Was Personally Attended by Dr. A. W. Chase Before He Became Famous as the Author of Dr. Chase's Receipt Book.

Here is a letter from an aged gentleman who consulted Dr. Chase, long before his Receipt Book attained a world-wide circulation or his family medicine became known to the ends of the earth. Like most people of advanced years his kidneys were breaking down and when doctors failed to help him he consulted Dr. A. W. Chase's Receipt Book. He writes: "About fifty years ago, when living in Ann Arbor, Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author, was called on to treat me for pleurisy. Ever since that I have used and recommended Dr. Chase's Receipt Book in the house. "Some time ago a cold settled in the kidneys, causing backache, frequent urination, distaste, and affected the eyesight. My appetite failed and I could not sleep at night. Two doctors failed to do me any lasting good, so I started using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. The results have been most satisfactory. My appetite improved, I gained in weight, sleep and rest well, and feel strong and well. My kidneys resumed their natural functions, and I believe that my cure was due to Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. I am 74 years old, superannuated work on my farm, and can turn in and do some work myself. "Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food, 48 cents a box. ## Joy and Duty.

HENRY VAN DYKE

"Joy is a duty" - so with golden lore The Hebrew rabbi taught in days of yore, And happy hearts heard in their speech Almost the highest wisdom man can reach. But one bright peak still rises far above, And there the Master stands whose name is Love: Saying to those whom duty tasks employ: 'Life is divine when duty is a joy.'

Sir Ian Hamilton.

Perhaps the most thrilling episode in the war is the forcing the Dardanelles, and probably no more picturesque, daring or more gallant commander could be found for this expedition than Sir Ian Hamilton.

About his cluster of wonderful stories of still more wonderful achievements in Burma, in Egypt, in India. Belonging to a very old and aristocratic military family, he is by tradition and by training a soldier of brilliant literary attainments, a lover of pictures, and a student of archaeology. And he is a born fighter.

Not the trained tactician of to-day, nor the strategist of the military school, but the fighter who fits for the love of the encounter. His ideal is the ideal one finds in the heroes of Homer: a thing of hand-to-hand encounters, of daring personal risks and hair-breadth escapes. His adventures would compare favorably with those of the heroes of the old poet - in the Barren hills he lay wounded by the Nile beating a crocodile over the head with his umbrella and demanding of those who came to his rescue: 'Who owns this beast? I want to make a complaint.' This is probably one of those little legends that, as Barry reminded Lenore, grew up about the personality of the great and the good. As a matter of fact, Sir Ian hunted crocodiles on the Nile but whether with an umbrella is not stated. It is an assured fact that he went into Afghanistan at a time when the presence of a white man there was a prodigious event. Of that expedition there is also a story of an American's orders to have him caught, sent to the capital in an iron cage, which returned to the Ameer with the emerald smile on the face of the tiger, outside, and personally conducting the expedition much to the delight of the august sovereign of this ancient realm.

He is a hero of Lydians, where he commanded a mobile column against the Boers. Everywhere, in addition to the cut and dried reports of his expeditions, his adventurous spirit has given rise to marvelous stories of his powers, until in India, Egypt, Burma and Afghanistan, the Orientals have come to believe that he will live forever. One story is that his blood is molten gold; another, current among the Sikhs is that he never sleeps. He is reported to have been wounded four or five times. The relief of Chitral is regarded as the supreme glory of all his achievements. Withal, he is popular with civilians, with politicians and with apparently everyone but the Germans, who cannot understand his independent methods of warfare, and with the Turks, who regard him with contempt because he is a slender man, lacking the big stomach of all really great commanders like Napoleon possess. The fact that he is a friend of both Lord Kitchener and Lord Curzon appeals to London where Sir Ian is an idol. The London Mail regards Hamilton as a paradox because he loves fighting for its own sake, and at it can quarrel with nobody. It is said that he had decided that he would retire to a rural English home and take to fox-hunting, when he was called again to active service for his country. It is a hard and strenuous position for any man, but for any man who has passed his sixtieth year it is doubly so. But the Dardanelles campaign is one that appeals to Sir Ian. It follows no plan in the ordinary sense. It is one not fought, involving rushes from the trenches, and personal encounters at the point of the bayonet. Sir Ian is in his element, and is, it is said, always in the thick of the skirmishes. Not only his men, over whom he possesses the gift of personal command in the highest degree, but his brother officers love him. Meeting every situation with the tact of a diplomat, a tact which is the outcome of a wholesome normal, unselfish personality, he captivates and charms. His long experience with the Orient gives him an advantage in dealing with many situations which his confreres are quick to recognize and acknowledge. His dignity, his courtesy and his resourcefulness are alike wonderful. The man for the work is the unanimous decision of the military authorities, who are watching, as is the whole world, with breathless eagerness the magnificent attack upon this great natural fortress blocking the way to Constantinople, upon whose success depends such vast issues, and whose achievement will be the most wonderful accomplishment in the wonderful career of General Sir Ian Hamilton.

