For the CATHOLIC RECORD

THE LONELY HEART It's me that's sad an' lonesome since the white ship sailed away,

I miss the red veins o' my heart, my youngest Willie bawn, Myself here by the fireside all the long hours o' the day, My thoughts in foreign places, or be yant with him that's gone.

Whin first the ocean called to thim, although I missed thim sore, Yet whilst himself was left to me I wasn't all alone ; the day when, cold an'

stark, he passed beyant the There's none but God an' Mary left to spake to now, asthore.

But, praised be God, he's sleepin' there beside the abbey wall, Tis lonesome by the winther's fire but why should I complain?

For lyin' there so nigh to me I think I hear him call, But ne'er a whisper comes to m across the cruel main.

Tis sad to see, above the grave, a weepin' mother kneel. To know her heart is breakin' at the rattle o' the clay,

But, ah my grief, though death be 'tis more than that I feel, A hundhred times the lonesome night, a thousand times by day

Ah, pity ye the mother's heart whin the white sea foam, She sees the big ship sailin' out be yant the golden west,

For e'en tho' death manes partin', yet they're sleepin' near to

An' 'tis no sthranger's hand, asthore, that lays thim down to rest.

If only Willie bawn were here to lay me in the clay.

To place my poor old bones to rest alongside him that's gone?

His hand in mine-I'd welcome thin the breakin' o' the day, leads beyant the dawn. -REV. D. A. CASEY (COLUMBA)

THE NEW CATECHISM

The comments and criticisms of the theologian will be welcomed by the Toronto committee; but it is not his suggestions that are most needed. It is not very difficult to attain theological accuracy in an elementary book. What is really difficult is to attain a high degree of pedagogical perfection. There is no assumption of superior knowledge in writing to the committee. One does not need to be reckoned among the learned in order to make useful suggestions. Anyone who has been a teacher of Catechism, and has tried to impart real religious knowledge, has an experience which must have suggested ways and means. It is especially such experience that the committee expects to be of assistance in

Following are additional chapters of the proposed Catechism: II

THE BLESSED TRINITY

How do we become Christians and children of Our Father in Heaven? By baptism.

In whose name are we baptized? In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

Is the Father God? Yes; the Father is God. Is the Son God? Yes; the Son is

Is the Holy Ghost God? Yes; the Holy Ghost is God.

Are they three Gods? No; they are three Persons in One God.

How do you call the three Divine Persons in One God? The Blessed

Lesson Second

The three Persons of the Blessed Trinity have one name, and that is God. They are but one God. They have one and the same divine nature. The Father is the First Person, the Son the Second Person, the Holy Ghost the Third Person. The Son is born of the Father, and the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father and the Son. The three Persons are equal in all things. How there can be three Persons in one God is a mystery, that is, something we cannot explain. Our own life is full of mystery. We cannot understand how we came into the world. There is a mystery even in the beating of our hearts. It is not strange, then, that there should be much in the life of God that we cannot explain.

III GOD

Had God a beginning? No; He always was and always will be. Where is God? God is everywhere here on earth and far away beyond

Can we see God? No, not in this

Why? Because He is a Spirit, and the eyes of the body cannot see Him. When shall we see God? When we die, our souls shall see Him.

Is God good? Yes: He is good in Himself, and good to us. Does God hate anything? He hates only sin.

Lesson Third

God is the Supreme Being. All things have their being from Him Some creatures, such as plants animals, and men have life. God is life itself, and He gives life to every thing that lives. He is goodness itself, the source and infinite ocean from which all goodness flows. God is the sun of our souls. As long as the soul is in the body it can only see with the eyes of the body, and the eyes of the body can only see the sun that rises and sets. What a poor world this would be if there were no sun! Everything would die. So without God the soul dies. Not to see God in the other world is to die forever. It is eternal death; it is hell, the place of outer darkness where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth. How careful we ought to be to keep our souls free from sin lest we miss the vision of God and be cast into the outer darkness!

IV GOD THE FATHER

Who made the world? God the Father Almighty.

Did He make the sun, moon tars? Yes.

How did He make man? formed man's body out of the earth, An' I'd not fear the long boreen that and created man's soul in His own image and likeness.

Why is man's soul like God? Because the soul thinks, and is free. and will live forever.

Did God make any other beings that can think? Yes; the angels.

What are angels? They are spirits like our souls, but without bodies. Are they all good? No, some of them turned against God, as men on earth do now.

Where are the bad angels? In hell. Where are the good angels? In heaven.

"I believe in God the Father Almighty, Creator of heaven and earth.' These are the words of the Apostles' Creed. God made the world out of small, stated payments in coin or nothing by His Word only. The kind. Even the cruel debacle of the Peasants' Revolt (1381,) under John Word of God is His Son, "and the Ball and Wat Tyler, did not arrest Word was made flesh and dwelt the flowing tide of the Workers among us." He Who made us by prosperity. Fifty years after the the Word Who is His Son bought us out of the bondage of sin ducer in substantial possession of what he peremptorily demands the by this Word made flesh, giving us recovery to-day-Land and Capital, "power to become children of God" i. e., the instruments of production, and heirs of heaven. When the natural and artificial. The skilled angels fell there was no Saviour for mediæval artisan (artist in fact) was There was no bringing them back to God, so fixed was their will in evil. The leader of the fallen angels is Lucifer, also called Satan. Pride led to his fall; he wanted to be equal to God and to set up his Employer and Employed: whereas throne against God on the sides of the Craft-Guilds, as originally con the north." He said: "I will not stituted, assumed complete identity of interests. The Guilds existed be obey," and in that moment he fell like lightning from heaven. Be on of Roman origin. Any way, they your guard against pride, and obey those whom God has placed over you. Be humble, as Our Lord was humble and obedient, and the devil will have no power over you.

OUR FIRST PARENTS

Who were our first parents Adam and Eve, the first man and Where did God place Adam and Eve? In the garden of Eden.

Did they pass their whole life there? No; they were driven out. Why were they driven out? Because they sinned against God by eating of the forbidden fruit. What do we call the sin of Adam and Eve? Original sin.

What happened to us on account of the sin of our first parents? We have been all born in sin.

Lesson Fifth

God placed our first parents in a garden of delights, known as the earthly paradise. They had everything they could wish for, and were very happy. God wanted them to obey Him, and not be like the bad angel who said "I will not obey." So He told them they could eat of all the fruit that was in the garden except the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. If they ate of that fruit, they should surely diethem to eat the forbidden fruit, saying: "You shall not die, but shall be like God, knowing good and evil." ' Eve, our first mother, deceived by these words of the devil, ate of the fruit, and gave some of it to Adam, who also ate. Then their eyes were opened. Before they knew good only; now they knew evil, that is, sin. Stripped of the grace of God, they saw themselves to be naked and were ashamed. God drove them out of the garden, and set His angel at the gate with a fiery sword to keep them from ever coming back again. It was a good thing to know good only; it is a bad thing to know good and evil, as we, too, know to our

"MERRIE" TOILERS

CRAFT GUILDS vs. TRADE UNIONS

BY MORRISON DAVIDSON In the days of Henry VII., a labourer (agricultural) gained £154 per annum in our money; to-day, he earns only £30.—Thorold Rogers.

That there was a period in the social life of the English and the Scottish people too, that deserved by comparison to be called "Merrie," cannot be doubted. For nearly a couple of centuries after the compilation of the Conqueror's invaluable Domesday Book economic data can hardly be said to exist. But from the forty-third year of Henry III. (1259) downwards—thanks mainly to the researches, patient and precious, of the late Thorold Rogers — the fortunes and misfortunes of the English Worker may be traced with no small certainty. Given the Wages of Labor and the Prices of Commodities, at different dates, and it becomes sur prisingly easy to tell how it has actually fared with the Wage Earner throughout the centuries. To trace fall is, of course, a much more com plex problem. Anyhow, from about 1550 to 1520 was the Golden Age of English Labour. At least, during the whole of that period the condition of the worker, from the wretched begin-nings, steadily improved. The Barons, whatever else they might be, were not Profitmongers, and when groups of skilled craftsmen came to be formed within their manors, they were often easily induced to relin quish their feudal superiorities, and grant charters of civil incorporation on easy terms. Similarly agricultural serfs, in great able to comnumbers were able to com-mute their feudal services for Even the cruel debacle of the event they found the English Pro-

Attempts have been made to trace the origin of Trade Union back to the Mediæval Guilds. But that is clearly not so. The Unions presuppose the antagonism of Labor and Capital, of fore the Conquest and probably were were distinguished by many features which if they could but have been retained, would have been of inestimable value in the solution of the econ omic problems which menace the very foundations of modern society Nay, had they been retained in their integrity, said problems could never possibly have arisen.

The Guilds were at first quite as democratic in their organization as the Unions. All journeymen had an equal voice in the choice of Guild Managers. The artisan was suc cessively apprentice, journeyn master, just as a Member of the Ba may be student, barrister, and Judge They gradually acquired property (which in the end led to their undo ing,) charters, guild-halls, &c. A craft-brother would bequeath house and lands to found a school, or hospital it might be, leaving the sur plus income, if any, to the discretion of the Guild. These funds, and numerous benefactions for the lending of money without usury to the poore brethren; for apprenticing poor boys and girls; for bestowing marriage portions; and for pensioning widows and aged craftsmen—these the Guild Managers carefully husbanded and administered. In a word, the Guilds secured for their members, in the completest manner, all those benefits of Old Age Pensions, Insurance, &c. which the State (their ruthless destroyer) is now itself tentatively attempting to institute. Truly, tempora mutantur.

UNDOING OF THE GUILDS The pernicious influence of wealth latterly told its tale. The Guild be-

Satan envied them their happiness, and taking the form of a serpent tempted them to get the forbidden fruit, say, the forbidden fruit, say, the forbidden fruit, say, the forbidden fruit, say, the forbidden fruit say. tion," as in the Inns of Court to-day superseded Election. Prohibitory apprenticeship fees were exacted; so much so that in 1530 Parliament stepped in and cut them down from 40 shillings (16 pounds) to 2 shillings 6 pence, in order to prevent skilled labour from becoming an intolerable monopoly. Nevertheless, the Courts of Assistants continued their machinations. Journeymen remained journeymen all their lives. They ceased to be the "Associates" of the Masters and became their "hands." The Guild-brethren were brethren no more. They divided up into employers and employed—the rudiments of the antagonized "Classes" and "Masses" of to-> the coup de grace to the splendid old Guild Organization of skilled labour. In 1546, it was discovered by Henry Bluebeard, "Defender of the Faith," and the other "Reformers" of the National Religion, that many of the bequests of the Guild-brethren pro-vided for masses and other spiritual functions. Enough! The Guild estates, those of the City of London alone excepted, like the immense property of the monasteries, were confiscated at a blow, on the score of London was superstitious uses!" strong enough to weather the gale of of the Spirit." the "Reformation," and even to this day in her "wardmotes,' "liveries. annual elections, and sumptuous feasts, the "City" contrives to pre-serve the blurred outlines of a far more ancient and human democracy than anything that now goes by that Unlike the cold mechanical personally hearty and "social" in a marked degree. —Reynolds's News-

FATHER VAUGHAN ON gion FAITH AND REASON

Not long ago, Father Bernard Vaughan, the well known Jesuit of Farm street, London, lectured on the reasonableness of believing in Revelation," and now the Catholic Truth has published the lecture in pamphlet form.

Father Bernard says that his topi is most apposite in an age in which the ubiquitous Rationalist seeks to show the believer that Faith is contrary to Reason. To begin with, quotes Newman's definition that divine faith is assenting to a doc trine as true, because God, who cannot lie, says it is true." And only by vails against all assaults of the

"To believe," says, again, Thomas Aquinas, "is an act of the understanding adhering to divine truth by command of the will which is moved should discard by the grace of God." It will be seen, therefore, that every act of Faith. it was not intellectual difficulties, or his reason that kept him from joining the Cathelic Church, but that it was his will that refused to struggle with temptation and ask for grace and courage he required to take the decisive step. And, says Father Vaughan, in nearly every case, it is the will that is at the root of obstacles to faith, and not the opposition between faith and reason. For men do not believe for would have Christians, whether Cath reason that they do not If faith made demands upon the intellect only, and if it were the result merely of a process of reason in accepting the truths of Revelation

the conclusion of a proposition in In accepting the teaching of Revelation, the moral worth of a man is tried as well as the make and temper of his mental capacity. Yet the opponents of those who beon the word of another, is mental slavery. The fact, however, that our forefathers were the founders of our literatures, our constitutions, our legal institutions and charters-men | the fact of a Supreme Being. who were intellectually at good as ourselves-is surely, says Vaughan, a reason why we should not allow ourselves to be deluded by the idea that we, in our age, hold any onopoly of light.

If that science, he says, which, by its presumption and extravagant claims, were with all its discoveries sitive of the material origin of life, then to one who studied its conclusions doubt might easily and excusably come; but science has not conclusions, the foundations of faith, or by its positive dis-

All its greatest discoveries may inleed be said, rather to have added to already in existence, and as Jules the old, mysterious and cruel dogmas Simon said: "Every step in advance of orthodoxy as a substitute for the seems but to lead us to an abyss, and genuine need of religious light." He it is only feeble minds that assert or believe that they can explain all or understand all.

History has, however, says Father Bernard, shown that under the Old Dispensation, the followers of Monotheism (as against those who be-lieved in a plurality of gods) took the word of the patriarchs and prophets who from time to time rose up amongst them, to be the authorita tive voice of the living God.

Thus, we have the faith and obe dience of Noah, who toiled at the Ark for many years despite the scoffers. Then Abraham came, of his simple faith, to a land he knew not Then the Mosaic revelation with its penalties for "those that believed not" and would not obey. The Old Dis pensation made way for the new, and prophecy was fulfilled in the Miracle Nazareth as well as in the injunction that the Apostles were to go forth and teach the Truth to all na-processes of reasoning? On the con-

To us God bath revealed them by His spirit. Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit that is of God: that we may know the things that are given us from God. Which things also we speak, not in the learned words of human wisdom, but in the doctrine

Certain it is, says the Jesuit, that Newman was right when he declared that the "Apostles did not rest their cause on argument; they did not rely on eloquence, wisdom or reputation; they did not resolve faith sight and reason; they contrasted it with both, and bade their hearers be democracy of the county council, lieve, sometimes in spite, sometimes that of old Mediæval London was in default, sometimes in aid, of sight ' in | and reason.'

We are, all of us, says the Jesuit by nature and in the circumstance in which we find ourselves here below, like blind men in an unknown re

We are in urgent need of a guide in whose hand we may safely place our own with confidence that we shall not be misled. When we choose the Catholic Church, we are but choosing one who has made good her claim by the safe-conduct of souls of all nations and tribes and peoples and tongues for more than eighteen hundred years.

ANARCHIST

Some time ago ex - President Eliot of Harvard evolved from his inner consciousness a new religion, which he modestly described as "the grace can a person hope to be given that faith which endures and prediscard the dogmas of both the Cathdiscard the dogmas of both the Catholic Church and of the Protestant sects and make, so to speak, a clean slate. The underlying thought of outgrown the past, and therefore. the religious that shaped the lives of their fathers. In this theory there is no room for God, as well as man, is a party to absolute truth. Of course, divine revelation, on which Christianity is back to this revelation, they too, mustago. There are so many chains men's intellects. Break them, and man will be emancipated from intellectual bondage an

Such in outline is the character of 'the religion of the future," of which He olies or Protestants, apostatize from tize may seem to be a strong word to employ. But no other will describe fittingly the act of those who would accept Dr. Eliot's views of dogma and set out with him in search of spiritmaless creed. A much more profound thinker than the President Emeritus of Harvard has written: "Dogma has been the fundamental principle of my religion. I know no other religion. I cannot enter into the idea of any other sort of religion; religion, as a mere sentiment, is to dream and a mockery. As well can there be a filial love without the act of a father, as devotion without Dr. Eliot virtually invites his countrymen to desert Christianity and go forth in pursuit of the "dream and of which Cardinal Newmockery man speaks. The advocate of "the religion of the future" is ever on the alert for an opportunity to propagate his dogmaless doctrine. In a recent address before the Unitarian, Univer salist and Congregational clergy of Boston he dwelt upon the difficulties under which Protestant missionaries labor in heathen lands. eached and never will reach, the of these difficulties, according to him point at which it can subvert, of its is that they are "handicapped with an unpreachable faith in foreign lands." Dwelling on the intellectual characteristics of the Chinese and Japanese mind, he said that it "was utterly impossible for the intellectthe maze of mysteries which were ually honest mind to accept any of thus enumerates some of the dogma to which he has made reference If Christianity has nothing better to offer to these peoples than such dogmas as the Atonement, Original Sin, the Trinity, and an everlasting hell, then the missionary task is futile.

One of the Protestant clergymen present entered a protest against the speaker's statement as doing "an injustice" to the Evangelical churches that had rid themselves of the dog-matic incumbrances which had come under the Doctor's condemnation. Dr. Eliot answered the objection by making a distinction, which may be thus summarized: "I grant that individual members of Protestant churches have discarded dogmas, but I deny that the Protestant Churches themselves have done so officially. The actual language of the Doctor, as reported in The Universalist Leader of Boston, is: "While with the individual the correction was just, the churches, officially, and every minis ter in his ordination vows, still officially stood upon the same dogmatic ground as did his fathers, and they could not hope to win and hold the intellectually honest." Down with the dogmas of Christianity is, then the watchword of Dr. Eliot, who would have men practise all the Christian virtues, whilst re jecting with the utmost contempt the teachings of which these virtues are the flower and fruitage. For dogmatic religion he would substitute sentimental religion, which Cardinal ious parishes. Newman fittingly describes as "a dream and a mockery.' The one who champions that substitution is an anarchist of the most dangerous type. We affirm this with all deliberation. The loud-mouthed anarchist who advocates the destruction of society is comparatively harmess. His mouthings excite disgust and generate opposition. The suave and plausible exponent of methods of undermining society by discrediting the religious teachings which are the basis of Christian civilization, is far more dangerous than Herr Most and his followers ever were. It is well that the true character of Dr. Eliot's propaganda should be known.-Freeman's Journal.

THE REMINISCENCES OF A BISHOP

The late Bishop Graham, of Plynouth, Eng., gave an interesting retrospect of his career a short time He said :

ago. He said:
"Nearly seventy-four years ago I was born of Protestant parents in Mary. the East Indies. It is reported that I nearly died just after birth, and even then the unsatisfactory Anglican baptism of those days was denied me for nine months. My father seems to have determined I should enter the Anglican ministry, because circumstances had prevented his taking this line himself. So far man Britain is 4,401. proposed what was far from God's idea. The time came when, as a matter of course, four of us chilarrived in Plymouth a Nevertheless, it is not to be said based, is out of the question. It has there are no intellectual difficultural must go by the board. The new relearned from my pagan nurse. I was then put under a very strict grand. to resume his work of lecturing and writing. ties in believing or in obeying, although so great a spirit as St. Augustine tells us in his confessions that the put under a very strict grand with then put under a very strict grand mother, rather Presbyterian in her tion independently of it. As dogmas opinions and two old maiden and to resume his work of lecturing and writing.

One of the beautiful ideas attached are the embodiment of truths traced Under them, among other duties, I built as a Cathedral and converted on the fate of Ananias and Sapphira; ready to face a happier and a better I was strictly taught to be content with three meals a day and avoid such a custom as afternoon tea Thus my progress towards the Church of England ministry was looking very favorable and straight. But at the age of ten the great change took place. Both my parents had become Catholics in India, and the medical man who had attended apportion us children to Catholic ual food in the barren waste of a dog- our grandmother and aunts prepared us for the terrible Papist coming, and warned us that now our Bible and prayer-book would taken from us and we should never hear the Word of God again, but that we already knew it, and that this would not excuse us at the Last Day. In 1844 I found myself at Prior Park, where I soon became recon ciled to my terrible destiny, and in a remarkable way by my Bible-reading vas soon convinced I was in God's Church. All went smoothly till the year 1851, when I had my first attack of rheumatic fever and had to be anointed in preparation for death, just when my parents were expected from India. Upon my recovery the great question came as to what I was going to be in the future. Pexpected my father would make me an army man like himself. But my confessor asked me what I thought of being a priest, when a sudden feeling car over me of certainty and wonder that it had never struck me before. I feared, however, displeasing my father by such a choice, but my fessor found him delighted at the idea of a son a priest, and off I was sent to the English College, Rome.

Flattery is the politeness of con-

CATHOLIC NOTES

The convert community of Franciscans at Graymoor, N. Y., have issued their invitation for the observance of the annual Church Unity novena for the return of the nations to the true fold.

The new Dominican chapel at Hawick. Scotland was recently blessed and dedicated to Mary Immaculate and St. Margaret of Scotland This chapel is attached to the only Dominican escablishment in Scotland

Rabbi William Rice, of Congrega-Ind., recently addressed a meeting of Gnardians of Bigotry, at Elgin, Ill. His Jewish congregation prompt ly requested his resignation.

Oblate Sisters of the Assumption are sharing with European and Turk ish ladies the work of nursing the wounded at Constantinople. Practically all the patients are Moham-

By the will of the late Peter Reid. non-Catholic of Passaic, N. J., the income from $20,000 has been bequeathed to St. Mary's hospital, the entire principal to go to the hospital in five years.

Holy Name Day was signally ob served in practically every Catholic Church in Brooklyn and Long Island recently and it is estimated that over 50,000 men took part in the ceremonies which were held in the var-

Stonyhurst, the great Catholic College and Seminary in England, has as its most distinguished student Francis Charles. Archduke of Austria, and destined to be the future Emperor of Austria. He is Catholics of Ireland have received ith pleasure the announcement that with the approval of the Archbishops and Bishops a great national pilgrimage from Ireland to Lourdes is about to be organized and will take place next September.

Hon. James A. O'Gorman, junior enator from New York, will be Attorney General under Wilson, if a way can be found to induce the New York legislature to fill the vacancy other man of similar caliber.

The highest altar in the world is located on the summit of the Dent de Geant. There Mass is celebrated regularly for the little army of Alpine guides. These faithful honest, simple folk have erected there a col-ossal statue of the Blessed Virgin

The 1913 Catholic Directory of the British Empire give some interesting Catholic growth. total from all parts of the Empire is nearly 13,000,000. Of these 5,800,000 are in Europe, and 2,824,000 in Can-

Mgr. Benson recently had to cancel all engagements for this month owing to an operation which he was obliged dren had to come to England. I to undergo. The operation was not jabbering of serious nature. After a much needed rest Mgr. Benson will be able read the Protestant Bible daily, and into a mosque at fhe time of the lustily sang hymns and Psalms in the Protestant church; for some city shall be restored to Christian rule reason or other I was well instructed the figure of Our divine Saviour will faithful.

