OFFICIAL REPORT

OF THE DEBATES

OF THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS

OF THE

DOMINION OF CANADA

SECOND SESSION—NINTH PARLIAMENT

---

2 EDWARD VII., 1902

VOL. LVI

COMPRISING THE PERIOD FROM THE THIRTEENTH DAY OF FEBRUARY TO THE NINTH DAY OF APRIL, INCLUSIVE

PARLIAMENTARY COUNSEL
HOUSE OF COMMONS

OTTAWA
PRINTED BY S. E. DAWSON, PRINTER TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY 1902

MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

OF THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE SIR WILFRID LAURIER

P.C., G.C.M.G., K.C., D.C.L. (Oxon.)

AT THE OPENING OF THE SECOND SESSION OF THE NINTH PARLIAMENT

1902

CABINET FORMED JULY 13, 1896

President of the Privy Council (Premier)	Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, P. C., G. C. M. G., K.C., D.C.L. (Oxon.)
Minister of Trade and Commerce	Hon. Sir Richard J. Cartwright, G.C.M.G.
Secretary of State	Hon. R. W. Scott, K.C., LL.D.
Minister of Militia and Defence	Hon. F. W. Borden, B.A., M.D.
Postmaster General	Hon. Wm. Mulock, K.C., M.A., LL.D.
Minister of Agriculture	Hon. Sydney Fisher, B.A.
Minister of Public Works	Hon. J. I. Tarte.
Minister of Finance	Hon. W. S. Fielding.
Minister of Railways and Canals	Hon. Andrew G. Blair, K.C.
Minister of the Interior	Hon. Clifford Sifton, B.A., K.C.
Minister of Customs	Hon. Wm. Paterson.
Minister of Marine and Fisheries	Hon. James Sutherland.
Minister of Inland Revenue	Hon. M. E. Bernier.
Minister of Justice	Hon. C. Fitzpatrick, B.A., K.C.
Without Portfolio	Hon. W. Templeman.
(Not in the Cabinet.)
Solicitor General	Hon. Henry George Carroll, LL.B.

Clerk of the Privy Council ..... John J. McGee.

OFFICERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Hon. Louis Philippe Brodeur	Speaker.
Peter Macdonald, M.P.	Deputy Speaker.
Sir John G. Bourinot, K.C.M.G.	Clerk of the House.
Laplante, Mr. J. B. R	Clerk-Assistant.
Lieut.-Col. Henry Robert Smith	Serjeant-at-Arms.

OFFICIAL REPORTERS.

Albert Horton ..... Chief Reporter.

Stephen Abbott
E. Joseph Duggan
J. O. Marceau
Thos. P. Owens
Alphonse Desjardins
A. C. Campbell
George Simpson
..... Reporters.

Chas. W. Boyce ..... Assistant to Chief Reporter.

ALPHABETICAL LIST

OF THE

MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

SECOND SESSION, NINTH PARLIAMENT

1902

ALCORN, GEORGE OSCAR—Prince Edward.
ANGERS, CHARLES—Charlevoix.
ARCHAMBAULT, JOSEPH ELOI—Berthier.
AVERY, MELZAR—Addington.

BALL, GEORGES—Nicolet.
BARKER, SAMUEL—Hamilton.
BAZINET, CHARLES—Joliette.
BEITH, ROBERT—Durham, W.R.
BÉLAND, HENRI SÉVÉRIN—Beauce.
BELCOURT, NAPOLEON A.—Ottawa.
BELL, ADAM CARR—Pictou.
BENNETT, WILLIAM H.—Simcoe, E.R.
BERNIER, HON. MICHEL E.—St. Hyacinthe.
BICKERDIKE, ROBERT—Montreal, St. Lawrence.
BIRKETT, THOMAS—Ottawa.
BLAIN, RICHARD—Peel.
BLAIR, HON. ANDREW GEORGE—St. John (City).
BORDEN, HON. FREDERICK W.—King's, N.S.
BORDEN, ROBERT L.—Halifax.
BOURASSA, HENRI—Labelle.
BOURBONNAIS, AUGUSTIN—Soulanges.
BOYD, NATHANIEL—Macdonald.
BROCK, WILLIAM REES—Toronto Centre.
BRODER, ANDREW—Dundas.
BRODEUR, HON. LOUIS PHILIPPE—Rouville.
BROWN, JAMES P.—Chateauguay.
BRUCE, FRANK C.—Hamilton.
BRUNEAU, ARTHUR AIMÉ—Richelieu.
BRUNET, JAMES—Montreal, St. James.
BUREAU, JACQUES—Three Rivers and St. Maurice.

CALVERT, WILLIAM SAMUEL—Middlesex, W.R.
CALVIN, HIRAM A.—Frontenac.
CAMPBELL, ARCHIBALD—York, Ont., W.R.
CARBONNEAU, ONÉSIPHORE—L'Islet.
CARGILL, HENRY—Bruce, E.R.
CARROLL, HON. HENRY G.—Kamouraska.
CARSCALLEN, ALEXANDER W.—Hastings, N.R.
CARTWRIGHT, HON. SIR RICHARD, G.C.M.G.—Oxford, S.R.
CASGRAIN, THOMAS CHASE—Montmorency.
CHAMPAGNE, LOUIS N.—Wright.
CHARLTON, JOHN—Norfolk, N.R.
CHRISTIE, THOMAS—Argenteuil.
CLANCY, JAMES—Bothwell.
CLARE, GEORGE A.—Waterloo, S.R.
CLARKE, EDWARD FREDERICK—Toronto, West.
COCHRANE, EDWARD—Northumberland, Ont., E.R.
COPP, ALBERT J. S.—Digby.
COSTIGAN, HON. JOHN—Victoria, N.B.
COWAN, MAHLON K.—Essex, S.R.
CULBERT, JOHN—Brockville.

DAVIS, THOMAS OSBORNE—Saskatchewan.
DELISLE, MICHEL SIMEON—Portneuf.
DEMERS, LOUIS JULIEN—Lévis.
DEMERS, L. PHILIPPE—St. John and Iberville.
DOUGLAS, JAMES M.—Assiniboia, East.
DUGAS, FRANÇOIS O.—Montcalm.
DYMENT, ALBERT EDWARD—Algoma.

EARLE, THOMAS—Victoria, B.C.
EDWARDS, WILLIAM C.—Russell.
EMMERSON, HENRY R.—Westmoreland.
ERB, DILMAN KINSEY—Perth, S.R.
ETHIER, JOSEPH ARTHUR C.—Two Mountains.

FARQUHARSON, DONALD—Queen's West, P.E.I.
FIELDING, HON. WILLIAM STEVENS—Shelburne and Queen's (N.S.)
FISHER, HON. SYDNEY ARTHUR—Brome.
FITZPATRICK, HON. CHARLES—Quebec County.
FLINT, THOMAS BARNARD—Yarmouth.
FORTIER, EDMOND—Lotbinière.
FOWLER, GEORGE W.—King's, N.B.
FRASER, DUNCAN C.—Guysborough.

GALLERY, DANIEL, Montreal, St. Anne.
GALLIHER, WILLIAM ALFRED—Yale and Cariboo.
GANONG, GILBERT W.—Charlotte.
GAUVREAU, CHARLES ARTHUR—Témiscouata.
GEOFFRION, VICTOR—Chambly and Verchères.
GERMAN, WILLIAM MANLY—Welland.
GIBSON, ALEXANDER, JR.—York, N.B.
GILMOUR, JAMES—Middlesex, E.R.
GIRARD, JOSEPH—Chicoutimi and Saguenay.
GOULD, ISAAC J.—Ontario, W.R.
GOURLEY, SEYMOUR E.—Colchester.
GUTHRIE, HUGH—Wellington, S.R.

HACKETT, EDWARD—Prince West, P.E.I.
HAGGART, HON. JOHN GRAHAM—Lanark, S.R.
HALE, FREDERICK H.—Carleton, N.B.
HALLIDAY, JAMES—Bruce, N.R.
HARTY, WILLIAM—Kingston.
HARWOOD, HENRY S.—Vaudreuil.
HENDERSON, DAVID—Halton.
HEYD, CHARLES BERNHARD—Brant, S.R.
HOLMES, ROBERT—Huron, W.R.
HORSEY, EDWARD H.—Grey, N.R.
HUGHES, JAMES J.—King's, P.E.I.
HUGHES, SAMUEL—Victoria, Ont., N.R.
HYMAN, CHARLES S.—London.

INGRAM, ANDREW B.—Elgin, E.R.

JOHNSTON, ALEXANDER—Cape Breton.
JOHNSTON, ROBERT—Cardwell.
JOHNSTON, THOMAS GEORGE—Lambton, W.R.

KAULBACH, CHARLES E.—Lunenburg.
KEMP, ALBERT E.—Toronto, East.
KENDALL, ARTHUR S.—Cape Breton.
KENDREY, JAMES—Peterborough, W.R.
KIDD, EDWARD—Carleton, Ont.

LANCASTER, EDWARD A.—Lincoln and Niagara.
LANG, JOHN—Peterborough, E.R.
LARIVIÈRE, ALPHONSE A. C.—Provencher.
LAURIER, R. CHARLEMAGNE—L'Assomption.
LAURIER, RT. HON. SIR WILFRID, G.C.M.G.—Quebec, East.
LAVELL, JOHN REEVE—Leeds and Grenville.
LAVERGNE, LOUIS—Drummond and Arthabaska.
LEBLANC, OLIVER J.—Kent, N.B.
LEFURGEY, ALFRED A.—Prince East, P.E.I.
LEGRIS, JOSEPH H.—Maskinongé.
LEMIEUX, RODOLPHE—Gaspé.
LENNOX, HAUGHTON—Simcoe, W.R.
LEONARD, J. E. EMILE—Laval.
LEWIS, WILLIAM J.—Albert.
LOGAN, HANCE J.—Cumberland.
LOVELL, HENRY—Stanstead.
LOY, GEORGE M.—Beauharnois.

MACDONALD, PETER—Huron, E.R.
MACKIE, THOMAS—Renfrew, N.R.
MACKINNON, D. A.—Queen's, E.R. (P.E.I.)
MACLAREN, ALEXANDER F.—Perth, N.R.
MACLAREN, WILLIAM SCOTT—Huntingdon.
MACLEAN, WILLIAM F.—York, Ont., E.R.
MCCARTHY, LEIGHTON GOLDIE—Simcoe, N.R.
MCCOLL, JOHN B.—Northumberland, Ont., W.R.
MCCOOL, CHARLES ARTHUR—Nipissing.
MCCORMICK, GEORGE—Muskoka and Parry Sound.
MCCREARY, WILLIAM F.—Selkirk.
MCEWEN, GEORGE—Huron, S.R.
MCGOWAN, JOHN—Wellington, C.R.
MCGUGAN, MALCOLM—Middlesex, S.R.
MCINTOSH, JOHN—Sherbrooke.
MCISAAC, COLIN F.—Antigonish.
MCLENNAN, ANGUS—Inverness.
MCLEOD, ANGUS—Ontario, N.R.
MADORE, JOSEPH ALEXANDRE C.—Hochelaga.
MALOUIN, ALBERT—Quebec Centre.
MARCIL, CHARLES—Bonaventure.
MARCIL, JOSEPH EDMOND—Bagot.
MARTINEAU, PIERRE R.—Montmagny.
MATHESON, JOSEPH—Richmond, N.S.
MAXWELL, GEORGE RITCHIE—Burrard.
MEIGS, DANIEL B.—Missisquoi.
MIGNAULT, ROCH MOÏSE S.—Yamaska.
MONET, DOMINIQUE—Laprairie and Napierville.
MONK, FREDERICK D.—Jacques Cartier.
MORIN, JEAN BAPTISTE—Dorchester.
MORRISON, AULAY—New Westminster.
MULOCK, HON. WILLIAM—York, Ont., N.R.
MURRAY, THOMAS—Pontiac.

NORTHRUP, WILLIAM BARTON—Hastings, E.R.

OLIVER, FRANK—Alberta.
OSLER, EDMOND BOYD—Toronto, West.

PARMELEE, CHARLES H.—Shefford.
PATERSON, HON. WILLIAM—Wentworth and N. Brant.
POPE, RUFUS H.—Compton.
PORTER, EDWARD GUSS—Hastings, W.R.
POWER, WILLIAM—Quebec, West.
PRÉFONTAINE, RAYMOND—Maissonneuve and Terrebonne.
PRINGLE, ROBERT A.—Cornwall and Stormont.
PROULX, ISIDORE—Prescott.
PUTTEE, ARTHUR W.—Winnipeg.

REID, JAMES—Restigouche.
REID, JOHN D.—Grenville, S.R.
RICHARDSON, MATTHEW KENDALL—Grey, S.R.
RILEY, GEORGE—Victoria, B.C.
ROBINSON, JABEL—Elgin, W.R.
ROBINSON, JAMES—Northumberland, N.B.
ROCHE, WILLIAM—Halifax.
ROCHE, WILLIAM J.—Marquette.
RODDICK, THOMAS G.—Montreal, St. Antoine.
ROSAMOND, BENNETT—Lanark, N.R.
ROSS, JEAN AUGUSTE—Rimouski.
ROSS, HON. WILLIAM—Victoria, N.S.
ROSS, WILLIAM—Ontario, S.R.
ROUSSEAU, JEFFREY ALEXANDRE—Champlain.
RUSSELL, BENJAMIN—Hants.

SCHELL, JACOB T.—Glengarry.
SCOTT, WALTER—Assiniboia, West.
SEAGRAM, JOSEPH E.—Waterloo, N.R.
SHERRITT, JOHN—Middlesex, N.R.
SIFTON, HON. CLIFFORD—Brandon.
SIMMONS, OLIVER—Lambton, E.R.
SMITH, ERNEST D.—Wentworth, S.R.
SMITH, RALPH—Vancouver.
SPROULE, THOMAS S.—Grey, E.R.
STEPHENS, GEORGE—Kent, Ont.
STEWART, D. A.—Lisgar.

SUTHERLAND, HON. JAMES—Oxford, N.R.
SUTHERLAND, ROBERT FRANKLIN—Essex, N.R.

TALBOT, ONÉSIPHORE ERNEST—Bellechasse.
TARTE, HON. JOSEPH ISRAEL—Montreal, St. Mary.
TAYLOR, GEORGE—Leeds, S.R.
THOMPSON, ANDREW THORBURN—Haldimand and Monck.
TISDALE, HON. DAVID—Norfolk, S.R.
TOBIN, EDMUND WILLIAM—Richmond and Wolfe.
TOLMIE, JOHN—Bruce, W.R.
TOLTON, EDWIN—Wellington, N.R.
TUCKER, JOSEPH JOHN—St. John, N.B, City & Co.
TUPPER, HON. SIR CHARLES HIBBERT, K.C.M.G.—Pictou.
TURCOT, GEORGE—Megantic.
TURGEON, ONÉSIPHORE—Gloucester.

VROOMAN, ADAM E.—Victoria, Ont., S.R.

WADE, FLETCHER BATH—Annapolis.
WARD, HENRY ALFRED—Durham, E.R.
WILMOT, ROBERT D.—Sunbury and Queen's.
WILSON, URIAH—Lennox.
WRIGHT, AARON ABEL—Renfrew, S.R.

ALPHABETICAL LIST

OF THE

CONSTITUENCIES OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

SECOND SESSION, NINTH PARLIAMENT

1902

ADDINGTON—Melzar Avery.
ALBERT—William J. Lewis.
ALBERTA—Frank Oliver.
ALGOMA—Albert Edward Dyment.
ANNAPOLIS—Fletcher Bath Wade.
ANTIGONISH—Colin F. McIsaac.
ARGENTEUIL—Thomas Christie.
ASSINIBOIA, EAST—James M. Douglas.
ASSINIBOIA, WEST—Walter Scott.

BAGOT—Joseph Edmond Marcil.
BEAUCE—Henri Sévérin Béland.
BEAUHARNOIS—George M. Loy.
BELLECHASSE—Onésiphore Ernest Talbot.
BERTHIER—Joseph Eloi Archambault.
BONAVENTURE—Charles Marcil.
BOTHWELL—James Clancy.
BRANDON—Hon. Clifford Sifton.
BRANT, S. RIDING—Charles Bernhard Heyd.
BROCKVILLE—John Culbert.
BROME—Hon. Sydney Arthur Fisher.
BRUCE, E. RIDING—Henry Cargill.
BRUCE, N. RIDING—James Halliday.
BRUCE, W. RIDING—John Tolmie.
BURRARD—George Ritchie Maxwell.

CAPE BRETON—Alexander Johnston. Arthur S. Kendall.
CARDWELL—Robert Johnston.
CARLETON (N.B.)—Frederick Harding Hale.
CARLETON (O.)—Edward Kidd.
CHAMBLY AND VERCHÈRES—Victor Geoffrion.
CHAMPLAIN—Jeffrey Alexandre Rousseau.
CHARLEVOIX—Charles Angers.
CHARLOTTE—Gilbert W. Ganong.
CHATEAUGUAY—James P. Brown.
CHICOUTIMI AND SAGUENAY—Joseph Girard.
COLCHESTER—Seymour E. Gourley.
COMPTON—Rufus Henry Pope.
CORNWALL AND STORMONT—Robert A. Pringle.
CUMBERLAND—Hance J. Logan.

DIGBY—Albert J. S. Copp.
DORCHESTER—Jean Baptiste Morin.
DRUMMOND AND ARTHABASKA—Louis Lavergne.
DUNDAS—Andrew Broder.
DURHAM, E. RIDING—Henry Alfred Ward.
DURHAM, W. RIDING—Robert Beith.

ELGIN, E. RIDING—Andrew B. Ingram.
ELGIN, W. RIDING—Jabel Robinson.
ESSEX, N. RIDING—Robert Franklin Sutherland.
ESSEX, S. RIDING—Mahlon K. Cowan.

FRONTENAC—Hiram A. Calvin.

GASPÉ—Rodolphe Lemieux.
GLENGARRY—Jacob T. Schell.
GLOUCESTER—Onésiphore Turgeon.
GRENVILLE, S. RIDING—John Dowsley Reid.
GREY, E. RIDING—Thomas S. Sproule.
GREY, N. RIDING—Edward H. Horsey.
GREY, S. RIDING—Matthew Kendall Richardson.
GUYSBOROUGH—Duncan C. Fraser.

HALDIMAND AND MONCK—Andrew Thorburn Thompson.
HALIFAX—Robert L. Borden. William Roche.
HALTON—David Henderson.
HAMILTON—Samuel Barker. Frank C. Bruce.
HANTS—Benjamin Russell.
HASTINGS, E. RIDING—William B. Northrup.
HASTINGS, N. RIDING—Alexander W. Carscallen.
HASTINGS, W. RIDING—Edward Guss Porter.
HOCHELAGA—J. Alexandre Camille Madore.
HUNTINGDON—William Scott Maclaren.
HURON, E. RIDING—Peter Macdonald.
HURON, S. RIDING—George McEwen.
HURON, W. RIDING—Robert Holmes.

INVERNESS—Angus McLennan.

JACQUES CARTIER—Frederick D. Monk.
JOLIETTE—Charles Bazinet.

KAMOURASKA—Hon. Henry George Carroll.
KENT (N.B.)—Oliver J. LeBlanc.
KENT (O.)—George Stephens.
KING'S (N.B.)—George W. Fowler.
KING'S (N.S.)—Hon. Frederick W. Borden.

KING'S (P.E.I.)—James J. Hughes.
KINGSTON—William Harty.

LABELLE—Henri Bourassa.
LAMBTON, E. RIDING—Oliver Simmons.
LAMBTON, W. RIDING—Thomas George Johnston.
LANARK, N. RIDING—Bennett Rosamond.
LANARK, S. RIDING—Hon. John Graham Haggart.
LAPRAIRIE AND NAPIERVILLE—Dominique Monet.
L'ASSOMPTION—R. Charlemagne Laurier.
LAVAL—J. E. Emile Leonard.
LEEDS AND GRENVILLE, N. RIDING—John Reeve Lavell.
LEEDS, S. RIDING—George Taylor.
LENNOX—Uriah Wilson.
LÉVIS—Louis Julien Demers.
LINCOLN AND NIAGARA—Edward A. Lancaster.
LISGAR—D. A. Stewart.
L'ISLET—Onésiphore Carbonneau.
LONDON—Charles S. Hyman.
LOTBINIÈRE—Edmond Fortier.
LUNENBURG—Charles Edwin Kaulbach.

MACDONALD—Nathaniel Boyd.
MAISONNEUVE—Raymond Préfontaine.
MARQUETTE—William J. Roche.
MASKINONGÉ—Joseph H. Legris.
MEGANTIC—George Turcot.
MIDDLESEX, E. RIDING—James Gilmour.
MIDDLESEX, N. RIDING—John Sherritt.
MIDDLESEX, S. RIDING—Malcolm McGugan.
MIDDLESEX, W. RIDING—William Samuel Calvert.
MISSISQUOI—Daniel B. Meigs.
MONTCALM—François O. Dugas.
MONTMAGNY—Pierre R. Martineau.
MONTMORENCY—Thomas Chase Casgrain.
MONTREAL, ST. ANNE—Daniel Gallery.
MONTREAL, ST. ANTOINE—Thomas G. Roddick.
MONTREAL, ST. JAMES—Joseph Brunet.
MONTREAL, ST. LAWRENCE—Robert Bickerdike.
MONTREAL, St. MARY—Hon. Joseph Israel Tarte.
MUSKOKA—George McCormick.

NEW WESTMINSTER—Aulay Morrison.
NICOLET—Georges Ball.
NIPISSING—Charles Arthur McCool.
NORFOLK, N. RIDING—John Charlton.
NORFOLK, S. RIDING—Hon. David Tisdale.
NORTHUMBERLAND (N.B.)—James Robinson.
NORTHUMBERLAND (O.) E.R.—Edward Cochrane.
NORTHUMBERLAND (O.) W.R.—John B. McColl.

ONTARIO, N. RIDING—Angus McLeod.
ONTARIO, S. RIDING—William Ross.
ONTARIO, W. RIDING—Isaac J. Gould.
OTTAWA (City)—Napoleon A. Belcourt. Thomas Birkett.
OXFORD, N. RIDING—Hon. James Sutherland.
OXFORD, S. RIDING—Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright, G.C.M.G.

PEEL—Richard Blain.
PERTH, N. RIDING—Alexander Ferguson MacLaren.
PERTH, S. RIDING—Dilman Kinsey Erb.
PETERBOROUGH, E. RIDING—John Lang.
PETERBOROUGH, W. RIDING—James Kendrey.
PICTOU—Adam Carr Bell. Hon. Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, K.C.M.G.
PONTIAC—Thomas Murray.
PORTNEUF—Michel Simeon Delisle.
PRESCOTT—Isidore Proulx.
PRINCE, EAST (P.E.I.)—Alfred A. Lefurgey.
PRINCE, WEST (P.E.I.)—Edward Hackett.
PRINCE EDWARD—George Oscar Alcorn.
PROVENCHER—Alphonse A. C. LaRivière.

QUEBEC, CENTRE—Albert Malouin.
QUEBEC, EAST—Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G.C.M.G.
QUEBEC, WEST—William Power.
QUEBEC (County)—Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick.
QUEEN'S, EAST (P.E.I.)—D. A MacKinnon.
QUEEN'S, WEST (P.E.I.)—Donald Farquharson.

RENFREW, N. RIDING—Thomas Mackie.
RENFREW, S. RIDING—Aaron Abel Wright.
RESTIGOUCHE—James Reid.
RICHELIEU—Arthur Aimé Bruneau.
RICHMOND (N.S.)—Joseph Matheson.
RICHMOND AND WOLFE (Q.)—Edmund William Tobin.
RIMOUSKI—Jean Auguste Ross.
ROUVILLE—Hon. Louis Philippe Brodeur.
RUSSELL—William C. Edwards.

ST. HYACINTHE—Hon. Michel E. Bernier.
ST. JOHN (N.B.), City—Hon. Andrew George Blair.
ST. JOHN (N.B.), City & Co.—Joseph John Tucker.
ST. JOHN AND IBERVILLE—L. Philippe Demers.
SASKATCHEWAN—Thomas Osborne Davis.
SELKIRK—William F. McCreary.
SHEFFORD—Charles H. Parmelee.
SHELBURNE AND QUEEN'S, N.S.—Hon. William Stevens Fielding.
SHERBROOKE—John McIntosh.
SIMCOE, E. RIDING—William H. Bennett.
SIMCOE, N. RIDING—Leighton Goldie McCarthy.
SIMCOE, S. RIDING—Haughton Lennox.
SOULANGES—Augustin Bourbonnais.
STANSTEAD—Henry Lovell.
SUNBURY and QUEEN'S (N. B)—Robert D. Wilmot.

TEMISCOUATA—Charles Arthur Gauvreau.
TERREBONNE—Raymond Préfontaine.
THREE RIVERS AND ST. MAURICE—Jacques Bureau.
TORONTO, CENTRE—William Rees Brock.
TORONTO, EAST—Albert E. Kemp.
TORONTO, WEST—Edward Frederick Clarke. Edmond Boyd Osler.
TWO MOUNTAINS—Joseph Arthur C. Ethier.

VANCOUVER—Ralph Smith.
VAUDREUIL—Henry S. Harwood.
VICTORIA (B.C.)—Thomas Earle. George Riley.

VICTORIA (N.B.)—Hon. John Costigan.
VICTORIA (N.S.)—Hon. William Ross.
VICTORIA (O.), N. RIDING—Samuel Hughes.
VICTORIA (O.), S. RIDING—Adam E. Vrooman.

WATERLOO, N. RIDING—Joseph E. Seagram.
WATERLOO, S. RIDING—George A. Clare.
WELLAND—William Manly German.
WELLINGTON, C. RIDING—John McGowan.
WELLINGTON, N. RIDING—Edwin Tolton.
WELLINGTON, S. RIDING—Hugh Guthrie.
WENTWORTH AND BRANT, N. RIDING—Hon. William Paterson.
WENTWORTH, S. RIDING—Ernest D. Smith.
WESTMORELAND—Henry R. Emmerson.
WINNIPEG—Arthur W. Puttee.
WRIGHT—Louis N. Champagne.

YALE and CARIBOO—William Alfred Galliher.
YAMASKA—Roch Moïse S. Mignault.
YARMOUTH—Thomas Barnard Flint.
YORK (N.B.)—Alexander Gibson, jr.
YORK (O.), E. RIDING—William F. Maclean.
YORK (O.), N. RIDING—Hon. William Mulock.
YORK (O.), W. RIDING—Archibald Campbell.

SELECT Committee Appointed to Supervise the Publication of the Official Reports of the Debates of the House.

BALL, GEORGES—Nicolet.
CHAMPAGNE, L. N.—Wright.
CHARLTON, JOHN—Norfolk, N.
CLARKE, E. F.—Toronto, W.
EARLE, THOS.—Victoria, B.C.
HOLMES, ROBT.—Huron, W.
LARIVIÈRE, A. A. C.—Provencher.
MACDONALD, P.—Huron, E.
MADORE, J. A. C.—Hochelaga.
MONET, D.—Laprairie and Napierville.
ROCHE, WM. J.—Marquette.
RUSSELL, B.—Hants.
SCOTT, WALTER—Assiniboia, W.
SUTHERLAND, R. F.—Essex, N.
TAYLOR, GEO.—Leeds and Grenville.

Chairman:—L. N. CHAMPAGNE—Wright.

ERRATA.

VOL I.

Col. 533, 10th line from bottom, for 'North Grey' read 'East Grey.'

Col. 560, 5th line from top, 'Mr. Kendrey' should read 'Mr. Kendal

Col. 1313, last line,

'Liberal rule . ... $9,841,186'

should read:

'Total increase under Liberal rule $39,841,186

House of Commons Debates

SECOND SESSION—NINTH PARLIAMENT

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, February 13, 1902.

The Parliament, which had been prorogued from time to time, was now commanded to assemble on the 13th day of February, 1902, for the despatch of business.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

A Message was delivered by Molyneux St. John, Esquire, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod :

Mr. SPEAKER,—I am commanded to inform you that His Excellency the Governor General desires and awaits the attendance of your honourable House in the Senate Chamber.

Accordingly the House went into the Senate Chamber.

And the House being returned.

CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have the honour to inform the House that I have received from the judges selected for the trial of election petitions, pursuant to 'The Dominion Controverted Elections Act,' certificates and reports relating to the elections :—

For the electoral district of the West Riding of the county of Durham ;

For the electoral district of York, N.B.; and in all of which electoral districts the elections were declared void.

For the electoral district of Lisgar ;

In conformity with chapter 9, section 46, of the Revised Statutes, I issued my several warrants to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make out new writs of election for the said electoral districts respectively.

I have also the honour to inform the House that I have received from two of the judges selected for the trial of election petitions, pursuant to the 'Dominion Controverted Elections Act,' a certificate and report relating to the election for the electoral district of Victoria, B.C., by which the election of Hon. Edward Gawler Prior was declared void, and the petition against the election of Thos. Earle, Esq., was dismissed.

In conformity with chapter 9, section 46, of the Revised Statutes, I issued my warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make out a new writ of election for the said electoral district in the room of Hon. Edward Gawler Prior.

I have also the honour to inform the House that I have received from the judges selected for the trial of election petitions, pursuant to 'The Dominion Controverted Elections Act,' certificates and reports relating to the election :—

For the electoral district of Ottawa City ;

For the electoral district of Cornwall and Stormont ;

For the electoral district of Charlotte ;

For the electoral district of the South Riding of the county of Ontario ; and

For the electoral district of the North Riding of the county of Bruce ;

by which the said election petitions were severally dismissed and the sitting members declared duly elected.

I have also the honour to inform the House that I have received from the Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada, certified copies of the judgments and decisions of the said court in the matter of the appeals from the decisions of the trial judges in the lower courts, relating to the elections :—

For the electoral district of Beauharnois ;

For the electoral district of Burrard ;

For the electoral district of Victoria, B.C. ;

For the electoral district of Two Mountains ; and

For the electoral district of Terrebonne ;

in all of which the said appeals were dismissed.

VACANCIES.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have also to inform the House that, during the recess, I received communications from several members, notifying me that the following vacancies had occurred in the representation, viz. :—

Of Joseph Godbout, Esq., member for the electoral district of Beauce, by being summoned to the Senate ;

Of Arthur M. Dechene, Esq., member for the electoral district of L'Islet, by being summoned to the Senate ;

Of John W. Bell, Esq., member for the electoral district of Addington, by decease ;

Of Odilon G. Desmarais, Esq., member for the electoral district of Montreal (St. James), by the acceptance of an office of emolument under the Crown.

Of Thomas Fortin, Esq., member for the electoral district of Laval by the acceptance of an office of emolument under the Crown ;

Of Byron Moffatt Britton, Esq., member for the electoral district of Kingston, by the acceptance of an office of emolument under the Crown ;

Of the Hon. Sir Louis Henry Davies, K.C.M.G., member for the electoral district of Queen's West, P.E.I., by the acceptance of the office of Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada ;

Of Nathaniel Clarke Wallace, Esq., member for the electoral district of the West Riding of the county of York, by decease ;

Of the Hon. James Sutherland, member for the electoral district of the North Riding of the county of Oxford, by the acceptance of an office of emolument under the Crown ;

Of the Hon. R. R. Dobell, member for the electoral district of Quebec West, by decease ; and

Of Henry G. Carroll, Esq., member for the electoral district of Kamouraska by the acceptance of the office of the Solicitor General of Canada.

I accordingly issued my several warrants to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make out new writs of election for the said electoral districts respectively.

NEW MEMBERS.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have also the honour to inform the House that during the recess, the Clerk of the House received from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, certificates of the election and return of the following members, viz .:—

Of Alexander Gibson, junior, Esq., for the electoral district of York, N.B. ;

Of Henri Sévérin Béland, Esq., for the electoral district of Beauce ;

Of Robert Beith, Esq., for the electoral district of the West Riding of the county of Durham ;

Of Onésiphore Carbonneau, Esq., for the electoral district of L'Islet ;

Of Wm. Harty, Esq., for the electoral district of Kingston ;

Of Edward Guss Porter, Esq., for the electoral district of the West Riding of the county of Hastings ;

Of Archibald Campbell, Esq., for the electoral district of the West Riding of the county of York, Ont. ;

Of Melzar Avery, Esq., for the electoral district of Addington ;

Of J. E. Emile Leonard, Esq., for the electoral district of Laval ;

Of Hon. Jas. Sutherland, for the electoral district of the North Riding of the county of Oxford ;

Of Jos. Brunet, Esq., for the electoral district of Montreal, (St. James) ;

Of Donald Farquharson, Esq., for the electoral district of Queen's West, P.E.I. ; and

Of William Power, Esq., for the electoral district of Quebec West.

Mr. SPEAKER.

MEMBERS INTRODUCED.

Hon. James Sutherland, member for the electoral district of the North Riding of the county of Oxford, introduced by the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright).

Donald Farquharson, Esq., member for the electoral district of West Queen's, introduced by the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) and Mr. McKinnon.

Archibald Campbell, Esq., member for the electoral district of the West Riding of the county of York, Ontario, introduced by the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland.)

Alexander Gibson, jr., Esq., member for the electoral district of York, New Brunswick, introduced by the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland).

Henri Sévérin Béland, Esq., for the Electoral District of Beauce.

J. E. Emile Leonard, Esq., member for the electoral district of Laval, introduced by Mr. Borden (Halifax) and Mr. Monk.

Onésiphore Carbonneau, Esq., member for the electoral district of L'Islet, by the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the Minister of Inland Revenue (Hon. Mr. Bernier).

Edward Guss Porter, Esq., member for the electoral district of West Hastings, by Mr. Borden (Halifax) and Mr. Northrup.

Joseph Brunet, Esq., member for the electoral district of St. James, Montreal, by the Minister of Inland Revenue (Hon. Mr. Bernier) and Mr. Champagne.

Melzar Avery, Esq., member for the electoral district of Addington, introduced by Mr. Borden (Halifax) and Mr. Taylor.

Robert Beith, Esq., member for the electoral district of West Durham, by the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland.)

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 1) respecting the Administration of Oaths of Office.—The Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier).

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have the honour to inform the House that when the House did attend His Excellency the Governor General this day in the Senate Chamber, His Excellency was pleased to make a speech to both Houses of Parliament, a copy of which is as follows :—

Honourable Gentlemen of the Senate :

Gentlemen of the House of Commons :

In meeting you again at the commencement of another session of Parliament, it is my first duty to express the deep sense of our gratitude to Divine Providence for the many blessings which Canada has received during the past year, and particularly for the exceptionally bountiful harvest in Manitoba and the North-west Territories.

It was very gratifying to note the cordial reception tendered by all classes of the people to the Prince and Princess of Wales, on the occasion of their visit in September and October last, the only regrettable feature being the limited time at their disposal, which prevented their visiting many important centres of population. It is however a great satisfaction to know that their Royal Highnesses enjoyed their tour through Canada and carried away the most pleasant recollections of their visit to this part of the Empire.

The assassination of President McKinley has elicited a universal feeling of sympathy and sorrow throughout the civilized world and, though Canada has happily so far been free from crimes of this character, the close proximity to the United States may make it advisable to join our efforts to the efforts of the United States and other nations and to provide by legislation for the adequate punishment of those who, either by speech or writing, incite fanatics to the perpetration of such horrible crimes.

The returns of the late census will be laid before you and, while the absolute increase in the number of population is not so great as might have been expected, the evidence of growth in wealth and in the general tokens of prosperous development are highly satisfactory. There is good reason also to believe that the increase of population during the latter half of the decade has been very greatly in excess of the average of former years and that in the near future we may look for a much more rapid growth than occurred during the period covered by the last two censuses.

Application having been made by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for approval of an increase of its capital, to meet the demand for additional rolling stock and other improved facilities, for handling the growing traffic, my Ministers availed themselves of the opportunity to stipulate that the long pending question of the power of the Governor in Council to regulate the tolls of the Company should be submitted to the Courts for a judicial decision. The correspondence and other papers will be laid before you.

The inventor, Mr. Marconi, having met unexpected obstacles to the carrying on of his experiments in wireles ocean telegraphy in a sister colony, my Ministers deemed it expedient to invite him to continue his operations on the coast of Nova Scotia, and they availed themselves of his presence in Canada to enter into negotiations resulting in an arrangement through which, should the project prove as successful as is hoped for, the Government and people of Canada will enjoy the benefits of the invention on very favourable terms, including rates for transatlantic messages very much below those now existing.

I am pleased to inform you that the display made by Canada of her products, at the several expositions at which they have been exhibited during the last year has attracted much attention, and has already resulted in many inquiries and orders for our goods.

I may also congratulate you on the satisfactory condition of the revenue and on the steady and continuous expansion of the general business of the country as evidenced by the increased volume of exports and imports.

With the view of still further facilitating and developing our trade with other countries, it will probably be found expedient to increase the number of our commercial agencies, and Parliament will be asked to consider the desirability of making additional provision for that purpose.

I have also pleasure in informing you that the Governments of Australia and New Zealand have accepted an invitation from my Government to attend a conference in London next June for the consideration of trade, transportation, cable and other matters of inter-colonial concern, and it is hoped that the meeting may lead to an extension of Canadian trade with those important portions of His Majesty's Dominions.

I have further to advise you that my Government, having caused inquiry to be made, has reached the conclusion that the establishment of direct steamship service with South Africa would enable Canada to secure in that country a profitable market for her varied products, and, to that end, will endeavour to arrange for such a service.

His Majesty has been graciously pleased to invite the Premier to be present at the ceremonies attending his Coronation. It is to be hoped that the presence of the leading statesmen of the several colonies upon this occasion will afford an opportunity for the discussion of subjects of mutual interest which may considerably affect the development of our trade and commerce in the near future, with the mother country and with our sister colonies.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons :

The public accounts for the last year and the estimates for the succeeding year will be laid before you without delay.

Honourable Gentlemen of the Senate :
Gentlemen of the House of Commons :

I commit the above matters and all others which may be submitted to you, to your earnest consideration, and I rely upon your wisdom and prudence to deal with them in the manner which, under Divine Providence, may prove most conducive to the best interests of Canada.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved :

That the Speech of His Excellency the Governor General to both Houses of Parliament of the Dominion of Canada, be taken into consideration to-morrow.

Motion agreed to.

SELECT STANDING COMMITTEES.

The PRIME MINISTER moved :

That Select Standing Committees of this House for the present session be appointed for the following purposes :—1. On Privileges and Elections. 2. On Expiring Laws. 3. On Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines. 4. On Miscellaneous Private Bills. 5. On Standing Orders. 6. On Printing. 7. On Public Accounts. 8. On Banking and Commerce. 9. On Agriculture and Colonization—which said committees shall severally be empowered to examine and inquire into all such matters and things as may be referred to them by the House ; and to report from time to time their observations and opinions thereon, with power to send for persons, papers and records.

Motion agreed to.

The PRIME MINISTER moved :

That a special committee of five members be appointed to prepare and report with all convenient speed a list of members to form the select standing committees ordered by this House on Thursday, 13th February, instant, such select committee to be composed of the following members : Laurier, Borden (Halifax), Cartwright, Sutherland (Oxford) and Haggart.

Motion agreed to.

OFFICIAL DEBATES OF THE HOUSE.

The PRIME MINISTER moved :

That a select committee be appointed to supervise the official report of the debates of this House during the present session, with power to report from time to time, to be composed of Messrs. Ball, Champagne, Charlton, Clarke, Earle, Madore, Holmes, La Riviere, Macdonald, Monet, Roche (Marquette), Russell, Scott, Sutherland (Essex) and Taylor.

Motion agreed to.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Report of the Joint Librarians of Parliament.—(Mr. Speaker.)

On motion of the Prime Minister, House adjourned at 3.55 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, February 14, 1902.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

ADDRESS IN ANSWER TO HIS EXCELLENCY'S SPEECH.

The House proceeded to the consideration of His Excellency's Speech at the opening of the session.