Too Much Bed Clothes.

Almost everyone sleeps under bed clothing that is too heavy. The patchwork quilt, with its weight of stuffed materials and wadding, is an abomination. People forget that bed clothes are intended to keep the heat in, not to keep the cold out.

You can pile woolen blankets three or four high on an empty bed. Is the body any warmer than before? Not a bit so that. Try. But if you cover the bed with a thin sheet of silk and open yourself the bed will soon get warm. You have warmed it.

The secret of bed covering, then, is to keep the heat from the body.

The sleeping bags in which Arctic explorers defy the cold do not depend for their warmth on their thickness, but only the fact that, being tightly fastened, none of the body heat can escape.

Of all coverings silk is the best. A silk nightdress, or silk pajamas suit is three to one better than flannel in cold weather. Clean sheets, one thin woolen blanket and an eiderdown quilt is an equipment for the coldest night. It is largely the habit of wearing heavy bed clothes that makes so many tired in the morning. Its like wearing an overcoat weighing fifty pounds. The fact that one is lying down doesn't prevent the body having to carry the weight of them. And, what is more, the weight is not carried on the shoulders, which are accustomed to burdens, but it presses on the body at every point.

The body is a furnace, of which air is part of the fuel. The windows of a sleeping room should always be kept so that the furnace may have a supply. But there's no use overworking the engine - which is the body - by giving it the labor of carrying a heavy weight.

How the Dangers of Fire May Be Minimized.

The season is fast approaching when cool evenings will demand the starting of fires in our homes. September and October have become known to firemen as the months when chimneys are the cause of the most trouble.

The following suggestions of a practical nature, if faithfully followed, will do much to prevent damage to the home.

STOVES. - Place a metal stove board on the wood floor under the stove, and extending at least twelve inches in front of the ash-pit door. Protect all wall and partitions within two feet of any stove with a metal shield, leaving an air space between the shield and the wall. Leave no kindling or other wood in the oven before night. Do not hang clothes too near the stove or stovepipes.

PIPES. - See that the lengths of stovepipe are well fitted together, together, free from rust holes and parted seams, wired firmly and fitted properly into the chimney. Stovepipes passing through partitions, walls or floors, attics and roofs are dangerous at best. Where these must pass through partitions, walls or roofs use a large, ventilated double flue pipe. You should examine the stovepipes in the attic. They may come apart or rust. Fluff and spider webs are likely to gather on and around them, to be set free when you least expect it.

CHIMNEYS. - Chimneys should be built from the ground up, and never rest on wood supports. The settling of the woodwork will cause cracks in the chimney. Nor should the chimney walls be used to support joists or other woodwork. Softwood and pine make an often responsible for defects in the chimney. Use good quality brick and cement mortar. Chimney walls should be at least eight inches thick, the flues of ample size and lined with fire clay or terra cotta. Never cover up the flue holes with rags or paper nor stuff them with anything but a metal sheet. Chimneys should be cleaned frequently.

FURNACES. - Protect all woodwork above and around boilers, if within three feet with metal shield, also all woodwork near furnace pipes. It is best to rivet the lengths of pipe together to prevent disjoining. The pipe should fit perfectly into the chimney. Examine the pipe frequently for rust holes or other defects. Keep them free from dust, fluff and spider webs, which are easily ignited.

DEFECTS. - Defective stoves, boilers, furnaces, pipes and chimneys should be promptly repaired or replaced.

OVERHEATING. - Beware of overheating stoves, boilers, furnaces and pipes.

ASHES. - These should never be placed in wooden receptacles, or bins, on wood floors, or against wood partitions, walls, fences, buildings, or any other work. Use metal receptacles only, and dump ashes away from all buildings.

CARE. - These matters are technical, but very simple and merely call for ordinary care. You cannot afford to be careless when the lives of your loved ones and the property of yours if any your

Torturing Sciatica.

A SEVERE SUFFERER CURED THROUGH THE USE OF DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

Fierce, darting pains - pains like red hot needles being driven through the flesh - in the thigh; perhaps down the legs to the ankles - that's sciatica. None but the victim can realize the torture. But the sufferer need not now grow discouraged for there is a cure in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new, rich red blood, which soothes and strengthens the feeble nerves, and thus frees them from pain and restores the sufferer to cheerful activity. In proof we give the statement of Mr. Thos. D. Leinster, Wapella, Sask., who says: I was attacked with sciatica which gradually grew worse until I was confined to my bed; for three months I had to be shifted and turned in my bed as I was unable to help myself. I suffered the greatest torture from the fierce, stabbing pains that accompanied every movement. I consulted several doctors and took drugs and medicines until I was nauseated, but without getting any benefit, and I began to believe I would be a continuous sufferer. Finally I was prevailed upon to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking them for about six weeks I was able to get out of bed. From that on I kept steadily improving until I was free from this terrible and painful malady.