It is announced by the publishers an index volume will soon be issued containing besides the usual analytical index, such supplementary matter as may be necessary to round out the treatment of certain subjects, and especially to bring up to date some articles that appeared in the earlier volumes. A marble altar and rail, constructed in Italy, of material from the Carrara quarries, were dedicated recently in the Church of Our Lady of the Valley, Orange, N. J. The rail was the gift of William Runkle of Orange, and the altar was given by a person, whose name, at his own re mest, has not been announced. terian Church.

Cardinal Gibbons at present holds the distinction of being the senior active prelate of the Catholic Church. While there are still two Cardinals ranking the Baltimore churchman in senority, both are confined by illness. Cardinal Netco of Portugal, has re tired from active participation in affairs of the Vatican and Cardinal Oreglia di Santo Stefano, Nestor of the Sacred College is bedridden.

The Catholic University of America as given recognition to J. Pierpont Morgan as a patron of art. At the late meeting of the trustees, presided over by Cardinal Gibbons, Chancellor of the University, and attended by many prelates of the American hierarchy, he was formally declared a patron of Fine Arts and Letters, a special honor that gives public expression to the satisfaction with which the Catholic Church in the United States regards the eminent services to fine arts and letters rendered by Mr. Morgan.

TALES OF THE JURY ROOM

By Gerald Griffin THE SIXTH JURYMAN'S TALE

> THE SWANS OF LIR CHAPTER I

After the battle of Tailltean, the Tuatha Danaans assembled together from the remotest corners of the five provinces of Ireland, in order to make arrangements for the future government of the isle. All agreed that it was better the whole country should be united under one monarch chosen by common consent, than to continue subject to the interminable dissensions and oppressive imposts arising from the rivalry of a number of petty sovereigns. Six candidates aspired to this supreme power, name ly, Bogh Dearg, or Red Bow, of the tribe of the Deasies. Ibbreac, or the Many Coloured, from the Red Stream, Lir, Fiuvar the Royal, Mioyar, of the Great Burthen, so surnamed from his prodigious strength, and Aongusa,

When they assembled at the house of Lir, the four children were the whole Og, or young Oness.
All the rest of the Tuatha Danaans except the six candidates, then went into council, and the determination, was to give the kingdom to Bogh Dearg, for three reasons. The first reason was that his father had been a good man in his time, the second, that he was a good man himself, and the third, that he came of the best blood in the nation.

When Lir heard that the crown was to be given to Bogh Dearg, indignant at the choice, he returned to his own home, without waiting to see the new king inaugurated, or letting any of the assembly know that he was going, for he was con vinced that the choice of the people have fallen upon himself Bogh Dearg however was proclaimed in due form, by the unanimous con-sent of the assembly, none of the five rejected candidates opposing his elecon, except Lir alone

The ceremonies being concluded, the assembled tribes called on the new monarch to lead them in pursuit

"Let us burn and spoil his terri tory," said they. "Why dares he, who never had a king in his family, presume to slight the sovereign we have chosen?"

"We will follow no such counsel, and himself have always kept the province in which he lives in peace, and it will take nothing replied Bogh Dearg. "His ancestors and it will take nothing from my sovereignty over the Tuatha Danaans to follow him still to hold his own possessions there." The assembly, not fully satisfied with this reply, debated much on the course they had best take, but after much discussion, the question was allowed to rest for a time. Mean pressed heavily on the mind of Lir. His wife, whom he tenderly loved fell ill and died in three nights. The report of her death, which was looked upon as a grievous loss her own country, soon spread all over Ireland. It reached, at length, ne ears of Bogh Dearg, and of the princes and nobles who were at his

"Now," said the monarch, "if Lin were willing to accede to it, I could propose a mode of redoubling the present friendship which I enter-tain for Lir. You all know that I have three daughters, the fairest in the kingdom, and I would praise them further, but that I am their father. I mean Aov, Aoife, and Alve, of whom Lir might choose which he ed, to supply the place of his dead wife."

The speech of the king circulated among the Tuatha Danaans, and all agreed that a messenger ought to be sent to Lir in order to propose the connection, with a suitable dowry for the bride. When the ambassador arrived at the palace of Lir, he found the latter willing to accept the proposal and accordingly both returned together to the royal residence of Bogh Dearg, on the shores of Lough Derg, where they were received on the part of the Tuatha Danaans, with all the accusations that even a more popular prince could expect. All parties seemed to take an interest in promoting the union.

The three daughters were sitting on chairs richly ornamented, in a hall of their father's palace. Near Away you children of the king! I them sat the queen, wife of Bogh Dearg. When Lir and the monarch entered, the latter directed his atten tion to the three princesses, and bade him choose which he would.

'I do not know which of the three to choose," said Lir, "but the eldest is the most royal, and besides it is just that she should have precedence of the rest."

'Then," said the monarch, "that is Aov, then, I choose," replied Lir The marriage was celebrated with the magnificence becoming the rank of the parties. They remained a fortnight in the palace of the mon arch, after which they went to the residence of Lir, who gave a splen-did banquet on his arrival. In the progress of time, Aov had twins, a son and a daughter, who were named. the one Fingula, and the other Aodh, or Eugene. In her next confinement she gave birth to two sons to whom were given the names of Fiacrs and Cornu, but died herself, in a few days after. Lir was exceedingly grieved at her death, and only love he bore his children would almost have wished to die along with her. The tidings reached monarch, who, together with all his household, made great lamenta-tions for his oldest danghter, grieving more especially for the affliction which it caused to Lir.

"Nevertheless," said the monarch what has occurred need not dissolve the connection between Lir and us, for he can if he please, take my second daughter, Aoife, to supply her

This speech, as was intended, soo found its way to Lir, who set out im mediately for the palace of Bogh Dearg. The marriage was celebrated the same splendour as the former occasion, and with ceive. Frequently the old monarch came to see them to Lir's house, and often took them to his own, where he would gladly keep them. but that their father could not bear to have them out of his sight. It was the custom of the Tuatha Danaans to en tertain each other in succession subject of discourse, and the chief ornament of the day, they were so fair and so winning both in their appearance and their dispositions and even as they dispersed to their several homes, the guests were heard to speak of nothing else. Lir himsel would rise every morning at day break, and going to the apartment in which his children lay, would lie were not wide enough to comprehend them and herself, she conceived a mortal hatred against her sister'

children. She feigned illness, and remained nearly a year in that conlition, totally occupied in devising

One morning she ordered her chariot, to the surprise of Lir, who, however, was well pleased at this sign of returning health. Aoife next lesired that the four children of Lir should be placed in the chariot with her, and drove away in the direction of Bogh Dearg's house. It was much against her will that Fingula, the aughter, went into the carriage, for she had long observed the increasing coolness in the mind of her step mother, and guessed that she had present. She could not however, which she was doomed to undergo.

their residence, she went into the place where they were, and endeav oured to prevail on them to kill the children, telling them that their had slighted her, and promising to they could require.

"Ah," replied the Druids,

ather through his affection for them, pestow on them all the riches which would not kill the children of Lir for the whole world. You took an evil thought into your mind, and left your shame behind you, when you seizing a sword which lay near, "I will avenge myself for I am resolved

"Then if you will not," cried Aoife,

Saying these words, she rushed out with her drawn sword, but through her womanhood she lost her courage children. She then returned the sword to the Druids, and said she Aoife resumed her journey, and they all drove on until they reached the shores of Lough Dairvreac, on the Lake of the Speckled Oak. Here

she unharnessed the horses, and de sired the children to descend and bathe in the lake. They did as she bade, but when all were in the water.

she took a magic wand and struck them with it one after another. One after another the forms of the beautiful children disappeared, and four white swans were seen upon the water in their stead, when she addressed them in the following words:

AOIFE

malice to your father.

THE CHILDREN

In the meantime Lir, returning to his palace, missed his children, and finding Aoife not vet come home, immediately guessed that she had destroyed them, for he likewise had observed her jealousy. In the morning he ordered his chariot to be pre-pared, and following the track of his wife, travelled along until he came to the Lake of the Speckled Oak, when the children saw the chariot ap proaching, and Fingula spoke as fol

By you old Oak whose branches hoar.

Wave o'er Lough Dairvrae's lonely

Bright in the morn, a dazzling line

Of helms and silver targets shine;

the shelving strand,

Tis royal Lir himself who leads shining band.

Speed, brethren dear, speed towards

Lir came to the brink of the water.

ame with such a request to us.

they shall not live.

could not kill them.

birds.

in her mind some means of ruining he children.

down among them for a while.

wretched father, "by which you can ever be restored to your own forms on the former occasion, and Lir, after spending some time at the nonarch's palace, returned to his "None," replied Fingula, "there i no man in existence able to affect nouse with Aoife, where he received that change, nor can it ever take ner with all the love and which she could expect. For some time Aoife returned the same to him place until a woman from the south named Deocha, daughter of Ingri the son of Black Hugh, and a mar and to his children, and indeed any person who once saw those children ould not avoid giving them all the ove which any creature could re from the north, named Larigneau the son of Colman, shall occasion our deliverance in the time of The Tailgean, when the Christian faith and charity shall come into Ireland. When Lir and his attendants heard these words they uttered three dole language, he asked them how they became endowed with that surprising

"Know, Lir, replied Fingula, "that we are your four children, who, through the frantic jealousy of our step-mother, and our own mother's sister, have been reduced to this unhappy condition."

"Are there any means," asked the ful cries. 'Are you satisfied," said Lir, "since you retain your speech and reason to come and remain with us?"

"It is not in our power to do so," eplied Fingula, "nor are we at replied Fingula, liberty to commit ourselves to the hands of man, until what I have told you shall have come to pass But in the meantime we possess our speech and our mental faculties as fully as ever, and are moreover en dowed with one additional quality which is, that we can sing the most melodious airs that the world has ever heard, and there is no mortal that would not feel a pleasure in lis tening to our voices. Remain with us for this night, and you shall hear black poison of jealousy began at length to insinuate itself into the mind of Aoife. As if the love of Lir our music. When Lir had heard these words, he ordered his followers to unharness their steeds, and they remained during the whole night on the strand. listening to the music of the birds, until all were lulled to sleep by the enchanting melody, excepting Lir alone. In the morning Lir arose from the bank on which he lay, and addressed his children in the follow ing words :

In vain I stretch my aching limbs And close my weeping eyes, vain my children's moonlight hymns, For me alone arise. morn again, on wave and strand My children, we must part :

rd that like a burning brand no kindly purpose in her thoughts at Falls on your father's heart. O had I seen this fatal hour.

avoid the destiny that was prepared for her, nor escape the suffering When Lir's malignant queen First sought his old paternal tower, This hour had never been. Aoife continued her journey until s thus between the shore and you she arrived at Fiondach, where dwelt some of her father's people, whom The widening waters grow, spreads my darkening spirits she knew to be deeply skilled in the art of the Druids. Having arrived at through The sense of cureless woe. Lir departed from the lake, and still following the track of Aoife, came to the palace of Ard-Righ, or Chief King, as Bogh Dearg was entitled. The monarch welcomed him, but complained of his not having brought nis children as usual.

Alas, poor that I am !" said Lir "it is not I who would keep my chil-dren from your sight, but Aoife youder, once your darling, and the sister of their mother, who has had them ransformed into four swans, and abandoned them on the Lake of the Speckled Oak. They have been seen in that place by a great multitude of our people, who have heard the story from themselves, for they retain their speech and reason as before."

The monarch started at these words, and looking on Aoif immediately became convinced that Lir had spoken the truth. He began to upbraid his daughter in a rough and angry tone.

Malicious as you were," said he you will suffer more by this cruel eed than the children of Lir, for they in the progress of time will be released from their sufferings, and their souls will be made happy in the

He then asks her into what shape of all living creatures she would least like to be transformed. "Speak," said he, "for it is not in your power to avoid telling me the truth. Aoife, thus constrained, replied with a horrible look and tone, that there was no form which she more have separated your lives from abhorred than that of a Deamhain Eidhir, or Demon of the Air.'

joy. Your people will grieve to hear these "That form then," said the montidings, but you shall continue arch, "shall soon be yours," and while he said so he took a magic What I have done I have done collar and laid it on her. Immedi through hatred of you, and ately losing her own shape she flew away shrieking in that of a foul spirit of the air, in which she continues to this day, and will to the end of time We, left here on the waters, must be according to her deserts. tossed from wave to wave.

Soon afterwards, the monarch and the Tuatha Danaans went to the Lake of the Speckled Oak and encamped upon its shores, listening to the music of the birds. The sons of Mile likewise came thither from every part of Ireland, and formed an encampment in the same place, for the never was music comparable to that of those swans. Sometimes they re-lated their mournful story, sometimes they would answer the question proposed to them by the people on shore and talk familiarly with their rela-tives and friends, and at others they sung, both by day and night, the mos delightful music that was ever heard by human ear; so that the listeners on shore, notwithstanding the grief and uneasiness in which they continued, enjoyed as sweet sleep, and arose as fresh and vigorous, as if they had been resting in their accustomed beds at home. The two multitudes of the Sons of Mile, and of the Tuatha and when he heard the birds conversing as they drew nigh, in human Danaans, thus remained in their respective encampments, during the space of thirty years. At the end of that time, Fingula addressed her brethren as follows:

Are you ignorant, my brothers, that but one night is left of the time which you were to spend upon the lake?"

On hearing this, the three brethren grew very sorrowful, and uttered many plaintive cries and sounds of grief; for they were almost as happy on that lake, enjoying the company of their friends and relatives, talking with them and answering their ques-tions, as they would have been in their own home; more especially, when compared to the grief they felt on leaving it, for the wild and stormy sea that lies to the north of Ireland Early in the morning they came as close to the brink of the lake as they ould, and spoke to their father and their friends, to all of whom they bade a mournful farewell, repeating those pititul lines that follow

THE CHILDREN

Receive, O royal sage, our last fare well. Thou of the potent spell! nd thou, O Lir, deep skilled in mystic lore— We meet—we meet no more!

sun complete of our appointed hours We leave your happy bowers. Farewell, dear friends, till time itsel

We meet—we meet no more! ever now to human convers

On Moyle's wild waters toss Our doom till day, and night, and seasons fail,

To weave a mournful tale. Three lingering ages on the norther main To waste in various pain!

ee lingering ages in the storm west To heave on ocean's breast. is our doom, dear friends, or wintry seas, Through many a year to freeze Harsh brine and rocks with horrid sen-weed brow For Lir's soft beds of down!

No more the joy of Lir's paternal Early we part unblest!

pow'r unseen, commands that w forsake. Lone Dairvreac's peaceful lake Rise from the wave, companions of my fear.

Rise, brethren dear ! Bright wave and pebbly beach an echoing dell

Farewell, a last farewell! And you dear friends who throng th leafy

We meet we meet no more!

CHAPTER II Sadly, O, Moyle, to thy winter wav weeping, Fate bids me languish long age away, Yet still in her darkness doth Erin lie sleeping, Still doth the pure light its dawn

ing delay
Moore's Irish Melodies.

Having ended those verses, the swans took wing, and arising lightly on the air, continued their flight until they reached the Sruih na Maoile or the Sea of Moyle, as those waters were called which flowed between Ireland and Scotland. Their depart ure occasioned deep sorrow to all who witnessed it, and they had a law proclaimed throughout the kingdom that any one, from the king to the peasant, who should kill a swan, let his power be as great as it might, should meet with certain death. In the meantime the children of Lir found that they had made an unhappy change of place. When they saw the broad wild ocean around them, they grew cold and hungry, and began to fall into despair, thinking that all they ever suffered was nothing until they were sent to these seas. remained on the waters until one night it began to freeze very hard.

My loving brothers," said Fingula, we make very unwise provision against the coming night if we do not keep close together, and lest by any mischance we should lose sight of each other, let us appoint a place where we may meet again as soon as it may be in our power."

"In that case, dear sister," said the three brothers, "let us meet at the Carrig na Roin, (or the Rock of Seals), for that is a place with which we are all acquainted."

They continued thus until about the middle of the night. The wind then increased to a storm, the waters arose, and the mountains of brine, as they rolled and broke around them, sparkled in the gloom as if they had taken fire. So great was the tempest that the children of Lir were separated by the waves. All were scattered far and wide, nor could one tell whither any of the three others had been driven. At length it abated a little of its violence, the deep became more settled, and Fingula found herself alone. Not being able to see her brethren anywhere around, she felt the deepest anxiety of mind, and at length broke forth into the following

FINGULA

Heart-broken o'er these seas I glide, My frozen Tings together clinging, No more along the stormy tide, hear my brethren singing.

Three lingering ages marked by woes Since first we left Lone Dairvreac's water; Break, break my heart and give re pose To Lir's unhappy daughter.

Beloved alike, O loved so well, That made your sister's breast your pillow.

Tell me my wandering brethren tell. Where roam you o'er the billow.

Hid by what rocks or secret caves That wont beneath my wings slumber, I fear the dead will leave the graves

Ere time restore our number

Toss'd by the surge and sleety storn At random o'er this briny water: Woe, woe to all who share the form Of Lir's unhappy daughter.

Fingula remained that night on he Rock of the Seals. At sunrise the next morning, looking out in every direction along the water, she saw Cornu coming towards her with head drooping and feathers drenched with spray, so cold and feeble that he could not answer her questions. Fingula received him lovingly under her wings, and said:-"If Eugene were with us now, our condition would be tolerable."

Not long after she saw Eugene coming towards her with a drooping head and wings hanging to the ground and she welcomed him, and put him under the feathers of her breast. Immediately after she saw Fiacra approaching, and she then removed Cornu from beneath her right wing and placed him under her left, and put Fiacra beneath her right wing where Cornu had been before. then settled her feathers about them and said; Severe, my dear brothers, as you have found the last night, you must yet see many more as bad."

The children of Lir continued for a long time in the same condition on the Sruih na Maoile, until one night they suffered so much from the cold and wind and snow, that nothing they had hitherto felt was comparable to it, which made Fingula utter the following words

Hard is our life and sharp with ill, My brethren dear; The snow so thick, the wind so chill The night so drear.

We strive to keep Sad concert in our songs of pain,

But the wild deep, Relentless mars the rising strain,

Vainly we sooth our aching hearts With converse sweet,

Wave after wave, high heaving, parts Our union meet. Ah, doom severe!

Harsh was our mother's vengeful will, Ah, brethren dear,

Hard is our life and sharp with ill. They remained for a year on the Sea of Moyle, when one night, as they were on the Rock of the Seals, the waters congealed around them with the cold: and as they lay on the rock, their feet and wings were frozen to it, so that they could not move a limb, when at length, after using what strength remained in their bodies, they succeeded in getting free the skin of their feet, and the inner most down of their breasts, and the quills of their wings, remained clinging to the icy crag.

"Woe to the children of Lir!" said Fingula, "mournful is our fate tonight, for when the salt water pierces into our wounds, we shall be pained to death:" and she sung these lines

FINGULA

Sad is our hap this mournful night, With mangled feet and plumage bleed

Our wings no more sustain our flight, Woe comes to linked woe succeeding. Ah, cruel was our step-dame's mind When hard to nature's sweet emotion She sent us here mid wave and wind To freeze on Moyle's relentless ocean.

The wild sea-foam that strews the shore, The weeds those bring waves engender,

For past delights are all our store, Though fostered once in regal splen Rise, sister of three brethren dear,

Let custom dull the edge of anguish, In hollow rock or cavern drear, By doom unrighteous, bound to lan guish.

Leaving the Rock of Seals, the alighted again on the waters of Moyle, where the sharp brine pierced them, keenly, although they strove to keep their feet under their wings, as closely as they could. They continued to suffer thus until their feathers grew and the wounds of their feet were healed. They used fre quently go as near the shore as they could, on that part of the Irish coas which looks towards Scotland, and every night they came together to Moyle, which was their constant place of rest. One day as they drew nigh the shore of Bama, to the north they saw a number of chariots and horsemen, splendidly arrayed with horses richly caparisoned, approach ing from the west.

Do you observe that brillian company, you sons of Lir?" said Fingula. We know not who they are." re plied her brethren, "but they seem to be Irish; whether of the Sons of Mile, or the Tuatha Danaans, it is impos sible for us to conjecture. They drew close to the shore, in order to observe more accurately When the horsemen saw them com ing, they hastened towards them, until they came within speaking distance. The persons of note who were amongst them were Aodh Aithiosach, or Merry Hugh, and Feargus Fithcall, (of the Complete Armour,) the two sons of Bogh Dearg the Mon arch, and the third part of his body guard. The horsemen were for a long time shifting their place, in order to come near the birds, and when at length they did so, they saluted each other very lovingly, with the affec-tions which became relations. The children of Lir inquired how the Tuatha Danaans were, and especially Lir and Bogh Dhearg, with their friends and dependents.

"They are all well in their respec tive homes," replied the horsemen At present, it is true, they are in your father's palace, partaking of a splendid banquet, in health and joy, knowing no other want than that of your absence, and their ignorance of your place of abode, since you left the Lake of the Speckled Oak."

"Evil has been our life since then. said Fingula, "for neither we, nor any other creature that we have neard of, ever suffered so much as we have done since we came to the waters of Moyle;" and she uttered the following words:

FINGUAL.

We four are well, Though in keen want, and sombre

Happy are they Who sit in Lir's bright hall and share his banquet gay. Rich food and wine, For them in sparkling gold and silve shine; While far away, His children shiver in the hungr dainties fared, and silken

ments wore: Now all our fare sand, and bitter brine, for and honey rare. Our softest bed,

The crag that o'er those surges lift his head; Oft have we laid Our limbs on beds of tenderest down

Now must we lie, On Moyle's rough wave, with plumage seldom dry; A pageant rare

Oft bore us to our grand sire's palace fair. Ah mournful change ! Now with faint wings, these dreary shores I range O'er Moyle's dark tide, Plume touching plume, we wander side by side

Sharing no more joys that cheer'd our happy hearts of yore The welcome mild. on our grandsire's kingly fea ture smiled Lir's counsel meet,

And fond paternal kiss, that made the morning sweet The horsemen returned soon after to the house of Lir, and told the principal man of the Tuatha Danaans where they had seen the birds, and the dialogue they had held together, We cannot assist them," they re plied, "but we are well pleased to hear that they live, for they will be estored to their former shape, after long time has elapsed." The children of Lir meantime returned northwards to the sea of Moyle, where they remained until their time in that place had expired Then Fingula spoke to her brothers and said :

It is time for us to depart from hence, for the period appointed for us to remain here is at an end, and she added these yerses.

