Hon. A. J. Smith's warm tribute to the constitutionality of the acts of the Governor General, last night, was the severest rebuke yet given those politicians and papers that attacked him on account of the prorogation of Parliament and the appointment of the Royal Commission. "The mills of God grind slowly, but they grind exceeding small," Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Blake have many a good laugh at the people they gull with their outcry against the prorogation, the Royal Commission, and other matters. They can afford to laugh because their magnificent strategy was successful. We admire their ability, even in a doubtful cause, but we cannot help pitying the poor people who believe them to be sincere in their professions of faith in the wickedness of the other party, and expect them to be any better, poorer or more disinterested than their predecessors. The manner in which our officers have been grabbed, and election services paid with official appointments, and the expressed intention of the Government to turn out a great proportion of the Civil Service people and appoint men of their own party, show that the spoils are the programme of conquest and not the programme.

It is amusing to read of the great things that are to be done all at once for Nova Scotia by the Government. The tariff on the railway is to be lowered to the former rate, the railway extension into Halifax is to be begun immediately, the Parrsboro Railway is to be aided, etc., etc. These promises have nothing to do with the coming election. The present Ministers show that they understand all the election arts known to their predecessors and a few more. Those Ontario politicians are far in advance of our own in the election-dodge art.

Gen. Grant's nomination for Chief Justice has been unfortunate, both of the gentlemen proposed by him having been forced to retire on account of the certainty of not being confirmed by the Senate. Cabot Cushing was denounced for having been in sympathy with the South at the beginning of the civil war. Who will be next exposed to the fiery shafts of press criticism by being nominated for the high office? We pity the man, whoever he may be.

The Spanish army will, hereafter, have a wholesome fear of New York harbor. The unfortunate Arapiles is again in trouble.

A Protest Against "R's" Letters.
To the Editor of the Tribune.
For some days past a large portion of your columns has been devoted to long letters concerning some minute points, lately in discussion in St. Mark's Parish, connected with the Church of England. Now, Mr. Editor, I subscribe to your paper as a newspaper, and I expect to get my money's worth.
As one who has not the slightest interest in the denominational question argued at such length by your correspondent, I protest against the space occupied in your columns.
What is it to me, and thousands of others, if the people of the so-called "Anglo-Catholic" church have so much dread of, and so little belief in their clergy?
Were the people of other sects as fond of admonishing their parsons in the public prints, secular papers would be unknown.
Trust me, Mr. Editor, that you will oblige a subscriber, and at least request your correspondent "R" to draw it nild, I remain, yours truly,
NONCONFORMIST.

Gallows Horrors.
Some further details of the bungling execution of the hardened murderer Mechem in New Jersey, on Friday, make up a pitiful story. The peculiar sensations of the spectators may be imagined when Mechem, with the black cap on the back of his head, was seen to retain a puff of his mouth on the scaffold. With a gasp against his cut and the rope hung against his chest and the prisoner pulled away at his cigar, and the prayer was concluded the Sheriff drew it round between his lips and threw it away. Mechem was trembling all over the scaffold and had filled the horrible cup until one eye peered out, when the signal was given and his and his plaintive "Don't hang me!" was cut short by the thud of the axe and the spring of the body into the air. The features during the next instant underwent a frightful change, the eye rolling and the mouth expressing intense agony. Suddenly, as a deputy stepped forward and checked the motion, a murmur of horror arose, for the knot of the rope uncoiled like lightning, and the next instant dangled in the air, while the body of the wretched man fell to the platform. The Sheriff covered his face with his hands, and uttered a smothered "O, my God!" The militia broke ranks and crowded to the scaffold, and there was an instant utter confusion. When the body had been carried up high enough the rope was tied again, and the life was allowed this time to quietly pass from the body. The closing scene in the yard, before the public left, was the cutting up of the rope surreptitiously for relics, while the body of the doomed man was put into the hands of the authorities.

Reviews.
The Temple of Honor has expelled those of its members who attended the dinner in honor of LL Governor Tilley on Tuesday evening.
The snow storm which commenced yesterday morning continued all day. About noon the snow fell very rapidly and during the afternoon and evening drifted considerably.
The engineers of the City and Portland met on the 22nd inst. to form a society for their improvement and protection.
The Western train was almost on time last night despite the heavy snow storm. The snow on the line was considerably drifted, but being light, the train ran through it easily.
Margaret Sullivan got drunk yesterday in Sheffield street. While breaking windows, she severely cut herself. She was all evening in the Police Station where Dr. Anderson and Hotsford dressed her wounds and sent her to the Hospital.
The steamer Seal, owing to the storm which prevailed yesterday, did not leave Digby until this morning. She reached here about noon. She leaves again Saturday morning.
Mr. Charles Cheumt, the night watchman at the Sussex Station, was on Tuesday presented with a silver watch by Mr. Wm. Fairweather and a few friends. Mr. Cheumt is a faithful and efficient man, and has business at the Station, and on the night of the meeting of the Sussex Boot and Shoe Factory was made the recipient of a purse.
Last evening several gentlemen answered the call for a meeting to organize a Reform Association at Hampton, and adjourned until Monday evening without taking any action.