The most stubborn cases of sciatica will yield to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills if the treatment is persisted in. These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Ruined Cathedral at Rheims.

Radyard Kipling has lately been on the Continent and among other things has written a most touching description of the ruined Cathedral at Rheims.

But there is no hieroglyphic for Rheims, no blunting of the mind at the abomination committed on the sacred tower. The thing that is left, maimed and blinded from out of the utter wreckage of the archbishop's palace on the one side and a dust heap of tumbled houses on the other. They shelled, as they still shell it, with high explosives and with incendiary bombs, so that the statues and stonework still in their places are burned the color of raw flesh. The gargoyles are smashed, statues, crochets and spires tumbled, walls split and torn, windows thrust out and all the tracery obliterated. Wherever one looks at the tortured pile there is mutilation and defilement and yet it had never more of a soul than it has today.

Inside - Cover yourselves, gentlemen," said the archbishop, "this place is no longer consecrated" - everything is swept clear or burned out from end to end, except two candle sticks in front of the niches where Joan of Arc's image used to stand. There is a French flag there now. The last time I saw Rheims Cathedral, it was in a Spring twilight when the great window glowed and the only lights within were those of some candles which a peasant Englishman had lit in Joan of Arc's honor on those same candle sticks. The high altar was covered with velvet carpets, the pavement and tiles were cracked and jarred out of the rubbish that had fallen from above, the floor was gritty with dust of glass and powdered stone. The great doors had been blown inward by the blast of a shell in the archbishop's garden until they had been bent grotesquely to the curve of a caulk. There they had jammed the windows. But the record has been made and will be kept by better hands than mine. It will last through generations in which the feintest is cut off from fellowship with mankind, and through all the long, still years when the war of the body is at an end and the real war begins. Rheims is but one of the altars which the heathens have made on which to consecrate their own faith throughout the world.

Elm had just begun to attend the public school, and had found a new friend, a child of whom Elm's mother had never heard. "Was this Walter?" she asked. "Is he a nice little boy?" "Yes, ma'am," replied Elm, enthusiastically.

"Does he say any naughty words?" pursued his mother. "No," replied Elm, with enthusiasm, "and I'm not going to teach him any."

A clergyman taught an old man in his parish to read and found him an apt pupil. Calling at the cottage some time after he found only the wife at home.

"How's John?" asked he. "He is well, thank you," said his wife.

"How does he get on with his reading?" "Nicely, sir."

"Ah! I suppose he can read his Bible comfortably now?" "Bible, sir! He was out of the Bible and into the sporting papers long ago."

"To what do you attribute your remarkable health?" "Well," replied the very old gentleman, "I reckon I got a good start on most people by bein' born before germs were discovered, thereby havin' less to worry about."

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT. 8, 1915.

Editorial Brevities.

We would draw the attention of our readers to the letter signed 'A Sufter,' in today's issue, and ask them to give it their very serious consideration. And we also respectfully commend its proposal to our town authorities. We would like to hear from other citizens on the subject.

The New Baptist Pastor.

Large congregations assembled at the Baptist church last Sunday to welcome the pastor, Rev. N. E. Harkness, on the occasion of his occupying the pulpit of his new pastorate for the first time. He was introduced to his people by Dr. G. B. Cutten, president of Acadia University, at the morning service, and responded graciously, thanking them for the cordial welcome which had been extended to him in Wolfville, and stating that he wished to move among them as a man, rather than a clergyman. The sermon, both morning and evening, was powerful with the fervor of divine truth, and from the viewpoints of oratory and rhetoric each was a masterpiece.

The text for the morning was from Hebrews 11:1—'Which we have as an anchor of the soul, a hope both sure and steadfast and entering into that which is within the veil.' Hope is one of the greatest factors in life. It lies at the basis of all human endeavor. But there are false hopes. Men need that hope which is behind the veil. We must anchor our lives to the spiritual. Our hope, in the great international crisis, lies in our faith in the over-rule of God. Christ is the answer to the prophetic cry of the human soul. 'The world is not getting away from God. Calvary's hill shall become the world's altar. This is the sure hope of all who have known the power of the indwelling Christ.'

The subject of the evening sermon was 'The Unconquered Kingdom,' the text, Hebrews 12:28. To day we are discovering those things which are permanent. The kingdoms of earth are being overthrown. The inner kingdom of the soul, fortified by the personal friendship of Christ, alone can stand the shock and stress of those days. It is the Kingdom of Christ within which gives man victory in his struggle with mortal evil.