Mr. ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL (West York). The very pleasant task Mr. Speaker, has been assigned me to-day of moving a humble address to His Excellency in reply to the Speech from the Throne, and I desire at the outset to express my appreciation of the great honour which has thus been conferred, not so much upon myself as upon the county of West York, for I believe that this is the first time since confederation that to a representative of that county in this House has this honourable duty been intrusted. And while I recognize my inability to perform it as creditably as I would like, or as the occasion demands, I am sure that I will receive from both sides of the House that kind indulgence and consideration which has always been granted to young members.

In the first paragraph of the address I am sure we will all join heartily. I am sure we are all united in expressing our gratitude to Divine Providence for the benefits conferred upon this Dominion during the past year, especially the magnificent harvest which has blessed in particular our great North-west, and diffused gladness and prosperity throughout this Dominion, not only in the North-west but in the other provinces has Divine Providence been kind to us in the past year, and certainly if ever we should express our gratitude to the Giver of all good gifts, we ought to do so on the present occasion.

The address naturally refers to the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to this country. We are indeed glad to know that their Royal Highnesses carried away with them most pleasant recollections of their visit. Indeed I think that no event in the history of confederation has so stirred the hearts of our people and evoked such an outburst of loyalty to the person and throne of the representative of the illustrious line of sovereigns who have guided the destinies of the empire, as this visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales. We are glad to know that from the moment they landed upon the historic soil of the old city of Quebec—that soil rendered sacred by the memories of the conflict between the two great races now joined in friendship, that soil in where breathed their last, the one in the hour of victory, the other in the hour of defeat, the two great and noble warriors, personifying the chivalry and valour of the two great nationalities in this country, now living in peace and harmony, and working together shoulder to shoulder for the unification and solidification of this mighty Dominion—we are glad to know that from the moment of landing until departure, the reception which their Royal Highnesses received was one calculated to make them carry away most pleasant recollections. And it is gratifying to our pride as a portion of the empire to reflect that although the Prince and Princess of Wales made the tour of the world, and although they travelled in countries peopled by different nationalities, speaking different languages, yet everywhere they went was British territory and everywhere they were greeted by that grand old flag which for a thousand years has braved the battle and the breeze.

And in all these countries, though the people may speak different languages from that which we speak, and although their religion may be different from ours, yet, from the bottom of their hearts the prayer went up for the preservation of their royal visitors, and that grand old anthem, so dear to the hearts of Canadians, 'God Save the King,' was sung as fervently as it would be in Great Britain itself. It must have been a revelation to their Royal Highnesses to realize the vastness of this mighty empire, the destinies of which they will, some day, be called upon to guide. Though we all hope that the day is far distant when His Majesty Edward VII., shall pass away, yet we know that the time must come when the sceptre shall pass into other hands; and it is pleasant indeed for the people of this country, having had some opportunity to gain knowledge of the character and disposition of those who, in future years, will rule over this empire, to know that they are of a kingly race and that they are fitted, eminently fitted, to fill the lofty position that some day, they will be called upon to fill.

The Speech from the Throne naturally refers to the assassination of President McKinley. I am sure, sir, that the people of this country, in common with those of all nations, will rejoice to know that this government proposes to join in measures that will prevent such diabolical crimes as that which was lately committed in the United States, and I am sure that this House will learn with pleasure that measures in this direction will soon be submitted to it.

The returns of the census are, naturally, a subject of very great importance to the people. And, while, for myself, I am somewhat disappointed at those returns, having felt that we had reason to believe that the population of Canada had increased at a greater ratio than is shown to have been the case by the official figures presented to us, yet, I believe that the last few years have shown that the population of this Dominion is increasing at a rapid rate. All the evidences known to us, the general prosperity of the country, the stream of immigration that is going into the great North-west, the filling up of our towns and the cities—all these lead us to believe that within the last few years our population has been rapidly increasing and that when the next census is taken it will show a much larger ratio of increase than the census whose figures have just been made known. I am glad that the papers will be laid before us, and that there will be an opportunity of discussing this matter more fully at a later day.

Naturally, the application of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the right to increase their capital by some $20,000,000, is one that could not be passed over without comment in the Speech from the Throne. For my part, I consider it another evidence of the great prosperity of the country that a road penetrating all the parts of the Dominion, with its branch lines completing a great system, should find it necessary to double-track large portions of the line and make other extensive improvements to provide for the enormous amount of traffic that is offering. The necessity of providing for this additional traffic having arisen, it is natural that the company should seek power to add to its capital stock. But I am sure that the House will be glad to know that the government have been guarding the interests of the people and that the addition of $20,000,000 to the company's capital will not affect injuriously the government's right to control the rates. Everybody knows that, under the bargain made with the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Governor General in council had no control over the rates of tolls on the traffic of the road until the company had earned a dividend of ten per cent on its capital. The question naturally arose: What is the capital of the Canadian Pacific Railway? We all know that the authorized capital was $65,000,000; and added to that, they had a large bond issue. Questions arose whether the amount of money they raised on these bonds should be considered part of their capital or not, and also whether their authorized capital of $65,000,000 should be considered, for this purpose, at its face value, or at the amount that the company received for it. I am sure that hon. members are all glad to know that these long-pending difficulties and differences of opinion are now to be settled in a practical way by the courts of the land. I believe that, before long, a solution of that difficult question will be arrived at which will be satisfactory to the people of this Dominion. The prospect of such a solution, I am sure, will be gratifying to the House.

The wonderful invention of Marconi, in his wireless telegraphy, is one that is of vast importance to us, and I am glad to know that the government has made arrangements by which Signor Marconi can continue his operations on the coast of Nova Scotia. If he is successful, as I hope and believe he will be—and who can tell in this age of invention, in this age of wonderful development, what the future has in store for us?—his invention will redound to the great credit of this Dominion and will enable us to make arrangements for sending messages across the ocean at very much lower rates than those now in force. I feel sure that the government, in making arrangements with Signor Marconi, has done a thing in the best interests of the people.

The success of Canadian exhibitors at the various industrial exhibitions that have taken place is a matter also of the utmost importance to the people of this country. It is gratifying indeed to know that our success in these great exhibitions, notably at Paris, at the Pan-American at Buffalo, and at Glasgow, has been so great as to assure us of practical results of vast interest to the people. At the Paris Exposition, Canadian exhibitors won 45 grand prizes, 87 gold medals, 105 silver medals, 85 bronze medals, and 48 honourable mention diplomas, a total of 370. And, at the Pan-American at Buffalo, the results have been almost as good. At that Exposition, Canadian exhibitors won 21 gold medals, 33 silver medals, 38 bronze medals, and 88 honourable mention diplomas—a total of 180 prizes and diplomas for Canada. The live stock entered by United States exhibitors at Buffalo comprised 546 animals, and the exhibitors were awarded prizes to the amount of $4,368.40. From the Dominion of Canada we sent 344 animals, yet our exhibitors carried off prizes to the amount of $3,141.60, a very much larger proportion than that of the United States exhibitors. I need not take the time to give the details in other cases. The exhibitors at the fair in Glasgow were able to carry off a great many prizes, and got high awards for the excellence of their exhibits. And what is better, they were able to make sales of their furniture, of their carriages, of their agricultural implements, and especially of bacon. The House is no doubt aware that we have sold very little bacon in Scotland, but after the exhibition took place, and after the quality and excellence of Canadian bacon became known there, enormous orders were given to the Wm. Davies Co., of Toronto, and to other companies, and they have been enabled to make large sales, and have placed upon the markets in Scotland a large quantity of the excellent bacon which they are producing from our Canadian pork. But in other lines also Canadian manufacturers have been enabled to sell a large quantity of their goods in consequence of the exhibition that was held in Glasgow. So I think that the three exhibitions we have held in the places I have mentioned, have proved of enormous advantage to the people of this country. They have advertised Canada as it was never advertised before, and have brought our goods into competition with those of the rest of the world ; they have shown that the people of this young Dominion are able to carry off a great number of prizes in competition with the wide world ; they have shown that our people are energetic, are perfecting their machinery and their plant, and are able to produce articles that will compete successfully with the wide world.

The condition of the revenue, and especially the enormous exports and imports of this Dominion, naturally called for some comment from His Excellency. It must be exceedingly gratifying to the people of this vast Dominion, no matter to what political party they may belong, to know that their country is marching forward by leaps and bounds. One can scarcely realize the enormous advance that has taken place during the last few years. Take, for instance, the trade of Canada, which is a very fair index of the prosperity of the country. In 1891, we find the foreign trade of Canada amounted to $218,284,934. In five years, from 1891 to 1896, that trade made but slow progress. In 1896 our foreign trade amounted to $239,025,360, or an increase at the rate of about 9 per cent in those five years. But in 1896 a change came over the affairs of this country ; the shackles were taken off trade ; the wheels of commerce were set in motion ; and immediately Canada went forward by leaps and bounds. In 1891, 5 years afterwards, what do we find? The foreign trade of Canada rose from $239,000,000 to $386,900,000. Our foreign trade in those five years increased at the rate of 61 per cent, instead of 9 per cent as in the previous period of five years. But, Sir, notwithstanding that our foreign trade increased with this rapidity in the past five years, the end is not yet ; and year by year, and month by month, we are able to report a steady increase ; and it must be gratifying to all true Canadians to know that this great Dominion, of which we are all so proud, is marching forward steadily and rapidly. Why, Sir, during the last seven months the foreign trade of this country has kept going forward. During the seven months ending with January last the foreign trade of this country has increased much more rapidly than it did during the corresponding months of the previous year, showing a gain of something like $18,555,000. This must be exceedingly gratifying to those who follow the course of public events in Canada.

Now, let us notice the character of this increase as regards the export of the products of Canada, as that is the feature with which we are more directly interested. In 1891 the exports of the products of Canada were only $88,000,000 in round numbers. In 1896 they had increased to $109,000,000, or at the rate of 24 per cent. In 1901 the exports of the products of Canada rose to $177,000,000, or an increase at the rate of 61 per cent. That increase has still been going on during the last seven months ; and I am satisfied that when we close the books on the 30th of June next, the foreign trade of Canada will show a great increase over that of last year, and that, in round numbers, it will amount to probably $425,000,000.

But our progress is not only shown by the increase in our exports and imports. Take, for instance, the amount of money deposited in our banks as the savings of the people. In 1891 the deposits in our savings banks amounted to $39,400,000. In 1896 they amounted to $46,799,000. In 1901, five years afterwards, they rose by $10,000,000, and amounted to $56,048,000. Then if we take the deposits of the people in the chartered banks, both those with notice and those without notice, you will find that the same gratifying increase has been going on. In 1891 the combined deposits in the chartered banks, with notice on demand and without notice, amounted to $142,631,000. In 1896 they rose to $183,769,000 ; and in 1901 they rose to $315,775,000.

I am sure, Sir, that it must be exceedingly gratifying to the people of this country to know that this young Dominion is making such marked progress. They rejoice to see the evidences that this progress is likely to continue, and that we are likely to go forward in our career of prosperity until ultimately we reach that high degree to which we believe this young Dominion is destined.

His Excellency also refers to the necessity of increasing the number of our commercial agencies in the different countries for the purpose of facilitating and developing our trade. I look upon that proposal with a great deal of satisfaction. I think the people of this country will hail with delight this move of the government and the reference of His Excellency to the necessity of increasing our commercial agencies throughout the world. We know that other countries, notably the American Republic to the south of us, have commercial agencies located in every principal town and city of this Dominion, and in other countries as well, while Canada has been depending upon the agents appointed by Great Britain who are not able to afford our manufacturers the advantages which the American government furnish to their manufacturers. I am sure that there is nothing the people of Canada will hail with greater delight than this reference of His Excellency to the necessity of increasing the number of commercial agencies and of making additional provision for these agencies.

Then, reference is also made to the fact of the Australian and New Zealand governments having accepted an invitation from this government to attend a conference in London next June, for the consideration of trade, transportation, cable and other matters of intercolonial concern. I think that this conference will be of enormous advantage to this Dominion. I hope the results that will flow from it will bind still closer and closer the bonds between Great Britain and her various colonies, and I am sure that those whom we send to represent us there will look well after our interests and will, I hope, be able to effect such arrangements with our sister colonies of Australia and New Zealand as will tend to the development of our trade and to the increase of the prosperity in this Dominion in accordance with the wishes expressed by His Excellency the Governor General.

I am also pleased to note that this government has reached the conclusion that a direct steamship service with South Africa would enable Canada to secure a profitable market for her various products, and that to that end will endeavour to arrange for such a service. I think that when the war, which is now going on in South Africa, is happily brought to a close—and we all hope that the end is not far distant —that, when the country is in a settled state again, when the war is over, and when a grand South African confederation is established on the lines of this Dominion, there will be an enormous development of trade throughout that country and it is our bounden duty as a wise and careful people to see that we obtain our share of that trade; but, it is quite impossible to establish a trade with these far distant countries unless we have a direct line of steamships running regularly so that shippers may know just when their products can be forwarded to those markets. Given this line of steamship accommodation, I believe the result will be that we will be able to establish in the South African confederacy an enormous trade. I consider the time exceedingly opportune to establish such steamship communication, because we all know that when trade gets into certain channels it is exceedingly difficult to turn it in other directions, and so it is proper and wise for us to take time by the forelock and establish this line of steamships which will sail from Eastern Canada to South Africa, and perhaps continue on further to Australia, thus establishing a regular steamship communication which will redound to the advantage of Canada, and build up this great Dominion, as I believe, nothing else can build it up.

Another matter to which His Excellency refers is the coronation of His Most Gracious Majesty, King Edward VII. in June next. There is no doubt, Sir, that this will be an event such as has never occurred before, and will seldom occur in a life time again. We are pleased to know that the premiers of all the different provinces will be invited to attend the coronation, and, that among the great galaxy of men from every country in this wide world, not only from all the British colonies, but men speaking different languages, perhaps, and of different nationalities, coming from foreign countries, the brightest, smartest, and ablest that the world can produce, the man above all men, the man whom everybody will delight to honour, the man who will tower away above all others and the man who on a former occasion when the world's great men met to celebrate the jubilee of the King's mother, who stood on a pedestal of glory and honour was the premier of this vast Dominion. I think we may all be proud that we have a statesman of such ability, a man of such magnetic influence, a man who is recognized not only in the British colonies, but all over the world as one of the grandest and noblest and brightest statesmen that this world has ever produced.

I beg to move :

That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency the Governor General, to thank His Excellency for his gracious speech at the opening of the present session ; and, further, to assure His Excellency that—

1. We unite with His Excellency, at the commencement of another session of parliament, in expressing the deep sense of our gratitude to Divine Providence for the many blessings which Canada has received during the past year, and particularly for the exceptionally bountiful harvest in Manitoba and the North-west Territories.

2. We receive with much pleasure His Excellency's expression of gratification at the cordial reception tendered by all classes of the people, to the Prince and Princess of Wales, on the occasion of their visit in September and October last, the only regrettable feature being the limited time at their disposal, which prevented their visiting many important centres of population; and we are happy to know that their Royal Highnesses enjoyed their tour through Canada and carried away the most pleasant recollections of their visit to this part of the Empire.

3. We have shared the feeling of sympathy and sorrow which the assassination of President McKinley has elicited throughout the civilized world, and we are glad to be informed that, though Canada has happily so far been free from crimes of this character, the close proximity to the United States may make it advisable to join our efforts to the efforts of the United States and other nations and to provide by legislation for the adequate punishment of those who, either by speech or writing, incite fanatics to the perpetration of such horrible crimes.

4. We are pleased to learn that the returns of the late census will be laid before us and that, while the absolute increase in the number of population is not so great as might have been expected, the evidence of growth in wealth and in the general tokens of prosperous development are highly satisfactory; and also that there is good reason to believe that the increase of population during the latter half of the decade has been very greatly in excess of the average of former years and that in the near future we may look for a much more rapid growth than occurred during the period covered by the last two censuses.

5. We learn with great satisfaction that, application having been made by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for approval of an increase of its capital, to meet the demand for additional rolling stock and other improved facilities, for handling the growing traffic, His Excellency's Ministers availed themselves of the opportunity to stipulate that the long pending question of the power of the Governor in Council to regulate the tolls of the company should be submitted to the courts for a judicial decision, and we thank His Excellency for informing us that the correspondence and other papers will be laid before us.

6. We are pleased to be informed by His Excellency that the inventor, Mr. Marconi, having met unexpected obstacles to the carrying on of his experiments in wireless ocean telegraphy in a sister colony, His Excellency's Ministers deemed it expedient to invite him to continue his operations on the coast of Nova Scotia, and availed themselves of his presence in Canada to enter into negotiations resulting in an arrangement through which, should the project prove as successful as is hoped for, the government and people of Canada will enjoy the benefits of the invention on very favourable terms, including rates for transatlantic messages very much below those now existing.

7. We are gratified to know that the display made by Canada of her products, at the several expositions at which they have been exhibited during the last year, has attracted much attention, and has already resulted in many inquiries and orders for our goods.

8. We receive with much pleasure His Excellency's congratulations on the satisfactory condition of the revenue and on the steady and continuous expansion of the general business of the country as evidenced by the increased volume of exports and imports.

9. We learn with much interest that, with the view of still further facilitating and developing our trade with other countries, it will probably be found expedient to increase the number of our commercial agencies, and we assure His Excellency that we will willingly consider the desirability of making additional provision for that purpose.

10. We thank His Excellency for informing us that the governments of Australia and New Zealand have accepted an invitation from His Excellency's government to attend a conference in London next June for the consideration of trade, transportation, cable and other matters of intercolonial concern, and we unite with His Excellency in the hope that the meeting may lead to an extension of Canadian trade with those important portions of His Majesty's Dominions.

11. Our thanks are due to His Excellency for the information that his government, having caused inquiry to be made, has reached the conclusion that the establishment of direct steamship service with South Africa would enable Canada to secure in that country a profitable market for her varied products, and that, to that end, His Excellency's government will endeavour to arrange for such a service.

12. We are gratified to learn that His Majesty has been graciously pleased to invite the Premier to be present at the ceremonies attending his Coronation, and we share the hope that the presence of the leading statesmen of the several colonies upon this occasion will afford an opportunity for the discussion of subjects of mutual interest which may considerably affect the development of our trade and commerce in the near future, with the mother country and with our sister colonies.

13. We thank His Excellency for informing us that the public accounts for the last year and the estimates for the succeeding year will be laid before us without delay.

14. His Excellency may rest assured that the above matters and all others which may be submitted to us will receive our earnest consideration, and we thank His Excellency for the expression of his reliance upon our wisdom and prudence to deal with them in the manner which, under Divine Providence, may prove most conducive to the best interests of Canada.

Mr. HENRI BELAND (Beauce). (Translation.) I am sensible of the great honour that has been conferred upon me, in that I have been chosen to second the motion moved in such happy terms by the hon. member for West York (Mr. Arch. Campbell). But at the same time I cannot help the thought that if it was my good fortune to have been selected to address this House under such circumstances, and to discharge so honourable a task, it was perhaps also my bad luck to be called upon to do so after one of the most eloquent members from the province of Ontario. or it is still within the vivid recollection of this House, what a remarkable feat the hon. gentleman did achieve, who has just taken his seat. At all events, Mr. Speaker, apart from the question whether it was to good or bad luck that I am indebted for the honour of seconding this motion, I have a very pleasant duty to discharge from the very outset, and it is to offer my best thanks to the right hon. the prime minister for the great honour he has conferred upon me in inviting me to perform this task. That honour, I am well aware, is not only a compliment paid to my humble self but a compliment paid to the electors of the county of Beauce, who have just returned me by acclamation. To the right hon. prime minister, then, my most heartfelt thanks are due, the more so, as under these particular circumstances, he has given a fresh proof of his devotion, which was already so marked, to the interests of his old agricultural county.

Mr. Speaker, in reading over the different paragraphs of the Speech from the Throne, the feeling which is uppermost in our minds, the feeling which is most vividly brought home to us is one of gratitude to Divine Providence for the blessings conferred, during the last twelve months, upon this vast Dominion.

I think I am voicing the feelings of this side of the House at any rate in saying that to Divine Providence we indeed owe a debt of gratitude for the happy inspiration imparted to the gentlemen who sit on the treasury benches and who have the control of public affairs.

A simple glance thrown at the Speech from the Throne will show that the government do not mean to rest upon their oars but that they are up and doing.

No doubt, they have not forgotten the fact of that great general who saw the fruit of his dearly bought victories snatched from his hands, for having one single day rested upon his laurels. No, the government cannot remain idle and with their arms folded, and that is the reason why fresh legislation is going to be brought forward and new amendments added to the existing laws. It is characteristic of human affairs that they always admit of improvement and perfecting. Go through the different provinces of the Dominion, and everywhere among the various classes of the community, you will find the country is blessed with universal prosperity ; go among the farming community, the mechanics, the manufacturing classes, and everywhere you will find that the fires of content blaze upon the hearthstones and the lights of hope illumine every household.

I need not dwell at any length here on the facts which show that an unprecedented prosperity smiles on us. But I may anticipate the comment often heard from certain quarters, and mainly from the hon. gentlemen opposite, that the prosperity we are now enjoying is neither the result of legislation nor to be attributed to any action of the government, but is the gift of a bountiful Providence. On the other hand, I am also aware that credit is claimed for the Liberal party for the prosperity with which the country is blessed. That public men are often unduly criticised or lauded and praised beyond their deserts I know very well. I for one am inclined to believe with some—and that opinion rests on a well known principle in poltical economy—that the criterion of prosperity of a country is to be found in the balance of trade, according as that balance turns in favour of or against such country. Although, under the circumstances, to encroach upon the domain of statistics may seem out of place, still I crave leave to say that, during the last five years of the Conservative administration, from 1891 to 1896, the balance of trade was in our favour but for one year ; whereas, in four out of five years under Liberal rule, the balance of trade was in our favour. During the last five years under the Conservative regime, only in one year was there an excess of imports over exports ; whereas, under Liberal rule, there was an excess of exports over imports in four years out of five.

As I have the honour of representing here a rural constituency, the population of which is one as thoroughly agricultural as is to be found anywhere in the province of Quebec, I may perhaps take the liberty of dwelling at greater length on the prosperity of our farming community, and mainly upon the remarkable growth and steady development of dairying, but at the very outset, I am met with this question : what is the part to be played by the government, in order to promote, encourage and secure the proper development of our agricultural industry ?

To build up and secure the prosperity of that industry, there are requisite conditions : first, a market must be provided ; in the second place, proper and ample facilities of transportation at a low temperature have to be arranged ; and thirdly, improving our processes of manufacture and bringing them up to date.

Now, the government have secured the proper manufacture of cheese and butter, by educating the farming population as to the best methods of manufacture, and this by means of lectures given by competent men ; further, by bonusing the industry and trade, and by enacting proper legislation. To the prosperity of that industry the government have also contributed by providing greater facilities for carrying our perishable agricultural products, and mainly by means of a chain system of cold storage on board trains and by the mechanical refrigerator plan on board steamers, so that our farm products may be placed upon the British markets in as good a condition as when leaving points of shipment.

In connection with the British market, we are sometimes told that in business matters, sentiment is of no account, and that is to say that the government have succeeded in securing the British market for our agricultural products—is altogether preposterous. To such a statement I, for one, take exception. On the contrary, I do believe in sentiment as a most potent factor in trade matters and I further say this : that to the preferential treatment of 35 per cent given by the government to the trade of England, coupled with the eloquent speeches delivered in Great Britain by the leader of the Liberal party, is due the better position we are enjoying on the markets of the mother country. To the influence exerted by the right hon. prime minister, as also to the various other measures adopted by the government, as for instance, when they so nobly responded to the appeal of the mother country in her hour of stress and difficulty, we owe the boon of having secured a market with such boundless capacity and possibilities for our agricultural products. All these circumstances, I say, have conspired in creating a favourable sentiment to Canada on the world market of Great Britain.

But, Sir, what I have just said as to what has been achieved by the government in favour of the butter and cheese industry applies with equal force to all other farm products. With a government at the head of affairs which is anxious to promote the prosperity of the farming community, small wonder indeed, that our Canadian farmers should now find plenty and comfort where formerly there was nothing but distress and suffering for them. To our manufacturing industries, to trade in general and to our artisans and labourers these remarks equally apply.

I hope the House will bear with me, if I briefly touch upon the great national work which is being carried out by the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte), in improving the St. Lawrence route. No doubt, the old administration had, in some measure, grappled with that problem, but I think I am within the truth when I say that since the hon. minister has assumed control of his department, this question has reached a new stage. He it was who brought to bear upon the solution of that great problem all the resources of civil engineering ; he it was who availed himself of all the information and data bearing on the St. Lawrence route—a national highway which is the national outlet for Canadian products exported to Europe, as also for foreign traffic with the commercial metropolis of Canada. Surely, Providence, which has given us such a magnificent river, cannot be taxed with niggardliness.

What with its powerful volumes of waters, its magnificent banks, its fertile valleys, the St. Lawrence, in the views of Providence, is also the great thoroughfare for the carriage of the products of the vast granaries of our great North-west, a country which is destined in the near future to supply food to a portion of old Europe.

In a speech which I happened to read a few years ago, of the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding), the hon. gentleman, in a masterly peroration, expressed the view that Canada had perhaps reached the zenith of her prosperity, but still he was confident that better times were possibly in store for her.

Well, Sir, I may say that the most sanguine expectations of the hon. minister have been realized beyond his dreams. Now, we are not satisfied with surpluses of from two, three to four million dollars ; but, for the seven months of this exercise, the surplus or the excess of ordinary revenue over our expenditure has reached the high water mark of seven million dollars, and this under a tariff that has been re-adjusted and reformed.

" Hands off the tariff " was what our friends on the other side of the House were heard to say in 1896 ; the tariff was then held up as something sacred, something that profane hands should not touch, and it was sacrilege to look upon it. But what they looked upon as a sort of national inheritance, was at the best but a party glory. No sacrilegious hand has touched it ; but the hand that did remodel the tariff and lop off the mouldering branches was the very hand of the great financier who during so many years has wielded such a prepondering influence in the councils of his province of Nova Scotia.

Reference is made in the Speech from the Throne to the fact that His Majesty has been graciously pleased to invite the premier to be present at the ceremonies attending his coronation. What a glorious part the premier has played in London upon the occasion of the jubilee of the late regretted Queen, we all know, and we also know what a lustre his presence in the metropolis has shed on Canada. That upon the occasion of the King's coronation, he will discharge his duties as our representative with as much éclat as he did in 1897, goes without saying. Of all the men of eminence in this House or out of it, none are to be found who could speak with a more authorized voice than the premier will be able to do at the conference to be held between the leading statesmen of the several colonies. From his lofty patriotism, and his broad spirit of statesmanship, we know that he adequately represents the aspirations of our young nation.

I do not intend to occupy the time of the House at greater length, but before bringing these remarks to a close, I wish briefly to refer to the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and to bear witness here to the hearty and enthusiastic reception extended to our royal visitors by the people of the province of Quebec. As we crowded together where the old ramparts of the city of Quebec rise, the royal yacht was sighted over the point of the Island of Orleans. Expectant Quebec in thousands thronged the heights. The whole population of St. Roch had turned out en masse to greet our royal guests. No longer, as in the days of Wolfe, was it a question of taking Quebec by storm; no longer the thunders that broke forth from the forts belched forth death and destruction, but from the mouths of her cannon the old city roared out a loyal welcome from a whole people to the heir to the throne of England.

That the visit of the Prince of Wales was but a triumphal march throughout the length and breadth of the land we all know from press reports. And when, on board the yacht which was taking him back to England, the Prince reviewed in his mind the rich domains he had travelled over, as also the cordial and enthusiastic welcome extended to him by the people of this mighty Dominion; when he looked back at the great manufacturing centres he had visited, where industrial life and activity are in full growth and development; all this no doubt vividly brought home to him the reality of the strange phenomenon which is being enacted on this continent, of Anglo Saxons, Normans, Scotchmen and Irishmen working shoulder to shoulder to the upbuilding of a prosperous and happy nation.

Mr. Speaker, as there are amongst my constituents a number of my electors who are of English origin (though I may say they are not very numerous), I deem it my duty on this occasion to address a few words to the House in the English language. It is, I know, scarcely necessary for me to ask from the members of this hon. body that indulgence which is usually extended to every new member. Hon. gentlemen who listen to these few remarks will easily see that this language is not familiar to me; not nearly as familiar as the tongue which I was taught to speak in the days of my youth. In reading the speech which His Excellency addressed to us yesterday, one at once reaches the idea that this government, although anxious to aim at still better results in the future, if that be possible, are perfectly satisfied with the existing state of affairs.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BELAND. Yes, the existing government is perfectly satisfied because the people of the country at large are satisfied. Whether you stand at the door of the farmer, or at the door of the workingman; whether you stand at the door of the artisan, or at the door of the manufacturer; wherever you go, whether it be in the streets of the city or into the remotest lumbering regions, whether on the coast of the Atlantic, or whether in the mining districts of the Yukon or of British Columbia; wherever you go your eye and your ear will be delighted with the sound and the sight of prosperity throughout this broad land. I am here, Sir, as the representative of perhaps the largest rural district in Eastern Canada, and it becomes my duty to express my gratitude to this government, which has conferred such benefits upon the farming community of this country. By the aid and solicitude of the present government new and profitable markets have been secured for our products. The preferential tariff, the eloquent speeches that have been delivered in England by the prime minister; the readiness with which the appeal of the motherland was answered by Canada when she was in want of moral and even substantial support during the struggle in South Africa; all of these circumstances have tended to create a favourable sentiment for Canadian products in the British market. Then again, the transportation facilities which have been provided by the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) have not been the least amongst the processes by which this country has reached its present prosperity. As my hon. friend from West York (Mr. Campbell) has covered the most important parts referred to in the Speech from the Throne, it is unnecessary for me to dwell upon them at length. Let me say that all of us in this great country should entertain enthusiastic hopes for the future. There are in Canada citizens of different creeds and different races. Along side of the Irish we have the English, alongside of the French we have the Scotch, alongside of the Protestant we have the Catholic, and though we may differ in nationality and in religion, though one may speak the tongue of Louis XIV. and another the tongue of Shakspere, let us all remember that our duty is to build up a prosperous and happy country founded on principles of tolerance and equal rights to all. I see in this House members on both sides whose hair has faded from its original colour in the work of securing peace and harmony between the heterogeneous elements of our population. Let me express the hope that before these gentlemen pass from the troubles of this earth they will gather the fruit of their patriotic efforts.

It is scarcely necessary for me to refer to the visit paid to this country by the Prince and Princess of Wales. If those who are not acquainted with our population in the province of Quebec and who do not know the sentiment of that province, if they had had the privilege of witnessing the grand scene presented when our people in the old city of Quebec greeted the landing of the illustrious visitors; if it had been their privilege to hear the deafening cheers of the people of East Quebec so eminently represented by the prime minister; if it had been their privilege to glance at the beautiful women of that old city waving flags and handkerchiefs and throwing flowers at the feet of the royal visitors, I am sure they would have said from the bottom of their hearts that a people so enthusiastic on that occasion, could never be disloyal. Not only have the men of my race proven their devotion to the British Crown in the days of rejoicing, but also in the days of sorrow. Not so long since, in lands far away, they sacrificed their lives to protect the flag which waves over them. And, Sir, that province from which I come will enshrine with fadeless flowers, the memory of those volunteers who have fallen, and the incense of their gratitude will continue to ascend until the last drop of the St. Lawrence has rolled by their homes on its way to the sea.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Mr. Speaker, it is with very great pleasure that I rise, in the first place to congratulate the two hon. gentlemen who have so well discharged the duty of moving and seconding the motion which has been presented to the House. For a young member of this House, my hon. friend from West York (Mr. Campbell) has certainly borne himself in a very self-possessed manner, and I am quite sure that after a little more acquaintance with the interior of this chamber, he will be able to get up and address the House without any of the nervousness which he exhibited this afternoon. The hon. gentleman tells us that he is proud of representing the constituency of West York, and he may well be. I had in mind, as he spoke, an expression which a friend of mine in Halifax sometimes uses when he is reproached with having done anything that is not exactly right—he always gravely shakes his head and remarks : It will never occur again.

With regard to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Beland) who seconded the motion, I must say that he possesses that splendid gift of facile expression which so many gentlemen from the province of Quebec have shown in this House ; and while I was not able to follow him as closely as I should desire while he was speaking in his own beautiful language, I could not help, while he was addressing us in English, deeming it my misfortune, indeed, my fault, that I did not possess the same acquaintance with his native tongue that he exhibited to us this afternoon with regard to the English language.

Now, Mr. Speaker, dealing for a moment with one or two of the matters mentioned in the speech, I desire to say, in the first place, that I most heartily concur in what is said in the speech, and also in the very appropriate words of the mover and the seconder, respecting the visit of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales to this country. Their visit to Canada was not only of advantage to Canada herself, but was of advantage to them, the future King and Queen of this great empire. While we in this country have not attained the development which we hope for in the future, still I think we may be proud of the fact that we were able to transport them from ocean to ocean in the manner in which we did, upon a railway which links two continents, and through a country which possesses such tremendous possibilities for the future as the great North-west of Canada. Without saying a word in depreciation of the other great dependencies of the empire which they visited, I venture to think that they saw in Canada as great a country in process of development as it was their privilege to visit on their journey throughout the confines of the empire.

I also desire most heartily to concur in what has been said in the speech and by the hon. mover and seconder, with respect to the sympathy which this country felt towards the great republic to the south of us on the occasion of the loss which that people sustained by the death of the great man who lately was their president. On occasions of that kind, as was shown by the sympathy of the great republic to us in our hour of sorrow, the two great English-speaking countries of the world are one, if not otherwise, and I trust and believe that it will always be so. I do not know what measures the government propose to bring forward with respect to the subject which has been mentioned in this connection, but any legislation of that kind within reasonable limits would, I think, commend itself to the judgment of this House, and would receive a reasonable support from hon. gentlemen on this side of the House.

Now, Mr. Speaker, before referring to certain matters that have not been dealt with in the speech, I would like to say a few words with regard to the long roll of gentlemen who have left the ranks of this House for the purpose of strengthening the judiciary and the peerage of Canada. I have always felt very much for my hon. friend the Postmaster General (Hon. Mr. Mulock) when any references have been made to matters of this kind. I know that his own natural modesty has prevented him from making any explanation of his position with regard to them; I have also noticed that no other hon. gentleman on the other side of the House has ever come to the rescue of the hon. the Postmaster General; and, indeed, the position of that hon. gentleman is not an easy one. He cannot very well, so long as he is a member of this government, lay down a policy so directly in conflict with the practice of this government as that which he advocated not so many years ago. The rule which requires absolute unanimity in a cabinet would preclude his doing that. Then, you see, the hon. gentleman has another difficulty; he could give to the House no good reason, I suppose, for changing his opinion, which is, I have no doubt, as a matter of fact, the opinion he has always held on that particular subject. Now, I propose to offer a theory, a policy, for the hon. gentleman. I do not say that it is an absolutely perfect theory, but I offer it as a fair working theory, and the hon. gentleman can expand it or modify it as may be necessary or suitable for the public platforms of this country. It has been laid down by gentlemen on the other side of the House that the prosperity which came to Canada and incidentally to the world in 1896 was due entirely to the advent of this government. My hon. friend the member for West York (Mr. Campbell) has indeed persuaded himself of that, just as George IV. persuaded himself that he commanded at the battle of Waterloo, and my hon. friend the Postmaster General cheered the hon. member for West York when he put forward that idea very forcibly this afternoon. Now, what I suggest to my hon. friend the Postmaster General is that he should carry out the logical converse of that. We know that the hon. member for Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) has told us—he certainly stated in his address to the electors in 1900—that this prosperity is not due altogether to the advent of this government, but is mainly due to matters beyond the control of this government, and indeed is one of the blessings of Providence. Now, if we attribute the prosperity of the country to the advent of this government to power, why would it not do for my hon. friend the Postmaster General, while claiming credit to the government for all the prosperity of the country, to attribute these appointments solely to Providence and in that way, as it were, to balance matters. It seems to me that affords a fair working theory for my hon. friend, and, with a little modification and elaboration, it might be found very useful. Hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House who are supposed to be aspirants for positions in the Senate or on the bench, are sometimes a little restive when reference is made to such matters in the House; but certainly no hon. gentleman on the other side could object to the remark that the eye of Providence was upon him.

I regret very much, Mr. Speaker, that there is no reference in the Speech from the Throne to the fast Atlantic steamship service which was announced as an accomplished fact by the government of this country, some four years ago. I regret that very much, because the importance of that service is universally conceded. Englishmen visiting this country who see enormous amounts of American capital being expended in the country, and who are asked why English capital is not flowing into this country to assist in its development to the same extent, tell us that one of the first things required for closer connection in that way between this country and the mother country is the establishment of better steam communication between the two countries. We know the record of the present government with regard to that subject. Although they told us that they had a certain contract, a sure contract, in 1898, we know that nothing has been accomplished from that time to this—that we have heard nothing but excuses; and when they tell us that they propose to establish a steamship line between Canada and South Africa, I am tempted to inquire whether they expect to make the same degree of progress with regard to that project as they have with regard to the fast Atlantic service. I am convinced that if they do not establish a very much better record with regard to that than they have with regard to the fast Atlantic service, the markets of South Africa will be in the position described by my hon. friend from West York this afternoon, and the trade of that country will be so diverted into other channels that by the time the proposed service will be established it will be almost impossible to secure it.

There is another subject upon which we have no information whatever in the Speech from the Throne, and that is the position in which this country stands at present with regard to its trade wth Germany—I mean with regard to the German tariff as applied to Canada and as applied to Great Britain and the United States. Last year, when this matter was brought to the attention of the House, I was sorry to observe that my hon. friend the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) seemed almost inclined to justify the action of Germany in excluding Canada from privileges she was granting to the mother country and to the United States. I was sorry to see him take this position because the preference which we gave the mother country some years ago should not have resulted in an agreement by the mother country with Germany to establish a temporary treaty, from the benefits of which Canada was to be excluded. That should not be the result for another reason also, namely, because that very preference granted to Great Britain has practically resulted in a preference to Germany. We know that German goods, goods on which a considerable amount of German work and money has been expended, are sent to England in order to have certain work there done on them and are then shipped to Canada to be admitted as British goods under the preferential tariff. Germany is therefore—so I am informed by men more conversant in these matters than I—receiving no small benefit in that way from the preference we have given to British goods, while on the other hand we are subjected to the imposition of a higher German tariff than Great Britain herself has to face. That this should operate disastrously on the trade of Canada no one can doubt. I have had occasion to look into the figures, and I find that the exports of Canada to Germany are some $600,000 less than they were in 1899, while the exports of the United States and Great Britain—particularly the United States—have very largely increased. And mark you, Mr. Speaker, our exports to Germany have decreased in a period during which our exports to all other foreign countries have very largely increased. This discrimination is felt by all exporters throughout Canada, and I regret that the government has not seen fit to give the slightest information in the Speech from the Throne as to what efforts it has made or proposes to make to remove this very grave injustice.

Another subject on which we have no information is the Alaskan boundary question. We were told last year by my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) that a provisional boundary line, in the nature of a compromise, had been arranged between the two countries, and that the report of the commission appointed to establish that boundary line was to be very shortly brought down. I inquired whether or not this line was in the nature of a compromise, and I rather gathered from the reply of my right hon. friend that I would obtain all the necessary information from the report of the commission. Well, I have examined that report with some care, and I do not understand whether the compromise which has been made, is entirely at the expense of Canada, or whether we have on the Canadian side of the so-called provisional line any portion of territory which the United States are claiming. I do not conceal from myself the fact that there may be grave difficulties in dealing with this question, and I do not want to say anything that might embarrass the government in its dealings with the Imperial government, but I would like to point this out to my right hon. friend, that the longer the United States remains in possession of any portion of Canadian territory, which we think we can rightfully claim, the greater will be our difficulty in the future in asserting our rights. Therefore I think it is only my duty, occupying the position I do, to urge this matter on the attention of the right hon. gentleman and ask him to confide to the House whatever information he may properly divulge as to the present condition of the negotiations between the Imperial government and the United States with regard to that particular point.

