TUESDAY EVENING, OCT. 28, 1873

Town and County News.
REMEMBER the Primitive Methodist tea-meeting this evening.

THERE was a breakdown on Wyndham street this morning. The front wheel of a light market wagon came off opposite Horsman's store, and the axle was broken in the drop that ensued.

New Books.—Hester Morley's Promise, by Hester Stretton; Arthur Bonnicastle, by Holland; The Old Court of France. A large stock of new and cheap books just received at Anderson's.

WELLINGTON PROHIBITORY LEAGUE.—The League in session this afternoon at the Good Templars' Hall, and this evening there will be a public meeting in the same place, when addresses will be delivered by a number of delegates and others. We have no doubt but the proceedings will be of an interesting character. The public is cordially invited to attend.

The banquet given on Friday night to Mr. Geo. Hamilton, retiring manager of the Ontario Bank, Mount Forest, was in every way a success. Seats were placed for seventy guests, but on assembling it was discovered that considerably more were present than had been reckoned on. This is allowed to have been one of the most successful dinners ever given in the town. Mr. Hamilton leaves for his new sphere as assistant manager of the Toronto branch this week. He carries with him the respect and good wishes of all.

A CENTRAL FAIR in ORANGEVILLE is being advocated by the Advertiser. In an article on the subject it depreciates the holding of township fairs; and adds:—If, however, three or four townships would unite their forces, and offer prizes of say ten to fifteen dollars for horses, cattle and farming implements we would see good competition, and great good would result in the emulation thus excited. A prize taken at such a show would be appreciated, not so much on account of its money value as because it would be an evidence of real worth where the competition would be so great.

WM. WHEELANS was the name of the Wingham man who drove his horses into the mill-dam during the storm and darkness of Monday, last week. The Wingham Times says:—We understand that Mr. Wheelans himself ran a pretty narrow escape and would probably have met the same fate, had it not been for the timely assistance of his wife, who with a lantern had set out to meet her husband, and it would seem opportunely reached him in time to save his life. We hope his wife may be always on hand to save him from the drink, particularly when it goes above the neck.

POLICE COURT.
(Before the Police Magistrate.)
Tuesday, Oct. 28.

Anne Jane White was charged by Policeman Turner with being drunk at the G. T. R. station yesterday. She lives in Toronto, and says she came up to meet her husband. First offence here; case dismissed.

"WHAT IS SUSPENSION.—Two bell-boys discuss the question in a New York hotel: "Pat to Mike,—"What's this suspension of the banks?" "Mike—"I'll tell ye. Suppose ye have five cents." "Ye." "Leave it wd me." "Ye." "Next day ye want it, and ye ax me for it." "Ye." "I tell ye "No sir, I've used it myself."

The effect of such a silly inference as His Excellency has drawn from the failure of Sir Hugh to profit by the result of the crime in which the Government and himself were associated, would be simply this: That if a burglar with the connivance of the steward entered a gentleman's dwelling and robbed it of its plate, and it should afterwards turn out that the articles were not the genuine silver they supposed them to be, but plated imitations, then no crime had been committed, either by the faithless steward or the lawless burglar!—London Advertiser.

If Stokes does not secure an acquittal it will not be for want of pleas in defence. His witnesses have already been called on to prove that Stokes did not shoot Fisk at all; that, if Stokes shot Fisk, the latter did not die of the bullet wound, but of maltreatment by his doctors; that Stokes had to shoot Fisk in self-defence; that Stokes was insane when he shot Fisk. Amid this pleasing though somewhat contradictory "city" it is strange if the jury cannot find something to suit their taste.

The Mail is out in an attack upon Mr. Glass. That settles the question of the position of the member for East Middlesex.

MISS FLORENCE LEES has recently arrived from England, on a visit of observation as to the working of Canadian charitable and criminal institutions. Miss Lees is esteemed personal friend of Florence Nightingale, and the Franco-Prussian war broke out, has been actively engaged in the Hospital service, with such distinction that her services were rewarded by the Iron Cross of the Empire, and special marks of commendation.

The National Board of Trade at Chicago have discussed transportation issues, adopted resolutions favoring free trade in ships and reciprocity with Canada, and received a series of financial propositions.

London, Oct. 27.—Sir Garnet Wolsey has arrived at Cape Coast Castle.

Queenstown, Oct. 27.—Arrived steamship "Baltic" from New York.