Rev. M. P. Freeman offered prayer at the morning service. The choir, with Mrs. Richmond as director and Miss Rockwell organist, rendered beautiful selections. The morning anthem was 'My God and Father,'—Marx; that of the evening, 'The Lord is exalted,'—West. A quartette sang 'The mellow eve is gliding,'—Roberts, at the latter service.

The Hallow'en Outrages.

Sir,—Hallow'en is now approaching and with it the usual outbreak of mischief. It was one in various parts of the town, which, by timely police precautions, might have been prevented. It is not too much to say that the destruction of hundreds of dollars worth of property might have been averted by the expenditure, at most, of say, fifteen or twenty dollars by the Council in hiring a few special constables to patrol the streets after midnight, when all the real damage is done. It is, of course, impossible, for our worthy and efficient chief constable to afford any adequate protection, as no man can be in two places at the same time.

The rattlepatties of the town are surely entitled to some protection from the town authorities at a time like this.

The depredations of last Hallow'en night were a disgrace to a civilized community. Nobody objects to a little innocent fun on the part of the young people early in the evening. But when it comes to the wholesale destruction of property, the tearing down of fences, the wrenching off of railings, the carrying away of valuable articles and, perhaps, worst of all, the placing of obstructions on the sidewalks dangerous to life and limb, it is time that something were done by those responsible for the safety and well being of the citizens of this town. I have written it in this early date because I hope others will take up the matter, and so draw the attention of our town authorities to what has for some years been a grand scandal and disgrace to Wolfville. Last year it reached a climax.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life. If you work in a factory; if your nerves are sensitive; if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion overcomes just such conditions. It possesses in concentrated form the very elements to invigorate the blood, strengthen the tissues, soothe the nerves and build strength. Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. Try it. Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont.

A Letter from the Front.

The following private letter was received two days ago from Captain Arthur Chute, who has been at the front since early last October:

Headquarters 1st Army, B. E. F. Sept. 21st, 1915.

Here's a reply to your lovely letter just received. To get a letter from home is the brightest spot of any day.

During the past week I have had a good many exciting experiences. On Sunday I heard that the 25th Battalion of Nova Scotia were moving up country toward the trenches. I set out at 6 a. m. to find them. I went on horseback and was accompanied by Capt. Neley, one of our officers. It was a glorious day for a long ride, bright and clear, with a cool autumn breeze. We had lunch at the Headquarters of the 2nd Army, and rested our horses there for three hours. The town was full of staff officers of the 2nd Canadian Division. We learned that the 25th Battalion was encamped about three miles from the town, and about 2 p. m. we set out to find them. We were congratulating ourselves on our successful quest when we came upon the deserted camping ground. A Lieutenant Bullock and two soldiers were there guarding supplies. They told us that the 25th had broken camp and marched on early that morning. We ascertained their halting place for lunch, and, on arriving there, found the embers of their dying fires and a party under their pioneer Sergeant, clearing up the field. 'You'll find them going through the next town ahead,' said the Sergeant in that town a guard on points told us that they had passed through the town three hours before. The traffic here was so congested, due to proximity to the front, that our progress was very slow.

While passing slowly along, in the midst of a company of engineers, two closed in motor cars passed us. I saluted the first, and a fine looking old general inside gave me a most memorable smile. 'Who's coming next?' I said to myself, and then, on the next car, I saw the British flag meaning that the Field Marshall was inside. I got a swift passing glance at a very grey and rather stout General, whom I recognized as Sir John French.

I arrived at the field, where the 25th Battalion were to bivouac for the night, just about tea time. The men were all massed up along the side of the hill. They had just arrived and were engaged in stocking their rifles, and in disengaging their knapsacks and equipment.

I met Margeson, the Paymaster; Capt. Logan; Capt. Tupper, of Tuperville; Major Weston, of Dartmouth; Major MacKenzie, an Alderhot friend of mine; Capt. Medical, Lieut. Howard Jones; Major Conrad; Lieut. Murphy, formerly of the 73th, and several other officers. Jack Stairs, Major Burns and the Colonel of the regiment had already gone into the trenches. I was very glad to see a chap named Brooks, a Baptist preacher, as a machine-gun officer. It was Sunday evening. Near by we could see the starlights rising from the German lines. Behind us a British Battery was thundering. As Brooks said on the ground with the rest of the officers he remarked that at that time at home he would have been just rising to preach an evening sermon. 'What an awful change,' he remarked. 'I thought of his church in Falmouth, and then looked ahead toward the trenches. It certainly was a change.'

