LONDON IS WELL PLEASED

ROOSEVELT'S SON IS KILLED

Their Powerful Attempts are steadily Opposed by Valiant French-Fierce Fighting Proceeds

By Courier Leased Wire. With the French Army in France, July 16—(By the Associated Press.)—Having met defeat in every effort to advance east of Rheims, the Germans turned their attention toward pushing the advantage they had gained west of that city.

Battles proceeded simultaneously on the right and left banks of the river. The German line of advance appears to be Ventouil on the northern bank, and Ceully on the southern.

The Germans desire by this movement evidently to turn the strong position formed by the forest and mountain of Rheims from the south, as an effort at a frontal attack would probably lead to disaster.

PARIS, July 17.—"The German inoffensive offensive" is how a witty writer, Gustave Thiery, describes the latest effort of General Ludendorff, and the advice from the front seem to justify his paradox.

PREMIER LENINE WAXES CHESTY

He Will Break Off Diplomatic Relations With Great Britain And Other Powers re Landing

LATEST BOMBARDING OF A HOSPITAL

Was Conducted by Two German Airplanes All the Evidence Shows That Bombing Was Deliberately Picked Out

By Courier Leased Wire. Amsterdam, July 17.—Premier Lenine is about to break off diplomatic relations with Great Britain and any other Entente power connected with the landing of armed forces on the Murman coast, according to news said to have been received from Moscow by Berlin newspapers.

By Courier Leased Wire. Paris, July 17.—Two German airplanes took part in the deliberate bombing of the American Red Cross hospital at Juy late Monday night.

A despatch received in London Monday from Moscow by way of Amsterdam reported that British and American troops had occupied the entire Murman coast in northern Russia. An earlier despatch on the same date said the Russian Foreign Office had sent to Great Britain a demand that British detachments on the Murman coast be re-embarked without delay.

There are no structures of any kind near the hospital, and the nearest railroad is three kilometres away. In addition to the usual Red Cross markings, a large cross 60 feet long was in position on the lawn. Photographs taken recently from airplanes show that the cross was visible several thousand feet in the air. Seven witnesses agree that the German-aviators flew back and forth several times. They then shut off their engines, dropped to within a few hundred feet and let go their bombs after a careful observation.

DRIVEN BACK

Washington, July 17.—The following dispatch has been received: West of Chateau Thierry, where the enemy succeeded this morning in crossing on our front and gaining some ground, our troops counter-attacked and drove the enemy back to the Vosges. Five trench raids attempted by the enemy, broke with this morning's Army in France, Tuesday, July 16 (Night).

FAVORABLE OUTCOME

London, July 17.—No French troops from other points on the western front were sent to the present fighting line, says a Havre dispatch from the French Agency. Only the troops in the line and their reserve bore and countered the shock of the German attack. All circumstances, it is added, point to a favorable outcome of the battle.

SATISFACTORY

London, July 17. (Official) The position of the Allies at present stage of the German offensive in France, is said to be distinctly satisfactory. In advance received to-day, the French losses are stated to have been very small.

With Condition of Affairs at End of the Second Day

The Extreme Depth of the Enemy Advance is Five Miles

By Courier Leased Wire. London, July 17.—The end of the second day of the German offensive in view of all circumstances, found the situation distinctly good for the Allies, according to opinion here. The extreme depth of the enemy advance since the attack began Monday morning, does not exceed five miles at any point, which compares poorly with the intention to drive forward 20 kilometres (13.7 miles) on the first day as revealed in captured German orders.

THE SITUATION
The end of the second day found the Germans no further ahead in the taking of important points in connection with their new offensive. It transpires that for the first day they had set the schedule for a thirteen mile advance, but up to date at the further point they have only reached five miles, and the Allied lines still hold.

HOW BRITISH DESTROYERS DEFEND AMERICAN TROOP SHIPS.

To the Editor of the New York Times:
One of the most graphic descriptions of a transport's trip across the ocean and its eventual experiences with enemy submarines that has yet reached us on this side is contained in the enclosed letter that I received a few days ago from my brother in England en route to the front.

June 6, 1918
I am willing to take my hat off for the British warships any day. The escort we met on the coast danger zone was efficiency with a capital "D".

They saved our lives twice. Only their vigilance, marksmanship, and skillful maneuvering saved this convoy. I wouldn't take all the honors in the world for that trip and the thrills that it offered. Only we couldn't see how they could do all that without having the American flag on their masts to inspire them.

RAISE HAMILTON RATES
By Courier Leased Wire
Ottawa, July 17.—The Hamilton Radial Electric Company, in a judgment handed down by the Railway Board to-day is allowed to increase its passenger rates to those enjoyed by the London and Port Stanley railway (recently increased by an order of the Board) subject, however to the limitations created by the municipal franchise by-law. The judgment states that this restriction is likely to prevent any relief whatever being granted the company. The company's application for an increase in rates was opposed by the City of Hamilton, the towns of Burlington and Oakville and other municipalities because of agreements with the radial company as to rates.

Margaret Garrett's Husband

By JANE PHELPS

"Thank you, I hope to." I knew my voice was cold, my answers stilted, but for the moment all my dislike of this man was with me. Had it not been for him perhaps, Bob would never have cared for the things which I blamed for our unhappiness. As we were putting on our wraps Elsie said:

"I'll come down to the Hallord in the morning. Don't go until I see you" then as Bob came for me: "Good night, Bob, you should be very proud to-night. Everybody here has voted your wife a great addition to the party!"

"Yes, indeed!" Henry Creedmore agreed, "and best of all Mrs. Garrett has promised to become one of us this winter—always supposing those boys of hers keep well."

"I could see in Bob's manner that the praise had had its effect. It had been what clever Elsie intended. She knew that a man is always impressed by what others say about his wife—especially when it is said publicly."

"I felt like telling him it was the effect of what had been done in the beauty parlour, but the country which had made me look so well, but I replied in the customary language of society. He then said: "You have broken the ice, now I hope you will often join us."

CHAPTER CVI
The Reaction
I scarcely spoke to Bob for the next two hours. He was the gayest of them all, and everyone seemed to become hilarious all at once. I felt hopelessly out of it, although I tried bravely to hide my feelings.

"What's the matter, Margaret? You started in so badly, and now you've petered out all of a sudden. What is it?" Elsie said to me when we were alone for a moment.

"There's no use, Elsie. When he danced with me he hardly spoke, and when he did, was disagreeable." There was no need to tell her who I meant by "HE."

"It's too bad, but if you allow a little thing like that to discourage you, you might as well give up the whole thing. Brace up like a good game sport you are," and Elsie gave me a loving look along with her slangy advice.

"I'll try," I returned as someone called her away. "If at first you don't succeed, you know," she called back at me. I was a bit everyone tired of dancing, and we had some music. Gladys Root sang and the quartette played for her.