Southampton, Oct. 27.—Arrived steamship "Bremen" from New York.

Paris, Oct. 27.—In the Bazaine trial to-day the prosecution announced that it would not call for evidence as to events previous to the 12th of August; the President of the Court, however, at the request of the defence, allowed testimony to be given in relation to the battle of Forbach.

General Montandon and other generals of division acknowledge that Bazaine ordered them to the assistance of General Frossard, and variously explained their failure to carry out the orders. Frossard testified that Bazaine's orders to the generals of divisions were distinct, and they were responsible for their non-execution. At the opening sitting M. Regnier was called as a witness, but he was not present. It is said his arrest has been ordered because he wrote an insulting letter to the Duke d'Aumale. He has fled to England.

Delegations from the Departments of Dordogne, Cote d'Or, Yvelines, and Loire, whom President McMahon refused to receive, had an interview with Thiers to-day. Frequent meetings of the Republican deputies are held. Many of the Royalists are causing great irritation in the provinces. Republican petitions, although prohibited by the Prefects, are circulating everywhere and being numerously signed by influential citizens.

Madrid, Oct. 27.—It is reported that the Insurgents in Carthage are completely demoralized and their leaders disagreeing among themselves. On the return of the fleet from Valencia the crews of the "Tetuan" and "Mendez" mutinied, and several of them were killed and wounded before subordination could be restored. The engines of the rebel vessels are in a bad condition, and the "Tetuan" is reported to be leaky and making water fast. An attack upon the forts by the Government fleet was expected to begin yesterday. The convict soldiers of the Insurgents also revolted, and demanded payment and supplies of clothing.

New York, Oct. 28.—A despatch from Philadelphia says the money stringency and its effects have been severely felt in that city. All kinds of iron selling below cost, and if affairs do not brighten, half of the furnaces will have to suspend.

Arrived steamship "Holland" from London.

Shreveport, Oct. 27.—Three yellow fever deaths yesterday and five to-day.

Memphi Tenn., Oct. 27.—Eighteen deaths from yellow fever for the 24 hours ending 6 p.m. Weather becoming colder.

Guelph Hospital.
We are glad to learn that another step has been taken towards the construction of this much-needed institution. The Board met yesterday to examine the plans that had been furnished by various architects in accordance with the request of the Board, and chose those furnished by Mr. V. Stewart. They met the requirements of the Board in every respect, and were also exceedingly well executed. The building to be first erected will be only a portion of what is ultimately intended to constitute the finished structure; its dimensions will be about 50 feet square, and the cost from about $8,000. The plan of the elevation will be on view at Anderson's Bookstore in a few days.

We understand that Mr. Stewart, intends to take up his permanent residence in Guelph very shortly, and to practice here as an architect. We are informed that Mr. Stewart has had considerable practice in his profession, both in the Old Country and the U.S.; his presence here will therefore be a welcome acquisition, and we trust he will find his services in request in helping to build our rapidly growing town. There are some house-seekers who would like to get a little faster than that does.

OUT-DOOR SPORTS.
The ninth game of the championship series between the Boston and Athletic Clubs was played in Philadelphia, on Saturday, and was witnessed by about 2,000 persons. The game was closely contested up to the end of the sixth inning, when the score stood 6 to 5 in the Athletic's favor. The Athletics won by the following score:—

Boston	1	0	1	0	0	0	1	0	—6
Athletic	3	0	0	0	0	3	1	0	—10

An exhibition game was played in Brooklyn on Saturday between the Mutual and Atlantic Clubs. The Athletics won by a score of 14 to 4.

As the Washingtons have refused to play any longer this season, the remaining games they had to play are forfeited, and will be counted as victories. This will leave the championship record up to yesterday as follows:—

	Wen.	Lost.	To Play.
Boston	39	15	0
Philadelphia	36	16	2
Athletic	28	23	1
Baltimore	29	24	1
Mutual	29	24	1
Atlantic	17	35	2
Washington	5	49	0

School Board.
The usual fortnightly meeting of the Board was held on Monday. Present: Messrs. Knowles, Bell, Murton, Inglis, Kennedy, Drs. McGuire and Keating.

In the absence of the chairman, Dr. Keating was called to the chair.

COMMUNICATIONS, &c.
Communications were read from the teachers of the Central School and the South Ward School, complaining of neglect on the part of the caretaker, in not cleaning the floors and lighting the fires.