FINGULA

At length we leave this cheerless shore, Unblest by summer's sunshine splen did ; Its storm for us shall howl no more Our time on gloomy Moyle is ended Three hundred sunless summers past We leave at length this loveless billow; Where oft we felt the icy blast, And made the shelving crag ou pillow.

Still on our lingering night of pain, Far distant beams the dawn of glad

Light ease beside the western main. Awaits our long accustom'd sadness Long must we haunt, that billowy shore, Ere breaks for us, the day beam splendid, But here our numbered years are o'er Our time on gloomy Moyle is ended

After that time, the children of Lir left the sea of Moyle, and flew until they came to the most westerly part of the ocean. They were there for a ong time suffering all kinds of hardship, until they happened to see a man, a tiller of the ground, who used often watch them when they came near the shore, and took great pleasure in listening to their music. told the people on the coast of what he had seen and spread the tidings of the prodigy far and near. However, the same tale remains to be repeated, for the children of Lir never suffered so much before or after as they did on that very night, after the husbandman had seen them, the frost was so keen, and the snow coming so thick upon the wind. The waters all congealed into ice, so that the woods and he sea were one colour. Their feet stuck to the ground, leaving them anable to move, and they began to utter the most lamentable cries. while Fingula comforted and strove to persuade them not to grieve, but in vain; and she repeated these lines: FINGULA

Sad are my suffering brethren's piercing cries, This dreary night! Sharp drives the snow shower, o'er the moonless skies With ceaseless flight!

Where'er they search the frost-bound ocean o'er On solid ice, their thirsty beaks are ringing, Nor on the wintry shore, Fresh water laves their plumes, nor bubbling fount is springing.

II O thou dread monarch, who to sea and coast.

Their being gave, And leds't, as shadowy rumour tells a host, Through the deep wave!

old these wretched birds with pitying eyes, lingering years slavery spending, In thy great might arise. And bid our souls be free, their bonds of anguish rending. "Brothers," said Fingula, "confide in Him who made heaven and the elements, the earth with all its fruit, and the sea with all its wonders, and you will find comfort and relief."

We do confide in him." they an swered. "And I confide with you," said Fingula, "in the only being, who is full of knowledge and of pity," and their confidence came in due time, for they obtained the relief they sought, and from that day forward they never suffered trouble or per-plexity. They remained on the Oraas Domhnan, (Deep Seas,) until their time was fulfilled, when Fingula said to her brethren: "It is time for us to go to Fioncha.

where Lir and his people dwell, and "We are well are well content to do so," re plied they; "and all proceeded together somewhat joyfully, until they came to Fioncha. They found their father's palace had stood, and all around it. without either house or inhabitants, but everything look ing dreary and dull. They saw smoke at a distance, and the fear came towards it, and uttered three mourn ful cries, and Fingula repeated these words :-

FINGULA

a mournful wonder is this place to me, Which once I knew so well! Not even the trace of that loved hom I see, Where Lir was wont to dwell. Nor hound nor steed, nor lord nor lady bright, Nor welcome spoken! Since I have lived to see this mound ful sight. My heart is broken

11 This was not in our father's time of old, A loveless, lightless waste, thout a cup the sparkling wine to Or princely guest to taste.

The home where we hail'd each joy ous morn, Is bleak and lonely! And nothing left, to us its heirs for

Save memory only. Now do I know the deep devouring grave Holds all who once were dear! Sad was our life on Moyle's tempestuous wave,

But keener grief is here, Low rustling grass and winds that sadly blow Through dry leaves creeping! And he who should his cherish'd darl

TO BE CONTINUED FROM THE SACRED HEART

ings know,

For ever sleeping.

No one would have thought him a romantic figure to look at Carlo Leone that night as we sat in his window watching the sun go down. It was a dingy little window, without even the grace of a fire escape, and the room behind it was more dingy still. Carlo, in his working clothes puffing stolidly at his pipe, was no more attractive than his surround ings. The sunlight threw his shock of brown hair into relief against the window frame, cast a ruddied glow over the rugged face; and lingered long in the brown Italian eyes. They were nice eyes, though their owner was only a shocky laborer, and particularly nice just now, for a warmer light than the sunset's own shining in them.

Other men in the great city of San Francisco might see a girl's face in their smoke wreaths, but surely no lovelier face looked out from the Land o' Dreams that night than Angela's. Carlo knew every line of it by heart, the rose and cream of the skin, the melting curve of the dark lashes, the very twist of the silky tendrils that were always escaping from Angela's blue-black braids. floated before him now, shutting out the roofs with their teeming life, the alleys with their dirty, swarming children. Sometimes the dear face smiled: but mostly it was sad, wistfully, sweetly sad, and the lips had a downward droop as they whispered their "Mio Carlo!" Ah! poor little Angela.

Carlo's mouth grew sterner as he watched the face of his dream, but his eyes were tenderer than ever. Presently he rose and knocked the ashes from his pipe against the winwould go down to Marcelina was gossipping on the landing as usual, but she turned at once when she saw Carlo ming down the stairs and pushed open the door into her sitting even the biggest rocker creaked when she sat down, but she laughed comfortably, and the rolls of fat under her chin shook with mirth.

"Hark how the chair complains, so fat I am!" said she. "And what news hast thou from our little one

Madre Marcelina would always look upon Carlo and Angela as chilfor she had cared for both since their babyhood. She was aunt to Carlo, and godmother to slender Angela, in Catholic Italy, where it meant something to be godmother to an orphan baby. The two had grown p under her watchful eyes; play-nates at first, then sweethearts, and then, with the family's immigration to America they had been betrothed with the understanding that the wedding was to be as soon as Carlo could earn enough for a home. But for three years now the little house had waited, and still Angela had not come to fill it with Italian sunshine.

Carlo was thinking of this as he turned his hat in awkward fingers making up his mind how he should Madre Marcelina's question he said at length No news,' "She is no better. The Signora says it is too soon to tell yet. But it is of that I wished to speak-Madre," he burst out suddenly, am weary of novenas! If it had been the will of God that she should walk, the Sacred Heart would have cured her long ago. It is three years now since the accident, and for three years thou hast said to me wait-it is not right that thou shouldst have a helpless bride Wait till Angela can walk again.'

And she can not walk! yet she is not ill, no, nor in pain! I love her, I will wait no longer! If the goo God means to heal her, He can heal her just as well when we are man ried! I will wait no longer for It was a long speech for the stolid

Carlo, and what was worse to Madre Marcelina's mind, a rebellious one. She glared at him for an instant with her sharp little eyes, too amazed to speak. Then she let loose the torrent of her wrath upon him. Fool! she called him, idiot! imbecile! to marry a girl chained to a wheel chair when he might have the pick of all the Italian maidens in San Francisco! If he must have a wife, let him choose a woman who was not already a living corpse! She would take care of Angela loved the child! but she did not mean that he would throw himself away. Or, if Angela it must be, let him wait till the lady doctor, to whose home Angela had been taken a week ago, should have cured the girl of her affliction!

'For," argued Madre Marcelina shrewdly, "if he will only wait long enough, he will learn that other maids have eyes with curling lashes. As for Angela, she will be taken care of—she has sense in her head, that girl! she would not wish to ruin his

But Carlo sat unmoved through her tirade. Now he got up to go.
"To-morrow I shall tell Angela to make ready for the wedding," he said

His mouth was still set in that stubborn line when he turned into the little church to offer his petition—the same that had been on his lips each day since Angela had been left a cripple by that wretched acci-For weeks he had begged the Heaet not only that she might live, but now, to all appearance, she was rosy and well, and to Carlo's simple mind it seemed a diabolical miracle that she could not As he looked into the kind bronze face above him the convic tion grew that his decision was right. He would marry Angela; then, healed or not, she would always be his own. Novenas could be answered quite as well after their wedding - and how: much happier they would be!

All night long the thought of it lightened his step as he went his rounds in the bank where he was watchman; all night long Angela's face peeped at him from every corner. He even caught himself whistling softly, a thing he had almost abandoned since the girl's illness. There would be something to work for now, of a certainty Madre Marcellina should leave her two rooms and live with them, just as they had planned, save that his work would be no easier till be could earn more money. His heart leaped when the dawn began to creep up the sky, the dawn of their wedding How Angela's wistful face would brighten at the news! He noted the date on the big calendar, how brightly it would shine among the dark ones of her last three years that eighteenth of April, nineteen

It was a little after five when he began his last round, still with the glamour of those letters in his eyes. At ten minutes past he flung open one of the windows and took a deep breath of the cool morning air. Afterward he remembered thinking what a perfect day it promised to

While he stood there erect the street rose suddenly in great swells, like the ocean in a gale—the buildings opposite began to sway crazily the floor under his feet shuddered like a living thing—and tilted upwards! Carlo swung himself over the window ledge, and ran to the middle of the street, out of seen earthquakes before. His face was white as he tried to keep his feet in the midst of that monstrous tur moil. The air was filled with sinis ter growlings-the crash of crumb ling walls — stabbed by a distant shriek. A thick, whitish-yellow dust clouded the sky—began slowly to settle—and the earth was quiet once

Carlo waited a few minutes longe to be sure all was over, then, mind ful of his duties, he thrust his rosary back in his pocket and turned to the building. No need now of the keys in his hand! A good half of the wall lay in ruins, the remainder overhung the walk so far it seemed breath would dislodge it. Within, a safe leaned drunkenly to one side the iron grating was twisted as though by a gigantic hand. The young fellow scrambled over the pile of bricks and cautiously began his interrupted round.

He dared not let himself think of Madre Marcellina — of Angela, so helpless in her chair. The holy angels keen them! he could not leave his post. The clang of the fire gong; far off in the residence district, sent a shudder through him. Ah, But if he left the bank, he whose faithfulness had been his

So he plodded wearily back and forth, his face drawn with that inward struggle. Policemen hailed him, bade him seek a safer place in one of the open squares, or on a hill-Sometimes he had to beat back furtive-eved creatures, who started up from the ground, rat-like, to plunder the ruined buildings. He was glad when they appeared. least it gave him something to do. Fire broke out in everywhere now. An hour later men said that water had given out-and Carlo sent up an agonized petition to the Sacred Heart. Still he did not leave his post.

It seemed an eternity before a disheveled man appeared, in whose haggard look Carlo recognized the bank's president. Any other time the great man would have passed him with a condescending "Good morning," but to-day he wrung the young Italian's hand. "Leone, we'll remember this!" he said. There were others with him; Carlo caught the blue uniforms and heard scraps of talk about dynamite and the spreading flames as he hurried away. What instinct guided him through the confusion he never knew. Armed men turned others back, out Carlo pushed on beneath the very muzzles of their guns. Perhaps something in the desperate young face made them give way, even against their better udgment. And so at last he reached the northwest edge of the city, where Angela had been left in the doctor's home-was it a week-or a century

All about him was the havoc the earthquake had wrought. The fire was not serious as yet, but the stately houses were racked and broken out of all semblance of beauty. Often walls were down; the rooms, their intimate life wide-open to the street, seemed to cower back, ashamed. Carlo went numb from head to foot when he saw the doctor's pretty home; its vines crumpled, dis leveled floors aslant, doors swung wide. He had known it would be so; but for a moment he was physically sick too sick to move. strength came back with the rush of fire in his veins and he flung himself into the ruin, calling Angela wildly. Yet all the while he knew she would not answer, and when he stumbled out again, satisfied that she was not there, his face was strangely old. He wandered aimlessly after that, back across the stricken city, where open. the flames were even now completing the work of destruction. He met friends and neighbors flying to safety with such goods as they could carry —strange trophies indeed, most of them bore! He heard crisp orders, the wail of a child, continued explo sions and the noise of falling walls, and everywhere the scrape of trunks dragged along the sidewalks. But Angela's name ran a piteous knell in his ears and he saw only her despair-

ing, helpless eyes. Unconsciously he turned in the direction of the little church, the church that Angela had loved, the church where he had found comfort so many times before. It sent a fresh pang through his heart to find it half in ruins and a group of blue-coated men preparing to shatter the remaining walls with dynamite. The Bless ed Sacrament was safe, they told him the priest had rescued that; and the church must go in one way or another. If those walls were down they hoped to hold the fire there.

Across the piled bricks Carlo caught a glimpse of a familiar figure, the beautiful bronze head, the hand upraised in benediction, of the Christ of the Sacred Heart. How desolate it looked-and how loving! Carlo's throat tightened suddenly; stinging tears filled his eyes. At the statue's feet he and Angela had knelt their first Sunday in San Francisco; there he had spent that dreadful morning when none knew whether Angela of the judgment. would live or die; there he had come passed through the to make his thanksgiving when they told him she would get well. pitying face had strengthened him in sorrow, had smiled upon him in joy. And how Angela had loved the Sacred Heart! He turned to the man beside him. "Will you wait one instant, Signor long enough for me to bring out the Sacred Heart? It will be no more than a moment." In truth it was very little more burden, yet somehow he managed to free it from the debris about it and stagger back to the sidewalk with it in his arms. The watchers muttered something about a "fool Italian," but Carlo did not care. His spirits had risen unaccountably at the first glance into those pitying eyes. The Sacred Heart was kind; surely Angela was safe somewhere

All that day he kept his treasure with him, and the wearier his arms grew with its weight, the lighter grew his heart. A hundred possibilities suggested themselves now; the doctor might have taken Angela across the bay the night beforethere was a hospital over there in which she was interested, there had even been some talk of their going. or-she had an automobile-she and Angela might be miles away from danger by this time. But most cer-tainly she would let no harm come to Angela, whatever happened. So he comforted himself, and set out to find Madre Marcellina

Telegraph Hill seemed the like liest place; there where men of all nations were gathered in strange friendliness: where soft-eyed Filip-inos sat side by side with swarthy Mexicans, where Italy and Hawaii jostled each other, with even an occasional Hindu or slant-eyed Chinese for neighbor. It was an orderly quiet crowd for the most part; the majority had lost all they possessed, but they were poor people used to such accidents, and to making the best of things. They went getting the evening meal as best they might, those who had sharing with those who had not. Some of them jested; a few of the children, recovering from their fright, were playing games. From one group to another went Carlo, questioning, till at length he found the object of his search Madre Marcellina was squatted be side a smoldering fire making coffee in a very dirty tomato can and eating a bit of bread and sausage from equally dirty fingers. She looked up with the same disapproving eye with which she had greeted Carlo of old when he loitered on the way home. So?" she said, "thou art here at Where hast thou been all this time?" but there was an unwonted huskiness in her voice.

As dusk closed down more one shadowy figure came to kneel be fore the Sacred Heart where Carlo had placed it on the ground beside Men blessed themselves and him bowed their heads as they passed, mothers brought their little children. women crouched there and wept their hearts out, clasping the bronze feet with pleading fingers. The fire cast strange lights on the gentle face of the Christ; His Sacred Heart seemed to catch and hold the flame, His upraised hand to rain benedictions And few indeed there were who left His feet uncomforted.

Carlo himself knelt long before he stretched out on the ground to get what sleep he might. He could not oray, but the peace in his soul grew deeper with every glance into the bronze eyes. If he had loved that, statue when it stood in the flower lecked shrine of the church, he loved it tenfold more now-it spoke eloquently of the loving kindness of the Sacred Heart. His last act was one of submission to the will of God, and so he fell asleep.

The dawn was a marvelous sight; the glittering lances of the sun driven through the lurid clouds that hung above the town; the fire beneath burning green and gold and red, a many-colored sea of flame. Those on the hilltop watched it wearily they thought more of the problem of food for that day and of the stiffness in their bones from the night in the

As soon as there was light enough to see, Carlo began a systematic search for Angela. The open squares the parks, Russian hill—wherever homeless ones had taken refuge this new hope of his told him she might be there. Madre Marcellina went to stand in the bread line, muttering angrily about it, and repeating the roll of her wealthy Italian rela tives to all who would listen.

Mid-morning found Carlo returnng, weary, heavy-eyed. He had been turned back by the soldiers again and again; he had seen Death pacing through the smoke that shrouded San Francisco's broken heart; he had not found Angela. He watched the refugees dully: of what use was this struggle? Far better to die quickly, since die you must in one way or another; if not by flame then by starvation. Chicago was swept away, so they said, the ruins of Denver burning, Los Angeles wiped out Perhaps it was the Last Judgment! Carlo crossed himself at the thought. Sacred Heart, have mercy on us!

he whispered.

He climbed the hill with dragging feet. He would kneel once more be fore the statue, appeal once more to human and divine. that Heart, both But this time he would ask for peaonly-and the strength to face what lay before him, be it the long, lonely years till death should call him to Angela's side, or the swifter terrors Unseeing, he passed through the crowd, his head bowed upon his breast. Someone else had sought comfort at the poor shrine, a girl was pros trate there, her slim hands gripping the bronze feet desperately. Her long dark cloak swathed her figure in mournful folds, and over her shoul ders hung two blue-black braids thick as her white wrist. And from head to foot she shook with the force of Carlo started and stared. Just so Carlo was young and strong—and desperate. The bronze figure was had curled about her ears! Angela's hair had hung in braids-

"Angela," he gasped hoarsely,

The girl started up, pushing bac her hair from her hot, tear-stained face. A moment she looked, belief and joy dawning through her despair then before Carlo could go to her. she ran into his arms with an exult

"O Mio Carlo! art thou here? and safe?" Her fingers clutched him hungrily, not quite sure that he was A little longer they clung to each other, whispering tender childish names, forgetful of the world. Finally Carlo held her off at arm's length n amazement. Was this the Angela e had left in a wheel ehair, a help less cripple? "Canst thou walk, little one?" he asked. And Angela lifting a glowing face his. "The Sacred Heart has cured to his.

me!" she said. It would take too long to repea the doctor's explanation of the mir-acle, and neither Carlo nor Angela understood or cared one jot for it. Angela had been well long ago, it seemed, but the muscles so weak, so unused, had seemed paralyzed to the girl; she had been afraid to attempt walking and so had grown more and more helpless. And the excitement of the earthquake, her fear for Carlo had been just the shock she needed to rouse her. For the rest, the doctor helped Carlo provide for them during the days that followed, helped him find work in the new city that resently sprang up, and was Angela's attendant at the wedding in the old Mission Dolores But Carlo and Angela, kneeling side by side before the bronze figure of the Sacred Heart, and teaching their wee Angela to lisp her prayers, know most certainly that whether it be miraculous or not, their great happi-ness came direct from the loving Heart of Our Lord.—Lucile Kling, in Benziger's.

GOD'S MYSTERIOUS WAY

Strange stories are told by hospital chaplains of God's astounding mercy o poor sinners. Almost without ap parent reasons, souls are saved b fore one's eyes that seemed beyond redemption. Miracles of grace are enacted that make one thrill with awe and reverence and love of the Christ becomes at times so manifest that we fall on our knees, almost frightened in presence of the super natural.

I often visited a brother priest who was chaplain in one of the most prominent hospitals in the country. He had been there for many years and was a striking figure, as day by day he went around the various wards and private apartments, doing God's blessed work in his gentle, persuasive way. His hair was snowwhite, but his figure was erect and well-knit, his clerical dress faultless and he was most impressive in his manner of offering prayers. Many a one listening to his deep sonorous voice devoutly land slowly annuncia ting every sacred word, went away with his petitions to God stamped on their souls—a help to their future perseverance.

"One day I visited him in his apartments and he seemed pre occupied. I asked the cause."

I am standing silent, as it were, before a case of God's wonderful mercy

Downstairs a man has been bedridden for some months. When he came to the hospital I tried to find out what religion he professed, or if he had any at all. He would not speak a word. He seemed impatient of my presence, and even turned away his head irritably when I went near him. After innumerable attempts to awaken his interests I gave up the task, begging the Sisters who never failed to elicit some signs of gratitude or appreciation, to find out something about this silent patient. But they were unsuccessful. Even to the doctors this man barely replied in monosyllables—and soon was left severely alone—although every effort was still made for his omfort and assistance. Month after month passed by, but no impression was made on the poor fellow and his disease became so offensive that it was all one could do to stand for any length of time at his bedside.

Again and again he was spoken to about his soul. He never gave an answer or made any comment no matter how impressive his visitor might be. At last only a few words. or a prayer, with an inspiration, was said by those who could not bear to ee him die without one word concerning his soul or life to come.

"Six months had passed by unavailingly, so it appeared. The man seemed stolidly indifferent. Few had heard him speak."

"But this morning one of the nursing Sisters passed his room Something impelled her to enter and say a kindly greeting. Then she asked him if he wanted anything.

"Investment Bonds"

A new edition of our 24-page booklet, "Invest

Copy on Request

A. E. AMES & CO. INVESTMENT BANKERS MONTREAL TORONTO .

' Yes!' he said very distinctly,

May I have a drink of water?"
"Certainly, said the Sister, and she at once went in and returned with a glass of fresh water.

"He thanked her, and while she raised his head and assisted him to drink, she ventured to say as he tried to swallow a little: 'How refreshing that water seems to be to you! That is the way baptism is to the immortal soul! Of course, you have been baptized!"

No,' said the sick man. 'I have never been baptized: I don't belong to any church. If I did, I would be long to yours.

"' And would you wish to be bap-tized a Catholic?' asked the Sister eagerly.
"'If I could, I would,' he replied.

No one ever asked me.'
"'Why, I thought you had been spoken to repeatedly about religion, said the nun, amazed.

I didn't understand,' said he wearily But you understand now," said You want to be baptized so she that you may reach heaven!

Yes, that's what I want. Wait a minute,' said the Sister and she quickly came to my room and amazed me by telling me No. 46 wanted to be baptized. I sprang to my feet and stole in hand

In an instant I saw the shadov of death on his face.
"'You want to be baptized, my on?' I said. 'You believe all the Holy Catholic Church teaches "I want to be baptized' I do be lieve,' came distinctly from his lips

"I seized the glass of water the Sister had brought him. It was nearly full. I poured it over his forehead, baptizing him in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost! As I said, 'Thanks be to God,' and turned to the Sister who was beside me with a towel in her hand, she said: 'Look, Father!'
"I turned to the bed; the man was gasping! In one second he was

"How long ago was that?" 'Less than an hour. And now, Father Alexander, can you tell me how that man received the grace of the sacrament of baptism, or how it was that the Lord's mercy lingered about him, refusing, as it eave him until his soul was saved? These are the endless questions I ask myself as I minister day by day to the countless cases that come into this great hospital. these marvels!" We were both silent and at last he said :

What wonders will be revealed at the Judgment Day! but the great est of all will be the mercy of God. -Richard Alexander in The Missionary.

