who were not able to write their own names. In the rural parts of our provinces, it is not unusual to find electors who cannot sign their names, and we are entitled to assume that the signatures of such electors to these petitions were written by people who were authorized to sign for them. Hon. gentlemen know that the most solemn document a man signs in the course of his life (his will) is not necessarily signed by his own hand. He has a perfect right to ask his friend or neighbour to sign it for him. The excuse made by the hon. member for Bellechasse was that in each such case there should have been a witness who should have made a statutory declaration affirming that he was present and saw the signature made by the person who was requested to make it. Well, Sir, I am not aware that there is any procedure laid down in the rules of this House requiring any such thing to be done, and the House will well understand that it would not be practicable. It seems to me that, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, this House is bound to assume that the signatures were genuine. Until some direct evidence is produced showing some fraud in the affixing of signatures, no one has the right to challenge their authenticity. Until evidence is produced before the committee of investigation, under oath, establishing fraud, we are bound to assume that everything is absolutely regular. I do not propose to make any statement with regard to these petitions now if they are to go before a committee and be investigated; but so far as I am concerned, I take this opportunity of cordially inviting any investigation into any connection I have had with these matters. Every hon. gentleman on this side is most anxious that all the facts and proceedings should be investigated in the fullest manner. If the hon. member for Bellechasse means to insinuate that I had reason to suspect or believe that there was anything appearing on the face of either of the petitions I presented which should have led me to investigate into their genuineness, then I throw that insinuation back to the hon. gentleman with the scorn it deserves. So far as I am concerned, I repeat, I invite the fullest investigation.

Mr. ALFRED A. LEFURGEY (East Prince). I had the honour to present a number of the petitions——

Mr. COWAN. Apologize now.

Mr. LEFURGEY. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cowan) will keep quiet for a moment, he can have his turn when I get through. I was saying that I had the honour to present a number of petitions from my own constituency, and among the names appended to those petitions, especially those from my town of Summerside, quite a number were those of leading Liberals of that town, men who have been leading Liberals for years. I know the signatures of these gentlemen, and I can say that the best business men in the town signed these petitions. I was astounded at the language of the hon. leader of the House insinuating that the petitions presented to this parliament with regard to the Transcontinental Railway Bill were forgeries or that the signatures were those of people acting from ulterior motives. In the interest of the country and out of deference for the high standing of a great many of the men whose names are on the petitions I presented, I desire that the fullest investigation should be held, so that the stigma cast upon the reputations of these men by the leader of the House may be removed.

Mr. BENNETT. When, a little while ago, I mentioned that certain frauds had been perpetrated in the province of Quebec in connection with the plebiscite vote, I was rather challenged by the Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick). That hon. gentleman, as I understood, alleged that the only evidence in support of these charges of fraud was to be found in the statements of a man who, in consequence of those statements, was placed in such a position that he had to flee the country. I said I did not rely on the evidence of any man who made affidavits, but on something more tangible—the returns of the plebiscite vote. Under whose auspices was that plebiscite taken? Every man appointed to a position in the taking of that plebiscite——

Mr. SPEAKER. I would draw the attention of the hon. member (Mr. Bennett) to the fact that, a few minutes ago, when he referred to this question of the plebiscite, I understood that he merely wished to illustrate his argument before the Chair; but I am afraid he is discussing——

Mr. BENNETT. I would have finished with my illustration.

Mr. SPEAKER. I would recall the hon. gentleman's attention to the fact that the question of the plebiscite or of the census is not germane to the question before the Chair.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). It is used illustratively.

Mr. SPEAKER. I thought the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett) wished simply to make an explanation of what he had said previously.

Mr. BENNETT. That is what I mean.

Mr. SPEAKER. I would invite the hon. gentleman not to make an argument.

Mr. BENNETT. I say, Mr. Speaker, that I do not rely for evidence of fraud in the plebiscite vote in the province of Quebec, upon the statement of any person, but upon the returns themselves. These returns prove that frauds of the grossest kind were perpetrated. Why, what happened in the city of Quebec itself? In one polling division, in which there were only 115 names on the voters' list, no less than 114 votes were recorded. No man is so idiotic as to believe that, in such a polling division, 114 electors actually presented themselves and voted. In another division of the city of Quebec, I find that 111 votes were polled out of 114 names on the list. And, with a zeal worthy of their masters in the province of Quebec, where they were trying to get a negative vote on the plebiscite, in Quebec Centre, they did the magnificent work against the cause of temperance of polling 105 votes where there were only 101 names on the list. And you can take the province of Quebec county by county, and find evidences of such frauds as are exposed by the figures I have just read.

Mr. JOHN D. REID (South Grenville). I am much surprised at the right hon. Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) backing up so strongly the resolution of the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot). When these petitions were being presented to the House day by day, signed by men of both parties throughout the Dominion, the Liberal papers all over the country tried to create the impression that the petitions were only from members of the Conservative party. They tried to make the petitions fall flat. Now, when this Grand Trunk Pacific Bill was being put through this House, we on this side felt it our duty to do everything we possibly could to prevent it becoming law without an opportunity being afforded of discussing it before the people, so that they might be educated on the question and understand what was before them. If the right hon. Prime Minister will actually carry through this investigation that has been proposed—I for one do not believe that he has any intention whatever of doing so—he will find that this Grand Trunk Pacific Bill is being opposed by leading Liberals from one end of the country to the other. If that investigation is properly held, I am satisfied that leading Liberals from every constituency of this Dominion will declare themselves opposed to the Prime Minister's policy, and in this way he will gain some idea of the effect that this Grand Trunk Pacific Bill will have upon his party at the next general election. I feel, for one, that this is the opportunity of our life to show to the people the folly of having the Grand Trunk Bill pressed through the House during the present session. I hope, therefore, that the right hon. Prime Minister has not had this motion proposed as a sham, but that he will give us the very fullest investigation, even if we take another six months to carry it out.

Mr. T. I. THOMSON (North Grey). It is quite clear that the government are at sea, perfectly at sea, as regards public opinion in the province of Ontario on the subject of this proposed transcontinental railway. I may say that one of the petitions sent to me was accompanied with a letter from the sender stating that every man he asked to sign it had signed it cheerfully, and there were as many Liberals as Conservatives on the petition. I am satisfied that every name on the petition is right. And I ask you, Mr. Speaker, why should not any man, no matter what his politics, be glad to sign such a petition? The most important request in that petition is that the construction of this road should not be proceeded with until proper surveys had been prepared. Why, the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair), whom I am glad to see in his place, stated that one of the chief reasons why he broke with his colleagues on this question was this very reason. And if that hon. gentleman thought this of sufficient importance to be one of his chief reasons for leaving the government, why should any Liberal in Ontario or any other province, object to signing these petitions. I think the government have not realized their position in this matter, but an appeal to the people which I hope they will soon grant, will convince them of the opinion of the country.

Mr. W. J. ROCHE (Marquette). As one of those who had the honour of presenting some of the petitions referred to, I desire, in the strongest possible manner, to resent the imputation cast upon the signatures of these petitions as not being genuine, by no less a personage than the right hon. Prime Minister of this country. The hon. member for Selkirk (Mr. McCreary) presented a petition signed by 800 residents of the province of Manitoba against the railway rates on cream and other products. The hon. gentleman (Mr. McCreary) assumes responsibility for the genuineness of that petition. He has faith, as I have, that the signatures are genuine. We who are representatives are only doing our duty in presenting these petitions to parliament, and we cannot be responsible for every single individual name that is on them. We cannot answer for the genuineness of all these names, but at any rate, we in the province of Manitoba feel such confidence in the integrity and in the honesty of our inhabitants that we know well that they would resort to no such despicable methods as those which the member for Bellechasse states were resorted to in connection with the signing of those petitions in the province of Quebec. Now, I do not know so much about the inhabitants of that gentleman's province as he knows himself, but certainly, coming as I do from the west, I believe it to be beneath my dignity to cast such aspersions upon the inhabitants of Quebec as have emanated from that hon. gentleman himself. The most amusing thing, Mr. Speaker, in connection with this whole affair, is to see the dignity of parliament being looked after by the hon. member for Bellechasse, who now constitutes himself a champion of the dignity of parliament. I would say, to use a vulgarism, that it was enough to make a horse laugh, if it were not so serious a matter. I think that no other gentleman on that side of the House could be found who would use such violent language and make such a serious charge against the gentlemen who have attached their signatures to these petitions. But I am not so much surprised at that hon. gentleman as I was at the Prime Minister, when he actually stated that no doubt these two petitions were samples of what prevailed throughout the whole Dominion. I say that it is my duty to rise and resent on the part of the people of Manitoba, such an aspersion upon those who have attached their signatures to these petitions, and who, in sending them in, distinctly stated that they would have been much more numerously signed had they had time to circulate them a while longer. Now, Sir, like hon. gentlemen on that side of the House, we are in favour of an investigation, and we insist on a full investigation, and are quite willing to stay here the balance of the year to get that investigation. The right hon. gentleman need not think that he can confine his investiation to two or three of these petitions, and then go through the country and raise a doubt of their genuineness, and proclaim that they are a sample of what took place in almost every province of the Dominion. It is, I say, an aspersion cast upon the inhabitants of our country who, though Conservatives in their politics, were they to-morrow to go over and give their support to the government on this transcontinental road or on their general policy, the Prime Minister would say that 'nothing would be too good for them,' as he said in regard to some of his colleagues in the past; but when his colleagues left the administration and refused to support him on this railway question, now nothing is too bad for them. I say the mere fact of a man being a Conservative does not change his character to that extent that he becomes a forger immediately, and then as soon as he joins the Liberal party he becomes one of the best citizens of the country. I think we will find that this is a mere device on the part of the hon. member for Bellechasse, who no doubt, acting under instructions from the government, wanted to break the force of public opinion that has expressed itself against this Trans-Canada road and its prosecution under its present auspices. But I think the Prime Minister will find that he has mistaken public opinion when he attempts to gag and to stifle the opinion of this country by asserting that these signatures were not genuine, when as a matter of fact they would have been far more numerous had time and opportunity been given.

Mr. W. F. McCREARY (Selkirk). As representing a portion of the west, I think we should concur in this investigation and make it as wide as possible. I looked over some of those signatures obtained in the city of Winnipeg and I must say I do not think some of the signers have been long resident in that city. Looking at the two petitions that came from Winnipeg, I would say that they were signed in a certain bar-room on a certain street, and I am sure that many of the people who signed that petition have not been residents of Winnipeg for more than a month, and that the price of signing it was about a glass of beer and a cigar. Why, the spurious character of the signatures is evident on the face of those petitions, because several signed their names as residing in Michigan, Kansas City, South Dakota. Now, I submit that though they may not be forgeries, those petitions should have very little weight with this House, for after a residence of about twenty-five years in the city of Winnipeg, I venture the assertion that not fifteen per cent of those names belong to people who have votes, or who are known in the city of Winnipeg as labouring men or business men. I have not had time to scrutinize the petitions coming from other parts of the province, but certainly they are representative of only a very small minority of the people of the province of Manitoba. To show the absolute ignorance of the parties who sent up that petition, I may mention for instance that one of those presented by the hon. member for Marquette as coming from the county of Selkirk, was as a matter of fact signed at Baldur and Melita, a hundred miles west of the county of Selkirk—absolutely ignorant of the geography of the country.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). I do not think the member for Marquette presented any at all for Selkirk.

Mr. McCREARY. Then it was some other gentleman, I don't know. I know they were presented, and the county of Selkirk was marked on the petition. I said to the hon. member for Macdonald (Mr. Boyd): 'These cannot come from the county of Selkirk,' because when I examined the petitions I found that they were alleged to be signed at places a hundred miles beyond the old county of Selkirk, and beyond the present county. So, I think the investigation should be as wide as possible.

Mr. MARCIL (Bonaventure). Was it the same petition that was signed in Quebec?

Mr. McCREARY. Yes, and some of the men who signed in Winnipeg were men who had merely dropped into Winnipeg. There are a large number of speculative people there at the present time buying land, and no doubt a good percentage of those people who signed in Winnipeg were picked up in the hotels and around the markets.

Mr. EDWARD COCHRANE (East Northumberland) I had the honour of presenting petitions to this House, and I want to say that those coming from the county of East Northumberland were genuine. For my part, I care very little what the member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) may say in reference to the electors of the county that I have the honour to represent, and if they all knew him as well as I do, the electors would care very little about him, but they don't. Therefore, I want to protect them from any misleading influence that the hon. gentleman's assertions may have in this House or elsewhere. I want this question to be thoroughly investigated, and not balked as other questions have been by the right hon. gentleman and his friends. I was surprised to find that the leader of this House, the Premier of the Dominion of Canada, would lower himself in the estimation of the electors of this country by pinning his faith to the statements that were made by a gentleman who, I think, was put up by the government to make these assertions, and to asperse the good name of the electors of the province of Ontario as well as of the rest of this Dominion. I tell the right hon. gentleman that there is many a Reformer in the riding I have the honour to represent who signed these petitions and who won't thank him for the insinuations he made about them. The hon. member for Selkirk (Mr. McCreary) says he has lived in the city of Winnipeg for twenty-five years. Well, he has improved his time. He knows just where these iniquities are perpetrated. I think he must have got some of the petitions signed, for he says that all the signers wanted was a glass of beer and a cigar. I compliment the hon. gentleman on knowing where the dignified positions are in the city of Winnipeg. I am sure the electors of his constituency will be very proud of the man that represents them in this House, when they learn that he is so familiar with the places where they can get a glass of beer and cigars. I would like his constituents and the people generally of that noble west of ours to know that they have got a representative in this House who would so lower the dignity of the men who sent him here as to say that he is thoroughly acquainted with the city of Winnipeg, and knows all the dives and just where to get petitions signed at the price of a glass of beer and a cigar. I think if the hon. gentleman reads his speech in 'Hansard' he will be very much ashamed——

Mr. McCREARY. I will not take it back. I know all about it.

Mr. COCHRANE—to see that he has heralded it to the world that he knows all about the dens of iniquity in the city of Winnipeg.

Mr. R. A. PRINGLE (Cornwall and Stormont). Mr. Speaker, I had not the honour to present any petitions in reference to this Transcontinental Railway. However, I listened attentively to the statement made by the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot), and, if I understood him rightly, he stated that these petitions were signed by dead people, that they contained false signatures and that they were signed by insane people. If the remarks had ended with the hon. member for Bellechasse I do not think I would have been called upon to say anything, but when the right hon. leader of the government (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) practically insinuated that the statements made by the hon. member for Bellechasse in regard to these two petitions were also true in regard to all the petitions filed, I feel that it is my duty to say something in regard to that statement. Now, is it to be said that the people are insane because they have signed a petition, the second clause of which states that:

> Your petitioners are of the opinion that it would be unwise and imprudent to take definite action until the government and parliament are fully possessed of the information essential to a proper decision of the question?

The hon. member for Bellechasse says that insane people have signed that petition in which that statement is embodied. He might as well have said that the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) was insane when he made this statement:

> But I am not in favour of impetuously rushing into the construction of a transcontinental line from Quebec, through an unknown country to Winnipeg and west until we know something about it—until we have the fullest information about it. The project is one of very great magnitude and it should be dealt with only after the maturest deliberation.

The hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals has put it in very much stronger terms than the language of this petition. I think the amendment moved by my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) is a proper amendment, and now that the right hon. Prime Minister has intimated or insinuated that all these petitions have false signatures, that they have been signed by dead men and have been signed by insane people, we have the right to have all these petitions thoroughly investigated, no matter how long it may take us.

Mr. S. E. GOURLEY (Colchester). Mr. Speaker, I had the honour of presenting some of these petitions, and when the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) attacked two of them, I thought it was very proper to do so if he had reasonable grounds. But of the hundreds of petitions that have been presented there is not the slightest charge that there is any informality or incorrectness in them, with the exception of these two. For the right hon. Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to arise when only two petitions were attacked, and these two in reference to some three or four names, and make the wholesale charge which he heralded against the hundreds of men who had signed all of the other petitions without a scintilla of evidence, is one of the most extraordinary things that I ever heard of. I think the right hon. gentleman should be a man of more discretion and judgment than to be carried away by a momentary impulse to make a statement of such a startling character. The right of petition is one of the most sacred rights that we have. Everybody has the right to come to this parliament and present a petition. It is one of the most cherished rights that we have, and a right to secure which wars have been waged in England. I agree that a member of parliament must be responsible for his petitions, but I say that he must be responsible in a reasonable and intelligent manner. If a petition is sent from my county professing to be signed by the electors of the county, I would present it in the utmost good faith, believing that everything was correct and honourable. The hon. member for Bellechasse has made the most extraordinary charge against this government that has ever been made since I have been in parliament. According to his own story, so unpopular and hated has this government become in the province of Quebec that men leave their graves and walk abroad to sign petitions against it. Even the asylums have been invaded by the awful terror of the existence of this government, because the crazy men in the province of Quebec have been frightened by the intolerable methods of this government into moments of sanity and lucidity, when they apparently petition this House to save them from the recklessness of this government. It strikes me that the hon. member for Bellechasse has levelled the most deadly blow against this government that has been levelled against it, when he says that men who have left the cares of life and sought quiet in the grave rise up to enter their protest against the infamy of this government. Why, Sir, the right hon. Prime Minister, if he had been an astute man, would have at once repudiated the language of the hon. member for Bellechasse, and asked him to desist, because he was pointing to a state of affairs which showed that petitions ought to be levelled by every live man against this measure when the dead have risen from their graves to protest against it. Now, gentlemen——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. GOURLEY. Now, Mr. Speaker—hon. gentlemen opposite are so extremely polite and courteous that an hon. gentleman cannot be permitted the slightest deviation from the rule, even if he does happen to be a young member—this method of attacking petitions should have the reprobation of this House. The charge should have been levelled against one, or two, or three names; the charge should have been specific; because, when you attack the general right of petition, you strike at one of the most sacred rights and privileges of the country, and while I agree that no man should offer to insult this parliament by pretending to petition it when he does not really sign his name or agree to somebody else signing it, while I concur that it was a most serious matter for any man to present a petition containing a single name that he does not know to be genuine, I think when petitions are presented here they should be assumed to be regularly and honestly signed, because it would be a serious attack upon the reputation and decency of the people and upon their intelligence to fancy that anybody in the country could be wild and bad enough to obtain the signatures of men improperly; and, secondly, when obtained that they should be presented to this parliament. Therefore, when the hon. member for Bellechasse attacks these petitions he charges, first, that there was some man in this country bad enough to go round and ask men to sign their names to petitions, and when they would not do so to sit down deliberately and commit forgery. That is a charge against the honour and honesty of the people of this country that does not apply, I am glad to say, against the province of Nova Scotia. If it can be applied to any other province, I can tell the House that there is not a man in the province of Nova Scotia bad enough to do that kind of thing, and when an hon. member makes such a charge in regard to the province of Quebec, I say that he insults the province of Quebec. I repudiate it on behalf of the province of Quebec. I do not believe there is any man who would be bad enough in the province of Quebec to go around and forge the signature of his neighbours to a petition and to send it to this parliament to have it presented. For my part, on behalf of the province of Quebec, I refuse to believe that a single name to these petitions was signed improperly. Therefore, when the hon. member, knowing the sacredness of the right of petition, made his charges, he should have particularized what names he believed to be bad, so that the whole character of all the petitioners should not have been assailed. It is an extraordinary and an incredible position for the government to take. The Prime Minister should have been the first to denounce this attack upon the honour of thousands and thousands of the electorate of this country. It is impossible to believe that thousands of our citizens are tainted with forgery, fraud and criminality. I refuse to believe it, and the Prime Minister should have been the first to refuse to believe it. The member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) has a perfect right to make the charge, but he ought to make it with the utmost gravity, the utmost care, the utmost particularity, and he should not have cast a slur on the whole body of the citizens of Canada who signed these petitions.

Mr. TALBOT. In one petition, out of twenty-four names, there are seventeen bad.

Mr. GOURLEY. And what is seventeen out of thousands? There are three or four hundred criminals in our penitentiaries, but does that asperse the high moral character of all the citizens of Canada ?

Mr. LOGAN. Seventeen out of twenty-four.

Mr. GOURLEY. And supposing it is true that seventeen are bad, I will decline to believe that because that is the case all the citizens of Quebec, who signed these petitions, are guilty of fraud and forgery. The hon. member (Mr. Talbot) should have been most guarded to confine his charges simply to the names which he thinks are bad, and the Prime Minister should have himself guarded the reputation of the people of Canada by demanding that these charges should be particularized. Even if some names should be found to be bad, then we must assume that the person who had charge of the signatures for that petition was not careful in having it signed. That is all it would amount to. I support the amendment of the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Clarke) that all of these petitions be brought before this committee, in order that the fair name of the people of Canada may be safe from the serious charge made against them, and which charge has been endorsed by the Prime Minister.

Mr. R. JOHNSTON (Cardwell). I had the honour of presenting some of these petitions, and I desire to say that so far as I know, I believe the signatures to them are genuine in every respect. I do not wonder at an attempt being made by the Liberals in this House to discredit those who petitioned against the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, in view of the manner in which they have attempted to discredit a late minister of the government whom they supported, who had the courage to protest against the ridiculous idea of building this railway without plans, and without necessary information. These gentlemen opposite have endeavoured in every way to belittle the ex-Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Blair), and I have not the slightest doubt they would belittle him more if they were able to. The hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) is put up to this scheme to try to blackmail the petitioners all through this Dominion of Canada. It is no wonder, I repeat, that they try to blacken the character of the petitioners, just as they tried to blacken the ex-Minister of Railways, who they said was not fit to unloose the shoe-laces of the Prime Minister. Although I did not see the signatures upon the petitions which I had the honour to present, I believe that every name on them was legitimately put there with the knowledge of the persons who signed. I want all the men who signed this petition in the county of Dufferin, to be summoned down here, so as to give them an opportunity of stating before parliament, whether they signed these petitions or not. If there is any fair-play in the matter, the government will afford these petitioners this opportunity.

Mr. C. B. HEYD (Brant). We have not been treated this morning to a very edifying spectacle in connection with the charge which has been made by our friend from Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot). Because he has stated that there was corruption and fraud in connection with these petitions, a general desire has been expressed by our friends on the other side, that every one of the petitioners should have a free ride down to Ottawa in order to say whether they signed these petitions or not.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. HEYD. That would be a very nice thing for the constituents of our friends on the other side, but it is not necessary. A distinct charge has been made that fraud has been committed with regard to certain of these petitions, and I hope that it will be investigated. We have heard this morning about the sacred right of petition. We acknowledge the sacredness of the petition to parliament. We know that it has existed from time immemorial. It is because it is the right of the humblest of His Majesty's subjects that we so highly regard it, and therefore we say that when our friends on the other side, for political purposes, have prostituted that right of petition——

Mr. BELL (Pictou). I rise to a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HEYD—have caused petitions to be circulated throughout the length and breadth of this country——

Mr. BELL. I have risen to a point of order.