There is another matter which has not been referred to in the Speech from the Throne, and you, Sir, will perhaps have noticed that there are almost as many matters not referred to, and to which reference properly should have been made, as those which are particularly mentioned. We understand from the newspapers that a contingent was sent from Canada during the past few months to South Africa for the purpose of assisting the troops of the empire. We have heard through the same source of the terms on which that contingent was sent and certain negotiations in connection therewith; but up to the present parliament is absolutely ignorant, so far as official communication is concerned, as to what contingent has been sent, as to the terms upon which it has been sent, and as to any negotiations between this country and the Imperial government with regard to that contingent. I certainly would have thought that the sending of a contingent of brave Canadian soldiers to South Africa was a circumstance deserving of some reference in the Speech from the Throne, and that the government would have taken parliament into its confidence at once and given us the fullest details on so important a subject.

The country is congratulated upon the very satisfactory condition of its revenue and the expansion of general business, as evidenced by the increased value of exports and imports. I do not regard a great increase in the imports as absolute evidence of prosperity. It might well be that while great manufacturing industries in Canada were being crowded out of existence by competition from abroad, the volume of our imports would increase; and I think that some closer reasoning and more conclusive evidence with regard to the conditions of prosperity might have been furnished us. I, for one, do not believe in the doctrine of buying in the cheapest market, if it is to be done at the expense of our manufacturing industries. We have had conflicting views expressed by members of the government on this point within the past few months.

The hon. the Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Sifton), who, I regret, is not in his place, is reported in the public press as having said not long ago at a convention of the Liberal party in Manitoba:

> Some woollen factories are closing up. They say the reason is that they have not sufficient protection. I say it is not. If they cannot live on a 23 per cent tariff, the sooner they shut up the better.

That apparently is the policy of the Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Sifton), and I notice that my hon. friend the member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser), appears to be in entire accord with the policy so laid down.

Mr. FRASER. Hear, hear.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That policy either is or is not the policy of the cabinet. If it is the policy of the cabinet the sooner we know it the better. If it is not the policy of the cabinet, then the Minister of the Interior ought to resign his position.

Now, let us hear what the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) has to say on this subject. He told us, I think, no later than the month of November last, at a certain gathering at Montreal, that he thought Canadians should stand by Canadian manufacturers:

> Why should not our Canadian Customs laws be just as self-protecting as those of the United States, exclaimed Mr. Tarte. I cannot see for the life of me, he added, and there was more applause. A man's first duty is to defend himself. He was brought up in a protectionists school and had not renounced his faith.

The Minister of Public Works, notwithstanding the optimistic view of the condition of the country that is disclosed in the Speech from the Throne, and that has been dilated upon by my hon. friend from West York, and the seconder of the address, has told us in a more recent utterance in the city of Montreal, that there is a great crisis in this country. And he has not only told us that, but he has told us that the members of the government know all about it. This is what he said :

> Our American friends, declared the minister, are making tremendous efforts to crush this country. We, who are in office, know that they are leaving no stone unturned to crush this Dominion to both industrially and commercially. * * * There is a crisis at hand. Our American friends are endeavouring to make a slaughter market of this country. In consequence of this attempt, let us have a tariff that will protect our national industries and waterways, that will protect our national trade.

I do not know how this language of the Minister of Public Works commends itself to my hon. friend from Guysborough (Mr. Fraser).

Mr. FRASER. We have it now.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend (Mr. Fraser) does not agree with his leader that there is a crisis.

Mr. FRASER. That is not what I said. I said that I agree with the Minister of Public Works that we have it now—that is all he said.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The Minister of Public Works said, let us have such a tariff as will protect. Well, if there is a crisis in this country and if the members of the government are so familiar with it as the hon. Minister of Public Works tells us, it is a singular thing that there is no reference in the Speech from the Throne, to so important a matter. Possibly, the member of the cabinet who is charged with looking after this crisis was not able to contribute his quota to the King's Speech, and no reference to it has been omitted. But, speaking seriously, I venture to suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that there is no doctrine of parliamentary government more thoroughly settled than this—that there must be political unanimity in the cabinet. Parliamentary government is degenerating into a farce if the Minister of the Interior can proclaim one doctrine in the west, and the Minister of Public Works can proclaim the very opposite in the east with regard to an important matter. And I will call the attention of my hon. friend (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to an authority on this subject which he will not question. This authority is Mr. Gladstone, who said :

> It is one of our first duties to decline to acquit any member of the cabinet of responsibility for the announced and declared policy of another.

Now, Sir, we have the Minister of the Interior, in language as distinct as possible, telling the people of this country that, if 23 per cent is not enough to keep the great industries of this country on a proper footing, then it is better for this country that those industries shall be closed, that our factories shall be shut up and that the operatives who are working in those factories shall go to the United States, while we spend hundreds of thousands of dollars every year in bringing people of a foreign race and different language into our North-west. But the Minister of Public Works, on the other hand, has taken the stand—practically the position which he took by a resolution which I moved during the last session—that this country should stand by its great manufacturing industries, the position that this country cannot afford to have its factories closed and to have our people going to the United States. We know well enough, from the census returns, the effect that the great industrial centres of the United States produce upon the population of our eastern provinces. We know that, so long as our own industries remain in their present condition, so long as they do not develop, they are not sufficient to keep the people of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, or even the people of Ontario and Quebec, from emigrating to the United States. I say it would be folly—and I agree with the Minister of Public Works on that point—to think of adopting a policy that would close these manufacturing industries and send our people across the line in still greater numbers, while we continue to spend annually an enormous amount of money in bringing men of different nationality and language from the two great races of Canada to fill up our North-west. Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not presume to tell the government which of these two hon. gentlemen should resign—the Minister of the Interior or the Minister of Public Works. That is a point on which I would hardly venture to offer advice to my right hon. friend. I suppose it is a problem which is engaging his attention at the present time. But, if I might be permitted to make a suggestion on the subject, it would be rather on this line—that all the other members of the cabinet should resign and that my hon. friend, the Minister of Public Works, should remain in office and carry out the policy he has announced. But, perhaps I am going too far in making that suggestion. And if my right hon. friend thinks it is a suggestion that should not come from me, I beg that he will accept my most humble apologies for making it.

Now, Sir, I do not intend to say very much with regard to the census or to that most extraordinary paragraph in the speech which purports to deal with the census. I almost wish that my hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) could get leave of absence from the government for about two hours to do justice to that subject this afternoon. I know that my hon. friend appreciates that suggestion by the smile I see illuminating his countenance. I do not wish to take up the time of the House in regard to this matter, because I know there will be an opportunity later on—I hope, during this session—of discussing this subject more fully. But, unless my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) exhibits more energy during this session than he has exhibited since we last met we shall not have the census returns in time to discuss them even during this session. I endeavoured to procure bulletins giving me some information with regard to the matter. Coming here I found bulletins in the library which are apparently not quite up to date. I hope the Minister of Agriculture will be able to give us some assurance within the next day or two, as to the date when the census returns will be brought before the House, for I think the time of the House should be occupied with some discussion with regard to them. But I have this to say—if we apply the argument which the Minister of Trade and Commerce so ably applied to the census figures some ten years ago, we shall find that all the efforts of this government, all the enormous sums of money they have expended during these four or five years in promoting immigration to this country, have been absolutely wasted. The Minister of Trade and Commerce on that occasion proved, very much to his own satisfaction, —and, indeed, set out in the terms of his resolution—that there was a natural increase in this country of at least 2¼ per cent annually. I do not know whether the hon. gentleman has any information in his possession which enables him to say that that rate would not be a fair one during the past five years. If it is a fair rate for the past five years, then even though you asume that not a single soul was added to the population of Canada from the time of the last census until this government came into power, you will have the result before you that not one soul has been added to the population since that time beyond the natural increase.

Now, I feel I am really not able to do justice to a subject of that kind as the hon. gentleman could. Perhaps if he were moving a resolution at this stage, and were on this side of the House, he would be very likely to conclude it in the language in which he concluded a resolution he moved ten years ago. It was as follows :

> That the deplorable state of things disclosed by the above mentioned returns imperatively demands a radical change in the policy and methods of government followed by the administration.

I do not think that the hon. gentleman, even with all the experience of the last ten years, added to the abundant experience which he previously possessed, would be able to improve upon that.

Now, we have been told by the Minister of Agriculture on several occasions, both in this country and in the mother country—because I was glad to note that the Minister of Agriculture was a member of that somewhat numerous band of ministers of this country who lately journeyed across the Atlantic, no doubt entirely in the interests of this country, and a grateful country appreciates the efforts which they made to enjoy themselves on the other side—the Minister of Agriculture tells us that the emigration to the United States from Canada has absolutely ceased, and that, of course, is entirely due to the advent of the present government to power. It is due, he thinks, to the same cause as that which created the prosperity.

Now, there is another case of resignation, I think, or perhaps it would not amount to a case of resignation; but the hon. the Minister of Agriculture is absolutely in conflict on this point with the hon. the Postmaster General. The Postmaster General is not only Postmaster General, but he is also a journalist, or rather he has a journal in his department which is known as the 'Labour Gazette.' In an issue during the past year the 'Labour Gazette' pointed out that in the provinces of Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, Quebec and New Brunswick, a very marked emigration of persons to the United States had to be noted. Now, who are we to believe ? Which of these gentlemen is telling us what is correct ? Has emigration from these provinces entirely ceased ? Is the Postmaster General right when he tells us in this 'Labour Gazette' of his that the emigration from these provinces to the United States still continues? The Postmaster General seems to have the weight of authority on his side, because I notice that an independent authority, the Lieutenant Governor of Nova Scotia, in a speech recently made in that province, is reported to have said :

> He mentioned the great enterprises which they had at Sydney, and trusted that these and similar undertakings would tend to stop the exodus of our young men to the United States.

And his remarks were received with applause. Any one who lives in the province of Nova Scotia, or the province of New Brunswick, or the province of Prince Edward Island, will realize the fact that emigration to the United States has not ceased. It is very difficult to bring about a condition of affairs which will cause it to cease entirely, because migration naturally tends towards great cities and great industrial centres. In saying this I do not mean that we are entirely to rely upon the figures of the census which, for example, indicate, in the province of Nova Scotia, that the urban population has enormously increased at the expense of the rural population. The true explanation of that fact is, that during the past ten years a great many towns in Nova Scotia have been incorporated, and people who ten years ago were classed among the rural population are now classed among the urban population.

Now, sir, I think this particular circumstance, this fact that the people are migrating to the great industrial centres of the United States, is another strong argument in support of the policy which has been laid down by my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works, speaking, I suppose, as a private member of parliament and not as a minister, when he told us that our industries must be maintained at all hazards. In the province of Nova Scotia the total increase of population was about 9,000. Now, Sir, in the county of Cape Breton alone, where great industrial establishments have been formed within the past five or six years, there has been an increase of population from 34,000 to 48,000, or 5,000 more than the entire actual increase of the whole province. This fact points to the conclusion, it seems to me, that whatever may be our policy with regard to the North-west, so far as the eastern provinces of Canada are concerned, you cannot look for a great expansion of the population in the future unless you have a policy which will maintain and develop our great industries, which will keep those factories going which are now at work, which will establish other factories, which will give ample room for the people of this country to get work at home, and which will tend to diminish, if not absolutely to obliterate, the emigration which has taken place in the past from these provinces to the United States. In saying this I do not wish to minimize the great value and importance of the agricultural, fishing, mining and other industries of this country; but I do say that the great manufacturing industries of this country seem to be a most important factor in keeping our surplus population at home, and in preventing them from crossing the line for the purpose of finding employment on the other side which they cannot find in Canada.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have taken more time in dealing with the motion than I intended to do. I may perhaps be permitted, in closing, to mention the names of three gentlemen who were members of this House when we last met, and who have since passed over to the great majority. One of these gentlemen, Mr. Dobell, a member of the government, without portfolio, was a gentleman whom I had not had the pleasure of knowing for a long time, but during the few years in which I did know him somewhat intimately, I learned to respect and esteem him very much; and, I believe, I can truthfully say that if there was one man who had not a single enemy in this House of Commons of Canada, it was Mr. Dobell. We all remember his kindly and cordial manner towards every member, not only on the other side, but on this side of the House. I wish also to mention my late friend, Mr. Clarke Wallace, who sat beside me during the past session, when I had entrusted to me the very arduous duty of attempting, as a new and untried man, to lead the Liberal-Conservative party in the House of Commons, and to act in that capacity beside men who possessed much greater experience than I did myself. I always received a hearty and generous support from Mr. Wallace. He was a man of great ability, an authority on many public questions, a man of strong convictions, a man of strong character, a man who always had the courage of his convictions. He gave the best possible proof of his sincerity that any man could give in this country or in any other country. I did not always see eye to eye with him although I belonged to the same political party, but I was always ready to recognize and did recognize the absolute sincerity of the opinions upon which he acted in this House and as a public man in this country.

I also desire to mention another friend of mine, a gentleman beside whom I sat for three sessions when first I had the honour of a seat in this parliament. I refer to Mr. John W. Bell, the late member for Addington, a shrewd, kind-hearted, observant man, whose voice was not often heard in this House, but who was thoroughly respected and esteemed by all those who knew him, and whose place in the public life in this country cannot easily be filled, a man who did not take a large part in the debates of this House, but a man who had a thorough and complete acquaintance with public life, and with the necessities and interests of the country.

Might I be permitted in closing, Mr. Speaker, to refer to the loss, which, not only the empire as a whole, but which Canada, herself, has sustained in the death of Lord Dufferin who gave five or six years of his life to Canada as her Governor General. He performed his duty as Governor General during a time when party passions and party strife were very greatly aroused, but whatever criticism may have been made upon his conduct at the time when that party strife and passion prevailed, I venture to think, when the strife had passed away, when the passion had become less, it was recognized that he had acted in every way according to what was right and proper and according to his just and honest convictions. A many-sided man, as statesman, diplomat, pro-consul, man of letters, he filled a great place in the empire and did for Canada much in this that from the first he was inspired with a supreme confidence in the future of this country, and what is more than that, he was possessed with the same supreme confidence that the absolute legislative independence of this country would tend to bring about closer ties between this country and the empire as a whole. Twenty-five years have passed since he made that great speech at Winnipeg, in which he pictured Canada as nestling at the feet of her majestic mother, dreaming her dream and foreboding her destiny. Some of that dream has been realized and some of that destiny has since been unfolded and we are all glad that he lived to see it. When the right hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) goes across the water to attend the Coronation ceremonies, in which we all wish him

God speed, he will be able to say of Canada then what Lord Dufferin said so many years ago that there is still found in Canada:

> The reverence of a free people for constitutional liberty as secured by monarchical government, the recognition by the owners of half a continent of their right to share a still mightier imperium, the unswerving confidence of a modest God fearing community in their ability to vindicate their independence, to elaborate their own destiny and to guard and embellish to the utmost the glorious inheritance with which they have been endowed by Providence.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Mr. Speaker, the House, I am sure, has listened to the observations of my hon. friend, the leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden, Halifax), with a great deal of interest varied in some respects, with some surprise. My hon. friend has proceeded from sentence to sentence. In the earlier stages of his speech, I could not but think, and I believe my impression was right, that my hon. friend had not had a good night's rest, that he had awakened this morning under tne impression of some painful dream which had disturbed his equanimity and that he had not recovered. I willingly bear this testimony that it is due to my hon. friend to say that he is, generally speaking, fair and candid in his manner of treating subjects which come before the House, but on this occasion I cannot help but believe that my hon. friend, of set purpose, struggled, and I do him the justice to say with only partial success, to get away as far as he could from those attributes of his better nature. My hon. friend, perhaps remembering that he has behind him and beside him some followers who are of a fiery disposition, thought that if it were possible he would get them under his control by launching forth some of their bellicose invectives. My hon. friend proceeded to make good what I am now saying by the reference he made to the changes that have taken place in the cabinet since last session. Two gentlemen who were members of the cabinet last session have been promoted to the bench of the Supreme Court. My hon. friend did not challenge the fitness of these gentlemen to occupy the high position to which they have been elevated. He could find nothing more to say than to characterize these appointments by the statement that they were due probably in some way to the action of Providence. Amongst the blessings with which Providence can favour a nation is a good government. As we all must acknowledge a good government is a greater blessing than probably even a good harvest and we know by reference to the pages of history that sometimes Providence will make use of most unworthy instruments to confer upon a people the very greatest blessings; and even under these circumstances, if Providence has made use of ourselves, unworthy as we are, to confer a great blessing upon the people of Canada, I am sure that upon this side of the House at any rate we can stand the criticism. My hon. friend objects to the action of the government in not mentioning the fact that our commercial relations with Germany are not as good as they should be or as good as we could have hoped them. If our relations with Germany are not as good today as they were five or six years ago, if we have not now the advantage of as low a tariff in Germany as then existed, it is because the Canadian parliament, on both sides of politics, Conservatives as well as Liberals, nay, the whole Canadian nation, wanted to put an end to the very treaty which then existed and which gave us the benefit of the minimum German tariff. We were shackled by that treaty, and we rightly thought that that treaty, as long as it existed, prevented us from taking the action which we wanted to take in order to bring Canada and the motherland more closely together. Again and again the party of my hon. friend, when they were sitting on this side of the House, applied to Great Britain to have that treaty denounced and again and again their efforts failed. We were more lucky, or more successful than they were and upon our representations the British government put an end to the treaty. Now, Sir, the consequence is that the maximum tariff is imposed upon Canada. We have been making efforts by negotiations to have this removed. These negotiations have not yet matured, but I must say to my hon. friend that the commercial relations between Canada and Germany are not as he has represented them. I understand from the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) and from the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding), who is looking at the figures, that instead of having a decrease we have an actual increase even under these unfavourable circumstances in our trade with Germany. Now, Sir, I may say, and I may perhaps later on during the session have something further to say upon this subject, that we have endeavoured to better and improve our trade relations with Germany and that although these efforts have not yet been crowned with success it would be premature to say that they have been abortive.

Neither have we mentioned in the speech of His Excellency, the Alaskan boundary matter, and the reason why we have omitted a reference to it is simply because it is today in the very same position it was in last year. It has made no progress since then. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden) has called attention to the fact that the correspondence which we have placed on the Table does not disclose in what respect the provisional line which we have established with the United States in Alaska, is or is not a compromise. It is a compromise. If the hon. gentleman had looked at the newspapers—whether the correspondence discloses it or not—he would have seen that under the provisional line which we have established in the Porcupine district we have mining camps which were claimed by the American miners before that provisional line was established. I agree with the hon. gentleman that the longer this matter is deferred the greater will become the difficulty of settling it. I agree with him that the longer the settlement is deferred the more difficult it will be to recover possession of whatever Canadian territory may be occupied by American settlers. I have to say to my hon. friend that we have pressed as much as we could; nay more I may say that we have pressed in season and out of season, on the Imperial authorities to bring that matter to a close. Nothing could be more unsatisfactory than the condition in which this question is to-day, and nothing could be more dangerous even, than to leave it in this unsatisfactory condition. We hope to bring the question to a close at a convenient season, and I am sorry that I am not in a position now to give to my hon. friend (Mr. Borden) as positive an assurance in this respect as I would like to give him.

My hon. friend spoke of the Fast Atlantic service, and he said that five years has elapsed since we have taken office, and yet the Fast Atlantic service has not been established. He complained a little of the delay and he indulged in perhaps, well deserved banter. This is my answer to him. If three years more elapse and we have not then brought this matter to a satisfactory conclusion, then we will stand in exactly the same position as the Conservative party, who brought the matter forward in 1887, and had not concluded it when they went out of office in 1896.

My hon. friend (Mr. Borden) also said that there was no mention in the Speech from the Throne of the volunteers who have lately gone to South Africa to serve their Sovereign. It ought not to be any surprise to my hon. friend that a reference to this matter was omitted from the speech. He should know the reason very well. I am afraid from some things which I have observed, this amongst others, that the very arduous duties which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden) undertook last year are telling upon him, and that he has not as good a memory now as he had at one time. I have not had a very long acquaintance with the hon. gentleman, but I had always understood that he was blessed with a good memory, which, however, now appears to have become treacherous and defective. He has only to remember what took place last session to understand why there was no mention of this matter in the Speech from the Throne. There really was nothing to mention about it. Last session there was a motion brought forward by my hon. friend from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) which concluded in this way :

> This House further declares that there is no necessity for sending any more Canadian troops to South Africa, and that the enlistment of recruits for the South Africa constabulary should not be allowed to take place in Canada.

It was my duty as leader of the House to answer that motion, and in the course of my remarks I then said :

> As to the first conclusion of this proposition, that there is no necessity of sending Canadian troops to South Africa, I must say I altogether agree with my hon. friend—not for the same reasons that have prompted him, but for the reason that the war is at an end. There may be still some guerilla warfare, there may still be some brigandage under the name of war, but the war is no longer at issue. Though my hon. friend pretends to be very much in doubt as to the issue of the war, for my part I am ready to leave the issue in the hands of the men who have it in hand now, and to say, with my hon. friend, that there is no necessity for sending Canadian troops to South Africa. As to the other portion of the conclusion that enlistment of recruits for the South Africa constabulary should not be allowed to take place in Canada, I ask my hon. friend what reason can there be why the enlistment of men for this force should be put to an end in Canada ? If there are men in Canada who—I care not for what motive, whether high or low, whether dignified or undignified, whether because they desire to get a living, or from a spirit of adventure, or from the nobler impulse of fighting for their sovereign—wish to take service in the South Africa constabulary, on what principle should a Canadian government interfere to prevent their liberty being so exercised ? My hon. friend has spoken well and eloquently upon the cause of liberty on which he has constituted himself the champion in this House, and almost alone ; but I must ask him, what kind of liberty is it which will not permit a British subject, if he so chooses, to offer his King to serve him, no matter in what capacity.

My hon. friend (Mr. Borden) has now the explanation of this matter. Later on in the same debate the hon. gentleman himself spoke and he took no issue on anything I had said. On the contrary, he rather approved the course I had taken. Under such circumstances my hon. friend is aware that we could not send a contingent to South Africa, for the reason that we had no appropriation for it. In 1896, under the circumstances which then existed, we could send a contingent without any parliament appropriation, because the war was sudden, because it took us by surprise, because there was an outburst of popular feeling in favour of the course which we took, and our action was afterwards approved by parliament without any dissent. However, in this instance when the war had been lasting for two years, the government of Canada had no excuse whatever for taking any money from the Treasury to send a contingent to South Africa. But, Sir, if there were, as it turned out to be ;

if there were young men who wanted to go to South Africa, as was the case when the constabulary were recruited here, there was no reason why they should not be allowed to do so. Last year the Canadian people allowed the young men who wanted to go and serve in South Africa to be recruited under the machinery of our Militia Department, and this year there were some young Canadians who were anxious to go and do a last service, not only for the cause of their Sovereign, but in my estimation for the cause of justice and liberty. We simply put at the disposal of the Imperial authorities the machinery of the department to carry out what we thought was a laudable object. There was nothing to announce to parliament in that. It was not parliamentary action. It was not even the government action. It was simply the same thing which took place last year in the case of the South African Constabulary, and which was not mentioned in parliament though parliament was sitting at the time. The hon. gentleman has now the whole explanation with regard to that. My hon. friend (Mr. Borden) was more himself when he came to another part of his speech—a part of his speech, upon which, if he will permit me, I offer him my most sincere compliments—where he spoke in feeling terms of some of our departed colleagues, and above all, when he spoke of a man who has left in this House and in this country a record which shall not be forgotten for many and many a day. My hon. friend was truly eloquent in his references and he gave expression to sentiments which will be re-echoed by the whole Canadian people. Lord Dufferin was a statesman of Imperial mind. There was nothing shackled about it. He moved on broad lines. Whatever the subject he had to deal with he could rise above all boundaries and divisions of creed and race, or any of the other considerations which divide men. On every question he soared to the highest possible level. The Marquis of Dufferin was one of the few men who during the last twenty-five years or so has done for the empire the highest possible service, and he did it in a way which will redound to his credit and which nowadays must be appreciated more and more, because wherever he went he had the knack and facility of conciliating men, and causing them to move always in the direction of Imperial interests and the broadest kind of liberty.

I thank my hon. friend for the very noble word which he spoke in favour of my lamented colleague, Mr. Dobell. Mr. Dobell unfortunately was not sufficiently known in this House; but we who were his colleagues had on many an occasion an evidence of his great ability as a business man, and many times profited by his experience.

With regard to our colleague, Mr. Clarke Wallace, as the House knows, he and I were upon many questions at the very antipodes. But there is one thing which must be said for Mr. Clarke Wallace : every one, whether his friend or his foe, had to recognize his masterly intellect, his rugged force, his strong common sense, and the ability which, whether he was to stand or fall, he brought to bear more and more on every question which came before this House. He never spoke without being listened to; he never spoke without having something to say; he never sat down without having made an impression upon the House.

Mr. Bell of Addington was a man of very different character—a genial, unobtrusive, useful member of the House. Not only is his death a loss to his own political friends, but we on this side of the House will miss almost as much as they his very genial face.

My hon. friend was at his very best when he gave a good measure of praise to the mover and the seconder of the address. My hon. friend from West York (Mr. Campbell) —the young member for West York—will not make us forget the old member for Kent. He comes back with the same fire we knew in him before, and we shall have from him the same useful service which we had before.

As to my hon. and young friend from Beauce (Mr. Béland), his reputation preceded him to this House. There were great expectations of what he would do when he came here, and our expectations have been more than realized to-day.

My hon. friend was also himself when he spoke of the visit of the Prince and the Princess of Wales to this country. We in Canada live under monarchical institutions and we are satisfied with our lot. I remember a time, when I was much younger than I am to-day, when it was a subject of discussion, rather more academical than practical, whether monarchical government or republican government was the preferable. All such discussions have become obsolete; in fact, they have disappeared; and the reason is that we have learned in the last century that there may be as much liberty under a monarchy as under a republic, that there can sometimes be as much tyranny under a pure democracy as under despotism. We in Canada have the blessing of living under British monarchical institutions, and we appreciate them to the full; and that was the sentiment which prevailed in every place which was visited by their Royal Highnesses. Everywhere our people received them and cheered them with a conscious pride in the privileges which they enjoyed and in the duties and the responsibilities which were consequent upon Canadian British citizenship.

When my hon. friend had delivered himself of these two topics, he had exhausted the whole of the good nature that was in him. Then he became morose and sad, and the rest of his speech, was redolent with the sad and lachrymose reflections of a dissatisfied soul. Nothing could cheer him, nothing could appeal to him, nothing could gladden him—not even the prosperity which he sees about him, prosperity never before equalled in this country, prosperity unsurpassed in any other country; not even the almost miraculous crop we have had in the North-west; not even the everbuoyant revenue, not even the ever-increasing trade and commerce. Now, I firmly believe that if, instead of the prosperity which my hon. friend sees everywhere, he had seen returning that grim visitant, the companion of the Conservative administrations, the hard times, and if he had had to tell a tale of woe, he would have had a congenial subject to speak about. Nay more, if there had been destitution and famine in the country, I believe my hon. friend's happiness would have been complete.

In fact—I appeal to those who had the pleasure of listening to my hon. friend—the only ray of something like joy which was apparent in his speech was when he came to speak of the census. We are all disappointed in the census, and the very disappointment of the country was my hon. friend's comfort. If, instead of the beggarly increase of 10 per cent in the population there had been a good increase, such as we had reason to expect, my hon. friend would have been extremely doleful. If he had had a doleful speech to make, he would have been happy and cheerful; but as he had the material for a cheerful speech, he was doleful and unhappy. So far as the census is concerned, I am grievously disappointed at the result; but the figures only show the extreme gravity of the exodus in former decades. There is a reason for this perhaps not peculiar to Canada alone. Looking back at the history of the past one hundred years, we see that the young American republic in a halo of glory sprang into existence in a way which fairly took all the civilized nations by storm. A new star had arisen in the western sky, and attracted like a magnet the young of all nations of the world to its doors. From every country those who were dissatisfied with their lot—the young, the ardent, the enthusiastic, the enterprising—flocked to the new country in a copious and never-ending stream. The new nation displayed more unbounded energy and activity during a hundred years than perhaps any other nation in the world's history. As Canada was the nearest country to the United States, she was perhaps the most attracted by it, and it is unfortunately too true that generation after generation almost the whole of our natural increase had crossed the border. It was the boast of the Conservative party, when they adopted the National Policy, that it would put an end to the exodus, and turn a new page in the history of this country. What a delusion that hope was we now know, because the records are there to show that the period of the National Policy was perhaps the worst, so far as the migration from Canada was concerned. But there is no doubt whatever that at the present time Canada is entering upon a new era; we have turned a new page in the history of the country. My hon. friend a moment ago disputed the fact that the exodus was a thing of the past. I do not say that at the present time the exodus has absolutely ceased; but it is within every man's knowledge that it is not what it was ten years ago, nor five years ago.

And, sir, there is something more. It may be possible that there is a continued migration from north to south; but it is a fact within the knowledge of everybody that there is now a new current of migration from south to north, from American to Canadian territory. There is, if I may so speak, a migration of American capital in the east and a migration of American settlers in the west. I know there are some in this country—I see one, at all events, in my eye at the very moment—who pretends to be rather disturbed by this condition of things. What will become of the country, it is said, if it is invaded—that is the word used—by American capital and American citizens ? So far as American citizens are concerned, our experience has shown that those who come to settle in the Canadian North-west—and they are coming in thousands—come with the notion which has been implanted from youth in the bosom of every American, that the American constitution is the cream of perfection—the most perfect institution devised by man. But after being some time in Canada, they realize that the British constitution as applied in Canada is more elastic, more democratic, more amenable to the people, than the much-vaunted American constitution. They realize that in Canada the laws are better administered, and that there is better protection for property and life than in the United States; and they have no hesitation in becoming Canadian citizens and taking the oath of allegiance to the King. In the Yukon territory thousands of Americans have taken the oath of allegiance and assumed the responsibilities and privileges of Canadian citizenship.

There is another kind of colonization in the eastern part of Canada, and for my part I see no danger in it. On the contrary, I welcome the influx of capital into Canada. Whether it comes from Great Britain or from the United States, it is the very thing we want. If Americans come here and put their capital into our industries, what is it for ? It is to develop those industries and make them fruitful. My hon. friend referred a moment ago to the fact that the population of the county of Cape Breton had increased some fifteen thousand during the last decade; and if he had told the whole story, he would have stated that this increase was largely due to an American citizen who had come to Canada to better his fortune and to develop our industries. If some American capitalists invest their capital in our railways, what is it for ? To so develop those railways as to enable them to carry the trade not only of Canada but of the United States to the seaboard. What seaboard, may I ask ? The nearest and the cheapest, that is, the St. Lawrence river. Whoever has the control of any railroad will administer it for the benefit of his company, in order to make it yield the best returns possible. In my opinion, in the matter of transportation, geography is altogether in favour of Canada; and far from frowning upon the investment of American capital seeking investment in these industries, I altogether welcome it.

I have only one more thing to say. My hon. friend anticipated a discussion on the tariff. My hon. friend knows that it is not the rule, nor is it good parliamentary tactics, to call for a discussion of the tariff on the address. We shall await that in the budget speech, and there is no occasion for anticipating it. When we bring down the tariff, my hon. friend will find a united party against him. Until that time, therefore, I think it well to reserve any comments on this subject.

I will only say, in conclusion, that the government have no great measures to introduce to the House. It is our intention, if possible, to have a short session; and in that I believe we shall serve the wishes of hon. members not only on this side of the House, but even of my hon. friend himself and his friends behind him.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). Mr. Speaker, I really believe that it is as much in the interest of gentlemen who sit on the treasury benches as of ourselves that some slight effort should be made on this side of the House to dispel the strange illusions of which my right hon. friend has just given evidence, and the cause of which, I regret to say, is to be sought for largely in the enormous and fulsome measure of praise given to this Speech from the Throne by my good friend the hon. member for West York (Mr. Campbell). But a moment ago my right hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) claimed that he and his colleagues were the special instruments of Divine Providence in this country, and that any one who had any fault to find with the Speech from the Throne must necessarily be suffering from nervous prostration or a bad digestion. At the risk of dispelling this happy illusion on the part of my hon. friend, I can not refrain from pointing out the ghastly weariness of the ministerial programme. Even my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher), the champion census taker of the world, who, like George IV., appears confirmed in the belief that he has been the leader in every important event since the dawn of history, would hardly care to assume the paternity of so insignificant a production as this Speech from the Throne. On each and every one of the important questions which this country is called on to solve, this speech is remarkable for its silence.

One of the most important questions is that of transportation. Why have we not some statement from the government as to what definite policy it has formed upon this subject. Allow me to refer to a document from my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte), who, though he is not my enemy, has written a book, or rather an article, signed with his own name. In this article he points out clearly the duty of the present hour; and at the risk of taking up a little time, but in order to justify the reproach which I make the government, let me quote a few words from that article published by the hon. Minister in his organ at Montreal, over his own signature. It is entitled: "What I would do if I were a member of Parliament." And in thus quoting the Minister of Public Works,—who evidently looks upon himself as a sort of Jekyll-Hyde in politics, to be dreaded as a minister and relied upon as an ordinary member—I am doing a service to the man by pointing out the laches of the minister.

'What I would do if I were a member of parliament. I would buy to-day the very best geographical map of Canada.' Have these gentlemen done so ? Is it not possible for them to procure a map of this country ? From a mere inspection of that map it will become evident to them that they have grossly neglected their duty by not announcing this session, at the very commencement, that they are determined to take some steps for the practical solution of this question and to save us from the destruction of our own trade which, indirectly, our neighbours to the south of us with energy, with strength, with pluck, which are deserving of all admiration, are gradually taking away from us. Well, after having, very properly, I think, suggested pointedly the purchase of a map as necessary for a beginning for these gentlemen, he continues : 'I would in the second place study fully, study maturely, the question of the means of transportation.' Have they done so ? Not at all. There is not one of these gentlemen able to rise in the House to-day and tell us that he has studied this question, or to tell us what is the policy of the government which they will attempt to carry out courageously. 'I would,' says the article, 'make of this question my question, the important question.' That is right. It is for each and every one of us, from one end of Canada to the other, the important question of them all. 'The session,' continues the article, 'is approaching,' but what is the use of the session, if these hon. gentlemen have no scheme to lay before us; if they are afraid to tell us what is the policy of the government in regard to the question of transportation and help each of us, on whatever side of the House he may sit, to apply himself to the carrying out of some practical solution of this question. But, let my hon. friends listen to this further statement: 'I would not leave to parliament or the Cabinet either rest or intermission until I had forced both parliament and the government to adopt a policy, energetic, definite and well defined.' Have these gentlemen done so? 'We are,' continues the article, 'proceeding in the proper direction, but we are not proceeding fast enough?' What guarantee have we that we shall proceed with any more speed? The question is retarded for another session; and, though we are given information about the crops concerning which we long ago knew as much as do these hon. gentlemen; though we are informed that Marconi has been here and other commonplaces of this description, yet, on this important question we are left utterly in the dark. And my hon. friend (Mr. Borden), who dares to suggest that there is something missing in the Speech from the Throne, is told that he must have slept badly, that he must have poor digestion or must be suffering from loss of memory. 'The St. Lawrence is the shortest route between the west and the great lakes and the markets of Europe, but, as we know, until now, we have had a commerce in our own country which, compared with the commerce of the United States, may well be called insignificant.' That is true. And that is why it is so urgent that, since we have the shortest route and every natural facility, the government should take steps to secure the welfare of this country by increasing this trade. That is why it is so important why the government should give us their views upon this subject and make this the paramount question of the day. 'We transport to Europe but a very small portion of our own produce, New York, Boston, Portland, Buffalo, do a considerable part of our exporting. This autumn, Buffalo has received nearly 5,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat, of 12,000,000 bushels which have been carried to Fort William by the Canadian Pacific Railway. It would be interesting to know what proportion of the balance of 7,000,000 has passed through the St. Lawrence route, because these 7,000,000 have been distributed between the different ports of Canada, the ports of Georgian Bay particularly. And most of these ports are used by the Grand Trunk, which has made its principal terminus at the port of Portland.'—thanks to the neglect and carelessness of these gentlemen, who, whilst they were treating with the Grand Trunk for the Intercolonial Railway and bonusing the Grand Trunk Railway for the construction of the Victoria Bridge, never for a moment thought that it was necessary to secure the terminus of that national highway—for so we may well call it—within the limits of our own territory. I am quoting the principal parts of this article in support of my claim, that, in neglecting to give us their policy on this question, in failing to make this the paramount question during the present session, the government has failed to perform its duty. 'We had,' the minister says in that article, 'no proper arrangement of our own ports. We had no terminal facilities. New York has magnificent terminal facilities. What had we at Montreal? What have we at the present hour? And, I refer to Montreal not because I happen to live in that city, but because it is such an important point on our national highway to the sea. I refer to it because of its importance to us all as Canadians and not alone to those who live there. What have we at the present hour in Montreal, what have we at Quebec and at Three Rivers along the St. Lawrence route? Numerous accidents have caused us great damage in rendering the insurance rates almost prohibitive during the most valuable time for transporting freight, the autumn.' And the hon. gentleman continues by stating that, within a couple of years, we shall be in an irreproachable position in so far as the navigation of the gulf of St. Lawrence is concerned. 'Quebec and Three Rivers,' says the hon. gentleman, 'are being studied.'

> The necessary work will be executed there.

But we have no statement whatever from the government in regard to its policy in respect of those works, and in fact nothing whatever in regard to that important question of transportation. After having given in this same article figures, which I will not quote to the House, to prove the absolute superiority of our own route over any other on this continent, the hon. minister goes on to say:

> The very day after French River will have been improved in such a way as to give a 20-foot channel upon the whole course of that river, 25 to 30 million bushels of wheat will be accumulated along the shores of Lake Nipissing in the two months of autumn during which the transportation of this important cereal can be done most effectively and most usefully. Let us not forget that Lake Nipissing, that the French River, are bound to Ontario by a branch of the Grand Trunk Railway from Callendar to the capital of the sister province. The improvement of the French River is therefore, in my opinion, a matter which is most urgent and of immediate importance. It is an affair of $4,000,000 at most, a bagatelle of $125,000 in interest per annum.

Then, after continuing to point out the absolute necessity for immediate action upon the part of the government, the hon. gentleman concludes as follows:

> I am not a member of parliament, I am nothing but a Minister, which makes all the difference in the world.

And, indeed it does, Mr. Speaker, because in spite of the assistance which the hon. gentleman might have expected from those around him in carrying out all, or part at any rate, of those improvements which are absolutely necessary, which we require, which are essential to this country, he received no more assistance than he has from the gentlemen who surround him in the deliberations of the cabinet. But this question is not one which, according to the opinion of the Minister of Public Works alone is important. You can find evidence of that in the daily papers of the city of Montreal and elsewhere. You will find scarcely a newspaper in which that question is not adverted to in some way. For example, I find in the issue of 'La Presse' of the day before yesterday allusions to this important question. Upon the first page it treats the question of finding out the cause of delay in the city of Montreal. We have suffered now over one year's delay from the absence of an elevator in the city of Montreal, which we should have had a year ago. This paper asks :

> Who is to blame ? Is it the Minister of Public Works ? Is it the Montreal Board of Harbour Commissioners ? A solution is desired upon that point.

A reference is made to the reiterated complaints of the Montreal Chambre de Commerce, through its president, Mr. Geoffrion, a friend of the present government, concerning the repeated delays that we have suffered in respect to the construction of an elevator. We have no information in the Speech from the Throne in regard to that or any other question that affects the port of Montreal. And yet, the Minister of Public Works knows it, during the last election in St. James Division, Montreal, and during the election that took place in Laval when the Minister of Public Works and the right hon. the Prime Minister both came down to take part in the fray, these questions were spoken of, they were discussed, and we were assured that the government were anxious to adopt a settled policy in regard to the port of Montreal and to carry out that policy—not in a niggardly manner, not slowly, but promptly, and without regard to expense, as we were advised to do by Mr. Reeve, the late general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, when he attended an inspection of the port of Montreal some months ago, at which, I think, my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works was present. So much with regard to the question of transportation.

