A Christmas Anthem. So sang the angels 'mid the stars on high, "Glory to God, on earth good will to men." Re-echo far the anthem of the sky; Ye rolling ages chant the glad retrain. Chorus—Glory to God on high!

Who gave His soul to die
For man defiled.

We hail the hallowed morn,
The Lord of life was born—
God's Holy child.

Let war its clamour still, and sheath the Novelties! sword,
And sceptered potentates their homage lend, lend, In Bethl'em's lovely shade behold the Lord! Adoring bow the knee, your praises blend. That natal morn redeems all other days, The blessed advent of the Christian Year; It shines on all munificient with grace, A light from Heaven reaching far and near.

PERFORATED CARDBOARD. Ye sons of wealth, your goodliest treasures bring,
To pining haunts of poverty repair;
Lay forth your tribute to the new-born
King;
The poor of earth are his peculiar care.

Yea, stoop to cheer the wretched and the vile, Grudge not a hand to succour and to save; He stooped for you, poor slaves of sin and guile,
And bowed his head to sorrow and the grave.
ATHOL, GLENGARRY.

Our Gallant Ship.

With rippling sea and freshening breeze
Our gallant ship sails on and on,
And hopeful hearts repose at ease,
And merry thoughts take vent in song. BRACKETS

The gallant ship sweeps proudly by, A few more billows and we'll hail Our fatherland, "sweet by and by." A soft, clear voice sings out the strain
That oft has cheered the weary soul,
Then all take up the rich refrain
Till o'er the waves the accents rell. CANVASS.

The night is dark, the moon is young, A heavy mist comes spreading of The signal lights aloft are hung And all aboard is trim and taut.

The bells ring out the midnight hour, In murky sky and splashing tide, When lo! a bark of giant power Comes crashing on the larboard side. With staggering lurch she heels around, Like vanquished hero seeks a grave, With riven beams and gurgling sound She sinks beneath the dismal wave.

Fond hearts were there, the true the brave, Deep buried in the swirling tide; How blest who know that Christ can save, White, Brown and Colored Spirals, On sea or land, whate'er betide,

The winds a mournful requiem sing
With wailing mean and tender sigh,
And in our hearts the voices ring
That sang at eve "sweet by and bye. SCRAP PICTURES.

Old ocean let them sleep, Give them a quiet resting-place In thy waters still and deep; Safely hold Thy treasures, mighty sea!
Until the Archangel calls—
"Give up thy dead to me."
ATHOL, GLENGARRY.

Borrioboola Gha A stranger preached last Sunday, And crowds of people came To hear a two hours' sermon With a barbarous sounding name; Twas all about some heathen Thousands of miles afar. Who lived in a land of darkness

SLEEVE STUDS. So well their wants he pictured That when the plate was passed, Each listener felt his pocket. Silver & Gilt Neck hains. And goodly sums were cast;
For all must lend a shoulder
To push the rolling car
That carried light and comfort
To Borrioboola Gha.

That night their wants and sorrows

I sy beary on my soul,

And in deep meditation

I took my morning stroll,

Till something caught my mantle

With eager grasp and wild,

And looking down with wonder,

I saw a little child: AND SLEEVES. A pale and puny creature in dirt and rags forlorn; What could she want, I questioned,

Impatient to be gone.

With trembling lips she answered,
"We live just down the street,
And mamma she's a dyin',
And we've nothing left to eat." Down in a wretched basement, With mould upon the walls,
Through whose half-buried windows
God's sunshine never falls,
Where cold, and want, and hunger

Crouched near her as she lay I found a fellow creature DRY GOODS, Gasping her life away. A chair, a broken table, A bed of dirty straw, A hearth all dark and fireless-But these I scarcely saw,

For the mournful sight before me,
The sad and sickening show—
Ob, never had I pictured
A scene so full of woe—

The famished and the naked,
The babes that pine for bread,
Fhe squalid group that huddled
Around the dying bed.
All this distress and sorrow
Should be in lands afar;
Was I suddenly transplanted
To Borrioboola Gha?

Ah, no; the poor and wretched Were close beside my door, And I had passed them heedless A thousand times before. Alas for the cold and hungry That met me every day While all my tears were given To the suffering far away.

There's work enough for Christians
In distant lands we know;
Our Lord commands his servants
Through all the world to go,
Not only to the heathen;
This was the charge to them—
"Go, preach the word, beginning
First at Jerusalem." COAL, always on hand.