The September and August monthly reports of Mr. Alfred M. Lafferty, High School master, were read. The September report states the number of boys in attendance as being four for the English course, and 23 for the classical course; Girls, two for the English course; total pupils 29. An account of $15 was enclosed for chemical apparatus, procured from the Depository of the Education Department, and an account had been opened with Herod & Co., for the chemicals, they agreeing to supply the same at wholesale price. The August report stated the total pupils as 24, and appended an account of stationery, receipts and disbursements.

An account of John Anderson's, $8.20, was passed.

A letter was read from Mr. Cullen, complaining of overcrowding in the Central School. In three departments there were 214 pupils; one of them, Miss McLagan's, contained 74, and it was feared she would have to send some away.

THE HIGH SCHOOL.
Mr. Murton made some remarks on the recent visit to the High School of the Government Inspector, and on the fact that so few pupils were sent up from the Public Schools, asking if something could not be done to remedy this state of things. There were three teachers in the High School, and only 28 pupils.

Mr. Bell corroborated Mr. Murton's observations, and the subject dropped.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT.
The Inspector read his report for the month of September. It showed that there were 928 pupils on the roll for the month, and a total aggregate attendance of 18,576. He also handed in a report of the third quarterly examination, and the names of those pupils who were promoted to the higher classes; also the numbers in attendance at the time of his visit.

The report was adopted and the adjournment of the Board followed shortly afterwards.

MANITOBA AMNESTY.
Mr. Lanthier gave notice of motion for an address praying Her Majesty to exercise Her Royal prerogative by granting a full and complete pardon and amnesty for all acts, crimes, and offences which had arisen out of the Pacific Railway Charter were now, he claimed, relegated, without prejudice, to Parliament; he trusted they would be approached in a calm, judicial spirit and definitely decided one and for ever. He approved the proposal to introduce a new election law, especially naming as worthy of support the intention to adopt the ballot and to extend the franchise. He regretted the failure of the Pacific Railway Co., and indicated opinion that the work should be constructed and owned by the Government of the country. He congratulated the House on the addition of Prince Edward Island to the Confederation, a sentiment cheered by members on both sides of the speaker, and very briefly glanced at the remaining topics in the Speech.

Mr. Baby, in French, seconded the address.

The first clause in the Address was then read and agreed to. On the second being put Mr. Mackenzie rose amid loud cheers to move the following amendment to the address:—And we have a simple course in reference to the investigation of the charges preferred by the Hon. Mr. Huntington in his place in this House, and under the facts disclosed in the evidence laid before us, His Excellency's advisers have merited the severest censure of this House. He claimed that this was no party movement, and declared that he would not depend for the support he should obtain to the amendment he intended to propose only on those who usually acted with him in the House.

He secured the votes of not a few who usually gave their support to the Ministry, and confidently anticipated that his motion would be adopted. He reviewed the course of the Government since 1867, and charged it against them that they had shaped their policy not with a view to the public interest, but so as to secure themselves in office. He quoted Mr. McDougall's well-known remark, that the Intercolonial Railway would give the Government a ten years' lease of power, and showed how, as the Intercolonial Railway approached completion, it thought to supply its place by the Canadian Pacific. The bargain to construct the Pacific Railway within a given time, against which the Opposition had protested, was made the excuse for carrying through Parliament the Pacific Railway Bill, with all its most objectionable powers. It was strange indeed and showed a guilty purpose that when a contract for $25,000 was submitted for the approval of the House of Commons, one involving thirty millions of money and fifty millions of acres of land should be left to the absolute control of the Government, Parliament having no voice in the matter. The defeat of their creature, the Ontario Government of Mr. Sandfield Macdonald, in 1871, was a sign they were losing ground in the country. Great efforts on their part were therefore necessary. It was essential to success of their scheme that the means of exercising corrupt and illegitimate influences should still be left to them; and hence their opposition to the Controversed Election Bill in 1872, and the objectionable means by which they controlled the appointments of returning officers secured to them by the Interim Elections Act of 1871. The Opposition had made the most constant persistent efforts to strengthen the law against bribery and corrupt influences, and this was sufficient answer to those who charged it against the Opposition candidates that they had been guilty in any case of corrupt practices. Even the law as to voting was adopted to suit the purposes of Ministerial candidates, and whilst in Ontario and Quebec no revenue officers were allowed to vote, in Nova Scotia they could be driven to the polls like cattle by the slaughter. Still, with all their efforts, such was the reaction in Ontario and Quebec that the Premier came here without being able to command a majority from his own Province. The evidence taken by the Commission, he (Mr. Mackenzie) held to establish fully the charge he had made against the Government. He then went into the details of the Pacific Scandal. The reading of various passages in Sir Hugh Allan's letters to Mr. McMullen and others, and the evidence taken by the Commissioners, were received with repeated rounds of cheers, and at times with loud laughter. Mr. Mackenzie said it had been admitted that if Sir John A. Macdonald had known, before he granted the charter, of Allan's proceedings, he would be equally guilty, and he read from John A. Macdonald's own evidence to show that the correspondence between Allan and his confederates had been brought under the Premier's notice before the charter was finally conceded. He pointed out the attempt to conceal the existence of these documents from Parliament, and quoted the denial given by Sir John in South Perth, that any candidate in Ontario had received pecuniary aid from the Government. He sketched the history of the Pacific Scandal in the House, and the efforts made from time to time to delay the enquiry. He had suggested to his friends that they should accept an adjournment, but the determination to show that the prorogation speech, was not only to get rid of Parliament, but to set up a tribunal to try themselves. He had now proved the deliberate intention of the Government to use corrupt means to sustain themselves in power, and the measures they had taken to give effect to the policy, and he urged that the security of representative institutions required that such acts should be condemned. He concluded by moving the amendment, amid loud and repeated rounds of cheers.