Then, sir, we have not a single word in the Speech from the Throne in regard to the fast Atlantic service. My right hon. friend seems to forget that. It is he who is losing his memory, and not my hon. friend to my right. The hon. gentleman seems to forget that when the Conservative party went out of power in 1896 there was at that moment a contract signed for a fast Atlantic service. Why did not these gentlemen carry it out ? They would have had that fast Atlantic service to-day if they had carried it out. The truth is, Mr. Speaker, as we think, and the public generally think, that these gentlemen are fighting a little too much 'like blazes,' as the Minister of Public Works said at the banquet in the city of Montreal. They are fighting so much that they cannot agree upon any policy, upon any question. The only thing they can agree to speak about in the speech is of Mr. Marconi's coming here. But is it a fact that at this banquet in the city of Montreal, where there was a great divergence of views between the Minister of Public Works and my hon. friend the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding), is it a fact—since you require only facts—that the Minister of Finance went away so tearing mad, so much 'in blazes,' that he said he never would sit again at a banquet with my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works ? If you require history, if you require facts that have actually taken place, let us know the true solution of this incident, and let us know if what we hear all over Montreal is true. If we must have nothing but events that have actually occurred, perhaps those gentlemen might tell us how it was that my hon. friend the Minister of Finance and my right hon. friend, the uncrowned king, according to the hon. member for West York (Mr. Campbell)—I think he will be crowned himself instead of witnessing the coronation of His Most Gracious Majesty—let us know how it is that they came down one day to Montreal and anointed as their own candidate a young gentleman of that city, and as soon as they heard that our good friend Mr. Bergeron had manifested some idea of coming forward, they came the following evening to speak on behalf of their anointed candidate, and after they had ascended the platform in the city of Montreal they were obliged to change their tune and sing the praises of the present representative of St. James Division (Mr. Brunet), upon whose head they had been heaping maledictions for a fortnight or more previously. Those are events of which we would like some explanation from hon. gentlemen occupying their high position.

Mr. COCHRANE. How did he get here ?

Mr. MONK. Well, the question which my hon. friend puts brings us back to the very important statement in the Speech from the Throne in regard to Mr. Marconi, because, I may inform my hon. friend, we found out during that election campaign in St. James Division that we had nothing to learn from Mr. Marconi in regard to telegraphing and telegraphers, we knew all about it in this country already. Might I ask the right hon. the Prime Minister, since he has referred to Mr. Marconi's visit to this country, what department it was that made the arrangements with Mr. Marconi to which the Speech from the Throne refers ? Is there any special department charged with these negotiations ? None of these hon. gentlemen seem willing to give us any information upon that question. Might I ask the members of the government—I do so with the object of getting information—if these arrangements which were made with Mr. Marconi have been reduced to writing, and if so, is there any objection on the part of the government to laying them upon the Table of the House?

The PRIME MINISTER. If my hon. friend will read the Speech from the Throne he will have his answer. The speech says they will be brought down.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). Do you want them brought down before the address passes ?

Mr. MONK. My hon. friend the leader of the opposition, probably suffering from those wicked dreams to which the right hon. gentleman refers, has found fault with the government because no reference has been made in the Speech from the Throne to the sending of the third contingent to South Africa. In this connection it seems to me that it may be stated that the government seemed to be imbued with the desire to keep from parliament information upon such an important subject as that to which parliament has a right. It is in consonance with the usual policy of the government to do every important act connected with the administration of this country without previously taking parliament into its confidence or keeping parliament informed of these important acts of administration. It is, I think, Sir, a proper interpretation of our modern constitutional parliamentary usages to say that the government is nothing more than a committee of parliament, but these gentlemen would fain bring us back to the times, about 150 years ago, when, in England, parliament was struggling for its privileges and the members of parliament were not vouchsafed the information which they possess to-day, because, if, as I pointed out, the government last year, during a session of parliament, in the month of March, offered to the home government to send another contingent to South Africa, why were we not taken into the confidence of the government and informed of the fact, as we had a right to be and why was not the message which was sent offering that contingent to the home government laid before us who are here as representatives of the people I would ask the government again if it has any objection to laying on the table of the House immediately the very text of the message which it sent to the home government at the time offering the third contingent.

The PRIME MINISTER. Not the slightest.

Mr. MONK. My hon. friend from West York (Mr. Campbell), who is an old member of parliament, has found means to express a great deal of loyalty, for which I heartily congratulate him, and which leads me to believe that the county which accidentally has sent him to parliament this time is a very loyal county. I congratulate him upon his patriotic sentiments, because I remember that as the member for Kent, he was one of those who promptly whitewashed the government which had seen fit to provide our troops in South Africa, in case of emergency, as their sole recourse, with crumpled dog biscuit. But, if in this respect, my hon. friend has amended his ways, I regret that he has not seen fit, while praising the government as he has done, to make some slight allusion to a matter of some importance to West York, as well as to my own county, and which brought us both to Ottawa not many weeks ago. It was the question of the adequate and proper protection of our farmers and market gardeners. At that moment, both of us being here, leading important deputations from our constituencies, I heard my hon. friend take the government to task and strongly urge the government to grant some relief for the grievances from which the gardeners of his own county suffered. Does the right hon. Prime Minister not think that the government might have given us some assurance in the Speech from the Throne comparable with the assurances which were given at that time, before the election, that these grievances, which are serious grievances, and to which I will refer later on in the session, would be rectified, or does he think that the government very properly excluded any reference to that subject from the Speech from the Throne?

There is also the question of repatriation, which is of some importance, and which has not been referred to in the Speech from the Throne. We have the spectacle, as is well known, of large numbers of our most hopeful young men leaving, if I mistake not, the province of Nova Scotia, the province of New Brunswick, and in very large numbers, leaving Quebec, and probably Ontario, and starting off for the United States, whilst we are spending, and that was a question discussed during the last election in the vicinity of Montreal, fabulous sums to bring into the North-west Territories, into our own inheritance, to replace those who are leaving this country, people who have not the first right in that country, and whom it would be better to leave at home, and keep with us our own Canadians. Has the government any policy upon this question, and why has it not announced that policy? Would it not have been pleasant for us to hear from the government that they have some settled views in regard to a change in the system and that these views will be carried into effect during the present session?

My hon. friend from Beauce (Mr. Bélland), whom I heard with very great pleasure this afternoon, and who speaks both languages, I think, in a manner which does him infinite credit, was obliged to go out of the Speech from the Throne. He did not find sufficient food for his eloquence in the speech, he went out from it, and spoke to us about the surplus we were to expect. Let me say that, although no reference has been made in the Speech from the Throne to the expected surplus, I sincerely hope the time has passed when the Minister of Finance of this country will speak to us of surpluses that we know are buried every year in that bottomless pit which is called the Intercolonial Railway, or in other capital accounts. Let us, this year, at any rate, when surpluses are spoken of, know where these surpluses are that the people shall not be deceived any longer. I merely intended to point out some of the subjects upon which I think the public of this country—and we come here under considerable trouble—might have expected some utterance from the government. But we have ample proof, I think, that the Speech from the Throne has been prepared most hurriedly, from the fact to which I wish to call particularly my right hon. friend's attention, that there is no translation of that speech into the language which is most familiar to a large number of the members of this House, because I cannot call it a translation which has appeared in the 'Official Gazette,' and which is so full of errors. I heard with pleasure the eloquent treatment of the French language by the hon. member for Beauce, and I could not help regretting that he himself had not been charged with the translation of that important document. We had with us yesterday a number of gentlemen who do not belong to this country, and who represent foreign countries, and I think it is right and proper to say to the government that a document of this kind which is so largely circulated, should be translated properly. We hear a great deal sometimes about murdering the King's English, but I say that this is a most felonious assassination of the beautiful language of Molière and Racine, and it is very necessary that the party who has been charged by the government with translating that document should know that if it is necessary, we will bring the guillotine from France and chop his head off. With these few remarks, and with the hope that, although the session may be short, we will have from the government some positive statement of its policy upon some of the important matters to which I have had the honour to refer, I resume my seat.

At Six o'clock House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at Eight o'clock.

Mr. WM. F. MACLEAN (East York). Mr. Speaker, I intend for a short time this evening to direct the attention of the House to one or two things mentioned casually in the Speech from the Throne, but things which I consider are of the greatest importance to the people of this country. In the speech of His Excellency there is a reference to the assassination of President McKinley. That was an incident that did attract the attention of all the world, but somehow to my mind there was a disposition in the United States and elsewhere to avoid the discussing of this question in the light of the real cause of the assassination. Contemporaneously with the assassination of the President there was a significant thing happening in the United States. There was a growth of trusts, a growth of monopolies that was unprecedented in the history of the world. Now not for one moment do I say in so many words that the assassination of President McKinley was connected with the growth of these trusts, but I do say that it is a significant fact that the two things were contemporaneous, and that there may be a connection in the way of cause and effect between these two. Last year the growth of monopolies reached its height in the United States. The development of trusts attained its greatest and most dangerous strength, and this development is a cause of the greatest anxiety and fear to those who are really studying political and social questions, not only in this country but in other countries as well. And what are these trusts doing? They are in the way of getting control of all the great railways; they are getting control of the great systems of transportation, and they are getting control of all the great industries. They have become so powerful that individuals who are really anxious for the welfare of the country begin to fear for the future. These trusts are sacrificing the interests of the people, and while I do not say that there was a direct connection between the growth of these trusts and the assassination of President McKinley, I do say that at that very time the public mind was alarmed as never before by the growth of these corporations which seemed to presage social disaster to the nation. If you want a specific instance of the growth of these corporations and the tyranny they exercise, I direct the attention of the House to the output and distribution of coal in the United States. If there is one blessing more than another that God has conferred on the people of this continent, it is a supply of coal sufficient to enable the people to have it put in their houses for $1 per ton. But this great coal supply has fallen into the hands of the coal companies, allied with the great carrying corporations, and the result has been that the coal is now sold at the enormous price of $4, $5 and $6 per ton when it should be sold for at most $1.50 per ton.

These huge corporations have become tyrannical in the treatment of their employees. As I said in Toronto a short time ago, they have become so tyrannical that an employee of theirs dare not confess at the present day that he is over 40 years of age. As an illustration of this kind of tyranny I may mention that the sale of hair dye in the United States is now something enormous.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. MACLEAN. That statement may cause laughter, but the fact remains that these corporations have become so tyrannical in the United States that a man over 40 years of age cannot hold a position. They have not increased the wages of their employees as they should have done ; but on the contrary they have reduced wages. They have become more tyrannical in specifying petty offences which if the men are guilty of they lose their employment. The great American people who claim that their country is the cradle of freedom are now oppressed under a slavery greater than the slavery that existed in the United States before the civil war. That is strong language, but there is not the slightest doubt that there is a new kind of slavery growing on the American continent. There is a slavery imposed by the trusts and the corporations greater than any slavery which existed before, and I am on this occasion taking the opportunity to warn our people in Canada to avoid if possible coming under the conditions which exist to-day in the United States. These corporations are grabbing all the power ; they are grabbing all the wealth, and what is worse, the liberties of the people are passing under their yoke. We are told that while the trusts have become powerful, the average wealth of individuals in the United States and in Canada has increased. I grant that to some extent, but compared with the immense growth of the wealth of the trusts, the increased wealth of individuals amounts to nothing. The wealth concentrated in the hands of these corporations to-day constitutes a menace to the welfare of the United States, and it will be a menace to Canada if the same conditions should come to exist here. Not only are the corporations in the United States depriving the people of their freedom, but they have got control of the legislative bodies of that country, they have got control of the press, and they think they will soon have control of the judiciary. There is one thing certain and that is, that they have control of the machines connected with both of the great political parties in the United States. That being the condition of affairs in the neighbouring Republic, there is a great social crisis approaching. The people are not satisfied with the existing conditions. They are not satisfied with the growth of power of these corporations ; they are not satisfied that their liberties are passing away and that a new serfdom is coming upon them. They are moving in one way or another to try and get rid of the existing conditions. That is the supreme issue in that country to-day. The men who are not mere politicians ; the men who are studying the great social questions there, are pointing out that the growth of the trusts and the tyranny of the trusts must in some way be counteracted.

Now, are we threatened by these corporations in Canada ? To my mind we are. We see signs every day of the growth of corporations in Canada in a way that is a menace to the people of this country and the political rights of our people. Look at what is taking place in parliament here, in our legislatures, and in our municipal councils. Things have taken place here in Ottawa in the interest of a corporation that have been in the nature of a raid on the political rights of the people. Look at what has taken place in the legislature of Quebec. That province has been raided up and down by the corporations. The city of Montreal has been raided in and out by the corporations to the detriment of the people. The same is happening to-day in the legislature of Ontario. The same thing has happened in the city of Toronto, and where is it all going to end ? In the speech of His Excellency a reference is made to the application of the Canadian Pacific Railway for increased powers in regards to its stock issue, and the government congratulates the country on the fact that this great corporation has been good enough to agree that the question as to the regulation of its rates and the interpretation of the clause in its charter relating to that subject shall be submitted to the courts. What does all that mean ? Here is a great corporation that is bound by its charter that its tolls shall be subject to government regulation when its profits amount to ten per cent on the actual cost of the road; and all we get to-day for the increased power of capitalization is a promise that this question shall be submitted to the courts. Why did the government not do what they did with the Canadian Pacific Railway on a former occasion ? If they gave the company this additional privilege, why did they not fix the date when the regulation of the freight rates of the railway should go into effect ? But all we get is this bald promise that this question shall be submitted to the courts. That again is an evidence of the growth of these corporations and the control they exercise over parliament and over this government.

Now, these great trust managers, these men who are in favour of all these great corporations, say that they have been created for two things : in order to cheapen production and in order to supply the capital necessary for the conduct of these great industries. I do not agree with that for one moment. If there is a characteristic of these corporations, it is that they do not reduce prices, but by monopolization they overcapitalize the corporation and force the public to give them hundreds of dollars for hundreds of dollars of watered stock. That is what the public get out of it. They simply get over-capitalization and nothing else. The other defence is that Wall street and the great money centres which are allied with these great corporations supply the capital, and that it could not be got in any other way. I dispute both of these contentions. I say that all we get for the growth of these great corporations is not a reduction in prices, but simply an over-capitalization and a defrauding of the shareholders.

A year ago I pointed out in this House the danger there was of the Canadian railways passing into the control of the great railway corporations of the United States. The House did not quite take me seriously in that contention, and perhaps the country will not, but what do we see to-day? Is it not a fact that the Canada Atlantic Railway, which runs from Montreal to Parry Sound, and which was built largely with the money of the Canadian people, has passed into the hands of the Vanderbilts? The right hon. Prime Minister said this afternoon that whether it had or not was of no concern to him, and that he was not afraid of this invasion of American capital. The people of Canada, however, are, I believe, afraid of seeing the railways of this country pass into the hands of foreign corporations. We are told that the Canadian Pacific Railway is still Canadian owned and under Canadian control. We are told that while many of the shares may be owned outside of this country, still the ownership and control of the road is in this country. Well, I believe that that control has passed out of the hands of Canadians. I believe that Sir Thomas Shaughnessy and the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Osler) and the other Canadians who are on the directorate, are only kept there by the favour of the great American combine, and may at any moment receive a notification from Mr. Morgan and Mr. Hill that they are no longer in control. I pointed out the danger a year ago, and that danger is still more imminent to-day. The Canada Atlantic has gone, and I believe the Canadian Pacific Railway as a matter of fact, has gone, and that the Grand Trunk Railway will follow. And in that event, the future of this country is very much in doubt. Let American corporations control our railways, and they will soon control our political future. The right hon. the Prime Minister has said on different occasions that should our railways pass out of our control then the country will interfere, but it will then be too late. When Mr. Morgan and Mr. Hill control the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway as they do the Canada Atlantic, the right hon. gentleman says Canada will interfere. But on that day, when these fall, and foreign magnates control our railways, they will also control our politicians and legislatures. The one thing goes with the other.

The right hon Prime Minister this afternoon declared that he was not afraid of the invasion of Canada by American capital, and of the control of our railways passing out of our hands. But there is a member of this government who thinks somewhat differently. I refer to the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte). Speaking in Montreal on Saturday night, that hon. gentleman said:

> As a matter of fact the time might come when the Canadian Government will have to do with the Canadian Pacific Railway what the British Government did with the Suez Canal. The British cabinet had secured the Suez shares in order to protect Imperial interests, and a similar patriotic policy might some day confront the Dominion of Canada. There was no danger now, but no one could tell what the future might bring forth.

I believe that the Minister of Public Works holds pretty much the position I do on this question. If there is one thing necessary to the maintenance of Canadian independence, it is the control by Canada of its own railways, and I congratulate the Minister of Public Works on his course in pointing out the danger, and hope he will succeed in impressing these views on his leader.

Another subject which has come before the people, and which was started down in the city of Halifax, is the proposal to hand over the Intercolonial Railway to the Canadian Pacific Railway. If we should do this, what would happen? Vanderbilt or Morgan might secure the control of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and with it the Intercolonial Railway, which has cost this country so much. This proposition would simply mean handing over the Intercolonial Railway to the great railway magnates of the United States. Yet the people of Halifax asked the boards of trade of the other cities to join with them, and the Canadian Pacific Railway is, day in and day out, pulling the wires among the politicians and inspiring the newspapers to bring that scheme to a successful issue. Should they ever do so, we may bid good-by to all our national hopes, and to our future as an independent power on this continent.

Instead of giving the Intercolonial Railway over to the Canadian Pacific Railway, and in that way putting it under the control of Mr. Morgan and his associates, we should have prevented the Vanderbilt interest getting hold of the Canada Atlantic, by buying it ourselves, and extending the Intercolonial Railway over it. And instead of allowing the Rainy River Railway to fall into the hands of Mann & Mackenzie—and I have heard it stated that Mann & Mackenzie are but another name for J. J. Hill—this country should have built the Rainy River road itself and the Crow's Nest Pass Railway. We would then have had almost a complete transcontinental system in the hands of the Canadian people and under their control. But instead of doing this, we have given away immense bonuses and we have allowed the Canada Atlantic to pass under foreign control as well as the Rainy River road, if it be the case that Mr. Hill is the real proprietor. We have let the Crow's Nest Pass go into the hands of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and any day we may find the Canadian Pacific Railway in the hands of Morgan and his associates. And now we have the modest proposal made that we should hand over the Intercolonial Railway to the Canadian Pacific Railway.

It is essential to our independence as a nationality that we should continue to hold the railways we have and that we should extend the Intercolonial Railway system, and take some means to prevent the control of our railways passing into the hands of the great American corporations. I am not afraid to say that I am in favour of nationalizing the whole railway system of this country. There is no other way out of the transportation difficulty, and I am risking my whole political future, whatever it may be, on that policy.

Mr. COWAN. What do you mean by nationalization ?

Mr. MACLEAN. That the state should own the railways as the state owns the railways in Russia, France, Austria, Hungary, and in our sister colonies of Australia and New Zealand.

Mr. COWAN. The same as we own the Intercolonial Railway?

Mr. MACLEAN. Exactly.

Mr. CLARKE. And run them as the Intercolonial is run?

Mr. MACLEAN. Not necessarily. That is a very glib argument, but there is no connection between the nationalization and the maladministration of railways. On that point I will have something further to say later on.

I submit that there is no way of maintaining our nationality other than by nationalizing our railways. There is no other solution of the transportation question. Lord Salisbury said the other day that there was no great diplomatic issue to-day which did not turn on the railway question. They were all transportation questions. All this trouble in South Africa is really nothing but a railway question. It arose out of Cecil Rhodes dream of a railway from the Cape to Cairo. The root of all the worry in South Africa to-day is that railway question.

Mr. BOURASSA. Hear, hear.

Mr. MACLEAN. And there is no solution of this question other than state ownership. The argument is often used that government ownership necessarily involves an immense system of corruption and maladministration. I say that does not follow, and if there should be corruption it would be nothing to the corruption which is rampant in this and every other country where the great railway corporations exercise their influence. Whenever the proposal is made that we should extend the Intercolonial system, we are told that the people of Canada are corrupt. I resent that charge. It is not the people, but the rich men connected with the large corporations who are corrupt, and who do the corrupting. It is the railway corporations who are corrupt, and it is their corruption which is to be feared.

Now, another thing—and it is in line with what I said before—is that we should begin this work of nationalization in this country by taking over the telegraphs, and telephones and the parcel and express systems of this country. And I am surprised that the government, after all that they have said about this matter, after all that their friends have said in their newspapers and in other ways, have not come down this year with a proposition for the nationalization of the telegraph system of Canada. There is provision made for it in the law and it can be done easily. And, with the system nationalized it can be worked cheaply and well in connection with the post office.

Mr. SPROULE. The Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) is against it.

Mr. MACLEAN. No.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes.

Mr. MACLEAN. Well, I will leave him to speak for himself. We can easily make the experiment in connection with the telegraph and telephone systems as they have done in England in connection with the telegraphs.

Mr. CLARKE. That is right.

Mr. MACLEAN. And if it is right in connection with these things, it is right in connection wih the railways and other great means of transportation. The great thing in connection with the nationalization of railways is that wherever it has been tried it has succeeded, and wherever they have nationalized a portion of the railways they are carrying out the nationalization of them all. And, if other countries have done it, we can do it. It is no compliment to our people for any one to say that we are not able to do what other countries have done. We have as high a class of people, and I hope we have as high a class of public men. If the nationalization of railways has been a success in other countries and if every country in which it has been tried has found it a protection as against the growth of these great corporations, and above all if it is a protection to the nationality and an assurance for the future of the country, we must adopt it in Canada. And, if the national ownership of railways is necessary from a Canadian point of view it is equally essential from an imperial point of view I believe that, not only that we shall have the nationalization of railways in this country, but that the mother country will have the same, and with that will come the nationalization of the cable system of the land telegraph system, and of some of the great steamship lines that connect one portion of the empire with the others. Now, as an evidence of the growth of the sentiment in favour of public ownership, consider what is taking place throughout the world to-day. Municipal ownership is one of the growing questions of the day. The idea of municipal ownership is being extended in a practical way in Europe and it has been begun in this country. There are several instances of it in Canada; and if you study the question as it is in Ontario to-day, you will find that what the people are talking of is the best means of bringing about the public ownership of the great franchises in connection with cities. The people are down on the monopolies, and they are trying in some way to get away from them, and the only way they can do it is by public ownership. The great argument in favour of public ownership of city franchises by the cities—and it applies also to the ownership by the country at large of the railways is that the problem before the men who have charge of the administration of one of these great franchises, when it is under public ownership, is how to supply the product whatever it may be, at the cheapest rate to the greatest number of people; but when the franchise is administered by a corporation, the problem is: How can we make the largest dividend on the greatest amount of inflated stock? That is the superiority of public ownership over private and corporation ownership. Every city that has gone into public ownership has succeeded; and the people of the cities of the United States and of the cities of Canada are, almost with one accord, in favour of this reform. When the next election is held in this country, I venture to predict now, there will be no issue but this question of the public ownership of these great corporations, the railways. We are talking of petty questions to-day. We must not forget that we are in a new century, and that there are newer and greater questions before us. The last century is gone, and gone with it are the questions that were identified with it. In this new century there is no question before the people of such magnitude and of such importance as the growth of the corporations and the necessity of getting rid of them in some way. And the only way to get rid of them, apparently, is by public ownership. If that is the case and if that is to be the issue, it is time that the people of this country were being educated on that question. It is time that the question was raised and the alarm given. It is very well for the Prime Minister to tell us that when the horse is stolen he will see to it that the door is locked. But that will not do. We must try in some way to take steps now to prevent the railways we have from passing into the hands of the great railway corporations of the United States. For, if we allow them to go, I contend that when that transfer has taken place, Canada's future as a nation will have gone, and the people of the United States will own this country. Now, hon. gentlemen on the other side, and especially the Prime Minister, as I said, express no alarm at this American invasion. Perhaps we should not expect anything more from the right hon. the Premier. Perhaps the party of commercial union, having failed in their former effort, will quietly assist in the new American invasion, the result of which can only be that the Americans will practically come into possession of this country. It may be that the old commercial union movement may seek to realize itself in this way. The Americans are becoming more powerful in this country. Industry after industry is passing into their hands, and out of the control of the people of this country. It is time that we did something to try to prevent it.

Now, I would like for a moment, having dealt with the question of public ownership and the growth of corporations, to refer to one or two things that have come up in the debate this afternoon, before I touch another point. If there is one thing that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Campbell) who moved the address, and the hon. gentleman (Mr. Béland), who seconded it, boasted of, it was the great prosperity that prevails in this country. The Prime Minister took his cue from them. And, in some way, all these gentlemen identified this prosperous state of the country with the advent to power of the Liberal party. To that, I have just one answer to make, and it is in the form of a question. If Canada has been prosperous since the Liberal party came into power is it not because the Liberals failed to put into force the policy they declared for when out of office? They were to wipe the national policy off the face of the earth, they were to give us free trade as it is in England. Did they do either of these things? No; they adopted the national policy, and when they adopted it, the people at once saw that the country was not to be overturned, that the Liberals would not do what they had threatened to do. Thus, there was, at last, a united people in favour of the national policy and in favour of the development of the country. That is why the country is prosperous to-day. It is because you did not do what you said you would do, it is because you did not carry out the threats you made, it is because you adopted the national policy of Sir John A. Macdonald, which I am defending to-day.

Now, I wish for a moment to direct the attention of the House to the relations between Canada and the empire. The Prime Minister this afternoon referred to the sending of the last contingent in a way that was not satisfactory to me, and that I do not think will be satisfactory to the people of this country. All the justification he had for it was to say that he had allowed enlistments to take place in this country. Well I do not think that statement will be satisfactory to our people, I do not think it will create much of a furore in the old country in our favour. I would like to have seen Canada pay for that contingent, and send it as a free gift to the motherland. Hon. gentlemen on the other side say that if we wish to make a contribution to England, if we wish to show our regard to the motherland, the way to do it is by giving a trade preference. Now I disagree with them entirely on that point. My idea is that the daughter state ought to recognize the mother country by standing by her in her hour of trial until the last dollar is spent, and in sending troops and men if necessary. A trade preference is not a contribution to the empire, it is a contribution to the manufacturers and workingmen of England at the expense of the manufacturers and workingmen of Canada.

Mr. CLARKE. To the manufacturers and workingmen of Germany, rather.

Mr. MACLEAN. And also to the manufacturers of Germany who come in by way of England. When hon. gentlemen say they have discharged their duty to the empire by giving the motherland that trade preference, and that consequently they were justified in sending the contingent over c.o.d., I take issue with them on both those points. I say it is just the other way : The contingents should be sent as a free gift, and there should have been no trade preference unless Canada got a trade preference of a similar character in return. But the empire to-day is being gradually welded together. Great Britain is passing to-day through a crisis, but the empire is gradually growing together. The people are looking forward to some kind of new movement, to some kind of new Imperial policy. Now what is that new Imperial policy to be ? If there is one thing that is forcing itself upon the attention of the people of the whole empire, whether in Great Britain, or in Canada, or in Australia, it is that the empire must no longer be exploited for trade purposes by outside and hostile nations. That is something that is coming home to the people of the empire from one end of it to the other, and most of all it is coming home to the people of England, to the people of Canada, to the people of Australia—that the empire is not to be exploited any longer for trade purposes in favour of the workingmen and capitalists of the United States. That is the great fact that is coming home to the people of the empire whether in the old land or in Canada, and it is the people of Canada who have led the way in that respect.

Now the great argument is that the empire is to be Americanized, and Mr. Stead has led in advancing that argument in a book which he issued recently. He holds out that the empire is being Americanized in various ways and it is in danger of being Americanized, it is in danger of being exploited for the benefit of the American people, of the American workingmen and the American farmers and capitalists. There is only one thing that is to prevent it, and what is that ? I have made the suggestion before that I make now, I think it is a practical suggestion, and it is this : That the Canadian system of national policy should be expanded into an Imperial policy for the whole empire. It will mean, a revolution in the fiscal policy of the old land. But they have asked us to make suggestions, and I am taking the liberty of making this suggestion, that the people of the old land should change their fiscal policy and adopt what we have found here to be equal to the occasion. We say to them : Your country will not be exploited, the empire will not be Americanized, if you will adopt this system. I have some hope that they will do so. I believe if the suggestion is made to them, if the right hon. gentleman when he is asked to make suggestions next June, if he is true to his country, if he is true to the policy that he is carrying out here to-day, he will suggest to them that the national policy which has succeeded in Canada is applicable to the empire and will succeed for the empire, and will build it up in the same way. Now it may mean a great many changes. It may mean that England shall adopt customs duties, it may mean that England will have to adopt a system of export duties, or rebates, or reciprocal treaties, some of which she has already. It may mean that she will have to adopt reciprocity in tariffs, and it may mean that she will have to adopt all the things that protective nations have adopted. But if she does adopt them she will find that they will hold the empire together, and they will keep it from being exploited by those hostile nations, and there is no other way of doing it.

There is no other solution for the problem but for the empire to adopt some kind of protection, some system like the one we have here in Canada to-day. That protective system, that parental system, call it what you may, has succeeded in the United States. It has made the United States the greatest country in the world. It has put the United States in the position that it holds to-day, a menace to the trade of all the rest of the world, and it is certainly a menace to the trade of England. The trade of the United States is growing, the trade of England is declining ; and there is only one way, to my mind, whereby a stop can be put to that state of things, and by which the empire can be built up, just as the different states of the American union were built up, and that is by the adoption of the principles of protection. I hope that when the Prime Minister goes over to England he will admit that he is a protectionist, that he is building up his country by customs duties, by rebates, by bounties on production, by subsidies to steamship lines, by the employment of every arrow in the quiver of protectionists. He is bound to do that. He is bound to make that suggestion to the empire when he goes over there; he is bound to say it has succeeded in Canada, that it has succeeded in the United States, that it has succeeded in Australia—because they are going in for it there. There is no other way of unifying the empire, of binding it together, of promoting trade between the different sections of the empire, than by adopting a system of protection, or some system which will preserve the empire from exploitation by outside and hostile nations.

Now this principle of protection, which I say is just as good for the whole empire as it is for Canada, what is it based on? What is the difference between it and the principle of free trade? Free traders have always said that their principle was based on the brotherhood of man, they have always been preaching that. Well, it is not the brotherhood of man that rules to-day among nations, it is the law governing the struggle for existence that rules. Englishmen have been misled. For years and years they have been talking about the brotherhood of man, and now they are up against a struggle for existence. Other nations do not reciprocate. When England has opened up her markets to all these hostile nations, they have not shown any brotherhood, but they have exploited England. So that, the brotherhood of man is not a safe principle to go by and we must recognize the other principle that national life is a struggle for existence; therefore, each nation must take care of itself. Those who have favoured this free trade argument have also said that the least government is best. The contrary is true and with the growth of civilization the responsibilities and duties of government increase. Leave trade alone? No. As civilization increases the responsibilities of government increase, and you must do more and more for your country and not leave trade alone. The law with all these nations is a law of enlightened selfishness and that law must govern the empire, if the empire is to hold its own. The empire must find means of adopting an imperial policy on the lines which have been adopted in this country. The best proof of that system is that in the United States, where protection has been adopted, and where it has been carried out to the largest extent, it has resulted in two things. It has cheapened production and it has built up the country in a way that enables it to antagonize every other country in the world. If that is so, surely the time has come when the empire must adopt the protective system. A great result will follow from the adoption of the protective principle by the empire, and what is it? The moment the empire adopts the principle of protection and encourages trade between the different sections of the empire, that moment will the empire be treated better by these hostile nations. I do not say that we can teach the Americans a lesson by giving them a reciprocity of tariffs, but I believe they will learn something if some such treatment is accorded to them, and the first thing you will see is, that the moment the American nation finds the English market refused to it and a preference given to Canadian products, it will treat the British Empire in a very different way. You give the Canadian farmer a preference in the English market and keep out the American farmer, and the latter will assuredly do all he can to check the tail twister of the Eastern States. The Americans will change their whole attitude to the motherland and the empire. The moment a protective system is adopted from one end of the empire to the other, we will see the attitude of the Americans towards the motherland and towards this country greatly changed, and changed in the interest of the empire and of Canada. If that is the case, if the government of to-day is actually carrying out the principle of protection, if the attention of the country is called in the Speech from the Throne to the fact that the Prime Minister has been asked to go over to the motherland to take part in the coronation ceremonies and offer suggestions there, the Prime Minister is bound, when he goes over this coming summer, to say that the reason why Canada to-day is prosperous, as we have been told it is prosperous, is because we have adopted a national system of protection, that we are succeeding in it, that the United States has succeeded in carrying out that same principle, and that the empire will succeed if that principle is adopted for the empire. That is his mission, that is the duty before him when he goes over this summer. Will he discharge that duty? I say that he is bound to discharge that duty in the light of the statements made here this afternoon. This country, which is protectionist, this country, which resorts to customs duties, which gives a bonus on production and which proposes reciprocal treatment—

Mr. HOLMES. No.

Mr. MACLEAN. An hon. gentleman says no. I heard of a minister in the present government who said that the time had come when we will have to have reciprocity in treatment and reciprocity in tariffs, and we were told that there were to be no more missions to Washington. If this country is prosperous, as they say it is, and it is prosperous by reason of the principle of protection, then the Prime Minister is bound when he goes to England to advocate the adoption of the principle of protection and all that it involves to the empire at large. If that is done, the empire is bound to adopt a tariff for the empire, to have preferential trade between the different sections of the empire and a reciprocity of tariffs as between the empire and outside hostile nations. Then will the empire grow together and resume its old time leadership of the world. There is no other future for the empire than the adoption of the principle of protection, and the point I wish to make after what we have heard this afternoon, is that the government, and especially the right hon. gentleman, are in duty bound to lay before the different members of the empire, when the consultation takes place during the coming summer the fact that protection must be the basis of the fiscal policy of the empire at large. That I consider to be the most important issue before the people of the country and that is the reason why I have brought it up here to-night. I have brought it up because if I have heard anything at all this afternoon I did hear the leader of the Liberal party declare in so many words that the principle of protection had made Canada prosperous, and if it has made Canada prosperous he should recommend the empire to adopt a similar policy.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle). Mr. Speaker, it was not my intention to follow in the debate, but as I have an amendment to offer to the address, I would ask the government to consent to the adjournment of the debate, because this will raise a discussion. Therefore, I move the adjournment of the debate. Before the motion is adopted, as I would not like to take the government or the House by surprise, I am ready to give the text of my amendment which I will move on Monday. The text of my amendment will be this :

That the time has come when a railway policy should be framed by which the people of this country could expect some return for the enormous sacrifices they have made in order to further the development of their avenues of trade ; and especially to prevent our railway systems from falling under the control of foreign railway corporations.

Motion agreed to, and debate adjourned.

The PRIME MINISTER moved :

That the order for the consideration of the motion for an address to His Excellency the Governor General in reply to his speech at the opening of the session, have precedence over all other business except Introduction of Bills, until disposed of.

Motion agreed to.

NEW MEMBER.

Mr. SPEAKER informed the House that the Clerk of the House had received from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery a certificate of the election and return of George Riley, Esq., for the electoral district of Victoria, B.C.

On motion of the Prime Minister, House adjourned at 9.10 p.m.

3

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, February 17, 1902.

The Speaker took the Chair at Three o'clock.

TELEPHONES AND TELEPHONE COMPANIES BILL.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (East York), moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 2) regarding telephones and telephone companies.

Mr. SPROULE. Explain.

Mr. MACLEAN. Mr. Speaker, this Bill deals with telephones and telephone companies. It is based largely on the present general Acts respecting telegraphs, the clauses being very similar to the clauses of those Acts. For a moment, I desire to direct the attention of the House to the object which I have in view. The first clause of importance in this Bill is that the company has power to fix its tolls. The next clause provides that the company must give equal treatment; and the clause following that calls for government control, supervision and revision of those tolls. And, by tolls, I mean not only the charges made for messages, but the rentals of telephones. Under the Bill, all these tolls must be approved by the Governor in Council in the same way as are the rates of telegraph companies and railway companies. Another clause, in the same direction, provides that these tolls may be revised from time to time by the Governor in Council. It is also here provided that the telephone companies shall post up their tolls in their various offices. Another important clause, in the line of the general provisions I have referred to is one providing against unfair discrimination, while another clause provides that there shall be no rebates. A provision is made also for agreements between companies, just as, under the Railway Act, provision is made for agreement between railway companies, and as in those cases, the agreements must be approved by the Governor in Council. But the most important clause, and the one to which I desire to direct special attention, provides that every telephone company must give the right of way for the use of its system by every other telephone company, just as every railway company must give the use of its lines to other railway companies. At the present time we have one great telephone company in Canada—the Bell Telephone Company—which is in a position, at this moment, to refuse the use of its trunk line to every other company. This Act will compel the Bell Telephone Company and every other similar company to give what we might call running rights to other companies. There is also provision for the order of transmitting messages, as in the law governing telegraph companies; and another provision giving the Minister of Justice the first right of use of the telephone system. Another very important clause, and one in the line of something to which I have directed the attention of this House more than once, empowers the government to take over the telephone system at any time in the same way as they are authorized to take over the telegraph system of the country. Still another very important point well worthy of the attention of the House, well worthy of adoption, is a clause which will have the effect of preventing any telephone company hereafter from discriminating unfairly against a rival line. For instance, the municipalities of this country are going in for a municipal system. But when the Bell Telephone Company or any other that at the present controls the business—as has been the case in the United States—hears that a new telephone system is being started they starve it out by competitive rates. In some places where a rival telephone system has been started and has been giving subscribers telephone service at from $25 to $35 a year, the big monopoly has come in and said to the local users of the new system : We will give you telephone service at $2 or $3 a year for three years if you will sign an agreement with us. They will not be able to do that by this Bill. They will have to treat every city and every village under like circumstances in a like way. There is also a provision that if the government desires to take over the lines the price to be paid therefor shall be subject to arbitration if the two parties cannot agree. The final clause is a repeal of a very obnoxious general Act that was passed in this country some years ago. I referred to it last session. It was done in the interests of the Bell Telephone Company, as I now find. This little Act that was put through this parliament some ten or fifteen years ago, was to the effect that the words 'telephone' and 'telephonic' were not to be construed as 'telegraph' and 'telegraphic,' notwithstanding the Act that the English courts had years preceding held they were one and the same thing. It is because of that little Act that the telephone companies to-day do not come under the Telegraph Companies Act. I propose in this Bill to repeal that clause. I regard this Bill as a very important one. I have had it drafted by a rather eminent counsel, it has been thought over very carefully. It is on the line of the petitions that are being sent into this House every day. I hope that when it comes before the House we will have the co-operation of the House and especially the co-operation of the government in giving the public some kind of control, some kind of regulation, of what is becoming one of the great monopolies of this country, and a monopoly that up to the present time does not treat the public fairly. The Bell Telephone Company have asked this parliament to increase their powers of capitalization and for other great privileges. But in asking for these privileges they have not been willing to make any concessions to the public. Now, I am not introducing this Bill with any antagonistic spirit to the Bell Telephone Company, but I am applying to the telephone companies the same general principles which this parliament has seen fit to apply to telegraph companies and to railway corporations.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

MEMBER INTRODUCED.

Geo. Riley, Esq., member for the electoral division of the city of Victoria, B.C., introduced by the Prime Minister (Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher).

CATTLE GUARDS ON RAILWAYS.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER (Lincoln and Niagara) moved for leave to introduce a Bill (No. 3) to amend the Railway Act. He said : This Bill which relates to cattle guards is the same Bill as was introduced here by me last session, and which I am sorry to say did not get further than the committee stage, having been referred to a special committee. The law at present does not require railway companies to keep up cattle guards at crossings except as against animals under the control of a human being, and the Bill seeks to protect cattle when passing along a highway where there are railway crossings. It has been said that there is an ancient but unwritten rule that no member shall be allowed to carry a Bill through parliament during his first session; perhaps that accounts for the disaster that befell this Bill last session. But that time has now passed, and I hope this Bill may be more lucky during the present session.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

ADDRESS IN ANSWER TO HIS EXCELLENCY'S SPEECH.