Near Raleigh, in Notinghamshire, there is a valley, said to have been caused by an earthquake several hundred years ago, which swallowed up a whole village together with the church. Formerly, it was the custom for people to assemble in

The following particulars of the hangng of a murderer are given in a Telegraph St. John's, P. Q. Dec, 13.—At an early hour, this morning, groups of mon were to be seen at the street corners discussing the tragic event which was to take place today. At nine o'clock a large crowd had gathered around the Jail eager to get a glimpse at the prisoner. Your correspondent called on the Rev. Cure Aubrey, who has been with the prisoner ever since his confinement, and was informed by that gentleman that when the telegram was received from Ottawa, informing the Sheriff that the law must take its course, he called upon the prisoner, in company with the Sheriff, and upon informing him that his doom was sealed Castafrolez, who received the news very calmly, threw up his hands and exclaimed:" I am not guilty of the murder of Matheron." The prisoner devoted most of his time last night to readiug his prayer book and slept in all about three hours. His wife visited him two days after the sentence was pronounced, when he bade her good bye, saying he did not wish her to visit him again, as he did not know how it would affect him. She lay it was not till a few minutes after. 11 o'clock that the condemned man appeared. He was attended by Rev. Messrs. Aubrey and Daigneau, of this place. He mounted the scaffold with a firm step and his demeanor all through appeared cool and indifferent as to his fate. He then addressed those present without a quiverin his voice, saying, "Gentlemen, I suppose you expect a speech of me and a confession, but I have no confession to make. I am about to suffer the extreme penalty of the law for a crime of which I am en tirely innocent." He then thanked the jailor and his family for their kindness and attention during his imprisonment, and also those people of St. John's County and friends across the line who had kindly signed a petition to the Government asking his sentence to be commuted to imprissonment for life. He then, in a solemn voice, declared once more his innocence. and called on the Almighty as his witness. He said he had been high in position in this world, but now was about to descend pointing with his finger to the foot of the scaffold. He then requested the sheriff to tighten the rope around his neck. His last words were, "Oh my God if it was not for my faith in thee what would sustain me now." He was let hang for about the usual time and then cut down, when an eager crowd who were outside the walls were admitted to see him inside of the jail yard. The square around the court house was crowded and some in their anxiety to see the man hung, climbed on top of the

After the execution of Castafrolez your correspondent interviewed Mr. H. J. St. Pierre, who was first retained as counsel by the murderer. He is perfectly confident of the guilt of Castafrolez, and says that he confessed to him. The confession was made in St. John's, Que., during the progress of the inquest. Castafrolez had drawn a map which St. Pierre still has in his possession, designating the exact spot where he murdered the deceased, it being in American territory, about an acre and a half from Fort Montgomery. Then the prisoner introduced the matter by stating that he was alarmed lest they should find

It was on account of this confession, as well as to the fact that the prisoner did not pay his expenses to St. John's as promised that Mr. St. Pierre dropped the case. Mr. St. Pierre believes that Castafolez made a full confession to Mr. Perrault, the vice consul of France.

Christmas, 1878! As regularly as the footfall of time marks the paces of the passing years, comes the Christmas season with its and joyous experiences. Christian culmandment" of the Founder of our religion, are necessary to the fullest enjoyment of Christmastide, but it also brings happiness to those amongst us who seem to know little of the "good tidings of great joy" which came with the first Christmas that gladdened the earth. It matters not in what aspect we view the season, we cannot but find in the land to which it does not bring some light and happiness which, without it, would have been uncreated, and man of business turns from his work; the implements of industry are laid aside: the store, the office and the workshop are closed, while hearts and homes their impression. The season has its duties as well as ts pleasures if, indeed, its duties are not amongst its greatest pleasures. In every community there are those who can experience little of the outward joy of Christmas, unless aided by the charity and kindness of those who are better off in the world than themselves; and we should, therefore, not forget bering that they are especially com-when the better part of our nature comes into action. We feel more strongly the brotherhood of the human family—more sympathy with our fellow-creatures, and are more sensible of the fact that the battle of life begets in us a selfishness which it would be well if we could overcome more successfully than we do.

Among the most pleasant of our Christmas customs is that of exchanging pledges of friendship and remembrance.

Young and old participate alike in it and all appear to delight more in giving than receiving—another significant exemplification of the spirit which rules the season. But what associations are listed to the Colony. The enemies of De Monts had for a gainst the panes like the down of birds; and through the winter twilight a pair of eyes look wistfully, as they have looked through the winter twilight of every Christmas eve since that one, when another pair of eyes—passionate brown eyes, these last—had shared their scratiny. And both had felt, in the holy calm of the season, the very intensity of their feelings, as a sort of reproach.