I also saw a good many men of the Battalion. 'Are there any Wolfville boys?' I inquired, and out of the midst of one platoon came Karl Murphy. Karl told me that Bob Spicer was with them, and we went across to the horse lines to locate him. There were two refractory mules kicking and lashing in every direction, and there was Bob with a big stick, inducing a tame spirit into them. I saw Dr. Moore's son of Kentville; Corkum, who worked in the Bank of Montreal in Wolfville; a couple of boys from Canaan; and a chap named Dickie from Kingsport.

The 25th is a fine Battalion. The men made a splendid appearance, and they were evidently drilled right to the minute. In the morning when there was no breakfast for them on account of delayed transport, they went about without a murmur, and waited until dinner-time for their first meal. That evident patience is one of the best signs of discipline. The Battalion made a record in their long march from the Base to the Front. They came into their last position without a single straggler. I spent the night in Col. LeCain's sleeping bag, and next day, after seeing two companies of the 25th march off to the trenches, I mounted and set off for home 30 miles away, across in the area of another army.

Canadian Shirt Manufacturer Solves Shirt Problems.

Did you ever notice the irritating fashion in which your shirt sleeves persist in falling down on your soapy wrists and hands, while you are washing? Did you ever wish someone would get out a shirt with sleeves that would stay up when you wanted them to? It has been done, and by a Canadian manufacturer—our well known brand of Eastern Shirts Limited. Their new device, known as 'Sleeft', consists of a button-holed tube, which, when pulled, raises the sleeve to the desired height, then is slipped over a conveniently placed button and keeps the sleeve up until released.

This improvement will be welcomed by men everywhere, for it not only means greater convenience while washing the hands, but will save laundry expense caused by cuffs getting soap-splashed and soiled, in many cases within a few minutes of putting on a clean shirt.

Eastern Shirts Limited also make a wide range of fine negligee shirts of the usual type; that is, without the new 'SLEEFT' device. In the making of workmen's shirts, this firm has solved other problems. About a year ago they opened a new department for the manufacture of working shirts of higher quality than the usual garment of this kind.

Their shirts were made with special provision for overcoming some of the weaknesses in this class of garment. For instance, they found by careful investigation that working shirts generally break forth at the elbows. Prompt provision was made to safeguard against Eastern Shirts joining this, by the insertion of double elbows.

It was found, in some inferior makes, the low priced shirts were skimmed in material, and made too small for proper comfort and wear. Every shirt in the Eastern Shirts line, whether selling for seventy five cents or twice that sum, is made standard, and the line is appropriately named 'BIG-NUFF.'

Another feature in working shirts is their 'Hi-Lo' collar, a smart, comfortable idea, giving a much neater appearance than the old style, very low turn-down collar, which had come to be associated with working men's shirts.

Grooming the Horse.

Nothing contributes so much to the beauty and the lustre of the coat as grooming. As a consequence, the body of the horse receives much attention and the legs entirely too little, whereas the legs should receive the more attention. Thorough and rapid brushing of the legs in the evening will insure the horse coming out in the morning with complete absence of any stiffness in the joints. Again, horses whose limbs are thus cared for will remain comparatively free from the many diseases to which the legs are so subject. Thorough grooming in the evening is much more important than in the morning. There is no doubt but that proper grooming will greatly increase an animal's efficiency and prolong his usefulness.

A Kansas farmer who could not get harvest help put this notice upon the fence: 'Harvest hands wanted. Hired, girl, pretty and genial. Cabinet organ, music in evening. Pie three times a day. Three teaspoons of sugar with every cupful of coffee. Hammocks, feather beds or leather beds at your option for sleeping. Rising hours 9 a.m. Three hours rest at noon. Come one—come all.'

Mrs. Snooter—Men make me tired. Mrs. Swayback—What's the matter now? Mrs. Snooter—My husband saw Mrs. Keechik yesterday and I asked him what she had on, and he replied 'O, clothes.'

Did you ever have a cold you could not get rid of? No—If I did I'd still have it now.

CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS. Many women with disfigured complexions never seem to think that they need an occasional cleansing outside as well as inside. Yet neglect of this internal bathing shows itself in spots, and sallow complexions—as well as in dreadful headaches and biliousness. It's because the liver becomes sluggish and waste matter accumulates which Nature cannot remove without assistance. The best remedy is Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, which stimulate the liver to healthy activity, remove the waste matter from the system. Pure, safe and reliable. Take one at night and you feel bright and sunny in the morning. Get Chamberlain's today—Bottle 25c., or by mail from Chamberlain Medicine Company, Toronto.

Her personality and Scotch accent captivated her audience. A number of pledges were taken. Mrs. Hyslop was invited to lecture again in Wolfville and guaranteed a good audience.

Mrs. Howard Bates, in a most interesting manner, gave a description of her recent visit to the Exposition in San Diego and San Francisco, dwelling especially on the Canadian exhibit, which was one of the best. A Birthday Celebration.

