For the last half mile Robinson had to use every ounce on the St. Leger winner to keep the slight lead he had acquired, and it was only after a terrific and well sustained effort that the head verdict was secured. So close and exciting was the finish that the rider of Seabreeze did not know passing the judicial box whether he had won or lost.

The players who have made home runs for double figures during the season are as follows: Ryan, 16; Connor, 18; Johnston, 13; Denny; Angson, 11.

Griffin may go to St. Louis to take Harry Lyons' place in centre, and the Athletics will doubtessly successfully engineer the deal for Kilroy.

Washington and Cleveland will probably change places next season, the former going into the Association, while the latter will join the League.

The claim is first that the franchise and all the players but Kilroy and Griffin will be transfered to Buffalo.

In this city they do not hesitate to confirm by new insults, even on solemn occasions, the meurpation and violence which are within the remembrance of the whole world, degrading Rome to the simple position of the capital of the kingdom, while God predestined it to be the See of the Vicar of Christ, and it shall ever remain the Capital of the Catholic world.

rumor but at first hand, and I cannot imagine upon what action of the society he rests his assertion that it aims to Romanize the Church.

The society consists wholly of communicants of the Church of England; and numbers some thirty thousand persuns, five-sixths of whom are lay communicants, while more than twenty bishops are included in its membership. The alpha and omega of its existence as stated in the official year book of the Church of England and in the society's constitution and authorized publications, is

To defend and maintain unimpaired the doctrine and discipling of the Church of England; and to promote the work of announce in the old finding missions; so as to be by Kiod's help a insting witness in the world for the advancement of His glory and the good of His church.

And as I said in my last letter, of late years

Editor World: Could you say for the benefit of a large circle of your readers, why the manager of the Grand Opera House does not state in his advertisements the fact of an advance in the prices, and not place his patrons in a somewhat awkward predicament? Having asked two lady friends to attend the theatier one evening last week, and fondly imagining "in the exuberance of my joy" at their acceptance, that three dollars would cover the cost of the tockets, you may judge of my assonashment when an affable official requested me firmly but politely to go down into my "dip for $1.50 more. Lo! the prices were raised, and not a word in any of his advertisements—and this for what proved to be a seriously come opera, "A Trip to Africa," Now, we have this week a first-class actees, popular prices and crowded houses. The last of the week, with Saturday matines, we shall have "The Boston Idea! Opera Company." The prices are again up, away ap, $1 for the matinee. Again not a word of notice. The idea evidently is that the regular prices being charged the earlier part of the week, and no notice of the change advertised, many would go for their regular Saturday atternoon's enjoyment, and, rather than return home, would put up with the imposition. Such a method of doing business is unwise, unfair and a leetle sharp. Advertise your prices, Manager Sheppard, and no such complaints as mine can be made.

THEATRE-GOER.

Editor World: The Don Flats crossing on Gerrard-street is in a deplorable condition with mud after every rainfall. There is no sidewalk although thousands of people cross there daily, as I do, sometimes through mud six inches deep to save the long walk around by King-street bridge. A portable sidewalk that would raise pedestrians out of the mixe could be accept made from planks laid side by side lengthwise, natled on a block underneath each end. I regretted to see ladies wading across their, sometimes five or six to gether, holding up their dresses and their dainty boots covered with mud. Where is the new street commissioner?

in his safes without the purchase of another line. Still, he was constantly buying, and by this time is doubtless eight or ten years shead. The Century and Harper's Magazine, it is claimed, could be published for fifusen years on matter already accepted. A sensational story paper inferior to The Ledger, claims to have on hand 'serials' enough for ten years to come. And the story is the same in all periodical publication offices where the matter is allowed to accountulate. Yet the avalanche of words poured forth by the victuus of cacceties seribeadi continues with seemingly ever increasing volume. The editor of a magazine said recently: "We receive on an average about twenty prose and as many poetical manuscripts per day. They vary in length and subject greatly, but have a harmonious style—that of utter badness. Not one in a hundred is worth passing to a second reader for consideration. The writers generally asnd along letters trying to influence publication through sympathy with their ambition, or their misery, or by giving fictitions ideas of their social, political, or literary prominence. Of course no attention is paid to such letters. Each mainiscript has to go on its own meritor demerit. Many of them can be sufficiently judged on their first two pages, and sometimes a story is rejected without any reading at all, simply because its length units it for our use. I do not think we could keep up with the constantly inhowing mass, if we did not adopt such short cuts in reading and judging manuscript. No, instead of getting more than our share, I have no doubt there are other offices where much more matter is offered than in ours. One that I know or gets from fifty to sixty manuscripts a day. All sorts of people send in stuff, but the most prolific and persistent in their contributions as writers."