Mr. HEYD—not to express the grievances of the people, but in order to promote the political interests of their party——

Mr. BELL. I have risen to a point of order. I beg to call attention to the fact that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Heyd) has accused the gentlemen on this side of the House of prostituting their rights.

Mr. SPEAKER. I did not catch the word.

Mr. BELL. He distinctly accused gentlemen on this side of the House of having prostituted their rights.

Mr. SPEAKER. I presume that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Heyd) will withdraw the word 'prostituting.'

Mr. BENNETT. Take it back now.

Mr. HEYD. His inference is entirely erroneous ; his mind and my mind are running in a different groove——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman is in order in making a personal explanation.

Mr. HEYD. I do not know what hon. gentlemen opposite are driving at.

Mr. BELL. I say the hon. gentleman—I presume he would like to be considered an hon. gentleman—has applied the word 'prostituting' to members of this House, and I think the dignity and honour of this House requires that that expression should be withdrawn.

Mr. SPEAKER. I understand that the hon. gentleman was explaining what he intended to say, and was willing to withdraw the expression.

Mr. HEYD. Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw any expression which our hon. friends on the other side think is offensive ; but I will go on to say that when the sacred right of petition is prostituted for political purposes—that is what I said, and that is what I say still. If certain disaffected people anywhere in this country have a grievance, they have a perfect right to petition this House to have that grievance removed. But when in a newspaper office, or in a gathering of politicians somewhere or somehow in the darkness of the night, a scheme is set on foot for petitions headed in a certain way to be sent throughout the length and breadth of this country, to create the idea that these petitioners have a grievance; and when these petitions are being hawked about from pillar to post; and when, as is represented here, they are fraudulently signed; when the dead, as our hon. friend says, are brought from their graves and others are brought from lunatic asylums, when all other conceivable methods are used to get these petitions signed—what is it for ? Not because these people have a grievance, but to give our hon. friends opposite a political card to play in the coming elections; because they want to trump up the idea that there is a great protest against this railway throughout the country. I excuse our hon. friends on the other side from knowingly presenting these fraudulent petitions. They could not possibly know who signed them or how they were obtained. I have not the slightest doubt that if one had reached me from my own constituency, I would have presented it in good faith. But do not let our hon. friends opposite run away with the impression that they are going to convince the public that there was no fraud in any particular instance.

Mr. A. C. BELL (Pictou). There is no doubt that our hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Heyd) maintains a very lofty view as to the character of the citizens of this country and the members of this House. He seems to have no higher opinion of them than to assume that the citizens of this country are on the lookout for a cheap ride to Ottawa. I congratulate the hon. gentleman on showing that he possesses those qualities of statesmanship which justify his presence in this House. I hope it will not be presumed that the members of this House generally are represented by the hon. gentleman. I would like to think that he represents himself alone in speaking in the way he has done. With that remark, I think I might let the opinion of the hon. gentleman go to the oblivion to which it properly belongs. I may say that several petitions in connection with this matter were presented to this House by myself in perfect good faith. I do not know that all the signatures attached to them were put there by the parties who purport to have signed them, and I do not know that the Prime Minister would ask any member of this House to give any such assurance in presenting a petition. But I do think that the right hon. gentleman, in making the charge which he has made in his place in this House, against the people of Canada generally, and against the citizens of his own province, spoke much too hastily and without much reflection as to the importance of the words he uttered. There was in the right hon. gentleman's remarks the implication that possibly a large proportion of the signatures on the petitions presented to this House were forgeries ; which implied such a charge against the people of this country as no Prime Minister of Canada should ever dare to make in the House of Commons. The right of petition belongs to us as British subjects ; and how are our petitions to be presented except through the representatives of the people who have seats in this House ? If it can be shown that in some cases that privilege has been abused, I am sure the right hon. gentleman will find that no men in this House are more anxious to discover the wrong and have it rectified than the gentlemen sitting on this side of the House. But we decline to allow the right hon. gentleman to put up one of his followers on the back benches, with a prepared case, to cast discredit on hundreds and thousands of these petitioners, and to decline to allow a more general investigation to be made. If the right hon. gentleman feels that he can accuse the people of Canada generally of this kind of wrong-doing, we will declare on our part that the people of Canada must have the right of rebutting that charge, and throwing it back in the right hon. gentleman's face. The intention of hon. gentlemen on the government side of the House is to cast doubt on the whole series of petitions.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BELL. May I ask the hon. member for Essex (Mr. Cowan), who says 'hear, hear,' who was the first man in Canada to attach his name, in a most effective fashion, by his speech in this House, to this petition against this gross outrage on the part of this government ? It was Andrew G. Blair, ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, recently a colleague of the right hon. gentleman, who not only, to all intents and purposes, signed his name to the petition, but enforced it in a powerful arraignment of the government, which I may say has not to this moment been replied to by any member of the government. Hon. gentlemen opposite attempt to belittle the protest of the people of Canada against this outrage; but that attempt will fail, and fail most effectually. This attempt on the part of a government, which has sat here month after month without submitting to parliament in response to inquiries one reason or one shred of information on which a proper judgment of this contract could be based, is destined to lamentable, ignominious and complete failure. It is a very small trick on the part of the government to put up a gentleman who in the early part of the session——

Mr. SPEAKER. Order. The hon. gentleman has no right to accuse members of this House of a trick.

Mr. BELL. Well, I am anxious to keep myself within the rules of order, and I will say that it was a very low proceeding to take a gentleman who early in the session was clamouring for a subsidy for the Trans-Canada Railway, and who is now, no doubt, in consequence of some settlement that has been arrived at between himself and the government——

Mr. SPEAKER. Order. The hon. gentleman has no right to impute motives to any members of this House.

Mr. BELL. I am not imputing any motives. I presume that some arrangement has been made or something has transpired. If the Speaker rules that out of order, I have great pleasure in withdrawing it.

Mr. SPEAKER. There is no doubt that no member of this House has a right to impute any motive, or to cast any suspicion upon the motive of a member of this House.

Mr. BELL. I do not desire to cast any suspicion. I merely suggested what I thought was a very obvious fact—that something must have transpired. If my remark in that very mild form is objectionable, I am willing to withdraw it. But you find the government compelled to resort to these efforts to try to weaken the attack made upon them in the only way in which it can be made by means of petitions. I have a petition from the county of Cumberland, which I am assured by the gentleman who sent it to me, would have been signed by 80 per cent of the electors, if he could only have had sufficient time to present it for signature. There are petitions which as we will be only too happy to prove, have been signed by men who, in other respects, are supporting the present government, but who, so far as this most grotesque railway project is concerned, are opposed to the government. If the right hon. gentleman wants to weaken the force of these petitions, he is not going to do it by attacking one here and there, but he must treat the whole together. What was the course taken by hon. gentlemen opposite last session when they sought to throw discredit on the census returns of the province of Quebec? The right hon. gentleman laid on the Table a great mass of evidence intended to show that there was an improper computation of the population of the province of Quebec in the census of 1891. He was challenged by this side not to rely solely on such evidence as he could procure from his partisans throughout that province, but to submit the whole matter to the investigation of some competent authority. Did he do it? No, Sir, he did as he did in the case of the West Huron election frauds. He refused to have the matter investigated by a competent tribunal. Just as he does in every difficult situation in which he finds himself, he managed to make use of some subterfuge and creep out when challenged. But if now, after he is challenged to have a full inquiry, he prefers to shirk his duty, he can only do so in defiance of the protest of the opposition.

Mr. H. J. LOGAN (Cumberland). There can be no doubt, Mr. Speaker, about the fact that the opposition have lost their self-control.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. LOGAN. They have made their last throw and lost. A few weeks ago, with the aid of a Canadian newspaper they determined to put forth a propaganda which they thought would sweep the whole country. They were going to submerge this House with a deluge of petitions and completely overpower the government. But what has been the result? After trying their utmost, after canvassing constituencies, after begging the people to sign, they have induced less than four per cent of the electorate to sign petitions against the government railway project; and among that four per cent are lunatics and dead men and men who are not living in the country at all. They have ignominiously failed to get the petitions signed, which they have been hawking around for weeks. My hon. friend from Pictou (Mr. Bell) says that he could have had eighty per cent of the people in some districts of Cumberland to sign the petition which he presented. Let me tell the hon. gentleman that there are 40,000 people in that constituency, and that his friends who went through it from house to house got just 151 names out of these 40,000. Does that look like 80 per cent of the people? I was down in my constituency a few weeks ago, and during my stay I did not find one Liberal who did not approve of the government scheme, and I met many Conservatives who said they were ashamed of their party, once led by such men as Sir John Macdonald and Sir Charles Tupper—a party which then had the instincts of government, but which now has sunk so low as to oppose our national development. I can tell my hon friend further that he might tramp the county of Cumberland from end to end, and he would not get one per cent of the people in the Liberal ranks to sign any petition in favour of the alternative scheme of the leader of the opposition. These hon. gentlemen opposite have tried to use the ex-Minister of Railways to bolster up their case, but we know that that hon. gentleman has freely expressed his opinion that the alternative proposition of the leader of the opposition is absolutely ridiculous and would not be entertained by the people. Have any petitions been presented in favour of that alternative scheme? Not a single one. My hon. friend from Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) has presented specific charges regarding certain petitions and has been answered by a volume of abuse, and no doubt I shall be treated in like manner. These hon. gentlemen resort to the old dodge of abusing the opposing attorney in default of argument. In one of the petitions there are thirty out of thirty-four names written in the one handwriting. Let me tell the hon. member for Pictou (Mr. Bell) that although I do not believe that there was forgery in my constituency, these 151 names were not signed by 151 different hands. There are several in the same handwriting. What are the facts? These gentlemen opposite prepared these petitions in conjunction with a certain newspaper and sent them broadcast over the country. Did these petitions ask the people of Canada to declare that this road should not be built? No, Sir. I have in my hand a copy of two of them, one prepared to circulate in the east and one for circulation in the west, and the one differs from the other as black from white. Here is the petition from the east, which was presented for signature in the county of Cumberland. It sets forth:

That your petitioners are of opinion that it would be unwise and imprudent to take definite action until the government and parliament are fully possessed of the information essential to a proper decision of that question.

That a project of such magnitude should not be undertaken without the most complete and accurate surveys, under the direction and control of engineers of standing and repute.

But you will not find any such paragraph with western petitions.

That such surveys should be in the hands of the government and of parliament before the credit of the Dominion is committed to an enterprise which involves enormous obligations.

That, however, the most competent men are of opinion that the cost of the projected line between Winnipeg and Moncton will reach the enormous amount of upwards of $120,000,000.

That, on the contrary, it is to be greatly feared that by pledging the credit of the country to such a vast extent, the government will make it impossible to carry out works better calculated to meet the transportation needs of the country.

This is equivalent to saying that if the government go ahead with this project, there will be no public money available to build other railways. Then it proceeds to say:

That the government, parliament and the taxpayers should hanve an opportunity to learn the results of the investigation of the said commission; and to examine the evidence upon which such results were arrived at.

That is the eastern petition. Let us now look at the western petition. It starts out by stating that transportation facilities are necessary and then proceeds to say:

That the over capitalization of transportation companies is one of the most important conditions leading to unduly high rates, and should be prevented.

That a railway system designed to move the products of the west should not be burdened by the addition of costly and needless sections; that the proposed eastern section of the Grand Trunk Pacific would be of value chiefly for the purpose of colonizing the territory it traverses; and that western lines should not be obliged to impose rates fixed with a view of providing for the annual fixed charges upon such section, between one and two thousand miles long, built many years in advance of settlement in the James bay basin.

That the company should not be committed to the construction of the eastern section.

This is the petition presented to the west.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). The hon. gentleman accuses members on this side of circulating two petitions—one for the east and one for the west.

Mr. LOGAN. Yes.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). I know and can tell more about those western petitions than the hon. member for Cumberland. I placed that petition on 'Hansard' the other day. There has not been one petition circulated in the west coming from hon. gentlemen on this side. They originated in the west and were circulated there by the people themselves and sent here to their representatives in parliament.

Mr. LOGAN. Will the hon. gentleman tell me that the heading of the petition, a copy of which I have in my hand, was not printed in Ontario or Quebec?

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). So far as I am aware——

Some hon. MEMBERS. You do not know.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). I will undertake to say this, that not one single petition circulated in the west was printed in the east.

Mr. LOGAN. I asked the hon. gentleman if the headings to the petitions were not printed in the east.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). I do not deny that, but there is no point in that.

Mr. LOGAN. That is all I have contended for. This petition goes on to say:

That the proposed western section of the Grand Trunk Pacific, from Winnipeg to Edmonton should be constructed as an additional line opening up new territory; and that the Grand Trunk Pacific Company should not be allowed to purchase the Canadian Northern Railway line instead of constructing an additional line.

That is something new that they have imported into this proposition. Then it concludes :

Your petitioners therefore humbly pray that the Transportation Bill now before parliament be not passed in its present form, but that it be altered to provide for the above-mentioned conditions, and that the commission on transportation should consider the whole question of the proposed eastern section and report, and that complete surveys and estimates should be made.

Mr. Speaker, the petition which was presented in the House from the eastern part of Canada, and which they failed to get signed by any material part of the population of that part of Canada was put upon this ground—the people were asked to sign it on the ground that $120,000,000 would have to be paid for the construction of this road, that this would be taken out of the treasury, and that the effect of its expenditure would be to prevent facilities being provided which were required in that part of the country. In the petitions presented in the western part of Canada this was not mentioned, but signatures were sought to the petition on the ground that the road would be too heavily bonded and would be compelled to charge too high rates. I charge that these petitions were prepared in Eastern Canada, either in the city of Montreal or in the city of Ottawa; that one form of petition was sent to the eastern part of Canada to be signed and the other sent to the western part of Canada to be signed; and not four per cent of the electorate of Canada signed either one petition or the other.

At one o'clock, House took recess.

House resumed at three o'clock.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER (Lincoln and Niagara). Mr. Speaker, as I am one of the members of the House who presented petitions in regard to this much vexed and much discussed railway project of the government, I desire that this discussion shall not close without a word from me on the subject. I should not have troubled the House at all if the matter had ended with the remarks of the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot). But, when the Prime Minister, undertaking to represent the whole country and standing for the advisers of His Excellency the Governor General in all administrative matters carried the argument to the distance he did this morning in the few remarks with which he favoured the House, I feel that it is incumbent upon me not only on my own part, but out of respect and consideration for the electors whom I represent who have hitherto supported this government and voted against me in the last election, to say a few words. I say it is my duty, not speaking alone for members of the opposition, or even for those in my county who are in the habit of voting for the Liberal Conservative party, but speaking for those who have hitherto voted for the so-called Reform party and the government now in power, to say a word in refutation and repudiation of the insinuation thrown out by the right hon. Prime Minister. The hon. member for Bellechasse undertook, from information which he seemed to think satisfactory—and perhaps he is to be excused, for, as the Prime Minister said, the hon. gentleman is not a lawyer and does not know the value of evidence—to find fault with one or two petitions in regard to this matter which has come from certain places in the province in which he resides. The hon. member for Bellechasse attacks certain parts of that province in attacking the petitions which come from it. He undertook, as I say, on the strength of information which satisfies him that there is something wrong in these petitions to ask an investigation in regard to these two—I believe there were two—petitions to which he refers. It might well have stopped there, and I think it ought to have stopped there. The hon. member for Bellechasse might or might not have been entitled by the evidence which he presented to prolong the session of this House and have an investigation carried on. While I notice that the hon. member for Bellechasse was very anxious to have an investigation, he based his demand for it largely upon the fact that several signatures in the petitions were in the same handwriting. As the hon. gentleman (Mr. Talbot) is not a lawyer, I might be permitted to point out that this of itself is not a piece of fraud. His province, no doubt, is in the same position as others in this matter. There are men who cannot write, or men who do not put their own names to petitions, but request another person to sign for them. There are persons who cannot write their names legibly and, if they wish to petition parliament or petition a municipal body or any other authority must have their names written by others. It may be that the hon. member for Bellechasse will find that this is the mare's nest he has discovered. But that is not the most serious part of it, nor would the remarks of the hon. member for Bellechasse with regard to petitions from his own province have caused me to feel it my duty to speak. But I rise, as I have said, to repudiate the insinuations thrown out by the right hon. Prime Minister against all the petitions that have been presented against this measure. The petitions from the county of Lincoln were presented by me in good faith. They were signed by persons whom I know. I read every signature and I can assure the Prime Minister and every member of parliament that several names, in the petitioner's own handwriting, are the names of gentlemen who have never voted against the party of the present government, but who will not be the more inclined to vote for that party by the insult of the Prime Minister,

They have not said by this petition that they are going to vote against the government on this scheme, but simply that the opposition in this House have been doing their duty in calling for delay in regard to the scheme until we had information which would enable us to judge in a reasonable way whether the scheme was for the benefit of the country or the reverse. This is what the language of the petition says: There are many reasons why the delay should be granted; there are many reasons why the project which has been put through the House and is now before the House should not come into force, should not be binding upon the country until more information can be obtained. What else can the ordinary voter do than petition the House in this way. Is it unreasonable that he should ask for delay? Would it not occur to any one in the habit of supporting the government that a great mistake was being made in pledging the assets of the country to an enormous extent when the people have no means of judging why it should be done because they have not sufficient information? Is it not reasonable that they should ask the government to pause, to look before they leap, to get information before they commit the country irrevocably to this scheme? But that does not seem to please the right hon. Prime Minister. That right hon. gentleman seems to think it is not right that anybody should have the assurance, should have the cheek, so to speak, to ask this government not to go so fast. And the right hon. gentleman seems to think that because the hon. member for Bellechasse believes he has discovered an irregularity in one or two petitions presented here, he has the right to stand up and insinuate, as I understood him to do, that all the rest of the petitions were tainted in the same way. I want to tell the right hon. Prime Minister that if he comes to the county of Lincoln and says the same thing to the Reform party there he will be repudiated more than by the Conservative party. It is the Reformers of Lincoln whom I have the honour to represent who are disappointed. The majority of Lincoln showed that they did not have faith in the present government in the election of 1900, because they came to the conclusion that it was necessary to change their allegiance and send a member to the opposition, though the county had been in the habit for some time of sending a supporter of the party of hon. gentlemen opposite. It is not only the Conservatives of the county of Lincoln who are petitioning in this matter, they are not disappointed, because they were not expecting much from this government; but it is the Reformers of the county of Lincoln who signed these petitions for whom I specially speak, and whom I represent as much as I do the Conservatives. Reformers though they be, they have a right to expect me to stand up here on their behalf and on behalf of the honour of the county of Lincoln, and to repudiate the aspersions which the Prime Minister has cast upon their honesty and their good faith.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister carried this a good deal further than the member for Bellechasse. The member for Bellechasse only attacks the genuineness of two isolated petitions, which he wants investigated, but the Premier assumed that all the other petitions are in the same category and are open to suspicion. Therefore I am bound to say that I am in favour of the amendment moved by my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Clarke), that if any of these petitions are to be investigated, if it is insinuated that all these petitions are more or less tainted, then I say that every petition and every name on those petitions should be proved to be absolutely genuine. Now the hon. member for South Brant (Mr. Heyd) seemed to think that the investigations of the committee should be restricted, because, as he chose to put it, it would involve a free ride of all those petitioners and their witnesses down to Ottawa. I do not think the hon. member for South Brant is justified in saying that. He has no right to suppose that the people of this country want free rides down to Ottawa. They are not so little occupied—in the rest of the country at all events, whether that may be so in the hon. gentleman's county or not—they are not so little occupied that they are anxious to take free rides down to Ottawa; perhaps they are not so anxious for these free rides as the hon. member and his constituents are. But I am speaking for the rest of the province that I know something about, and I think I am quite correct in saying that the ordinary electors of this country, those who exercise their right of petitioning this government, are justified in sending their petitions here without being accused of wanting a free ride down to Ottawa to back up their signatures. But whether they ride to Ottawa free or at the expense of the country, I venture to think that a great many of these petitioners from the county of Lincoln, notwithstanding the insinuation thrown out by the Premier, would be glad to come here at their own expense; and they will not only satisfy the Premier that their signatures are genuine, but they will tell him why they signed those petitions, and they will tell him why they think his government is making a mistake. I think the result will be that the Premier will regret that he ever threw out those insinuations. The people of the county of Lincoln who signed those petitions comprise a great many gentlemen who have heretofore voted for the Reform party. The gentlemen who signed those petitions ought to be allowed and must be allowed to come down here and say: We do not know what the member for Bellechasse meant, we do not know what the Prime Minister had in his mind, but all the same we desire to tell you that we did sign these petitions, and we are here to back up our signatures. Let me give this word of warning to the hon. member for Bellechasse, at which I hope he will not take offence: I think he had better be very careful how he goes on with this sort of thing unless he has better evidence in proof of his charges than he appears to be able to present. It is true he says that there has been a wrong done in regard to these two counties, but I warn him how he tries to prove fraud in respect of any other counties, particularly in the province of Ontario. The whole object seems to be to make it appear to the world that notwithstanding that these petitions have been sent in here against this railway project of the government, they are not to be considered as having the weight that ordinarily attaches to such petitions. Now there are thousands and thousands of names on those petitions, there are undoubtedly the names of the most prominent men in every county in the Dominion on these petitions against this railway project. The hon. member for Bellechasse might well consider the trend of the general consensus of opinion throughout the Dominion before he undertakes this investigation.

I do not know how long the member for Bellechasse wants this session to last, but I can assure him, and I can assure the Premier, that just so long as it is necessary in the interests of the country for members of the opposition to sit here and investigate public matters, whether in regard to this railway or in regard to the petitions against it, or in regard to any other public question, he will find us perfectly willing to sit upon the job as long as we find it necessary, just so long as we think it is in the interests of the people of Canada to do so to discover what is true and what is untrue, and to rectify any wrongs that we may discover to exist. The investigation that has been asked for will necessarily involve a great many days of the time of the committee, and probably a great many days of the time of this House. I dare say the investigation will extend into months, and it looks to me as if we were not going to get out of here until the new year, because we must investigate every one of these petitions, every one of these signatures, in order to disprove the charges the Prime Minister has made against the people of Canada. Now it is all very well for the member for Bellechasse to say that he only wants to investigate these two petitions. He speaks of the whole of them as being of doubtful genuineness, and the Premier says the same thing in effect, that probably all the petitions are tainted. Now the question before the country is this, whether the people have a right to petition this parliament without being accused of fraud, and without each one being called upon to send half a dozen witnesses down here to prove upon oath that his signature is genuine. If this government means that they want to stop the people from petitioning against any of its acts, that they want to prevent them from exercising their constitutional rights to petition parliament whenever they see fit, then we have indeed before us a question of great magnitude to decide. It ought to be sufficient for the Premier to know that every hon. gentleman who presented these petitions in this House attached his signature to them to vouch for their bona fides. For instance, my name is attached to a petition from the county of Lincoln, and that ought to be prima facie evidence for the Premier that the signatures on that petition are genuine. The people of Lincoln expect that it should be so. Now the Prime Minister seems to think that because the petitioners do not approve of his policy, and because he finds that two petitions from somewhere in the province of Quebec presented in good faith by the hon. member for Prince Edward county, contained a number of signatures in the same handwriting, that therefore not only these petitions are to be suspected, but all the others that have been presented.

