SHOCKING EVIDENCE GIVEN BY MRS. CURREY IN COURT HIS MURDER

The Currey divorce case was resumed this morning at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Eliza A. Currey resumed her evidence. Examined by Mr. Tred, she said she had never called Mr. Currey a devil. She may have called him a brute. This was referring to the occasion when her little daughter Julia went to visit the Ruel family. On that occasion or none other had she thrown a glass of water at Mr. Currey. She never had said "I will kick the damn stomach out of you," or had she kicked him. It was the first she had ever heard of it when she read Mr. Currey's evidence. After she had returned to the city in September 1917, Mr. Currey's conduct became worse. His conduct was unbearable. In fact with scolding, she continually accused her of doing things she had never done. It was about this time she slept in a separate room. On the night of the 20th of September, at the death of her father, she heard Mr. Currey answering the telephone telling of the death. He came up to their room and sat on the bed and said "Your father is dead." She was grief stricken, and wanted to go right on, but Mr. Currey held her back and said "I will be in an hour, but he had no money with him, and could not get it in time. She said, "May I take my children with me?" and he fairly thundered "No." She had also asked, "May I have Niece to take care of my children," and he again thundered, "No." Mrs. Currey then said, "You have killed my father," of she may have said "You have murdered my father," as she believed that her father had died of a broken heart. Mrs. Currey started to tell of an occasion of her father's visit when Mr. Skinner objected, remarking "Mrs. Currey, you mustn't take charge of the court."

THE MESSAGE
By LOUIS TRACY

Author of "The Wings of the Morning," "The Wheel of Fortune," "The Captain of the Kansas," etc.

But he hesitated, and pointed to the Nancy, whereupon the lady, to whom he was speaking, looked fixedly at the cutter and her occupants.

"That is Mrs. Baumgartner, I am sure," said Evelyn eagerly. "Will you take me across in the dinghy at once? Then, if necessary, I can reach Portsmouth easily this evening, as I shall have gained half an hour."

She gave no heed to the astounding fact that if these people were really the yacht owner and his wife, they were absolutely alone on the vessel. Warden, unwilling to arouse distrust in her mind, bade Peter draw the dinghy alongside.

"Good-by," he said, extending his hand frankly. "The world is small, and we shall meet again. Remember, you have promised to write, and, in the meantime, I shall be exceedingly good and kind to me," she said. "I shall never forget this charming day, and I shall certainly write to you. Good-by, Chris. Good-by, dear little ship. What a pity—it was so beautiful."

And with that she was gone, though she turned twice during her short voyage, and waved a hand to the man who was looking at her so steadily while he leaned against the cutter's mast and smoked in silence.

There could be no doubt that the lady of the Sans Souci was Mrs. Baumgartner. No sooner did she realize that Miss Dane's arrival was imminent than she turned her hands with a Continental affectation of amusement and ran into the deck cabin. To all seeming, she bade the launch wait further orders. Baumgartner and his wife reappeared, they indulged in gesticulations to which Warden could readily imagine the accompaniment of harsh-sounding German, and, evidently as the outcome of their talk, the launch steamed away sourly.

"If those people had committed a murder on board and were anxious to win their victim several fathoms deep before anybody interfered with them, they could hardly be more excited, he thought. "Perhaps it won't do my young friend any good if I remain here staring straight at the yacht."

He bided himself with an unnecessary stowing away of the cutter's mainmast, but contrived to watch events sufficiently to note that Mrs. Baumgartner received her guest with voluble courtesy. Baumgartner, a French-polished edition of the ban-conator type of man, buckled the two ladies out of sight, and thenceforth, during more than an hour, the deck of the Sans Souci was absolutely untenanted.

Twilight was deepening, lights began to twinkle on shore; not a few careful captains showed riding lamps, although the precaution was yet needless, launches and ships' boats were accompanied by black farrows in the slate-blue surface of the Solent as they ferried parties of diners from shore or yacht—but never a sign of life was there on board the Sans Souci. Peter, undisturbed by speculations as to the future of the young lady, whose presence had brightened the deck of the Nancy during the afternoon, cooked an appetizing supper. He was surprised when Warden expressed a wish that they should eat without a light. It did not occur to him that his employer was mounting guard over the Baumgartners' yacht, and meant to have a clear field of vision while a shadow of daylight remained.