THE DECLINE OF PROTESTANTISM

In his "Histoire des Variations des Eglises Protestantes" Bossuet quotes a homily in which St. Chrysostom "Novelty begets novelty, and savs: when once one has begun to err one goes astray endlessly." It seems to me that the present condition of Protestantism illustrates the remark. Its leading men have been so eager each to bring forward something new that they have left Protestant Well, Father Alexander," he said. Christianity without any ground-

Take up any paper which gives a general record of religious events and you will be sure to discover in it two phenomena. On the one hand, you will find indications that Protestantism, at least so far as church attendance and other outward observnces are concerned, is falling away, and, on the other hand, you will read utterances of Protestant ministers in which tenets that were regarded by the founders of Protest antism as essentially necessary to its preservation, are rejected and new views discountenancing any definite standard of belief are expressed.

In the Daily News and Leader published recently, these are conspic uous features. Under the heading "Fewer Church-goers in Liverpool," are given the results of a Sunday church attendance census taken by the "Liverpool Daily Post and Mer The figures do grave injustice to the Catholics, for account was taken only of the attendance at 11 o'clock Mass, whereas, as every Catholic knows, in a great city such as Liverpool, where there are many Masses at the churches on Sunday morning. in order to get anything near an ac curate idea of the number present a the Sunday morning services the 11 o'clock figures would have to be mul-But even as they stand the tiplied. figures show a Catholic increase. The aggregate attendauce, morning and evening, at the Catholic churches in 1902 was 35,330; now it is 38,262. Protestants of all denominations have not only not kept pace with the growth of the population, but the at tendance is considerably lower than it was ten years ago. The Anglican attendance numbered 67,898 in 1902, and only 57,932 when the census was taken on Sunday, December 8. Of the Nonconformists 66,712 attended service in 1902, but not more than 52,462 go to church now.

What are the causes of the falling away among the Protestants? One of them surely is doctrinal variation, a variation which just at present is dissociating itself from the past of Protestantism and verging towards the theory that it does not matter what you believe if you only believe something. In the same issue of the Daily News and Leader there is given an interview with the Rev. Dr. Munro stock in this particular institution.

Gibson, who has been for thirty years a Presbyterian minister of a London church, and in it he is re London church, and in it he is reported to have said: "We go to the Bible for a vision of the human soul in its aspiration Godward-its aspir ation towards God and its inspira tion from God. Now you cannot represent that by dogmas. got away from that. You You must express it in terms of human life, in pictures of actual human experience The new message is not God in a Book, but God in the men that wrote the Book-not God in a dogma, but God in human experience. sounds like the Catholic doctrine that in order to get the true meaning of the Bible you must have recourse to a safe interpreter. But to whom loes Dr. Munro Gibson point as a safe interpreter? Beyond speaking of without guide or compass.

By whose experience is the Protestant to be led? Is he to evolve his doctrines from his own experience or to accept them as suggested by the experience of the gentlemen in pulpits? In either case what safe guard is there for the maintenance of essential Christian doctrine, for men's own experience varies with the lapse of time, and ministers' experiences differ, and if there is authority neither in the Church nor in the Bible to keep people right, what is to preven them from mixing up Paganism with Christianity or wandering entirely into Paganism?

Anglican clergymen are not less notable than Presbyterians for advocating a Christianity that practi cally bids men to nothing definite. Dr. Inge, Dean of St. Paul's, is report ed by the Morning Post to have said recently on the occasion of the delivery of the annual Jowett Lecture at the Passamore Edwards Settle ment by Canon Rashdall: "We really could not identify the Church of God with any particular institution or organization. It was antecedently very improbable that God should have chosen to do His most important work by means of a system of privilege and nonopoly. That system worked badly in human affairs, and there was no evidence that the Church which He had founded was intended to be worked in that way.

It became increasingly absurd to attach enormous importance to such mechanical divisions as the peculiar method of the devolution of the ministry of the verbal expression of various articles of faith. language is not unlike that of the What are the hidden causes of all Persian "Prophet," Abdul Baha, who had come to Europe to proclaim that the differences which exist among religions to-day have their origin in blind imitation and dogma." When it is heard so frequently among the Protestants of this country who can wonder that the ministers are losing hold of their congregations and that the people are lapsing into complete The prospect created by this state of things must cause uneasiness to every sincere Christian. England is rapidly drifting away from Protest ant Christianity. Has Protestantism got in it the capacity to bring it back? I think all who have studied the sub ject must say it has not. The drift ing of the people is due in no small measure to the drifting of the clergy. and such being the mental condition of the ministers, how is it to be ex pected that they will inspire their flocks with enthusiasm for doctrine about which they themselves feel no earnest emotion? If the Protest ant churches fail to bring back the

THIS MONEY-MAKING BOOK IS FREE

Tells of an Investment Safer and More Profitable Than Bank or Railroad Stock.

Endorsed by Leading Bankers Government Officials and the Catholic Hierarchy and Laity.

A valuable book of interest to and or circulation only among Catholics nas just been issued, and will be sent free and postpaid to any reader the CATHOLIC RECORD who has $20 or nore to invest. The book tells of a line of business that has and is paying enormous dividends, and which is being sup-ported by Catholics to the extent of $75,000,000 a year. It contains most complete facts and figures relating to this particular business and the as-tonishing dividends paid stockholders It shows how Catholics may, for the first time, now become stockholders and receive their share of the profits of this great business. The stock old established companies in this line is worth ten to twenty times par value, and original investors are re ceiving 100 per cent. dividends.

This is not a get-rich-quick scheme, but a high-class, legitimate busines enterprise, indorsed by leading banks and the Catholic hierarchy and laity. This is the opportunity of a life time to make a safe and profitable investment, and worth the attention and investigation of every conservative investor

If you would like to have a copy of this book, address Philip Harding, Dept. 614 J, Box 1301, Philadelphia,

Mr. Harding requests that no one write simply through idle curiosity and unless you are a member of the Catholic Church the book will be of no interest to you, because only Catholics will be permitted to hold

UTOMOBILES, LIVERIES, GARAGE

R. HUESTON & SONS and Garage. Open Day and Night Bon-Ton Live

BARRISTERS AND SOLICITORS

FRANK J. FOLEY BARRISTER-AT-LAW

FINANCIAL.

THE ONTARIO LOAN & DEBENTURE CO'Y. Capital paid up, $1,750,000. Reserve $1,350,000 peposits received, Debentures issued, Real Estate Loans made, John McClary, Pres.; A. M. Smart, Mgr. Offices: Dundas St., Cor, Market Lane, London.

multitudes in this country who are Christians merely in name, what will happen? That is a question for most anxious thought. To Catholics the reflection must occur that the opportunity offered to the Catholic Church entails upon them responsibilities of which they should en deavor to avail themselves to the fullest extent .- L. K. in Catholic

A thing very pleasing to Our Lord and profitable to the soul is to offer Him our heart with much affection, that He may dwell therein, and then to have a treasure of good works to present to Him; for the Jews after receiving Him with great pomp, let Him leave their city without giving Him to eat.

You will have to work and maybe fight. What is called good fortune isn't set before you on a silver platter. It is caught, cleaned, cooked and served by you, and it is served to yourself. Not that others cannot share it. By no means. The right reason for working or fighting tune eaten alone is twenty times as itter as sulphate of quinine in its flaky state, without a coating. But the great thing to remember about good fortune is this,-that you your self are it!-Leigh Mitchell Hoges.

Catholic Mind Pamphlet

Removal of Parish Priests MAXIMA CURA)

Translation of the Decree of the Sacred Consistorial Congregation, Aug. 20, 1910

10c. Each The Catholic Record LONDON, CANADA

Postpaid to Any Address

Catholic Confessional Sacrament of Penance

ILLUSTRATED By REV. ALBERT McKEON, S. T. L. Paper, 10c. Cloth, 15c. Postpaid

The Catholic Record LONDON, CANADA

Catholic Home

Annual, 1913

A Guide Book for Catholics

Contains a list of Feast and ast Days, Gospels, Daily Calendar, Etc.

Justification

By Anna Blanche McGill The Festival of the Rose By Isabel J. Roberts

The Worst Girl in the School By Karl Klaxton In St. Martha's Country

By Grace Keon Maxims and Counsels of Saints and Spiritual Writers By Rev. F. X. Lasance

The Forget-Me-Not Pond By M. E. Walton

Bells Ring in the New Campanile at Venice Pamela's Suitors By A. Raybould

St. Joseph's By Mary E. Mannix The Hired Girl

By Mrs. Francis Chadwick How We Should Live Our Life By Rev. Gabriel Palau, S. J

Little Miss Midas By Marion Ames Taggart Our Neighbor at the North

By Rev. E. J. Devine, S. J. The Last of Ten
By Rosa Mulholland Gilbert

Safe From Life's Storms By Henrietta E. Delamare Some Notable Events

YOU NEED ONE Price 25c. Postpaid

The Catholic Record LONDON, CANADA

The Catholic Record

Price of Subscription —$1.50 per annum. United States & Europe —$2.00. " " ublisher and Proprietor, Thomas Coffey, LL., D.
EDITORS—Rev. James T. Foley, Thos. Coffey, LL., D.

Associate Editors-Rev. D. A. Casey H. F. Mackintosh ed and recommended by the Archbishop o, Kingston, Ottawa and St. Boniface, the of London, Hamilton, Peterborough, and arg, N. Y., and the clergy throughout the

J. Hagarty, Mrs. W. E. Smith and Miss Sara Hanies and Miss O. Herringer are fully authorized to receive subscriptions and transact all other business for the CATHOLIC RECORD. Obtuary and marriage notices cannot be inserted except in the usual condensed form. Each insertion

Ocents.

For the publication of special notices such as

For the publication of special notices such as

Favors received. etc., the price is 50 cents.

When subscribers ask for their mail at the postoffice it would be well were they to tell the clerk to give them their CATHOLE RECORD. We have information of carelesses in a tew places on the part of delivery clerks who will sometimes look for s changing residence will please give old ell as new address

St. J-hn, N. B. single copies may be purchase
Mrs. M. A. McGuire. 249 Maine street
LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION

Apostoltc Delegation Ottawa, June 13th, 1905. r. Thomas Coffey My Dear Sir—Since coming to Canada I have en a reader of your paper. I havenoted with satis tition that it is directed with intelligence and slitty, and, above all, that it is imbued with a tong Catholic spirit. It stremously defends Cathic principles and rights, and stands firmly by the achings and authority of the Church, at the same promoting the best interests of the country, slowing these lines it has done a great deal of sold for the welfare of religion and country, and it ill do more and more, as its wholesome influence aches more Catholic homes. I therefore, earntry recommend it to Catholic families. With my essing on your work, and best wishes for its connued success.

Yours very sincerely in Christ, Donatus, Archbishop of Ephesus, Apostolic Delega

LONDON, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1913

THE LATE BISHOP O'CONNOR

By the death of His Lordship Bishop O'Connor of Peterborough the Church in Canada loses a loyal son, a stalwart defender, a holy and able bishop.

A year and a half ago, when the late bishop celebrated his golden jubilee as a priest, he appeared to be one of the most vigorous of the prelates and priests assembled to pay their tribute of sincere respect and appreciation, and to thank God for his fifty years of fruitful service in the Master's vineyard.

Born at Listowel, County Kerry, Ireland, in 1838, Richard Alphonsus O'Connor came to Canada with his parents in his childhood. He was the first student enrolled at St. Michael's College, Toronto, where he received his collegiate training. After his course of theology in the Grand Seminary, Montreal, he was ordained priest in Twenty-eight years he labored as a years. In 1889 in succession to vast diocese taxed even his great physical strength, and in 1905, at his northern district into the new Diocese of Sault Ste. Marie, of which a child of the diocese, whom the late Bishop had raised to the priesthood, the Right Rev. David Scollard, was made the first bishop.

Simple in his life and habits, a word, Bishop O'Connor was a man o very decided convictions, not easily moved, yet singularly open-minded where difference of opinion was based on reasons that he had not fully considered.

His great capacity for work, his apostolic zeal, his gentle yet remarkably firm character endeared him to his own people, and commanded, the genuine respect of those outside the household of faith.

To the priests and people of the Diocese of Peterborough the CATHO-LIC RECORD extends its heartfelt sympathy while it joins them in the fervent prayer for the great soul of the departed Bishop. Eternal rest give to him O Lord; and let perpetual light shine upon him.

THE GOLDEN AGE FOR THE BRITISH WORKMAN

We desire to call particular attention to the article (Merrie Toilers) from Reynolds's, the great organ of the British workingman.

The comfortable Protestant tradition is that the Reformation in England was not the result of Henry VIII's quarrel with the Pope over the divorce, but the culmination of a long struggle of the English people for national independence. Histori cal research, as we have shown, completely shatters this position.

The people of England were bitterly opposed, and with good reason, to the course which Henry, impelled by passion and the spirit of absolute power, was driven to pursue.

This Dr. Gairdner categorically

" It was a contest not of the English people, but of the King and his government with Rome.

"As regards national feeling the people evidently regarded the cause of the Church as the cause of liberty. That their liberty suffered grievously by the abolition of papal jurisdiction under Henry VIII., there can be no

If we have insisted so strongly or this truth easily recognized by Catholics, it is because it is overlaid with three centuries of misrepresentation on which is based the popular Protestant tradition and belief that the Reformation ushered in an era of liberty and material progress.

Liberty suffered grievously not only under Henry VIII., but down to the present day.

Material progress itself, or what nas boastfully been so considered, is pased on the ruins of liberty. Today, when labor arrayed against capital threatens the very existence of civilization, we do not boast so much of colossal wealth. Only the unthinking now glory in the fact that Dives goes to their church : serious men no longer consider it a convincing argument against the Catholic Church that Lazarus and his fellows find therein a home. History is interesting inasmuch as it throws a light on the past; but history is useful in so far as it throws a light on the future.

Modern social conditions make the study of the history of social conditions in the past imperative. And it is consoling that the working man who cared little for Protestant tradi tion or Protestant pretence has his attention directed to the status of English workmen before the miscalled Reformation.

We want to direct our readers attention to the fact that the hundred and fifty years before the Reformation was the GOLDEN AGE OF BRITISH WORKMEN.

THREE CENTURIES OF ROMAN ISM IN SOUTH AMERICA"

II

"The Church of Rome," says the Presbyterian Witness, "has had undisputed sway in South America for more than three hundred years. The first Jesuit missionaries landed in 1849. No church in any land or in any age has had such opportunities of dominating the life of a whole continent."

The date 1849 is evidently a misprint. But if the Witness can stifle priest in the diocese of Toronto, admiration for the Jesuit missionbeing Dean of Barrie for nineteen aries of South America, then the savagery of the Cannibal tribes Bishop Dowling, who was translated Christianized by the Jesuits, is not to Hamilton, he was made Bishop of altogether "unparalleled" in our Peterborough. The work of this own age and country. We have made a note of the subject and shall sometime give our readers a glimpse request, the Holy See erected the of the heroic work, the Christ-like zeal, and the beneficent results of Jesuit missions in South America.

"What then," asks the Witness, has this Church to show for the splendid opportunity which it has so long enjoyed on this continent? A condition of ignorance, unprogresstrong man in every sense of the siveness and moral degradation unparalleled in any nominally Christian land on the face of the earth." Last week we considered the ques tion of "unparalleled unprogressive-

The picture of moral degradation is made up of some unrelated facts. some stupid exaggerations, lies out of whole cloth, quotations here and there. Mr. Speer's own veracious travellers, tales and any gaps left are readily filled in on the authority of 'it is said," " it is estimated," "it is

The Witness must have unlimited faith in the "total depravity" of its readers if it expects them to regard the picture as a truthful presentation of South American conditions.

We shall give a sample or two: from one judge all:

" At Cartagena was the sect of the Inquisition where it is said 400,000 were condemned to death, and while that terror has long since passed away, the shadow of the Church, as a great repressive, deadening power nas remained."

Why stop at 400,000? Readers who will swallow that will even more readily believe 4,000,000 to be about the correct figure. And then once the statement is made, future zealquote it-with the preface "it is said;" and thus prepare the mind for adjectives even more forcible than 'repressive." "deadening." "obscurantist," "debauched," "reactionary," benighted" and "priest-ridden!" If the rank and file of the South American people, not excluding the Indians, know no more of Christian charity or care no more for truth than the writers and readers of the truth later. Witness' and Speer's obscene calumagainst the Church in America.

Here is another sample of the fair, honorable, self-respecting methods of those truth-loving, God-fearing and Priest-hating scandal-mongers.

"When the late Cardinal Vaughan visited South America, in the sixties. he wrote of what he saw in New Granada (Colombia). are in the lowest state of degradation be an act of divine favor.'

We should be very glad, indeed, if the Witness or Speer or any of their misguided readers were to read Snead-Cox's Life of Cardinal Vaughan. Numbers of non-Catholics have read it: many non-Catholic review ers have ranked it with the greatest biographies in the English language

There they will find portrayed a man simple, lovable, honest and straightforward; though of a family who kept the faith through the ages of bitter and brutal persecution though in his earliest years he heard from living members of his family of the oppression due to the "diaboli cal ingenuity" of the Penal Laws we find in him no trace bitterness, but the fullness of that charity described by St. Paul. His zeal was as great as that of the Speers who compass sea and land to make one proselyte, but it was a zeal that was tempered, permeated, suffused with Christian charity. His life was given cause of Truth and the he would have spurned vile calumnies of Protestants or misrepre sentations of Protestantism, the counterpart of Speer's and the Witness' calumnies of the Catholic Church, if any such existed. Yes, spurned them no less because as calumnies they stained the fair name of Truth, than because of the degrading, the soul-killing effect in those who use them.

Now let us examine the testimony of Cardinal Vaughan, Speer's latest witness to the total depravity of South America. It will be remembered that he had already presented documentary evidence that the Pope bore him out in every particular of his charges. But unfortunately for him his Encyclical was shown to be a forgery. Bogus Papal encyclicals being ruled out by the Court, our pertinacious missionary gives us the next best thing, the evidence of a Cardinal. But our wily devil's advocate has learned wisdom from experience. It won't do to manufactare evidence out of whole cloth : unless, indeed, with the saving clauses: "it is said," "it is charged," "it is estimated.

In a whole carcass of meat some times there is a bruised spot which putrifies while the rest remains sound. There are certain flies which infallibly discover this spot, and there deposit their eggs. In this suitable environment the eggs be come maggots, grow, thrive, and revel in the putridity.

In so wholesome a book as the Life of Cardinal Vaughan," where There is not a single one of the truth, Mr. Speer and the Witness think they have found such a spot. Let us see if it is dirty enough for their maggots to thrive in.

We shall quote the passage with its context .

"In a letter at this period after noting the persecution to which religion was being subjected by the civil authorities, and which had had the result of completely paralysing the authority of the Bishops, he adds: The monks here are in the lowest state of degradation and the suppression of them would be an act of divine favor.'

If our friends Speer and the Witness can not suppress the monks, they are adepts at another sort of suppression - suppressio veri - suppression of the truth, a particularly odious form of lying.

They suppress the context which summarizes the rest of the letter from which the extract is taken and they suppress "here." And for good reasons, because the context would show:

1. That they knew they were lying in the sentences quoted at the the undisputed sway of the Church and radiated financial philosophy. ous missionaries can truthfully of Rome" to "dominate the life of the continent."

2. That Father Vaughan was speaking of a particular place, 'here"; a place by the way which

but to the persecution of religion country. which completely paralysed the authority of the bishops. Those whom the Holy Ghost had placed to rule the Church of God were absolutely powerless; anarchy ensued. It would be quite as fair to quote the description of the Lawrence riots as exemplifying American respect for law and order.

For reasons good and sufficient to Speer and the Witness they did not quote Father Vaughan (afterwards Cardinal) on the conditions of New Granada (Colombia.) When Father Vaughan was in that country the government was making war on the Catholic Church. The clergy were forbidden to administer the sacraments, or to exercise any priestly function until they had taken an oath acknowledging the supremacy of the civil power in spiritual mat ters. Father Vaughan, nevertheless, in defiance of the law, ministered to the victims of the smallpox which was epidemic at the time. For which he was arrested : he appealed to the British Consul and asserted his rights as a British subject; was let out on bail and immediately returned to his heroic work amongst the smallpox victims.

Why did not our zealous friends quote this passage? Because it showed that the Catholic Church had not undisputed sway; and because a fallen priest is more toothsome to them than the unpalatable description of a holy priest risking health and life for the love of God and the cure of souls.

Then if the late Cardinal Vaughar in the sixties is a trustworthy witness why not let him tell of Santiago where he is in admiration at the deeply spiritual life of the city, "the most Catholic in Christendom. Where he tells of the six establishments endowed for the purpose of giving retreats to the laity. Where from five thousand to six thousand every year avail themselves of this great means of "the sanctification of the people."

Why? Because it is sweet and wholesome and spiritual: and they must find a spot of putrid flesh that their eggs of slander may develop into the maggots of bigotry; the sure foundation on which to base an appeal to supply "the urgent need of Protestant missions in South Amer-

We shall return to the subject. While such a book as Speer's can be shamelessly recommended by a religious weekly, there is need of a little missionary work in Canada.

A GIGANTIC MONOPOLY

About twenty-five men, represent ing as many banks, control absolutely $1,000,000,000 of the people'

Certain kinds of business are classed as public utilities, wherein the large and important public inter est is recognized and protected. more a public utility than banking The banks are a monopoly. The money in which they deal belongs to the people. But to suggest that banking be treated as other public utilities is to expose oneself to be called a "demagogue," or what in the high financial circles is a more contemptuous term "an honest and inexperienced citizen."

The Farmers Bank failure, entailing the loss of $1,100,000 to despositors and the ruin of many shareholders. has prepared the way for some wholesome criticism of the privileged banking monopoly.

According to the Parliamentary correspondent of the Globe, "many of the people's representatives had something to say from the people's point of view. Hon. W. T. White. Minister of Finance, and Mr. A. K Maclean of Halifax, the financial critic of the Opposition, plodded through their parts with ultra-con servative caution. They discussed banking and banking institutions in a learned way and with the most wholesome respect. They handled head of this article. The conditions the subject in the silkiest of silken the instrument of bringing together described would not go well with gloves. They bandied pleasantries Then came the proletariat on each side of the House and waded in to say things. Mr Duncan C. Ross, the young Liberal from West Middlesex. discovered that a spade was a spade, was across the continent from and proceeded to inform Parliament Colombia. But they had singled out of the fact. He shocked the finan-Colombia as an awful example. ciers by proclaiming that despositors What the late Cardinal did say about had a material interest in the bill, Colombia would not suit their pur- and demanded consideration at the pose. We shall quote this suppressed hands of the Government. He expressed the heterodox opinion that aruth later.

expressed the heterodox opinion that with them what we can. We are not it would be a healthy thing to have a to hide and waste them, but use them nies, then we admit their whole case plored was due not to the Catholic thorough investigation of the bank. and make them increase and grow.