You must also take it for granted that several gentlemen who have hitherto supported the so-called Reform government are now calling upon this government to pause, and not go on with this scheme until they have made the surveys and procured the information which they ought to have, before the country is prejudiced irrevocably by its commital to this great project. These gentlemen are in good faith petitioning the party in power that they supported until today, and they are told by the right hon. Prime Minister: You may have the right to vote for us to put us in power, or you may have the right to vote against us, or against our policy when we go to the country but we will not allow you the right of petitioning us and assisting the opposition in stopping the government from doing a great wrong by committing the country irrevocably to this scheme. The right hon. gentleman tells these gentlemen that he doubts very much the evidence of the genuineness of the signatures that are attached to these petitions. The people have to fight upon this question and I say right now that the investigation that is to be held must cover all the petitions that have come in and every signature must be inquired into. The honour of every man who carried these petitions through a riding and of every man whose signature appears upon the petitions is at stake, because either these signatures are genuine or the man who sent that petition to me and asked me to present it to the House has been committing a fraud. We cannot assume that any signature is a forgery. The onus of proof would be on the person making the charge. The presumption is in favour of the man who says that his signature is genuine. Nevertheless, the honour of the supposed signer of the petition is involved, the honour of the man who is supposed to have got his signature is involved, the honour of the man who sent the petition to me and asked me to present it to this House is involved and I say that these men must come down here, whether they have a free ride or not, as the hon. member for South Brant (Mr. Heyd) states, and say where these petitions came from. Therefore, I say the investigation must be as wide as that which has been suggested by my hon. friend from West Toronto, and it is the right hon. gentleman's fault if it does take time and involves expense.

I have just a word to say in regard to the hon. member for South Brant. He had the temerity to stand up and say that the idea of presenting these petitions was conceived in the darkness of night. I wondered when he said that if he thought that the project which the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) had condemned and which had caused him to leave the cabinet was conceived in day-light. Was there so much of the noon-day sun that the people of the country understood it? Was it not because there was no light upon the subject that these petitions were presented here? In spite of all that the opposition could do, representing the best interests of the people of Canada, to get information upon the subject that Bill was railroaded through this House as fast as they could put it through. Notwithstanding the fact that the opposition used every means in their power to get the information to try and find out what obligation this was going to impose upon the country, they were unsuccessful, while at every step the evidence seemed to preponderate against the wisdom of the scheme. In spite of all that, in spite of the fact that Cox could not wait, in spite of the fact that the government were apparently bound to put it through, what did the people of Canada do? In each county, wherever they could within the short time at their disposal they prepared and sent petitions down here saying that: If the government do not think the members of the opposition were right in what they said, we ourselves petition as ordinary voters and ask you to delay until you get more information. The hon. member for South Brant should have reflected as to where and how this scheme originated. He ought to have asked himself whether he and other hon. gentlemen behind him had as much light upon the subject as they desired when the scheme was first announced? Does he not know that several hon. gentlemen who voted for the government were at the beginning utterly opposed to it? Does he not know that lots of the supporters of the present government in the country were waiting anxiously to have placed before them the merits of this question and that they have not yet received the light upon the subject that they ought to have received? Does he not know that the men signing these petitions have declared that there is not the day-light upon the question that there ought to be before the country was involved in the enormous expenditure that this scheme will entail?

The hon. member for Cumberland (Mr. Logan) had a few words to say before one o'clock and he read a lecture to hon. members of the opposition as to what, from his standpoint, should be their duty in this House. He said that we on this side of the House, having no case, were abusing the members of the government. He said that having been disappointed in our last effort to impose our conclusions upon the government we were abusing the attorney representing the government on this question. I do not think that we have been abusing the members of the government in this matter, but, I think that the government have abused the people who have signed these petitions. I do not think they have been fairly treated in the measure which has been meted out to them in regard to these petitions. He says that this is the opposition's last resort. It may be the opposition's last resort at the present time but it is not the opposition's last resort because the opposition's last resort is the people's last resort. If the government have the courage to go before the country the hon. member for Cumberland will find that the opposition's last resort is to make the appeal that they shall make against the government, and he will find that the people's last resort will be the strongest condemnation of this project. The hon. member for Cumberland also said that the difference in the petitions which came from the east and from the west showed that there was something wrong about them. Does he not know that there were so many objections to this scheme that you could have fifteen or twenty petitions in opposition to it and if you were to put them down in ordinary sized print you would have a petition as long as from here down to Wellington street. Does the hon. gentleman suppose that three dozen petitions could in any ordinary sized print represent all the objections that there are to this scheme, and does it not strike him, that, when the people of the west enumerate certain objections to this scheme, although they are not the same as those which the people of the east have, nevertheless, they are good objections? Does it not also strike him that if there are so many different objections urged to this scheme by the people in the west and the people in the east there is an accumulation of evidence against it, and that there is an additional reason why the government should get more information instead of merely insulting the petitioners? I do not know that I shall trouble the House any longer with the matter. I have said as emphatically as I can, and I wish I had language in which to say it more emphatically, that I resent and I think the people of Lincoln will resent as an insult, the words used by the right hon. Prime Minister to the effect that these petitions are not bona fide and that therefore the government should not pay any attention to them. The people have the right to appreciate the efforts of the opposition if they think that those efforts are well directed. What makes the government angry is that they find that not the hidebound supporters of the government but the independent Reformers so to speak as well as the Conservatives are unanimously saying that the contentions of the members of the opposition are contentions which they strongly endorse, and that they find that their party are losing strength in the country and are going to get into trouble. A few of the most important objections against this policy are set forth in these petitions. The signatories, in pursuance of their inherent right as British subjects, have petitioned the House of Commons, and asked the government to pause before the country is irrevocably committed to this scheme. Speaking as the representative of the county of Lincoln, and speaking generally of the duty of a member of this House, I say that the government should have accepted these petitions in good faith, and should have considered them in the proper spirit. If this investigation is to be made by the Privileges and Elections Committee, it must be of the widest character, and notwithstanding that the member for Brant (Mr. Heyd) has accused us of wanting free rides for our constituents to Ottawa, I say, Sir, that the petitioners must be allowed to come before parliament and to give their evidence that they have presented these petitions in proper form.

Mr. TAYLOR. A little before three o'clock this afternoon the hon. member for Prince Edward (Mr. Alcorn) went to the record room, where the petitions are supposed to be kept, and asked for the two petitions to which the member for Bellechasse referred this morning. The clerk in charge stated they were not there, and he said that the member for Bellechasse had taken them away. I want to know from the Minister of Justice or the Prime Minister, if it is proper that petitions supposed to be in charge of an officer of this House, may be peddled all over the country and left lying around on desks, and names added to them, and then have them referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections ? These petitions are not now in the custody of the proper officers, and the members who presented them have no opportunity of seeing them. These petitions are supposed to be under lock and key, in the custody of the Clerk of this House, so that any member of this House may have access to them, but we now find that they are out of the possession of the Clerk, and presumed to be in the possession of the hon. member (Mr. Talbot) who made the charges.

Mr. GOURLEY. The officer who allowed these original petitions out of his custody should be immediately brought to the bar of the House and punished, and some proceedings should be taken against the member for Bellechasse (Mr. Talbot) for his conduct. These are original records of parliament, and any man who takes them from the custody of the proper officer infringes on the criminal law of the country. We should have the Clerk summoned before this House, and dismissed, and we should pass upon the conduct of the man who attempted to take them from the custody of the clerk. It is an outrage, that the records of parliament should be peddled about in that way.

Amendment (Mr. Clarke) agreed to, and main motion (Mr. Talbot), as amended, agreed to.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it not necessary that there should be an Order of the House, to send these petitions before the committee ?

Mr. SPEAKER. I think the motion provides for that. All documents of the House are always at the disposal of the members of committees, and of the members of the House also.

Mr. SPROULE. I am of the opinion that they should be referred to the committee by Order of the House.

Mr. SPEAKER. I think that is provided for in the motion.

PAYMENT OF EMPLOYEES ON RIDEAU CANAL.

Mr. TAYLOR. I had a letter this morning from a merchant, stating that the employees on the Rideau canal, in my county, have not yet received their pay for the month of August. What is the reason for this ?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. I should think we would have to inquire from the Auditor General, why a credit has not been issued.

Mr. TAYLOR. These employees are suffering great inconvenience ; they have exhausted their credit in the country stores, and the government should explain why they are not paid.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. I will draw the attention of the Minister of Railways and Canals to the matter, but I apprehend, it is because a letter of credit has not been issued.

Mr. TAYLOR. Now that the Minister of Finance has come into the House, I wish to ask the hon. gentleman why it is that the labourers on the Rideau canal in the north end of the constituency I represent, have not received their pay for August, nor any pay since then ? I have a letter from a merchant of the locality stating that their credit is about exhausted, and that some of the store-keepers will not supply them until their cheques come. Some of the men are really in need of money in order to get the necessaries of life.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. A good many persons in Canada have been obliged to wait for their money because the Auditor General declines to facilitate the usual method of payment.

THE KING VS. CARVER.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I have received a communication as to the commutation of sentence in the case of King vs. Carver. It would seem that the commutation of this sentence has provoked hostile criticism, and at the instance of my correspondent I would ask the Minister of Justice, if there is no objection, to lay upon the Table of the House the papers connected with this case. If there is any report of the judge, or any reasons assigned for commutation, or any petitions asking for commutation, it would be desirable, if there is to be a discussion, that these documents should be made public.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. A motion has been passed in the Senate asking for the production of these papers. I have hesitated up to the present to comply with that order, because it is contrary to the practice of this House. I have a memo. made by Sir John Thompson in which he refused to produce the papers in a capital case. I am, however, considering the matter with respect to this particular case, and I will let my hon. friend know in a day or two what the decision of the judge is.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Would the decision of Sir John Thompson cover all the documents in connection with such a case? It would not, I suppose, cover the Order in Council.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Perhaps not.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The Minister of Justice gave a memo. to the hon. member for Montmorency (Mr. Casgrain) in connection with this subject, but I confess that I did not read it very carefully. I suppose there would be no objection to producing the documents which are not covered by any precedent. I think there was the same opinion on the part of my hon. friend (Mr. Casgrain) and myself, that these precedents did not go as far as seems to be indicated in the memo. which my hon. friend the Minister of Justice was good enough to send to us.

ST. JAMES DIVISION, MONTREAL.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would like to ask the government whether any decision has been come to with regard to issuing the writ for St. James division, Montreal? The matter has been brought to the attention of the House on several occasions by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Rt. Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright). Will the hon. gentleman repeat the question when the Premier is here?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Very good. When is it likely that there will be an opportunity of renewing the question?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. The hon. gentleman may do it by consent at any time.

SUPPLY.

House again in Committee of Supply.

British Columbia—Columbia river above Golden—new hull for pile driver, &c., $4,500.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Why do you have the votes for dredging divided up in this way? This is not dredging?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the object of this pile driving?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The banks on these rivers have to be protected in many places, and we require the use of a pile driver.

Mr. SPROULE. It seems to me that it would be better if you kept the estimates for your dredges, scows, pile drivers, and all other plant separate from the estimates for the actual work done.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think there might be an improvement in the classification. I may say that in going over these matters I found the same difficulty the hon. leader of the opposition did, and I think it would be well to have a reclassification in our estimates in that direction. It would be more convenient for this House, and still more convenient for the department.

Columbia river above Golden—opening channel from river to site of proposed warehouse at Wilmer, $1,000.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What warehouse is this?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mining developments are going on there, and the products of the mines are shipped by boat. An application from Mr. Hammond, of Osler & Hammond, who is largely interested, represents that a large amount of money has been invested in mining industries there. Therefore, I feel that this expenditure is warranted in the public interest for the purpose of improving the navigation in this river.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that dredging?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This will be hand dredging.

Columbia river—improvements between Upper and Lower Arrow lakes, $12,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say that a small dredge has been built by the department and placed on this river, and this vote is for the maintenance of the dredge and its working expenses during the year.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the dredge doing ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is dredging the Columbia river. We do not require a separate item for dredging there. We own the dredge, and this is for its maintenance and operation.

Mr. SPROULE. Why do we vote $12,000 to maintain and operate a dredge in this place and $10,000 to maintain and operate a dredge somewhere else ? Would it not be better to have a general vote, out of which these dredges might be kept going, instead of having a separate vote for each place ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I agree that that would be better. In this particular case the dredge is built specially. It can get neither off nor on that river. $12,000 is the total cost of the work being done. But I agree with my hon. friend, and if I have anything more to do with preparing the estimates. they will be prepared in that way.

Columbia river between Arrow lakes—to pay balance due on dredge machinery, $4,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a dredge that was built by the department under contract. It will cost altogether $6,000 with the machinery.

Fraser river—improvements, $25,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is done under the supervision of Mr. Keefer, the engineer of the department in the province of British Columbia.

Mr. SPROULE. Where is this work done?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At Nicopin island. It consists of mattrassing and pile-driving for the protection of the banks of the river.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Do they use the government pile-driver ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, we own all the plant there. It is all done by day labour.

Hardy Bay—wharf (revote), $2,100.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete the payment for this wharf, which was let by contract.

Quatsino city—wharf, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a new vote. It is proposed to provide wharf accommodation for steamers and other vessels. This is a city in the north of Vancouver island, and it is a mining district.

Mr. SPROULE. How much is this work expected to cost when completed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total cost is estimated at $5,000. The work will be let by contract.

Williams Head quarantine station—extension of wharf at eastern end, &c., $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have a government wharf there, and this is for small extensions and improvements.

Mr. SPROULE. Will this complete the improvements ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is the intention.

Victoria Harbour—additional amount for dredging and removal of rocks, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have both government dredges at work in that harbour, and the work was carried out very successfully. We desire to complete it, and I am informed by the engineer that this $10,000 will complete it this season.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Is this for the inner or outer harbour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. For the inner harbour.

Public works—chargeable to income—Yukon Territory—Lewes and Yukon river improvements, $30,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote of $30,000 is proposed to apply as follows in connection with the Lewes and Yukon improvements, viz : (a) Maintaining the training piers, dams, &c., built at the head of Lake Laberge, the object of directing the whole discharge of Lewes river into one comparatively narrow channel on the south-east side of the river which can be used by steamboats of from four to five feet draught at the lowest stage of the water ; (b) Closing the gap of about 400 feet left in the centre of the brush and stone dam of which already 3,250 feet lineal have been built on the north-west side of the contracted artificial channel formed at the head of Lake Laberge. (c) Removing boulders from Thirty Mile river. (d) Completing some further blasting required on the rocky ledge which runs across the waterway at Five Finger rapids, in order to improve the navigable channel so as to permit of the easy and safe passage of steamboats of about four feet draught at the lowest stage of the water without having to use a cable. (e) Blasting some rock off dangerous points, &c., at the Rink rapids. (f) Improving the channel at Hellgate. (g) Increasing the depth of water over bars in the Yukon river below Selkirk and Ogilvie.

Mr. HACKETT. Have we a representative in this House from that section of the country ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, Mr. Chairman, we have.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Will this work be done by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is being carried out under the advice of the local council at Dawson city.

Mr. CLARKE. Municipal council or the government council ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The government council.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I regret that, because we have an experience of that body already, as I understand. It will be remembered Mr. Chairman, that it cost $50,000 merely to plug a hole in that country. If this money is to be expended by the same people as had control of that work, I do not think the method is a good one. It seems to me it would be better and more satisfactory if the matter were under the control of the department.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We found it would cost more to maintain a staff of engineers in that country such as would be necessary for these works than to carry out the works under the advice of the council. That council are coming in contact with the representatives and the shipping interest, and so have the best means of learning how the money can be most advantageously spent in the public interest in improving navigation. My hon. friend (Mr. Thomson, Grey) will admit that there are none who know more of the situation than the representatives of the shipping interest, and none who are more anxious that the work should be properly done. Since the present system was adopted, we find we get much greater value for the money expended than before. Of course, we have an engineer representing the department, who reports on these works.

Mr. SPROULE. I did not hear the whole of the minister's explanation, and may have misunderstood. Did he say that this money was spent by the transportation companies ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I said the money was expended under the advice of the Yukon council.

Mr. SPROULE. This is in addition to the amount placed at the disposal of the council itself ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, with this feature—that they make a report to us, and the accounts are sent here and we pay them.

Mr. SPROULE. Who initials the accounts ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The accountant of the Yukon.

Mr. SPROULE. In keeping the accounts, would this amount be included in the expenditure of the territory ?

Hon. Mr. SUTHERLAND.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is entirely under the charge of the Public Works Department here. The hon. gentleman will remember that I mentioned seven or eight points at which improvements were to be made, and I explained that the work could be done more efficiently and cheaply than by maintaining our own engineers in that country.

Mr. SPROULE. Can they carry out the work and charge what they like, or does the department's engineer there employ the men ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They make a report to the department and we scrutinize the accounts. But they employ the men to carry out the work.

Harbours and rivers generally, $3,500.

Mr. SPROULE. What is this for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the usual vote.

Mr. SPROULE. What can be done with this small item ? What kind of improvements can be carried on with this ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is for contingencies and different small accounts. It has been voted annually for a long time.

Mr. SPROULE. It always seemed to me that the voting of these small general amounts is absurd. We have accounts for each locality for dredging, and then a general account ; accounts for repairs to dredges, and a general account. And here we have another of these small items. I suppose this $35,000 applies to the whole Dominion, and can be used anywhere. But what can be done with an amount like this I cannot understand.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is because we take special votes for dredging here and there, instead of having one vote, which I think would be better, that a general item like this is needed. There are incidental expenses in connection with all the works—stationery and other contingencies—to be met out of this general item.

Mr. SPROULE. I could understand a vote of some size, but I cannot see what is the use of voting $3,500.

Mr. HACKETT. I desire to bring to the attention of the hon. minister the fact that in the year 1900 a public work was commenced in a place called Skinner's Pond, in West Prince, P.E.I.

Mr. CLARKE. Was it before or after the election ?

Mr. HACKETT. Immediately before the election. I would like to ask the minister if he intends to drop that work after having expended $2,000 on it, or does he intend to continue it ?

Mr. McCREARY. Will the hon. gentleman say where Skinner's Pond is?

Mr. HACKETT. It is just as good a name as Pile-o'-Bones creek, or any other. I would like to ask the minister if he intends to prosecute this work at Skinner's Pond, where $2,000 have already been expended.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no information with regard to this matter. I do not find anything in the estimates for any work there. What kind of work was commenced there, may I ask the hon. gentleman ?

Mr. HACKETT. The hon. gentleman ought to know, he has the facts before him. It was cutting a channel through the sandbar into the land near Skinner's Pond, in a region where there are many other points on the coast of Prince Edward Island. It was supposed to be a great advantage. Now the minister has the chief engineer at his elbow, who should be able to tell us what is going to be done now that the elections are coming on.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know that the chief engineer is intersted in elections. He tells me it was opening up a small channel, and was reported to give satisfaction.

Mr. CLARKE. Surely it is not the intention of the department, after commencing this work on the eve of the last election, to drop it immediately after the election. Is it the intention, now that another election is coming on, to go on and complete the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no knowledge whatever. The chief engineer says $2,000 was spent there.

Mr. HACKETT. Do I understand the minister to say that he will make further inquiries ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will be pleased to give instructions to have the local engineer make a report with regard to this work.

Mr. CLARKE. I think this item better stand until we get full information.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, let it stand.

Item allowed to stand.

Dredging—including salaries of engineers, superintendents and clerks. Dredging—Maritime provinces—additional amount required, $28,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is an additional amount required for carrying on dredging operations in the maritime provinces.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). In the moneys provided for public works in the maritime provinces, I notice that there are no items under the head of dredging alone, but they are all for the construction or repair of dredges. It seems strange that this item should be in the former class.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is a general statement as to how the money is to be used.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I think it would be better to place it under the head of rivers and harbours generally than to place it where money is required for building and repairing dredges. It is not a proper classification. Every other item is for the construction of dredges, here it is for dredging, a different matter altogether.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know that the department is responsible for this classification.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). The amount of money that is appropriated for improvements in the maritime provinces is so large that a portion of it had better be under some other head.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We send the items over to the department, and when they are printed we find them in this way. I imagine that is being done with the items of the other departments. There is no intention to cover up anything. That money cannot be used for any other purpose than dredging in the maritime provinces.

Mr. HACKETT. Could the minister tell me what dredging has been done in the province of Prince Edward Island in connection with this vote ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the hon. member will wait till that item comes up in the estimates, I will give him a list of what is being done there, or I will give him the information now.

Mr. HACKETT. What has been done at Cape Tormentine and Pointe du Chêne in regard to dredging ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No dredging has been done at Cape Tormentine this year. The dredging at Pointe du Chêne was completed early this season and the dredge left there some months ago.

Mr. HACKETT. At about what time ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Some time in July the work was completed.

Mr. HACKETT. Where was the work done at that particular place ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Along the base of the pier.

Mr. HACKETT. What depth of water is there now and what space has been dredged ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About seventeen feet at low water.

Mr. HACKETT. What space ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot remember the figures sufficiently well to give my hon. friend correct information, but I will be very glad to bring down a report showing the hon. gentleman just what space has been dredged.

New dredging plant, British Columbia, to replace snag boat 'Samson' and dredge 'Mud Lark,' $10,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Are these out of service or what has become of them ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the commencement of a somewhat important vote. The snag boat has become unfit for use, worn out and the 'Mud Lark' is in the same position. They have been doing some work but they have been reported as being unfit for work, and it is desirable that we should renew the plant. The new snag boat is estimated to cost $20,000 and the dredge to replace the 'Mud Lark' $30,000.

Mr. CLARKE. This is the first vote ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the first vote in an expenditure of some $50,000.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Will a contract be let by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Where is it proposed to build this new snag boat and dredge ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They are generally built on the coast. They have been built in the past by companies from Toronto or Montreal.