The eighty second birthday anniversary of J. W. Bigelow, Esq., of Wolfville, falling on Sunday was celebrated on Monday, Oct 4th, by an At Home to the Brothers of St. George's Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of which he has been a member forty-six years. It was sunny on the lawn where the family and friends first assembled. Bro. Bigelow enjoyed the hammock as he received the personal congratulations of the arriving guests. Afterwards, when within the parlors, Professor Clarkson, Worshipful Master, read an address of congratulation presented by the Lodge. When the Honored Brother received the document, he, with visible emotion, spoke the words—the most valuable paper I now possess. At the close of the five o'clock tea Mrs. Bigelow was requested to be present, and Dr. DeWitt spoke to a toast in her honor, adding some happy words of the woman of the Scripture. Thus closed a toast clinking with a merry power. A goodbye followed with joyful wishes for next year's anniversary.

Following is the address which was presented by the members of St. George's Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and received with deepest appreciation by Bro. J. W. Bigelow; also the address received, through the Mayor, from the town of Wolfville.

WORSHIPFUL BROTHER, JAMES W. BIGELOW, PAST MASTER SAINT GEORGE'S LODGE, DEAR BROTHER BIGELOW.—It is with the greatest pleasure that we, the brethren of Saint George's Lodge, gather to-day to tender you our heartiest congratulations on this, your eighty-second birthday, together with our most sincere good wishes for a long and happy future; and our gratitude for your labors among us, a gratitude that we can but feebly express. It is to our second masonic emblem that our thoughts naturally turn, the bee-hive, the emblem of industry. For more than a half century you have worn the emblem of innocence and the badge of a Mason, and from that day when you first stood in the north-east corner of the lodge you have served your Master, as did our ancient brethren, with freedom, fervor and with zeal. Forty-five years ago you were first made Master of the Lodge and fulfilled the duties admirably in all respects. Nor after attaining the highest honor and the highest responsibility that any lodge can confer did you zeal for Masonry slacken. You have ever maintained an active interest in our Lodge, and perhaps no higher appreciation can be rendered you than our simple words, 'You have been a true and faithful brother among us.' We would express the hope that all of us younger Masons may imitate as zealously as you have done our ancient Grand Master in his virtuous conduct, his unfeigned piety to his God and his inflexible fidelity to his trust.

WILMOT H. THOMPSON, JR., W. M. GEORGE W. MILLER, S. W. J. EDWARD HALS, J. W.

Wolfville, N. S., Oct. 4th, 1915. DEAR MR. BIGELOW,—I wish to tender my congratulations to you on this, the eighty second anniversary of your birth. On behalf of the town I also wish to congratulate you. Your long and honorable life among us and the important office you have held as Mayor of the town speak of the esteem with which you are held by our citizens, and I am sure I express the sentiments of the residents of the town, in tendering congratulations to you. I hope the remaining days may still bring peace and happiness to you and Mrs. Bigelow.

Yours very truly, CHARLES S. FITCH, Mayor.

Thanking Day Service. MR. EDITOR,—Please announce in THE ACADIAN that a Thanking Service will be held in the Opera House on Thanksgiving day at eleven o'clock a. m., following the custom of the last two years.

Rev. Mr. Armitage will deliver the address. Special music will be provided by a selected choir under the direction of Mrs. Richmond. All are heartily invited to share in this Service, and we hope the Opera House will be filled with people whose hearts are grateful for past mercies and willing to render praise and thanksgiving to the giver of every good thing. A collection will be taken for some worthy purpose to be announced later. C. S. FITCH, Mayor.

Worn Out, Thin and Miserable Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

PALMER, June 20th, 1914.
 "Stomach Trouble and Distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives," your famous fruit medicine, and they completely relieved me. To-day I am feeling fine and a physician, meeting me on the street, asked the reason for my improved appearance. I said, "I was taking Fruit-a-tives." He said, "If Fruit-a-tives make you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can."

When I Have Time.

When I have time, so many things I'll do.
 To make life happier and more fair
 For those whose lives are crowded
 now with care,
 I'll help to lift them from their low despair.

When I have time, the friend I love so well
 Shall know no more these weary, toiling days;
 I'll lead her feet in tender paths
 And cheer her heart with words of sweetest praise.

When I have time, the friend you hold so dear
 May be beyond the reach of your intent—
 May never know that you so kindly meant
 To fill her life with all love's sweet content.

When you had time,
 Now is the time! Ah, friend no longer wait
 To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
 To those around whose lives are now so drear.

They may not need you in the coming year—
 Now is the time,
 —London Christian Endeavour.

Thunderbolt of Truth.