The progress of the meal was rudely broken in on by Peter himself. Although the placid silence of the night was frequently disturbed by the flapping of prope-lers, his sailor's ear caught the stealthy approach of the one vessel that boded possible danger. "Swinging his mighty upright he roared:

"Where's that ugly Dutchman a-comin' to top' quick with a light, Chris, or she'll be on to us!"

LOVE LED HIM TO SUICIDE
The Tragic Romance of a Member of the Rothschild Family.

Baron Oscar de Rothschild, youngest of six sons of Baron Albert de Rothschild, head of the Austrian branch of the famous house, committed suicide this morning at his residence in Vienna.

Baron Oscar attained his majority only last April; a romantic explanation of his untimely and tragic death is given. He served his year in the army, as the military routine of every man, at Brno, the fortified capital of Moravia. Then this son of the Rothschilds fell in love with a very beautiful girl, returning only to his first love affair, and he became so infatuated that he announced to his father his intention to marry the girl, against whose character no reproach was whispered.

Baron Albert immediately sent the lovely boy on a voyage around the world during which the young baron visited the United States, it is said. He remained constant to his love, returning only three days ago, he learned that in his absence his father had arranged a marriage for him with a girl of noble rank and high position.

Baron Oscar's disappointment plunged him at once into depression and melancholy. A friend, a diplomat, met him on the Ringstrasse, Monday, and was shocked to see that his manner was erratic and his dress disordered. The diplomat watched him as he walked unsteadily.

Two hours later Baron Albert, who was dining at the Hotel Bristol, was informed that his son had been found dead in his bedroom—he had shot himself through the head.

The family, grief-stricken, announced that Oscar's death was caused by apoplexy; the police, who always carefully investigate such affairs, have confirmed, to their satisfaction, that he committed suicide.

Baron Albert, who is reputed to be one of the ablest financiers in the house of Rothschild, has been a dominant figure in the banking house in Vienna, London, and Paris, for 23 years. He is a man of extremely polite and unassuming manners; personally, he is anything but popular, but his influence in Austria is enormous.

With all his wealth his domestic life has been ill-starred. His wife was the first cousin for the Rothschilds are all very distant in their marriages. Baron Albert married Bettina, daughter of his uncle, Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, of Paris. A woman of great charm and of high abilities, she died of cancer four years after Oscar's birth. Their oldest son, Baron George, lost his reason; their only daughter, Naomi, is a deaf mute.

Baron Oscar's death is a tragedy to his father, who saw in him a future promise of the house.

Two of Baron Oscar's elder brothers, Baron Alphonse and Baron Louis de Rothschild, visited America in December 1904. They studied American banking methods in August Belmont's banking house in New York and traveled extensively, making themselves acquainted with the business methods and conditions of the United States and Mexico. They were recalled to Europe by the deaths of their maternal grandfather, Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, head of the Paris branch of the house, and of their uncle, Baron Nathaniel, of Vienna. The young baron is an artist and philanthropist. He is fond of chess and in 1888 was referee in the international college chess tournament which the American players won.

Horse Distemper
Prince, Edward Farmer Solemnly Declares Nerviline Is a Specific.

"After fifty years' experience in raising horses I can safely testify that Nerviline is a specific for distemper in all round stable linnets as Nerviline." Thus opens the very earnest lecture of J. J. Evanton, who lives near Watford, P. E. county, and who has developed his distemper cure a month ago, and was afraid it was going to lose him. His first horse, a yearling, died of distemper, his nostrils ran and he had a terrible cough.

I tried different remedies, but was unable to relieve my horse of his pain and suffering, but still I started to use Nerviline. I mixed a bottle of Nerviline with colic in horses and cows, and wherever there is pain, Nerviline will cure it. Refuse substitutes. Large bottles 25c. per bottle, at all dealers, or The Cattarozzose Co., Kingston, Ont.

NEW YORK WOMEN TO CIRCLE THE GLOBE IN AUTOMOBILES

Mrs. Harriet Clark Fisher and Maid to Start on a Daring Journey Around the World—Well Armed for Attacks by Robber.