Mr. SPROULE. What about the 'Samson' and 'Mud Lark' ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They are generally disposed of by public advertisement.

New tug for dredge 'Manitoba,' $10,500.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). Is this for the province of Manitoba ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the total cost of the new tug required.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Where is it to be placed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. On Lake Manitoba. This is an entirely new tug, a strong one and more competent to do the work that is required of it.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). Was there a vote last year for the construction or purchase of a new dredge for that province ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the chief engineer informs me that there was a vote last year and that a dredge was purchased.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). There is no item for dredging at the mouth of Mossy river. I noticed that there was a vote last year. Has that work been finished ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I put the item in the main estimates.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). Has any work been done there yet ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). Is it going to be done this year ? There is a large sandbar which prevents boats coming in and going out at low water and this work is very necessary.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer informs me that it is difficult to get the dredge up. It was the intention to take it up during high water. It cannot be got up at all times. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will know that is the reason why the work was not carried out for which a sum was voted last year.

Hydraulic self-propelling dredge for maritime provinces, $40,000.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the name of this dredge ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has not been christened yet. This is a vote of $40,000 for the purpose of building a new self-propelling dredge for the maritime provinces.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the total cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think the hon. members of this committee will agree with me that we require some better plant for spending the money that we have voted. We have voted money for dredging at important points from year to year and no work has been done. We either should not vote the money or else we should have some good plant to carry out the work in a satisfactory manner. There are several important harbours in the maritime provinces where we have no plant to do the work. Some of the dredges that we have are small and could not do the work at these harbours. The intention is to build or purchase a new plant. The total cost will be about $120,000.

Mr. CLARKE. What will be the capacity of the dredge ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a suction dredge with a capacity of about 1,000 yards an hour.

Mr. SPROULE. Who is the builder and how is it to be built ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We will have to advertise for tenders. It will be built by contract.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I entirely agree with the government's policy in constructing these dredges. The only thing I regret is that there are not more public moneys appropriated for a similar purpose. I am satisfied that if the government owned more dredges and did the work themselves the work would be done for one-half what it costs now by letting it to outsiders who have dredges for this purpose. I am confident that it will meet with the approval of the country.

Mr. HACKETT. Might I ask the hon. minister where this new dredge will be constructed and what will be the total cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Specifications will be prepared in the department for the kind of dredge that we want and we will advertise for tenders.

New dredge for Prince Edward Island, $25,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The old dredge in Prince Edward Island is very unsatisfactory. The expectation is that we can have a dredge to do satisfactory work in Prince Edward Island at a total cost of $25,000.

Mr. HACKETT. It is quite impossible that you can get a dredge to do the work around Prince Edward Island for $25,000. The old dredge was taken over from the local government at confederation ; it is thirty years old, and it originally cost over $40,000. It is a small thing for the government of Canada to propose to replace her by a dredge that will only cost $25,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am informed by the engineer that you can build a better dredge now for $25,000 than you could for $40,000 when the old one was built. The engineer has some experience, and he knows that my instructions are to give the House full information so far as he can as to the cost of these things. I may say to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hackett) that the first cost of the old dredge was about $23,500.

Mr. HACKETT. She cost $40,000.

Mr. CLARKE. How will this work be done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Tenders will be advertised for.

Mr. CLARKE. May I ask the minister if any dredges are being built at Sorel ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am informed that they have more work on hand at Sorel than they can attend to.

Mr. CLARKE. What are they doing ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They are building two or three large dredges and scows, &c.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). I may say that $25,000 will build a splendid dredge, as good a dredge as we have on the upper lakes, and she is a very good one having a capacity of from 800 to 1,000 yards daily. In the main estimates, on page 55, there is a vote of $5,000 for harbours and rivers generally, and in the supplementaries there is a vote of $3,500 for the same purpose. That is additional to the amount in the main estimates ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). In the main estimates you have an item : 'New dredging plant, maritime provinces ; new hydraulic dredge, $200,000.'

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is a different kind of dredge altogether ; that is for the 'W. S. Fielding' that is being built at Sorel.

Mr. CLARKE. Is the material for these dredges obtained by public tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. So far as I know, yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Will this dredge be built in Prince Edward Island ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We will have to build her wherever the most satisfactory tender comes from. I dare say that the contract for the hull may be in Prince Edward Island, and the contract for the machinery might be separate, or the contractor for the hull might buy the machinery, according to specifications, from the different manufacturers.

Mr. BLAIN. How many dredges have you at the present time ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The deputy thinks we have 19.

Mr. BLAIN. How many under construction ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. One.

Mr. HACKETT. How long before this dredge for Prince Edward Island will be completed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We will advertise at once for tenders, and there is no reason why it should not be completed during the next season. There are urgent demands for dredging from different parts of the Dominion, and I believe that this dredging work is necessary for the improvement of our harbours and the development of the trade of the country. We wish to secure this plant at the earliest possible moment. We have made inquiries with regard to purchasing plant, but we have had no suitable offers, or I would be quite willing to accept them. We want a first-class, up-to-date plant that will give satisfaction. As soon as this vote is passed we will advertise for tenders for the Prince Edward Island dredge.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). When the minister says that he will advertise, he means in the public press of the country ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. KAULBACH. As there are so many dredges now under construction, I would ask the Minister of Public Works to make a red mark on the wall with respect to my appeal for dredging to be done in the county of Lunenburg.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say that the appeal of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Kaulbach) is one of the principal reasons which has convinced me as to the necessity of getting more dredging plant. We have no dredge at the present time that can satisfactorily do that work.

Mr. KAULBACH. I will look forward with a very great deal of expectation and hope that this appeal of mine, which I have made so frequently, will be acceded to at the earliest possible moment. I hope it will be the first appeal attended to.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would not like to make any rash promise that it will be the first, but I will see how the hon. gentleman (Mr. Kaulbach) behaves himself. However, seriously speaking, that is the intention, and this is one of the most important works that we want this new plant for.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). From the amount of money voted for dredging in the maritime provinces, I do not see why our hon. friend from Lunenburg (Mr. Kaulbach) should not have all the dredging he requires in his constituency. I find in the main estimates, at page 55, that $87,000 is voted for dredging in Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, and in these supplementary estimates $28,500 more is voted. These amounts far exceed the amounts voted for the upper provinces, so that I think the hon. member for Lunenburg should have the dredging he wants done in his constituency to his entire satisfaction.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If my hon. friend from North Grey (Mr. Thomson) looks more closely, he will find a special vote for dredging in the hon. gentleman's constituency; but, as I have explained, no matter how much money we vote, we have not any dredge to do the work.

Mr. KAULBACH. I may inform the hon. Minister of Public Works that I shall be satisfied with the dredge he has on hand at present until he can get a superior one, and then of course we shall expect to have the remainder of the work completed.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am perfectly willing to make a bargain with my hon. friend; but the chief engineer of the department and the hon. gentleman between them decided that the dredge could not do the work, and therefore if I sent it there, it would not be very satisfactory.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria).

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). The harbours in the constituency of Halifax have not been dredged for three or four years, and we have been waiting with a good deal of patience until a dredge could be procured. There are a number of harbours in that county which are suffering because the dredges are occupied elsewhere. But I would point out to the hon. minister that before any promise is made to the outlying counties of Nova Scotia, he should remember that the promise has been made for some time that the harbours of Halifax county would be attended to, and the people of that county would be unwilling to see any outlying counties take precedence. I would like to have this impressed on the hon. Minister of Public Works.

Mr. HACKETT. I approve entirely of what has been said by the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat; but I was surprised last evening to hear the hon. gentleman say that the fishermen of Nova Scotia lived on the outskirts of civilization, and I do not desire to allow that statement to pass without a word of protest. I would like to ask him now, if he thinks, in his cooler moments, that the fishermen of Nova Scotia live on the outskirts of civilization. I believe that the fishermen of Nova Scotia live in the very centre of civilization. That province is one of the first colonies of the empire. It was not only settled after the war of the revolution, but Champlain, Jacques Cartier, and all the other great explorers first discovered it on their way up the St. Lawrence. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman if he thinks now that the fishermen of Nova Scotia, after these hundreds of years, lived on the outskirts of civilization?

Mr. KAULBACH. I wish to emphasize the statement in regard to the fishermen which has just emanated from my hon. friend who has just taken his seat; because no better class can be found anywhere.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Is it a fact that the hon. junior member for Halifax (Mr. Roche) has made the statement here that the fishermen live on the outskirts of civilization? Is that true?

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). About as true as a great many of the statements made on the other side of the House—made out of whole cloth. I never stated any such thing. I may have stated that they lived on the extreme verge of the country, that is, nearest the ocean, but if anybody thinks the fisherman is a greenhorn or is outside the limits of civilization, he makes a great mistake. Mistakes of that kind will arise in Ontario; that is where half truths emanate from; but they do not emanate from the member for Halifax. I wish the hon. gentleman to understand that I am not in the habit of making rash statements of that kind. What I do say I am quite willing to stand by on every occasion. I never disparge any one, either friend or foe. I am not such an idiot as to do that.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Will my hon. friend tell us what he did say ?

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). It is in 'Hansard.'

Mr. HACKETT. I do not wish to make a statement which I can corroborate or support, and I have here the words of the hon. gentleman as he uttered them—that the fishermen of Nova Scotia——

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). What page ?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I must draw the attention of the hon. member to the fact that he cannot read from a former debate.

Mr. HACKETT. I am not reading. I am simply stating the words of the hon. gentleman as he uttered them, that the fishermen of Nova Scotia lived on the outskirts of civilization. I simply took down the words of the hon. gentleman as he uttered them, and I repudiate the statement.

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). Is the hon. gentleman quoting from 'Hansard.' If so, from what page ?

Mr. HACKETT. The hon. gentleman is very desirous of having pages, but, I am quoting his words exactly as he uttered them. Now, I resent that on the part of the fishermen of Nova Scotia.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). I rise to a point of order. The hon. member for West Prince (Mr. Hackett) has attributed certain observations to the hon. junior member for Halifax, who has denied having uttered them. I submit that in view of the fact that the hon. gentleman is not prepared to state the authority from which he quotes, he has to accept the denial of the hon. member for Halifax.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The rule is quite clear. When a certain statement is attributed to an hon. member, and when the hon. member says he did not make any such statement, then the whole thing has to cease. The statement of the hon. member who has been charged must be accepted in good faith.

Mr. THOMSON (Grey). Will you permit me, Mr. Chairman, to repel any such insinuation with regard to the fishermen of the province from which I come. They are not living on the outskirts of civilization, but they are well-to-do citizens, who earn more money than the average merchant or professional man or farmer, and they are as respectable a class of people as we have in Ontario. To say that these people live on the outskirts of civilization, or that they are not as competent to do business as the rest of our people, is something that I must repudiate.

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). If the hon. gentleman wishes to make remarks, he is at perfect liberty to do so ; he may put any interpretation he pleases upon his own remarks in regard to people in his own locality. There is no resemblance whatever between the fishermen in the hon. gentleman's constituency and the fishermen in my constituency.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I must draw the attention of the hon. member to the fact that this discussion is out of order.

New dredging plant, British Columbia—one tug, steel hull, and two hopper scows, $36,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Here is another illustration of what I spoke about. Just a little above, you have another item for dredging plant at British Columbia, $10,000. Why not put all the dredging plant in one item in each province, so that we may know how much is spent in each province.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I agree with the hon. gentleman and I am sorry these items are entered in this way. It is inconvenient for me, and I would prefer to have them altogether.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the estimated cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The tug will cost $20,000 and the two steel hopper scows $8,000 each.

Mr. SPROULE. Will they be built in British Columbia ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If there are any firms in British Columbia able to do this class of work and I understand there are—they will be given an opportunity to tender.

New dredging plant, Ontario and Quebec—additional amount, $78,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In the main estimates we asked for a vote of $75,000 for new dredging plant for Ontario and Quebec. That is the way moneys have been voted since confederation for this dredging plant. We purchased the 'International' plant, a large steam dredge and scows belonging to Mr. Connolly the contractor. This plant cost originally, $180,000. There was a dispute between the Connollys and the government when this plant was offered for sale, and I asked Mr. Stevens, one of the most competent men in the service at Halifax, to examine and report on the plant. On his report and that of Mr. Howden of the department, we concluded that it was a good purchase and that by purchasing it we would save two years, which it would take us to procure a plant at all equal to this in order to carry on the works for which money was voted. The whole purchase price was $123,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What was included in the purchase ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not the particulars, but speaking generally it includes a dredge, a good tug, four scows, all the duplicates, &c. I am satisfied that the department has now a first-class deep water dredging plant.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the capacity of the dredge ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About 6,000 yards per day. It was built at Kingston, Ontario, in 1894. It has a steel hull.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Where is this dredge to be used ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At all the deep water points in the province of Quebec, down in the St. Lawrence. This plant may be used in salt water and will dredge anywhere from fifteen to sixty feet.

Mr. SPROULE. Was this dredge purchased after examination and estimate as to value ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The first thing I did was to get Mr. Stevens of the Marine Department, who was reported to me as the most competent man in the Dominion to examine machinery of that kind, to examine it. Then we have the report of the officers of our own department, especially Mr. Howden, who has been in the service some twenty-five or thirty years in connection with this work, and who is said to be a man of very high character and a very efficient judge. From the reports of these men we decided to make the purchase.

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). Mr. Stevens, the government inspector of machinery in Nova Scotia, is one of the most competent men in Nova Scotia.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the minister bring down these reports ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, I will have them brought down and lay them on the Table.

Mr. SPROULE. Then, it is understood that we can discuss this item further.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Certainly.

Mr. BELL. May I ask to go back to the item for the hydraulic dredge in the maritime provinces ? I would like to know what is the character and capacity of that dredge ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The capacity will be about 1,000 yards per hour.

Mr. BELL. Will this $40,000 cover the cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, no. The chief engineer estimates the cost at $120,000.

Mr. BELL. Is anything included in that estimate besides the dredge proper ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. BELL. In what depth of water will this dredge be able to work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As deep as thirty or thirty-five feet.

Mr. BELL. In how shallow water can she work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. She is a suction dredge ; she will have a draught of about five feet, and can work in about eight feet of water.

Mr. BELL. If only $40,000 is voted and the total cost will be $120,000, I am afraid we can scarcely expect to see that dredge in operation next year. At what time is it expected to be available for use ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot say definitely. Of course, I could not procure the plans until I had the authority of parliament. I am making all the speed I can, and, so far as the department is concerned, there will be no delay that can possibly be avoided.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I suppose there is no intention of proceeding next year with making the channel by the Canadian route between Gananoque and Brockville. I understand the government made a complete survey of that channel. There is not so much dredging to be done.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not intend to proceed this season. I have not taken any special vote for the improvement of that channel.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I might suggest to the hon. Minister of Public Works that some time, when he is taking a trip up the river St. Lawrence, he might take a look at a rock or shoal in the narrows at Brockville. I brought the matter to the attention of the minister two or three years ago, and a buoy was placed there but the channel is very narrow, and buoying does not obviate the difficulty. It is merely a large rock, I should say, lying there in eight or nine feet of water, and I think it would not take very much money to clear that obstruction and make a first-class channel through the narrows. The American government have removed all obstructions on their side of the channel, so that, on the route between Cape Vincent and Ogdensburg, this is the only real obstruction that might cause accident. It is only three or four years since a large steamer with her consort struck this rock, and very great loss resulted. I mention the matter so that the minister might kindly look at it and see if it would not be possible to have this obstruction removed.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Some day, when the hon. gentleman (Mr. Reid, Grenville) has his yacht out, I shall be glad to accept his invitation and take this trip. But the survey has been made, and the engineer has the plans in the department, and an estimate is being made up which I shall be prepared to submit to my hon. friend.

Roads and bridges 'Hull slide' union bridges and roadway approaches—repairs, alerations and additions, &c., $6,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to replace sidewalks, roadway and approaches destroyed in the great Hull and Ottawa fire. The total cost of the work is estimated at $12,800.

Ottawa city—Dufferin and Sappers bridges over the Rideau canal—repairs, alterations and additions, $10,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought this work was finished.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to cover the cost of road, sidewalk and approaches, granolithic or asphalt, including, if necessary, iron girders. This work is being done on the recommendation of the officers of the department and will cost $15,600.

Mr. SPROULE. There was a considerable expenditure on these bridges, and I thought we were done with them for a considerable length of time; but the work is hardly finished before we commence again.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is exactly how the matter struck me, but I am informed that the work done was merely temporary work. But the work is to be done now in a first-class and permanent manner.

Mr. BIRKETT. When it is considered that nearly all the traffic between west and east in the city of Ottawa passes over these two bridges, it will be seen that the work is necessary. But I question if the minister can carry out the necessary repairs and improvements for this amount.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Is this an iron bridge?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Bryson bridge—reconstruction of piers and approaches, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is over the Ottawa river at Bryson.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this an interprovincial bridge?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, it is a wagon bridge across Calumet Island in the river. There are two bridges. I think, one from the Quebec side and one from the Ontario side.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Does the government build wagon bridges?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They must have built this one.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Then we are doing a work that belongs to the Quebec government. I think the minister had better look into this.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I know that the bridge is government property. Representations have been made to the department about it, and I inquired why the Dominion government had built the bridge. I have made arrangements with the county that they are to take possession of the bridge and relieve the Dominion of any further expense in regard to this matter, and this vote was given upon that condition. It is for renewing a bridge built there some years ago. The total cost of the bridge was $15,500. It is a steel bridge, but it was built on wooden piers that have become undermined.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I think that belongs to the province of Quebec; that island is entirely within that province.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that probably it is a provincial work, legally. But the government did some years ago build this bridge, and are responsible for it. We are to put it into good shape, and the county is to maintain it hereafter.

Mr. SPROULE. This other bridge at Ottawa, the union bridge, is that an interprovincial bridge?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not very well posted. It is government property and we get considerable revenue.

Mr. SPROULE. I am speaking of the interprovincial bridge between Quebec and Ontario at Hull. Has it any connection with what is called the slides that are in the city of Hull and belong to the province of Quebec?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No the slides are Dominion property. There are two bridges over the slides that are Dominion works, and we maintain them.

Moisie Post road—improvement of, $700.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to keep up a road in connection with our Dominion telegraph lines along the north shore of the St. Lawrence, for a distance of about 300 miles. There have been improvements made from time to time in order to carry on the telegraphic work, to remove obstructions in order to enable material to be carried across a rough country.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). It is the duty of the province to keep up that road. The government is not taking any grants to build a roadway along the Yukon telegraph line, and why do you build a road down there?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This line was built in 1886. It runs from the east shore of the Saguenay along the shore of the St. Lawrence river down to Belle Isle.

Mr. SPROULE. Then the item ought to be under the head of telegraph lines.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I agree with the hon. gentleman, so far as my judgment goes. It is ridiculous to say that this is for the Moisie road. It is a vote for the maintenance of telegraph lines. I beg to move that the words 'Moise post road' be struck out and that the words 'North Shore Telegraph Line' be inserted in lieu thereof.

Motion agreed to.

Edmonton bridge over the Saskatchewan river —renewal of flooring, $1,650.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Trains and teams have to cross over this bridge on the same level as it is both a railway and wagon bridge. It is not wide enough for the two, and I think that the traffic in the near future will require that an additional bridge shall be constructed or an enlargement of the present bridge at one side or the other for the use of teams shall be made. I took the liberty once before of pointing out to the hon. minister, that, wherever a railway bridge across a stream or river in the North-west Territories is constructed, beside or under the railway track there should be a wagon road. I am satisfied that it would be of incalculable benefit to settlers if that should be brought about. There should be a separate wagon road instead of having the wagon road and the railroad together.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The matter has been brought to the attention of the department and the engineer is looking into it.

To open a pack trail from Peace river to Pelly river $25,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At the request of the Department of the Interior it is proposed to open a pack trail 650 miles long from the Peace River landing to the head-waters of the Pelly river.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). There was a good deal of money expended and of course it had to be expended in haste at the time of the Yukon excitement in building the Athabaska trail to Peace River landing. They took that trail over the worst possible route that could have been selected for a trail. It is not necessary as a matter of fact to have a trail into that part of the country as yet, because the water-ways are available and one can get to Peace River landing much more readily by water than by land, but in case the trail is constructed it should be kept more to the west than when the old Athabasca trail was constructed. In building the trail through the Peace River valley by the route proposed, it will be found to be a very difficult one. You would find it as easy to follow the Liard river route rather than the route which has been outlined. I think you will find it necessary to construct the old Athabasca Landing trail to Peace River over again, as it has all grown up and is almost impassable.

Mr. SPROULE. Who is going to do this work and how is it going to be done?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The former work was done by the officers of the North-west Territories. I dare say that probably the best way this money can be expended is to expend it under the direction of the officers of the government of the North-west Territories.

Mr. SPROULE. Under the officers of the government of the North-west Territories?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The district is far away and inaccessible and these people are interested in getting value out of the money.

Mr. SPROULE. You mean the North-west council?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I may say in regard to the last trail constructed that the money was very well expended. A young officer named Chalmers, who was afterwards shot in South Africa, had charge of the work on the trail. He gave very careful supervision to the work and did it excellently.

Mr. SPROULE. I am not objecting at all to the way in which the work was done, and I am not saying that it was inefficiently done, but we have been voting a great many items for the North-west Territories, and I would like at some time during the passage of these estimates if the hon. minister could give us the various items together with the aggregate amount that we have voted for this purpose.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is practically a grant to the North-west Territories.

Mr. SPROULE. We have passed several items of this kind already. Then, there is another thing. Do these gentlemen in the North-west Territories receive pay for doing this work? They get their salaries as they are under contract to do police work. Do they get extra for this work?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, they receive no extra pay. The officers to whom I referred are the officers of the North-west council.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I think I may have misled my hon. friend (Mr. Sproule). This officer had been formerly in the police, but I do not think he was an officer of the police at the time he took charge of this work for the North-west council.

Mr. SPROULE. This will be done by the North-west Council?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a long way from Ottawa, and we have to consider the best way to get value for the money. The North-west Council are extremely interested to satisfy the people that they should get the most value for this money, and they will do the work and send vouchers, properly certified, here. They have men of special experience for this kind of work.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not object to that. I heard a rumour that Mr. Charleson was to go out there to do this work, and I do not think that the country requires a second experience in the near future of the manner in which he expends money. I assume that the North-west Council will make every dollar go as far as it can, but if it were to be spent by some commission sent out, including Mr. Charleson, I certainly would object to it.

Assistance towards extension of telephone line from Chatham to Tracadie, N.B., $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a grant we are giving to a private company to connect a line with the Lazaretto.