I have read of a town meeting in Pennsylvania, says one, where the question of license was to be decided. As the question was to be put there rose from one corner of the room a miserable female, wrinkled and gaunt, and stretching out her arms, in a shrill voice she cried:

"Look upon me. You all know me, or once did. You all know I was mistress of the best farm in the town ship. You all know too, I had one of the best—the most devoted of hus-

WOMAN WEAK AND NERVOUS

Finds Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Creston, Iowa.—"I suffered with female troubles from the time I came into the world, which is known as small I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would have pains if I overworked or lifted anything heavy, and I would be weak and nervous and in so much misery that I would be prostrated. A friend told me what your medicine had done for her and I tried it. It made me strong and healthy and our home is now happy with a baby boy. I am very glad that I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and do all I can to recommend it."—Mrs. A. B. BOSCHAMP, 504 E. Howard Street, Creston, Iowa.

Tons of Roots and Herbs are used annually in the manufacture of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is known from ocean to ocean as the standard remedy for female ills.

For forty years this famous root and herb medicine has been successfully successful in controlling the disease of women. Merit alone could have stood this test of time.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

bands. You all know I had five noble hearted, industrious boys. Where are they now? Doctor, where are they now? You all know. You all know they lie in a row, side by side, in yonder churchyard, filling drunkards' graves. They were all taught to believe that temperate drinking was safe; excess ought to be avoided, but they never acknowledged excess.

"But I saw a general change coming over my family and prospect with dismay and horror. I felt that we were all to be overwhelmed in one common ruin. I tried to ward off the blow; I tried to break the spell, the deflating spell in which the benefits of temperate drinking had involved my husband and sons. I begged, I prayed; but the odds were against me." And with her arms flung high and her tall form stretched to its utmost and her voice raised to an unearthly pitch, she exclaimed: "I shall soon stand before the judgment seat of God; I shall meet you there, you false guides and be a witness against you all." She spoke and vanished. "Shall any license be granted for the sale of spirituous liquors?" the response was unambiguous—"No!"—The Vanguard.

The Father of Prohibition in Russia.

This miracle has been accomplished virtually by one man. He is Michael D. Tchelisheff, a peasant by birth, or, originally a house painter by profession, then mayor of the city of Samara and now a millionaire. Physically he is a giant, standing over six feet four inches, and of powerful build. Although he is 55 years old he looks much younger. His movements display the energy of youth, his eyes are animated and his black hair is not tinged by gray.

Speaking of what he had accomplished for the cause of sobriety in Russia, M. Tchelisheff said:

"I was reared in a small Russian village. There were no schools or hospitals, or any of the improvements we are accustomed to find in civilized communities. I picked up an education from old newspapers and stray books. One day I chanced upon a book in the hands of a Moujik which treated of the harmfulness of alcohol. It stated, among other things, that vodka was a poison. I was so impressed with this, knowing that everybody drank vodka, that I asked the first doctor I met if the statement were true. He said yes. Men drank it, he explained, because momentarily it gave them a sensation of pleasant dizziness. From that time I decided to take every opportunity to discover more about the use of vodka.

The famine at the end of the eighties impressed M. Tchelisheff with the effects of vodka drinking and he decided to fight the evil. He began his efforts as a reformer when an alderman by introducing a bill into the city council of Samara providing that the city give the revenue it receives for vodka into the imperial treasury. The bill passed, but the government promptly refused to take the money. Later he became Mayor of Samara and finally a member of the Duma. He continued the battle, but finding that all his efforts for reform were a failure he begged an audience with Emperor Nicholas. He was received with great kindness, presented his case and won the approval and assistance of the Czar. Mobilization precipitated anti-vodka measures. The press, instigated by M. Tchelisheff, took up as far as possible the fight against liquor. He also organized delegations to present petitions to the proper authorities and in a marvellously short time was successful in pushing his efforts which have resulted so wonderfully.

There remains now only to find elsewhere the revenue which up to the present time has been contributed by vodka. There has been introduced in this question the aim of this bill is not the creation of new taxes, or an increase in the present taxes, but an effort to render the government domains and possessions productive.

"Strange," said the first tramp meditatively, "how few of our youth full dreams ever come true."

"Oh, I dunno," said his companion. "I seem to have when I used to dream a 'best wearin' long pants, and now I guess I wear 'em longer than an owl's in the country."

A Year Indoors.
 "For thirteen months I was so bed with chronic indigestion that I could not get out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and a smothering feeling came on till I thought I would choke. Doctor's treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

FARM MANAGEMENT

Good Judgment Necessary to Get Good Crops and Fair Return

No business needs better management all around than farming. So many chances for failure are present that it is the exceptional farm that is strong in every particular. Most farms succeed in spite of certain weaknesses. Some of these weaknesses can be corrected; others are due to conditions that can not be improved, such as naturally poor soil, short growing seasons, steep hills, etc.