Preparations were now made to return to La Belle France. With that view Lescarbot, on the 30th July, 1607, left for Canso, where he was to be joined by Pourtineourt in 11 days after he had secured samples of his growing crops. Pourtineourt having joined his friends at Canso, the whole party sailed for France on the 3rd of September and arrived at St. Malo on the 28th.

That which helps one man may hinder another. Be cautions in giving advice and consider before you adopt advice.

One of the most amusing scenes in the legislature of Pennsylvania occurred on a motion to remove the Capitol of the States from Harrisburg to Philadelphia. A matter of-fact member from the rural dis-tricts, who had heard by the great facility with which brick houses are moved from one part of a city to another, and who had rose and said, "Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to the motion, but I don't see how on airth you are going to git it over

"No, no," she thinks, awarm flushspreading over her face with which the fire light has nothing to do, no one else if not Louis. No other man's children may ever call ker mother since the one love of her life has been denied her. And for a long timp she sits and thinks of nothing, or of solyady indifferent things that classing them altogether they amount to that, till a loud ringing of the bell startles her, and she gets up to open the door. Of course it is Perkins, for she had told the old woman to come in that way as the back door would be fastened. As she reaches the hall a loud stamping of feet is going on outside, in the porch. Perkins would never stamp in that way, sant thinks, were the snow to the knees. And then, she remembers that she isjalone, that it is Christmas-eve, and except very near friends—and Bertie has none suchsho on one comes visiting on Christmas-eve, and a sudden sense of fear touches hershe to how on any weakness of that kind is so new.

silent and lonely forests.

The very university of the interchange of the friendly greeting shows that every New Year-every new period of time-is of incalculable importance to us. Important it is as containing the scenes and the elements of our happiness. What are these elements? They are partly outward and partly inward. The outward elem at are such as health, money, troops of friends, etc. For us to wish our friends to have these is surely a good wish. But are they the sum and substance of a person's happiness? Decidedly, no! A person may have them all, and in overflowing abundance, and yet be far from being happy. Other elements which belong to the world of mind and spirit must mingle with these to produce real heartfelt joy. A mind and heart full of noble thoughts and kindly sentiments, and exercised by the spirit of the law, which teaches us to do to others as we would have others do to us, can alone extract the honey of happiness from the flowers of outward prosperty. The natural flowers which yield honey to the bee, yield poison to other insects. So it is only the mind and heart permeated by the spirit of goodness which can draw wholesome sweetness from the flowers of outward prosperity. The snarling, snappish, waspish spirit will fly from flower to flower, with no hum of happiness, because unable to extract any honey from them.

When, on January 1, 1879, we will wish each other "A happy New Year!" our wish will or should embrace these two kinds of elements of happiness, especially the spiritual. The Snowflake, in the spirit and meaning of our definition of happiness, begs to greet its every reader, in anticipation of January 1, 1879, with the perso salutation, "I wish you a happy New Year?"

Having braced himself up for the trying occasion he attempted to go over, but only got a short distance, when his faith gave out as to the strength and carrying capacity of the bridge, and he was necessitated to beat an inglorious retreat. Going in search of assistance he was successful in procuring a small boy with a hand-sled, to which he securely tied himself and, covering his face, quietly resigned himself to the alarming situation. In due time he arrived safe on this side and proceeded on his way rejoicing.

"A JOLLY FELLOWSHIP."

Will run through the twelve monthly parts,—beginning with the number for November, 1878, the first of the volume—and will be illustrated by James E. Kelly. The scene of this story, like that of the very successful one, "What Might Have Been Expected," published in St. Nicholas, is laid in the South. For the girls, a continued tale.

"HALF A DOZEN HOUSEKEEPERS."

By Katharine D. Smith, with illustrations by Frederick Dielman, begins in the same number and a fresh serial by susan Cooldge, entitled "Eyebright," with plenty of pictures, will be our menced early in the volume. There will also be a continued fairy-tale called

Written by Julian Hawthorn, and illustrated by

The November Number. Attention is especially invited to the November number, which in many respects approaches nearer o our ideal than any number we have issued. It outsins 72 pages, and its illustrations throughout re fine and varied. It begins two splendid serials ts shorter papers represent a wide range of sub-ect,—listory, Travel, Fun, Peetry, Adventure, cience, Natural History, Home-life, Sport, and vely parrative,—the whole crowned by an approriate Thanksgiving story.

Throughout are seen evidences and fruit of the intor's recent travel across the continent, and rs. Dodge's inimitable touches everywhere show the heart-iness and zeal with which she resumes tive editorial manage..ent. One long article and two poems in this number bear her signature, ai in the Letter Box she talks pleasantly with e young folks about her delightful journey to allfornia. California.

There is a fine portrait of Frank R. Stockton, accompanied by a sketch of his life.