New York, July 22—Mrs. Harriet Clark Fisher, whom Wu-Ting-Fang, the Chinese minister, once described as the most remarkable woman in America, called this week on the American liner New York to begin an automobile tour of the world. With her went "Honk-Honk," her Boston hall mascot, four large touring cars, the world in a car of her own, and since then she has been perfecting the necessary arrangements.

Mrs. Fisher is the widow of Lieutenant Commander Fisher, of the United States Navy, and since his death she has managed the Eagle Anvil Works at Trenton, N. J., which she established, with such skill and business ability that the National Association of Manufacturers some time ago admitted her as their only woman member. Mrs. Fisher learned the anvil business from A. to Z., and has qualified as a journeyman anvil maker, probably the only one in the world.

She has always taken a deep interest in automobiles and has made a study of their mechanism to such good purpose that she is as well posted as any chauffeur and can run any make of machine under all conditions. Two years ago she made up her mind to make a tour of the world in a car of her own, and since then she has been perfecting the necessary arrangements.

ONE BIG LOCOMOBILE.

The car in which Mrs. Fisher expects to make the greater part of her trip is a forty-gallon gasoline locomobile, with a forty-gallon gasoline tank and a 400-mile capacity on one filling. The other cars are not so powerful, and will be merely used in case of necessity. They will carry the baggage and will be transported by express from point to point, with the main aboard, to meet Mrs. Fisher at the various scheduled stops.

Similar arrangements have been made by which Mrs. Fisher will find at various points all the necessary changes of clothing, the food supplies and such other incidentals as will help to make the adventurous trip as comfortable as possible.

Mrs. Fisher intends to start from Southampton in one of the two relief cars and make a tour of England, Ireland and Scotland, where the roads are considered good, before she crosses the Channel to France. In Paris she will make her real start in the big machine, which is equipped with a full camping outfit and a small arsenal, for Mrs. Fisher believes in leaving nothing to chance. The roads of France and Switzerland will afford a pleasant trip to Lake Geneva where Mrs. Fisher has a beautiful estate in the Villa Carlotta, facing the town. Here she will rest for a fortnight or so, making sure that all the arrangements for the future journey have been thoroughly carried out, and then she will start through Northern Italy for Vienna. Thence she will set her flag for Southern Russia, and through Asiatic Russia she will march on to Port Said.

TRADE IS GOOD
(Toronto News)

That trade conditions are buoyant and rapidly recovering from the depression that was so universal last year, is abundantly evident from interviews with leading manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers and other business men of the city. The testimony of nearly every one is that the improvement has been steady, marked since the first of the year, and that in a very short time the returns will equal those of the banner year of 1907.

M. CLEMENCEAU "Really, M. Clemenceau never could do anything in the ordinary way." Taking this apt remark by M. Veber as a text the New York Herald editorially says of the recent overthrow of the French ministry: "That is the concluding epigram of Pierre Veber's vivid description of the last appearance in the Chamber of M. Clemenceau's Ministry—a description which appears in a special cable despatch to this morning's Herald. M. Veber's remark is singularly appropriate. Even in his manner of leaving office M. Clemenceau is original. To speak of his overthrow is almost an abuse of terms; for everybody, including the opposition and the opposition press, is compelled to admit that the downfall of the cabinet has been brought about not by M. Clemenceau's adversities but by himself. Usually when a minister's resignation is announced it is because the minister's policy is unacceptable to the parliamentary majority. In the present instance M. Clemenceau's policy is approved by a solid majority in the chamber and has been sanctioned by a long series of votes. In its general lines that policy undoubtedly will be adopted by M. Clemenceau's successor, whoever he may be; for with the present chamber any reactionary policy is impossible of realization. It is manifest, therefore that M. Clemenceau's retirement is attributable to other than political causes. He has in fact fallen into one of the snares that beset the path of every parliamentarian. He retires in consequence of a tactical error which never would have been raised if his unrivaled parliamentary skill had not momentarily failed him. But that does not prevent M. Clemenceau from being the greatest statesman of the present generation—a rank to which his vast political experience, the liberality of his views and the success with which he defended his opinions in parliament and out of it fully entitle him. For foreigners the smoothness with which the French political system operates. For the forty-third time since the foundation of the republic in 1870 the ministry has been changed without any perceptible effect upon the course of public life. It is merely an interesting event. The fact is that the French system enables the people, through their representatives, to get rid of the head of the government the instant he ceases to satisfy them. In this respect it is superior to most other political regimes—even our own system which concentrates in the real control of the government in the hands of a president, who is for a fixed term of years, to say nothing of his chances of reelection. If the president happens to be a Roosevelt there is nothing for the unfortunate people to do but grin and bear with him until the end of his term of office. One must admit that they manage these things better in France."