"From the Government side of the House, Mr. W. F. Maclean (South York), that energetic apostle of a restless Conservatism, who is again running amuck in his party, told the Minister of Finance in strident tones 'This is a bankers' bill, not a public measure,' and forthwith proceeded to call for the appointment of a Monetary Commission to make a study of general banking conditions with a view to tightening public control and protecting public interests." Sir Edmund Osler said that the banks were making only 4 per cent. on their free money. Their free money is of course the people's money. "How much are they making on their capital?" was the prompt and pertinent query. Whereupon Sir Edmund admitted that the Dominion Bank to which he belonged paid 18 per cent. dividend. Not only do the banks pay from 16 to 20 per cent. dividend on $114,000,000 capital. but they have added, over and above, $106,000,000 to the reserve fund

Government inspection won't do the banks don't want it. That de positors should be protected, as the holders of bank notes are now pro tected, would be bad law, though the ases are precisely parallel.

"We must always rely in the final analysis," said the Finance Minister. on the integrity and ability of the officers and directors." Consoling doctrine for the banks, but what of the depositors?

For all the banks to guarantee the deposits of each, as they do in the case of notes "would necessitate the creation of a fund of $50,000,000." Supposing it would; the reserve now amounts to $106,000,000.

Mr. W. F. McLean made the excellent suggestion that a monetary commission be appointed to conduct an investigation into the financial and banking needs of the country to report, in a year or eighteen months, and that the charters of the banks be extended that time to await the re port. Parliament and country could then have digested the report of the Pujo commission which might enable them to see whither they are drifting financially.

That the interests of the people have found advocates amongst their representatives in both parties is at any rate a matter for congratulation and gratitude. Let us hope that they will not be satisfied without practical results.

APOSTOLIC SUCCESSION

A clerical correspondent in the Canadian Churchman (Anglican) says:

"We must in all honesty convince others of the correctness of our Apostolic claims, or be despised for claiming what is not so.'

Apostolic succession! Yes, it used to be claimed by Anglicans; and they were not afraid or ashamed to discuss the claim. But for some time it has been timidly, almost apologetically, asserted or passed over in silence. Apostolic succession seem to be taboo in "that broad, large hearted, definite, (sic) strong church manship which the late Archbishop Benson summed up in four words, "Catholic, Apostolic, Reformed, Pro

It is somewhat difficult for a Cath olic (who is not at the same time Protestant) to get a clear idea of what some Anglicans mean by Church Unity, or even by Church

Archdeacon Ingles, in reply to Di Symonds, in the Canadian Church man, insists on confirmation as a 'vital principle" of apostolic origin Whether he considers it a sacrament or not, he carefully avoids the use of the term. "Dr. Symonds is not unmindful of Rome and the Orthodox Church of the East. Let us be careful that we take no step which would prejudice our position in the eyes of these two On the other great Communions. hand, we are bound not for their sake only by any means, but for the sake of the Protestant communions about us to hold faithfully to every Catho lic practice, every 'vital principle' which has come down to us, that we may become in the Providence of God the scattered members of the Body of

No. we are quite unable to understand the definite Catholic-Protestant meaning of the terms Church, Church unity, and Body of Christ.

Archbishop Benson's son, however, states the Catholic position in Christ in the Church, in a way one can understand, whether one agrees with him or not.

Gifts are given us by God to do We are not

LADY

Last month a noted Scottish Cath olic lady, a representative of the fine old Jacobite and Catholic families. passed away at a ripe old age at her home in Scotland in the person of Mrs. A. M. Chisholm. The London Times in noting her death said in a recent issue: The death has taken place at Glass burn House, Beauly, in her eighty-third year, of Mrs. Maria Frances Chisholm, widow of Captain Archibald Macra Chisholm, of the Black Watch, Royal Highlanders. Chisholm was the last representative of the ancient Catholic and Jacobite families of Farquharson of Balmoral, and Innes of Ballogie, Aberdeenshire. Her grand-father, Lewis Farquharson Innes, was born in the old Castle of Balmoral, and his family owned the greater part of the lands from Balla ter to Braemar on the left bank of the Dee. He also succeeded to the Innes properties of Ballogie, Balnacraig, and Mid-Beltie. The Innesses associated with the Stuart family in their exile at St. Germain. Balmoral and other Farquharso lands were sold to the Lord Fife of the day, and his representatives sold them in turn to the late Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort. Chisholm married, in 1853, the late Captain Chisholm, a distinguished Crimean officer.

Captain Chisholm, while an officer in the famous Black Watch, the fortysecond Royal Highlanders, was stationed in Halifax in the early fifties, where he was a regular attendant at the old St. Mary's church. garbed in his Highland costume. Later ne went to the Crimea, where he fought with great distinction. Some relatives of Capt. Chisholm live in Nova Scotia.

OUR PERSONAL RESPONSI-BILITY

It is well for us Catholics to reworld that hates us, by some strange contradiction, expects to see a very high degree of perfection exemplified in our lives. How often have we not heard the comment on an evil-doer "and he (or she) is a Catholic?" How few there are who find cause for wonder in the knowledge that so many Protestants lie in bed of a Sunday instead of attending church, but let a Catholic miss Mass and everybody will reproach him. Who is so maligned as the Catholic priest? Yet if somewhere a priest does, or is accused of doing, something wrong, the charge is seized upon and trumpeted from the housetops. Tracts and pamphlets are produced to proclaim and keep alive the startling discovery. The newspapers give On the other hand, if a Protestant matter temporary publicity, then it is take it as a matter of course. Now why should the minister's short. comings be useless as a matter of more is expected of a priest, even by his traducers-because even whilst traducing him they have their doubts as to the justice of their accusations, and hence, despite all their denunciations, they are so amazed to find a priest really guilty of what they charge him with that they can't help getting excited over it, and inviting the whole world to come and wonder with them. Thus the world pays unconscious tribute to the superiority of our holy faith. All unwittingly it acknowledges that we have the Truth and have been taught the way, and are not in the world to be pupils of its folly, but to be a light to its feet. It will not do for us to disown our esponsibility. We cannot evade it. For life is a trust and time a talent of which account must be given. "To us," writes Monsignor Benson in his recent book, "The Friendship of Christ," "to us have been committed the treasures of truth and grace, and here about us is the world to which we must transmit them. We do not know how enormous is the value of every soul, of every act, thought, and word that help to shape the destinies of such a soul. We do not know how here in the minute opportunities of every day lie the germs of new worlds that may be born to God, or crushed in embryo by our carelessness." Our lives lend argument to our creed, for or against. If they are not in conformity with our profes sions they work untold injury to the Kingdom of God. They do not point the way to others. They keep men from the Truth. Some of us who are prepared to do anything for our religion except live up to it, are very much in the way of forgetting that if In France, the warfare upon religion our every thought, word and act do may be more noisy and more trucunot breathe loyalty to our creed. we lent, but it is at least in the open.

religion, not to the Church of Rome ing system and methods of this DEATH OF A NOTED SCOTTISH are little better than traitors within the gates. Earnest seekers after Truth will turn away when brought face to face with such contradiction between belief and practice. All the world hates a humbug, and what better is the Catholic who professes to believe so much and yet lives from day to day as if he be lieved nothing? Professing to be a friend of Christ he disclaims all responsibility towards his neighbour. In words that are as old as the world he asks "Am I my brother's keeper?" The Light that was given him to illuminate the pathway for others he hides under a bushel.

He has buried his talent. What answer will he make when the Master demands it with interest?

NOTES AND COMMENTS

THAT FRANCE as a whole is not to be judged by her present governing authorities, or by the clamor and tumult of the atheistic faction so much in evidence in recent years, is quite evident from the glimpses we get now and again through trustworthy spectacles of the domestic and parish life of her Catholic people. Such a glimpse is afforded us by the letter of a recent Scots convert minister which appears in the English Catholic News. The letter is too long for insertion in entirety here, but we subtract such portions as bear directly upon the subject at issue. They recall the pictures of domestic life which may be read in Mme. Craven's "Sister's Story" or in the "Letters" of Eugenie de Guerin. It is not the phase of French life which secular or sectarian journalists love to dwell upon, but, as we are persuaded nevertheless, it more truly represents the spirit and the temper of the people of France than the noisy demonstrativeness of those who was mind ourselves occasionally that the upon Christianity.

"THE STUDY of the French character," writes this convert, "has for me a fascination, and the opportunities for prosecuting it could scarcely be better, meeting as we do with people from all parts of the land almost daily, representative of all classes, from the highest to the lowest. Such as are genuinely religious are intensely so, not on Sundays only when they go to church, as thousands in the old land whom I had mingled with for years, but in daily life. It is most interesting and touching to watch their home life. I doubt if it could be surpassed or even equalled by that of any nation in Christendom. In beauty of characthe minutest details in leaded type. ter, in simplicity of life and of manner, in mutual affection the one for clergyman figures in some disreput- the other, its participants are edifyable incident, the press gives the ing in the extreme. Such sterling moral quality as we are coming daily forgotten. The editor and his readers into contact with has not been the work of a generation; it is the result of centuries of Catholic teach ing. And leaving out the rabble and news, whereas those of the priest the rationalists. . . these are the make good "copy"? Simply because families that form the heart and core of the French nation, and that are the sure guarantee of its survival as a nation of Christians.

> "I can see no evidence in this quarter (Alencon)," continues this convert minister, " of the decay of religion of which one sees so much in your Scottish Presbyterian prints. Instead of religion being on the decline here, it is difficult to see how it could have a firmer hold, and the efforts to deepen it were certainly never more active, or carried on hy better men. I speak from actual experience, as our work brings us into contact with the priests in whose hands the future of religion

WE CONTINUE the quotation a little further: "We were told before we left home that we should get our eyes opened if we took up our residence in France. It is quite true: we have got them opened wider than ever to see a beauty in the Catholic religion we had seen only dimly before, and to feel powers beating upon our hearts incessantly of whose existence we, as Protestants, had little experience. We have, in short, discovered that there are in the Catholic Church mysterious and supernatural influences in ceaseless operation of which Protestantism touches only the outskirts."

As REGARDS the decay of religion. this writer reminds his correspondent that it is much more in evidence in the Scotland of his experience as a minister than ever it was in France. whereas in Scotland, as in other countries under the sway of one form or another of Protestantism, it is deeper, more subtle, and unquestionably more far-reaching. As we were reminded the other day by the Archbishop of Toronto, there becomes every day less and less to go upon in discussing religion , with Protestants. Dogmatic teaching has with them gone by the boards; the Bible can no longer be effectively appealed to, as their theologians have undermined its authority and in large measure destroyed its credibility in their eyes. There remain then but the facts of human life and of human experience, and there is a unreasoning prejudice to be overcome ere even these can be dealt with on their merits. But as in the first dawn of Christianity and in every crisis that has confronted the Church in the ages that have intervened, time is on her side, and, by the promise of her Founder, ultimate victory to her assured.

THE DECAY of religious belief in the Scotland of to-day is very real and very menacing if we may believe the published utterances of the kirk authorities. Union between the Establishment and the Free Church has been a rife subject of discussion for some years, and was brought about by increasing evidence of the slackening hold Presbyterianism, as represented by those organizations, has upon the rank and file of the Scottish people. • It has been feit by the conservative element that in the face of such a crises the divided, often conflicting energies of the rival communions rendered them practically helpless in dealing with it. This is quite true, but only partially true. For the real weakness lies, if only they could be brought to see it, in the rupture which occurred four centuries ago, and which, while taking all the sweetness and wholesomeness out of Scottish life, left the nation a bleeding corpse upon the altar of mammon.

THE JANUARY number of the Church Union Journal contains an interesting article on the question-"How do the Highlands stand?" for the substance of which we are indebted to the Inverness Courier. The writer has collected the views of therefore, may be taken as voicing the widespread impressions and convictions of those most interested. Answering the question why it is that the union movement has made less headway in the Highlands than in the Lowlands, the statement is advanced that it no doubt arises partly from the fact that the religious sentiment is deeper and stronger in the former. This on the face of it sounds like a paradox: yet that it points to the truth of the matter appears upon consideration. For while the aspiration after reunion of appear on the surface to be wholesome and commendable, lacking the true motives for reunion and discernment of the only possible ground npon which a real reunion of them. Union is sought over the national extinction. ruins of the distinctive doctrines for which the sects have stood in the past, not upon any deepening of these teachings were often fantastic, unscriptural, and unhistorical, they were at least evidence of inward conviction, whereas the trend of the sects now is to the negation of all supernatural teaching. This in itself is a calamity for which no external organization can compensate.

THAT WE DO not overstate the case is apparent from the conclusions arrived at after prolonged investigation by the writer in the Church Union Journal. He says:

"The problem par excellence for all the denominations represented in the Highlands is that there is a widespread apathy towards religion of any kind. It is not too much to say that many in the Highlands (as well as in the Lowlands) seem to be living no open hostility to the Churches, but more and more the people simply leave them severely alone. This re in too many cases no one goes. Lack of Andrew Lang, or of Professor Gar-of visitation and personal dealing on the part of many ministers may partly account for this state of mat-But a further explanation is the want of any personal attraction to the church in regard to the younger men and women.

As a REMEDY for this deplorable state of affairs, what have the ministerial bodies of the Scottish Presby terian churches to suggest? Not the casting out of the rationalistic spirit which has taken possession of their colleges and seminaries; not a re turn to the old, simple, if unlovely and austere habits of their immedi ate fathers, or to the simple preaching of the Gospel message as the latvast accretion of false tradition and ter understood it; but the making their services "more interesting and "more modern." "In most places in the Highlands the services are deplorably uninteresting and lacking in Christian enthusiasm. 'The services should be rendered more attractive, and, especially, the singing should be improved-" as if mere "singing" of itself, and "attractive, up-to-date services," had any power to soothe the heart or to lift the sinner out of the slough of gross materialism which in Scotland in particular, and all over the earth, aims to make this the only life and existence beyond the grave a dream and a delusion.

ONE OTHER means towards stemming the tide is suggested by the Union Journal writer, viz., an appeal on the subject of foreign missions. If meetings were to be held locally he surmises, in which ministers of the several denominations would participate, and addresses on the "inspiring subject" of foreign missions delivered, it might go far to draw the denominations together. That the Presbyterianism of Scotland has enough to do to preserve what survives of Christian faith, without scattering its energies, abroad would seem a legitimate deduction from. these self-revelations. "Foreign Missions" is certainly an inspiring subject in the proper hands, but to sects going with the tide, and with no clear-cut message to deliver, to waste their substance upon foreign peoples while their own are confessedly perishing for want of the Bread of Life, might be called the very quintessence of folly. Above all, to have a hand in the fatuous attempt so conspicuous with their fellows on correspondents, and his summing-up, this continent, to undermine the faith of their Catholic fellow-beings, might be characterized by a much stronger term.

AND AMIDST this widespread decay of faith in Scotland, Rev. W. R. Mc-Intosh steps into a London pulpit to tell his hearers what a hero John Knox, the father of it all, was. He told them that it would be well for Presbyterianism had it followed closer upon the doctrines outlined by Knox. It did, and according to competent historians, Scotland, one the scattered forces of Protestantism of the fairest lands the sun shines on, was, in the century following Knox's death, dragged through the deepest mire of sorrow and degradation. Before Knox's time Scotland was an independent kingdom, and bore an the churches can be effected—the honorable part in the councils of Divine authority of the Prince of the Europe; Knox put her under the Apostles—the movement as it exists heal of Elizabeth of England, forein Scotland and in Canada must be ordained the loss of her crown and taken to indicate rather the decay of parliament, and, the heroism of her definite religious teaching among sons notwithstanding, decreed her

MR. McIntosh admits that Knox was narrow and intolerant, but as religious conviction. And while against these unamiable qualities he attributes to him courage and unselfishness. It is charitable to suppose that he never heard of Knox's flight to Geneva, when the ebb and flow of events rendered his position in Scotland somewhat precarious. Not once, but twice or more he performed this canny feat, and his own historians tell us that he thought it wise and prudent always to keep out of the danger zone. Knox could be brave and truculent when he had a helpless woman only to confront him but when the work of his fellowconspirators set the pot a-boiling, Geneva proved to be a safe and pleasant resort.

IT IS CHARITABLE to suppose, also, that Rev. Mr. McIntosh never heard in comparative paganism. There is of Knox's part in the murder of Cardinal Beaton, or of the nameless crimes with which his contemporceives weekly illustration in the de- aries have charged him, or of his crease in church attendance. From secret correspondence with Eliza-homestead after homestead, from beth's ministers bargaining for the farm and bothy, from croft and cottage throughout the Highlands, only one or two representatives are seen hands. He has probably never to leave for church on Sundays, and read the work of Cosmo Innes, or diner, or other modern investigators who have torn the flimsy mask from Knox's countenance. This being so, it follows that his glorification of the great Reformer" was uttered in dull, ignorant good faith and that he was entirely oblivious of the spectacle he was making of himself. He may be assured, however, that contemporary documents coming to the surface from day to day prove that Knox was neither a hero, a patriot, a good man, or a gentleman. Singleminded he may have been, but only to the end that he might ruin his country and besmirch the Church in the eyes of men. To hold up such a man as an example to the youth of Canada is to set at naught every canon of right or reason.

KNOX MADE of religion a gloomy and unlovely thing. In its name he gave rein to all the basest passions of the human heart. The seed he sowed has germinated and produced the indifference and apathy of today. Knox therefore is the father of the deplorable state into which religious belief, under the aegis of Presbyterianism, has, according to its own chief exponents, fallen in Scotland in our day.

GENERAL INTENTION FOR FEBRUARY

RECOMMENDED AND BLESSED BY HIS HOLINESS PIUS X.

THE CHURCH IN MEXICO

We are asked to pray, during the present month, for the Church in Mexico, and if the reports that have come to us through the public press can be relied on, there are strong reasons for the request. The feverish restlessness of the people of that republic and the almost chronic state of revolution which exists there have their baneful effects on the work of the Church, and tend to paralyse the efforts of those who are laboring in that corner of the Master's vineyard.

And yet as far as the land itself i concerned there is no reason why this state of affairs should exist. From a purely worldly and economic standpoint, Mexico is a splendid country, where a large population could live happy and prosperous, if only the various political factions would resolve to sink their differ ence and live at peace with one another. Mexico is about one-fifth the size of Canada. Its coasts are low and flat, but the interior is a great table land a mile above the sea level. On this tableland, over half a million miles in area, there are hills and valleys, lakes and mountains, some of these rising above the perpetual snow-line. The country is a land of boundless resources, rich in gold, silver, and other metals; every kind of wood known in Europe and America grows in its forests, and grains indigenous to both hot and old climates are successfully cultivated. The population of Mexico now numbers about thirteen millions, a third being pure Indian. other two-thirds are mestizos or half-breeds, while of the whole population only about one twentieth white. The Spaniards conquered Mexico from the Aztecs in the first quarter of the sixteenth century, and held it was only in 1821 that the Spanish yoke was defin itely thrown off. Since that time, merely to show the mercurial character of the Mexican people, over two hundred and sixteen insurrections have taken place-The conquerors brought the Catholic religion with them to the native Mexicans. In their ranks were several Franciscan Fathers who began at once their work of evangelization. By degrees they gained an influence over the natives, and not many years elapsed before large numbers had re ceived baptism. Heaven seemed to favor visibly the labors of these missionaries, for in 1531, the marvellous apparition of Our Lady of Guadeoupe to the Indian, Juan Diego, had a powerful effect in convincing the natives of the supernatural character of the religion they were asked to Other signs of advancement in civilization showed themselves in the establishment of schools, and even in 1551, in the creation of a university.

It must not be imagined, however, that all this was effected without many heroic sacrifices on the part of the missionaries. The sodden superstitions of the Aztecs, their human sacrifices and other idolatrous rites and practices, proved serious obstacles to the ready acceptance of the true faith, and the Catholic Church in Mexico, as in so many other coun tries, can lay claim to a long list of glorious martyrs. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries many Jesuits met their deaths while laboring among the native tribes; in 1680 twenty-one Franciscans were massacred. A crisis came in 1757 when Charles III. expelled the Jesuits cause of education and the conver sion of the natives suffered greatly through the departure of these religious, but the Church nevertheless kept on bravely at her work. Amid vexations of all kinds, one of the most embarassing being that known as the Royal Patronage, the Francis-cans, Dominicans and other mission-aries, continued to preach the gospel to the natives, and thereby brought thousands of them within the pale of the Church. While many difficulties hampered the spread of religion during the Spanish regime, the declaration of Mexican independence, in 1821, did not mend matters much. True, the new constitution recognized the Catholic religion as the religion of the State, but even then the efforts of anti-clericalism and Masonry revealed themselves in the insidious laws which little by little began to creep in to curtail the rights of the Church and her clergy. It will suffice to mention a few of these laws—which, the way, are still in vigor-to show the petty persecutions to which Catholics in Mexico are subjected in the exercise of their religion. The union of Church and State was dissolved in 1857 and laws enforcing and systematizing the separation were promulgated. Regulations deply until at last a long litany of things forbidden appeared on the statut books; for instance: State officials were forbidden to attend public re ligious functions; open air demon-strations were forbidden; official recognition of church dignitaries was withdrawn; church holidays were suppressed: the ringing of church ells was regulated; priests and nuns were forbidden to wear their religious habit on the streets; the estab lishment of monastic orders was for bidden under the plea that the emission of vows meant the sacrifice of human liberty; religious corporations were deprived of the right to acquire or administer property; the exercise of any form of religion, and even re ligious instruction, were forbidden in federal, state and municipal schools; mans communities were suppressed and their books, manuscripts, paintings, and household treasures, were nanded over to museums, libraries and other public institutions; legacies made to ministers of religion, o to their relatives within the fourth degree, became null and void ; maris laboring in Mexico with undiminshed zeal. One of the embarrassing, if neces sary, features of present conditions there is that the Catholics must be ver on the alert. Eternal watchfulness in looking after their own inerests is the price of the restricted liberty they still possess. There is a trong anti-religious element existing in Mexico, which is ready to take advantage of every opportunity to oppress the Church, and unhappily he disturbances that are continually cropping up easily help it to work out its evil designs. Owing to the conciliating policy of the late president, Porfirio Diaz, the country had thirty years of relative peace, but a new era of unrest and revolution has set in since his forced retirement. While he was not unfriendly to the Church, Diaz made no changes for betterment in the laws against her; his action was more or less negative; no new laws were enacted during her long term of office, probably because he thought those in vigor sufficed for every need.

riage became a civil contract, that could be validly and licitly contracted before civic authorities; and several other laws equally contemptible

While these outrages on personal liberty are still on the statute books

they greatly hinder the Church in the exercise of her functions, and yet she

Since the banishment of Diaz, so menacing have the affairs in Mexico become that, if we are to believe the public press, the government itself is becoming alarmed. In recent weeks dispatches have announced that the present revolution has re sulted in conditions so bad that something more agencies is necessary to right them. This state of affairs has been made public, not by reports of rebel operations, but by the action of the secre tary of the interior who recently summoned Mgr. Boggiani, the Apostolic Delegate, and asked him to use the power of the Church in aiding the government to restore order. Naturally the action of this high official has angered the Liberals, who see in it a violation of the law of separation of Church and State, and who talk of interpelating him in the chamber of deputies.

