An iron chess-board provided with magnetic chess-men is a Berlin novelty. The small magnets concealed in the figures cause them to adhere to the iron board and retain their place in spite considerable shocks such for instance as are received on shipboard or on rais way trains.

Dr. Fleck, a Dresden chemist, attri butes the production of pimples and in flammation on the forehead of some per sons, in hot weather, to the presence of fat or fatty acids in the leather lining of hats. By experiment he has lately shown that the fat is contained in all leathers, and although small in quan tity, is sufficient to produce the resul in question. To avoid the unpleasan effects, he recommends rubbing the greasy leather with burnt magnesia.

Herr Kepner, at Salzburg, in the Tyrol, has observed that heating earths and rocks causes them to become mag netic. The magnetism newly-heated rocks appears to diminish somewhat in time, but some specimen of slag, perhaps thousands of years old were found to be still magnetic.

As the use of electricity become more and more general, the great importance of some method of storing the current for future use, becomes more widely appreciated. Since the announcement of Faure's electrical accu mulator some months ago, this subject has been much studied, and severa storage batteries have been produced by eminent electricians. The most promis ing apparatus of this kind, is said to be one just described by Mr. Henry Sutton, of Australia, to the British Royal Socie ty. It appears, from information now at hand, that Mr. Sutton obtained the best results with a negative electrode of copper and a positive of amalgamated lead -that is, lead coated with mercury. These two elements are placed in a solution of sulphate of copper. When a current of electrici y is passed through this cell the solution is decomposed and metallic copper deposited on the negative electrode, while the positive is peroxidized. When the battery is being discharged the action is reversed, the copper element being oxidized, and the oxide combining with the acid again forms sulphate of copper. As the cop per is deposited in charging, the solution gradually loses its blue color, being converted into snlphuric acid. It is stated that Mr. Hutton will not patent his dis-

Prof. Tait describes three forms of mirage. The first, and most common, is that seen in the desert, where the sunlight is reflected from the heated layer of air resting upon the sand to the eye of the observer, and irresistibly gives rise to the impression of a reflecting surface of water at the point in the deser from which the rays are projected. A second form is that observed in the Arctic regions, of which many beautiful illustrations have been given by Scoresby. The principal phenomenon is what is called "looming"—distant objects showing an extravagant increase of vertical height without alteration in breadth. Distant hummocks of ice are thus magnified into immense towers and pinnacles, and a ship is sometimes abnormally drawn out until it appears twelve or fourteen times as high as it is long. The celebrated fata morgana of the Straits of Messina is of this character. Rocks are seen drawn up to ten or twelve times their proper height, and houses, as well as human beings and animals, appear in like exaggerated shape. The most remarkable instance of this kind of mirage was observed in 1798, when from Hastings, a portion of the French coast forty or fifty miles away, was seen as plainly as though but Grave Stones and Monumental Mea few miles distant withough ordinarily morials, in Foreign or Native Stone. a few miles distant, although ordinarily hidden by the earth's convexity. The third and perhaps most extraordinary form of mirage is that observed by Vince in 1799, in which a ship at sea showed three distinct images—a lower and an upper one in an upright position and an intermediate one in which the object stood inverted.

An Automatic Reed Organ. "THE ORGUINETTE may row be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is akin to the Labinet Organ, but the organ but the examinated by an artist in order to produce music; the organistrate is on the other hand entirely mechanical in its action and a trifling expense it can be made to fundsh an unlimited supply of all kinds of nutsic." Toronto Globe.

"THE ORGUINETTE is indeed a musical woulder. It is a monature reed organ, with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Size. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ, for the reason that the grooramus in music can play it as well as the nost accomplished processor. The Organistrate incong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not hable to get out of order." Montreat