Dr. Tupper next took the floor. He declared the charges were false and scandalous. He asserted Mr. Mackenzie had abandoned his case at the outset, and denied that the Government had acted from a desire only to prolong their term of office. He went on to charge that unworthy means had been used to obtain a majority in Ontario, denouncing the assaults made on the Washington Treaty, the Pacific Railway scheme, the terms with British Columbia, and the sectional policy of the Administration, as evidence of his statements.

The remainder of Dr. Tupper's speech we hold over until tomorrow, as also that of Mr. Huntington, who followed Dr. Tupper, and spoke until half-past one in the morning. The House at this hour adjourned, and Sir Francis Hincks will commence Tuesday's debate.

Guelph Evening Mercury

TUESDAY EVENING, OCT. 28, 1873

Mr. Chadwick and the Mercury.

The Guelph Herald is in sad trouble about Mr. Chadwick's remark to the Mayor at the last Council meeting—"Why don't you leave the chair, then?" It devotes over two columns to a laboured attempt to disprove our position, but the result is not very formidable when closely examined.

The gentlemen who corroborated our statement have been interviewed, and the most strenuous efforts have evidently been made to induce them to eat their own words and withdraw from the position they took up; but without success. The Mayor explains that he only actually heard Mr. Chadwick say the words "leave the chair," though until Mr. Chadwick talked to him on the subject, he had the impression that Mr. Chadwick did suggest that he should adjourn. He says our reporter misunderstood him during conversation in reference to the expression being a sarcastic one. This, however, does not affect the question at issue. Mr. Robt. Mitchell says that he made use of words similar to those ascribed to Mr. Chadwick, and that he did not hear the latter say "Why don't you leave the chair, then?" But this does not prove that Mr. Chadwick did not say it also. Mr. Chadwick seems to have forgotten using the expression; Mr. Richard Mitchell and Mr. Heffernan also think Mr. Chadwick did not use it. Against this there is the opinion of the four Councilors who think he did—Messrs. McLagan, Crowe, Howard and Massie. The reporter of the Herald says Mr. Chadwick did not make the remark in question; but then the reporters of the Mercury and the Advertiser say he did.

This last production of the Herald leaves the matter about where it was. It is certainly strange that there should be such conflicting opinions about so simple a matter; but we see no reason to alter our opinion on the subject. The Herald has expressly made it a matter of veracity between that journal and the Mercury, and we can only leave it there; our word is as good as theirs, and we hope much better. We have no reason to be dissatisfied with the result of the controversy: the Herald pointed out an alleged blunder in our report, and has not sustained its allegation; we in return pointed out three blunders in the Herald's report, and have sustained our assertions.

We think that quite enough has been said on this matter, and do not intend to return to it again. The Herald ought to be grateful to us for affording it an opportunity for the exercise of its unsurpassed talent for abuse; it has been very quiet lately, and must have been "spoiling for a fight." We shall watch with a sort of languid interest to see how long the Herald's supply of Billingsgate on this question will last. We give it a fortnight to exhaust the supply.