Mr. SPROULE. Do you get any return for this grant ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The deputy tells me that we have not made any contract, but I suppose there will be a condition as to certain government messages going free.

Mr. SPROULE. You ought to have that understood beforehand. If the money is voted, the company is likely to try and get out of any bargain of that kind.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I agree with my hon. friend, but this is a small matter, and I think we may leave it with the deputy minister to arrange proper terms.

Telegraphic connection between Deer Island and Eastport, Me., $3,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is an extension of our own line for 10 miles.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Doees it cost $350 a mile ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are two miles of cable which will cost $1,200, and the cost of the land line is $110 a mile.

Anticosti Island—renewal of line wire between Fox Bay and Bescie river, $7,360.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for a renewal of 60 miles of our present line.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What stations have the government on Anticosti ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are seven stations.

To pay for Marconi wireless telegraph apparatus at Chateau Bay and Belle Isle, $4,100.

Mr. SPROULE. What success has attended this Marconi system ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The report of the officer in charge is that since July this station has been working very satisfactorily. This line extends for 22 miles.

Mr. SPROULE. Have we not a station for ocean telegraphic purposes ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This station is not used for communicating with ships as yet, but it can be so used.

Mr. SPROULE. We voted $80,000 last year for the Marconi system.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was for erecting a station at Glace Bay.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes ; and we see it announced in the press, from time to time, that the system has been a success and so on. Can the minister give us any information about that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The arrangements in that regard have been carried out by the Department of Finance, and my hon. friend will be able to get the information when the Minister of Finance comes into the Chamber.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Could not this station be made to work for outgoing or incoming vessels ? If we had had a station there somewhat similar to what they have in New York, it might possibly have prevented some of the accidents which have happened, and perhaps some of the large steamers now going to Montreal which have not the system on board would adopt it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have an expert in the department who is at the head of the telegraphic business, and I will endeavour to obtain any information which he may have on this subject.

Telegraph line—Murray Bay to St. Catherines Bay, second wire, $1,640.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for a second wire on our own line between these two points.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the distance between these points ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Forty-one miles.

Mr. HACKETT. Might I ask what the hon. gentleman is doing to establish a telegraphic service between Prince Edward Island and the mainland ? It is a matter that has been brought up frequently, and the minister said he would consider it ; and I trust that he will see his way clear to place an amount in the estimates to wipe away what is called a monopoly down there.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend knows that some arrangement was made with the company which has the telegraphic system between the island and the mainland, and the Dominion granted it a subsidy. Legal questions have arisen, however, and if the hon. gentleman would take my advice, he would ask us to cancel the subsidy until the company afforded a satisfactory service. With the improvements in wireless telegraphy, we may be able to establish a couple of Marconi stations on the island, and in that way do away with this monopoly.

Mr. CLARKE. Does the government control the rates ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I think the arrangement was made between the Island government and the company previous to confederation.

Mr. HACKETT. That is correct. I insist on having some answer from the government in this regard. Some years ago we were told by Sir Louis H. Davies, who was then a member of the government, that there was no monopoly, and since then nothing has been done. The people of Prince Edward Island are insisting on this accommodation every year, and I, as one of their representatives, stand here again to insist on having justice done to the island. We find in these estimates a vote of $3,500 for telegraphic communication between Deer island and Eastport, Maine, while nothing has been done for the people of Prince Edward Island. I would ask the minister seriously to consider the conditions that now exist, and to do something in the near future to relieve the people of that province from the incubus of this monopoly, which has weighed so heavily upon them for the last fifty years.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not going to express any opinion; but I shall be pleased to do anything I can to help my hon. friend. If the people of the island would take my advice, I think they would get better arrangements with the company. If not, I suppose parliament would have power to bring in legislation to remove the monopoly.

Mr. CLARKE. There is a great opportunity now, to meet the wishes of the hon. gentleman and the people of the island. We have just passed a grant to aid a press cable service, and I understood, when that matter was discussed, that the Minister of Finance promised to see that the papers on the island should have the benefit of the service as well as the papers on the mainland.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no doubt that there will be a discussion on this matter when the question of the cable service comes up.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Can the minister give any idea of what revenue he expects from these lines ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know that I can ; but the revenue is very small.

Hon. Mr. SUTHERLAND.

Mr. REID (Grenville). It is not equal to the amount spent annually in keeping them in repair ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, nothing like it ; but a large number of people are benefited by it.

Mr. REID (Grenville). About $40,000 is spent annually in keeping these lines in repair, and there appears to be less than $20,000 per annum of revenue ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Having made a little inquiry the other day, I am pleased to be able to tell my hon. friend that I find that our revenue in the North-west from these lines more than doubled last year ; so that in course of time it may be that with the development of the country, we shall obtain a revenue that will pay for the service.

Mr. HACKETT. Is the hon. Minister of Justice in his seat ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. HACKETT. I would like to have his opinion, and have it made public, whether the Anglo-American Company have a right to monopolize the telegraphic system between Prince Edward Island and the mainland ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There will be a vote on which this matter will come up for discussion, when the Minister of Justice will be present, and when he will be able to give my hon. friend more information than I can.

Mr. CLARKE. Would it cost much to establish some stations under the Marconi system on the island, to compete with this monopoly which my hon. friend speaks of ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think the wireless telegraphic system at the present time is somewhat expensive; but the result might be good in the end.

Mr. HACKETT. The great difficulty is that the government tell us from time to time that they are going to do better next time. If they cannot break up this monopoly, I would ask them to institute the Marconi system.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Would the governmen have any objection to placing a telephone service between Prince Edward Island and the mainland ? If this monopoly cannot be interfered with by the government, perhaps the hon. member would approve of a telephone service.

Mr. HACKETT. I would be only too pleased to vote for any competition, whether by telephone or by the Marconi system or by any other method, which would relieve our people from this monopoly. We are a small population, about 20,000 people, but we are up to date.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). You are not on the confines of civilization.

Mr. HACKETT. No, we are right in the centre of civilization, and I would ask the government to insist on a telegraph service being given us which would satisfy the people and do away with the necessity of our complaining every year to parliament. There is not an hon. gentleman in any of the other provinces who does not desire to see justice done to this small sister province, and I am certain that I will have the support of hon. gentlemen from the other provinces in insisting on proper telegraphic communication being afforded us.

Mr. SPROULE. It would seem a desirable place for testing the Marconi system. That system is being worked to the Magdalen islands, some twenty-three or twenty-five miles distance, and surely it could be worked easily to Prince Edward Island. It is not a very costly system to install and this will be a splendid place to try it.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I am very much surprised that hon. members from Prince Edward Island sitting opposite have not raised their voice in favour of the island.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That matter is not before the House at present. If the hon. gentleman had been in parliament as long as I have, he would have heard this question discussed over and over again by hon. members on both sides. It is a legal question to a very great extent. The hon. member for Grey (Mr. Thomson) made a very pertinent question with regard to the Marconi system, but to discuss the contract and the subsidy is now out of order.

Mr. REID (Grenville). But I am talking of a telephone service.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A discussion on the telegraphic system of the island is out of order.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I am appealing on behalf of the island to have a telephone system installed between it and the mainland.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS Will the hon. gentleman tell me whether or not under the contract between the island and this company, this government could install a telephone service between the island and the mainland ?

Mr. REID (Grenville). I say it can. At the time of confederation a telephone system was not thought of. If the hon. minister would bring in a vote to install a telephone system between the island and the mainland, I am satisfied that even hon. members in the opposition would support it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS All the lawyers put a different construction on the contract.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). I would recommend the government to lay a cable across.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. We are not discussing a contract between a certain company and Prince Edward Island or the advisability of establishing any line between the mainland and Prince Edward Island. I would ask the committee to come back to the point.

Mr. LANCASTER. Are not the committee in order in discussing this item and comparing the telegraphic facilities on the island with those in other parts of the country ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Supposing that could be brought under discussion, it would be far better to bring it up when the proper estimates are under consideration, and we have the proper officials here.

Mr. HACKETT. I desire to insist on the rights of Prince Edward Island.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Any discussion with regard to the facilities which Prince Edward Island has now for telegraphic service is entirely out of order. This question will come up under the heading of the Finance Department and it will then be in order to discuss it.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

PRIVATE BILL.

CONSIDERED IN COMMITTEE—THIRD READING.

Bill (No. 264) respecting the Ottawa Valley Railway Company.—Mr. Ethier.

SUPPLY.

House again in Committee of Supply.

Mr. HACKETT. May I ask the necessity for this second wire from Murray Bay to St. Catherine's Bay ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In 1902 the Great North-western Telegraph Company laid a special wire from Quebec to Murray Bay to afford better connection with the North Shore Line. The second wire of the government is provided with the same idea, and so supply local offices. Generally, I may say, it is to improve the telegraph communication between these two points.

Telegraph lines—Quebec—Island of Orleans, land line, extension to Ste. Famille, $1,150.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is an extension of seven miles, and the vote is estimated to cover the cost.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Has any explanation been given on any previous item as to the working of the Marconi Telegraph System ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, there was considerable discussion on that point. I suggested that the general discussion on the Marconi System would be more in order when the estimates of my hon. friend the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) are under consideration, and as he is more familiar with the matter, all communications with respect to it having taken place under his department.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). As I pointed out last session, there is this observation to make, that if the system is capable of being worked at all it should be capable of being utilized for certain short distances around our own coasts. As we have granted some assistance, it seems to me the government should be in a position to give some definite information as to the prospects of making it successful along our own coast.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend was not present when we had a discussion on this item. I read a paragraph from the report of the engineer a short time ago showing that the line from the coast to Ste. Famille had been working very satisfactorily. That is about all the information I could give.

Land line—Ste. Anne du Saguenay, to Descente des Femmes, $1,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This line is 22 miles long. The total cost will be $2,640.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Are these lines solely for the purpose of the government, or are they open for use by private individuals ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They are used as a regular public line. The revenue in this district is about 50 per cent of the cost. That district is settling up very well in some parts, and the settlers require more means of communication.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the principle adopted by the government in the construction of these lines ? Do they construct them only in cases where the government require the service, or do they construct them in cases where the public may be served as well as the government ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There have been some cases which covered both principles. I imagine some of these extensions have been made where the government had no particular use for them, and they were made chiefly for the public.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That means that we have in some portions of the country a government system of telegraphs, not more for the requirements of the government than for the people at large. Is the hon. gentleman in a position to say how many miles of telegraph lines of that kind we have ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think we have 5,720 miles under government control.

Mr. HACKETT. Before recess we were discussing the telegraph line connecting Prince Edward Island with the rest of the Dominion of Canada, and I asked the Minister of Justice if he would give his opinion regarding an alleged monopoly in connection with that telegraph line.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. A gentleman interested in the telegraph company recently prepared a statement which was submitted to the Prime Minister and by him forwarded to the Department of Justice, in which I understand they claim that they have got some monopoly or some privileges which are being interfered with by legislation passed during the present session of parliament. I have not had an opportunity of looking into the memorial, and do not intend to until after the session. But so far as this parliament is concerned, we have hitherto proceeded on the assumption that there is no monopoly.

Telegraph line on north shore of St. Lawrence—land line from Bersimis to Godbout, $12,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to make provision for substituting an all-land line, about 80 miles in length, for the present cable connection between these two points. The cable seems to be always out of order and is very unsatisfactory.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Would the hon. gentleman explain the necessity for this work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The cable has been down about seventeen or eighteen years and is completely used up, and is now useless.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Bersimis and Godbout are two important stations on the north shore of the St. Lawrence below Tadousac. There are on that coast several indentations and deep bays. Instead of building the line originally around these bays, they extended it across through the water, laying cables for the purpose. I understand that these cables have been very much interfered with by ice in spring and by the tempests, and the proposal now is to lay a land line in substitution for these cables around the bays rather than across them.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Have the cables ceased to be operated ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I think they are spasmodically worked, but they are used very little. This is the line which connects Belle Isle with Quebec, and it is the line upon which the shipping of the St. Lawrence depends to communicate with Quebec.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). They have what my hon. friend from Colchester (Mr. Gourley) calls lucid intervals ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Lucid intervals.

Chicoutimi—St. Charles telegraph line, branch from Ste. Anne to Lac Clair, $1,800.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is proposed to construct a branch line fifteen miles in length from Ste. Anne to Lac Clair, at a cost of $1,800.

Mr. HACKETT. Before we conclude with this vote of $40,000 for Dominion telegraph lines, I would like to ask what is being done to relieve the people of Prince Edward Island from the telegraph monopoly under which they suffer ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As my hon. friend, who is an old parliamentarian, and a resident of Prince Edward Island, knows this matter has been under discussion for many years. It was brought to my attention this session, and I have taken it up in earnest. As the hon. Minister of Justice has just stated to the committee, legal questions have been raised, and they have been referred to the Justice Department for their opinion. The company have made a statement of their claims to the Department of Justice, and we will have their advice in regard to the matter. We are proceeding upon the assumption that there is no monopoly. I think my hon. friend (Mr. Hackett) will see that the discussion might more properly take place when the item for the subsidy is under consideration. It will be more proper and the information would be far more satisfactory, as I am not prepared at the present time, not having any item in reference to Prince Edward Island before me, to give the information that I would like to give to the hon. gentleman and to the committee. If my hon. friend would be kind enough to bring this question up when the question of the subsidy is under discussion, I am sure that he will find that the government will be ready to discuss it and to give him all the information.

Mr. HACKETT. That is quite correct, but I consider the remarks made by the hon. Minister of Justice as being very unsatisfactory in regard to Prince Edward Island. I would like to ask him as the legal adviser of the Crown if he thinks Prince Edward Island is subject to this monopoly ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. This is a question that arose previous to confederation, and results from legislation that was enacted at that time. I understand that parliament has in recent years proceeded on the assumption that there is no monopoly, and as a result of legislation that was introduced this session, the company have thought it proper to make certain representations to the government which representations amount to the statement that they enjoy a monopoly under the legislation that they have. These statements have been referred to the Department of Justice, but I only received the memorandum from the company yesterday. My hon. friend will see that to give a matter of that importance the attention which it requires so as to enable me to give an opinion to the House that would be of any value would take much more time than it is possible at the present stage of the session for me to give to it. I have no desire whatever to make light of the pretensions of Prince Edward Island. If there is a monopoly it seems to me that it would be proper for the government to interfere and to endeavour in some way to get rid of it, but the hon. gentleman cannot expect me to make a statement as to the legal position of the case or as to the policy of the government without that knowledge which would enable me to make a statement that would be of any value.

Mr. HACKETT. I am very thankful for this explanation of the hon. Minister of Justice. I know that he is sincere and honest, and I trust that when he looks at the papers which he says only came into his hands yesterday, that he will give the benefit of any doubt that may arise to the province of Prince Edward Island.

Petite Rivière—St. Agnes telegraph line, $2,500.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a vote of $2,500 to provide, according to an estimate submitted by the general superintendent of government telegraph lines, for the construction of two lines of telegraph in Charlevoix county, so as to connect St. Agnes, St. Urbain and Petite Rivière.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Are these new lines or are they in substitution for lines already existing ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These are new lines, but extensions of the present lines.

Mr. MORIN. Does the hon. Minister of Public Works know where Petite Rivière is ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. St. Urbain is about midway between Baie St. Paul and St. Agnes. Petite Rivière St. Francois is some distance west of Baie St. Paul.

Telephone line to Edmonton Indian agency, $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to connect Edmonton with the Indian agency, 14 miles distant.

Mr. CLARKE. Where is the agency ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is 14 miles from Edmonton.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the name of the place ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is the Indian reserve at which Mr. Gibbons is the Indian agent.

Telegraph line between Edmonton and Athabasca landing, $15,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to make provision in accordance with the estimate of the superintendent general of government telegraph lines for the Edmonton-Athabasca line, the distance between the two places being estimated at 100 miles. The total cost of the work for 100 miles is estimated at $150 a mile, making $15,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Are the mounted police at Athabasca Landing ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The mounted police are exercising authority at Athabasca with a number of isolated detachments, and they can only communicate with Edmonton by using the road. The line is principally for the mounted police, but, of course, my hon. friend knows that the country is settling up. There is no railway communication and there is a very considerable number of settlers going in. This has been urged very earnestly by the local authorities at Edmonton, and also by the mounted police. It will be constructed by tender and contract.

Mr. BROCK. What leads the minister to decide as to the necessity for such a work as this ? It looks to me that $15,000 is a small sum with which to build 100 miles of telegraph line in such a country. Has the minister the report of an expert ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My experience is that the superintendent there is a very competent and energetic officer, and this vote is based on his estimate. It is on his report that I ask for the sum, and I have no reason to believe from my past experience of him, and his general ability, but that this will complete the work.

Loop line from a point on the main line near Victoria Alta, to connect with Andrews, $600.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for the construction of four and a half miles of line, the residents agreeing to supply the poles. There is quite a settlement there.

Mr. BROCK. That costs more than $100 a mile.

Extension of telegraph line from Wood Mountain Post to Willow Bunch, $7,600.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for thirty-eight miles of land line. There is some difference in the cost in different localities, but that depends on the distance that they have to haul the supplies. This estimate would make it $200 a mile. I may say that our representative from the west was here a short time ago, and on looking into the matter I found that the receipts have increased fifty per cent last year, so that if they continue at that ratio of increase, the receipts would soon be equal to the expenditure and maintenance.

Mr. BLAIN. What rates are charged ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The rates average from twenty-five cents for ten words to forty-eight cents, according to the distance. They are not unreasonable rates at all.

Mr. TAYLOR. Are Mr. Charleson and Mr. Rochester up there superintending the construction of telegraph lines ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They are not. They have not been in this part of the country at all. This work is done under the supervision of the department, and the officer in charge is Mr. McDonald. Mr. Rochester is still in the Yukon, and is in Vancouver at the present time, and Mr. Charleson has just returned to Ottawa.

Mr. BROCK. The cost of one of these lines is $100 a mile; of the other $150 a mile, and of this last one $200 a mile.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In one case the poles are being supplied by the settlers.

Mr. BROCK. That is where the cost is $150 a mile, and it makes the discrepancy all the greater.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I should point out that one of these is a loop line, a double line. The very fact that the officer in charge does vary his estimate according to the locality, shows that he knows what he is doing. It will be easily understood that where you have to cart poles a distance of a couple hundred miles, it might easily double the cost.

Mr. BROCK. Is this work let by contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is let by contract as a rule.

Mr. BROCK. Have you any means of checking whether or not you are charged too much ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh yes; there are men accustomed to do that sort of work and I think we get a very low price. My difficulty is that the contractors are complaining that they have lost money in some cases. On the short lines, where the settlers find the poles, our own men string the wires.

Mr. MONK. Was the Canadian Pacific Railway Company asked for an offer to extend this line from their own line at Moosejaw ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In these sparsely settled districts on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, and up in the west, we cannot get the companies to extend their lines. Where settlement is coming in a telegraph line is found to be a great convenience, as the settlers are a long way from the railway and other conveniences.

Mr. MONK. There is no doubt that telegraphic communication should be established, but I question whether the receipts are sufficient to indemnify the government for the expenditure. If the receipts are as considerable as my hon. friend says, it is probable that the Canadian Pacific Railway Telegraph Company would have been prepared to undertake to build this line without any expenditure whatever to the country. My hon. friend is aware that the telegraph line to the Yukon cost us a considerable sum. Indeed, there were rival companies competing for the privilege of building that line, and offering the most favourable conditions to the government, including the control of rates and free transmission to the government itself. Under these circumstances, it was a very questionable step.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend will see that this is not analogous to that. My hon. friend is perfectly right in saying that it would pay the company to extend a line here, but they will not do so. As I said before, owing to the increase of settlement in the country, the time appears to be arriving when the expenses will commence to be met by receipts.

Kamloops—Nicola telephone line, re-setting of poles and general repairs, $1,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is called for by the general superintendent of telegraphs to provide for the resetting of poles and general repairs on this line, which is sixty-seven miles long.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is Mr. Charleson superintending this line ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, he has just returned to Ottawa from the Yukon.

Mr. TAYLOR. He is still in the employ of the government ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Vancouver Island—Salt Spring Island telephone line—extension, $900.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is to provide for estimates submitted by the general superintendent of telegraph lines to construct this line eight miles further on Salt Spring Island. He reports that if the line is extended as proposed, it will be so much utilized as to prove self-sustaining.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I would like to know from the hon. minister if there is any idea on the government side of the House that the Anglo-American Telegraph Company hold a monopoly of the telegraphic communication between Prince Edward Island and the mainland ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend the Minister of Justice has stated that the government assume that the company have no monopoly, and have been acting accordingly during the present session of parliament, that the company have filed a statement with the government claiming under the contract that they have a monopoly, and that the matter is now under the consideration of the Department of Justice.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Does the government propose to take any action to redress the grievances of the people of Prince Edward Island to which we have been calling attention several times during this session, and for years past ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I made a statement in reference to this matter a few minutes ago, and perhaps it would be as well for my hon. friend to bring it up again in a day or two, when there will be an opportunity ; and in the interval I will look into the papers as far as possible, and if I can make a statement of any value to the House, I shall be glad to do so. I have not yet been able to look into the papers.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I might refer the hon. Minister of Justice to a speech delivered by the Hon. Senator Ferguson in the Senate a few days ago, in which he reviewed the situation from the beginning.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I would draw the attention of the hon. member to the fact that the discussion on this question is quite irrelevant to this item. He cannot go into a discussion of the monopoly in Prince Edward Island under an item in reference to Vancouver Island.

Mr. LEFURGEY. I understood that we could discuss any system of government telegraphs under the question of government telegraphs, which is now before the House. I do not wish to go into a lengthy discussion of this Prince Edward Island telegraphic communication, as the Minister of Justice says he will look into the matter, and we shall have an opportunity to discuss it later on. But I wish to refer to the fact that Senator Ferguson took this matter up in the Senate a few days ago and dealt with it from the beginning, throwing a good deal of light on the contract and on the decision given in regard to the monopoly, on an appeal from a Bill which was passed in this House regulating marine telegraphs in 1874, when the English authorities discountenanced any idea of a monopoly between the island and the mainland. If the Minister of Justice will bring the matter up at a later date during this session, and will let us know what the intention of the government is in regard to it, we will let it drop for the present.

Arbitrations and awards, including payments authorized, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to enable the department to pay the expenses of investigations and necessary arbitrations in connection with claims. We find that we can often settle these claims by having some of our own officials or outside experts to arbitrate between the parties, and in that way save a great deal of money.

Mr. LANCASTER. What is the reason of this reference to the Civil Service Act ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Some of the officials of the government might be more competent to undertake this work than outsiders, and out of this money we will pay their expenses when they are sent away from headquarters.