House resumed adjourned debate on the proposed motion of Mr. Campbell for an Address to His Excellency the Governor General in reply to his speech at the opening of the session.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle). Before dealing with the particular point to which I wish to direct the attention of the House to-day, I desire to refer for a moment to a few paragraphs of the address.

In the paragraph relating to the assassination of President McKinley, I suppose the government really voices the feelings not only of this country but of the civilized world, in saying that the time has come when legislation should be adopted to prevent, if possible, the repetition of such horrible crimes as the one which was perpetrated last year. However, as the paragraph states that we should join our efforts to the efforts of the United States, I merely wish to make a reservation. The tone of the press of the United States at the time of the assassination of President McKinley, and since, does not warrant us, I think, in promising to follow them in whatever legislation they may choose to adopt. We should not forget that anarchy and its doctrines, and its apostles, were not bred by the exercise of free speech and action, but were bred by the exercise of tyranny; and we should take proper care in seeking to extirpate this evil that we do not create another evil. Sir, if anarchism has found its way to America and threatens to increase here, it is not so much by reason of the existence of free institutions as of the debasement of moral ideas in modern life. Unfortunately for the neighbouring country, while it has shown during the last century the greatest development of material resources and the most wonderful material progress, the American people have been constantly taught that the possession of wealth, the accumulation of wealth, the combination of wealth, is the one great ideal to which humanity should look forward, and under this teaching the way has been prepared for the development of these anarchistic theories. The evil cannot be cured by law alone. I think the existence of the evil is due chiefly to the education which has been given to the people. But as long as the nation insists that in the common schools of the country nothing but technical education should be afforded to the young, as long as the old principle is forgotten that at the same time a child is taught the elements of science he should also be taught the elements of the moral law and be guided throughout life by the fear of God and by strict adherence to moral and religious principles, I fear that very little improvement can be expected from the operation of any laws that may be adopted. I say no more on this subject; but, while talking about the United States I may say that I was very much astonished with one word that fell from the lips of the right hon. the leader of the government relating to the Alaskan boundary. The right hon. gentleman said:—

> Neither have we mentioned in the speech of His Excellency, the Alaskan boundary matter, and the reason why we have omitted a reference to it is simply because it is to-day in the very same position it was in last year. It has made no progress since then.

And later on:

> I have to say to my hon. friend—

Referring to the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden, Halifax).

> That we have pressed as much as we could; nay more, I may say that we have pressed in season and out of season, on the Imperial authorities to bring that matter to a close.

Mr. Speaker, I think this is an exact picture of the situation, but I think also that it is to be regretted that between last session, and this session, the British government have been brought to consent to the repeal of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. And, to all appearances, this has been done with the tacit consent of the government, whilst the rights of Canada and the rights of Great Britain in the Alaskan boundary have not made one step of progress. I am not referring to what passed in the Anglo-American Commission as I am precluded from it, but I am speaking of what was the general impression in England, in the United States and in Canada. No later than the months of November and December last, the then Minister of Justice in this government, the Hon. David Mills, whose authority on constitutional and international matters cannot be disputed, published two most remarkable articles in the 'Empire Review' of Great Britain, stating that Great Britain could not and would not abandon her rights in Nicaraguan affairs unless compensation should be given Canada in regard to the Alaskan boundary. Where stands the question to-day? In the Clayton-Bulwer treaty Great Britain had rights with the United States affecting only the continent of America. And she has now abandoned those rights without any regard to the interests of her Canadian subjects, and has not exacted anything for them. The only other treaty where she had purely continental rights, there was a proper cause for the application of the Munroe doctrine, it was this one having reference to Nicaraguan affairs and to the Alaskan boundary in which American interests were at stake. There was no question of bringing America under European influences. There were two questions in which Great Britain and the United States had rights. It was always said—and so much so that last year it was a current issue in the public press of the United States—that the stumbling block in the way of repealing the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was the obstinacy of the Canadian government in refusing, and refusing very rightly and very properly, to consent to the repeal of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty without compensation being obtained from the United States in the matter of the Alaskan boundary. However, a motion is on the Order paper for the correspondence relating to the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and I hope that sound doctrine which was so well exposed in the British press by the late Minister of Justice will be made clear so that we will know the reason why the situation has changed so quickly and so thoroughly in a few days.

Now, as far as the paragraph relating to exhibitions is concerned, I entirely concur with the opinion put into the mouth of His Excellency. I had the advantage this last summer of visiting the Glasgow exhibition ; and it is a pleasure for me to say here in compliment to the hon. Minister of Agriculture and to his officials that the display of Canadian products at the exhibition was made not only in the most artistic way, but in the most practical way. The effect was heightened by the visit of the hon. minister who took every occasion to address the English and Scotch public. Our exhibition at Glasgow coupled with the visit of the hon. Minister of Agriculture has done Canada a great deal of good.

So far as exhibitions at large are concerned, I simply wish to make one suggestion in all friendship to the government. In every exhibition where we take a hand it should be made an absolute condition, either with the directors of these exhibitions, or with representatives of the British government when the British empire at large takes part in it, that Canadian products should not only be exhibited separately but the lists of competitors and the prizes should be given separately. We have been told very often that we have grown to be a nation. Twenty-five years ago I suppose we were not a nation ; but nevertheless, at the Centennial exhibition at Philadelphia, our representatives imposed upon the British officials the obligation of having special lists prepared of the Canadian exhibits and of having special lists of the prizes given. So that when the prizes were awarded, foreign purchasers could know, when looking at the list of winners, that one who had been awarded a bronze silver or gold medal, was a Canadian producer. At the Paris Exposition, twenty-four years later on, the names of Canadian prize winners on the lists were mixed up with the British, Australian and New Zealand competitors ; so that when they came to be looked over, the foreign purchaser looking through a list of fifty names, for instance, would not probably see the name of a Canadian producer, but would be more likely to call upon the merchant or manufacturer of the big cities of England than upon the merchant or manufacturer of Canadian cities.

If foreign exhibits are going to be made by Canada, it is upon one very straight condition that we should exhibit, and this condition is that we should exhibit as Canadians, that the prizes should be awarded to us as Canadians, it should be known that a certain number of Canadians have won prizes and their names should not be mixed up with those of other exhibitors coming from all parts of the empire.

Now, coming to the question of trade agents, I may say that I concur entirely in the projected policy of the government. I think it is a very good move and a move that should be extended ; but I may be allowed to add that this move will bring its full and proper fruit only when Canada secures the right of herself making her foreign commercial relations. Should we have agents at Paris, Bordeaux, Berlin, Hamburg or any other foreign city, foreigners will come to them to inquire about the laws of the country and the conditions upon which trade can be done with Canada. If we are bound to say that we cannot negotiate any arrangement whatever with a foreign country with which improved trade relations are sought we hamper our trade relations. I hope this will be one of the questions which the right hon. leader of the government and his colleagues will put before the Imperial conference this summer. It is perfectly useless for us to boast of being a nation, it is perfectly useless for us to seek to develop our trade if by becoming a nation we cannot exercise one of the most essential prerogatives of a nation, which is the full and complete control of its foreign relations and of trade matters especially.

This brings me to the two paragraphs relating to the coronation of His Majesty the King and to the Imperial conference which is going to take place next summer. I am not going to speak at length on this because I have also put on the Order paper a motion asking for the production of the correspondence and papers which have passed between the Canadian and the Imperial governments on that matter. I simply wish to draw attention to the fact that in these two paragraphs the question of trade only is mentioned. Of course, I have not seen that which I hope the government will give us the advantage of seeing before the session is over : the terms of the invitation sent by Mr. Chamberlain to the colonial governments and the terms of the acceptance of that invitation. But there are past facts which should be made the lesson of the future.

In 1897, without this country knowing it, although parliament was in session, an invitation was sent to Canada as well as to all the other colonies asking that representatives be sent to England, not merely to establish trade relations between the various parts of the British Empire, but also to take steps that would have the effect of blending the various parts of the empire together, both socially and politically, and further to consider the organization of the military defence of the empire. My intention is not to bring forward any controversial subject to-day, and therefore I shall not dwell upon that matter at any length. I do say, however, that unless Mr. Chamberlain's mind has changed much during the last four years—and I do not think that his reputation would lead to the conclusion that it has—there are other changes than changes in trade matters contemplated. I hold that we should not now be placed in the same position as we were placed in 1897, of seeing our representatives go to London without our knowing exactly what are the subjects to be treated of at that imperial conference. What were the terms of the invitation of 1897 ? In his official despatch, dated January 28th, 1897, Mr. Chamberlain wrote :

> Should this invitation be accepted by the premiers of the self-governing colonies there presence in London would afford a most valuable opportunity for the discussion of many subjects of the greatest interest to the empire ; such as commercial union, colonial defence, representation of the colony, legislation with regard to immigrants from Asia and elsewhere, and other similar subjects.

That was a very broad programme, but it was never made known to the Canadian people. An order in council was adopted on the 15th of April by the Canadian government, and this order in council I have found in the British blue-books. Well, I don't think a Canadian should be compelled to search the British blue-books for information about what the Canadian government is doing. This was the report from the sub-committee of the Privy Council of Canada :

> The sub-committee further join in the hope expressed by the Right Hon. Secretary of State that it may be found possible to take advantage of the assemblage of the premiers of the self-governing colonies for the discussion of the many and important questions of interest to the empire, to which he has referred. The sub-committee unite most sincerely in the hope that the result of the approaching celebration may be such as will tend powerfully to cement the union between the mother country and her colonies, both socially and politically.

The House was then in session and continued in session for some months after. We had the announcement that the Prime Minister was going to represent us, and while I do not quarrel with any man who is in favour of changing the relations that may exist between Great Britain and Canada, I do say that when the Canadian government sent representatives to England with the object of discussing a change in these relations, the least that the Canadian parliament and Canadian people should expect is that they would be informed of it by the government, and not be obliged to search in British blue-books for an expression of opinion by the Canadian government on such an important matter.

Coming to the paragraph in the Speech from the Throne which relates to the census, I may remark that the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) criticised the government quite violently in this regard. I do not think that the facts justify the hon. gentleman in that criticism. What is the use of bringing forward in this House the argument : that because the Liberal party of some years ago accused the government of the day of pursuing a policy which caused the slow growth of the population, the opposition of to-day should say: 'This paragraph in the Speech from the Throne is not founded on fact because the increase in the population during the Liberal regime is no greater than it was under Conservative rule ?' For my part I believe that the government has painted the situation in its true light. There is no doubt that the result of the census has been disappointing, but there is no doubt either that this paragraph in the Speech from the Throne is perfectly true :

> There is good reason also to believe that the increase of population during the latter half of the decade has been very greatly in excess of the average of former years and that in the near future we may look for a much more rapid growth than occurred during the period covered by the last two censuses.

The constituency which I represent is in the midst of a colonization district, and I am myself a witness to the fact that during the first five years of the last census, not only was settlement at a standstill, but the people of our farming districts were leaving daily for the large Canadian cities and the United States. I believe—and this without any idea of flattering the government—that from 1891 to 1896 the increase in our population was at a standstill, not because the Conservatives were in power, but because of circumstances into which I am not going now to enter, our people emigrated more at that time than at any previous period. Within the last five years, twenty new parishes have been constituted in the region of the Gatineau, and in the La Lievre Valley and the Rouge Valley. Between 1896 and 1900, in my own constituency alone, not speaking of the neighbouring constituencies, six new parishes have been organized for religious and municipal purposes. In the district of Labelle the increase during the last ten years was 6,000, but I firmly believe that the whole of that increase took place during the last five years.

There is no doubt that something should be done to encourage and increase our population. The hon. the leader of the opposition has suggested a stronger help to industries, but for my part I would suggest a stronger help to farming and to colonization. The hon. gentleman has pointed out that industries in Cape Breton have attracted a large influx of population, but he has also admitted that there has been an enormous decrease in the rest of the province of Nova Scotia. The hon. gentleman may believe that were it not for the coal and steel industries of Cape Breton, these people would perhaps have remained in the rest of the province of Nova Scotia. but while it is better to have these people working in the mines and steel works of Cape Breton than to have them go to the United States, it would be still better to keep them on the farms. After all the bone and sinew of our country is its farming population. This is a farming community.

Mr. MACLEAN. That is not so.

Mr. BOURASSA. Yes. The true basis of a country is its farming population.

Mr. MACLEAN. That is not so.

Mr. FRASER. You are differing from your leader.

Mr. BOURASSA. Manufacturing industries do immense good in the country, but I say that the solid basis of a country is the prosperity of the farming community.

Mr. MACLEAN. And the industries.

Mr. BOURASSA. I say that the industries should be developed and should be supplied by the farmers, and that both should help each other.

Mr. MACLEAN. Hear, hear.

Mr. BOURASSA. But to develop the industries to such a point as to attract the country people to the cities without at the same time trying to promote settlement in the country is, in my opinion, bad policy. I am nearly as much of a protectionist as the hon. gentleman is; I have always admitted it in this House. I am not a protectionist on principle. I am a protectionist because I consider protection our only safeguard against the trade invasions of the United States. But I say that along with a policy that will prevent American industries destroying Canadian industries, we should have a policy for giving a strong impetus to farming and settlement.

Again, I must pay a compliment to the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher). I am not always in the habit of paying compliments to ministers, though whenever I can do so, I do it with pleasure. I will also make a suggestion to the hon. gentleman. He and his officials have done a great deal to develop the farming industries of this country, especially in the market which is our most natural market—the British market—the most natural, that is, while we are deprived of the American market. I would ask the hon. gentleman if it would not be possible to adopt some scheme whereby greater uniformity of dairy products might be attained. If there is one impediment to our trade in cheese and butter, especially in butter, it is the fact that there is not sufficient control over its manufacture. One reason for this is the too great number of small factories. It has been suggested in the province of Quebec that the provincial legislature should do something in this matter; but as that would be an interference with the constitution, which refers to the federal parliament the control of trade, I would ask the hon. Minister of Agriculture, who has already done something for the establishment of cold chambers in the factories, if something could not also be done to discourage the building of small factories, which cannot make good products, but which try to compete with the best factories, and tend to spoil our markets.

With regard to the settlement of the country, I do not think it is just that the whole burden of colonization should rest upon the provincial government, I speak of those of the older provinces. In the western provinces the federal government, having control of the lands, fulfils the duty which in the older provinces devolves upon the provincial governments. We sometimes hear complaints of the heavy debt of the province of Quebec; but that debt is in a great measure due to the fact that the provincial government, though it has sometimes made mistakes, like other governments, has striven to keep the people of the province in the province. The result is not enormous, yet the province of Quebec is the only province in the Dominion which shows an increase in the rural population. In the other provinces the increase of population is confined to the cities. What is the reason for this difference? It is because the province of Quebec has spent money generously for the building of bridges, colonization roads and railroads, in order to open up the virgin parts of the province. I would like to see the federal government take a hand in this work. The provinces are not rich, their revenues are limited, and whenever there is an increase of population in any province, it is an increase of consumers, who add to the revenues of the federal government, but do not add anything to the revenues of the provincial government. On the contrary, they are a cause of more expenditure on the part of the province, on colonization roads, bridges and other improvements. Therefore, wherever there is a possibility of the federal government assisting in development and colonization work, it should be done.

Another paragraph of the speech upon which I want to say a word is that referring to the projected line of steamships to South Africa. I may say frankly that I am opposed to it—not on grounds of sentiment, but because I think there are many other countries with which Canada could develop a better trade. Very little permanent trade can be expected in South Africa. The mines will no doubt be reopened, and will no doubt flourish, because the tyrannical government of Mr. Kruger having been done away with, the mine-owners will be in a position to introduce their slavery system, which they had under British rule at Kimberley. But that trade, after all, is only a matter of a few years. The most hopeful expectations held out by expert engineers give to the mines of South Africa a probable existence of forty or fifty years, or perhaps seventy-five years at the utmost. Then, with the lines of communication already established with Great Britain, Germany, France and the United States, it is not likely that Canada can enter into a successful competition with these countries. Moreover, farming in South Africa has been destroyed, at any rate, for years to come. The country has been devastated as Western Germany was devastated by Marshall Turenne over two hundred years ago.

The British government are proposing to organize a system of state-aided emigration to South Africa. Protests have been made against this in various colonies. The Toronto 'Globe' had an article last summer, in which it said that it was a poor return for the sacrifices which Canada and the other colonies had made for England to find England helping with her mighty influence and capital the settlement of South Africa at the expense of the other colonies. I do not know what has been the result of these protests. I hope that before the session is over the government will announce that they have protested most strongly against such a project; and when it is stated that the British government and the local authorities in South Africa are going to try to retain as settlers in South Africa our young men who have gone there, at the expense of Canada, to fight the battles of the empire, surely we are not going to make matters easier by establishing a direct line of steamships from Canada to South Africa. It is not my purpose to discuss that question to-day; but even if it was good policy for Canada to engage in the war in South Africa, surely there is not a man in this House who will assert that it is a proper policy for the Canadian government and parliament to help the British authorities to settle South Africa at the expense of this country.

This naturally brings me to the charge that was made against the government by the hon. leader of the opposition and his deputy, the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) for not having mentioned in the Speech from the Throne the sending of the third contingent to South Africa.

I shall not discuss that question this afternoon, for I think it is of sufficient importance to form the subject of special debate and I intend moving later on for all the correspondence relating on the matter. But I wish merely to observe that my hon. friend (Mr. Borden) and the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) are not in a position to arraign the government for not having announced this policy as a government measure, in the Speech from the Throne. When the policy was inaugurated, when the principle was laid down, that the Canadian government should commit itself and future governments to the participation of Canada in British wars, the two hon. gentlemen were the first to rise and unite with the government in the attempt to crush those few members who claimed for the Canadian parliament the right of independence and self control. Therefore the right to condemn the government for its action in this connection rests only with those few men who voted to proclaim that the independence of the Canadian parliament was paramount to Cecil Rhodes' South African scheme.

Before I leave this question I wish to make a reply to the right hon. First Minister, which I was debarred from making last session as the right hon. gentleman spoke after me. My right hon. friend taunted me last year, and repeated his taunt this session, that I had asked the Canadian parliament to blame the administration for not having prevented young Canadians going to fight in South Africa. Sir, I am too great a lover of liberty to have ever made such a proposition. I never asked this parliament to entertain for a moment the idea of preventing any body going to fight in South Africa or elsewhere. But there is an immense difference between preventing young Canadians going to fight in South Africa and allowing the British government to do in Canada, what they never before attempted to do, even when we were but a Crown colony. What I objected to last session, and what I shall always object to, as long as I represent any portion of the Canadian people, is that Canada should be made a recruiting ground for the British army. In taking this ground I was supported last year by such loyal organs as the Montreal 'Witness' and the Toronto 'Star.' These organs took this position, that while England, whenever she wanted men to fight her battles, should be allowed to obtain them freely in Canada, the British authorities should not be led to entertain the hope of making Canada a recruiting ground and coming here to get recruits which they could not obtain at home. The sending of the last contingent was not merely helping a few young men to go and fight in South Africa, but it was the beginning of a regular system of recruiting in this country for the British army—a system taken up four years ago by the British government, announced in the British Houses of parliament every year during the four last sessions, and the subject of correspondence between the British and Canadian governments during all that time,—if we are to credit the declarations made by British authorities in the parliament of Great Britain. On the merits of the war, I shall not say anything at present. But I wish to tender my sincere thanks to my hon. friend from East York (Mr. Maclean) for having at last sounded the true note on that question. The right hon. Prime Minister has told us that this is a war for justice and liberty. The Liberals in England say it is a war of conquest and subjugation.

Mr. FLINT. No.

Mr BOURASSA. Yes, except a very small handful of them.

Mr. FLINT. Only a few cranks say so.

Mr. BOURASSA. That is a matter of appreciation. My hon. friend says a few cranks. Well, they comprise men such as Mr. Bryce, the Right Hon. John Morley, Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman; and if we had a few such men in this House, it would be the better for the country. It is cranks like those who have done much to make England what she is to-day, and to give to our country the liberties we now enjoy. And were they to disappear, it would be an unfortunate thing for this country, for we would be abandoned to the policy of men who proclaim that military authorities have the right to go into free British colonies and suspend the operation of the law, and that which is England's greatest glory—the liberty of the citizen. To come back to my hon. friend from East York (Mr. Maclean), he told us that all this trouble in South Africa was really at bottom nothing but a railway question—that it arose out of Cecil Rhodes' dream of a railway from the Cape to Cairo.

Mr. MACLEAN. Hear, hear.

Mr. BOURASSA. While I am one of those who are ready to do much in order to perpetuate the power and glory of England and in order that Canada may remain as long as possible under free British institutions, I am not ready to take the money of the Canadian people and spend it in helping Cecil Rhodes to build a railway from the Cape to Cairo, and therefore I cannot agree with my hon. friend from East York in denouncing the government for not having expended a little more money on the troops who are fighting to build that railway. My hon. friend, like myself, is much interested in the railway question in Canada. Well, we have not too much money here and are not in a position to give away any of it as a gift to Mr. Rhodes and Mr. Chamberlain in order to assist them in their pet project.

This naturally brings me to the railway question; and let me say that the motion I have prepared and my remarks accompanying it, are not directed with any view of embarrassing the government or of criticising the policy of the government from a party standpoint. I notice in the Speech from the Throne a reference to the application made by the Canadian Pacific Railway for an increase of its capital and the paragraph concludes with these words:

> My ministers availed themselves of the opportunity to stipulate that the long pending question of the power of the Governor in Council to regulate the tolls of the company should be submitted to the courts for the judicial decision The correspondence and other papers will be laid before you.

This brings up a very important question. Here is a contract which was made, some twenty or twenty-five years ago, with a powerful corporation, probably the biggest railway corporation in the world under one control; and one of the powers, which we were supposed to have reserved in that contract, was the control of the rates by the government. Now, this is not the first favour that the Canadian Pacific Railway has asked of this parliament. Under all governments, they have come here year after year to get additional favours. And, now, we are faced with this situation—that it is only after we have given them millions upon millions over and above what they were entitled to under their contract, after we have given them charter after charter empowering them to control small branch lines that we are told that we are to have—not additional power—but simply the right to submit a question to the courts. Are they going to obtain their power to increase their capital before the decision of the court is reached? Are they going to obtain first the favour they ask, leaving us to a doubtful decision of the courts? Sir, I want to be perfectly clear on this point. From a certain point of view I am a Canadian Pacific Railway man. It is true, like all other Liberals, I, for many years denounced the Canadian Pacific Railway as one of the greatest scandals in existence—a scandal brought to pass by the Conservative party—and a menace to Canada. When I look only at Canada's interest, when I do not go outside of this country, sometimes I am inclined to think that such a huge corporation, extending its powers over all the provinces of this country, more powerful in itself than all the other railway companies in this country, may but be a menace to Canada. But, when I go across the border, when I come in contact with foreign capitalists, as I did when I was in Washington with the Anglo-American commission, when I hear, as I did—and I do not speak of what passed in the commission—when I hear foreign railway men tell me that, when they press upon the Canadian government the adoption of railway policy similar to that of the United States, when they urge the control of railways under similar provisions to those enforced by the Inter-State Commission of the United States, they have no intention of striking at the Grand Trunk Railway—that the Grand Trunk Railway is practically an American railway—but that the only railway which they have a grudge against, the only railway at which they are aiming is the Canadian Pacific Railway—when I look at the question from that point of view, then, I am a Canadian Pacific Railway man.

But that does not change the general proposition, that the time has come, as I believe, when this country should have a railway policy. We have no railway policy; we cannot pretend that we have. We give charters to almost everybody who asks for them, and we give plenty of money to those to whom we grant charters, reserving to ourselves but a very slight nominal control—and even that control we do not exercise; and, as in the case of the Canadian Pacific Railway to-day, we are obliged to ask the intervention of the courts many years after the charter has been given. The hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) has told us—and very properly—that this was a vitally important question. Railway questions are almost the most vital in every country. And for this excellent reason—the railway industry is the only one that works in connection with every other industry. Whatever the development of trade, of farming, of manufactures, if we do not have the railway communication to bring our products to the sea-board, all our efforts at production are useless. But, with Canada, there is more in the question even than that. I say that the railway question is the basis of our national existence. And why? Without railways there would be no Canada. Canada geographically speaking, and looking at it from a purely natural point of view, is an absurd country. It was never intended by providence that a country should be divided from its neighbour by a line of three thousand miles not based upon any natural boundaries, whilst that country is divided within itself by obstacles that can never be wholly removed. We have three of four countries in one; and had it not been for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway, the maritime provinces and British Columbia would be now part of the American republic. Well, Sir, by building railways, we have given existence to this country; but the time has come, I think, when railways may be the cause of disrupting the nationality of this country which they have been the means of building up.

I am not going to enter into a long discussion of the railway policies of the various European countries. The one I am most familiar with is that of the French Republic. And, in my opinion, the French Republic has attained nearly the point of perfection so far as its railway policy is concerned. France started as we did, by granting subsidies; but did not continue that policy very long. Soon afterwards they adopted the system of granting annuities of ten or fifteen years to railways. Then, they abolished both subsidies and annuities, and gave a guarantee of interest as well as a guarantee of sinking fund. And what is the result? The first is that the state is interested in seeing that no railway shall be built unless it is useful and will bring in revenue. The second is that the shareholders and the men who loan money on the debentures knowing that the interest and also the sinking fund are guaranteed, will always give full value for the security. The issue of watered stock for building railways is unknown in France; all the money handed over to the railway companies for stock and debentures is put into the railways. The government does not give a permanent charter to a railway company, but gives a charter for ninety years. You may say that that is a pretty long charter. But, in a nation's life it is not so very long. The granting of this form of charter keeps the ownership of the railway in the government, while it does not charge the government with the duties of administration. Therefore, to compare our control of the Intercolonial Railway with such a system of government ownership is of no value, because the systems have no relation. The government ownership is clearly asserted—a company is not allowed to transfer its capital, or its route, or its rolling stock, without the permission of the government that owns it; yet, at the same time, the government is not loaded with the care, the responsibility and the inconveniences that would necessarily result from administering the road. After the expiry of the franchise, the whole thing returns to the government. Those who have received annuities are obliged to compute those annuities at 4 per cent, and the amount thus ascertained is deducted from the capital paid to them. In the case of those that received a guarantee of interest and sinking fund, the sinking fund is accumulated to be deducted from the price of the purchase. The guarantee is lost, to a certain extent, but that is compensated by the fact that, every time the net surplus of the company pays more than the interest that is guaranteed, it goes back to the state. For instance, supposing that 4 per cent is the guarantee for the railway, and the revenues of the railway yield only 3 per cent, then, the government pays 1 per cent to the shareholders and the holders of the debentures. But, if the amount paid by the railway company is 5 per cent, then 1 per cent goes to the State for compensation for what has been paid. The amount that had to be paid by the state increased for a number of years. But now it is decreasing, and the least optimistic of economists in France are able to point to the day when not only the railways of France will not be a cause of taxes laid upon the people, but will be actually a source of revenue, and their capital value a means of helping to extinguish the national debt. I do not say at present that the French system should be applied here. I am simply pointing out these facts to instance a country that is solving this railway problem in a marvellous way.

Now, I admit that our condition in this respect has arisen from the absurd physical form of our country. We have been obliged to build railways and to subsidize railways where no revenue could be expected. But, Sir, we have been wrong in this—we have granted too many charters. We have given charters right and left, not in accordance with the requirements of the country, but simply because a few schemers would come here—men without capital and without responsibility. To these men we would give the privilege of bonding their railway for more than it was worth and would give subsidies so large that, with the proceeds of the bonds and of the stock they could raise enough to build the railway. What has been the result where railways were really needed ? The result has been that enormous profits have been gained by railway constructors without any return either of interest or of capital to the state. Everything has been lost to the state, and still we have exercised no control over the rates. When anticipations did not marterialize what has been the result ? Those railways have either been stopped in their construction, or new favours have been asked from the government.

A really useful railway, well located and required by the people is of great utility to the country ; but I say a railway which is badly located is most disastrous to the country. Take, for example, the location of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the North-west. In obedience to Imperial considerations, that road, instead of being placed where the natural requirements of the country pointed out, was placed where Imperial considerations would be best served. The result has been that for many years people who wanted to go to the North-west and settle went along the Saskatchewan and Qu'Appelle valley, but people who were attracted by railway communications and by cheap lands and who did not know the real conditions, settled along the Canadian Pacific Railway. Along that railway for 300 or 400 miles in the North-west you have a population that have good railway communication but they are settled on a barren soil with no timber and no water. In the Saskatchewan valley you have a population which was attracted by the natural resources of the country, who took up fertile lands where they could have timber and water. But they suffered from want of good railway communication, and when they had communication they only had it through branches of the Canadian Pacific Railway on which the company naturally were forced by circumstances to charge enormous rates. We can understand the complaints of the people of the North-west against the rates. But it cannot be denied that these rates have been more or less forced on the Canadian Pacific Railway on account of the bad location of the route.

Take the case in our own province where railways have been built for settlement purposes, and what has been the result ? Some of those railways have been well located, the country has been opened up, settlers have poured in, and industries have been established. But elsewhere, where railways have been built up by a few schemers with the object of obtaining money from the government and then abandoning the railway, what has been the result ? A few traders, a few settlers have been attracted there by the temporary activity arising from the construction of the railway. But when they found out that the circumstances did not warrant them in spending their money in settlement, they left the country. Where did they go ? Did they go back to the old settlement from whence they came ? No. Once they had abandoned their homes in the old townships or parishes and had spent all their money in these new regions where they had been attracted, they then went to the United States. Therefore, I say, Sir, that if some railways have been the means of building up this country and developing its resources, and have attracted emigrants here, on the other hand some railways, owing to the injudicious way in which they have been located, have caused many people to go to the United States. They have discouraged our population, they have inspired our population with a spirit of change, they have taken away from our farmers the desire to remain at home. Once they found out that the country was not a favourable one in which to settle they have removed and gone to another country. Take the regions traversed by the first part of the Northern Railway in the province of Quebec. There is a country where millions of dollars have been expended by federal and provincial governments to secure settlers. During the ten years from 1881 to 1891 the county of Terrebonne only increased its population by 80, though the natural increase must have been at least 3,000. In that region where a colonization railway was improperly located the result has been that it helped the people to leave the country, and that was all.

There is another important feature of this question which I wish to touch upon before concluding. By putting on the market unproductive stocks, railways have attracted British capitalists to invest in shares and to guarantee bonds on railways which did not justify the expense, and the result has been to discourage British financiers from investing in any Canadian enterprises. You have only to speak to a British capitalist of Canadian railways to make him shut his purse at once. When they saw that the Canadian government was granting charters to build railways, and that federal and provincial governments were giving subsidies, naturally they thought that the speculation was a safe one. They could not believe that a new country which desired to develop its resources would squander money upon any wild-cat schemes. The granting of these charters and subsidies, and the immense powers which the government had conferred on railway companies, have resulted in attracting British capital where the investors did not sufficiently examine the facts. They did not send any one to examine the circumstances, and the country which the railway was going to traverse, they were assured it was a good speculation by the action of the government, they invested their money, and the result is now. I am told, that they will not listen to you when you propose to them to invest in a Canadian railway. The only foreign capital we can expect is American capital. The Americans are getting control of our railways, of this there can be no doubt. Let me quote a paragraph that appeared in the month of August last in a paper published in New York, which is reputed to be more or less an exponent of the personal opinions of President Roosevelt, I mean the 'Expansionist,' of New York. After speaking of the trade relations which are developing between Canada and the United States, it says :

> It is satisfactory to know that attention is being given by responsible and competent men in this country to the policy indicated in the foregoing and that advantage will be taken of the opportunity afforded by financial conditions to gain control of the transportation systems of Canada, as American capital is becoming a dominant factor in the development of Canada's forests and mineral resources. The two cannot be separated, but must be linked for the common benefit.

Not for the common benefit of both countries, but for the common benefit of both classes of American capitalists. Now, Sir, the Prime Minister told us the other day :

> If some American capitalists invest their capital in our railways, what is it for ? To so develop those railways as to enable them to carry the trade not only of Canada but of the United States to the seaboard. What seaboard may I ask ? The nearest and the cheapest, that is, the St. Lawrence river. Whoever has the control of any railroad will administer it for the benefit of his company, in order to make it yield the best returns possible. In my opinion, in the matter of transportation, geography is altogether in favour of Canada ; and far from frowning upon the investment of American capital seeking investment in these industries, I altogether welcome it.

Well, Mr. Speaker, certainly, if American capitalists would come to this country as German, as British, as French capitalists, and invest their money in Canadian enterprises, and so to speak, make them Canadian, I would not have the slightest objection whatever. I have no objection to Mr. Eddy coming from the United States and developing that admirable industry which has done so much for the prosperity of Ottawa and Hull ; or to Mr. Clergue, or to the company at Shawinigan Falls, or at Grand'Mère, coming to Canada and developing the pulp industry. I have no objection of any kind to American citizens possessing any amount of capital coming in to assist in developing the country. My objection is not at all to be taken from that point of view ; but it is not capitalists of this kind that come here to take possession of Canadian railways and parade them as American railways. When a company like the New York Central takes hold of the Canada Atlantic Railway, when a company with a capital of $200,000,000 invested in the United States, takes hold of a small Canadian road worth only ten or twenty million dollars, it does not mean that profits will be sought on the Canadian route, built with Canadian capital for the benefit of the Canadian people, but that the Canadian road will be used if possible to increase the dividends on the $200,000,000 of American capital. That is the most natural explanation and it cannot be otherwise. It was so last year when 'La Patrie' of Montreal denounced the bargain that was entered into between the Manitoba government and Messrs. Mann and Mackenzie as being the attempt of an American syndicate to get hold of our western routes. It was not a question only of Messrs. Pierrepont Morgan and Hill making a few thousands of dollars of dividends in Canada; it was a question of the Northern Pacific Railway getting rid of Canadian competition and of using these new routes in the Canadian west to develop and concentrate the trade of Northern America upon their own routes. To this I take objection, and the strongest objection. I think, when the question is looked upon from that point of view, the Canadian people will never forgive the Canadian parliament for not taking the earliest opportunity of studying this problem. The thing is not always done by American capitalists and in future will not always be done in the way of purchasing railways. If they are bound to purchase a railway they will do it, but if they can, simply, by getting control of the points of communication between Canada and the United States, or if they can, by laying their hands upon our terminal facilities without being obliged to expend their money for the purpose, secure control of our railways, they will certainly do it. Therefore, the question is a broader one than the mere question of the buying or selling of a railway. In the city of Montreal, three years ago, a gentleman named Conners came there with an organized syndicate and made a most wonderful proposition to the people of Montreal for the building of elevators in that city. I am not an authority on these matters; I am speaking of them simply as a witness having no special interest in Montreal. At the time I asked myself what might be the interest of that man. With any man in general and with an American in particular, we should always put that question to ourselves. I knew that the Conners syndicate had large interests in Buffalo. I said to myself : That man cannot have any other purpose than to prevent building elevators in Montreal so as to keep the trade at Buffalo. But, people will say that he was risking money. If he was risking money he was securing in the rates charged at Buffalo greater profits in one year than the whole of the money he lost in three years here, and it was still a good speculation. Opposite the city of Quebec is the town of Lévis. There is an American gentleman who has been boarding in Lévis for a few weeks and who has been buying up the whole of what is left of the shore lands. It was the firm belief and I heard it expressed quite often by a gentleman well qualified to speak upon the subject, the late Mr. Dobell, that Lévis was destined to become one of the greatest ports in Canada because there were at that port such splendid water facilities. Has all that gone into the hands of an American syndicate ? What is this gentleman buying it for ? Is he buying it for Mr. Seward Webb ? We do not know. Perhaps he is buying it rather with the object of preventing any company or even the Canadian government, that will try to use the Intercolonial Railway, to develop the port of Lévis. There would be a good speculation in it for him.

How are we protected by the public press of the country on this question ? When it was known that the New York Central Railway Company had concluded to buy the Canada Atlantic Railway, I expected that the organs of public opinion in Ottawa, that have shown very often their loyalty to the British crown, and to the country, would express their indignation and fear. Not at all. They said there might be some danger but now we are going to reap some benefit; some big buildings are going to be erected in Ottawa. I may say that there is no city in Canada where two or three newspapers are not ready to help American capital to get possession of Canadian interests by leading public opinion in that direction provided that a few paltry local interests are safeguarded. I think it is the duty of parliament to consider how the interests of Canada are affected—look at the danger which is threatening. Let us take the example of the Grand Trunk Railway. It is not only a question of holding shares with these great railways. Here was a railway that was built with the money of the Canadian people, that obtained year after year favours from the Canadian parliament. No later than two or three years ago they had a grant from the Canadian parliament to widen the Victoria bridge, and they made a contract with the Canadian government. I do not want to discuss again that question; I do not say the contract was more favourable to the government than to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, but from the fact that the Grand Trunk Railway accepted it, it appears to have been a good bargain for the Grand Trunk Railway Company. One year after that grant was made they took the whole of the trade which they gathered from the west and carried it to the city of Portland. Here is a railway that starts at Chicago upon American territory, that passes along Canadian shores and reaps the fruits of the economy and industry of the Canadian people, which passes our Canadian ports, deprives Canadian labourers of the profit of handling the freight which it carries, and deprives Canadian steamship lines of the profit of carrying that freight to Europe.

Mr. MACLEAN. And gives the Americans cheaper rates than Canadians.

Mr. BOURASSA. Another point that I am not going to enter into, but it is only an additional point. Now, Sir, we have heard a great many things about the Canadian Pacific Railway. Two years ago we heard that on account of the excessive rates charged on the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Crow's Nest Pass Railway, a company was about to be formed in British Columbia to acquire and operate coal mines in competition with the Canadian Pacific Railway. That was the apparent reason. I do not know if the other reason given was true or not, but what is the result ? The result is that the Northern Pacific, Mr. Hill's property, having interested a few Canadian gentlemen, and I think even a few parliamentarians in this country, has got hold of coal mines in the west, is going to prevent the Canadian Pacific Railway from getting coal in these mines, is going to establish smelters on the Northern Pacific and carry the trade as much as possible from British Columbia to the American states. We heard the same remarks last year about the Manitoba railway legislation. We have now the Canada Atlantic Railway, which possibly will carry its trade to the port of Boston. The Grand Trunk Railway is carrying its trade to Portland. If we do not put a stop to that kind of a thing—if it be possible to put a stop to it—then before long this country will be divided into four or five sections. It will be no longer one Canada ; it will be five small Canadas, each of which will be a feeder to American transportation companies, to American labour, and to American capital.

From a national point of view, this is a matter of great consequence to us. Trade and commerce are the basis of the relations between all countries, and especially is that so here where our communities are separated by hundreds of miles of barren soil, and uninhabitable regions. The only affinity between British Columbia and the North-west Territories and Manitoba, and the central and eastern provinces is on account of the trade going through the Canadian railways. When British Columbia will do all its business in Seattle and San Francisco ; when Manitoba and the North-west Territories will do all their business in St. Paul and Duluth ; when Quebec and Ontario will do all their business in Portland, Boston, and New York, then the future of Canada as one country and one British colony will not be of long duration. I may be allowed to quote here words uttered last fall by the Countess of Aberdeen, speaking at Dundee. The first sentences merely explain what follows :

> Was not the gloom which over-hung the land due in great measure to the fact that this country had departed from the principles of Liberalism and erected in its stead a false and tyrannical patriotism, before which they must bow down or be crushed ? To throw doubt on the wisdom or justice of the present government was to brand themselves as traitors. We were squandering our sons and our money on the veldt of South Africa, and allowing Americans to buy up our commercial interests both in this country and in Canada. (' Times,' October 18, 1901.)

Sir, the interest of the British people is aroused on this subject. If they are beginning in England to see the danger of the introduction of American capital—not under the ordinary form which capital uses to introduce itself into a country, but under the form of annexation by piecemeal—it is about time that we in Canada should give our attention to the matter.