A Quiet Talk.
"Well, Mr. Blank, what do you think of the political situation?" inquired one legal man, the other day, of another who was supposed to be well posted in political matters.
"Oh! our Government is all right; it will sweep everything," was the reply.
"How about the old office holders? Some of them are looking pretty blue. Is it a fact that you expect to be Deputy Minister of Justice?"
"It has been promised me, and I have worked hard enough to deserve it."
"But are you not too young? My idea is that such an office should be held by a lawyer of large experience—experience only gained by long practice and study."
"A great mistake on your part. The idea of old men getting all the good offices must be exploded. Why, Pitt was only twenty-four when he became Prime Minister of England."
Consistency.
Consistency is a jewel that all admire, and the Temperance men of St. John prize themselves particularly on its possession. They withdrew from the Tuesday night dinner, on account of the decision of the committee to allow wines on the table, and organized the insignificant demonstration of last evening on strictly Temperance—that is, total abstinence—principles. The Chairman was a Temperance man, and other arrangements were tested to the utmost of the management to be consistent, until the toast to the press was proposed. Then Hon. Mr. Willis, a life-long total abstinence advocate, a leading member of the different Temperance organizations, a man whose personal and journalistic influence has always been given to the Temperance cause, was passed over, and Mr. Elder, who is not a total abstinence man, was designated as the one chosen by the committee to respond. Everybody noticed it and talked of it as a queer specimen of inconsistency on the part of the management.

THE SECOND DINNER IN HONOR OF GOVERNOR TILLEY AND LADY A. GREAT SOCIAL SUCCESS WITHOUT THE AID OF WINE.
The Citizens Temperance dinner to the LL Governor, at the Victoria last evening, was a great success. Two hundred were present, nearly half of them ladies, and everybody seemed to enjoy himself exceedingly. The dinner was fully equal to that served the preceding evening, and the absence of wine did not mar the brilliancy of the speeches.
After the Queen had been honored the President of the United States was toasted. In response Gen. Warner expressed the thanks of his whole heart for the cordial manner in which the toast had been drunk. He was glad to be present, as it was an entertainment not only to the man but the presentation of a principle—a principle that the honored guest had observed in a strict integrity for a quarter of a century. He called upon Mr. Andre Cushing to reply more at length.
Mr. Cushing was received with cheers. He regretted the honor, as he was not gifted with the power of speech to reply with the should. There was a difficulty in replying to the toast. As to the President, personally, it would be vain for him to add anything to the eulogiums that had been passed on his military career or to discuss his administration. The sentiment had a wider significance, as it referred to the head of thirty-eight millions of free, self-governing people. He knew no political party—Tory, Radical, Conservative, or Reform—except the party of temperance men and the reform of temperance. But he was not unmindful of the important services of the honored guest, whose first election to Parliament he well remembered, having been a member of the Government of his supporters. Mr. Tilley was a man of the people, had been faithful to the people, and he hoped he would never desert the people. This evening we meet to honor the temperance reform with which he has been identified. At home returning heroes were welcomed and honored. It is not easy to forget the temperance character of the honored guest. When he came home it was natural that temperance men should desire to recognize his connection with temperance. He tendered his most grateful thanks to his Honor for his long continued labors in the temperance reform, and that steady devotion to principle that had prompted him to banish wine from Government House. I give promise of a higher civilization. His Honor had stood up for the cause when he was not able to applaud and cheer. Thousands enjoyed the happiness of a temperate life—men and women, wives and sisters—through having heeded the warning voice of the esteemed guest.
Major O'Brien, Esq., having been thanked by his labors. He believed that when the records of this time are made there will be no brighter page than that which describes the labors of temperance men. There would be none to take precedence of his Honor the LL Governor of this Province.
Hon. A. J. Smith, who had arrived during the evening, was called upon to respond for the Governor General. He said it was not necessary for him to speak of the good quality of His Excellency and his lady—a lady who possesses all the charms and virtues of her sex. He believed that His Excellency the Governor General had been more than the purpose of attention and that he had ever been his opinion of him. Those who have seen him here know that he possesses all the qualities that preeminently fit him for the position he occupies.
Sheriff Harding in proposing the health of the LL-Governor, referred to the days when he had been associated with him in the old times of their boyhood—when they belonged to the same debating society. He also referred to the entrance of Mr. Tilley on political life, and reviewed his struggles and sacrifices in the cause of Responsible Government. More lately he had given to the Government of this Province a member a moral stamina which they very much needed. [Laughter.]
Mr. Tilley's health was drunk with great applause. In reply he said his embarrassment was greater than on the previous evening. He met, he said, a cordial and hearty reception for myself and Mr. Tilley in St. John. I ask myself what are the causes that produce the enthusiasm and feeling that have been manifested. I think I have found the solution. I have for nearly twenty-five years been your representative, had your sympathy and support, and it is because the representative of Her Majesty has appointed one in whom you have confidence that you are so enthusiastic. My friend Mr. Cushing has referred to the fact that I at an early age adopted the temperance principle. I adopted it for my own protection, and I advocated it because I believed it would give me pecuniary or political advantages. But I see now that it has. I believe that I am in my present honorable position by the will of the people, and I would not continue in it if I did not have the approval of the people. I believe that I would not have gained so fully their confidence if I had not been identified with the temperance reform. I have been accused of want of consistency, but I would be unworthy of your confidence if I had proved recent to the principles of my life: to meet the objections of a few. It rejoices me to see political and non-political friends here. I shall endeavor, in my present position, to discharge the duties of my office in a constitutional manner. Like Lord Dufferin I believe that Parliament is always right. I have only to carry out the principles of the Constitution. I have had, for many years, to have a Council to think for me. I hope the close of my term of office to meet with a demonstration like this. I thank you for your manifestation of feeling, and I shall never forget it. [Cheers.]