What belief may be put in these reports we do not know. Other reports, however, would seem to confirm them, seeing that on December 8th last, a special Mass was celebrated in every church in Mexico to implore Divine intervention for the republic, and prayers are everywhere being offered up for the restoration of order. Evidently Mexico is in a sorry condition, and calls for the fervent supplications of all the faithful children of the Church in her behalf. If it be true, and we have no reason to doubt the fact, that the government officials of Mexico have turned at last for aid to the moral force which they have spurned and trampled on so long, it will be seen that they fully realize the position of things.

One can only encourage them in these hopeful dispositions. It would not be fair to deny a helping hand to those who implicitly acknowledge their fault, nor would it be Catholic to neglect to come to the spiritual aid of those millions of our brethren in the faith for whom the Holy Father asks the tribute of our Charles III. expelled the Jesuits from his Spanish dominions. The ers. The League of the Sacred Heart ers. of education and the convergence of education and the conv edly doing its share in praying for that unhappy country, but a common oond of faith and charity should urge the members of the League in Canada and throughout the world, to supplement during the present month what may be wanting to complete the work. The prayers of our united millions are powerful, and we may soon have the consolation of learning that they are turning Mexico into a land of peace and order. This result, hoped for so earnestly, is worth all the efforts we shall make to move the Heart of God. E. J. DEVINE, S. J.

REV. D. P. McMENAMIN

PREACHES AT ST. ANN'S AND ST. PATRICK'S

The Rev. D. P. McMenamin, pastor of St. Francis Xavier church, Thessalon, Ont., in the diocese of Sault Ste. Marie, delivered two eloquent sermons in St. Ann's and St. Patrick' churches, recently.

At St. Ann's, at the 10 o'clock Mass before a large congregation, the able lecturer spoke on mortal sin, its dire consequences and offence to God. Jeremias, chap. 2, verse 19, "Know bitter thing for thee to have left the enormity of sin and its eternal punshment and vividly pictured the fall of Lucifer and Adam and Eve and their punishment. In speaking of life and the passing away of the soul out of this world his reference to the dear ones, who sleep behind Mount Royal, brought tears to more than

At St. Patrick's, in the evening, large audience greeted him when he preached on The Church. His text was from the Apocalypse Revel, xxi 9, "Rome, and I will show thee the bride, the wife of the Lamb." He explained the four prominent marks of the Church which distinguished her from other religious bodies That she alone was the bride of Christ on earth and offered up the clean oblation in the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. He answered most satsfactorily those who try to make themselves and others believe that there can be more than one Church and that it makes no difference as to which of them you follow. proved the absurdity and unreason ableness of the doctrine of the self interpretation of the bible. He said that if that doctrine were of God they wouldn't hold different views of faith and profess more than one religion and if the Church of Christ were founded by men it would have been torn to threads long ago.
Father McMenamin is a native of Montreal and was the first priest ordained, of Point St. Charles.

> GROSS IGNORANCE The Hamilton Club

January 20, 1918. Editor CATHOLIC RECORD. London: Dear Sir: Here is a good one from the London Sketch of January

1st. :
"Much is being said and misunderisit of the King stood, apropos the visit of the King and Queen of Greece to the monas teries of Mount Athos. The notion that most religious orders are closed to the callers does not stand the simple test-of calling. And guest rooms, like soup kitchens, can welcome monarchs or beggars of both sexes. Even Queen Victoria had glimpses of monastic life, and Edward VII. was the staunch friend of nuns both on the Riviera and in the Isle of Wight. When one of them said to him "We pray for your conversion to Rome every day. summoned a good humoured "Thank you," instead of explaining that any success attending her efforts would play havoc with the throne.

Music Taught Free Home Instruction

Special Offer to Cur Readers In order to advertise and introduce their home study music lessons in every locality the International Institute of Music of New York will give free to our readers a complete course of instruction for either Piano, Organ, Violin, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo, Cello, Brass Instruments or Sight Singing. In return they simply ask that you recommend their Institute to your friends after You may not know one note from another: yet, by their wonderfully simple and thorough method, you can soon learn to play. If you are an advanced player you will receive special instruction. The lessons are sent weekly. They are so simple and easy that they recommended to any person or little child who can read English. Photo graphs and drawings make every-thing plain. Under the Institute's free tuition offer you will be asked to pay only a very small amount (averaging 14 cents a week) to cover postage and the necessary sheet nusic.

No one should overlook this wonderful offer. Tell your friends about it—show this article to them.

The International Institute has suc cessfully taught others and can suc cessfully teach you, even if you know absolutely nothing whatever about music. The lessons make everything

Write to-day for the free booklet. which explains everything. It will convince you and cost you nothing. Address your letter or postal card to International Institute of Music. 98 Fifth Ave., Dept. 427M, New York this case, an exceptional event. But Kings and Queens are privileged in most churches. It is not generally remembered that the English Sovereign is by hereditary right a pre-bendary of St. David's Cathedral, or, fax. in other words, a clergyman. And far more unexpected are the priestly powers held by the Queen of Italy.

Not long ago, in the absence of a cleric, she gave absolution to a dying workman and the Vatican smiled approval on the act. One would hardly expect to find such nonsense in a well known English publication.

L. A. W. DOHERTY.

IS BISHOP O'LEARY NOW (Special Despatch to The G obe)

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Jan. 26. News was received here yesterday of the appointment of Rev. Henry J. O'Leary, D. D., of Bathurst, N. B., as Catholic Bishop of Prince Edward Island diocese, in succession to the late Bishop MacDonald. Dr. O'Leary is thirty-one years of age. He was educated in Montreal, and at the Canadian College, Rome, represented the Bishop of the Maritime Provinces at Rome.

Dr. Henry Joseph O'Leary is the son of the late Henry O'Leary of Richibucto, N. B., in which place he was born and educated. He pursued his theological studies at the Canadian college in Rome, where he spent about three and a half years; subsequently he spent a year in France. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1901, and in the following year was come.

The Queen of Greece's visit is in granted the degre of D.D. by the University of the Propaganda. sequently he became assistant rector to Bishop Barry at Bathurst, N. B. In 1909 he was appointed procurator at Rome for the archdiocese of Hali-

MGR. BENSON

A new book by Monsignor R. H. Benson is announced by Messrs. Longmans, Green and Co. as being in the press. The title is "Confessions of a Convert." It is the record of the author's religious life and development, with accounts of the various stages of belief through which he passed, and of the fluences which bore upon him. book includes sketches of his home education, his school life, his ministry as a parochial clergyman in town and country, his membership in an Anglican Religious community; and finally the stages by which he came submit to Rome and his experiences in the city itself. The book is not narrative and descriptive.

Christ said, "I am the way!" What a splendid trail of the ideal His life has blazed across the mountains of time! What joy of the mountaineer comes to those who follow.

Beauty is God's handwriting, a vayside sacrament; welcome it, then in every fair face, every fair sky, every fair flower; and be sure that yet gaver meadows and yet bluer skies await thee in the world to

MERIDEN BRITANNIA COMPANY, HAMILTON, CANADA

MAKERS OF GOLD AND SILVER SACRED VESSELS FOR THE CHURCH

ears, and the conditions under which y u are issening
It has been so unfailinely successful that we feel we can well afford to say to all those who are deaf." Give us one opportunity to make you hear. If you are not convenient to our offices take the new Sount-Regulating Acousticon and try it in y ur home for io days. If it does not make you hear, return it and you will owe us nothing."
The Sound Regulating feature of the Acousticon is a recent achievement; but the proof that even without this great imp Instrument was most efficient lies in the fact that

The Acousticon is now being used by over 70,000 Deaf People and over 500 Churches, Theatres and Public Buildings days free trial of the Catholic Record.

So if you are hard I hearing or, above al, if you have made up your mind that nothing can make you hear—j st fill in the coupon to day, and at least prove to your own satisfaction, and without cost or penalty of any kind, whether this Sound-regulating Acousticon will do it on not. We are sure that it will or we would not make you this offer. GENERAL ACOUSTIC CO. OF CANADA, Ltd.
468 Yonge St. TORONTO, ONT.

Add	lress,
/		State.

The H. L. Bastien Boat & Canoe Works HAMILTON, ONT.

Muskoka Branches: Port Carling and Lake Joseph Station

Builders of High-Grade Rowboats, Canors, Racing Yachts and Skiffs, Sailing Dinghies and Motor Boats We carry in stock Metor Brats 18 ft. to 32 ft. and over 400. Fowecats and Canoes. Send for catalogue for Church Lighting Unequalled both for safety and superiority, and is specially adaptable for One bee Churches, Parish Houses and Convents, names of which will be gladly sent on request. Generators for all requirements from Churches to country homes. Write for particulars. to country homes.

Davis Acetylene

> Davis Acetylene Company NIAGARA FALLS, ONTARIO

QUINQUAGESIMA SUNDAY

MATRIMONY

This morning, dear brethren, will say a few words with regard to the remote preparation for marriage in the hope that they who contemplate entering upon this state either at once or in the future may receive the sacrament of matrimony with perfect dispositions, and thus receive more fully of the graces pur chased by the Blood of Christ.

The choice of a husband or of a wife is something of the highest importance. It marks a period in one's life and brings with it a future full of possibilities for good or evil, according as the choice has been wise or the contrary.

And not only is it a question of one's own happiness; others are involved in the consequences of our act and the lives of several may be clouded by our imprudent step.

For, when a man marries, he contracts a relation with his helpmate which death alone severs; he sumes responsibilities which cannot be shifted from his shoulders upon those of another; he has duties which must be performed with exactness. With the married man and voman it is not a matter of option how long they shall live together nor how they shall live together; with them their choice of a state of life has been final.

This being the case, too much can hardly be said of the necessity of earnest preparation for a manner of life bringing with it so many and so serious engagements; too much thought cannot be given to the consideration of our choice, nor too much attention to the motives impelling us to this choice. Truth should be ever with us at this all-important time, and passion excluded, so far as it can be excluded, that our judgment may not be biased. Reason right reason, should reign over affection, that our eyes may not be closed to our own faults nor to those of our beloved, and that we may not suffer a cruel recognition of these when it is not in our power to correct them.

We should be honest too-not posing for what we are not-not pre senting only our amiable side. other words, we should not act a lie Let us not wreathe our face in smiles for our lover's advent if a frown mars our common expression; fill our mouths with honeyed words when sharp speech is our wont. Such conduct is dishonest and untruthful, and good cannot come of it. The cloven hoof will we are deceiving.

Do not view things either with rose-tinted ones, or you will make many mistakes. Do not be sordid, but be not rash either. Both courses are wrong; both, therefore, should Listen to advice, weigh the counsel you receive. Do not despise the wisdom that the years have brought because your spectacles are Prudence is a beautiful virtue, so try to cultivate it. Perhaps the advice you receive may not be good, but you will never know whether it is or not if you do not consider it. Do not be cynical, but rather believe all men perfect. Few of us are perfect, alas! Perhaps you have found a perfect man, but you would do better if you suspended judgment for a while and awaited the proof of it. Your joy will be increased if you discover good qualities you did not look for, but that day will not brighten for you upon which you see your ideal shattered, and find that your god is only a man after all.

TEMPERANCE

SOCIAL DRINKING

If social drinking in the society world could be made unfashionable the cause of temperance would be greatly advanced. If social drinking among men could be made unpopular total abstinence would receive a mighty impulse. It is a social custom that strong drink must often begin its deadly work. The young man does not take his first drink because he thinks it will make him seem manly and up-to-date to do so. does not purchase a bottle of whiskey and go off by himself to drink it. He may do that later on, but at first he drinks for the social pleasure he expects to derive from it. In these days of close competition and small margins it is necessary for a man to be at his best if he would succeed; and no man can be entirely fit who is ever so slightly under the influence of strong drink.

Then there is the domestic or home side of the drink question. The man who drinks brings wretchedness and misery to his family. If he is poor they suffer deprivation and want. If he is rich they look to the time when bad management or neglect will reduce them to poverty, and added to the humiliation of his habits there will be the discomforts of penury. Whiskey has been driven from nearly every place of honor, and trust. It is a bar to achievement, an enemy to happiness, and a menace to health. Even as a medicine alcohol has lost its vogue, and the best phy sicians seldom prescribe it.

But in spite of business requirements and domestic needs, social drinking continues. There is some-thing incomprehensible about the tolerance of a custom which, if con-tinued, may ruin a man's prospects.

FIVE MINUTE SERMON There is a note of inconsistency in a policy that finds its pleasures in undermining its possibilities.

Sobriety is stock in trade for the ambitious man. It opens the door of opportunity. It gives him a chance to utilize his ability. It converts his energy into cash. It materializes his aspirations. Inebriety blights ambition, closes the door to opportunity paralyzes energy, and destroys the aspirations.

Social drinking does not in all cases lead to drunkenness; but nearly all drunkenness begins in social drinking. The young man who be gins to drink does not intend to be come an inebriate. He means to be a moderate drinker. He knows of prominent business men who drink moderately, but who are respected and esteemed. If he thinks at all, he thinks he will be like them.

It must be remembered that the moderate drinkers who occupy high resisting them.

positions have reached those posi-tions in spite of their drinking prac-

WHY THEY ARE AGAINST LIQUOR

Why is it that in France the officers placard the barracks of the soldiers with notices warning against drink? Why is it that British officers, accustomed to the moderate use of liquors have become total abstainers as an example to the men? Why is the total abstinence movement in the British army so popular that 40 per cent. of the Indian troops are total abstainers? Why is it that the Gernan emperor is earnestly urging ab stinence in the German army and navy? It is because the leading army men in France, England and want efficient fighting machines, and they know that liquor even in moderate amount does not make an efficient soldier.

THE GIRL WHO MARRIES A

DRINKING MAN Did you ever try the impossible task of persuading a young woman who is keeping company with a man addicted to drink? The task frequently falls to a priest, sometimes to the lay folk. It ought to be an easy job. It is not always such. The im possibility of curing a drunkard by marrying him is obvious. Yet it is being attempted daily. What matter if the last ninety-nine young women failed in their attempt and are already regretting it, this particular one before us is going to succeed, so she thinks. Poor, silly mortals. It makes no feel that the offer of marriage to a certain proportion of women temporarily drives them mad. Use logic, quote examples, plead, coax, threaten and hold up to scorn the proposed match; the lady show itself eventually. Our life will listen, shed a few tears, tell you cannot well be a mockery of truth that you are right, agree that you are always, and our own happiness is at the best friend she ever listened to, much at stake as that of him whom bid you good-bye, then go out and marry the man! The awakening inevitably comes within a year and colored glasses, especially not with then we hear some hard criticisms of the rigidity of the Church's law on the indissolubility of the marriage bond. If Brooklyn cast its millions of gallons of liquor into the sewers the next few years, we could afford to close our orphan asylums for want of inmates.—Brooklyn Tablet. THE ENGINEER WAS DRUNK The fast express train was taken out of Elmira, New York, the other day, for the run to Buffalo on the Lackawanna Railroad. It had on board valuable property and still more precious lives. It went along safely until it approached Corning and then it ran into a limited passen ger train, piled up a wreck of engines and cars, killed forty persons and instupor of liquor he passed by the the warning fusee that was and disregarded the fluttered cloth of the flagman who had been sent back from the other train to flag him. Booze" had make him dull.

One more is added to the long list of horrors due to drink. It is a black It is the most powerful sermon for total abstinence that could be preached—hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property destroyed forty lives blotted out, and sixty cripples made—all by one man who was drunk.—Catholic Columbian.

DON'T WAIT TILL LENT IS OVER

"Many Catholics," says the Catholic Bulletin, "constitute themselves judges in their own case by dispensing themselves from the obligation of fasting during Lent. This is not in accordance with the law of the Church which authorizes a priest, for good and sufficient reasons, to commute the obligation of fasting into some other form of self-denial for those who can not observe the Lenten regulations. If one can not

Old Dutch Cleanser

"IMPOSSIBLE TO HELP MY KIDNEYS"

Until I Used "Fruit-a-tives" Worlds Greatest Kidney Cure

Practically everybody in Toronto knows Professor J. F. Davis. For years, the elite of that city has taken lessons from Prof. Davis in the art of Dancing and Deportment.

His constant activity gradually weakened his Kidneys, which calamity threatened to make him an invalid.

But read Prof. Davis letter—

But read Prof. Davis' letter—
563 CHURCH ST., TORONTO, ONT.
DECEMBER 29th. 1911
"I want to say that "Fruit-a-tives" is my only medicine, and has been for the past five years. Previous to that, I had been troubled with Rheumatism and Kidney Disease, and had taken many remedies without satisfactory results.
Noticing the advertisements of "Fruita-tives" I adopted this treatment altogether, and as everyone knows, I am a-tives'' I adopted this treatment altogether, and as everyone knows, I am now—and have been since taking "Fruita-tives"—enjoying the best of health".

If Rheumatism or Kidney Trouble is making you miserable, take "Fruita-tives" and get well.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c.
At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

fast he should apply to his confessor at the beginning of Lent in order to submit his case and abide by the decision given by the priest. Do not wait until Lent is over before telling your confessor that you did not ob-serve the Lenten fast. He is the judge in all cases submitted to him."

It's Strength That Counts

If you were buying a watch you would look for excellence, not size or weight. It is the same with yeast cakes. White Swan Yeast cakes contain more "virtue" than any other, no matter what the size. Send for free sample. White Swan Spices & Cereal Co., Ltd., Toronto.

THE FEAST OF THE PURIFICATION

The feast of the Purification occurs, this year, on Sunday, February, 2nd, and on that feast comes the and known "blessing of the candles," from which it gains its other name of Candlemas Day. Yet, when we say "the well-known blessing, are we so sure that it is truly wellknown to many among us? Do we realize the occasion from which it takes its rise? Do we know the beauty of the Divine offices which are recited for this feast? Do we understand how suitable they are for our own souls and their salvation

See what the Gradual says:

We have received Thy mercy, O God, in the midst of Thy temple; according to Thy name, O God, so also is Thy praise unto the ends of the earth. As we have heard, so have we seen, in the city of our God and in His holy mountain. Alleluia, alleluia. The old man carried the Child: but the Child governed the old man. Alleluia.

These words are explained by the gospel, which tells us how the stain-less and Immaculate Mother Mary went, nevertheless, humbly to the temple like an ordinary mother, for What was the cause of the disaster?
The engineer was drunk. Under the the holy birth of her Divine Child; and how aged Simeon took Him in danger signal, paid no attention to His arms, and blessed God, and said, the sublime chant now known as the Nunc Dimittis

Now Thou dost dismiss Thy ser vant, O Lord, according to Thy word in peace; because my eyes have seen Thy salvation, which Thou hast prepared before the face of all eoples: a light to the revelation of the Gentiles, and the glory of Thy people Israel.

This "Light" is symbolized by the candles that are blessed on the feast of the Purification. We ought to become familiar with these beautiful prayers. For instance :

O almighty and everlasting God, Who didst this day present Thy onlybegotten Son to be received in the arms of holy Simeon in Thy holy temple: we humbly implore Thy clemency that Thou wouldst vouch-safe to bless, sanctify, and burn with the light of heavenly benediction these candles, which we Thy servants, receiving, desire to carry lighted to magnify Thy name: that, by offering them to Thee, the Lord our God, being worthily inflamed with the holy fire of Thy most sweet charity. we may deserve to be presented in the holy temple of Thy glory

And still more beautiful is this

O Lord Jesus Christ, the true O Lord Jesus Christ, the true Light, Who enlightenest every man coming into this world: pour forth Thy blessing upon these tapers and sanctify them with the light of Thy grace; and mercifully grant that as these lights, enkindled with visible fire, dispel nocturnal darkness, so our hearts, illumined by invisible fire,—that is, the brightness of the Holy Spirit,—may be free from the blindness of all vice; that our mental eye being purified, we may per-ceive those things which are pleasing to Thee and profitable to our salvation; so that, after the dark perils of this world, we may deserve to arrive at never-failing light; through Thee, Jesus Christ, Saviour of the world, Who in perfect Trinity livest and reignest God, world without end.

We have shown, here, only a part of the beauty and appropriateness, and of the applicability to our own spiritual needs, that the Divine ffices for this feast contain. May it lead us to seek more earnestly into the treasures of the Missal, and thus to keep in touch more and more com pletely with the mind and spirit of our Mother, the Catholic Church !— Sacred Heart Review.

SAINT BLASE

On Monday, February 3, Holy Mother Church celebrates the Feasi of St. Blase.

This saint devoted the earlier years of his life to the story of philosophy, and afterwards became a physician. In the practice of his profession he saw so much of the miseries of life and the hollowness of worldly pleasures that he resolved to spend the rest of his days in the serrice of God, and from being a healer of bodily ailments to become a phy sician of souls. The bishop our saint, much to the gratification of the inhabitants of that city, was appointed to succeed him. St. Blase at once began to instruct his people as much by his example as by his words, and the great virtues and sanctity were attended by many miracles From all parts the people came flocking to him for the cure of bodily and spiritual ills. Agricolaus, governor of Coppadocia and the Lesser Armenia, having begun a persecution by order of the emperor, Licinius, ur saint was seized and hurried off to prison.

While on his way there a distracted of a throat disease, threw herself at the feet of St. Blase and implored his intercession. Touched at her grief the saint offered up his prayers and the child was cured; and since that time his aid has often been effectually solicited in cases of a similar dis-

Refusing to worship the false gods of the heathens, St. Blase was first scourged; his body was then torn with hooks, and finally he was beheaded, in the year 316.