OPENING FOR TRADE That a great opportunity for the extension of Canadian trade in Siberia and Japan is being almost wholly passed over, and that Siberia will soon become America's great rival in furnishing the wheat and flour supply to the East, are two of the firm impressions of Mr. James S. Cartwright, formerly of Toronto. He has returned after an unbroken absence of ten years in Japan. Mr. Cartwright holds an important post in a British oil company, which, with the Standard Oil and native concerns, divide up the business of the Japanese Empire. In an interview with the Toronto News, Mr. Cartwright says: "Canadian manufacturers do not seem to be eager for new business in the Orient. There is, I think, but one direct representative of a Canadian house in the whole empire, though the British and American houses are pushing after the trade for all they are worth. British and Canadian enterprise would seem to be lagging as regards Siberia. I am informed that in Vladivostok, the Russian city which is the port of entry to Siberia, there is not a single British house established, though the opportunities in that rapidly opening country would seem immense. The popular notion of Siberia as a land of perpetual snow and ice is quite misleading. The winter season is no longer than in Manitoba, and no such depth of snow falls over the west of Canada. Moreover, they have what the interior of the Canadian west must do without—a network of great rivers to nourish the land and assist communication. Into that new and very fertile country the Russian government is putting hundreds of thousands from the eastern districts, making a new and profitable land from the surplus peasant population of the older rural districts, and every assistance is afforded by the government to settlers. At Harbin, a name which figured very prominently in the recent war, I saw some of the finest flour mills ever constructed, and with the supplies on hand it looked as though as many more could be kept running. "What grade of wheat and flour is produced?" "Something similar to our best grades of Manitoba," Mr. Cartwright replied. "But as it can be raised and marketed at a price below our Canadian and American, it will probably drive the latter out." "Is there no antipathy to Russian goods and Russian enterprises since the war?" "It is with the Japanese consumer and merchant just as with all others the world over. Dollars count every time, and the anti-Russian feeling doesn't last long when the same Russian can beat the world in the price of his wheat and flour." "Just how slow has been the increase in the consumption of Canadian grain was shown by the News by a table of trade figures. In 1903 the entire import of wheat and flour from Canada amounted to $90,000. Four years later they had risen to slightly over $100,000. The United States wheat exporters had no showing of increase whatever. Their total of Japanese trade dropped from five million dollars to a little over two million and a half in four years.

INDIAN STUDENT FOUND GUILTY ON MURDER CHARGE London, July 23.—Madalari Dhinagar, the Indian student who on the night of July 1 shot and killed Lieut.-Colonel Sir William Hutt Curzon Wyllie and Dr. Cassam Lalora, was today found guilty and sentenced to death at the conclusion of a trial of less than an hour duration in the old hall of the police court. During the trial of the occurrence in the Imperial Institute on the night of the tragedy, the prisoner sat in the dock listening unconcernedly, and only once broke his silence by saying, "Whatever I did was an act of patriotism."

FAVOR PORT NELSON FOR HUDSON BAY TERMINUS Winnipeg, July 23.—(Special)—That Port Nelson would be a better terminus for Hudson Bay railway than Fort Churchill is the report of a party of surveyors who have just returned from running try lines for the railway. Their opinion is that a road to Port Nelson would be shorter, more direct and cheaper to build than one to Fort Churchill, while navigation opens earlier than at the more northern port. Harbor facilities at Nelson, they say, are good.

SCARCITY OF LIVE HOGS AND BECOMING SCARCE Farmers Have Been Neglecting a Very Important Branch of Their Vocation—Provisions, as a Result, Are Dearer. (Toronto News.) Not only is pork and bacon dearer than it ever was before in the city of Toronto, but it looks as if it might even be dearer yet. This is owing to the great scarcity of live hogs, hog-raising having been to a large extent, almost throughout the whole of Canada during the last year.