Much worthy effort is expended in producing good crops, but oftentimes a gain in the best of crops is lost by feeding to inefficient live stock. There is no surer way of losing money than by feeding crops to animals the products of gain from which do not pay the cost of feeding.

Some men attribute their success to the particular kind of crop they grow or the particular way of feeding live stock. More likely their success is due to a good sized farm business, good or average crops, and a good quality of live stock.

On fourteen selected farms where the receipts per cow were less than $40, not a farm made as much as $1,000 labor income. On twenty-four farms in the same district, with only a slightly larger acreage but with the receipts per cow between $101 and $115, only three farms made a labor income of less than $1,000. Half these farms made more than $1,500. The first group of farmers were growing fair crops, but they could not possibly succeed when the other part of their business was so weak. The second group not only produced good crops, but they utilized them efficiently.

Another way in which some farmers fail is in the use of labor, both man and horse. Everything that is done to take about twice as long as it should, hence they receive only half pay for inefficient work any more than any other business. An acre of hay normally requires about ten hours a man labor for each cutting. Some men will waste nearly this much time in just getting started. They may grow good crops and have good stock but their inability to work lessens their chances of success.

Successful farming calls for the best of judgment. It means good crops, good live stock well fed and handled, and a thoroughly balanced business in every way.

Pruning Young Trees
 Severe pruning is needed when fruit trees are planted, but during the next few years it is not the best system to prune heavily. During this time the object is to encourage growth, to shape the tree and prepare for fruiting.

It is a common idea among orchardists that the more a tree is pruned the more it will grow, but this is only true within very narrow limits. If the roots have grown freely and spread extensively as in a healthy tree they are sure to, then the heavy pruning of the branches will upset the balance. The tree will endeavor to restore the balance by forming new wood to support the place of that cut away.

In this case the severe pruning would entail extra work upon the tree without a corresponding increase in growth.

WORKS FOR HUMANITY

Salvation Army Leader in Canada a Recruit of General Booth

Commissioner William J. Richards, the head of the Salvation Army in Canada, is full of overflowing with vital energy and personal enthusiasm. This has been the case during the whole of his thirty-four years' career as an officer in the Army. The commissioner is one of the officers of the Salvation Army who was personally called by the founder of the organization, the late General William Booth, and is, therefore, one of the pioneers of the movement. The story goes that the General visited the town in which the then Mr. Richards resided to conduct revival services and heard the young man speak. The General was so favorably impressed that he was asked if he could not enter the training home, and he did so. This was thirty-four years ago, and Commissioner Richards has rendered so many years of unbroken service.

Commissioner Richards was closely associated with the late General's "Darkest England" scheme, having done much to establish what is now known as the men's social work of the Salvation Army.

His usefulness was not confined to this branch of Army service but having earned for himself the reputation of a clever and capable administrator and a brilliant platform speaker he had full command of the operations in Denmark, South Africa and New Zealand. The latter appointment was his charge when appointed by General Bramwell Booth to succeed the late Commissioner Rees in the Canadian territory.

It is interesting to know that four sons of Commissioner and Mrs. Richards have followed in their parental footsteps, and are now officers in the Salvation Army, holding important positions in Java, South America, the continent of Europe and London, England.

One on Hon. James Duff
 The story is told of an incident which occurred during a meeting of the Ontario Legislature some time ago. Just outside the assembly room is a telephone for the convenience of the members. One day a page called Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture, to the telephone. In using the instrument he adopts a high-pitched voice and presently the loud sounds were heard in the hall. It disturbed the late Premier, Sir James Whitney, considerably. He stood it as long as he could, and then turned towards the page benches.

"What noise is that?" he thundered.
 "One of the Ministers sitting near informed him that it was Mr. Duff talking to Glen Grove."
 "Well, you on earth doesn't he use the telephone?" was the caustic question in reply.

Why Snow is White
 Water being transparent, rays of light pass through it without being reflected by the water itself. When drops of water are partially frozen into snowflakes they are transformed into a crystal substance with a great many reflecting surfaces, from which the rays of light are sent back, just as a mirror reflects a great deal of the light or color thrown against it.

May be the dough had forgotten to rise.
 Or had risen quickly overnight and fallen again—
 To rise nevermore.
 'Twas weak flour, of course.
 Meaning weak in gluten.
 But FIVE ROSES is strong, unusually strong.
 With that glutinous strength which compels it to rise to your surprised delight.
 Stays risen too.
 Being coherent, elastic.
 And the dough feels springy under your hand.
 Squeaks and cracks as you work it.
 Feels the feel of a FIVE ROSES dough.
 Note the wonderful smooth texture—soft—velvety.
 Great is the bread born of each dough—
 Your dough!
 Try this good flour.