Mr. LANCASTER. Extra pay besides their salaries ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Hardly extra pay. If these disputes can be settled by our own officials it will be very much cheaper to use them than to engage outsiders.

Mr. BLAIN. Are there any cases pending at the present time ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry to say there are some claims. These are often small matters, but they give a good deal of trouble. There are continually disputes between the architect, the engineers in charge and the contractors. I am sure that by having an item like this, we shall save a good deal to the country.

Mr. WILSON. Does this cover the commissions to investigate ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A small commission will be paid out of this.

Mr. LANCASTER. What is the nature of the dispute ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Questions of constructions of contracts and specifications. My hon. friend will know from experience that difficulties are continually arising, and it saves a great deal of trouble and expense to have these matters amicably settled.

Mr. MONK. If this is not to be a gratuity to the civil service but merely to cover expenses, when they are employed on investigations, why do you insert the words 'notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act.'

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Very often the disputes are left to the decision of a man of experience in another department, and a small allowance would not be out of the way for the trouble and expense.

Mr. MONK. Will this amount of $5,000 be paid to nobody else but civil servants ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Occasionally we may go outside the service. The contractor might think that a government employee was biassed, but we find it less expensive to employ a civil servant, when the contractor will consent.

Mr. MONK. For my part, although this is a vague vote, I would not object to having it employed in remunerating the civil service if necessary.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have the same vote every year in the Railway Department, and we find that it has worked to advantage.

Chief engineer's office—salaries of engineers, draughtsmen, and clerks, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $14,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is an additional amount required for 1903-4. The reason the words 'notwithstanding anything to the contrary of the Civil Service Act' are inserted is because a great many of these civil servants are technical officers and do not come under the Civil Service Act.

Mr. COCHRANE. If they do not, why insert these words ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Because under the Civil Service Act we could not pay over $400 a year, and these technical officers have salaries averaging from $1,000 to $3,000 a year. Even the chief engineer of the department comes under this vote.

Mr. COCHRANE. I thought the hon. minister informed the committee that these were officers who did not come under the Civil Service Act.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They do come under the Act unless the vote is taken with this provision. The Auditor General would not pay them unless they had the vote taken in this way. The chief engineer could not draw his salary otherwise.

Surveys of headwaters of the Ottawa river and tributaries with a view of devising a scheme for the regulation of the water levels of the upper reaches of these streams so as to afford increased facilities for navigation purposes, the descent of timber, &c., $20,000.

Mr. CLARKE. On whose recommendation is this expenditure being made ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A large deputation of the parties interested waited upon the Premier and the government some time ago and made representations with regard to this matter. In this connection I may say that the Dominion received very considerable revenue which would be increased if the works would be carried out as urged by this deputation. A survey was promised with the view of devising the scheme for the regulation of the water level on the upper reaches of the stream.

Mr. MONK. What is the estimated cost of the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is estimated by the chief engineer of the department that this is the lowest amount for which the work can be done. It is a very important question, and the information to be gained is such information as the public should have.

Mr. CLARKE. What is it estimated that the total cost will be ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is estimated that the cost will be covered by this vote.

Mr. HACKETT. Is this the first appropriation of this kind ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. So far as my information goes, this is the first appropriation for this purpose.

Mr. HACKETT. What is the need for it?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The country receives a very considerable revenue from these water-ways, and representations have been made to the government by the parties interested that very great improvements should be made. Qualified engineers will be sent out to see whether or not this is a practical proposition.

Mr. CLARKE. What counties is this in ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Principally, I think, in Wright, Pontiac and Renfrew.

Mr. MONK. It seems to me I heard that at the time the representatives of the lumbermen waited on the government they submitted a scheme which would render surveys unnecessary and merely call for the execution of certain works.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief engineer informs me that they did not submit any detailed scheme. In a general way they pointed out the advantages to be derived if a scheme could be devised to carry out the idea they proposed. The chief engineer reported to me that it was necessary to make the surveys, and this estimate is to defray the cost.

Mr. HACKETT. This seems a very large amount. Can the work not be done for less ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a good deal of territory to go over, and much time will be spent by a considerable staff of engineers. The chief engineer informs me that it will require at least four parties to do the work in one season, so my hon. friend (Mr. Hackett) will see that this is not a large estimate. I have no personal knowledge of the matter, but this is done on the recommendations of the officials of the department.

Mr. CLARKE. When did the deputations wait on the government ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The last deputation was on the 30th of May.

Mr. CLANCY. Has the hon. minister any estimate of the probable cost of the undertaking contemplated ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. The object of the survey is to obtain the levels, because it would be a great mistake to go into any of these works until we have a fair knowledge whether it is practically as represented, and what advantage we shall derive, and what the cost is likely to be.

Mr. BLAIN. Will these surveys be conducted by officers of the department ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was my intention, to send out the best officers we have in the department at the head of these parties. This I would do for two reasons. First, because they have some knowledge of the matter ; and, secondly, because we should have their services at a less cost than that of others.

Mr. BLAIN. May we expect the report of the surveyors at the next session ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, it will be a year from next session probably before we have the report.

Mr. OSLER. Have the government no knowledge on this subject now ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No information. My hon. friend (Mr. Osler) knows that the districts to be surveyed are a long way from headquarters and in the unsettled parts of the country.

Mr. OSLER. How does the matter come up now ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a great deal more use for the power than there was.

Mr. OSLER. This is to devise 'a scheme for the regulation of the water levels, so as to afford increased facilities for navigation purposes, the descent of timber, &c.'

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend is aware that at certain seasons, when the water is low, the city of Ottawa, for instance, is very much interested in the question of this water-power. It is important to see that we have water enough for navigation and still use water to provide power.

Mr. OSLER. What stretch of country is it proposed to cover ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would not like to say off-hand, but, speaking under correction, about 175 or 200 miles.

Mr. CLARKE. Have any of these water privileges been disposed of by the government within the last twelve months ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. So far as I am aware, they were all disposed of years ago.

Mr. CLARKE. I speak of the privileges far up on the river. Have any of these been disposed of ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. CLARKE. I would like to get a little more light on the subject. Is it to aid the lumbermen that these expenditures are made ? Is it to develop and make more permanent the water-powers, the privilege of which has been secured by private parties ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is one of the——

Mr. CLARKE. Is it not an extraordinary thing for the House to be asked to vote $20,000 to improve these privileges that do not belong to the Crown ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They belong to the Crown, but have been leased to these parties.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the lessees pay an increased indemnity to the Crown because of the work contemplated ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If we went on with the work, certainly. If we did not receive an increased revenue, we would not go on with the work.

Mr. CLARKE. I understand the minister to say that this vote is asked for the purpose of making surveys and obtaining the levels of the river with a view to constructing works to give a more equable supply of water in the Ottawa river ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, for regulating the water.

Mr. CLARKE. If this is done primarily to advantage private persons, I think they ought to contribute some of the cost.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. For general navigation also. It is a proper work for the government to undertake when they are to receive a revenue from it. The discussion now going on would be in place if it was proposed to go on with any of these works.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this $20,000 to be expended entirely on surveys ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE. I still think that if these powers have been leased, the expense of the survey ought to be paid partly by those who are to benefit by the construction of the work.

Mr. TAYLOR. I understood the minister to say a moment ago that we derived large revenues from these works. I have looked carefully into the public accounts, and fail to find one of these works that produces any revenue. They appear to be like the canals, it costs two or three dollars to collect one dollar of revenue that you get from any of these timber slides and booms. I would like the minister to point out a few of these works that are producing a revenue over and above expenditure.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think we receive at the present time between $70,000 and $80,000 per annum from the works to be affected by these improvements.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I see by the Auditor General's Report, page W—51, that a sum of $700 has been paid to Henry A. F. MacLeod, civil engineer, for completing unfinished plans and profiles of the Ottawa river survey, made in the autumn of 1900 and the winter of 1901. That would lead us to believe that there had been a survey going on of the Ottawa river.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That has nothing at all to do with the object of this vote. That was in connection with the Georgian Bay canal.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I see also that we voted in main estimates, under the head of miscellaneous surveys and inspections, $50,000. Now, I understood at the time that that was to cover all surveys of any kind that would be made by the Department of Public Works. Now, that $50,000 is a very large amount. I understand that the department has a regular staff that does this work, and therefore I suppose that the minister would simply take a staff away from one work to another; or is it the intention to employ an outside staff independently of those that have been employed in the department for some time ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That survey as was explained at the time, was part of the ordinary work of the department. We could not apply any part of that money for special work of this kind. We would utilize the staff we have now in the department so far as we could. But to undertake a work of this kind requires some extra assistance.

Mr. REID (Grenville). If the hon. minister sent an engineer and a few men to make a survey of any work under his department, not only in the Ottawa river but in any other part of the country, I see no reason why they should not be paid out of that $50,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have work in the department that requires all that vote, we could not undertake this work under that item.

Mr. REID (Grenville). If he is going to employ an additional staff of engineers to do this work over and above the regular staff, I can quite understand that he requires a certain amount. But it did seem to me that $20,000 was a large amount for surveys.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot offer any opinion as to that. I have asked for this amount on the careful report of the engineer, endorsed by Mr. Gobeil, the chief of the department. There is no object in asking for a vote greater than is required.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Have there been any petitions presented asking for this to be done ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, I have stated several times that a deputation waited upon the government on the 30th of May last, composed of certain of the largest business men in this district, men interested in the Ottawa Valley. I cannot give their names at present, but they are well known in this district. They made such representations about the importance of this work that the Premier asked me to make provision for this survey.

Mr. AVERY. Were these men on the deputation lumbermen ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Principally lumbermen, including Mr. Booth, Mr. Edwards, and others whose names I do not remember. I was present only for a few moments myself, on account of another meeting I had to attend. But it was certainly a very large and influential deputation and after hearing that deputation the right hon. Prime Minister asked me to make provision for having this work carried out.

Mr. COCHRANE. Would this scheme interfere with the Georgian bay canal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It would not interfere, but it would afford very valuable information if it was thought necessary to undertake that scheme.

Mr. COCHRANE. I do not think it would hurt the Georgian bay canal scheme, but could this project of raising the levels of the upper Ottawa be carried out as well as the Georgian bay canal scheme ? Could you interfere with the levels of the Ottawa river if the Georgian bay canal were constructed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It could not possibly injuriously affect it. My hon. friend has asked if this scheme can be carried out if the Georgian bay canal should prove a practicable proposition. The chief engineer says, yes, that it will help it.

Mr. AVERY. How far up do you intend to survey the tributaries of the river so as to form basins to regulate the level of the water ?

Mr. BLAIN. Is there such a work as this constructed in any part of Canada or in any part of the United States ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a work on the Trent river, and there are works in the province of Quebec which they have found to be of great advantage in connection with some of the streams there. They are under the jurisdiction of the provincial government.

Mr. AVERY. Would it not interfere with some of the lumbermen above the Ottawa river where they have slides and booms made to bring their logs down, by raising the water, and thus causing it to back up so that they could not get a sufficient flow of water ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My object in getting this information is to know whether it would interfere with any one's rights. The question will have to be considered as to how it will affect any rights that may exist. It would not do to make improvements if they were going to injuriously affect interests upon other parts of the river.

Mr. BLAIN. What success has followed the investment of capital in similar works on the Trent river ? Have the parties been satisfied with the amount of money that has been received from the investment ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These works were erected on the Trent river some years ago and they are under another department. I was asked the question as to whether there were any similar works in existence, and I just recollected these on the Trent river.

Mr. OSLER. I am a great believer in having an investigation made before money is expended, and I am very glad to learn that in one small case at all events the government are of that opinion. It is a wise and proper thing to have a most thorough investigation made in connection with the waters of the upper Ottawa, but the hon. minister made the statement just now that a deputation composed largely of lumbermen had waited upon the government and that it was at the instigation practically of these gentlemen that this item had been put in the estimates.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I said that I understood it was as a result of the representations they had made.

Mr. OSLER. Yes. The Minister of Public Works also said that he thought that the government derived a revenue of $70,000 a year from the lease of these water-powers. I would like very much indeed to know from what source the income is received ? I had no idea that the government were getting anything like that revenue from the Ottawa river water-powers.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I gave the information furnished by the deputy minister.

Mr. OSLER. I think it would be very interesting if we had the details of that. Perhaps the hon. minister could not give them now.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, but I would be very pleased to ask that a statement be made out, and I will bring it down probably in a couple of days.

Mr. OSLER. If the government make this investigation it would be very useful to the lumbermen and all those who are interested in the trade of the Ottawa river, although I hope the government are not going to give these lumbermen or any one else the use of the valuable privileges that may be ascertained to exist there as a result of this survey, without putting them up to public competition ; because, if they do, I think it will show that this is merely a scheme to enable some individual lumbermen to pay the expense of enabling them to acquire cheaply the valuable water-powers of the Ottawa river. The government should let these and other water-powers by tender, and only for a short time. These water-powers are going to be enormously valuable. I hope the government will not consider for a moment the alienating of any of the water-powers that exist on the upper Ottawa.

Mr. COCHRANE. Would the hon. minister tell us where those works on the Trent river are ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At the head-waters of the Trent. The matter came before me in connection with some claim of the Gilmour firm some time ago. In regard to what my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Osler) has said I quite agree with the position he has taken. If as a result of this survey, it is found that a great improvement can be made, I think every consideration should be given to the question as to how these water-powers should be disposed of. I agree with the view of my hon. friend that the country is entitled to see that it gets the greatest possible revenue that is to be had from these water-powers in open competition.

Mr. REID (Grenville. I think it is necessary to have a survey of the river, and I am surprised to learn that an investigation of this kind has not been undertaken before now. I would like to ask the hon. minister if it is really a fact that we have not a chart of the Ottawa river for navigation purposes up to the head of the river. Suppose I went into the department to get a chart in order that a steamer might be run to the head waters of the Ottawa, would the department have to admit that there never had been a survey made, and that they could give no information whatever as to the depth of the water on the upper Ottawa?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have some information as to the stream itself, as far as navigation is concerned, but no regular chart. I am told by the deputy and by the chief engineer, who have been for many years in the department, that we have no information of that kind.

Mr. HACKETT. What does the minister mean by the 'head waters of the Ottawa river.'

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understood by looking at the maps that it might be somewhere around Mattawa. I do not know how much further north it goes.

Mr. HACKETT. The minister displays a good deal of ignorance about the head waters of the Ottawa river. Twenty years ago I travelled twenty miles beyond that, and did not reach the head waters. What scheme has the government in mind with regard to this matter ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot hear the hon. gentleman.

Mr. HACKETT. Then there is the peculiarity that I cannot hear the Minister of Public Works and he cannot hear me. What part of the upper Ottawa does he intend improving ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend from Nipissing (Mr. McCool), says that we can go 500 miles before we get to the head waters of the Ottawa.

Mr. HACKETT. It is above Mattawa then ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, a long way. I was speaking as the crow flies, but it is a very winding river, and anyhow I do not think that so far as this vote is concerned, that distance makes much difference. Requests have been made to the department for extensive improvements on the Ottawa river, and its tributaries for the purpose of navigation, and to maintain the water-power. I have asked for this vote on the advice altogether of the technical officers of the department. I submit that it would not be a business-like proceeding to ask parliament for any considerable amount of expenditure without having surveys made, and if possible the estimated cost.

Mr. BROCK. Why do you not apply that principle to the Grand Trunk Pacific ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. One at a time ; I am responsible for this.

Mr. BROCK. These surveys are to benefit the lumbermen, and these improvements would no doubt increase the value of the timber limits. As the timber belongs to the provinces, I contend that an expenditure which would increase the value of the limits should be made by the provinces. It is said that surveys for a railroad through a new country cost about five per cent of the value of work to be undertaken, which would make this expenditure $400,000. Of course it will take a much greater sum than that to carry out the improvements the minister has in view, because these are days of very large enterprises, which have to be rushed through, as we have been given to understand that even time does not wait, and, that we cannot say to-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow. It should be remembered that the government have appointed a transportation commission, and would it not be well that that commission might inquire into all these things? The Ottawa river runs some 500 or 600 miles beyond Ottawa, and I presume that the government are not going to get to its head waters with this survey. There is a vote lower down for a 'transportation commission' which, I take it for granted, is not the transportation commission which the government has announced with such a flourish of trumpets. I contend that before you go into this expenditure, this matter should be brought before the commission and it should be made one of these things that the government would deign to refer to it, so that in years hence when we come to improve the navigation of the Ottawa river we may have this information in the report of the commission. If the transportation commission is to have nothing to do with our large railways, and with expenditures on our harbours, surely something might be referred to it. I contend that this is one of the things which it would be well to leave in the hands of this transportation commission. I can assure the hon. minister that it will relieve him wonderfully. Instead of having to answer questions for an hour or an hour and a half, he can with one sweep of his hand say: There is the report of the transportation commission; read it. It will be of great benefit to the government this session, and to the government that will follow next session. I hope we shall be able to make good use of this transportation commission, which the government at present seem to be ignoring.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend has given another strong argument, which I had not thought of, in favour of gathering this information. It was intended to be in connection with the navigation of the river, but it is possible, as my hon. friend says, that in the near future the information may be of great service to the country in connection with a greater scheme of navigation.

Mr. TAYLOR. I have no doubt that this item was put in the estimates for the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. McCool) and the deputation he may have come with. No doubt he is acquainted with the district, and can give us some information as to the probable result of the survey, and as to whether navigation on these waters can be benefited.

Mr. McCOOL. I may say that I was not present with the deputation which the minister speaks of, but I know the object of the vote. It is not to build dams alone, but is for a general survey of the river. There is a large body of water at Lake Temiscaming, and it would be difficult to erect a dam there. Then there are Quinze and Expanse lakes, where a very short dam would control the water and give a basin of 100 square miles. At Lake Victoria there are about 200 square miles of water, and the outlet is very narrow. There are good high banks in both cases, so that a very small expenditure would control the water. The dam would hold the water during the spring freshets, and by means of gates its flow could be regulated, so that during the dry summer season there would be a good flow. The lumber industry would be benefited by having a fair flow of water at all seasons for driving purposes. Navigation would also be benefited, and a great deal of the expense that has to be borne at present for dredging would be done away with. There is a dredge on Lake Temiscaming at the present time which would not have been necessary if this scheme had been carried out. There is sufficient water at medium height; but in spring it is higher than is required, while during the dry summer season the water recedes so that it is impossible to get near the shore. I think this is a very wise and necessary expenditure. A survey of the Ottawa river from here to Mattawa was made about fifty years ago by Mr. Walter Shanley. That was the only survey, and it was very carefully made. I read the report of it in the library a short time ago. From Mattawa west there has not been a survey made at all. On Lake Temiscaming, which is really an expansion of the Ottawa river, there are eight or ten boats, which carry a very large quantity of freight.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I do not propose to offer an adverse criticism to this appropriation; but where large public works are contemplated, it is necessary that the fullest information should be given by the government. This grant for surveys evidently contemplates a possible outlay at no distant date of a very large amount of money for improvements on the Otttawa river, and I would like to know what is the net revenue derived from the various franchises that would be benefited by these public works?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At the present time I am informed the revenue is between $70,000 and $80,000 per annum.

Mr. McCOOL. If the records are looked over, they will show that though there has been a considerable amount of money spent on building slides and dams on the Ottawa river and its tributaries, the expenditure has been repaid to the government twenty times over. They have been one of the greatest sources of revenue the government have had in the past, considering the amount of money expended.

Mr. RICHARDSON. What would be the probable increase in the revenue from the proposed expenditure ?

Mr. McCOOL. It is decreasing.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot give any opinion as to the probable increase. The expenditure on these improvements, I presume, would be very large. Before making that expenditure it was thought advisable to have a careful examination and report made by qualified engineers.

Mr. CLANCY. We have had a very rosy assurance from the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. McCool) that this is not only a good thing for the country, but a profitable investment. If I understood him correctly, the expenditure has paid its way over and over again. I have not taken the trouble to go over the Auditor General's Report for past years, but I presume that last year would be a fair sample.

Mr. McCOOL. No, last year would not be. I said the revenue had been falling off.

Mr. CLANCY. In the first place, we had the statement of the Minister of Public Works that the revenue last year was some $70,000 or $80,000. I find on page V—394 that the revenue for the Ottawa district was $37,923.23; for the St. Maurice district, $13,-565.48 ; and for the Newcastle district, $5,-847.22, or, instead of being $70,000 or $80,-000, it was $57,335. The expenditure on these services last year was : For the St. Maurice district, including staff and repairs, $51,727 ; for the Ottawa district, $42,182 ; and for the whole service, $201,958. It would seem that hon. gentlemen have been groping in the dark in regard to this question.

Mr. McCOOL. I did not include the St. Maurice river at all. It did not enter into my calculation. I know nothing about the St. Maurice and am speaking about the Ottawa river, and if you take the accounts that are to be found in the department for the last twenty-five years, you will find that my sstatement is absolutely correct.

Mr. CLANCY. If I take the Ottawa river, the hon. gentleman is in the same difficulty, because the expenditure largely exceeded the receipts last year in the Ottawa district alone.

Mr. McCOOL. One year would not be a fair test because they may have had large extra expenditure in rebuilding improvements, which I know to have been the case.

Mr. CLANCY. I am afraid my hon. friend has been speculating in that way very generally. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Public Works to state just how this vote came to be in the estimates. Is there any portion of this work which should be properly done by private enterprise ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. On the 30th of May last a very large and influential deputation waited upon the First Minister and represented that the public was very much interested in having some work done there. We felt in the department that we had not the necessary information to ask the House to grant a vote, and for that reason we have suggested that a survey be made and an examination by qualified engineers into the practicability of carrying on the work, and also as to its cost before spending a dollar in connection with it.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman seems to be more cautious in small matters than in large. We have had an expenditure involving some hundreds of millions of dollars undertaken, and the government did not think that the same precaution should be used in both cases. I would ask if the deputation made any financial representation regarding the cost of the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that I might divide the representations made by those people under three headings. First, the regulation of navigation of the river; second, regulating the water so as to bring down the logs; third, regulating the water-powers which are of such great value to this district, supplying, as they do, this House and city with light and water.

Mr. CLANCY. Has there been any undertaking by those persons to pay higher rental and to recoup the treasury for its outlay ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, the representations made were solely in the public interest. It will be for us, having charge of the work, to say upon what terms any advantages should be given to parties outside of the general public.

Mr. OSLER. The demand of the deputation was not for surveys but for the expenditure of a large sum and it was the government which suggested that the survey should be first made.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. OSLER. What amount was it contemplated that the work would cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No one was in a position to make an estimate, but we all know that at that distance the cost would be very considerable.