Hon. A. J. Smith rose and expressed his pleasure at being at a demonstration in honor of the distinguished guest. He recalled him of old days when they had been together. Though circumstances had estranged them he felt that they were personal friends. They had been estranged on the question of Confederation, but he had always entertained the highest regard for him. He was ready to confess that he had been mistaken, and he had no doubt that Mr. Tilley was ready to confess himself mistaken in some things. He knew that Mr. Tilley held his high position by the will of the whole people. He regretted that he had not had a voice in the elevation of Mr. Tilley to his present office. Mr. Tilley had excluded him from Government House, and he honored him for it, and the public will honor him. He was glad to know that His Honor had been welcomed so heartily in St. John, and he knew he would honor his high position.
Mr. W. H. A. Keane proposed the Mayor and Corporation of St. John in a complimentary speech, claiming that a position in the Common Council was as important as one in the House of Assembly.
Mayor Reed replied briefly and Ald. Rowan made an able speech.
The Sheriff proposed the health of Mr. Tilley and the fair daughters of the Dominion in a speech that showed him to be an ardent admirer of the fair sisterhood.
Mr. A. A. Stockton replied in a humorous vein, claiming that married men like himself should respond for this toast always, referring to the proverbial modesty of lawyers—King's County lawyers particularly, claiming forstiers, mothers, wives and widows—and alluding to the temperance cause and its progress.
Then there were loud cries of "Boyd" all over the room, but that gentleman was too modest to reply.
Dr. Boscard rose and proposed the Clergy in a clever speech full of allusions to the points made by previous speakers.
Rev. G. W. M. Carey made a pleasing and eloquent speech in acknowledgment.
Rev. Howard Sprague was called upon. He would have prepared a short sermon, he said, if he had expected to be called for. In looking around he saw many who needed preaching. He saw the Mayor and the Common Council, many politicians, some who wanted to be politicians, lawyers, and several preachers of other denominations. He suggested that the Temperance cause be passed through the agency of the clergy, and that the clergy be equipped with the means of the present civilization.
Miss Stanton, after visiting a dry-goods store and supplying her wants in the line of gloves, etc. at the low prices prevailing here, went to the Victoria, where she became acquainted with many of the ladies and gentlemen of the dinner party. It is a great pity that arrangements had not been made for her to attend the dinner and reply to the toast of "Ladies and Literature." She should be invited here again.

Wid Life.
Capt. James Hobbs has been canvassing the city for his work entitled "Wid Life in the Far West." We trust he may be successful beyond his most sanguine expectations, as his work is replete with the wild scenes of the border, and contains much valuable and truthful narrative, having been prepared with him in some of the scenes described in Mexico, and having known him from a childhood as a truthful straightforward man.—Kansas City Times.
Agents wanted to canvass this city and vicinity. M. McLeod, General Agent.

Early Clasp.
The book and shoe and grocery stores have not adopted the early hours of the dry goods stores, though the employees are anxious to get "better terms." We are informed that some ladies, probably feeling lonely during the evening, and missing their friends at the Bank, have formed themselves into a society to aid the young men in their efforts to obtain shorter hours. They have decided not to purchase groceries, or boots, or, in fact, anything, at stores which do not close at an early hour in the evening. If any merchant, therefore, notices any serious falling off in his trade he will be the reason. This movement may secure for the young men for whom it is intended the desired boon. The young men, if they are benefited by the movement, will of course have to be much more attentive to the fair sex, and such a complaint as no escort to lectures or concerts will then be unheard of. And there will then be rejoicing in the land.