SOCIALISM AND THE GOSPEL

REFUTATION OF BASELESS CON TENTION THAT THE ESSEN. TIALS OF CHRISTIANITY AND SOCIALISM ARE THE SAME

"Though the fundamentals of Socialism and real Christianity are the same, one need not be a Christian to be a Socialist. In the Socialist movement are men and women of all shades and colors of religious belief and disbelief. We may take our Socialism from Karl Marx if we like it better in that form. The essentials are the same, and the acceptance of the Christian religion is not neces sary to the acceptance of the philosophy of Socialism. A man may be a Socialist and not be a Christian, but no man can be a Christian and not be a Socialist if he knows what Social ism is, for the one is the basis of the

The foregoing statement, made by Kate Richards O'Hare in "Church and the Social Problem,' is answered as follows by David Goldstein in "The Live Issue. The fundamentals of Socialism and eal Christianity are as far from each other as the seductions of Lucifer are from the counsels of Christ. One cannot consistently be a Christian and a Socialist at one and the same time. That there are men and women of all shades and colors of disbelief in the Socialist movement is a fact that is patent to any one who comes in contact with the propagators of that cult or reads its "classical literature." All leaders of international standing in the Socialist movement are materialists. Prof. Edward Avel-'son-in-law" of Karl Marx, says ing, "son-in-law" of Karl Marx, says:

"Marx was an avowed atheist. And those who desire to know the scientific reasons for the materialism of Marx, Engels, Bebel, Liebknecht, Guesde, Lafargue, Adler, Plechanoff, in a word, of all the founders and teachers of scientific Socialism, should read the whole of the introduction written by Frederick Engels in 1892 to my translation of his 'Socialism' Scientific and Utopian.'

PRESIDENT NONE - SO - EASY

In "Socialism and Character "we read: "At the present moment I cannot remember a single instance of a person who is at one and the same time a really earnest and intelligent Socialist and an orthodox Christian Those who do not openly attack the Church and the fabric of Christianity show but scant respect to either the or the other in private. And while all of us are thus indifferent to the Church, many of us are frankly hostile to her." . . , . That the Socialist movement has Sebaste, in Armenia, having died, within it men and women of all shades and colors of religious belief is beyond a question of doubt, but they far in the minority. vestigation will prove that there are two main reasons why some religious persons associate themselves with the army of revolt; namely, first their lack of understanding of the fundamentals of Socialism or Christianity, or both, and secondly, their determination to read into Socalist philosophy what does not properly belong there.

A man's Socialism may take any form he may conjure up in his cran-ium, but whether he likes it or not, if While on his way there a distracted mother, whose only child was dying organization Kate Richards O'Hare works for, he centralizes political and economic power into a movement organized to propagate the Karl Marx variety of Socialism—the variety founded upon the philosophy of Materialism.

The essentials are not the same An acceptance of the Christian religion makes the acceptance of Socialist philosophy an impossibility. Christian philosophy is based of the belief in God.

Socialist philosophy denies the exstence of God.

Christian philosophy is based on eternal principles.
Socialist philosophy says " nothing is eternal in nature or in human life; change is the only eternal factor." Christian philosophy says God created man, endowed him with free will and ordained that his life here upon earth shall have as its purpose the attainment of eternal salvation. Socialist philosophy says man is but a part of this universe, which is self-created. He is a mere animal differing only from the lower animals in degree. Man is an irresponsible being, the subject of his environment wholly. He is what the blind forces of the ages have made him to be free will he has not, and the only happiness he may ever hope to attain is right here and now. "His religion," says Karl Marx, is the striving after an imaginary happiness; it springs from a state of society that requires an illusion," but it will disappear in the Socialist society to come.

Of course, a person may be a Socialist and at the same time assert quite loudly that he is a Christian, but no one who knows what Socialism is can truthfully do so. Kate Richards O'Hare will no doubt favorably impress some of her readers with the statement that she was born and raised in a good Campbellite family and educated for the ministry of the Campbellite church," but it shall require more than that to establish her standing as a Christian. Her credential can be justly questioned when she ridicules the conversion of Con stantine and refers to him as "The vilest, most licentious old libertine that ever cursed the earth;" when she dubs the Son of God a "hobo," not once, but a half a dozen times in pamphlet; and when she a small charges the Church He established with "cruelly, heartlessly, brutally killing those who "even suggested they had a right to worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience.'

The greatest of faults is to be con-

Grandpa

Let's buy them some

COWAN'S

The Northern Life Assurance Company of Canada

ENTHUSIASM is the key note of success in the profession of a Life

Enthusiasm for the work: Enthusiasm for the Company. The Northern Life has room for good men who are honest and have the ability to write Life Insurance.

W. M. GOVENLOCK,

JOHN MILNE.

Managing Director

HIGH WATER MARK

The past year recorded a healthy expansion in every department of the Company's activities.

For instance, during 1912 the

NORTH AMERICAN LIFE issued 25% More Business than in 1911

Moreover, this most satisfactory increase was obtained without the use either of delusive promise or of extravagant expenditure.

North American Life Assurance Company "Solid as the Continent"

HEAD OFFICE, TORONTO, CANADA

WATER PRESSURE DOES MOST OF THE WORK

well Ltd., Hamilton

with a Na-Dru-Co Dys-pepsia Tablet after each meal, restore good diges-tion, health and happiness.

A box of Na-Dru-Co Dys-pepsia Tablets costs but 50c. at your Druggist's. National Drug and Chem-ical Co. of Canada, Limited.

A MUSCLE-

BUILDING FOOD

Growing youngsters work hard. They need ood that is nourishing-food that satisfies th hunger and digests easily. Nothing is better for them than Cowan's Perfection Cocoa. Groun

om the fresh Cocoa Beans, it has all the food value of pure Cocoa. It builds up the muscles and makes children healthy and strong. A cup of Cowan's an digest. And it is se delicious that it tempts

the appetite when all other foods fail.

YOUR GROCER

HAS IT

213

with half or one-third milk is a preperly alanced food—one that the most delicate stemach

Cure that Bunion No need to suffer bunion torture another day.

DR. SCHOLL'S BUNION HIGHT

is an ideal preparation for building up the BLOOD and BODY It is more readily assimilated absorbed into the circula tory fluid than any other prepara-tion of iron.

It is of great value in all forms of Anemia and General Debility. For Sale at Drug Stores W. LLOYD WOOD

General Agent Toronto :: Canada THE STANFACTOR OF THE STANFACT

There are No Substitutes For Eddy's Matches

Insist on getting Eddy's Matches. The home needs our safety; the smoker, our vestas; the out-ofdoors man our flamers.

There's an Eddy Match for every purpose-make sure you get them.

For Sale Everywhere

THE E. B. EDDY COMPANY HULL, CANADA

CHATS WITH YOUNG MEN

A LENTEN SUGGESTION

To most people, especially the young, the seven weeks of Lent seem interminable. The season of merry-making, theatre-going, and general amusements, which comes in with such a rush after Christmas, is now brought to a standstill for all who are worthy of the name Catholic. Even what is called "society," is forced, by common decency, to form, at least exteriorly, to the penitential customs.

Now every one, the young and the old, should bear in mind that some thing is required of them during the season—all, in imitation of our Lord must make some sacrifice. So few there are who think themselves obliged to fast or abstain, that the great majority are obliged to invent some means of mortification, which, while it will not injure their health, or prevent them from fulfilling their duties, will, at least, make them fee the spirit of this holy time. "I don't see any harm in going to a theatre during Lent; it isn't a mortal sin," says some young simple-ton. No, it is not a mortal sin; but it shows that you have very little love of God in your heart—for you are likely one of those who maintain that you cannot fast. Would you also persuade yourself that you are capable of no practices of mortification, even so slight a denial as this t Lent is the time of self-denial, pen ance and prayer, and therefore parties, balls, and public amusements are out of place. Your evenings should be spent at home with your family Your evenings should Interest yourself in good reading or in works of charity. Try to be home every evening in time to join in with the family in the recitation of the rosary. All these things will prepare your soul for a happy Easter. No one is worthy to rise with Christ at Easter who has not denied himself during

Strive to conquer resentment over-sensitiveness, coldness, unkind suspicious, harsh words. No one be omes holy in a day, and on the other hand, no one usually separates from God by a sudden rupture. Dangerous reading, a prayer neglected, a fit of day-dreaming that we have indulged in, a light, frivolous friendship that we have kept up; these are the little things that form the starting point of a ruinous course. Let us make serious resolutions for the future, and let us put them into practice during this holy season of Lent. DO PENANCE

Penance has not a very pleasant sound; it is one of the hard sayings which few can endure. It is one of the things that made the young man. who asked Christ how to be perfect turn away sad. It is one of the follies of the cross, a word the worldly wise never understand. Even some Christians think that it is out of fash ion in our day, that only the saints ever practiced it, and that with an excessive rigor which is more to be marvelled at than imitated.

And yet Christ, Who is to be imitated by all who hope for salvation through Him, did penance, and His long fast in the desert was not the only penance He did. He warned us also: Except you do penance, you shall likewise perish. He has dignified the virtue of penance, by making it the chief factor in the sacrament by which sin is forgiven; and He has commended it to us by the parable of the Prodigal Son, by His mercy and love for Mary Magdalene.

Christ did not need to do penance, for He was sinless and commit sin. We need to do penance by the sorrow of our hearts for our sins and even for our disposition to commit sin; by sincere resolve and effort to amend our lives, to master our unruly passions and avoid the oc casions of sin; by fasting; by watching, by almsdeeds, and by other means of self-denial and mortification, which may help us to make sat isfaction for the past, to repair its evil and to chastise our lower appetites into subjection to reason.

As we enter the holy season of Lent, we should pray that we may begin and end it with a humble and contrite mind, with true sorrow for our sins, with due appreciation of the wisdom of the Church which imposes, and regulates our penances, and with the disposition to do all we can in order to share more abundantly in the benefits of the virtue of penance, and of the sacrament also, which is recommended to our piety especially at this time. - Church

GOD'S OWN GENTLEMEN

Recently I read a story of a man heterly wronged by a woman. While he was at the point of death his sweetheart married a scamp, writes A Looker-On" in the Boston Pilot. He saw the account of the wedding as he was slowly recovering.

Health and happiness were gone forever, but he went back to duty as city auditor. The scamp was a city employe, and had stolen $3,000. The auditor found it out. The scamp begged for mercy, as he had a wife and child. The auditor paid back the money out of his own pocket, and even saved the scamp from disgrace by interceding with the chief. All for the sake of a woman he had hoped to call wife, and who was unhe had finished, remarked:

pieces by a passing car. As they lifted up the mangled, little form, he opened his pain-shrunk lips to whismen.

per to the ambulance surgeon "Don't mother." He was one of God' own little gentlemen, too.

So we meet them here and there in life, and mankind is better that they have lived. Not especially wise or successful, but so kind and true and strong that there is an aura around their names like the halo depicted above the head of a saint They represent human nature at its They help us to imagine dimly what sort of men might now peopling this earth had not Adam

You may say that they are rare. All good things are. But they are not so rare as you think. There are men on your own street, these men whom you meet every day, who are bearing the burden of harsh fate gallantly and smilingly. They will never tell you. Heroes do not tell their own

Take up your morning paper, and there, wedged in between murders and divorce suits, you may chance upon a short account of heroism so fine that it will make your eyes dim Neither you nor I could have done it. This man did. He was one of God's own gentlemen.

Certain characters in fiction shine out of the printed pages. Such was Colonel Newcombe, Thackeray's masterpiece. Chamber's "Malcourt" was another, albeit stricken with mad ness at the end. But they are plentiful in real life, too. We do not see them, because our eyes are bent on successful men, who stride to power over the necks of others or borrow their way to the top. means everything to-day.

HOW SPOONER STOPPED SMOK ING

A story from real life illustrating some display of strength of character is more influential than a long sermon. "Have a cigar?" said John C. Spooner, formerly United States Senator from Wisconsin, to his visitor as he pushed a box of perfectos toward The senator sat in his den looking out upon Central Park, New York City, with the floor strewn with law books, which he had been using in preparing a brief upon an international tariff question. Declining the proferred cigar with the remark that he did not smoke, the visitor was surprised to hear the 'Neither do I, and the senator sav way in which I came to stop smoking is a queer story." Then he told how he gave up the "nicotine habit."

For thirty years I was an incessant smoker," said the senator, "and had a cigar in my mouth nearly all the time. Cigars soothed my nerves when I worked hard. At least that was my belief. I knew the habit was filling me with nicotine, but it did not seem to effect my health much.

"My son Charles who had been graduated from a law school and was preparing to go West and put out his shingle in a new country. He and I sat together one night before the time of his departure and as we conversed I thought that before he left it would be a good idea to have the boy quit drinking. At the time I did not really know whether he was addicted to as he was going away it would be a good idea to have him promise not to drink.

Do you drink, Charlie?' I said to him, and he responded, 'Once in a while. Why?' 'I would like you to promise me,' I said, 'that you will next tenth interiors. You not touch intoxicating liquors. You are going far away to begin your career in a rough country, and I would feel better if you promise me before you go that you will not drink. We probably won't see much of each other again for a good many years, and it would give me great consola-tion to know that wherever you are you are in no danger of being ruined

Coolly looking me over, Charlie said: Father, you smoke too much. You are filled with nicotine. I am going away and we will probably not

"' My son, said I, 'you have touched me in a very weak spot. I We will both quit our bad habits. I between now and the time the Sen- school." ate adjourns for the session, and I in my mouth. But when the Speakwill throw away my cigar and will never smoke again.

The senator said he and his son shook hands on the compact and that both of them have kept their pledges. -Catholic Columbian.

Just as you now play a piece without the music and do not think what notes you strike, though once you picked them out by slow and patient toil, so if you begin of set purpose you will learn the law of kindness in utterance so perfectly that it will be second nature to you and make more music in your life than all the songs the sweetest voice has ever sung.

He never spoke of these
A friend told the story, and which caught popular favor — these will be forgotten some day, but the gentle touch we gave to a lonely soul "Yes, he was one of God's own gentle- in sorrow, the kind word we spoke to a disheartened brother, the A small newsboy was all but cut to hymn we sang to cheer a burdened

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS the scar through life.

THE PRETTIEST GIRL

I know who will get the prize, laughed Dorothy. Half a dozen girls were on their way home from school and something very unusual had happened. Mrs. Nailor, the wealthiest woman in Dover, had visited the school that day, and not only that but she had offered a prize to the one whom for three reasons, she could pronounce the prettiest girl in the chool.

Mrs. Nailor's beautiful home or the hill was a great source of enter tainment to the children, who never tired of peering through the high iron bars of the fence at the deer darting in and out among the shub bery and watching the sparkling fountain and the shining gold fish darting about in its crystal waters.

Mrs. Nailor had said that she kne all the girls and that they must be very careful for she would be watching them when they were unaware of and she would not tell when she would make school inspections.

'I'm so tired of taking beauty prizes!" exclaimed Elsie, pettishly It must be hard to be so pretty snapped Alice, spitefully. Alice had pretty face, too, but very unhappy disposition. I wish I was pretty," sighed Bess, mournfully. 'There's no danger of Katherine getting the prize," laughed Alice. Katherine's lips quivered, but she looked up with a brave smile and said sweetly: "Elsie is so beautiful I just love to sit and look at her, and sometimes I think Alice is almost as pretty. "Why don't you curl your hair and get some pretty dresses; you might get the prize sure enough if you kept your face away from the light

"Hush," interrupted Dorothy, there's Mrs. Nailor passing."
"I wonder why she walks when he has such splendid carriages and an automobile," said Bertha, half aloud.

"Because walking makes strong and well," replied Katherine.

It was true that Katherine was not beautiful. Her face was plain, her complexion dark, and her hair a dull rown, but her eyes were her charm —large, clear and truthful—and her teeth shone like pearls. Her simple black dress and hat were anything but becoming, still there was an in describable sweetness in her expres

"I'm going to buy that light blue accordeon plaited dress at Rayner's and charge it until I get the prize money," said Elsie. "Mrs. Nailor sits right opposite us in church and she'll be sure to notice what I have

The month passed by at last and all were assembled in the auditorium of the school, which was crowded to the doors with parents and friends. Elsie sat in the first seat, resplendent in the light blue silk. The presentation of the prize was the last feature on the program, and when Mrs. Nailor took the platform a was something queenly in her bear-ng.

"Dear girls," she said, "if I could you might understand and thus ap-preciate how hard it is for me to come to a decision. During the month I have watched and studied One of his contemporarie you all very carefully that I might be for the following story : perfectly just and make no mistake. and soul. I pronounce Katherine most highly gifted. have a good deal of hard work to do Sharp the prettiest girl in the Annid the thundering applause think I can do better if I have a cigar Katherine was seen to wipe her eyes in my mouth. But when the Speak- and when she came to the platform, er's gavel sounds for the last times dressed in her plain white dress, she will throw away my cigar and will scarcely lifted her eyes, and it was noticed that she carried one arm in a sling.

Only a week before her grandmother, with whom she had lived since her father and mother died, had been sitting beside a log fire, and falling asleep, a brand had ignited her dress, and just at the critical moment Katherine came in, not until she had burned her arm so

Roche's Herbal Embrocation

Hooping-Cough

OR CROUP Bronchitis, Lumbago & Rheumatism W. EDWARDS & SON, Victoria Street, London, England.

badly that she would probably bear the scar through life.

"She bears a scar," said Mrs.
Nailor, "homely, perhaps, to those who are ignorant of its origin, but to those who know it is like a 'crown

And now before we separate for the summer, let me urge you to seek rather for the heart's treasure of beauty than mere beauty of face and form—work for it, wait for it, pray for it. It is God's to give and yours to win."-True Voice.

BE HELPFUL Look out for others. If you are strong, so much the more should you keep an eye out to see where and when you can help one less favored than yourself.

A number of robust, active boys were busy in playing baseball, while a little lame fellow, about twelve pale and sickly, stood leaning on his crutches, evidently very sorry that he was not able to take part in the exciting game. Indeed, he seemed to lose sight of the fact of how much lose sight of the fact of how much his infirmity unfitted him to join in the sport of his stout and healthy companions. The other boys good naturedly tried to persuade him to stand on one side, and let another take his place; but they were thoughtful enough to put it on the ground that they were afraid he might get hurt.

"Why, Jimmy," said one, at last forgetting himself for a moment you can't run, you know."

"O, hush!" answered another, the tallest boy of the party. "Never mind, I'll run for him, and you can count it for him."

So saying, the noble fellow took nis place by Jimmy's side, saying to the other, in a lower tone, were like him, you wouldn't like to be told of it all the time.'

WHAT IS A BOY? That was a good answer which was given when a visitor asked the ques

What is a boy?" A little fellow started from his seat, and replied : "A boy, sir, is the beginning of man. That was a true answer, for every man was once a boy. Let us remem ber that what a boy is in his youth usually decides what kind of a man he will become. So, boys, be true be honest, kind, brave and industrious now, and then when you have grown to be men you will be the kind of men that our country needs.

FAMOUS SURGEON

SHOWS THE FALLACY OF WHAT IS CALLED THE DARWINIAN THEORY

The award of the Nobel prize fo medicine to Dr. Alexis Carrel, New York, in recognition of his achieve ments in the suture of blood vessels and the transplantation of organs has had an unexpected result in France The first accounts of Dr. Carrel's work met with undisguised skepticism in Paris, which even the fact that he was French born failed to the habit or not, but I thought that as he was going away it would be a was not a beautiful woman, but there Nobel prize to the doctor changed public opinion, which is now anxious to know why such a scientist was > lost to France. Inquiries at Dr. Carrel's birthplace, conscientious house surgeon, with dexterity of fingers resembling that

One of his contemporaries vouches

Among Dr. Carrel's patients was a My observations have taught me many things. First of all, I looked for beauty of character, where I saw beauty of face, and I regret sincerely beauty of face, and I regret si to say that in every instance I found she would go to Lourdes and beseech conceit and selfishness accompany- divine intervention. Dr. Carrel, aling it, and I became aware that I though himself a believer, said in the must look higher for what I was presence of witnesses that if she see each other for some time. This smoking is ruining your health. I would like to feel while I am away that your health is not being ruined by this dangerous nicotine habit. I'll tell you what I will do. You quit smoking and I will quit drinking.'

""My son, said I, 'you have 'seeking. The day I offered the prize I overheard part of a conversation, one sentence of which made a lasting impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to taking beauty prizes!' I wish to stamp indelibly upon your minds now at this awakening period of your lives the true ideal of beauty.

""My son, said I, 'you have 'seeking. The day I offered the prize it overheard part of a conversation, one sentence of which made a lasting impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to the prize it on and would undeniably manifest it, the direction of his future life impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to take impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to remain a direction of his future life impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to remain a direction of his future life impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to take impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to remain a would undeniably manifest impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to take impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to remain a would be clear and he would enter holy orders. The woman returned from Lourdes cured, and Dr. Carrel the prize in a conversation, one sentence of which made a lasting impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to remain a would undeniably manifest impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to remain a would undeniably manifest in the direction of his future life impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to remain a would undeniably manifest in the direction of his future life impression upon me: 'I'm so tired to remain a would undeniably manifest in the vertical and would un seeking. The day I offered the prize | were cured by supernatural interven-For my heroine I have chosen one whom I consider endowed with the made however, to man, not to God, take great delight in smoking a good | three requisites needful to take the | but retaining the profession to which cigar, but if you are game so am I. prize, namely, beauty of mind, heart he was devoted and for which he was

A few days ago Dr. Carrel, in an in terview in a New York paper, thus paid his respects to what is called the Darwinian theory:

"Recent discoveries in science tend to refute the Darwinian theory rather than to confirm it. Various sections of the anatomy of the monkey, when transformed to the human body in surgery operations. do not thrive as well as those organs taken from some of the lower animals such as the sheep, the dog and the

"Many men of much learning for years have argued that the similarity and throwing a rug about her succeeded in smothering the flames, but of the construction of the two—man and monkey—was a direct proof that the former must be the more highly developed species of the latter.

"Their contention was that genera tion after generation of civilization ended to change the formation of the anatomy of the monkey to the standard of the man. Thus they accounted for the elimination of the tail, the tranformation of the paw to the hand, the claw to the toe, and so

"Physiological and anthropological science deducts from a different standpoint, however. This standard regards the formation and similarity of the various tissues and glands their natural longevity of life, and their ability to thrive when transferred to the opposite being as the fundamental basis for comparison. "This being accepted as the true standard for reasoning, then, most assuredly man never had an ape or an orang-outang as a prehistoric an

FOR MAKING SOAP FOR WASHING DISHES FOR SOFTENING WATER FOR DISINFECTING SINKS CLOSETS DRAINS ETC.

MADE IN CANADA EW. GILLETT CO.LTD. TORONTO-ONT. WINNIPEG MONTREAL

ONLY VENEER OF CHRISTIANITY

"Our present lax code of morals would make the ancient pagan draw himself up with scorn if he were to see them as they are to-day," said Prof. Ignatius W. Cox, S. J., of Boston college in a lecture before the Holy Name Society in the church of Our Lady of Lourdes, Bechmont. "We must understand our age," he said, "and realize that the world is no longer Christian-it is pagar Outside the Catholic church you will find only the thinnest veneer Christianity. Modern biblical criticism has sapped the very foundation of Protestantism and the new theology has completed the wreck. The old truths have crumbled away in the hands of the Protestants and they are left with no foundation for their religion. They have builded on the shifting sands, and the next great storm will sweep them completely

When was there a time when there were so many incentives to coming as they do from the cheap 5-cent theatres, the immoral stage and a dissolute method of conveying so-called daily news? What. too, is a plainer demonstration of our paganism that the present condition of divorce?