Mr. TAYLOR. I understand from the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. McCool) that only a couple of dams are required, one at the foot of a lake 200 miles long, and another at the foot of another lake one hundred miles long. It would certainly not cost much to put in a couple of dams, but does not the hon. member know that if the water is raised at these outlets, great damage will be done to surrounding land ?

Mr. McCOOL. Not at this point, because there are no settlements there except a few lumber camps. I repeat that the expenditure will not be very much, though of course the cost of putting in a dam and bringing out supplies will be heavier than in the case of a dam built in this neighbourhood. But the expenditure would not be very large because the mouths at the outlet of those expansions are not very wide or very deep. Then, another point is the Kippewa lake. That, I presume, is another hundred miles. As I am on my feet, I might mention that I have a memorandum showing that the receipts of the Ottawa slides and booms for last year increased by $8,100 over the previous year. I was surprised to learn this as I thought the receipts were falling off year by year. Still another point is that this survey should include work with a view to using the power of the different falls along the Ottawa up to its head. Take, for instance, the Chats, Portage du Fort, Rocher Fendu, Des Joachim, Roches Capitaine, and other rapids and falls. I suppose that between here and Lake Temiskamingue, it would be possible to develop 300,000 or 400,000 horse-power.

Mr. MONK. I was inclined to look favourably on this vote, but since the explanation given by the hon. member for Nipissing, it occurs to me that it is utterly misapplied money. From what I saw when I was in the district of Nipissing a year ago, I think it would be far more useful to spend money in improving the roads for the settlers of that district than in such a work as this. There are other improvements far more needed in Nipissing, such as wharfs, railway facilities and others. If I understood my hon. friend (Mr. McCool) correctly, it is to dam the Ottawa river in such a way as to keep the level of the river higher, this being particularly for the advantage of the lumbermen. The wants of that district are not confined to the lumbermen, and I venture to say that far more useful employment could be found for this money, and the benefits of its expenditure much more generally extended among the inhabitants of the district. My hon. friend knows that the lumbermen are not a penurious class of people. They want improvements so as to ensure the better floating of their logs, and so they came to the government. If these gentlemen wish to make larger profits out of their business by having a more uniform water level, and wish to saddle the government with the construction of the dams, why should not they bear a certain share of the expenditure by having these surveys made themselves and a reasonable plan placed before the government of the improvements they require ? There is another point, and one to which I would ask my hon. friend's particular attention. If the object is merely to dam certain indicated portions of the Ottawa river, surely it does not require $20,000 for that ? If the minister will inquire in the city of Montreal or, no doubt, in the city of Toronto, he will find competent engineers who will make a report as to the work necessary for damming the river and the cost of that work for far less than $20,000. The survey is not going to be made this winter, and there will be plenty of time if the money is voted next session. I understand that we are going to have a session in the early part of the winter to repair some of the mistakes of hon. gentlemen opposite. Then we can vote the money with a better knowledge of what we are doing. But I say that for one-quarter of this sum the minister will find engineers to carry out the surveys for this work, as the hon. member for Nipissing has explained it. Under the circumstances, it seems to me that this is not only an expenditure for dams, but a damnable expenditure.

Mr. McCOOL. The hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) seems to be under the impression that I have some special interest in this vote. I tell him frankly that I did not know even that it was in the estimates until this evening. And, as to benefiting Nipissing particularly, that is not the case. Not one of the dams referred to would be built in Nipissing, but most of the work would be done in the hon. gentleman's own province, for nearly all the dams I have spoken of are in the province of Quebec. But this is a national work. The hon. gentleman need not imagine that I am advocating it because it is only going to benefit Nipissing or any friends of mine.

Mr. MONK. If the work is to be done in the province of Quebec, the river being between Quebec and Ontario, it must extend into Ontario also. But if the work is to be confined to the province of Quebec, I can tell my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works that we have engineers in the city of Montreal, qualified under the laws of the province of Quebec, who will be able to make a full and complete report on this subject for less than $5,000. So, what is the use of spending $20,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Had the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) been present he would have heard me explain that this estimate was based on the report of the engineers of the department. It is a question for the Committee to decide whether to take the advice of my hon. friend, who knows practically nothing of the work to be done, the miles to be covered, or the time likely to be occupied, or that of the experienced officers of my department. The hon. gentleman may be right, but for my part, I would rather act on the report of the engineers of the Public Works Department.

Mr. GOURLEY. Is this money expended with a view to ultimately adopting the Ottawa and Georgian bay canal scheme?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The information gained might be used in connection with that scheme, as suggested by the hon. member for Centre Toronto (Mr. Brock). But no such idea was in view at the time of preparing this estimate.

Mr. GOURLEY. The hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Murray) has on several occasions presented the claims of the Ottawa and Georgian bay canal in a way that enlisted my sympathies to a certain extent. And I have often wondered why the people in Ontario did not insist on opening up the Ottawa river with a view to determining its value in connection with the transportation routes of Canada. If this is a mere local expenditure made on behalf of the lumber interests in Ontario, I should be opposed to it. But if it is intended to bring information to this House to enable us to know whether the Georgian bay canal is feasible in the interests of the whole of Canada, the expenditure might be justified. The minister has said it will be useful in this connection only in an indirect way. In that case the expenditure ought not to be made, for it could not be made intelligently with a view to getting that information, unless the engineers were so instructed. To go up the Ottawa and build certain dams which will yield only a certain benefit to the lumber interest, is a thing, I think, we should not be called upon to do. But if, in the larger interests of Canada, it would help to solve the transportation problem, I would support the vote. I have on many occasions, in listening to the hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Murray), while speaking of the Georgian bay canal, been struck with the importance of the Ottawa river as a means of communication. I think it should play a very important part in the transportation route from the Georgian bay to the seaports, and if the money were voted for that purpose, and engineers were instructed to develop that idea and give us the latest information, I would feel like incurring the vote. But if, on the other hand, it is merely in favour of a local interest, I think we ought not to make the expenditure.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Certainly very valuable information will be given in connection with that project.

Mr. REID (Grenville). When I read this item I supposed it was to make a complete survey of the Ottawa river, and I asked the minister if that was the intention, and the minister replied that it was the intention to get a chart of the Ottawa river. Now the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. McCool) stands up and assures us that this is for building dams on the Ottawa river.

Mr. McCOOL. The hon. gentleman is ascribing words to me that I never uttered. I did not say that the money was for that purpose, I said that it was the intention of the lumbermen who urge this survey, to ascertain the best means of regulating the spring freshets. I gave my own opinion that that could only be accomplished by dams at the points I named.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Then the member for Nipissing states that this money is to be expended merely for surveys in view of building dams, and not for the Ottawa river at all.

Mr. McCOOL. I did not say that at all.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Did he not state that this money was to be expended for surveys for dams?

Mr. McCOOL. No, I did not.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The hon. gentleman has just stated that the lumbermen wanted it.

Mr. McCOOL. That was their intention.

Mr. REID (Grenville). That this money was to be used for surveys for dams.

Mr. McCOOL. I did not make any such statement. I said this money was appropriated for the purpose, as stated by the Minister of Public Works, of surveying the Ottawa river. The deputation asked for some improvements to regulate the flow of the water, and that is what induced the minister to put this amount in the estimates —to make a complete survey of the Ottawa river.

Mr. MONK. It looks to me worse and worse. It seems this money is required to get from experts a report as to the best places in the upper stretches of the Ottawa where the river may be dammed, and the only men who are going to get the benefit of this are the lumbermen, they are going to get all the benefit of these expert surveys upon which the government will be asked to make a large expenditure for dams. They will get the benefit of all these researches as to the best places where the river may be dammed. These people know exactly where the best water-powers will be, and so the whole of this expenditure is for the lumbermen on the upper Ottawa. Their trade will be benefited and they will have water-ways of great value. This is not a proper application of public money.

Mr. HENDERSON. I confess I have had some difficulty in ascertaining the exact purpose for which this money is asked. However, from what I learn in this discussion, I take it for granted that the object of this vote is to devise some system of constructing dams, booms and slides on the river Ottawa and its tributaries, for the purpose of aiding the lumbermen who may go up there and purchase large tracts of timber and float it down the river. Now, if the timber that is to be floated down the Ottawa and its tributaries is still vested in the Crown, still belongs to the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, I think these provinces should construct these improvements for the purpose of making an outlet for the timber which belongs to them. If the property has passed out of the hands of the provinces into the hands of private individuals, who bought it with all these obstructions in the way of navigation, all these difficulties in the way of getting out their timber, and consequently would buy this timber at a very much reduced price, I do not see that we are called upon at all to improve the river Ottawa and its tributaries for the sole advantage of the men who have purchased the timber at a low price when these facilities were not provided. Now, there is the larger question, to my mind, of provincial rights. We are told that these booms and slides are a profitable investment. If they are, very possibly we may find the provinces complaining that we are trespassing on their rights by constructing these slides and booms and taking away the revenue from them. The provinces are at the present time very jealous of this parliament. We noticed that in the chartering of a railway a short time ago between the cities of Hamilton and Toronto, when they thought their rights were invaded. I think we should be very watchful not to invade the rights of the provinces. In this instance I fear we would be invading their rights, more especially if they are going to obtain a revenue from these improvements, as I understand from the hon. member for Nipissing that they will be a profitable investment. I have some doubts about that. I have looked at the revenue derived from booms and slides that have been constructed. Reference has been made to the St. Maurice river and the amount of money that accrued to the government last year from the large expenditure on that river. But we forget that we are yearly expending large sums of money in order to get that small amount of revenue.

I think that during the present session we have voted $50,000 for improvements and boom works to facilitate the floating and storage of logs on the St. Maurice district. That is about four times as much as the revenue that was derived last year from that district. I very much fear that the prophesies of the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. McCool) will not be realized if the results are no more gratifying than they have been in the province of Quebec on that river. But, I think, first, that the whole question just depends upon what the object of this expenditure is. Who is to be benefited? If the province of Ontario and the province of Quebec are to be benefited, if their timber is to be increased in value by reason of these improvements, then let Ontario and Quebec construct these works for the purpose of giving increased value to the timber which they own. If we construct these public works at the expenditure of $400,000 or $500,000 it will practically be an additional subsidy given to the provinces, and we will get nothing at all for it. If the property has passed out of the hands of the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, and belongs to private individuals who bought it with all these obstructions in the way of getting it out, and bought it at probably one half of what it would have been worth if these improvements had been made, let these men pay for these improvements, and not ask us to spend the money of the people to benefit private individuals. The hon. Minister of Public Works told us that a large deputation had waited upon the government. I would like to know who composed that deputation. I think if we had the names of the gentlemen who composed that deputation we would find that it comprised the names of many gentlemen who are large holders of timber berths, who purchased these timber berths with these difficulties in the way, and who expect the government to use the money which belongs to the people of the whole Dominion simply to provide improvements to assist them in getting out the timber which they purchased at a low price by reason of those difficulties and that this proposed expenditure is to personally benefit themselves. I do not see the propriety of voting this appropriation at the present time. Although the sum was asked for the purpose of getting information, I think it would be well for the government to wait and see whether it is wise to go any farther. I think we had better consider whether there is any reasonableness in the inquiry which it is proposed to make.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These are Dominion works. These works were transferred to the Dominion at the time of confederation, and they are under its jurisdiction. The Dominion is charged with the maintenance of these works, and collects the revenue from them. My hon. friend (Mr. Henderson) knows very well that Ontario and Quebec do not collect the revenue. Could we undertake any great national work which is not for the benefit of the people of Canada? The people of Ontario and Quebec form a part of this Dominion, and a great national work such as this, I think, would be for the general benefit of Canada. My hon. friend refers to those who may own the timber limits, and he says that they should pay for these improvements. They complain that the fees are too high now. How that may be I do not know, but certainly we do collect a very considerable revenue. My hon. friend instances the work at the St. Maurice river. Probably if the same care had been taken beforehand to make a survey such as we propose before the work was undertaken, we might have had better work for less money. I am not saying that is so, but it is always better to have information before undertaking a work of this description. I think, having removed the fears of my hon. friend as to who owns these works, and having pointed out the good results that will flow from such an expenditure as we propose to make, he should withdraw his opposition. I could understand the criticism if we were asking for a vote to carry out any of these improvements. Then it would be for each hon. member to express his opinion as to whether the improvements were of such a national character as to warrant us in going into them. But we are not doing that to-night. Here is a large question affecting the navigation of the Ottawa river. We hear the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) hour after hour declaiming about the great necessity for improving water navigation, yet, when the slightest effort is made in that direction, it is denounced as a damnable expenditure. It shows that we have hon. gentlemen in this House who have not given the matter very much consideration, and that there is on their part a great deal of talk with very little action. This is a work of great national importance, covering a vast area of territory, and I submit it to the committee, and if the majority think differently from me in regard to the question, they can refuse to pass the vote. This investigation should be made at the earliest possible moment, and it will depend on the report of the engineers as to whether in the opinion of parliament any expenditure should be undertaken upon the improvement of the river.

Mr. HENDERSON. If I thought the object of the vote was to improve the navigation of the upper Ottawa, I would think more kindly of it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would not come to parliament and ask for a vote without saying that it was for a specific purpose. If the report of the engineers is such that the amount involved is greater than the benefits to be derived, that will be a question for parliament to determine, but certainly it would be a great advantage to have that information, if we are asked to undertake any of that work in the future.

Mr. HENDERSON. I do not object to that, but I understand that the object of the expenditure even if it is recommended by these engineers, will not be to improve the navigation of the upper Ottawa, or of its tributaries, but to obstruct it by the construction of dams across it, so that instead of the river——

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend is misinformed. The conclusion to be derived from the hon. gentleman's remarks is that we are asking for the money under false pretenses. The statement in the vote itself shows that the improvement of the facilities for navigation is one of the objects in view. The second object, the descent of timber, is incidental thereto, and surely the improvement of the river is in the interest of the country.

Mr. HENDERSON. I do not insinuate that the hon. gentleman was asking for the money under false pretenses, but as the discussion has gone on, I have learned that it is not so much for the purpose of improving the navigation of the river as practically to obstruct the course of the river in such a way as to destroy it for the purposes of navigation, and that these obstructions will be used in the interests of private individuals. As I said before, in so far as I know, they have acquired large interests in that section of the country which will be vastly improved in value if this expenditure is made.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. When application is made to the Department of Public Works, such as it is necessary to make under the law by private individuals or corporations, to make certain improvements on this river, how is the department to know whether they shall be allowed to do so or not if it has no knowledge as to the waters that are to be affected ? This is very important and very necessary information to be acquired by the Dominion of Canada looking to the protection and improvement of this great river.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am not finding fault with the hon. gentleman taking this step, but what I do doubt is the propriety of doing anything even after he has obtained the information. I have very great doubt as to the propriety of the Dominion government expending public money there at all. In this matter we are invading provincial rights. We are interfering with works that ought to be undertaken by the provinces. If the property has passed out of the hands of the provinces, and has been acquired by private individuals at a time when no improvements were made on the river stretches, and at low prices on account of the difficulties of getting that timber out, then I do not see why we should be called upon to spend large sums of money for the purpose of making valuable the property that was purchased at a very low price.

Mr. HACKETT. On which of the tributaries of the Ottawa are these improvements to be made ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not able to give that information. If my hon. friend is in earnest, he must know that there are a great many tributaries of the Ottawa that have never been surveyed, and I suppose not even named. The improvements will depend upon the report of surveyors. I do not say that any improvements will be made at all, but it is important that we should have information before we expend any money.

Mr. HACKETT. I have been asking for a survey from O'Leary station to the west shore of the island which would cost only $1,000, but I have always been refused. While you are spending this $20,000 to survey an unexplored country, you might make that survey in Prince Edward Island and build a wharf there too.

Mr. CLANCY. The Ottawa river and its tributaries have had improvements many years ago, and they have served the purpose since. What new conditions have arisen which call for further improvements ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Ottawa river works were started forty or fifty years ago and we have urgent applications for different works, and we want to get information. The new conditions are the general development of the country.

Mr. CLANCY. I understand that an interprovincial river, as the Ottawa is for some distance, would come within the jurisdiction of this parliament, but has the minister considered how far it devolves upon us to undertake work in any province ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We would not think of intruding on provincial territory without arranging with the province.

Mr. CLANCY. I have no doubt that the provinces would not object to an expenditure of money by the Dominion.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Has the hon. gentleman any doubt that the improvement of navigable rivers is under the jurisdiction of this parliament ?

Mr. CLANCY. As I understand it, this is not a navigable river, but it is proposed to make it so.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is navigable now.

Mr. CLANCY. What is the draft of the boats that ply on that river ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My information is, that the Ottawa is navigable for 40 miles above Ottawa where we have made improvements. Some of the boats draw from six to eight feet more or less.

Mr. TAYLOR. The minister should take the advice of the hon. member from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) and drop this vote for the present session, because he does not purpose sending surveyors out this time of the year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is just the time.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. McCool) and the hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Murray) who are sitting beside the minister, know all about this region, and they can give the minister more information than he will get by sending out a band of surveyors, costing $20,000. Probably these gentlemen accompanied the deputation that went to the minister to ask for this vote.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman should accept the word of the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. McCool) that he did not accompany the deputation, and did not know the vote was in the estimates until to-night.

Mr. TAYLOR. I accept that, but perhaps the member for Pontiac cannot say so much. The hon. member (Mr. McCool) knows these waters very well, and he can give all the information that the minister wants. I would like to hear what the hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Murray) has to say.

Mr. MURRAY. I may say, that like the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. McCool), I did not accompany any deputation. I am not specially interested in the vote before the House ; but I do know, from my experience as a business man, that the lumber industry is very much interested in these improvements on the upper Ottawa. The hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat knows as well as I do that the lumbermen have to go further back to the various tributaries to get out their lumber ; and they get it out late in the season, when the water is low. I do not think there should be any objection to the government expending the appropriation for the purpose named.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. McCool) says that the construction of two dams would do the whole business ; and $20,000 which the government are proposing to spend on surveys, if spent on the work itself, would probably construct those dams.

To provide for expenditure in connection with a transportation commission, $25,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There has been so much discussion with regard to this transportation commission that I do not know that there is any further information which I can give upon the subject. Perhaps the commission would have been organized before this but for the long delay in getting the vote before the House. Every member has a copy of the Order in Council providing for the commission. I am of opinion that good results will come from the investigation.

Mr. SPROULE. The government, having dealt with the transportation problem before getting the information have done away entirely with the need of a commission, and now I do not know what it is required or expected to do.

Mr. HENDERSON. I understand that this sum of $25,000 is not to pay the salaries of the commissioners, but only to provide for the expenditures in connection with the inquiry. How long is this supposed to last? Will it pay for a full year or only a portion of a year? I think we are entitled to some explanation as to when the commissioners are expected to begin their work, and what its scope will be.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would ask my hon. friend to read the Order in Council, which states better than I could at this time the scope of the inquiry. They will necessarily gather statistics and information at various points in the Dominion from the Atlantic ports to the ports on the lakes, and this vote is to cover the expenditure that they may find necessary for secretaries and for technical and statistical information.

Mr. HENDERSON. I read the Order in Council of the 19th May last, and I thought that one special object of the appointment of this commission was to deal with the question of transportation from the great west to the east. The question has now been settled by the government themselves, and we do not want a commission to deal with it. They have agreed to spend from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 in constructing a transcontinental railway to dispose of the whole problem. Consequently if that was the object of appointing the commission, I do not see why $25,000 should be appropriated when the work of the commission has been actually taken out of their hands. I am not going to oppose this vote. I think it is very desirable that the work of this commission should go on. I think a great blunder was committed in not having the commission set to work months ago. If that had been done, possibly many millions of money would have been saved to the people of this country. So let us not hesitate now to appropriate the funds that are necessary to set the commission to work, trusting that good will come from it. I wish not to offer the slightest opposition, but only to express my regret that the government did not take action in this matter many months ago, so that they would have had the recommendations of the commissioners before they had entered on the construction of the transcontinental railway.

Mr. SPROULE. I regret that I cannot agree with the hon. member who has just spoken. In view of the action of this parliament on the transportation question during the present session and the fact that we have no scheme before us, I cannot see the need of this commission, nor what work there is for it to do. It seems to me that if there ever was a time when we needed a commission, it was before we took the step which we have taken this session; but that step having been taken, and the transportation problem having been dealt with, I venture to say that there will be very little change from what has been outlined. It is true, we shall be likely to go on and improve our canals, harbours and waterways to some extent; we shall have to do that of necessity; but what other great scheme is to be hatched out by this commission I cannot understand, and I think if we go on with it at present, it will be so much money thrown away.

Mr. LENNOX. I absolutely oppose, at the present time, the appropriation of one dollar towards this transportation commission. We were all of one mind some months ago as to the desirability of having a transportation commission for the purpose of solving the great transportation question which was then coming up. But after having committed ourselves to an enormous expenditure for the construction of a transcontinental line, after having taken out of the hands of the commission that pressing problem, it would be injudicious to expend this money. It may be quite true that we have many public works in the way of transportation which still require our attention, but there must be a halt called some time in the public expenditure, and in the face of the fact that we have committed ourselves to the construction of a railway which will cost anywhere from one to two hundred million dollars, I do not see why we should go on and spend money on a commission to inquire into the transportation problem which the government has determined to solve without the advice of any commission.

Mr. REID (Grenville). Like the hon. gentleman who has just sat down, I object to this item. Had the railway Bill not passed, I would not have objected to it, but now that the whole question is really settled——

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am glad the hon. gentleman is so easy to satisfy with regard to the transportation question.

Mr. REID (Grenville). The government have settled that question in so far as the construction of a railway is concerned.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am glad that the hon. gentleman is pleased with our railway policy.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I did not say I was, but that the question has been settled and, so far as this item is concerned, I would move that it be struck out.

Mr. SPROULE. I am disposed to support that motion. Had this commission gone on and done the work intended that it should do when it was promised in the speech from the Throne, I would have said that we were doing the right thing in voting the money, but after the government have committed themselves to an expenditure of $125,000,000 to $150,000,000 for the purpose of effectively dealing with the transportation question, I can see no use for this commission. To vote this money would be locking the stable after the horse is stolen. When we add the salaries of the three commissioners and other expenses to this item, we will find that we will have to pay some $75,000 in the near future to keep these men going, and we will be doing that after the only object for which this commission was intended has been settled. We are practically appointing three men for no purpose whatever and at great expense.

Mr. MONK. What will be the salary to each of these commissioners ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is not the intention to pay them any salary, but there will be some allowance paid for their services, depending on the time they will be at work. They will not be salaried men in any sense. The class of men we have appointed are not looking for salaries and never considered that a salary would be paid them.