It may surprise some members of this House to see that I am so much in earnest about the future of Canada in connection with the railway question. Some may think that there is a good deal of merely apparent sentiment, or of a wish on my part to play on the loyal feeling of this House. Well, it is not my habit to conceal my sentiments. I am as strongly opposed to American annexation as I am to British Imperialism. I am as strongly opposed to seeing the interests of this country merged in the interests of the American Republic, as I am opposed to seeing our interests merged in the Pan-Britannic scheme. Canada is big enough for me; Canada is good enough for me, and I want Canada for the Canadian people. Whatever may be our opinion otherwise, that is the policy that must predominate in this country if we do our duty to the Canadian people.

I do not want to make any special suggestion in this matter. I am no authority. I stand here as a witness on this subject. I read what is published, I listen to what is said, I regard what is going on ; that is all. I see that in place of the British pound coming to stimulate the industries of this country as was formerly the case, now we have the American dollar. Well, I have no objection to either the American dollar or the British pound provided one or the other becomes Canadian. I am not moving this amendment as a criticism of the policy of the present government or of the past government. It is a suggestion I am making. I am asking the government to accept my amendment in the spirit in which I move it, and the spirit in which I move it is this : That the time has come when the whole people of Canada should give their attention to this problem. What is the solution ? I do not know. Surely it is worth while studying the problem. Surely it is worth while finding if there be a solution. All the European countries have given their attention to this same problem. In France they have changed their railway policy three or four times. In Germany the railway policy was one of Bismarck's most ambitious schemes, but of course with his imperial mind he wanted to concentrate the whole of the German railways in the hands of the government. I am not saying that we should adopt the example of Germany or the example of France. I merely say that situated as we are, the railway policy obtrudes itself upon us more than in the case of any other country in the world, because here on this northern continent there are only two nations; one a small nation of five millions settling an immense territory to which railway interests are vital, and the other a population of seventy-five millions the most aggressive in trade matters of all the nations in the world, trying to outdo foreign capital and energy in every line of industries. It is time for us to be on our guard. If the government finds proper to accept my amendment, my only suggestion would be that there should be appointed a committee of this parliament that would study that question before the session is over, and if necessary that a commission of railway experts be also appointed to study the railway policies of foreign countries, to find out to what extent they would apply to our country, and to see how much of them would be applicable to us under our peculiar circumstances. In fact, I am simply asking that the government should give their attention to this matter and that the opposition should join with them. I believe that that committee should be composed of a very few men, and they being experts in the matter would study the problem and submit their project to the government. If it is not adopted then nothing is lost, but if a satisfactory solution is arrived at great advantage must accrue to the Canadian people. It is in that spirit that I move seconded by Mr. Puttee :

That the time has come when a railway policy should be framed by which the people of this country could expect some return from the enormous sacrifices they have made in order to further the development of their avenues of trade, and especially in preventing our railway systems from falling under the control of foreign railway corporations.

It will be noticed that I have not referred in the amendment to the introduction of foreign capital, but I have simply referred to the control of foreign railway corporations, which means capital that has been already organized in foreign countries for the building and exploiting of railways to be made channels for the diversion of our commerce to a foreign country. If this amendment be accepted it might probably come in the Speech from the Throne after the paragraph which relates to the extension of the powers of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. I. Tarte). Mr. Speaker, the House, I am sure, has listened with a great deal of interest to the speech which has just been delivered by the hon. gentleman from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa). I must pay him this compliment, that he has been moderate. He has undoubtedly raised a very important question indeed, but at the same time a very difficult question to solve ; he has raised, in fact, the whole transportation question. My hon. friend has specially alluded to the intended purchase of the Canada Atlantic Railway by Mr. Webb and his associates. Before he had done so, my friend from East York (Mr. Maclean) had called the attention of the House to the same deal. We all know the location of that railway. It has one terminus on the Georgian Bay, and the other at Coteau Landing.

Mr. EDWARDS. No, in the United States.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Its Canadian terminus, I mean. I am glad my hon. friend (Mr. Bourassa) has stated very clearly that the amendment does not imply a want of confidence in the government so far as our railway policy is concerned ; and therefore I would ask him not to insist on his motion. There is no use of placing the House in a false position by having a vote on the motion under these circumstances.

Well, Sir, how could this government prevent Mr. Webb and his associates acquiring the majority of the stock of the Canada Atlantic Railway held by Mr. Booth ? Perhaps it would have been possible for the Canadian government to have bought that stock. I suppose the Canada Atlantic Railway has cost in the neighbourhood of $15,000,000 ; I cannot say exactly what it has cost. We have contributed to it $2,000,000 or thereabouts if I remember rightly. That road is not completed ; it has not reached the city of Montreal. As I said a moment ago, its terminus on Canadian soil is at Coteau Landing, where Mr. Booth has been obliged to build an elevator and establish a line of boats to take his trade to the port of Montreal. Mr. Booth is a large owner of mills, and he has used his road largely in the interest of his own trade and his own mills, not only in this country but on the other side of the line—because, it may not be generally known, Mr. Booth has large mill property at Burlington.

In connection with his railway Mr. Booth has established a fleet of steamers on the lakes. So far he has not done a very large trade in Canadian grain ; he has specially dealt in American grain and other products. He has succeeded in establishing an international trade. He is carrying American products from Chicago, Milwaukee and Duluth, not only to the port of Montreal, but to Boston. Now, Mr. Speaker, what member of this House holding a responsible position would say that the Canadian government could carry on a fleet of steamers on the lakes and work up a trade with American products? It is not possible; it is out of the question. I have been five and a half years a minister of the Crown, and I know how difficult it is for a man, whatever his power or his ability may be, to decide matters which have to be decided on the spur of the moment. A minister of the Crown cannot take action unless his proposed action has been discussed and agreed to beforehand. How could this government undertake to compete with great American railways ? My hon. friend who was formerly Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Haggart) knows that when he was in office he could not have acted in any such way.

I am very sorry to disagree with some of my friends by saying that I do not welcome as much as others the purchase of Canadian railways by American capital. But how could we help ourselves ? This is the question. I would rather see Mr. Booth keep possession of his road and complete it to the port of Montreal ; but Mr. Booth has not done so. I am free to say that he has carried a very heavy load for one man. Mr. Booth has invested a large sum of money. He is a man of enterprise. I venture to say he has invested the last dollar he has.

Mr. EDWARDS. That is right.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We could not ask him to do more. The Canadian government could not buy that road. The Canadian parliament would not have approved of our doing so. Now, was there anything else we could have done ? My hon. friend suggested a moment ago a guarantee of the bonds.

Mr. BOURASSA. If my hon. friend will allow me, I have not suggested anything. I have simply spoken of the system that exists in France. All I have suggested is the appointment of a parliamentary committee.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I quite understand that. I fully agree that the question is of such importance that we must consider it. But at the same time, having given some attention to the transportation question, I say that the Canadian nation has no reason whatever for alarm if only we are true to ourselves. The railways are not the only means of communication throughout this vast Dominion. We have our waterways, and I hope this parliament will make up its mind never to give up the absolute right of control over our waterways. American capital can buy the Canada Atlantic Railway ; American capital may perhaps one day try to buy the Canadian Pacific Railway; but American capital cannot buy the St. Lawrence River. American capital cannot buy our national heritage on the great lakes. It cannot buy the French River route, a map of which I have placed on the table. Of course, if we should hand over our waterways to private individuals, then American capitalists might buy the whole thing, and on that point I feel just as strongly as my hon. friend from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa).

I have just mentioned the French river route. This may not be the proper occasion to say much about that route, but it forms, in my humble opinion, such an important part of our national transportation problem, that I would crave the indulgence of the House while I briefly refer to it. Suppose that to-morrow the Canada Atlantic Railway should be purchased by Mr. Webb and his associates, what would they do with it ? Nobody knows. But no doubt if we equip the ports of Montreal and Quebec properly, these gentlemen may find it advantageous to send their trade by the Canadian route. That trade has no patriotism is a well known axiom, but nevertheless I agree with my hon. friend that if Mr. Webb and his associates are acting for the New York Central, it is not impossible that they may try to arrange a pool by which the New York route may be benefited at the expense of Montreal. However, the Canada Atlantic Railway is only one route and it has no western connections, which is another reason why it would have been unwise for this government to think of purchasing it. The Canada Atlantic is a mere summer road, and of course a local road, without any western connection whatever, whereas the Canadian Pacific Railway is a through Canadian road. I have heard people say that the Canadian Pacific Railway shares are not all held by Canadians. No doubt thousands of these shares are held in France, Germany, Belgium and elsewhere as well as in Canada. But it would be impossible for Mr. Hill and Mr. Morgan and others to buy Canadian Pacific Railway stock to such an extent as to control the road without the Canadian Pacific Railway directors' knowledge. That is out of the question. I was lectured by a Liberal paper, because, a few days ago, in Montreal, I ventured to say that perhaps the day might come when the Canadian government would be placed in the position of having to do what the English government did with the Suez Canal. I hope that day will never come. But speaking for myself I do not hesitate to say that if we ever should discover that Mr. Hill and Mr. Morgan and other American capitalists were taking hold of the Canadian Pacific Railway, our parliament would rise to the occasion and see that sufficient stock was bought by this very government to prevent such a deal. The Canadian nation cannot forget that we have invested both in money and lands $100,000,000 in the Canadian Pacific Railway. Sir, the Canadian Pacific Railway is so located that it will necessarily always be a Canadian railway. Well, in connection with that French river project, I say that with a very small expenditure of money we could easily, within two years give a navigable channel twenty feet deep from Georgian Bay to Lake Nipissing. The distance is only sixty-one miles and the elevation to overcome is only sixty-two feet. I have a complete plan of the work which it would be necessary to carry out in order to give twenty feet depth of navigation. When you have reached Lake Nipissing, you are only 360 miles from Montreal and 290 miles from Toronto. The Grand Trunk Railway is located on the south side of the lake at Callander, while the Canadian Pacific Railway is on the north side at North Bay. It has been said that, in taking the deep interest I do in that waterway, I am acting for the Canadian Pacific Railway. Sir, I am an upholder of the Canadian Pacific Railway because it is a Canadian railway under our control, and because it is a great trans-continental railway, fighting for the trans-continental trade, against five or six powerful American corporations. The Canadian Pacific Railway will undoubtedly benefit by the deepening of the French river, but how much more would the Canadian farmers benefit? I say without hesitation that in one year the farmers of the North-west would benefit to the extent of a couple of million dollars by the deepening of that river. The province of Ontario has a very deep interest in this project. We must not forget that Toronto is a great manufacturing centre, and is connected by the Grand Trunk with Lake Nipissing.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. What is the size of the locks ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Three locks would do the whole thing.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. What is the capacity of the boats that will go through them ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand that boats carrying 200,000 bushels of grain could navigate that highway. It is, a very deep river indeed—not a small stream but a powerful stream—100 feet deep and fifty deep, and there are only a few obstacles to overcome. There is no engineering difficulty. Between Montreal and North Bay the distance is 364 miles. Between Buffalo and New York by rail the distance is 445 miles. Or in round numbers we have about 350 miles in favour of the Canadian route.

I am told that this French river scheme would kill our canals. Well, we have this year, according to the figures given yesterday before the Winnipeg Board of Trade, in Manitoba and the North-west 65,000,000 bushels of wheat. We have only about nine or ten weeks during the fall to move our Canadian crop. How many boats would it take to carry 25,000,000 bushels of grain by the French river route. It would take a fleet of about twenty boats with a capacity of about 200,000 bushels each. Suppose that we have this year, as I said, 65,000,000 bushels of wheat, how much more may we expect to see growing in our North-west Territories within the next five or ten years ? If our expectations are realized, if our hopes are not deceived, people will settle there in large numbers. If that is so, Sir, we are not going beyond our depth in expressing the hope, the confident hope, that within ten years, we shall have a crop of 200,000,000 bushels of wheat there. As my hon. friend reminds me, Sir Charles Tupper made that prophecy a few years ago. His prophecy has not materialized up to this date. But, this year, we had 100,000,000 bushels of grain, of which 65,000,000 was wheat. I think I am not making a prophecy that will not materialize when I say that it is possible, not only possible, but it is to be expected, that within five or ten years, we shall have a crop of at least 100,000,000 bushels of wheat in our Northwest. I have estimated that it would require a fleet of twenty boats, carrying 200,000 bushels each to move a crop of 25,000,000 bushels by the French river route. This is on the basis of each boat making a trip a week. There would be plenty of trade left for our Canadian system of canals. I read in the Kingston 'News' a day or two ago that I was going to destroy that city if this French river scheme went through. Sir, there will be plenty of trade for the Canadian canal and for the French river route as well; there will be plenty of trade for all the ports and harbours on the lakes. That trade is going to-day to American ports—that cannot be denied. Perhaps that trade will go more and more to American ports if more Canadian railways fall into American hands. But, as I said at the opening of my remarks, the St. Lawrence river is our national property; and the Ottawa river and the French river are great national properties. When I speak of the project of improving the French river, I mean to convey the idea that it would be the beginning of that great national scheme of deepening the Ottawa river to connect it with the St. Lawrence river at Montreal. But that project would involve such a large expenditure of money that for to-day, I confine myself to the improvement of the French river. I have no data yet of the probable cost of the whole project from Georgian bay to Montreal. I am told that it is estimated to cost in the neighbourhood of one hundred millions. The Canadian government, the Canadian parliament, will not undertake such a vast expenditure of money now. But I think I am within reason, and I think I express the feeling of the large portion of the thinking business men of this country, when I speak as I do of the improvement of the French river. Of course, it must be well understood that I do not intend in any way to pledge the government to any project of that kind now. I am simply expressing the view that, as a member of the House, and even as a minister, I think I have a right to express.

Mr. CLARKE. If I may ask the minister a question I would like to ask if we are to understand him to say that, in the remarks he has just made, he does not pledge himself or the government to ask an appropriation this session to go on with the improvement of which he has just spoken.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no authority to pledge the House or my colleagues to an expenditure of that kind. I am dealing with the great transportation question and calling attention of the House and the country——

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). You are educating the government.

Hon. Mr. TARTE.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Perhaps not my hon. friend (Mr. Hughes, Victoria), but some men who have less time than some of the rest of us have——

Mr. CLARKE. May I be allowed to ask another question before I forget it? I am sure we are deeply indebted to the hon. minister for the information he has given us about the French river route and the advantages to be obtained from the improvements he suggests. I would like to know what is the distance from the termini of the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway to that particular part of the Georgian bay into which the French river empties?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a very small distance indeed. My hon. friend has only to look at the map on the table to see that. The Grand Trunk Railway is located at Calander, on the south side, and the Canadian Pacific Railway at North Bay on the other side. The distance is about three miles, and the two railways are, to-day, actually connected.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the distance from where the two railways meet to the point on the Georgian bay at which the French river empties?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The distance between Lake Nipissing and the Georgian bay is 61 miles.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Sixty-seven.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Sixty-one miles, navigable water nearly the whole way. The whole course of the river is nicely navigable, if I may speak that way. It is a very deep waterway indeed.

Mr. CLARKE. Has the hon. minister given us information or can he give us the information, as to whether there are any insuperable engineering difficulties in the way of having the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway build branch lines down that sixty-one miles to the great open water of Georgian bay, instead of committing the people of Canada to a large expenditure to improve the waterway of the French river?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not mean to say that I intend in any way to pledge the government to build a waterway. But I say, without any hesitation, that there are great engineering difficulties. But my hon. friend must not forget one thing—that large boats always seek to penetrate inland as far as they can. That is a law with which everybody is familar.

Mr. SPROULE. Would the hon. minister be good enough to tell us how much nearer he brings navigation to Montreal than at the point where the railways strike the Georgian bay—how much nearer the navigation to Montreal would be than the points the railways are on the Georgian bay and Montreal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have just stated that, between Montreal and North Bay the distance is 364 miles as against 445 miles between Buffalo and New York.

Mr. SPROULE. But what is the distance between Parry Sound and Montreal, and Midland and Montreal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The distance is about the same.

Mr. SPROULE. Then, you do not make much by the change.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) must not forget that Midland is a port reached by the Grand Trunk Railway, and that nearly all the Grand Trunk Railway freight from Midland to-day goes to American ports.

Mr. CLARKE. How about Owen Sound ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is a point a great deal further from Montreal, and, moreover, between North Bay and Montreal, the railway goes on a down grade. It is very difficult to-day for the Canadian Pacific Railway to carry grain, indeed almost impossible, because of the location of the railway. Now I ask the House not to lose sight of this fact, that up to this date, in spite of the fact that we have invested one hundred million dollars in the Canadian Pacific Railway, nearly all our Canadian crops are shipped through American ports. That fact cannot be disputed. There is a reason for it, and it is this: The Canadian Pacific Railway is located in such a way that it is too expensive to carry grain by rail from one point to another, in competition with American roads. I will say no more on this point.

Mr. BENNETT. Before the minister leaves that point, I would like to ask him a question. Boats carrying 200,000 bushels, which would be boats about 450 feet in length, would they go up to North Bay docks and Calander docks, or would they simply go to the west end of Lake Nipissing, and what would be the depth of water to be found in Lake Nipissing ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is deep water in the middle of Lake Nipissing. It would be necessary of course, to build accommodation there, as everywhere else. Now, Mr. Speaker, I see the difficulty. Every local interest and every harbour which thinks it might be hurt by that great national highway, rises up and says: Don't make that great improvement, but continue on in the old way, and let American boats take our Canadian trade. That is the whole difficulty in a few words. Well, Sir, we have reached Montreal. A great deal has been said about the port of Montreal lately. I am very sorry that my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) is not in his seat. He told us a day or two ago that we are wasting our time in Montreal, especially.

Mr. KEMP. With the permission of the Minister of Public Works may I ask him just one question ? It has been stated that the mouth of the French river on the Georgian Bay is sixty miles from North Bay. May I inquire from the Minister of Public Works how many miles from the mouth of the French river on the Georgian Bay is the Soo line of the Canadian Pacific Railway ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot answer that question at the moment. The figures could easily be made out, but I have not got them under my hand.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). May I ask the hon. minister a question ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I cannot allow any more interruptions on questions of detail, but I will be glad to answer any general question. A good deal has been said about the port of Montreal. Perhaps too much discussion has taken place, but I could not help it. The hon. member for Jacques Cartier said that we have lost a year in building elevators in Montreal. Now that the attention of the House has been called to that question, I will be glad to take the House into my confidence. I may say at the outset that no time has been lost at all. Last year parliament voted $1,000,000 for the equipment of a port at Montreal and to build elevators and so on. The harbour commissioners who were charged with the disposition of that money, subject of course to the approval of the government, did not ask for tenders before the month of September last. It would have been impossible for any contractor to lay down foundations in Montreal during the fall. Tenders were asked, but no specifications or plans had been prepared. Mr. Kennedy, the chief engineer of the harbour commissioners, had only prepared what he styled a statement of the requirements, showing in general terms that the harbour commissioners wanted an elevator with a capacity of 1,000,000 bushels. Five tenders were sent in, Every contractor sent in his tender according to his own plan. There was consequently no lowest and no highest tenderer, every one, as I said, tendered on his own plan. Among the tenders sent in was one from Mr. Jamieson. When the plans were presented for my approval I noticed at once that the last sentence of Mr. Kennedy's recommendation of acceptance to the harbour commissioners, mentioned a test of the strength of the whole structure. Now, Mr. Speaker, the plans were subject to my approval. I had been entrusted by this parliament with the duty of carefully expend-ing $1,000,000. In what position would I have been if I had blindly put my initials to such a qualified acceptance subject to a test of the strength of the whole structure ? I did what any other business man in this House, worthy of the name, would have done. I submitted the question of the strength of the structure to engineers. I chose two engineers of the Department of Public Works. I applied for advice to Mr. Vautelet, assistant engineer to the Canadian Pacific Railway. I may say that the reason I applied to him was because Mr. Vautelet is an expert in iron. He has studied in France, he was employed by the Canadian Pacific Railway, I may say, ten years ago. He is a Canadian, and one of the ablest men I know. Indeed he has prepared nearly all the plans for bridges in my department during the last ten years. The preparation of plans of iron bridges is a specialty with him, and I applied to him for advice. A test was made, and it was found that the structure was altogether deficient. I may say here to those who have experience that they made the concrete columns carry 86 tons per cubic foot, whereas concrete cannot carry more than 15 tons. Well, I could not approve of those plans. I have nothing against Mr. Jamieson whatever, very far from it. I would have only been too glad to give him, as a Canadian, my approval of his plans. Now the bins were of a new kind altogether. They were to be of corrugated iron instead of being flat sheets. In the United States there is only one elevator built with square bins, all the others in the United States are round bin elevators.

I would not venture to say that square bin elevators are no good, but there is one which has been built by Mr. Hill. Mr. Hill has able engineers at his command. All the same, Sir, his elevator is so weak, or deficient, that at this very moment engineers are engaged in the task of strengthening it. Instead of using riveting in his plan, Mr. Jamieson was using slids. Corrugated iron was too weak. Mr. Jamieson recognized that it was necessary to change his plans. He is now preparing new plans and if they agree with recognized principles I will be only too glad to say amen. I have nothing to say against the harbour commissioners, but I must call the attention of the House and the country to the state of affairs that has lasted so long in Montreal. I see in front of me hon. gentlemen who have been members of governments in the past. They know very well that they could never agree with the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal. I am not the first minister of the Crown who has not been able to agree all the time with them. The great difficulty is that there are eleven of them. In the government we are eleven or twelve, but we have the same interest in view. We are representing the same interest, the interest of the country. Now, the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal are divided into groups representing different interests. You see, for instance, the shipping interest. The shipping interest has been representing so far all the lines of steamers. For the last fifteen years they have been discussing improvement. They had done nothing until we took office. Why was it ? I will say it ; because some of the old lines had every possible interest in not having competition. They did not want improvement. They had the port of Montreal for themselves alone. Well, representing the government of the country for the time being, I made up my mind that I would not be ruled by private interests. I had a great deal of trouble. It will come out all right because the country cannot fail to understand that this government has no personal interest in the matter. What did I receive a few days ago ? A public document from the shipping companies in Montreal in which they asked us to give exclusively to the lines that are coming to the port now the right to all the wharfs that are built in Montreal at the present time. They are coolly asking us to do that, to exclude tramp boats and every other boat that will be coming to Montreal. Some of the very same men a couple of years ago were denouncing, and are still denouncing, me because I have obtained from the House and from my colleagues money to carry out improvements in another part of the port of Montreal. They would take all the existing wharfs, all the wharfs that we are building now and they would exclude everybody else. They do not recognize that this country is going on. They decline to agree that they are not the only people living in the country and having interests in it. I do not blame them but I am obliged not to agree with them. Well, Sir, the port of Montreal is being equipped. The St. Lawrence river is being deepened and widened. I have said elsewhere and I say here again, that within two years there will be thirty feet of water between the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the port of Montreal. Between Quebec and Montreal there are about fifty miles of dredging to be done. There are 18 miles of this 50 which we have dredged now. With the powerful dredge that has been built in Toronto it will take about two years to dredge Lake St. Peter to a depth of thirty feet and to a width of 500 feet, and there will then remain only 14 or 15 miles to complete that great national waterway between Quebec and Montreal. I say without hesitation that the ports of Montreal, Three Rivers and Quebec should be equipped without any delay if we want to take advantage of the immense trade that is in store for us. I know that perhaps it will be said that it will involve a large expenditure of money. I do not say no. I do not say that parliament is bound to go on without any delay whatever with these large improvements, but when I call the attention of the House and the country to these improvements it is in answer to those who despair of the future. I do not cheer too much when I see Canadian railways falling into the hands of American capitalists, but I say that our waterways are of such importance, are such a guarantee that after all we have not much to fear. The hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) has said that his motto is 'Canada for the Canadians'. He does not want the terminals of our great waterways and railways to fall into the hands of foreigners. Well, there is a way of keeping our national highways. It is to equip them ourselves and we are doing it and doing it rapidly too. We are equipping harbours on the great lakes, we are equipping Owen Sound, Midland, Depot Harbour, Collingwood, Meaford and the harbour of Port Colborne. Now, Sir, I ask once more, how can we expect trade to come to the Welland canal and to the Canadian system of canals when we remember that at Port Colborne, at the entrance of our Canadian sytem of canals, we have not the shadow of a harbour ? It is not creditable but it is true. There is Buffalo on the south side with its magnificent harbour works, with its fifty elevators, and twenty miles on the north side of Lake Erie is Port Colborne, the entrance to the most superb system of canals in the world, with no habour accommodation, and without any place for a ship to anchor in. How, under these circumstances can we expect trade to come to the Canadian system of canals? We are now equipping Port Colborne. Harbour works are now going on both in my department and in the Department of Railways and Canals. They will cost money but they will bring trade to the Canadian nation. In connection with our equipment on the lakes, will you permit me to say that the last century has been as this century is a century of equipment and organization. If a manufacturer wants to secure trade and to produce cheaply he equips himself in the best way possible. The nations to-day are great shops if I may speak in that way. We have such magnificent possibilities in this country that, if you will permit me to use a vulgar expression, we must equip our shop.

Amongst that equipment is included the harbour improvements, and the possession of Canadian bottoms on the great lakes. We have not to-day enough Canadian vessels on our inland waters to meet the requirements of the work we are carrying out, but thanks to the hopeful feeling which is prevailing over the land, new ships are being built every day. As to harbour improvements, look at what has taken place at Collingwood. The harbour was not deep enough and the government made it deeper, and the result has been the building of a large shipyard at Collingwood. There are two splendid shipyards in Toronto. We are building ships and I hope we will build more. I have on many occasions expressed the idea that perhaps if I were simply a member of parliament I might speak more freely. Nevertheless I fell confident that when a minister expresses his views on broad questions, he does not bind his colleagues in any way. May I be allowed to express the idea that perhaps it would be a good Canadian national policy to manage our affairs in such a way that we would have more Canadian ships built immediately. We have been giving bonuses to iron industries, and as a result we have splendid iron foundries.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, we see great industries growing up on Canadian territory. We have the raw material to build the ships ; we have the men to build the ships ; we have the ability to build the ships and why should we not try our hands at it. I feel more Canadian every day that I know my country better.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I repeat that the more I know my country the more I love Canada and the more confidence I have in our future. Is it not a fact that very few Canadians know Canada thoroughly. We have travelled in Germany, in France and in England, but there are many able men even in this parliament who have never paid a visit to the Georgian Bay.

Mr. COCHRANE. We have no special cars to travel around in.

Mr. McISAAC. You have passes.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Private cars form a necessary part of the equipment of any minister who wants to work. I would rather travel in an ordinary car any day of my life than travel in the modest private car I have and which does not cost anything to this country of ours. I repeat that we do not know this country as we should. If members of parliament, if members of the press, if our manufacturers and business men knew Canada better they would do more to develop it. We have the resources and I say we have the money. We have plenty of it, and we are having more and more every day since this country has been governed as it is at present. I do not know what the feeling of the House is, but I feel confident that on both sides there is a unanimity of opinion that the time has come when we must face the music. Our American neighbours are making very great efforts indeed to capture the trade of this continent. They have formed wonderful combines in railways and in industries in general. They are forming combines on the high seas, and if we in Canada do not move on and improve our waterways and our railways, we will be simply licked out of our boots. When trade has taken certain channels it is very difficult indeed to divert it from those channels and it should be our aim to keep all the trade we have and seek for more.

My hon. friend from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) has alluded to the coming visit of the Prime Minister to England, and he has expressed the hope that he will be informed of the object of that visit. Well, I think we know all about it. The Prime Minister has been invited to the Coronation of the King. I am not too strong an Imperialist. I am a loyal citizen but I do not desire any change in the condition of this country. We are a very happy people, I think. We have only to agree between ourselves, French Canadians, English Canadians and Irish Canadians to get along very nicely. We are happy as we are and I think there are not many people who believe that the Prime Minister and his colleagues who will go with him to England will change the constitution of this country. We will remain as we are, happy to form part of the British empire and a great empire it is. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Bourassa) has expressed the opinion of the French Canadians when he said that we were as strongly against annexation as it is possible to be. The French Canadians are not so foolish as not to understand that they are better off to-day than they would be in that great American Republic, and what I say of the French Canadians applies to the English Canadians. We are better off as we are; let us stay as we are. We know where we are now, but we do not know where we would be on the other side of the line. The Prime Minister will represent this country at the Coronation with the same dignity and honour as on former occasions, and my hon. friend (Mr. Bourassa) may rest assured that the presence of the right hon. gentleman will not be fraught with any danger to Canada. The government is doing their duty towards themselves and towards the empire in attending the Coronation ceremonies. I, for one, am strongly in favour of the British tie. I do not know what Providence has in store for this young Canadian nation. We are ambitious, but we are better to-day under the protection of the British flag than we would be even if we were independent. I am sure that the House is greatly indebted to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bourassa) for having brought up this question and before taking my seat I will ask him again, whether he thinks there will be any good object attained by pressing this motion. His desire has simply been to call the attention of the House to a large and important question. Having done so, I again ask him whether it would not be wise for him to withdraw his motion.

Mr. E. F. CLARKE (West Toronto). I want to ask the hon. Minister of Public Works if he will supply the members of the House with paper copies of this map, and also with tables of the distances, and such information as will be necessary to enable them to give an intelligent and broad discussion of this scheme when it comes before parliament?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say that two maps have been prepared under my care. One of them has been distributed already to a certain number of members of the House. To-morrow morning I hope to be able to have another supply of them, and in a day or two we shall have one hundred copies of them on canvas for distribution among the members. The hon. gentleman will find on that map all the tables of distances he desires to have.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (South Lanark). Mr. Speaker, I am aware that in the discussion on the address the widest possible latitude is allowed to speakers. They can speak on anything, even on subjects, such as transportation and education, which may not be referred to in the address at all; and we had a dissertation on the loyalty of my hon. friend opposite and his friends in lower Canada. It is not my intention to say anything in reference to the address. I do not know but that I might be restricted by you, Mr. Speaker, to the amendment which is at present being discussed.

I listened to the remarks of the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa). I expected him to state some grievances at present existing in the country which required to be remedied, and to state the remedy he proposed for them. If I understand the object of his amendment, it is that in view of the large expenditure which has been incurred in this country from time to time on railway enterprises, some policy should be stated by the government in reference to those railways. I do not know what policy they could state. Is it a policy of assumption of the railways, as the hon. member hinted?—because he remarked that government ownership of railways existed in France and some other countries. If he was prepared for government ownership, then he ought to state the reasons why the railways should be taken out of the hands they are in at present, and placed in the hands of the government. Towards the close of his speech, without stating any particular grievance that he had against the railways at present, or any particular objection to any of our railways passing into the hands of foreign corporations, I understood him to suggest that a commission should be appointed for the purpose of inquiring into the state of our railways at present and what arrangements ought probably to be made by the government in reference to them? Now, I may state that the railways of this country are under government control—that the government can legislate in any direction it pleases in reference to them. The railway system which we have at present in this country is partly a government system; and if any fault is to be found with the railroads or their rates, the charge may be reasonably made against the government of the country that the management of these railways is not what it ought to be. I am aware that under the contract we have made with the Canadian Pacific Railway that railway is perhaps removed from that category; but with regard to our railways generally, Canada is in the same position as England. We have provided in the charters which we have granted to some railway companies, notably the Grand Trunk Railway, the means and the amount we have to pay if it should be necessary at any time to assume ownership of them. We can at any time assume them and regulate the rates, or do anything we like with reference to them. The danger seems to be that these roads which have been built for the development of this country may pass under foreign control.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Sir Richard Cartwright). May I ask the hon. gentleman a question? I think he stated just now that in the charter granted to the Grand Trunk Railway Company there was contained power to repurchase.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Yes, it decides the manner in which we can assume the road.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. I am rather inclined to think that was abrogated afterwards.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. No, it is in the Grand Trunk charter now, and it only follows the English charters.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. But the hon. gentleman will remember that a great many alterations were made in that, and I think that at the time the company issued the subsequent portion of its bonds, that particular provision was abrogated.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. At any rate, the British North America Act gives us power at any time to take possession of the road, even if it is not provided in the charter. The danger at the present moment arises from some foreign corporation getting control of a railway in this country and using it, not for the benefit of this country, but for foreign purposes—notably the Canada Atlantic Railway, which is alleged to have been purchased by the New York Central. It is impossible to prevent people in any country from taking stock in an enterprise in any other country. It would be contrary to the policy of this country or of any other country to prevent foreigners taking stock in any enterprises whatever. What we have to do is to maintain control over the corporations themselves, and to see that no corporation which has its initiation or entity in a foreign country comes in and obtains control over franchises in this country. I tried to guard against that while I was Minister of Railways; and when the present Minister of Railways introduced a bill nominally in the interest of the Grand Trunk Railway, but in reality for the purpose of giving the Vermont Central Railway Company, a foreign corporation virtually owned by the Grand Trunk, but deriving its entity and powers from a foreign country, possession of a railway in this country, I pointed out to him the danger. I pointed out the same danger in the case of a foreign railway company obtaining control of the international bridge near Buffalo. The invariable answer to me was that they come under our Railway Act and under the power we have from time to time to alter our law in reference to railways. We cannot do that where a foreign corporation, perhaps backed up by the government of a foreign country, alleges that we are interfering unnecessarily with the working of the road, or with its earnings, or perhaps sequestrating its property. It could say to us, these people in good faith, under corporate powers, obtained possession of a railway in your country, and you must act in good faith towards that corporation in any legislation you adopt with reference to it.

The giving of corporate powers to foreigners will have the same effect as follows the granting in China or Asia Minor or other countries of concessions to foreigners. It enables these people to appeal to their own government to see that the rights granted to them are respected. But if we only give these franchises to corporations of our own creation, we can legislate regarding these corporations in any direction we like in the interests of the people. I do not see any danger or menace at present in the acquiring by any foreign corporation of any railway in this country, but if the necessity should ever arise, we can always legislate to compel railway companies to carry freight on the same terms for the people of this country as for the people of any other country. We can say to them: If you carry freight from Chicago to the seaboard and use for that purpose railways we have subsidized, you must not discriminate against the products of the people of this country.

Mr. MACLEAN. Why do we not do that now?

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Is there any thing shown to-day which renders this necessary? It is time enough to do this when circumstances arise that require it, when there is a necessity for it. But no such necessity exists to-day.

As the hon. the Minister of Public Works says, a considerable portion of our products are shipped from a foreign country. What we require to do is to develop our national resources, utilize the waterways which Providence has given us, and then we need not fear competition from any other country in the world.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Hear, hear.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. And I am glad to see the Minister of Public Works take the stand he does. I intend later on speaking more freely upon this subject; but with reference to the building of this waterway to Lake Nipissing, I understand that the hon. minister intends to go on with this work if he can persuade his colleagues to support him. He is perhaps only feeling the opinion of the House to-day and he certainly will have my support in this undertaking. I spoke fully upon the subject last session and am fully committed to it. I welcome this suggestion of the hon. minister as the entering wedge of a scheme which I fairly believe will do more for the development of this country than any other I have heard broached during the past twenty years. And I will be glad if the Minister of Public Works has sufficient influence on his colleagues to have that portion from Georgian Bay to North Bay completed of what I call the Georgian Bay canal. When you have it built to Georgian Bay, the rest will soon follow. The interests of the people of this country, the development of our immense resources, will compel, no matter what government is in office, to finish the work from Lake Nipissing down to Montreal. I believe that this is a most magnificent scheme, the initiation of which is proposed by the Minister of Public Works. What the hon. minister proposes is only the initiation of the main scheme. What he proposes is the building of that small portion, sixty-two miles from Georgian Bay to Lake Nipissing, with a lift of sixty-one feet. That ought to cost—

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Inside of $5,000,000.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART.—It will not cost that. It ought to be built for about $3,000,000. And I congratulate the hon. gentleman on having the boldness to state his views. I think we might take his speech almost as a ministerial announcement that if the feeling of the House is at all favourable, the hon. minister will have his way and that portion will be built. I congratulate the hon. minister upon his support of an enterprise which I believe will be of greater benefit to the country than anything else we can at present think of.

At six o'clock, the House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. JABEL ROBINSON (West Elgin). Mr. Speaker, I rose to speak this afternoon as you left the Chair. I rose with the belief that the subject before the House was exhausted, and it was about time this debate was brought to a close, so far as the hon. members on either side in this House were concerned. But, knowing that there are a large number of independent men in the House on both sides, I consider it my duty to speak for them. Hon. members on this side who have discussed the King's speech, complained of the meagerness and smallness of the programme. Of course, when one has nothing to say, and not much time to say it in, you do not expect much from him. I suppose that is why the King thought proper to say so little in his speech. It seems that there is not much to do this session, so we could not expect the government to put forward a very long programme. I am sorry the Prime Minister is not in his place——

Mr. MACLEAN. Move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. ROBINSON (West Elgin). I am not like the hon. member for East York (Mr. Maclean)—I have no advice to give the Prime Minister. But I wish to say, that if the bill of fare is very small, possibly there is a reason for it. I remember reading a speech made by the Prime Minister at the Industrial exhibition at Toronto. If he is rightly reported, the right hon. gentleman stated that he himself had become a Conservative. I am not exactly certain whether that is so or not. He further said that he did not consider that a great deal of reform is now necessary in this country, the reforms that were necessary having been brought about. If that be so, the present government have accomplished wonders, in five or six years, because when they sat on this side of the House, everything was wrong. I am about as well pleased if the Prime Minister did turn Conservative. I know from experience that, as people grow older they grow more Conservative in their ideas. Some of you Radicals well know that if you had been able to carry out the ideas you had in your youth, dire calamity would have followed. So I can well understand that the Prime Minister could see that, if he had carried out some of his ideas it would have been a sorry thing for Canada. But when the right hon. gentleman says that there is little more to reform, I take issue with him. I know well that when the members of the government sat on this side of the House, they agitated for reforms that have not been carried out—and, what is more, they have made no attempt to carry them out. Why, according to these hon. gentlemen the Senate was in such terrible state that it needed reforming, if not abolishment. But now we find that some of the men who pronounced the Senate a set of old grannies of no earthly use are breaking their necks, almost, to secure appointment as members of the Senate. Then, we know that taxation in this country is not what it ought to be. We know that a comparatively poor man, for instance, a farmer or a labouring man with a large family, must buy a considerable quantity of dutiable goods and so may be compelled to contribute more to the revenue than many another man who is a millionaire. Some steps should be taken by this government who profess to be reformers to mend this matter. And it seems to me that it would be easy to do it.

Mr. ROSS (Victoria). How ?

Mr. ROBINSON (West Elgin). I am satisfied that there is not a gentleman in this House but has been properly brought up; and any gentleman who has been properly brought up will keep quiet till I am through. I do not intend to discuss the amendment before the House, because, if I did, I might do as some of those who have discussed it this afternoon have done, even the mover—I might wander all over creation and finish up in the Georgian Bay canal. Referring to the first paragraph of the speech, the government may well be thankful to Providence for the bounties showered upon the country. I suppose the government will hardly claim credit for the great crop in the North-west, if they do, they might as well take the responsibility for the Chinch bug, the Hessian fly and the failure of the pollen of the apple trees to be so distributed as to assure a crop. We are all thankful to Providence, but, so far as the Speech from the Throne is concerned, the government might as well have left that paragraph out. What the government should do is to stimulate every man to industry, for it is the industrious man, the tiller of the soil, the man at the anvil and other toilers who build up a country—not the government. Governments can do but little. Of course, they can make some men rich, as they are doing; and they can make a great many of us poor by over taxation and by not distributing taxation in the proper way. However, I suppose we shall be able to discuss that subject during the Budget debate. The next paragraph is in regard to the visit of the present Prince and Princess of Wales, then the Duke and Duchess of York. I had the honour to ask the Prime Minister last spring if a programme would be prepared so that we working people might know where to meet our Royal visitors. We met them at different points of the Dominion, and I was proud to see the grand reception accorded them by the people, a reception that will redound to our credit throughout the British Empire, as their visit will assist us in many ways, and not least by helping to build up the country and add to its wealth. The next paragraph tells us of the assassination of President Lincoln——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). Well, we always allow an Irishman to speak twice. Unfortunately for me in this case I am not an Irishman. I have had the pleasure of shaking hands with Mr. McKinley ; perhaps some of you who have had that honour did not confer any credit on Mr. McKinley. However, that was just a slip of the tongue—you all know who I mean. Now there is not a person in the Dominion of Canada who did not deplore that act. I am sure that anything this government could do, anything the people of Canada could do, to prevent anything like that occurring again, they would be only too pleased to do it. I think, perhaps, it will not only be a warning to us but it will be a warning to all civilized people to look more closely after men who are disposed to do such things.