Reply of "A True Catholic."

To the Editor of the Evening Mercury.

Sir,—After reading the letter of "A Catholic" in yesterday's Herald, I think it necessary and proper to respond once more, through the columns of your good paper, to the untruthful and disgusting remarks of "A Catholic" and suggested to him by his "red stick" friends. He has got friends, but they are few, and far between. Such remarks, I am sorry to say, are of late characteristic of the letters inserted in the Herald. To the intelligent readers of THE MERCURY, it is quite sufficient for me to say that the allusion to the able and gallant conduct of Col. Higginbotham on behalf of our co-religionists, whose cause he so ably advocated in the House of Commons, was a mistake (though small) which I am not to blame for, but the innocent type-setter. That is the one and only error which "A Catholic" rants about in over half a column length of that incoherent letter in the Herald. I am glad to see that the despicable individual who as "A Catholic" appears so degraded in his letters, gives the gallant Colonel the credit (although he did not mean to do so) of standing firmly by and upholding the sacred principles of our Catholic brethren. Intelligent readers can see that fact. All good and honorable Protestants will certainly respect and admire the able, unselfish, and well-meant exertions of men who have the courage to justly defend their cause, no matter of what religious persuasion: these good men may be. And why should my coreligionists not give the noble Colonel that respect and honor which he so much deserves from us? It is a well known fact that Col. Higginbotham receives, and I trust always will receive, the unanimous thanks of the Catholic body of this town, for his disinterested efforts on behalf of our co-religionists, and that is the "red stick" which makes "A Catholic" and the "blue monkeys" uneasy. All good Protestants will respect and admire the conduct of their fellow-citizen, the Colonel, for the praiseworthy attitude he assumed in Parliament, on behalf of a good, but often persecuted people.

I leave it to the judgement of liberal people of all religions, denominations, if the letters in the Herald over the signature of "A Catholic" do not appear like the contemptible efforts of a person or persons who would stand with pride in the boots of an informer, and without the least particle of shame assert that he or they sold their faith and country for "a mass of potage."

Do not "A Catholic's" letters appear like the efforts of a full grown bull dog miraculously endowed with the seldom encountered gift of an incoherent and bewildered imagination? Does he not appear to feel like as if one of these "blue monkeys" or "red sticks" descended with an unearthly violence upon his disturbed cranium? Something is the matter with the poor thing, for "thing" he certainly is.

The conspicuousness and transparency of his ignited but stupid imagination is at present under the gaze of an admiring and amused public. The length of his last letter very much resembles his brains—long, thin and insipid. Look at the first lines in "A Catholic's" last letter in the Herald, and we all can clearly see the "deceit" which is ever apparent in his blunted imagination. I call upon my co-religionists, in particular, to mark one expression, namely—that the gallant Colonel's defence of our co-religionists rights was "indecent." Roman Catholics, is it indecent to defend the rights, the liberties of your altars? Is it indecent to defend the education of your children? Is it indecent to defend the faith for which your forefathers suffered? My co-religionists, is there a man among you who is prepared to defend the conduct of the traitor who commenced this controversy, and who, in a cowardly and unchristian like manner, dragged the sacred name of religion into public print? "A Catholic" challenges me to produce my name. I am not ashamed of my name, and I can produce it whenever necessary; but I would scorn to do so at the solicitation of the vulgar and puny individual who signs himself "A Catholic."

Mr. J. P. MacMillan and his so-called "firm" have nothing to do with these letters, which I alone write, "I did not go around on Sunday and see the 'leading respectable Catholics' to obtain their opinion of the scurrilous letter inserted in yesterday's Herald, as 'A Catholic' and some of the 'blue monkeys' did. In conclusion, Mr. Editor, I wish to say that I am determined to fight this out to the end, unless I become convinced that "A Catholic" is no Catholic at all, for respect for myself and co-religionists would then compel me from answering the effusions of the light-brained scribe in yesterday's Herald.

Yours truly,
A TRUE CATHOLIC.

CHAPTER IV.

HECTOR AND FLORA PRISONERS—THE WITCH OF BEN LAIR—A DARK PROSPECT.