"It is the professors of our grea universities who are defending, dis seminating and popularizing these new doctrines on marriage. Pro-Giddings of Columbia university said 'It is not right to set up a technical legal relationship as morally super-ior to the spontaneous preference of man and woman.' This, translated is a plea for free love.

"Prof. Charles Zueblin has said: There can be and there are hollier alliances without the marriage bond than with it." And recently before the woman students of Vasaar he nade a plea for free love that would bring the blush of shame to the faces of the most pagan in the commun-

THE CARDINAL'S CONVERT

When the late Cardinal Cullen of sick call from a priest from the pro-Cathedral. The sick person was at Cathedral. The sick person was at —— hotel, the proprietor of which was a Protestant. A stormy, wet, dark night it proved. As soon as the messenger got there a priest started. Through mud and slush he made his way, and at last arrived at the hotel, saw the sick per son and gave him the sacraments Everything went off as usual thus far but now the curious part began. The proprietor of the hotel, a good-natured, earnest man, thinking to do a little proselytizing, invited the priest to come into his own sittingroom. After administering some welcome refreshments, this Protest ant evangelist let himself out.

"To think, father," said he, addressing the priest, "of the pride dressing the priest, "of the pride and sloth of those Bishops and Car dinals! Is it not monstrous? warrant now that, while the Cardina has sent you on this long tramp through the muddy snow he is comfortably toasting his heels and drink ing a good warm punch. think you wrong him."

Why?" "Because he is doing nothing of the kind."

You don't tell me. But how do you know?" 'I know by the best of reasons

You haven't asked me my name.' Your name? What is it?" "Cullen-Cardinal Cullen."

In a moment the hotel keeper was n his feet—his hat off. Will Your Eminence forgive me spoke in ignorance. Shall I order carriage for Your Eminence?" 'Oh, no; I can go back as I came. am used to such journeys.'

The Cardinal departed. A few days afterward the hotel keeper went to a priest for instructions and was finally received into the Church.-London Truth.

The motto marked upon our fore heads, written upon our doorposts, channelled in the earth, and wafted upon the waves is, and, must be, "Labor is honorable, and idleness is dishonorable."—Carlyle.

To submit to a headache is to waste energy, time and comfort.

To stop it at once simply take

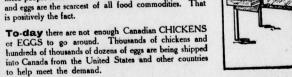

NA-DRU-CO Headache Wafers Your Druggist will confirm our statement that they do not contain thing that can harm heart or nervous system. 25c. a box.
NATIONAL DRUG AND CHEMICAL CO. OF CANADA, LIMITED. 124

Thou Cost Less "Clay" Gates STRONGEST and best farm gate made. 30,000 sold in 1912. Can't sag, bend or break. Can be raised as shown. Good for Winter and Summer. Send for illustrated price list. The CANADIAN GATE CO. Ltd. 64 Morris St., GUELPH, Ont. and ast Longer

$5,000,000.00 FOR PEERLESS WAY POULTRYMEN

last year went five million dollars made from the poultry these people raised. Yet chickens are scarce in Canada and eggs are the scarcest of all food com is positively the fact.

Yet there is a shortage! Eggs are commanding a tremendous price—chickens

Now is the time to take advantage of this situation and make money out of it yourself. You can raise and sell 600 chickens this next year, and you will find a quick and sure market for every one of them. You can get the top notch price for all the hundreds of dozens of eggs that your poultry lay. Let us tell you how!

Poultry raising is the best business for any farmer, any farmer's wife or farmer's child. The poultry crop is the one crop that never fails. It pays better for the time and money invested; the profit is surest; it isn't overcrowded and never will be.

Our book "When Poultry Pays," will show you. Let us send it to you. It interesting; it is instructive, and it contains the proof. You need this book. It will be mailed free. A post card will bring it.

LEE MANUFACTURING CO., LIMITED 14 PEMBROKE ST. PEMBROKE ONT.

WE OFFER

1. A beautiful framed picture, 12 x 14, Heari Hoffman's celebrated "Head of Christ at Twelve" in rich Sepia, Black, or Colons, ready to hang on wall. Carefully packed and sent te any address for only 75c.

2. Sacred Heart of Jesue (Picture 15 x 29) in a handsome 2 piece frame 3 inches wide, $1.25.

3. Sacred Heart of May (Picture 15 x 26) in similar frame, $1.25. Other subjects on request. All honest value. THE ROYAL ART CO., P.O. BOX 831, "HALIFAX, N.S.

A DRUGGIST IN WINNIPEG

Cured Himself With GIN PILLS No greater compliment could be paid GIN PILLS than to have a druggist use them. Mr. Rogers being in the business, tried all the ordinary remedies, but it was not until he used GIN PILLS that he was cured of a severe pain in the back.

Winnipeg, May 19th. 1912. Winnipeg, May 19th. 1912.

"In the autumn of 1911, I suffered with a continual pain in the back. As a druggist, I tried various remedies without any apparent results. Having sold GIN PILLS for a number of years, I thought there must be good in them otherwise the sales would not increase so fast. I gave them a fair trial and the results I found to be good."

GEO. E. ROGERS.

GEO. E. ROGERS. GIN PILLS must cure you or your money will be refunded. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Sample free if you write National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto.

THIS WASHER MUST PAY FOR ITSELF

MAN tried to sell me a horse once. He said it was a fine horse and had nothing the matte with it. I wanted a fine horse. But, I didn't know anything about horses much.

And I said to my self, lots of people Machine as I though

So, thought i, it is not a month, bef ie they try my Washing Machines for a month, bef ie they pay for them, just as I wanted to try the horse. You see I sell my Washing Machines by mail. I have sold over half a million that way. Now, I know what our '1900 Gravity' Washer will do. I know it will wash the clothes with meaning or tearing them, in less than half the out wearing or tearing them, in less than half the out wearing or tearing them, in less than half the time they can be washed by hand or by any other machine.

I know it will wash a tub full of very dirty clithes in Six minutes. I know no other machine ever invented can do that without wearing out the clothes. Our "1900 Gravity" Washer does the work so easy that a child can run it almost as well as a strong woman, and it don't wear the clothes fear the edges not brake buttons the way all other machines do.

It just drives soapy water clear through the fibres of the clothes like a force pump might.

Scald I to myself, I will do with my "1900 Gravity" Washer what I wanted the man to do with the lorse. Only I won't wait for people to ask me. I'll offer first, and I'll make good the offer every time.

Let me end you a "1900 Gravity" Washer on a month's free trial. I'll pay the feight out of my own pocket, and i' you don't want the machine after you've used a month. I'll take it back and pay the freight too. Surely that is fair enough, isn't if?

Doesn't it prove that the "1900 Gravity" Washer must be all that I say it is?

And you on pay me out of what it saves for you. It will save its whole cost in a few months, in wear and tear on the clothes allowed that week voll washer washer week to the solone. And then it will save you still save you for it out of what it saves you. If it saves you so cents a week over that m washwoman's wages. It you keep the machine after the month's trial, I'l let you pay for it out of what it saves you. If it saves you so cents a week well paid for. I'll take that cheefully, and I'll wait for my money until the machine itself earns the balance.

Drop me a line to day, and let me send you a book about the "1900 Gravity" Washer that washes clothes in 6 minutes.

Addresser.

in 6 minutes.

Address me personally—C B. Morris, Manager 1900 Washer Co., 357 Yonge St., Toronto.

A Good Used Piano is often better than a cheap new one. We have all makes in those slighti-used instruments taken in part payment of Player Pianos. Send for list and bargad price to-day stating make and style preferred The Bell Piano and Music Wareroom.

THE MIND OF THE CHURCH

Professor Bertram Windle, K. S. G., one of the most distinguished univer-sity principals in Ireland, contributes to the Catholic Truth library a bro-chure entitled "The intellectual Claims of the Catholic Church," one of the greatest facts that history has as he puts it. The article, which first made its appearance in the form of an address in Dublin, is devoted to showing up the fallacy that the Catholic Church is solely a Church whose appeal is made to the heart, and that it takes no account of intellectual needs of its followers. We forget," says Dr. Windle, perhaps, we have never known, that the Church has been the mother, and in many cases the fondly loved mother, of more great writers and of of discovery, than have all the other religions of the world put together." Much of this indifference and ignorance, says Dr. Windle, will probably vanish now that Catholics are given a full and fair chance to acquire a knowledge of the intellectual treasures of the Church. In particular, he insists, / will a study of the works of the muchabused worthless, the "Schoolmen," or Scholastic Philosophers, disabuse the prejudiced reader of the notion that their age was one of de-liberate Obscurantism, in which the killing of all original thought and research in science was aimed at. The Schoolmen did not spend all their time in discussing such problems as the number of angels that could dance on the point of a needle," as anti-Christian writers used to state. Nevertheless, such a problem contained within it another philosophic problem of great interest and profundity, just as certainly as the large the so-called Fourth Dimension (a condition the existence of which no Scholastics whose scientific philosoone can attest or deny) has provided scientific thinkers with much import to that ef the modern physicist than and philosophers of the Catholic centuries of scientific workers, i. e., the contemptible triflers some people would have us believe, and it is extraordinary how nearly the traordinary how nearly they approached to the theories which scientific men of to-day are coming to tific men of to-day are coming to be-lieve—theories, too, of the absolute so closely resembling the last word thus far uttered by science on chemifalsity of which the predecessors of cal matters.

DIABETES

is the only remedy which has record of complete cures. Price $2.00 at Most Leading D uggists. Literature Free.

THE SANOL MFG. CO., LTD. WINNIPEG, MAN.

the present generation of scientific men were equally well assured. In the respect of the Darwinian theory, for example, the Evolution or Transformation which he is said to have invented. Darwin himself would more great discoveries in all branches have been the last to claim as his "invention." The view was put forward long before Darwin's time, and was commented on by St. Augustine and by St. Thomas Aquinas among others, the now well-known ideas of Natural Selection being duly animadverted upon. Yet the lay historians of to-day, who accuse the Church of deliberately keeping the minds of her follow ers in the dark, never by any chance will admit that Catholic writers of the "Dark Ages" had ever written about this subject. The theory of evolution has been discussed, says Dr. Windle, by Catholic philosophers for many centuries past.

In Chemistry, too, the Catholic Schoolmen, were, centuries ago, forecasting the ideas which in later times came to be used largely in the research work and thought of modern practitioners in that science. What men are teaching now-a-days as to the properties and potentialities of Urauium (from which Actinium may be formed, and from Actinium, Radimathematical literature written about | um) was being at least theorized upon

Professor Driesch, the author of "Science and Philosophy of the Or-ganism," a non-Catholic, has (says Windle) in his exposition which are recognized as authoritative among all the scientific professors of to-day adopting views concerning life devel-opement and evolution which are practically identical with those of the Schoolmen. In Germany and the United States, a number of leading biologists (says Windle) have abandoned the purely materialistic or chemico-physical explanation of life, and have returned to the conception so long and so persistently held by Catholic philosophers. Can the Schoolmen, then, have been so very inept?

What Dr. Windle insists upon, in order to confound those who forever harp upon the "obscarantist" charge, is that the works of men who were cap-able of thinking out conclusions so very close to those of modern men of sci ence, are not to be wholly despised by modern students, of no matter what class, degree or soct. Furthermore, he emphasizes the fact that these Scholastic conclusions were those of thinkers who wrote in and, what is more to the point, on behalf of the

The conclusion, therefore, is that hose who deny the intellectual greatness of the Church are confessing their own profound ignorance, for the Catholic Church, from the intellectual standpoint, is, says Windle, just as much a matter for marvel as it is from any other point from which it may be viewed.-Freeman's Journal.

Minds are sometimes more impressed by the example of a faithful soul than by works of doctrine.

Chapped Hands — Rough Skin — Sore Lips — cured by Campana's Italian Balm. Send two-cent stamp for postage on free trial size - mentioning this paper — to the distribu-tors, for Canada, E. G. West & Co., Toronto, Can.

NEW BOOKS

"Pulpit Sketches." By Rev A A. Lambert, Missionary, Published by Benziger Brothers, New York. Price $1.50 net.

"Working for God." From the writings of St. A'phonsus Liguori. Edited by Right Rev. Alex. MacDonald, D. D. Published by the Christian Press Association, New York. Price 30 cts.

"Walking with God; Doing God's Will." From the writings of "t. Alphonsus Liguori. Edited by "ight Rev. Alex. MacDonald, D. D. Bishoo of Victoria, B. C. Published by the Christian Press Association, New York. Price 30 cts.

MARRIAGE

DONNELLY-TAYLOR-At. St. Thomas Ont., on January 20, 1913, by Rev. T. West, John Donnelly to Miss Ellen Taylor, daughter of Mr. James Tay lor, Alexandra Ave.

WHISKEY HOLDS ITS VICTIMS UNTIL RELEASED BY WONDERFUL SAMARIA PRESCRIPTION

Liquor sets up inflammation and irritation of the stomach and weaken the nerves. The steady or periodical (spree) drinker is often forced to drink even against his will by his unnatural physical condition.

Samaria Prescription stops the craving, steadies the nerves, builds up the general health, and makes drink actually distasteful and nauseous. It is is tasteless and odorless. and can be given with or without the knowledge of the patient. Thousands of Canadian homes have been saved from misery and disgrace by some devoted mother or daughter through this wonderful Canadian Remedy. This money formerly wasted in drink has restored happiness, home comforts, education and respect to the families formerly in want and despair.

Read the following, one of the numerous unsolicited testimonials

Lean never repay you for your remedy. It is worth more than life to me. My husband has been offered liquor several times, but would not touch it. He said it had no charm for him now. May God's above blessings ever rest on you and yours are my their the sever. No one knows it but those who have tried it. As soon as I can I will see others that I know would give anything to stop their husbands from drink. I will give them your address.

(Name withheld on request).

Now if you know of any family needing this remedy tell them about it. If you have any friend or rela tive who has formed or is forming the drink habit, help him to release himself from its awful clutches. Samaria Prescription is used by Physicians and Hospital. naria Prescription, with booklet, giving full particulars, testimonials price, etc., will be sent absolutely free and postpaid in plain sealed package to anyone asking for it and mentioning this paper. Correspondence sacredly confidential. Write to-day, The Samaria Remedy Co Dept. 11, 49 Colborne Street, Toronto, Canada.

BUSINESS COLLEGE LADIES BUSINESS COLLEGE, CATHOLIC Bond street, Toronto—Day and evening; prospectus free.

Funeral Directors

Smith, Son & Clarke

115 Dundas St. 629 Dundas St. Open Day and Night

Leading Undertakers and Embalm Open Night and Day Telephone—House 3/3 Factory—543

William J Ball

Funeral Director

491 Richmond St. Phone 3971

A subscriber wishes to return thanks to the Sacre-art for a favor received and promise to publish a the CATHOLIC RECORD.

TEACHERS WANTED

alifications and experience, at once. Apply to Willia tick Station, P. O., Ont.

HOUSEKEEPER WANTED HOUSEKEEPER WANTED IN A COUNTRY village—for small plain living family. Catholic preferred. Good permanent position for suitable party. State wages expected. Address Box I. CATHOLIC RECORD, London, Ont. 1789-1

FOR SALE

POR SALE CEMENT STORE AND STOCK OF general merchandise in a Catholic community in southern Ontario. Excellent chance for a live man. No opposition. Post Office in connection. Good reason for selling. For particulars apply to flox "S." CATHOLIC RECORD, London, Ont. 1745-5

Undertakers and Embalme

John Ferguson & Sons 180 King Street

Open Day and Night

Class professional certificate, for Kinkora, S. S. State salary expected and Apoly anying references

CATHOLIC TEACHER WANTED, WITH and or 3rd class certificate, for No. 2. Trout Creek, Ont. Apply stating salary and qualifications to Casper Verslegers, Sec. Treas., Trout Creek, Ont.

is never too late to act upon January resolutions. If you have not yet opened your 1913 savings account with the Home Bank, do so now. One dollar opens an account, and when you have your bank book, with the money to your credit, you will likely keep on saving odd dollars all year.

> LONDON OFFICE - W. J. HILL, Manager 394 RICHMOND STREET

BRANCH OFFICES ALSO: ILDERTON THORNDALE KOMOKA
DELAWARE LAWRENCE STATION MELBOURNE

O. M. B. A. Branch No. 4, London tests on the and and 4th Thursday of every notate t eight o'clock, at their Rooms, St. Peter's Paral fall Richmond street. P. H. RANARAM, President SMIS & McDoposall Secretary.

BUSINESS AND SHORTHAND Subjects taught by expert instructors at the Westervell School LONDON, ONT.

Students assisted to positions. College in session from Sept. 3rd. Catalogue free. Enter any time.

J. W. Westervelt
Principal

J. W. Westervelt, Jr.
Chartered Accountant
Vice-Principal 16

your name and address to SHAW'S SCHOOLS, GERRARD AND YONGE STS., TORONTO, and receive by return mail a copy of our new catalogue which explains the courses given by us : ading to a good salary.

NAME.

ADDRESS ..

A 7% Investment

National Securities Corporation, Ltd. Confederation Life Building, Toronto

ANDLES for CANDLEMAS

St. Blase Candles Guaranteed Rubrical Candles

> PALM for Palm Sunday

Mission Supplies a Specialty

J. J. M. LANDY CATHOLIC CHURCH GOODS 405 YONGE STREET, TORONTO

The Best List of Used Pianos we have ever Offered

DURING the years that we have been offering used pianos, we have never been able to present better values than shown in this list. These pianos (square, upright) are, in respect to tone, condition and appearance, as good as if brand new, offered at prices representing a mere fraction of their value. We know pianos--and highly recommend these. If you need a piano here is an unusual chance. Any piano is sent on approval to any address in Canada and may be returned freight collect if not satisfactory. Each instrument is guaranteed for 5 years. Send second choice in case your first choice is sold before your order is received.

.$50.00 cash, $12.00 monthly. 10 per cent. off these Prices for Cash.

List of Square Pianos

CHICKERING-7 1-3 octave square piano by the celebrated Chickering Company, of Boston, a beautiful rich tone piano, such as is rarely pro-curable. Were this piano an upright, it would sell for a great deal more money. Original cost, $600.00. Sale price..... KNABE—Another exceptional square grand piano, 71-3 octave; this one by the original Knabe firm, Baltimore. Pianos of this kind are seldom exchanged, for the owners' enthusiasm is such that they refuse to part with them for any consideration. Original cost, $600.00. Sale price.....$145

Upright Pianos MENDELSSOHN-An attractive upright piano of moderate size, and simple though artistic in design, manufactured by the Mendelssolin Co., Toronto, in double-veneered mahogany case, has trichord overstrung scale, double-repeating action, etc., etc. Used only a short while. Special

HEINTZMAN & CO .- 7 1-3 octave upright

GERHARD HEINTZMAN—7 1-3 octave upright piano by the Gerhard-Heintzman Co., Toronto, has been thoroughly repaired and is in

EMPRESS-7 1-3 octave cabinet grand scale upright piano, in handsome double-veneered mahogany case, with Boston fallboard, three pedals, etc. This piano is made specially for us and is sold under our registered name and full guarantee. Has been used less than fifteen mo

$238 MENDELSSOHN-7 1-3 octave upright piano

WINTER—7 1-3 octave cabinet grand upright piano our special Winter model, in walnut case with full-length music desk; has Boston fall-board, three pedals, ivory and ebony keys, etc. Just like new. Sale Price. .$248 MASON & RISCH—7 1-3 octave cabinet grand upright piano by Mason & Risch, Toronto, in handsome figured walnut case, full-length music desk, Boston fallboard, three pedals, ivory and ebony keys, etc. As good as new. Sale Price.... $283

KNABE—The celebrated Knabe upright piano, manufactured by the Knabe Company, Baltimore, in handsome dark rosewood case, plain polished panels; is in all respects as good as new; was exchanged for a grand piano. Sale Price......$315

GOURLAY—The new grand scale Gourlay piano, in a handsome Louis XV. case, in figured walnut, has plain polished panels, Boston fallboard, ivory and ebony keys, three pedals, etc., cannot be told from new. Sale Price. $320 GOURLAY—A new grand scale Gourlay, in simple colonial design, in rich mahogany. This piano has been used for concerts, and is as good as new. Its original selection for concert use was because of its remarkable tone quality. Sale

SPECIAL! An 88-note Angelus Player Piano at a Bargain

A cabinet grand upright piano of our own manufacture, in Louis design, mahogany case containing a genuine 88-note Angelus player action, manufactured by the original Angelus inventors, Messrs. Wilcox & White Company, Meriden, Conn. This instrument has been used for about a year and a half, but is in every respect as good as new, and this opportunity to purchase one at a reduced price is most exceptional. Special price with ten rolls of music......$565

Gourlay, Winter & Leeming 188 YONGE ST., TORONTO, ONT.

EATON'S our

SPECIAL FREE DELIV

we will pay charges on shipments amounting to or over to Railway Stations in Ontario Quebec and Maritime Provinces on all orders received up to Feb 28-1913 reserving the right to ship by either freight, express or mail. T. EATON COMITED

CATALOGUE OF

M. um

WONDERFUL VALUES"

SEMI-ANNUALSALE

HERE'S WHY-YOU ECAUSE the opportunity is yours---now---to buy many of the necessities of life at a great saving. EATON quality---always the best, always satisfactory (or your money back), at EATON Sale Prices, which means "close to cost"-In a word-BARGAINS. In addition to all that you have a Special Free Delivery Offer on all $10.00 orders and over. QUICK SERVICE! AND SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR YOUR MONEY BACK

$10.00 ORDERS FROM FALL CATALOGUE SENT

FREIGHT PREPAID

This is undoubtedly a sale of UNPRECEDENTED IMPORTANCE. Hunt up your Sale Catalogue and---look it over carefully. Have you tested its values yet? Make sure you are not without something it may have to offer you---so very economically. Quick action is necessary if you desire to buy, because the time is limited and the demand is great. Send along your order to-day and judge for yourself---the quality---the satisfaction assured---the positive saving in price---the generous Free Delivery Offer, and finally a Sure, Safe Guarantee. DON'T DELAY ORDERING.---THIS SALE ENDS 28th FEB.

NOW IS A GOOD TIME TO BUY GENEROUSLY AND SAVE MONEY IN THE SPENDING

AT. EATON CUMITED

TORONTO CANADA