The next paragraph, I see, deals with the census. Now I am sorry there are not some other members of the Cabinet in their seats because I would like to speak about them. I don't think the country will believe some of the bachelors in the Cabinet when they complain so much that Canada is not more populous than it is. There are some others besides bachelors in the Cabinet and in the House too, who perhaps don't like that very well. At the same time I think one good, first class, home-bred well bred Canadian, is worth half a dozen Doukhobors or Galicians. I think there are people who are not discharging their duty to the country as they should, they are not doing what they ought for this Canada of ours. Now that may be a subject some of you do not approve of, but it is the basis of our prosperity ; if not, why do we wail so much at the poor showing of our census ?

The next paragraph is in regard to Mr. Marconi. It is not necessary for me to say anything about the great Italian who is about to send messages through the air and talk between Great Britain and Canada without any wires. I think the government was justified in encouraging Mr. Marconi and every other man of talents and abilities to come to Canada. Therefore I think the government is justified in doing their utmost in giving him encouragement.

The next paragraph is in regard to exhibitions. I am sorry the Minister of Agriculture is not in his place. But I can talk to him another day. The Minister of Agriculture and I ought to be particular friends, because we are working at the same job. I did not have the pleasure of visiting the Glasgow exhibition, nor the Paris exhibition ; but I had the pleasure of going to the Pan-American on two occasions. I was very much pleased with the exhibit Canada made there ; in fact in every department in which this country took part, she did so with credit to herself. I was much pleased with the Canadian exhibit, in fact every exhibit sent from the Dominion was a credit to us. I had the honour of speaking at that exhibition before 3,000 people, and you may be sure that I held up the Canadian end of the argument, and a number of Americans there who were quite qualified to judge of these matters said they had no idea that Canada could produce any such thing. One gentleman on the grounds told me that he wondered how it was I had come all the way from Canada to the Pan-American, and I told him that I could almost throw a stone from there into our country. He seemed quite surprised. So you see I was not the only ignoramus who was there. I told them that I would never suspect I had not a Canadian audience before me when I saw the well dressed people and their good behaviour I was pretty sure that I had a Canadian audience before me. But when I told them that in Ontario, in Upper Canada, as it was then, when the first legislature met within 30 miles of where we were standing, the first law that was placed on the statute-book by that legislature was that no man should be permitted to own another man, then I got no cheers there, nor here either. But they did not see the point, and you do not. It took them a hundred years to reach the point that our forefathers reached at Newark. So you see Canada has always been in the vanguard of civilization, of liberty, of freedom and of justice. Now, Sir, I think that is enough. I could go on and tell you of many other things I said that might redound to my credit at that Pan-American, but I think that is enough.

Next, in regard to the revenue of this country. I am sure that every man on this side of the House and on the other side are only too pleased to learn that this country is prosperous. When the revenue is not raised from the proper sources then we have a right to complain. It is easy enough for this government to raise a revenue if they please, if they put the taxes high enough they can raise a high revenue. But the people of this country should not be taxed to death. The government should be economical in the management of this country, and take the taxes off the people as much as possible. So we need not boast so much about revenue, because it is easy for this government to raise a revenue. If I was Prime Minister of this country and had a large following at my back, if I had a large brute majority behind me, I could do as I pleased. I could get the revenue from whatever source I pleased. What I want is that the revenue shall be derived from the proper source. The next subject dealt with in the Speech from the Throne is the increase of market facilities. I am sure that on both sides of the House we are only too pleased to learn that we have established markets all over the civilized world where Canadian products are used. What we want is an open market. There is one little kingdom that is always ready to grant us an open market for everything we produce in Canada ; yet some hon. gentleman over here do not appreciate it. If I were asked to give the government advice like my hon. friend for East York (Mr. Maclean) I would give it different advice from that which the hon. gentleman gives it. I should ask the Prime Minister to take 40 per cent off the tariff on English goods instead of the 33⅓ per cent now allowed. I should also ask him to endeavour to have the embargo removed from our cattle. That is about the only embargo that we now have against our exports to Great Britain. I think that the proposition to send fast vessels to Europe and to Great Britain, if carried out, will be of very great assistance to us and I take issue with some of those hon. gentlemen who have argued here to-day that it would be an injury to Canada to have a fast steamship line runinng to the Cape. I feel confident that the Cape of Good Hope, and in fact the whole of South Africa, will some day be as we are in Canada, under one flag and one government, and when that result is achieved I am sure a great trade will be established between Canada and that country. I hope, in fact, I feel pretty sure, that there is spirit and enterprise and adventure enough in our young Canadian men to seek homes in that sunny clime, and wherever our Canadian boys go they are almost sure to be a credit to us. I think if a large number went to South Africa it would be well for us. We can raise more boys and import more. Let our young men go to the gold fields and become rich as some of them have already done.

The next subject which I find, and I have to take them up seriatim, is the invitation of the right hon. gentleman to attend the coronation. I would like to be a minister for a while. I had the honour myself of being present at the Queen's jubilee in 1887 and I would like to go to the King's Coronation in 1902. I do not expect I shall be able to have sufficient means to enable me to go. It will be one of the grandest jubilations that ever took place in Great Britain and I am sure that the representative of Canada will do justice to our country. I am sure the right hon. Prime Minister will bring the questions to be discussed at the conference to be held in London before the great men from the colonies in an able manner, and I feel confident that our representative will be no disgrace to Canada. The right hon. gentleman has represented us upon a former occasion. The Prime Minister was sent to Great Britain in 1897 by this government and we all know—since he is not here I may say a little more about him than I otherwise would—that his sunny ways won the favour of all parties in England. He was placed in the front rank of the procession and we know that he did great credit to us. I would not care if he had been the biggest Tory under heaven, if he had done as well as he did. He is a Frenchman and he showed to the world that he represented 2,000,000 Frenchmen living under the British flag and that they enjoyed that glorious freedom and liberty which is dealt out to all classes of the people, high and low, rich and poor, of whatever nationality, creed or colour, showing that all are welcome in this Dominion and in the British Empire, if they behave themselves. I was pleased to know that the right hon. gentleman was enabled to show to the people of Europe that a statesman of French origin could speak in such terms of that glorious flag which has made the whole world bow in obedience to it. I hope that the Prime Minister, when he goes to England this summer, will be able to speak in similar terms of the flag and the institutions under which we live and hope that the men who go there to back him up will be no disgrace to him or us. We heard a good deal of discussion this afternoon in regard to the railway question, but I do not think it would be proper for me to take part in that discussion because it was irrelevant to the question. I agree with the idea expressed by the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) that the government should take some steps to bring about an improvement in the management of the railways in Canada. I do not remember exactly the words which were used by the hon. gentleman, but what I would do is this : I would advise the government, and I see there is one member of the government present, and he can tell the rest—I would tell the government—

An hon. MEMBER. There are two.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). Beg pardon—two. I would tell them, and I want them to take this matter introduced by the hon. member for Labelle, into their serious consideration, that they should appoint, at this session, twenty-five of the brainiest men on both sides of this House to meet together in solemn conclave and take up this question of railways, their ownership and management, and consider how railways can be best managed for the good of the people of this country. I would like to have a committee appointed of not less than twenty-five of the best men. They are not all in the cabinet. Now, gentlemen, I am afraid you laugh, but I mean what I say.

Mr. SPEAKER. I would ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. Robinson, Elgin) not to forget that he should address the Chair.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). I beg pardon, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman is making a mistake in addressing members of the House and not the Chair.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). If I have made a mistake, I am quite willing to have it corrected at once. I did not intend to do it. What was the mistake ?

Mr. SPEAKER. There is a rule of the House, which says, that an hon. member addressing the House, should address the Chair and not address the members present.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). Well, I have mentioned the word ' Speaker ' half a dozen times to-night. If I have not done it sufficiently, I apologize. Now, I think I have exhausted the subject. I have spoken half an hour and that is as long as I usually speak. I thank the House very much for the courtesy it has extended to me and I hope I will not bore the House much more this session.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (East York). Mr. Speaker, just for a few moments I wish to take up the time of the House in discussing the amendment made by the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) and also to ask the attention of the House to the serious condition of affairs that now faces Canada in connection with the question raised by that hon. gentleman. We had, this afternoon, a deliverance from the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) and what he said to the House I do not quite know. He did not speak for himself; perhaps he spoke for the constraint in which he is at present by reason of his association with the government. I believe that if the Minister of Public Works could express his own mind he would express a fear of the present situation. I believe he would express a fear of our railways passing into the hands of American corporations, and that he would if he could stir up his colleagues in order to save the situation. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Tarte) took occasion this afternoon to bring forward the French river navigation project, and he brought it forward in such a way that he did not endorse it, nor did he say that the government was committed to it. Why he submitted the scheme to us I cannot quite tell. His argument was, that if our railroads are to be taken over by the Americans, then we have the system of canal navigation to fall back upon.

Mr. CLARKE. And the canal is not built.

Mr. MACLEAN. The canal is not built. The hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Tarte) did not answer the issue raised by the hon. gentleman from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa), but, on the contrary, he evaded it. He gave the House no information, and he is not here to-night to give the House information. In reference to the Canada Atlantic Railway, the minister argued that the railways are no necessary part of the transportation system. He held that our whole dependence was on the canals, and then he launched his French river scheme. I was reminded of something that took place in this House last session, and, in all seriousness, I want to direct the attention of the House to that incident. There was a document circulated in this House, addressed to the Prime Minister and to the Governor in Council, and the sum and substance of it was that the members of the House of Commons, having in view the solution of the transportation problem, petitioned the Governor in Council, and petitioned the Prime Minister, to commit the credit of Canada for $65,000,000, to be placed in the hands of a private corporation for the construction of the French river and the Ottawa ship canals. I would like that the members of this House who signed this document should stand up here to-night and justify it. And yet when that document was in my hands it was signed by 80 per cent of the members. There was another statement in that document to the effect that the signers would not regard the question as a political one. Well, sir, no member of this House can commit me to any such statement. No member of this House can commit me to the principle of giving $65,000,000 of the people's money to a private corporation. The administration that gives this money must take the responsibility for doing so, and those who sit opposite the administration are bound to oppose it. I challenge any of the men who signed that document to stand up here and to declare that they have committed me or committed the Conservative party to any such policy as that. I believe that the Minister of Public Works was in league with it. I believe he was willing to pledge the credit of this country to the tune of $65,000,000, to be given to a private corporation which was to own and to control the navigation of the French river and the Ottawa river. I regret to say that three-fourths of the members on the other side of the House and three-fourths of the members on this side signed that document, and I call on the Prime Minister now, and I call on the Minister of Public Works, to produce the document and let us know what the meaning of it is.

Mr. KEMP. Move for a return.

Mr. MACLEAN. I will move later on for the production of that document. The Minister of Public Works this afternoon relied on that canal project for the solution of the transportation problem, and he has been a party to the circulation of that document in the House. If that be so, what is the significance of his proposition that we should rely on the canals to solve the transportation question. The minister told us that the Canada Atlantic Railway was not an essential part of the transportation system. I call on the members from the maritime provinces to consider that. This government committed itself to the extension of the Intercolonial Railway from Quebec to Montreal, and that was done in view of solving the transportation question. If they were justified, as they claimed, in extending the Intercolonial Railway to Montreal, they were justified in extending that system to the great lakes. They cannot justify their deal with the Grand Trunk Railway if it did not mean to put the Intercolonial Railway in touch with the great lakes and in touch with the traffic of the great west. If the maritime members have confidence in the government railway, if they have confidence in its extension to Montreal, they are the men who should stand up here to-night and urge upon the government the extension of the road to the Georgian Bay.

Mr. CLARKE. What did it cost to bring it to Montreal?

Mr. MACLEAN. I cannot give the cost at the moment, but I do say that the Intercolonial Railway is only at the beginning of traffic when it stops at Montreal. Its terminus ought to be on the Georgian Bay, and I go further and say that its terminus should be at the Niagara river and the Detroit river.

Mr. COWAN. What would that cost ?

Mr. MACLEAN. No matter what it would cost. If it proves to be the true solution of the transportation problem it will cost little compared with the advantages it will afford. If the government were in earnest, and if they were up to date, they would solve the question. It is not the money you put in the railways that counts; it is the traffic tolls that carry on the railways, and the people pay them. As I said last session, I repeat now : the government can take over the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway on an agreement to pay $1 a year rental and assume the liabilities. There is no great financial proposition involved, because, as I have said, it is the traffic that carries on the railroads, and not the people who put the capital in them. I do not agree with the Minister of Public Works that our canal system is the sole hope of the country. I say that the railroads are the complements of the canals, and if you are going to solve the transportation problem and are in earnest about it, you must take over the railways as well as the canals. The two go together. In view of the competition in the United States, in view of the acquisitive character of the people of that country, in view of the way in which the railway corporations of the United States are grabbing our railroads, there is no solution of the problem, there is no hope for a Canadian nationality, unless the people of Canada control the railways as well as the canals. Some gentlemen may say that there is nothing much in this contention, just as the Prime Minister says he is not afraid of the situation. But my opinion, supported by that of a great many experienced men, is that we must own the railways as well as the canals, and that if we are true to our country, we ought to have courage to take both under our control. If we had the courage to do what France and other nations have done, what would be the result? What would happen to-day if the whole Canadian transportation system was taken over by the state and put into the hands of an administrator like Mr. Hays of the Grand Trunk Railway. In the first place, the whole system would be run at a much less cost, and we would have ten times the efficiency.

Once the state took over all these single track roads, they would be immediately converted into double-track, treble-track or quadruple-track systems. That means a great deal in the organization and efficiency of a railway and in the way of reduction of the cost of maintenance. One man or one body could administer the whole Canadian system of railways at one-half the cost at which it is administered now, with ten times the efficiency and at one-fourth the rates that now prevail. There is no other way of solving this problem. Of course, the plan is to bring forward one navigation scheme or one railroad scheme after another and have them bonused by this House; and we are told that this scheme or that scheme is going to save the country. But not one of them has done it yet, nor will it be done until the two systems of rail and water communication are bound together, and the Canadian people have the courage to own and control them for themselves. The Prime Minister to-day applauded the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals when he said that Canadians had no grievances against the railways running across Canada to-day. Haven't we? Where is the hon. member for North Perth (Mr. MacLaren)? The other day the hon. gentleman, in addressing the dairy interests of Ontario, showed that the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway were charging more for carrying the dairy products of Ontario than they charge for carrying the dairy products of the western states through Canada. There is a grievance. The ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Haggart), says the government ought to correct it if it is wrong, and the Premier echoed his remark. But they are not doing it, and these railroads which we have subsidized so largely are actually discriminating against Canadians and against Canadian ports. The great Grand Trunk, to which we have given so much money, is building up Portland, and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have told us that they will go to Boston if they are not given certain terms. If that is the condition of affairs in this country, it is high time that the Canadian people rose to the situation and took over these railroads and administered them in the interest of Canada. Mr. Speaker, it must come to that, and I thought the hon. Minister of Public Works, when he spoke this afternoon, would go in that direction; but he chose simply to bring forward another scheme entailing a great expenditure of some $65,000,000, as a means of saving the country in regard to transportation.

Now, I am here to protest against any more expenditure on behalf of private corporations in connection with the transportation problem, and I want some member of the government this evening to answer me in regard to the proposal to commit the credit of this country to the expenditure of $65,000,000 to enable a private corporation to take over the Ottawa and Georgian Bay Ship canal project. The question must be answered. When I saw that document at the close of last session I tried to get an answer. I was too late then; but we must have the answer now when the Minister of Public Works comes forward and tells us that the salvation of the country lies in this proposition—and I believe that he is in league with a private corporation to take over that proposition.

This Canada Atlantic Railway, of which we have heard so much to-night, would have been a first-class investment for this country to have taken over and made a portion of the Intercolonial. The Prime Minister says that it could not be done; the Minister of Public Works says that it could not be done. Why could it not be done? If they could take over certain little railways in the province of Quebec and bind them together and make them a portion of the Intercolonial, why could they not take over the Canada Atlantic? I believe they did desire to take it over, but they were too late. If it were taken over and made a part of the Intercolonial system, you would have a continuous system from the great lakes to the seaboard, owned and controlled by the Canadian people, and it would be a constant check on the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway. If you had the Intercolonial extended to the Georgian Bay, which could be done at a cost of $10,000,000, on which 3 per cent amounts to only $300,000 a year, what would happen? You would have the eastern end of a transcontinental system which would be competitive with the Canadian Pacific Railway. You would be in touch with Port Arthur, from which point you would meet the Mann & Mackenzie system opening to the west; and there is a great canal sytem projected from Port Arthur to the west which may be opened one of these days. Therefore it would be good national policy for the government to have taken over the Canada Atlantic Railway.

So I make the charge to-night that the Minister of Public Works, in bringing forward the scheme which he has proposed for the salvation of the country, is bringing forward the scheme of a private corporation, and not the scheme of the country. I also make the charge that if the government were honest in extending the Intercolonial from Quebec to Montreal, they were in duty bound to extend it from Montreal to the Georgian Bay; because, I say it in all seriousness, there is no solution of the transportation problem but public ownership of the canals and public ownership of the railways, and putting an end to this giving of the credit of the country in order to grant immense bonuses to private corporations. There is no other way out. It is all very fine to bring forward the old ideas of the last century to settle these new questions of the twentieth century. They will not do. There are a new class of men and great new forces in the world to-day. Men are quicker, men are greater, public questions are wider, and they must be approached on new lines and by new methods. Do you know what is at the bottom of that Georgian Bay Ship Canal proposition? Let me tell you. The greatest water powers in Canada which have not passed into the hands of private corporations are, along the line of the French river and the Ottawa river, and the scheme is to bag all these water powers in connection with this canal proposition. It is nothing but a great exploitation scheme that might figure very largely in the next general election. I had almost expected that it would figure in the Ontario elections about to come off. For my part I take this occasion to repudiate that document, which I had in my hand, in my place, near the close of last session, and which, I believe has been presented to the Governor General in Council and the Prime Minister. And I ask the Minister of Public Works now whether, after the speech he made this afternoon, he will bring that document down, alleged to have been signed by members of this House, and explain how he can make the proposition he did in favour of the government constructing the French River canal if three-fourths of his supporters and a great many members on this side are committed to a proposition to give the credit of this country to the raising of $65,000,000 by a private corporation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have heard the suggestion made by my hon. colleague the Minister of Public Works to my hon. friend from Labelle regarding the withdrawal of his amendment, and I would ask my hon. friend whether he desires now to press the amendment or whether he will withdraw it.

Mr. BOURASSA. As I have already said, I have not brought this up as a motion of want of confidence or with the view of asking the government to commit itself to any policy whatever. But I consider the matter one of great importance, to which the attention of the government ought to be at once directed, in order that they may take occasion to study the question and come to a conclusion as soon as possible. If the government would announce its readiness to give the question its most serious consideration and come to a decision before the session is over, I am ready to withdraw the motion.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think I can relieve my hon. friend's mind with regard to our studying the question, for I do believe that the government have already given it serious study and consideration. Whatever difference there may be between the hon. gentleman and others regarding the motion he has presented, we all recognize that the transportation problem is a matter of the geatest importance to Canada. The difficulty with the hon. gentleman's motion is that it does not lead to anything in particular. It merely asserts that this is an important question, and if this were stated in any other form, we could all sympathize with the hon. gentleman and agree in the statement. However, he will have ample opportunity to bring up the question again, and he will lose nothing whatever by allowing it to rest for the present and withdrawing his motion. I can assure him that there is no disposition on the part of the government to do otherwise than assist in bringing the question before the House in an intelligible and useful form and in coming to a conclusion most satisfactory to the general interests of the country.

Mr. BOURASSA. After the explanation of the hon. minister, I am quite ready to withdraw the motion with the consent of the seconder.

Amendment (Mr. Bourassa) withdrawn, and motion (Mr. Campbell) agreed to.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding) moved :

That the said Address be engrossed and be presented to His Excellency the Governor General by such members of this House as are of the hon. the Privy Council.

Motion agreed to.

SUPPLY.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved :

That this House will, to-morrow, resolve itself into a committee to consider of a supply to be granted to His Majesty.

Motion agreed to.

WAYS AND MEANS.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved :

That this House will, to-morrow, resolve itself into a committee to consider of the Ways and Means for raising the supply to be granted to His Majesty.

Motion agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR GENERAL—MAIN ESTIMATES.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE delivered a message from His Excellency the Governor General.

Mr. SPEAKER read the message as follows :—

MINTO.

The Governor General transmits to the House of Commons estimates of sums required for the service of the Dominion for the year ending June 30, 1903, and in accordance with the provisions of the British North America Act, 1867, the Governor General recommends these estimates to the House of Commons.

Government House,
Ottawa, February 17, 1902.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved that the message of His Excellency and the estimates be referred to the Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

Public Accounts for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1901.—Hon. Mr. Fielding.

The Report of the Post Office Department for the year ending June 30th, 1901.—Hon. Mr. Mulock.

The Report of the Department of Public Works for the year ending June 30th, 1901.—Hon. Mr. Tarte.

The Report of the Department of Justice for the year ending June 30th, 1901.—Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick.

The Report of Department of Labour for year ending June 30th, 1901.—Hon. Mr. Mulock.

The Report of the Department of Inland Revenue for the year ending June 30th, 1901.—Hon. Mr. Fielding for Hon. Mr. Bernier.

On motion of the Prime Minister, House adjourned at 9.05 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, February 18, 1902.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 4) respecting drainage on and across the property of Railway Companies —Mr. Cowan.

MEMBER INTRODUCED.

Hon. Wm. Harty, member for the electoral division of the city of Kingston, by the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) and Mr. Fraser.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

Report of the Department of Trade and Commerce, for the fiscal year ended 30th June, 1901.—Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright.

Report of the Auditor General, for the fiscal year ended 30th June 1901.—Hon. W. S. Fielding.

Tables of Trade and Navigation, for the fiscal year ended 30th June, 1901.—Hon. Wm. Paterson.

SELECT STANDING COMMITTEES.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). With the permission of the House, I beg to lay on the Table the report of the Special Committee appointed to prepare and report lists of members to compose Standing Committees as follows :—

No. 1.—ON PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS.

Messieurs

Alcorn,	Lennox,
Barker,	Logan,
Belcourt,	MacKinnon,
Bennett,	McCarthy,
Blair,	McColl,
Borden (Halifax),	McIsaac,
Bureau,	Madore,
Casgrain,	Malouin,
Cowan,	Martineau,
Dugas,	Monet,
Emmerson,	Monk,
Fitzpatrick,	Morrison,
Flint,	Mulock,
Fraser,	Northrup,
Geoffrion,	Pringle,
German,	Russell,
Gourley,	Sifton,
Guthrie,	Sutherland (Essex),
Haggart,	Tisdale,
Lancaster,	Tupper (Sir Charles Hibbert),
LaRivière,	Wade and
Lavell,	Ward.—45
Lemieux,

No. 2.—ON EXPIRING LAWS.

Messieurs

Archambault,	Johnson (Cardwell),
Avery,	Legris,
Bazinet,	Logan,
Bourbonnais,	Lovell,
Brunet,	McCool,
Casgrain,	McGowan,
Copp,	Matheson,
Earle,	Meigs,
Ethier,	Morin,
Farquharson,	Robinson (Elgin),
Gauvreau,	Seagram,
Hale,	Turgeon and
Harwood,	Vrooman.—26.

And that the Quorum of the said Committee do consist of seven members.

No. 3.—ON RAILWAYS, CANALS AND TELEGRAPH LINES.

Messieurs

Alcorn,	Lancaster,
Angers,	Lang,
Archambault,	Laurier (L'Assomption),
Ball,	Lavell,
Barker,	Lavergne,

Bazinet,
Beith,
Béland,
Belcourt,
Bell,
Bennett,
Bernier,
Bickerdike,
Birkett,
Blain,
Blair,
Borden (King's),
Bourassa,
Boyd,
Brock,
Broder,
Brown,
Bruce,
Bruneau,
Bureau,
Calvert,
Calvin,
Campbell,
Cargill,
Carscallen,
Casgrain,
Champagne,
Charlton,
Christie,
Clancy,
Clare,
Clarke,
Cochrane,
Copp,
Costigan,
Cowan,
Culbert,
Davis,
Délisle,
Demers (Lévis),
Douglas,
Dugas,
Dyment,
Earle,
Edwards,
Emmerson,
Erb,
Ethier,
Farquharson,
Fielding,
Fitzpatrick,
Flint,
Fortier,
Fowler,
Fraser,
Gallery,
Galliher,
Ganong,
Gauvreau,
Geoffrion,
German,
Gibson,
Gilmour,
Gould,
Gourley,
Guthrie,
Hackett,
Haggart,
Hale,
Harwood,
Harty,
Henderson,
Heyd,
Holmes,
Horsey,
Hughes (Victoria),
Hyman,
Ingram,
Johnston (Cape Breton),
Lefurgey,
Lemieux,
Lennox,
Leonard,
Lewis,
Logan,
Macdonald,
Mackie,
MacKinnon,
Maclaren (Huntingdon),
MacLaren (Perth),
Maclean,
McCarthy,
McColl,
McCool,
McCormick,
McCreary,
McGowan,
McGugan,
McIntosh,
McIsaac,
McLennan,
McLeod,
Madore,
Malouin,
Marcil (Bagot),
Marcil (Bonaventure),
Martineau,
Matheson,
Maxwell,
Mignault,
Monet,
Monk,
Morin,
Morrison,
Mulock,
Murray,
Northrup,
Oliver,
Osler,
Parmelee,
Pope,
Porter,
Power,
Préfontaine,
Pringle,
Proulx,
Puttee,
Reid (Grenville),
Riley,
Robinson (Northumberland),
Roche (Halifax),
Roche (Marquette),
Rosamond,
Ross (Ontario),
Ross (Rimouski),
Rousseau,
Russell,
Schell,
Scott,
Sifton,
Simmons,
Smith (Vancouver),
Smith (Wentworth),
Sproule,
Stephens,
Sutherland (Essex),
Sutherland (Oxford),
Talbot,
Tarte,
Thompson,
Tisdale,
Tobin,
Tolmie,
Tucker,
Tupper (Sir Charles Hibbert),
Turcot,
Johnston (Cardwell),
Johnston (Lambton),
Kaulbach,
Kemp,
Kendrey,
Kidd,
Vrooman,
Wade,
Ward,
Wilmot,
Wilson and
Wright.—178.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

And that the Quorum of the said Committee do consist of twenty-five members.

No. 4.—ON MISCELLANEOUS PRIVATE BILLS.

Messieurs

Alcorn,
Avery,
Ball,
Béland,
Belcourt,
Bell,
Bennett,
Birkett,
Bourbonnais,
Brock,
Broder,
Bruce,
Bruneau,
Calvert,
Carscallen,
Casgrain,
Cochrane,
Cowan,
Culbert,
Douglas,
Dugas,
Dyment,
Earle,
Ethier,
Fitzpatrick,
Fraser,
Galliher,
Gauvreau,
Gibson,
Gilmour,
Girard,
Guthrie,
Hackett,
Harty,
Hughes (King's),
Johnston(Cape Breton),
Kaulbach,
Kendall,
Kidd,
LaRivière,
Lavell,
LeBlanc,
Legris,
Lemieux,
Logan,
Lcy,
Macdonald,
MacKinnon,
Maclean,
McCool,
McCreary,
McGugan,
Marcil (Bagot),
Méigs,
Mignault,
Monet,
Monk,
Morin,
Morrison,
Pope,
Power,
Pringle,
Proulx,
Puttee,
Roddick,
Rosamond,
Ross (Victoria),
Russell,
Schell,
Stephens,
Sutherland (Essex),
Sutherland (Oxford),
Tobin,
Tolton,
Tucker,
Turgeon and
Wade.—77.

And that the Quorum of the said Committee do consist of ten members.

No. 5.—ON STANDING ORDERS.

Messieurs

Ball,
Bazinet,
Brown,
Brunet,
Cargill,
Clancy,
Clare,
Copp,
Davis,
Demers (Levis),
Demers (St. John),
Douglas,
Erb,
Flint,
Fortier,
Gallery,
Guthrie,
Halliday,
Horsey,
Hughes (Victoria),
Lang,
Laurier (L'Assomption),
Lefurgey,
Mackie,
McEwen,
McGugan,
Marcil (Bagot),
Matheson,
Maxwell,
Morin,
Puttee,
Reid (Restigouche),
Richardson,
Roche (Marquette),
Ross (Rimouski),
Sherritt,
Smith (Vancouver),
Tolmie,
Tolton,
Turgeon,

Ingram,
Johnston (Cape Breton),
Kaulbach,
Kendall,
Lancaster,
Vrooman,
Wilmot,
Wilson and
Wright.—49.

And that the Quorum of the said Committee do consist of seven members.

No. 6.—ON PRINTING.

Messieurs

Bennett,
Casgrain,
Clarke,
Davis,
Holmes,
Hughes (Victoria),
Hyman,
Johnston (Cape Breton),
Johnston (Lambton),
LaRivière,
Lavergne,
Loy,
Maclean,
McColl,
Marcil (Bonaventure),
Oliver,
Parmelee,
Préfontaine,
Richardson,
Scott,
Sutherland (Oxford),
Taylor,
Thompson and Tisdale.—24.

No. 7.—ON PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

Messieurs

Barker,
Bell,
Beith,
Bennett,
Bickerdike,
Birkett,
Blain,
Blair,
Borden (King's),
Campbell,
Carbonneau,
Cartwright (Sir Richard),
Champagne,
Clancy,
Clarke,
Cochrane,
Costigan,
Cowan,
Demers (St. John),
Emmerson,
Fielding,
Fitzpatrick
Flint,
Fowler,
Fraser,
Ganong,
Geoffrion,
German,
Gouid,
Gourley,
Haggart,
Henderson,
Holmes,
Horsey,
Hughes (King's).
Hughes (Victoria),
Hyman,
Kemp,
Lancaster,
Laurier (L'Assomption),
LeBlanc,
Lennox,
Leonard,
Loy,
Maclaren (Huntingdon),
McColl,
McCreary,
McIsaac,
MacKinnon,
Madore,
Malouin,
Maxwell,
Monk,
Morrison,
Murray,
Northrup,
Oliver,
Pringle,
Riley,
Roche (Halifax),
Ross (Ontario),
Sifton,
Smith (Wentworth),
Sproule,
Tarte,
Taylor,
Thompson,
Tupper (Sir Charles Hibbert),
Turcot,
Wade,
Ward and
Wilson.—72.

And that the Quorum of the said Committee do consist of twenty-one members.

No. 8.—ON BANKING AND COMMERCE.

Messieurs

Angers,
Archambault,
Avery,
Barker,
Beith,
Bell,
Hyman,
Ingram,
Johnston (CapeBreton),
Kemp,
Kendall,
Kendrey,
Béland,
Bennett,
Bernier,
Bickerdike,
Birkett,
Blain,
Borden (Halifax),
Borden (King's),
Bourassa,
Boyd,
Brock,
Brown,
Bruce,
Bruneau,
Brunet,
Bureau,
Calvert,
Calvin,
Campbell,
Carbonneau,
Cargill,
Carscallen,
Cartwright (Sir Richard),
Casgrain,
Champagne,
Charlton,
Clancy,
Clarke,
Cochrane,
Copp,
Costigan,
Cowan,
Culbert,
Delisle,
Demers (Lévis),
Demers (St. John),
Earle,
Edwards,
Emmerson,
Ethier,
Farquharson,
Fielding,
Fowler,
Fraser,
Gallery,
Galliher,
Ganong,
Geoffrion,
Gibson,
Gould,
Gourley,
Haggart,
Harty,
Henderson,
Heyd,
Holmes,
Horsey,
Hughes (King's),
Hughes (Victoria),
Lang,
Laurier (Sir Wilfrid),
Laurier (L'Assomption),
Lavell,
Lefurgey,
Legris,
Lewis,
Lovell,
Loy,
Maclaren (Huntingdon),
McCarthy,
McCormick,
McEwen,
McIsaac,
McLennan,
McLeod,
Madore,
Malouin,
Marcil (Bonaventure),
Mignault,
Monk,
Morin,
Murray,
Osler,
Paterson,
Pope,
Porter,
Power,
Préfontaine,
Puttee,
Reid (Grenville),
Reid (Restigouche),
Richardson,
Riley,
Roche (Halifax),
Rosamond,
Ross (Ontario),
Ross (Rimouski),
Ross (Victoria),
Rousseau,
Russell,
Schell,
Smith (Wentworth),
Sproule,
Stephens,
Sutherland (Oxford),
Talbot,
Tarte,
Taylor,
Thompson,
Tisdale,
Tobin,
Tolmie,
Tupper (Sir Charles Hibbert),
Wade,
Ward,
Wilmot,
Wilson and
Wright.—130.

And that the Quorum of the said Committee do consist of twenty-one members.

No. 9.—ON AGRICULTURE AND COLONIZATION.

Messieurs

Angers,
Ball,
Bazinet,
Beith,
Bell,
Bernier,
Blain,
Bourassa,
Bourbonnais,
Logan,
Lovell,
Macdonald,
Mackie,
MacLaren (Perth),
McColl,
McCool,
McCormick,
McCreary,

Boyd,	McEwen,
Broder,	McGowan,
Brown,	McGugan,
Bureau,	McIntosh,
Calvert,	McLennan,
Calvin,	McLeod,
Carbonneau,	Marcil (Bagot),
Cargill,	Martineau,
Carscallen,	Matheson,
Charlton,	Maxwell,
Christie,	Meigs,
Clancy,	Morin,
Clare,	Mulock,
Cochrane,	Oliver,
Davis,	Parmelee,
Delisle,	Pope,
Douglas,	Proulx,
Dugas,	Reid (Grenville),
Dyment,	Reid (Restigouche),
Edwards,	Richardson,
Erb,	Robinson (Elgin),
Farquharson,	Robinson (Northumberland),
Fisher,
Fortier,	Roche (Marquette),
Galliher,	Rosamond,
Gauvreau,	Ross (Ontario),
Gilmour,	Ross (Victoria),
Girard,	Rousseau,
Gould,	Schell,
Guthrie,	Seagram,
Hackett,	Sherritt,
Halliday,	Simmons,
Harwood,	Smith (Vancouver),
Henderson,	Smith (Wentworth),
Heyd,	Sproule,
Hughes (King's),	Stephens,
Hughes (Victoria),	Talbot,
Ingram,	Taylor,
Johnston (Cardwell),	Tobin,
Johnston (Lambton),	Tolmie,
Kendall,	Tolton,
Kidd,	Tucker,
Lang,	Turcot,
LaRiviére,	Turgeon,
Laurier (L'Assomption)	Vrooman,
LeBlanc,	Wade,
Legris,	Wilmot,
Lennox,	Wilson and
Leonard,	Wright.—116.
Lewis,

And that the said Quorum of the said Committee do consist of twelve members.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved :

That the report of the Special Committee appointed to prepare and report with all convenient speed lists of members to compose the Select Standing Committees of this House, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

SUPPLY.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). Before making the formal motion for the House to go into Committee of Supply, perhaps I should say that as the Auditor General's report has only now been placed on the Table, I quite realize that I should consult the wishes of my hon. friends opposite, before making the motion, by saying that though we are quite prepared now to proceed with Supply, and perhaps there might be some matters not debatable which we could deal with, however, in view of the fact that the report has only now been placed on the Table, hon. gentlemen might prefer to postpone going into Supply for another day, and if that is their desire, it is only reasonable that we should concur in their view. We have no objection to go on with Supply this afternoon, but if they prefer that we postpone it, of course I would not object to that course being pursued.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). The disposition of the older members on our side of the House is that we should have some opportunity of looking into the Auditor General's report before proceeding with Supply. There may be some items, possibly, that an examination of the Auditor General's report would not be necessary to enable us to deal with. But I think I am interpreting the opinions of hon. gentlemen on this side of the House in saying that we would rather look at that important document before proceeding with Supply.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think the objection is quite reasonable, and I withdraw the motion.

On motion of the Prime Minister, House adjourned at 3.20 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, February 19, 1902.

The Speaker took the Chair at Three o'clock.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON PRINTING.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved :

That a Message be sent to the Senate requesting that their Honours will unite with this House in the formation of a joint committee of both Houses on the subject of the printing of parliament, and that the members of the Select Standing Committee on Printing, namely : Messrs Bennett, Casgrain, Clarke, Davis, Holmes, Hughes (Victoria), Hyman, Johnston (Cape Breton), Johnston (Lambton), LaRivière, Lavergne, Loy, Maclean, McColl, Marcil (Bonaventure), Oliver, Parmelee, Prefontaine, Richardson, Scott, Sutherland (Oxford), Taylor, Thompson and Tisdale will act as members on the part of this House on the said joint committee on the printing of parliament.

Motion agreed to.

LIBRARY OF PARLIAMENT.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved :

That a Select Committee composed of Messrs. Borden (Halifax), Bourassa, Brock, Calvert, Casgrain, Clancy, Clark, Demers (St. John and Iberville), Flint, Fraser, Heyd, Hyman, Johnston (Lambton), Laurier (Sir Wilfrid), Monk, Scott and Wade be appointed to assist Mr. Speaker in the direction of the Library of Parliament so far as the interests of this House are concerned, and to act as members of a joint committee of both Houses on the Library ; and that a message be sent to the Senate to acquaint their Honours therewith.

Motion agreed to.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY INCREASE IN CAPITAL STOCK.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved for leave to place on the Table of the House certain papers in respect to the capital stock of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

Motion agreed to.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

Report of the Department of Marine and Fisheries for the year ended June 30, 1901 (Marine).—Hon. Mr. Sutherland.

Report of the Department of Railways and Canals for the year ended June 30, 1901.—Hon. Mr. Blair.

Civil Service List of Canada for the year ended June 30, 1901.—Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick.

QUESTIONS.

MONUMENT TO GENERAL MONTGOMERY.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

1. Has the government received any application, and, if so, from whom, for permission to erect a monument or memorial to General Montgomery, who unsuccessfully assailed the city of Quebec, in December, 1775, with a force of American troops ?
2. Has the government granted the prayer of such application ?
3. Will the monument or memorial, if any, be erected on property belonging to the government of Canada ?
4. Have petitions been received by the government, if so, from whom, protesting against permission being given to erect such monument or memorial ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). My hon. friend, remembers I am sure, the answer which I gave last session to similar inquiries. I have now to inform the hon. gentleman that so far as my memory serves me at this moment there has been no petition presented to the government to have a monument erected to the memory of Montgomery. I am not aware that any protest has come to us. At all events no action has been taken on this matter since last session.

DOMINION CENSUS.—EXPENDITURE.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

What sums have been paid out to date in connection with the taking of the recent census of the Dominion ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon. Sydney Fisher). These figures are in the course of preparation and will be down in a day or two.

Mr. CLARKE. The question stands in the meantime.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

MAIL STEAMERS.—RATE OF SPEED.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

What was the average speed per hour made during the year 1901 by steamships carrying British and Canadian mails from ports in the United Kingdom to Canadian ports ; and from Canadian ports to ports in the United Kingdom respectively ?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright). The average speed made by steamships carrying the mails from ports in the United Kingdom to Canadian ports was as follows : From 1st January to opening of navigation, Moville to Halifax, 10⅛ knots. Opening of navigation to June 30, Moville to Rimouski, 12½ knots. June 30, to September 30, Moville to Rimouski, 12⅛ knots. September 30, to December 31, Moville to Rimouski, 11 knots. Moville to Halifax, 11 knots.