Mr. MONK. No doubt something will be paid them for their services.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I suppose some honorarium or something of that kind, but no salary.

Mr. MONK. There will be a chairman and two commissioners. What is it intended to allow the commissioners as compensation for their services ? Have any arrangements been made with them ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, when they meet an arrangement will be made, but I have no idea of considering a salary or that they would ask for a salary —only some allowance to cover their expenses and for the value of the time they give.

Mr. MONK. I do not think my hon. friend should play on words. We are now voting an expenditure on this commission which will certainly cost $100,000, at the very least, if it sits one year. And, surely, before we vote that money we are entitled to know some details of the proposed expenditure. First and foremost, we are entitled to know what amount should be paid to the commissioners, whether you call it salary, solatium, indemnity for services, compensation for lost time, honorarium, or anything else.

Mr. BENNETT. Is it proposed to make a per diem allowance or to pay a lump sum ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As I stated, the commission have not met and organized. But some sum will be allowed. I do not expect that it will be paid, except as I have stated. This is to cover the expenses of the commission, and it is not my intention to incur a large expenditure in connection with it without further consulting parliament.

Mr. SPROULE. But the trouble is that we commence the expenditure. If, later on, we object, we shall be confronted with the argument, as we have been over and over again in other matters, that we should have objected before. That being the case, this is the time to endeavour to stop this expenditure. The minister says he does not intend to allow the commissioners any salary. To use a common expression, that is entirely too thin.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) misunderstood. I said that no doubt an allowance should be made in accordance with the services rendered. These men would gather certain information and prepare the report.

Mr. SPROULE. The country never employs men for such work without paying them handsomely, and no doubt these men will be remunerated on a scale commensurate with that given for similar work. We might as well recognize that at the beginning. But the question with me is as to the wisdom of paying out this money after having dealt with the transportation question as we have done. It is simply a vote of $25,000 as the beginning of an expenditure that will run up to $100,000. We might as well recognize that that is what we have to face.

Mr. REID (Grenville). I do not think that any member would object to this or a larger sum if it were necessary to have a commission on the transportation question. But we know that the government have been telling us for months that they have solved the whole transportation problem. If so, what is the use of this commission ? It cannot change the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Bill ; that is settled. I cannot, for the life of me, see what there will be for the commission to do. I believe that this item was put in to hood-wink the people and make them believe the government are carrying out the promise they made early this session to have a commission to solve the transportation question. They think that if they did not put this in they would not be able to defend their action on the Grand Trunk Pacific. Under the circumstances, I have no hesitation in moving that the item be struck out. The motion may not carry, but I believe that it is not fair to vote this item now that the Grand Trunk Pacific legislation has passed this House.

Mr. MURRAY. This is a preliminary provision for the transportation commission. Hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House laid great stress on this commission, and said that the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill should have been kept back until the report of the commission was received. Surely, these hon. gentlemen will not say that the only transportation question for the country is the Grand Trunk Pacific question? Is there not the question of transportation by the St. Lawrence water-way? Is there not the question of transportation by railways other than the Grand Trunk Pacific? Is there not the question of the Ottawa and Georgian bay canal, in itself sufficient to occupy the attention of a commission? For my part, I must say that I never took much stock in the idea of a commission, for it seems to me that the people's representatives should settle questions. But the strong opinion of the House seemed to be that there was a need for a commission. Good men have been selected, and this is a preliminary vote to pay for their services. It is not a large amount, considering the character of the work expected of them.

Amendment (Mr. Reid, Grenville) negatived; yeas 22, nays 40.

Government of the Yukon Territory—additional amount required for expenses in connection with the administration of the Territory, $15,000; amount required for the maintenance and construction of roads and bridges in the Territory, $113,490; grant to administration of Yukon Territory for construction and maintenance of public buildings for local purposes and settlement of claims in connection with the construction of roads, $113,500—$241,990.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The latter item of $113,000 is really that for which I am asking a vote here. The money of these three items is paid out through the local council of the Yukon.

Mr. SPROULE. Has the money been spent already?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. This is an allowance to the Yukon council for constructing the works set forth here. My hon. friend will remember that an arrangement was made by which we voted this money to the council, with the understanding that it would be administered better under the local authorities, since the council has become partly appointed and partly elected, than by the department here.

Pelly river bridge at Lethbridge—reconstruction of—to recoup the government of the North-west Territories, $55,000.

Old Man's river bridge at Macleod—reconstruction of—to recoup the government of the North-west Territories, $29,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Both these bridges were carried away by a freshet in May, 1902, and application was made to the department to rebuild them. An examination was made by the engineer, and it was thought better to erect more permanent structures than had previously existed. There was some correspondence between the local government and the Dominion as to how the money should be charged, and it was understood that the bridges were to be built by the Dominion.

Mr. SPROULE. The item says: 'To recoup the government of the North-west Territories.'

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The construction of these bridges was urged upon us by the local government as a matter of immediate necessity, and they agreed that we should expend the money out of their vote, to be recouped by this government.

Mr. SPROULE. On another item I asked a question this afternoon for a statement of the various items which appear in the different estimates of grants of money for the North-west Territories. We do not know what we are voting in the aggregate, and it is time that we should know that.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman's request is a very proper one. The deputy made a memorandum, and to-morrow he will have this account made up.

Telegraph lines, British Columbia—working expenses—additional amount required, $2,500.

Mr. SPROULE. Are the telegraph lines self supporting? Excepting this amount for working expenses, what is the original amount? What are the telegraph lines costing to-day for maintenance over and above their earnings?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will give that information on the Yukon vote. Mr. Chairman, we have done a little work at any rate, and perhaps we had better rise.

Some resolutions reported.

ADJOURNMENT—BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. MONK. Before the House adjourns I would like to state that when the House goes into committee, either to-morrow or on some future day before long, a motion will be made in regard to the expenditure in connection with the taking of the last census. What business does the minister intend to take up to-morrow?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will continue in Supply, taking Public Works, and after we finish them, Militia.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). There was an arrangement that the Militia estimates should come up to-morrow morning. There was an understanding to that effect with the Minister of Militia and Defence. If the hon. Minister of Finance will be good enough to keep his rank and file in better control than they were this morning we will get on very much more expeditiously with the estimates than we have done to-day. I would like the arrangement to be carried out to take up the militia estimates to-morrow.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Arrangement with whom ?

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). With the Minister of Militia.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am most willing and anxious to oblige hon. members. I think there was one item allowed to stand affecting the Yukon and there are some small votes for Quebec which I think we can easily dispose of in the morning and then go on with the militia estimates in the afternoon. If hon. gentlemen want any particular item to stand for discussion I shall be perfectly willing, but, unless there is some object I would like to proceed with my estimates because there have been a great many days during this session taken up with the Public Works estimates.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. Minister of Militia and Defence came over last night and said that he wanted to know if we started his estimates the first thing in the morning it would be possible to get through with them before six o'clock as we are going to adjourn in the evening. My hon. friend from Victoria (Mr. Hughes) said that he had a statement to make and although some other hon. gentlemen also desire to offer some observations, we thought that it would be possible to get through with these estimates in one day if we started early.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If it will oblige any hon. members, while it causes a great deal of inconvenience to myself, I will agree that the militia estimates shall be taken up.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. Minister of Militia and Defence mentioned to me that he desired to make such an arrangement and I left him to arrange with the hon. Minister of Public Works. Very good; let it be understood that the Militia estimates will be taken up to-morrow.

Motion agreed to, and House adjourned at 11.30 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, October 8, 1903.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Eleven o'clock.

QUESTIONS.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES.

Mr. WILSON—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. For how many miles of railway have bonuses or subsidies been voted by parliament during the years 1900, 1901 and 1902 ?

2. How much money would it amount to each year, figured at minimum rate of $3,200 per mile ?

3. What amounts of the said bonuses or subsidies have been paid for each of the above years, and up to September 1, 1903 ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). I think that questions No. 1 and No. 3 are practically the same. No. 3 is perhaps the more comprehensive of the two, and I will answer that :

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). Mr. Speaker, the returns for the last fiscal year, though not exactly and finally closed, may be regarded as practically complete, because any figures that occur later are not likely to make any material change, and therefore I think the statement that I am able to give may be taken as a substantially correct statement of the operations of the year :

6. What is the present position of the suit ; and what instructions have been issued with reference to proceeding with it ?

8. Has any request been made by the city of Montreal to be relieved of the payment of the militia for such services ?

9. What is the intention of the government with respect to enforcing payment from the city of Montreal of any sums advanced by the government for payment of the said militia force in respect of their services while so called out; and what action, if any, does the government propose to take for that purpose ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. Sir F. W. Borden) :

5 and 6. Yes ; it has been set down for trial on the 9th instant. No instructions were necessary.

7. Yes ; by the Dominion government, under section 34 (6), Militia and Defence Act ; $18,850.42.

8. The city council of Montreal passed a resolution requesting the Dominion government to pay the militia, copy of which was officially transmitted to this department.

9. Section 34 (6) of the Militia and Defence Act prescribes that in such a case the district officer commanding shall at once, in his own name, proceed against the municipality for the recovery of the amount advanced.

PAY OF PERMANENT FORCE.

Mr. GILMOUR asked :

Have any steps been taken toward increasing the pay of the permanent force ? If not, is it the intention of the government to do so ; and if so, when ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. Sir F. W. Borden). No decision has been reached. The matter is under consideration.

CONTRACT WITH THE NORTH ATLANTIC TRADING COMPANY.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax) asked :

1. What contract or contracts, if any, have been entered into since the year 1898 between the government of Canada, or any officer or person, acting on behalf of the government of Canada, or the Department of the Interior, of the first part, and the North Atlantic Trading Company, of the second part ?

2. What contract or contracts, if any, have been entered into since the year 1898 between the government of Canada, or any officer or person, acting for the Department of the Interior, or for the government of Canada, of the first part, and any trading company or trading companies carrying on business at Amsterdam, in Holland, or elsewhere in Holland, of the second part ?

3. What are the particulars of each of such contracts ?

4. Will the government lay on the Table of the House a copy of each of such contracts ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). A contract was entered into on the 1st November, 1899, between the Department of the Interior and the Trans-Atlantic Trading Company, the name of which was afterwards changed to the North Atlantic Trading Company. The object of the contract was to secure the conveyance of immigrants from Europe, especially northern Europe, to Canada. The contract will be placed upon the Table of the House.

MR. J. G. ANDERSON.

Mr. ALCORN asked :

1. Has J. G. Anderson been appointed a fruit inspector, or to any, and what official position relating to fruit or its inspection, in or for the county of Prince Edward, Ontario, or for any territory including that county, or any part of it ?

2. Where does he reside, and what is his post office address ?

3. What are his duties ?

4. What instructions, written or verbal, have been supplied to him ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon. Sydney Fisher). Mr. J. G. Anderson was appointed inspector under the Fruit Marks Act, 1901, to act temporarily from the 5th September last. There is no special district to which he is appointed. He works at present in the province of Ontario. At the moment of his appointment he was temporarily residing at Picton, Ontario, but his former residence, to which I understand he was about returning, was Lucknow, Ontario. His duties are to act as an inspector under the Fruit Marks Act, 1901. The general instructions furnished to inspectors are set forth in a departmental circular, which contains a copy of the Act and the regulations made by Order in Council for its enforcement and operation. Those and the verbal explanations given to Mr. Anderson by the chief of the fruit division were the instructions that were given.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND—SHIPPERS' CLAIM FOR DAMAGES.

Mr. LEFURGEY—by Mr. Hackett—asked :

1. Has the government received a memorial from the shippers of frozen fish and other perishable goods, in the province of Prince Edward Island, asking to be compensated for loss sustained owing to government boats not keeping up communication between that province and the mainland, during the past winter ?

2. If so, is it the intention of the government to place an amount in the estimates to meet the claims of said shippers ? If not, why not ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. R. Préfontaine) :

1. Yes.

2. The matter is under consideration.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Report of the Geological Survey Department for the calendar year ending 1902.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved :

That order (No. 42) on the public Bills and Orders : 'House in Committee on Bill (No. 3) to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900, as amended by Special Committee.—Mr. Charlton,' be transferred to the government orders.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Mr. W. ROCHE (Halifax). Before the Orders of the Day are called, I rise to a question of privilege. The other day, the hon. member for Prince (Mr. Hackett) said, apparently reading from 'Hansard,' that I had stated : The fishermen were on the outskirts of civilization ; and he interpreted these remarks as being a reflection upon fishermen generally, and on the fishermen of his own county in particular. I rise to deny that I made these remarks. I saw the reporter and I asked him if I had made these remarks and he said : No ; these remarks are not in 'Hansard.' I might have allowed the matter to remain there had not some other gentleman, the member for North Grey (Mr. Thomson) endeavoured to present me in an unfavourable light before this House, and before those whose opinions I value. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Hackett) could not have read the remark in 'Hansard,' and therefore I stand in an invidious position, as it might appear that I had denied something which was affirmed to be true, and which was proved by being found in 'Hansard.' Now, I made no such observations, and they are not reported in 'Hansard,' and it remains for the member for Prince (Mr. Hackett) to make an explanation on that point. If the light were imperfect, or if his glasses were improperly adjusted——

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). I rise to a question of order. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Roche) has a right to make a personal explanation, but he has no right to rise and challenge somebody else to make a personal explanation.

Mr. SPEAKER. The rule is, that an hon. gentleman has the right to make a personal explanation on a question of privilege. The point taken is that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Roche) has no right to ask another hon. gentleman to make an explanation, and I should think that the other hon. gentleman will have to decide for himself whether he wishes to make an explanation or not.

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). I quite agree with you, Mr. Speaker, but you see that I am compelled, because of the attitude taken by that hon. gentleman (Mr. Hackett), to present the case in this way. The hon. gentleman left the impression that he quoted from 'Hansard,' but he could not have quoted from 'Hansard' when it is not in 'Hansard.' I do not think that the leader of the opposition should have interrupted me, because we are all interested in preserving the dignity of this House and in supporting the personal reputation of its members. If he were attacked I would be the first to believe that it was incumbent on him to make an explanation ; and to ask the member who attacked him for an explanation. I think that I should have an explanation from an hon. member who has placed me in a derogatory position, and I think the member should make the amends which one gentleman should make to another.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I have not the slightest wish that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Roche) should be prevented from making an explanation. It is his duty to put himself right if he thinks he is misrepresented in the House. But when he does so he has no right to lecture other gentlemen of the House, and that is what the hon. gentleman (Mr. Roche) is doing. The House will listen to the hon. gentleman most respectfully, and no one more respectfully than I, when he makes such an explanation, but it is not necessary or desirable that he should indulge in a lecture.

Mr. ROCHE (Halifax). I was paving the way in the easiest manner possible for the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hackett) to make an explanation which everybody should be glad to make.

Mr. E. HACKETT (West Prince). I have no wish to do any injustice whatever to the hon. member (Mr. Roche). When he spoke a few days ago he made this reference and I wrote it down immediately.

> The fishermen of Nova Scotia were living on the outskirts of civilization.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Hackett) must accept the explanation made by the hon. gentleman from Halifax (Mr. Roche.

Mr. S. HUGHES (Victoria). I rise to discuss that point of order. The rule, as I understand it is, that when a gentleman makes a statement which is not of his own knowledge, concerning another member. and the other member denies it, then the hon. gentleman who made the statement not of his own knowledge must accept the denial. But in this case, the hon. member (Mr. Hackett) says he heard the statement made in this House.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes) is mistaken. When a declaration is made by a member, that declaration must be accepted against the affirmation of anybody.

Mr. HACKETT. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Roche) made a personal allusion to me, and he spoke about my eye-glasses. Well, I have to use eye-glasses.

Mr. BENNETT. What kind of glasses does he use.

Mr. HACKETT. I use eye-glasses, and I use them for the purpose of spying out hon. gentlemen on that side of the House and it is very unfair and very unjust for the hon. gentleman to make a personal reflection on me because I have to wear eye-glasses.

SPEECH OF THE RT. HON. JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). Before the Orders of the Day are called, I wish to call the attention of the government to a matter of some importance, and to put a question to the right hon. the Prime Minister. In the summary of the report of Mr. Chamberlain's speech which I find reported in all the newspapers—I have before me the report of the Ottawa 'Evening Journal' of the 7th instant—I find the following :

> Mr. Chamberlain said he believed that the colonies are prepared to meet us in return for a very moderate preference. They would reserve to us the trade we already enjoy ; would also arrange their tariffs in the future in order not to start industries in competition with those already in existence in the mother country ; and not only would they enable us to retain our trade with them, but they would give us preference on all trade done with them by our foreign competitors

I wish to ask the government, if at the colonial conference—as to which, as my right hon. friend knows, we have no verbatim report—or on any other occasion, the Canadian government has stated anything to the British government which would justify this statement of Mr. Chamberlain in regard to the starting of new industries in the future in this country ; or, in regard to the statement generally which I have just quoted from Mr. Chamberlain's speech ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I also read Mr. Chamberlain's speech, at all events the summary of it which has appeared in the press, and I must say that I do not draw from his words the inference which my hon. friend has just drawn. I understood Mr. Chamberlain to make an argument and not a statement. He argued that if the British public would give a preference to the colonies, it would be an appeal to the colonies to return a preference, not only in matters which had already been agreed to, but in what might be suggested. In regard to statements made at the conference or elsewhere, they are all contained in the papers which were submitted by the Canadian ministers at the conference, and which were conveyed by the government to the House some time ago.

SUPPLY—ST. JAMES' DIVISION MONTREAL.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) moved that the House again go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). Mr. Speaker, before you leave the Chair, I would like to call my right hon. friend's attention to the division of St. James, Montreal. My right hon. friend will remember that very nearly a month ago I called his attention to the fact that that division had not been represented at all during this long session of parliament. My right hon. friend stated at that time that he was under the impression that although his attention had been called to that matter some time previously by myself, still an agreement had been come to between us, or some statement had been made by myself, to the effect that the matter should rest there. This I denied at the time ; but my right hon. friend stated that the matter would be seen to at once. I would like to have from my right hon. friend an explanation of why the writ was not issued at that time.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Mr. Speaker, I am bound to say, first of all, in justice to my hon. friend, that when he called my attention to the matter, I made the statement which he has just repeated as having come from me, and which I made in perfect good faith at the time ; but as I found no confirmation of it in 'Hansard' I have to admit that so far as that goes I was mistaken, and I beg my hon. friend to accept my apology for that. With regard to the other question, the writ has not been issued for this reason. When our attention was called to the matter a few months ago—this session has been so long that it is almost impossible to keep track of time—we found that the lists in the city of Montreal were being prepared. My hon. friend knows that the disposition of the law is that the lists cannot come into force to be made use of in an election until sixty days have elapsed after they have been prepared. Therefore, it has been only within some few weeks at most that the writ could have been issued for the electoral division of St. James.

Mr. MONK. Will my right hon. friend allow me to state that the lists came into force on the 11th day of May. They were revised in March.

The PRIME MINISTER. I think the lists were prepared in May.

Mr. MONK. They were prepared in March, and came into force in May.

The PRIME MINISTER. At all events, that is the reason. We did not think it would be useful, nor do I think my hon. friend was particularly anxious to have the writ issued until the session was over, and until, without any inconvenience to anybody, we could dispose of the business in hand, so that we could go to the country, in that particular division, fresh from the questions we have been discussing.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). My right hon. friend is remarkably considerate. He changes his attitude with regard to the St. James division every time he mentions it in the House. Some six or eight weeks ago he distinctly took the ground that he was waiting for my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) to bring the matter up. It seems remarkable that a constituency should stand unrepresented in this House for months because some member of the opposition did not force the government to issue a writ. However, my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier pointed out that there was nothing in that, because he had brought this matter to the attention of the government as soon as the constituency had been declared vacant. That was not two or three months ago ; it was something like six months ago, if I am not mistaken. Months rolled on and no action was taken. During all that time it would have been perfectly competent for the government to bring on the election, as the lists were all ready. The lists in the province of Quebec, so far as I understand the law, were revised in March last, and sixty days afterwords they would be ready for an election. On the 11th of May, as my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier informs me, the lists were ready for an election in St. James' division, Montreal. The months of May, June, July, August and September elapsed, and we are now in the month of October ; and during all these weary months of this session that constituency has been unrepresented. I do not think the reasons which my right hon. friend has given for disfranchising the constituency during what amounts to an entire year are at all adequate. It would have been perfectly possible to have had a member for that constituency elected during the month of June last, and he would have been present in the House during the past four months to represent the people of that very important division. I am informed that not only were the lists ready, but they were printed in the Printing Bureau in May or June last, and that twenty copies were sent to the candidates who had last contested that division. Under these circumstances, we should surely have some better explanation than the right hon. gentleman has given us why that very important section of the city of Montreal has been unrepresented in parliament during so many months.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM (East Elgin). I understand the right hon. gentleman to say that the reason why the writ was not issued was that the lists of this year for St. James' division were not completed. I am glad to hear him take that stand, because, in the face of that there cannot be much truth in the rumour which is going about that we are soon to have a general election. The lists in the province of Ontario in many cases are not completed until the last days of December, so that we could not have an election before some time in March. So that the statement of the right hon. gentleman will please the politicians throughout the Dominion, as it means that we cannot possibly have a general election before March next.

REPRESENTATION OF WEST QUEEN'S.

Mr. E. HACKETT (West Prince). Mr. Speaker, before you leave the Chair, I desire to call your attention to the fact that the province of Prince Edward Island is entitled to five members. Of one of those gentlemen we all lament the death, which took place in the early part of the session. I refer to the Hon. Donald Farquharson. Since then the district of West Queen's has been unrepresented in this parliament. I would like to ask the right hon. gentleman if he will have an election in that constituency without delay ?

The PRIME MINISTER. It is quite true that the county of West Queen's, P.E.I., has not been represented in this House, but it is not my fault. I am ready to take my share of the blame, but it it also the fault of my hon. friend.

Mr. HACKETT. How is that ?

The PRIME MINISTER. Because he has not notified Mr. Speaker that there is a vacancy.

Mr. BELL. Might I ask the hon. the First Minister if it is intended that the House shall sit on Thanksgiving day ?

The PRIME MINISTER. The government in this matter will be in the hands of the House. We are very anxious to expedite business, but we have a good deal to thank Providence for, and I suppose it would be in order to do like the rest of our fellow-countrymen and not sit on Thursday, but attend to more important duties.

Mr. LOGAN. Is it the intention to adjourn for the Christmas holidays ?

Mr. HACKETT. I desire to call to your attention now, Mr. Speaker, that the west riding of Queen's has been vacant——

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman has already spoken.

Motion agreed to, and House went into Committee of Supply.

Pay and allowance—further amount required for headquarters and district staff, $17,625.