"Had you been a man and not a woman these words had been your last."
"Had I been a man instead of a woman, Donald Cameron would not have been alive to tell me that," cried the other, with startling vehemence.
"Come away, come away, men," cried Ian. "Come, let us get away out of this."

"Ay, go," was the response; "go and have your time of success. But marvel not although you fail in that on which you are even now intent. To-day the Witch of Ben Lair unravelled a skein, and there she saw the bond uniting villains; and there she saw the bond cut; and there was revealed to her the secret of failure. Go and see whether you triumph."

And with a wild eldritch laugh she disappeared amongst the trees in the direction in which she came.
"Go on," cried Cameron, who was shaking like a leaf. "Forward, and let us get from this place," and with an alacrity which betokened that they, too, were glad to put distance between them and the spot where they now were, the two men in charge of Hector started off at a rapid pace. The others quickly followed and the journey was again resumed.

Hector had been much struck with the appearance and strange language of the woman. To him her words were to some extent enigmatical, but nothing could be plainer than that she was understood by Cameron, who seemed to writh under what she said as a slave under the lash.

Hector had heard when a boy of the dark and bloody deed which had been committed on the north shore of the loch, and the woman had hinted that Cameron was the author of some terrible outrage which had been committed on the spot where she stood twenty years before. Then the reference to Mairubha's Binn puzzled him.

The place was said never to be trodden by human feet. Could it be possible that the place was used by Donald Cameron for nefarious purposes? This suspicion forced itself upon his mind, but he could arrive at no satisfactory conclusion, and he gave up thinking more about it; he would have valued greatly, however, an opportunity of questioning the old woman as to the meaning of her words.

They had now walked for nearly eight miles, so far as Hector could judge, without any signs of halting, and feeling sure that this forced journey must be very painful and fatiguing to Flora, he turned and inquired of Cameron whether he did not consider that Miss Macgregor must be in need of a short rest, as she was not accustomed to walking such distances.

"It is because of her own caprice that she is here at all," was the reply. "Had she been content to remain at home, this walk would not have been taken either by me or you. Since, therefore, she has entailed so much annoyance and fatigue upon us, it is only fair that she should bear a portion of it herself."

"You are a heartless villain," replied the young man, indignantly. "But for this conduct a due reward will yet be measured out to you. I, too, tell you that in this respect the words spoken by the Witch of Ben-Lair will yet be proved true."

"By heavens, I will bear almost anything but that," roared Cameron. "This is insolence which I shall punish, and now, if you dare to repeat these words again."
He clutched the hilt of his claymore savagely, and Hector saw that he was in a furious passion. Prudence, therefore, dictated that, bound and unarmed as he was, it would be dangerous to provoke him further. He, however, ventured one more remark. Addressing Flora, he said kindly:

"Are you much fatigued, my dear?"
"I am scarcely able to walk," was the reply, and the poor girl burst into tears.
"Well," interposed Cameron, "since you are so much tired out, I may tell you that a quarter of a mile further will do for the present. You will then rest for a time."

"Will you be able to walk the distance?" again inquired Hector.
"We will arrange that for her without your meddling," replied Ian, spitefully.
"I have not yet given up charge of her," said Hector, calmly.
Ian ground his teeth, but said nothing more, while Cameron indulged in a low coarse laugh.

And again the journey was resumed. They were now opposite the small cluster of islands in the centre of the loch, and about half a mile to the westward the largest of these—Mairubha's Isle—with its old ruin, was strikingly prominent, the latter standing, grim and silent looking in the moonlight, like some faithful sentinel of the night; and Hector was now strongly impressed with the belief that the journey had some connection with the ruin. And this suspicion was confirmed when, just as they were almost opposite the island, Cameron ordered a halt, and, leaving Hector, the two clansmen who were in charge of him dashed up a steep gully in the mountain side, formed by a burn which flowed into the loch just at this point.

In a few seconds they reappeared with a boat on their shoulders, which they laid down at the side of the loch, and fixed the oars on its sides.
"Is all ready?" asked Cameron.
"Yes," was the reply.
Then step into the boat, please, Miss Macgregor," addressing Flora, whom he had just led to its side.

The poor girl almost overcame with dread, fell upon her knees, and, clasping her hands, implored her uncle to tell her what were his intentions toward her, but the only reply she elicited was a prompt order to cease her talk and step into the boat.
Hector's soul burned within him with indignation, but he could do nothing; and as words could avail nothing, he held his peace.