The average speed made by steamships carrying the mails from Canadian ports to ports in the United Kingdom was as follows :

From 1st January to opening of navigation on the St. Lawrence, Halifax to Moville, 10½ knots. From opening of navigation to June 30, Rimouski to Moville, 12 7-10 knots. From June 30, to September 30, Rimouski to Moville, 12⅛ knots. From September 30, to December 31, Rimouski to Moville, 12⅝ knots. Halifax to Moville, 13⅜ knots.

N.B.—Allowance made in all cases for difference of time.

THE TUBERCULAR TEST.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

Is the government aware that at a meeting held on the 5th day of February, instant, in the city of Toronto, the following resolution was passed unanimously by the Shorthorn Breeders' Association : 'We, the members of the Dominion Shorthorn Breeders' Association, at our annual meeting, resolved that the tubercular test is unreliable, unnecessary, and in many cases injurious, and that we urge the discontinuance of the compulsory use of toxine by the Dominion Government Department of Agriculture ; and we also fail to see the object now of requiring 90 days' quarantine, as there is no contagious disease in Great Britain requiring its enforcement to such length of time.'

In view of the above action, is it the intention of the government to meet the wishes of the said association ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon. Sydney Fisher). The government is aware of this resolution. It is not the intention of the government to act in the direction indicated by the resolution.

RETIREMENT OF JUDGES.

Mr. BENNETT asked :

Is the Prime Minister correctly reported in the Hansard of April 24th, 1899, as having stated that 'the question of introducing legislation to provide for the compulsory retirement of county court judges in the province of Ontario who had attained the age of seventy-five years was under the consideration of the government.'

If correctly reported, is legislation to such end to be introduced this session ?

If such legislation is introduced, will similar legislation be introduced in reference to the Judges of the Supreme Court of Canada and Judges of the High Court of Justice in the province of Ontario ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). It is the intention of the government to introduce this session, legislation for the purpose of supplementing that already in existence with respect to county court judges. So far as the Supreme Court and High Court of Justice is concerned, the matter has not yet been considered.

RAILWAY COMMISSION.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin) asked :

Is it the intention of the government to comply with the resolution passed during the last session relative to the appointment of a commission to inquire into and adjust all differences that may arise between the public and the railway companies of Canada ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). I may say to the hon. gentleman that I hope to make a definite announcement to the House on this subject at an early period.

DURATION OF ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked :

Has the government considered the Act passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislation extending its duration ?

Has it allowed the Act or is it the intention of the government to disallow it ?

If it is not to be disallowed, what are the reasons for non-disallowance ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The government has considered the Act passed at the last session of the Ontario legislature extending its duration. It is not the intention of the government to disallow the said Act. The reason is that the matter is altogether a domestic one entirely within the purview of the Ontario legislature.

Hon. Mr. FISHER.

DISMISSAL OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

Mr. BELL (asked) :

(a) How many employees of the Public Works, Railways and Canals, Post Office, Marine and Fisheries, Customs and Inland Revenue Departments have been dismissed between July 12th, 1896, and January 1st, 1902 ?

(b) How many of these dismissals have been made for political reasons ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I will have to ask my hon. friend to be so kind as to move for a return for this information.

I. C. R.—NUMBER OF OFFICIALS AND EMPLOYEES.

Mr. BELL asked :

What was the total number of officials and employees, temporary and permanent, and what the total salaries and wages of the Intercolonial Railway on June 30th, 1896, and on December 31st, 1901 ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I will give the same answer to this as was given to the last question of the hon. gentleman.

CONSULAR AGENCIES IN CANADA.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked :

Has the custom of flying the flag of the nation represented at consular agencies in Canada been discontinued ? If so, why ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The custom of flying the flag of the nation represented at the consular agencies in Canada has not been discontinued.

PORT DUFFERIN WHARF.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax) asked :

1. What is the total cost to date of the shed on the government wharf at Port Dufferin, Halifax County ?

2. What is the total amount of wharfage collected at the government wharf at Port Dufferin ?

3. What is the total cost to date of the breakwater at Hawbold's Cove, Beaver Cove, in the County of Halifax ?

4. What is the total cost of the wharf at Atkin's Point, Harrigan Cove, Halifax County ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. I. Tarte).

1. $214.10.

3. Hawbold's Cove, Beaver Cove. This department has no record of any work of that time.

4. Harrigan Cove. Wharf, total cost to date, $1,461.71.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland) In answer to the second question, I may say that the total amount collected for 1899, was $510.57 ; for 1900, $138.11, and for 1901, $49.18.

THE CENSUS.—MR. COTE'S CIRCULAR.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

1. What was the total number of replies, by provinces, received to the circular issued on or about the 1st day of March, 1901, by Mr. Thomas Coté, Assistant Census Commissioner, to certain clergymen, asking for the name, the age, and the occupation of every person formerly resident in the parish or territory over which such clergyman exercised spiritual oversight, who had emigrated to the United States during the twelve months preceding the said 1st day of March, 1901 ?

2. What was the total number of persons so reported as above as having emigrated to the United States from each province of the Dominion during the year ending with the 1st March, 1901 ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon Sydney Fisher).

1. Seventy replies in all were received, sixty-five from the province of Quebec, one from New Brunswick, three from Ontario, and one from Prince Edward Island.

2. The number of persons reported by the parish priests as having emigrated to the United States during the twelve months preceding the 1st day of March, 1901, is 870; twelve in New Brunswick, seventy-nine in Prince Edward Island, 779 in Quebec. There are also 108 families reported as having left the country, but their names and the number of their members were not given. One family was reported from Ontario and 107 from Quebec.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought the exodus had stopped.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That is a very small number.

BRONTE HARBOUR.

Mr. HENDERSON asked :

How much money has the government expended on Bronte Harbour improvements to date ?

Is it the intention of the government to finally complete the proposed improvements during the coming summer ?

What additional sum will still be required to complete the works ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. I. Tarte). Up to this date the total amount spent on Bronte harbour has been $11,211,349. If my hon. friend will kindly look at the estimates for this year he will find that the sum of $3,000 has been placed to the credit of that work.

POSTMASTERSHIP OF MILTON, ONTARIO.

Mr. HENDERSON asked :

1. How long has the postmastership of Milton, Ont., been vacant ?

2. Is it the intention of the government to fill such vacancy before the holding of the next provincial elections in Ontario ?

If so, who will be appointed to the said office ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Wm. Mulock). There is no post office known as Milton in the province of Ontario. There is an office of that name, but it is situated in the united counties of Shelburne and Queens, and the office of postmaster there is not vacant. Perhaps my hon. friend refers to the post office in the county town of Halton, and if he means that, it is known in the Post Office Department as Milton East. If that is the post office to which the hon. gentleman alludes, I will be happy to consider the question so amended and will give the information another day.

Mr. HENDERSON. It never has been called Milton East.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. That is the answer the department gives me. That is the departmental name of it.

BRONTE HARBOUR LIGHTHOUSE.

Mr. HENDERSON asked :

1. Is it the intention of the government to erect, during the current year, a lighthouse at Bronte Harbour, in conformity with assurances given during the general elections in the year 1900 ?

2. Has the location of said lighthouse been fixed, and at what particular point will it be placed ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I have to call the attention of my hon. friend to the fact that this question is out of order, as it embodies a statement, which is a subject of controvery.

Mr. HENDERSON. I will eliminate the words ' in conformity with assurances given during the general elections in the year 1900.' Will the hon. gentleman allow the question to be answered in this form ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). There appears to be no file in the department regarding this matter.

THE DUTY ON TOBACCO.

Mr. HENDERSON asked :

What was the total amount of duty collected on tobacco for the year ending 30th June, 1901 ?

2. How much of this amount was due to the additional duty imposed in the session of 1897 ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Hon. M. E. Bernier). The duty on tobacco collected during the year was $3,337,848.28 ; on cigars, $837,433.69; total, $4,175,281.97. The answer to the second question is; $1,026,265.72 on raw leaf; on cigarettes, $180,551.38; total, $1,206,817.10.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. Wm. Paterson). I will supplement the answer with the following, in regard to the customs duty :—

1. The total customs duty collected on tobacco (including raw leaf samples) for the year ending 30th June 1901, was $108,649.69.

2. Of this sum the amount due to the additional customs duty imposed in 1897 is $15,708.54.

OAKVILLE HARBOUR.

Mr. HENDERSON asked:

1. Is it the intention of the government to place in the estimates, this session, a sum sufficient to complete the construction of docks, repairs and dredging in Oakville Harbour?

2. What is the estimated amount that will be required for such purpse?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. Israel Tarte). In answer to the hon. gentleman, I may say that he has only to be kind enough to look at the estimates to find that the amount of $4,000 has been placed there to the credit of Oakville harbour.

PROTECTION OF OYSTER FISHING.

Mr. HACKETT asked:

1. Have any regulations for the protection of the oyster fishing in the province of Prince Edward Island been issued by the government of Canada during the last year?

2. Is the lifting or digging of mussel mud by farmers prohibited in certain rivers of said province within lines defining boundaries?

3. What are the names of rivers so protected, and in which of the counties are they situated?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland):

1. Yes.

2. Yes.

3. Trout River, Prince County; Bideford River, Prince County.

EMPLOYMENT OF MR. ERNEST KEMP.

Mr. HACKETT asked:

1. Is Mr. Ernest Kemp, the so-called oyster expert, employed during the present winter on the government steamship 'Stanley,' plying between Summerside and Cape Tormentine?

2. If so, what are his duties, and is he required to report to the Department of Marine and Fisheries?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland):

1. No.

2. Answered by No. 1.

TRANSPORTATION QUESTIONS.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked:

1. What is the distance (a) from Chicago to North Bay? (b) from Fort William to North Bay?

2. What is the distance from, each, Chicago and Fort William to Thessalon?

3. How many miles is Thessalon distant from Montreal more than North Bay?

4. How many points on Lakes Huron, Erie and Georgian Bay do the Canadian Pacific and the Grand Trunk Railways each touch? What are those points?

5. What would be the cost of the proposed canal into Lake Nipissing from Georgian Bay?

6. What is the average depth of water in Lake Nipissing?

7. What would it probably cost to double track each of the following roads, and reduce the grades to 5-10 from the lake ports to Owen Sound, Collingwood, Midland, Parry Sound, Thessalon, Sault Ste. Marie, Fort William, Sarnia, Goderich, Kincardine, Port Elgin, Southampton, Wiarton, Sandwich, viz.: the Grand Trunk Railway, Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canada Atlantic Railway?

8. What is the distance from, each, Owen Sound, Collingwood, Midland, Parry Sound, the mouth of the French River, North Bay, and Thessalon, to Montreal?

9. What ports are there on the 'North Shore' of the Georgian Bay at which the 'Soo Line' of the Canadian Pacific Railway touches?

10. What is the distances of each of these by rail from Montreal?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. Israel Tarte). As far as the Department of Public Works is concerned, I lay on the Table of the House a map which we have prepared, which contains a good deal of the information which the hon. gentleman desires. A good many of the things which he is asking for cannot be produced in the House without a motion being made and a statement being prepared. Other departments will answer for themselves.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). So far as the question touches the Department of Railways and Canals, I have prepared a statement in answer to the question of the hon. gentleman so far as it is possible for us to answer them, and, if the hon. gentleman will permit me, I will hand the answer to 'Hansard.'

1. The distance from Chicago to North Bay is 598 miles and from Fort William to North Bay 544 miles (by water).

2. The distance from Chicago to Thessalon is 368 miles, and from Fort William to Thessalon, 320 miles (by water).

3. Thessalon is 212 miles further from Montreal than North Bay (by rail).

4. The Grand Trunk Railway touches Lake Erie at the following points:—

It touches Fort Erie, Port Colborne, Port Dover, Port Rowan and Port Stanley and the Georgian Bay at the following points: Wiarton, Owen Sound, Meaford, Collingwood, Penetanguishene and Midland. It touches Lake Huron at the following points: Sarnia, Goderich Kincardine and Southampton.

The Canadian Pacific Railway touches at no point on Lake Erie. On Lake Huron it touches at Spanish River, Cook's Mills and Algoma Mills. On the Georgian Bay it touches at Owen Sound.

5. I cannot say at present.

6. I cannot say at present.

7. I cannot say at present.

8. The distance by rail to Montreal from Owen Sound is 461 miles; from Collingwood, 428 miles; from Midland, 457 miles; from Parry Sound, 384 miles; from mouth of French River, 433 miles; from North Bay, 364 miles; from Thessalon, 576 miles.

9. The 'Soo Line' does not touch any point on the Georgian Bay; but on the north shore of Lake Huron, it touches the following points: Spanish River, Cook's Mills, Algoma Mills, Thessalon.

10. From Spanish River to Montreal, 515 miles; from Cook's Mills, 528 miles; from Algoma Mills, 538 miles; from Thessalon, 576 miles.

CORRESPONDENCE RELATING TO THE SOUTH AFRICAN WAR.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle) (Translation) moved for:

Copy of all papers and correspondence exchanged between His Excellency the Governor General, the Canadian government, or any of its members or departments, the officer commanding the Canadian militia, and the British authorities, in relation to the South African war, its conduct and its settlement; and the sending or recruiting of Canadian troops to South Africa,—for the three last years.

Mr. Speaker, I must say that some of these documents were brought down during the first session following the sending of the troops to Africa. I make this a general question, in order to cover all documents exchanged between His Excellency the Governor General, the Canadian government and the British authorities, in relation to the sending of the first and second contingent of the South African police force, and of the last contingent; including the correspondence exchanged between the Imperial authorities, the Canadian government and the South African authorities. In short, I ask that all matters concerning the South African question, and relating to Canada directly or indirectly, should be deposited before the House.

I make this motion, seconded by Mr. Monet (Laprairie-Napierville).

Motion carried.

DISALLOWANCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA LEGISLATION.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle) moved:

Copy of all papers and correspondence relating to the disallowance of chapters 11 and 14 of the statutes of 1900, province of British Columbia, viz.: 'An Act to regulate immigration into British Columbia,' and 'An Act relating to the employment on works carried on under franchises granted by Private Acts.'

He said: I may say that the papers which I wish specially to have laid before parliament are those relating to the request that has been made by the British authorities to the Canadian government to disallow this legislation. Of course, the papers should include all the correspondence that has taken place between the British government and the Canadian government and all the correspondence that has taken place between the Canadian government and the government of British Columbia; so that we may know exactly where each of these three governments stands upon the question of disallowance of provincial laws.

Mr. RALPH SMITH (Vancouver). I desire to second the motion before the House, because the information asked for is of very great importance, as it relates to the question of Chinese and Japanese labour in British Columbia. I would like to take this opportunity of asking the government when they will be prepared to bring down the report of the Royal Commission appointed to inquire into this question, which report, I presume, is already in their hands.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). So far as I know, the report of the Royal Commission has not yet been handed over to the government. It will be presented to the House as soon as it is received.

Motion agreed to.

EMBARGO IMPOSED BY THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT ON CANADIAN CATTLE.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle) (Translation) moved, seconded by Mr. Monet (Laprairie-Napierville) for:

Copy of all papers and correspondence exchanged between Canadian and British authorities, with reference to the embargo imposed by the British government on Canadian cattle.

I wish to draw the attention of the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) for a moment, while making this motion, Mr. Speaker, and before going any further, I must declare at once, that all correspondence exchanged in the matter, if any, should be deposited before this House; but if the hon. minister tells me that there exists no corespondence in the matter, then I will let my motion drop.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon. Sydney A. Fisher). There is very little correspondence on this subject in the department. I might, however, take the opportunity of saying to the hon. gentleman and to the House that when I was in England last summer I had a number of personal communications on this subject with the hon. the Secretary of State for the Colonies and the Minister of Agriculture there. I laid before them with all the force of which I was capable the facts of the case and the reasons which led me to believe that the occasion was opportune for a different treatment of Canadian cattle in the home market from what has been accorded to our animals lately. I was met with the reply that the question was now a question of statute or law, and not in the power of the government or the department to regulate it by order in council or by departmental action. The gentlemen whom I met informed me that they did not believe it was possible to amend the law in such a way as to enable Canadian cattle to enter freely beyond the ports of debarkation. I pointed out—and I am glad to say that what I said was not in any way controverted—that the cattle in Canada to-day are remarkably free from any disease—that our Canadian cattle to-day enjoy a reputation for health certainly inferior to none in the world, and superior, I believe, to those of most other countries. The point was raised, however, that this was not the real objection at the present moment. Hon. Mr. Hanbury said that while he was quite ready to admit that Canadian cattle were perfectly healthy, disease might break out among them at any moment, and in such case the re-imposition of the old embargo would be a difficult matter, as it would cause greater disturbance in the trade and make the condition of affairs worse than if a settled policy were followed. In that view I did not agree, but I was perfectly powerless to influence the decision of the Imperial government. While I was in England many of those interested in the removal of the embargo communicated with me and pointed out that large interests in the old country desired the freer entry of Canadian cattle and the abrogation of the law compelling their slaughter at the port of debarkation within ten days of their arrival. I replied to these gentlemen that while I and my colleagues took every opportunity of urging our views on the government, nothing we could do would be nearly as effective as the efforts of the British people and their representatives themselves. The British people particularly interested did bestir themselves and a number of meetings were held. I had the opportunity of meeting the Board of Trade in Glasgow and also a deputation from the Board of Trade in Aberdeen, and a number of other associations communicated with me either personally or by letter. This agitation culminated, shortly after I left England, in a meeting between Mr. Hanbury, Minister of Agriculture, and a large gathering called by the Board of Agriculture in Scotland. The meeting took place in Edinburgh, and the views of those who desired the embargo removed were laid before the Minister of Agriculture. But his reply was entirely unsatisfactory. Mr. Hanbury said that so long as he remained Minister of Agriculture, he would neither make nor advise any change in the law. And while the views he put forward and the arguments he used did not appeal to me as at all sufficient, at the same time they showed the evident determination of the British government to maintain the status quo, and as the present British government is likely to remain in office some time longer, we may dismiss the idea of getting any concessions in the immediate future.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does the embargo apply to cattle from all countries?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, it applies to all cattle coming into the United Kingdom from all countries. The argument was made that Canada was treated just the same as any other country, but Canada was not so treated in the past. In the past Canada enjoyed a privilege which the others did not. That was withdrawn, in the first instance, by the scheduling of our cattle in 1892, and afterwards the law was changed so that all cattle from foreign countries must be slaughtered in the port of debarkation, and Canada and the other colonies were included in the term 'foreign countries.' We are to-day in exactly the same position as all other countries, but previous to 1892 we were in a better position.

Mr. BOURASSA. I understood the hon. minister to say that there is some correspondence, and as I intend bringing the matter up again before the House, I shall not go further into details. I wish, however, to take objection to the remark of the hon. gentleman that we should leave this thing at a standstill. I was in England at the time the hon. gentleman speaks of, and I know what he did, I know the lectures he delivered and the efforts he made to have the embargo raised, and I know also how these efforts were seconded by some of the stock raisers in Scotland. Surely at a time when we are told that the attention of the British government and public is so much given to Canadian affairs, we should not submit to this injustice without making the strongest protest. The reason given by Mr. Hanbury is not the real one, but of course it would not do for him to give expression to the actual reason why this embargo is imposed. A government wedded to free trade would hardly be expected to declare that the reason which is at the bottom of this restriction is that some wealthy stock raisers in England do not want Canadian competition. Yet, really it is nothing else than a measure of protection against Canadian competition. A few cases of pleuro-pneumonia from Canada, or rather from the United States, furnished a pretense for adopting it. But the disease was stamped out in this country, and there was no further reason of continuing the embargo. Nevertheless the British government passed a statute and branded our cattle as being infected with the disease, although as a matter of fact that disease is much more prevalent among the British stock. And were it not for this statute, which was passed in order to protect the big stock raisers in England, British stock raisers would take Canadian cattle to improve their stock. If the British stock raisers want protection against Canada, let them frankly say so and not brand our cattle as being diseased and poisoned, while at the same time they are much sounder than the British stock. Returning this summer, I came across with an English stock raiser, and a wealthy English merchant from Birmingham. We talked about this matter.

The merchant said to me : 'Of course, the statute as it exists, is a fine thing for my friend—referring to the stock raiser—it is a great thing for him and for others engaged in the same line of business. But, he added, whenever I want to be sure that I am not going to be poisoned, I do not buy the beef raised by my friend, but make a point of asking for Canadian beef.' I said to him : 'If you are so sure that our beef is better than yours, how is it that you leave your government and the protectors of your stock raisers to brand our cattle—and to announce it to the empire and the world—as being poisoned with pleuro-pneumonia.' I hold, Mr. Speaker, that we ought not to allow this session to pass without protesting by resolution, and without appealing to the British government which is supposed to love us so much, to do something to remove this crying injustice.

Mr. DAVID HENDERSON (Halton). This is a vital question to the farmers of Canada. But, possibly, it can be discussed to greater advantage after the papers are brought down in response to the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Bourassa's) motion. I desire to say, however, that I am informed and believe that the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) when in England during the past year, made a very broad statement to the effect that Canada did not ask any preference in the markets of Great Britain, that what we had done in the way of giving a preference to Great Britain was a free gift—we asked nothing in return. Now, if that is the hon. gentleman's view, I think that the appeal of the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) to the Minister of Agriculture to secure the removal of this embargo will not avail very much. I think that some person who holds a different opinion from that attributed to the Minister of Agriculture will have to be appealed to if Canada is to obtain any advantage in the British market

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). It is somewhat refreshing to hear the explanation given by the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) to account for the refusal of the Imperial government to remove this embargo—it is especially refreshing to one who has been in this House for any length of time, and remembers the attacks that were made on the late government when the embargo was put on. The contention of hon. gentlemen opposite who were then on this side was that the embargo was due to the fact that the government of that day were too lax in their quarantine regulations governing cattle from the United States, that there was a danger of importing contagious disease with the cattle from the United States, and so we might naturally expect such an embargo to be placed on our cattle going to Great Britain. It was stated that if the government did their duty and exercised a little of the sunny ways for which hon. gentlemen then on this side were peculiarly noted, there would be no difficulty in getting the embargo removed. They said, in other words, that if able men occupied the treasury benches and made proper representation to the Imperial government, and also improved the quarantine regulation on cattle coming in from the United States, there would be no difficulty in having the embargo removed. The revolutions of time have led to these hon. gentlemen being charged with the duties of looking after this matter. They have, as they say, improved the quarantine regulations between Canada and the United States. And the hon. Minister of Agriculture goes over to Great Britain and asks the Imperial government to remove the embargo. The answer is, practically : We will not do it. Why ? The hon. minister gives various reasons; but, in my judgment, considering the information as it appeared in the press at the time of the hon. minister's visit, the reason for the non-removal of the embargo was that it was a protection to the agriculturists in England and Scotland. Of course, the representatives of the Imperial government did not state that exactly. But they admitted that there was no disease among Canadian cattle. That being so, there was no object in keeping on an embargo intended to exclude diseased cattle from Canada. But notwithstanding this, the embargo is not removed. The hon. minister tells us that it is embodied in the statute, and the statute cannot be changed. Why cannot it be changed ? We change statutes every year of our lives, and the Imperial parliament does the same. I think there is a great deal in what the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) has said. I read in a British paper sent to me, I presume by the hon. minister himself, that the hon. minister stated to the English people : The preference we have given you in our markets we have given you freely, and we want nothing in return—we do not ask to be placed in a better position in your markets than outsiders are. And this he stated at the very time he was there asking for concessions and consideration. I do not think there is much Imperial policy in that. I do not think the expression of such an opinion will help to build up the inter-Imperial relations that we should like to see exist between the colonies and the mother country. In fact, the hon. minister went over to ask a concession, and when there, declared that he did not want concessions. It seemed to me more like child's play than what might be expected from an intelligent statesman. I do not wonder that the British government did not remove the embargo, particularly when the quarantine regulations which were said to be too lax in 1890 and 1891, are very much more lax to-day. British statesmen are aware of that as well as the Minister of Agriculture. The hon. gentleman, therefore, went over to Britain without being fortified as he should have been had he desired to accomplish anything.

Motion agreed to.

CLAYTON-BULWER TREATY AND ALASKAN BOUNDARY.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle) moved for :

Copy of all papers and correspondence exchanged between Canadian and British authorities in relation to the repeal of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, and the settlement of the Alaskan boundary.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I shall be obliged to ask my hon. friend not to press this motion. As he is aware, the negotiations regarding the Alaskan boundary are still going on. The correspondence is not complete and is not in form to be brought down. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will withdraw his motion.

Mr. BOURASSA. Can the right hon. gentleman (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) say if it will be possible to bring down the correspondence relating to the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I am afraid that the two cannot be separated.

Mr. BOURASSA. Will the right hon. gentleman be in a position to make another statement about this question before long, or, at least, before the present session is over?

The PRIME MINISTER. That depends on what turn the negotiations with regard to the boundary may take. If the negotiations are not complete I shall feel it my duty to resist any motion for papers. If the correspondence is brought to a close and if the negotiations are ended, there will be no difficulty about bringing down the papers. In the meantime I am obliged to ask that the motion be withdrawn, or, if not, I shall feel it my duty to ask the House to negative it.

Mr. BOURASSA. Of course, I quite understand that if the government have made up their minds—and I do not say they are wrong—it is useless for me to insist. For in moving for this correspondence, it is useless for me to hope to secure a majority of the House to support me. However, I will not withdraw the motion before I take occasion to state again that the country expects something—not so much concerning a settlement of the Alaska boundary question very soon, because I think our chances of securing a settlement of that question are further off than ever—but of knowing for what reason the British government have consented to the repeal of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty apparently without the slightest effort having been made to secure for Canada a settlement of the Alaskan question. I will not say a final settlement by treaty, for we never asked for such a settlement by a treaty. We have only requested that the treaty which was made between England and Russia and which created the difficulties between England and the United States, after the United States bought the rights of Russia, should be submitted to arbitration. The only thing which the Canadian government, in the name of the Canadian people, asked from the United States government was a consent that this question should be treated exactly according to the same procedure as that followed in the settlement of the Venezuelan question. Certainly this request was in itself a most reasonable one. Not only have the efforts of the International commission been brought to a standstill, but here we had a most favourable occasion, the last of its kind, to ask the United States to consent to the reconsideration of one treaty by England sacrificing some of her conceded rights in another treaty; but Great Britain sacrificed her acknowledged rights, rights given to her by the letter of the treaty, and did not secure for her colonial kinsmen of Canada some consideration, for those rights which she abandoned to the United States, in the form of a consent to an interpretation of the existing treaty by a judicial tribunal. I say the position is most unfair to Canada.

I am not one of those who ask favours from Great Britain. I am not one of those who are in favour of Canada taking risks and entangling herself in British difficulties, and I do not ask Great Britain to be entangled in Canada's difficulties. But surely, under a British government which proclaims that for the love of her colonies, Great Britain is ready to any sacrifice, and under a Canadian government which proclaims that for the love of Great Britain, Canada is willing to make any sacrifice, when it is only a question of obtaining that our rights should be submitted to a judicial arbitration, I think the least we could expect is to be treated as any foreign country would expect to be treated by Great Britain. Have we come to that point that Great Britain can count upon our devotion to such an extent that, even where we had acknowledged rights, she will not make the slightest efforts to have those rights acknowledged ? Sir, it would be most regrettable that this session should end, and that the Prime Minister and his colleagues should go to the foot of the Throne without the Canadian people knowing whether in fact they have been sacrificed by the British government in this matter.

I do not wish to refer to a past debate, but I have already stated that it was published time and again in the American papers that the only obstacle to the repeal of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty for the past few years, was the refusal of the Canadian government to consent to that repeal unless the Alaska boundary question was submitted to arbitration. Well, Sir, where are we ? Has the Canadian government consented to the repeal of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty without the Alaska boundary question being—I will not say settled—but at least considered ? Or is it a fact that the British government has consented to the repeal of that treaty without even consulting the Canadian government ? I think we should know what has taken place.

For six months the Anglo-American commission sat in Quebec and Washington. We had there four representatives of the Canadian government, most able representatives who certainly did their duty to Canada on that occasion. I may remark that I was a personal witness to the efforts and to the intelligence displayed by the Canadian representatives on the Anglo-American commission. Moreover, we had there a representative of the British government appointed for the especial purpose of aiding the Canadian delegates with the influence and strength of the British government so as to secure a fair treatment of the question with the American representatives. I am not at liberty to say to what degree the Anglo-American commission had progressed in their work; but this I am at liberty to state, that after they had sat for six months——

Mr. COCHRANE. We know pretty near.

Mr. BOURASSA. No, hon. gentlemen opposite must acknowledge that I am pretty free in my talk with the government, as a rule, especially for the last two years. Therefore in saying this it is not at all with the intention of flattering the government. Hon. gentlemen can easily understand that when thirteen or fifteen subjects, which were afterwards swelled to some seventeen subjects, were submitted to the commission, it was at least possible that an understanding could have been reached on ten or twelve of those subjects, without an understanding being arrived on the two or three last ones. Therefore it is very possible that, though the apparent result of the commission has been nil, a good deal of work was done nevertheless. In fact I may repeat after what the Prime Minister told us the next year after the adjournment of the commission, that a good deal of work had been done, that the negotiations had been fruitfully conducted until the Alaska boundary question came up and proved the stumbling block which interrupted the work of the commission.

But what happened after that ? One of the Canadian ministers, who was on that occasion one of the British plenipotentiaries, the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Sir Louis Davies, went to London and passed three months there. For what purpose ? He was candid enough to tell us when he came back from England that after the Anglo-American commission had sat for six months, after they were supposed to have had at their back the influence of the British government, he, Sir Louis Davies, was obliged to pass three months in London to convince Mr. Chamberlain's officials that they should not side with the American government, but with us. Sir, I think that was a most unfortunate statement, but I think it was just as well that it should have been made. It is true that it made known to the public of the United States that in dealing with the government of Canada they were not dealing with the British authorities. But it is just as well that the public of the United States and the public of Canada should know that while profuse compliments were being paid to us in the newspapers of Great Britain, and by the speeches of public men in the British parliament, still, when it came to the point of helping the Canadian cause, the British officials sided with a foreign government. It is just as well we should know this, and that we should have it from a high authority, because if you only learned it from myself, no doubt the very loyal gentlemen who are representing here the most loyal element of our population, would say : 'Oh, this is only the Fenian talk of Bourassa !' But we know it from a gentleman who was a representative of the British government, and a representative of the Canadian government; and we have it now confirmed by the further fact that the British government has sacrificed us in the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

Another member of the Canadian government, the late Minister of Justice, Hon. David Mills, published in the British press two very valuable articles stating that in the Clayton-Bulwer treaty Great Britain had acknowledged and secured rights on the continent of America, that those rights she could not sacrifice for the sake of her own honour ; and more than that, if she had any consideration whatever for her Canadian subjects she had no right to abandon one iota of that treaty without at least securing to the Canadian people the acknowledgement of their rights in the Alaska boundary. Great compliments were paid to those articles. The London 'Times' and the whole of the British press, I may say, thought Mr. Mills's statement of the case was a most excellent one, but, again, as on the embargo question, as on the question of immigration, and I may say, as upon every question with which we have had to deal where Great Britain had to side either for or against us, we were given compliments but no acts. Compliments were paid to the articles of Mr. David Mills, but eight days afterwards the rights of Great Britain were sacrificed and the rights of Canada were not given any consideration. I do not blame the government for not bringing the correspondence before the House and the country. No doubt as long as the question is a question we cannot have the correspondence, but when will the question be closed? Are we going to be told year after year that negotiations are still going on? Negotiations may go on for a long while. The American government have no interest in settling negotiations. They hold Canadian territory. They have everything they want. It is not the interest of the American government to close negotiations or bring them to a satisfactory termination. It is not for the interest of the British government because, in this case as in the case of the Alabama claims and in the Trent affair, in this case as in all past cases, the British government will side like providence with the big battalions. Unless the influence of the British government is exerted to protect Canada we may be sure that we will never see that correspondence. I am ready to withdraw my motion, but I would not have withdrawn it without speaking my mind clearly upon the matter. In this matter I am not expressing only my own mind, or only the minds of those who may be opposed to the British government or to Canadian policy towards the British government, but I may say that the Ottawa 'Citizen,' the leading organ of the Tory party in the capital of Canada, published one of the strongest articles possible when it was announced that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty had been repealed. It said that when the American nation was a small growing nation the British press and public were always talking of it in a paternal, supercilious way, but the moment the American nation became a big nation, Great Britain was grovelling and humiliating herself and trying to do everything at the expense of Canada for that country. The next day another article was published in the same newspaper saying that since 1813 there was not one case in which the British government had not sacrificed Canadian interests in favour of American interests. I leave it to gentlemen who think we should do so much to prove our love for the British empire to say whether it is not about time that we should have other evidence besides that of the love of the British newspapers, and British speeches,—whether we should not have a little practical love and be considered as having rights that should not be sacrificed on every occasion for the benefit of the United States.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I would not be drawn into a discussion, at this moment, of the question that is involved, not in the motion, but in the speech of the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa). If he is not satisfied with the condition of the negotiations which have not resulted in a treaty in regard to the Alaskan boundary and which have resulted in an arrangement in regard to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, he is quite within his rights in bringing in any motion he pleases of censure on the British or Canadian government, but, on the question of the production of papers, what I have told him about the papers I repeat, that the papers cannot be brought down for the simple and obvious reason that the negotiations are still pending. The speech of the hon. gentleman is, to say the least, out of place. I am not, more than the hon. gentleman, an admirer of British policy on the continent of America. We have heard it before and for my part I am sorry to say that in many cases Canadians have believed that they have not got their fair due in the past perhaps, but while I make no bones at all about this question and while I am quite free to give my own opinion on this question, I hope we have not come to this that we want Great Britain to go to war with the United States, if, may be, negotiations are continued a little longer than we wish them to be on a matter of long-pending difficulty. We want to preserve good relations with our friends and neighbours to the south of us even though on some occasions our patience is sorely tried. I am sure that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bourassa) would be the last man to suggest that the British government should act like Mr. Kruger and send an ultimatum to the United States. We want to exhaust all means of finding a solution of our difficulties and we do not want to have difficulties with our neighbours. I believe the House will agree with me that we will do better to wait for a few months, or if need be one or two years and try to secure a peaceable settlement of that long-pending question. I am sorry that matters have been so long delayed as they have been, but at all events, it is preferable, and I think I am speaking the sense of the House when I say that we should endeavour to have a practical and peaceable solution of this difficulty. The negotiations are still pending. I hope that before the House prorogues I may perhaps, make a statement to the House on the question because I may say that the question has been engaging the attention of the British government and of the Canadian government as well.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). So far as it is necessary to preserve friendly relations with the United States no one has any fault to find with what the right hon. the leader of the government (Rt. Hon Sir Wilfrid Laurier) has said, but there is this to be observed that the settlement of the Alaskan boundary may be postponed for an indefinite period. The government has been dealing with this question for some three or four years now and since this time last year the right hon. gentleman informs us that not the slightest progress has been made. That position of affairs may continue for ten, fifteen or twenty years. During the whole of that time as has been pointed out, the people of the United States are in occupation of territory which we think belongs to Canada and the simple question is whether or not, during all the time that this matter may remain unsettled without negotiations really being continued at all, we are to be kept out of possession of the papers relating to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. My right hon. friend will see that this is an extraordinary condition of affairs. I do not fully sympathize with everything that the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) has said, here, to-day, but I do see a great deal of force in the suggestion which he has made. Suppose that negotiations are nominally continued but nothing is done from year to year. My right hon. friend, or whoever happens to be the leader of the government comes down and says: Nothing has been done; we cannot get anything done. The government of the United States refuses to submit this question to arbitration and so long as it refuses to do that there would be a dead lock in regard to it. During all this doubtful future period are we to be kept out of the papers relating to a treaty which has been abrogated and relating to a transaction which has been closed? I can recognize the difficulty which the right hon. gentleman has mentioned that possibly the correspondence which has taken place in regard to this matter may include references to the settlement of the Alaskan boundary, but I do not see any difficulties in eliminating from the correspondence that portion which relates to the Alaskan boundary and laying before the House the portion which relates solely and exclusively to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques-Cartier). Mr. Speaker, I venture to suggest to the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa), if he deems it necessary, to withdraw the latter part of his motion in regard to the settlement of the Alaskan boundary. We have, in the statement of the hon. gentleman, some very important admissions. We have the admission that the commission, if I understand him rightly, endeavoured vainly to have the matter of the Alaskan boundary referred to some outside authority for decision.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order, order.

Mr. MONK. We have that admission, and under these circumstances, the commission having failed to obtain that reference, I do not see why the hon. gentleman has not the right to insist upon the correspondence which has passed between the two governments after the commission had ceased to sit, being brought down. It seems to me a logical and proper demand to make. If after that time, correspondence took place between the governments, surely we are entitled to have this correspondence. We should have it. Having that admission from my hon. friend (Mr. Bourassa) it seems to me that we are clearly entitled to have the correspondence which had reference to the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. That is a settled matter; it is a finished matter. I have no doubt that in the British House of Commons that correspondence will be obtained without any difficulty whatever. If the hon. gentleman wishes to withdraw a portion of his motion, I beg of him to leave in that part which calls for the correspondence referring to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. I, for one, wish to see that correspondence, and I do not think that the motion referring to it should be abandoned upon such illogical grounds.

Mr. S. E. GOURLEY (Colchester). Mr. Speaker. I have never agreed with a single word that the hon. member for Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) has uttered in this House either last year or this, until to-day. In fact he has stabbed me to the heart on many occasions as he has stabbed every right thinking loyal British subject in this country. Perhaps my language is strong, but at all events I wanted to make this statement on several occasions last session. I wish to say now, that this subject must be treated during this session in a more substantial manner. It is the most important subject that is to-day before the people of Canada. I was glad to hear the Prime Minister criticise the course of the English government. I am an Imperialist after the strictest sect of the Imperialists, but I want to disassociate the conduct of the Imperial government for sixty years from the conduct of the people of the empire, who would always have defended the government in maintaining their rights even at the expense of war. There is enough loyalty and national feeling in this country to have carried us safely over those disastrous negotiations which we have always had with the United States. But we have always found ourselves in the position that the British government has sold out the interests of the people of Canada, for what they supposed to be Imperial interests. I say that it would have paid the empire a thousand times, to have fought the question out, and I say that as a Canadian, knowing well that the field of battle would be on Canadian soil. But, Sir, I will go into the trenches and take my wife and family with me and stay there for two years if need be to fight for the rights of Canada. I will stay in the trenches to fight the men who refuse to treat the people of Canada honestly. The day has gone by I hope when there is a cowardly Canadian on the soil of this country. The older men of this House may fear war, but I think that the younger generation of this country are not frightened of war. I will face the problem of war to-morrow rather than feel my spirits crushed by cowardly concessions. The spirit of manhood is more to me than cowardly concessions for the sake of peace.

From 1830 to the day of the Fashoda, we had nothing all over the world but a series of the most disastrous humiliations, and it got so that no true Englishman would dare take up his paper at the breakfast table, without fearing to read of a cowardly concession in some quarter of the world that would make him blush. Old Gladstone gave away the whole empire of Africa. We would have had every square mile of Africa if the English government had not been cowardly. It is time for this House of Commons of Canada to speak out. I claim that hereafter, we in Canada will have as much right to discuss the foreign policy of England as have the men gathered in the House of Commons of England. What right have these people gathered around the steps of the Throne to have any more say than we have here in the discussion of the foreign policy of England. I trust that in ten years the House of Commons of Africa, which I hope to see established, and the House of Commons of Australia, and the House of Commons of Canada; the three speaking together will control the little blockheads that sit in the great hall of St. Stephens when they go wrong. I heard a story a few days ago explaining why it was we had such stupidity in the Commons of England. They say men are examined before they are nominated to a seat in the English House of Commons to see that incipient imbecility is thoroughly well established, and unless it is, they cannot be elected. I claim for the House of Commons of Canada a more intelligent grip of foreign affairs affecting the empire than they have in England to-day.

What we want now is a full discussion in this House so that this ministry will know that the time has come when if they sacrifice one foot of Canada soil we will hang them as high as Haman. If it is necessary to fight the Yankees we will fight them within twenty-four hours, and after six months we will capture their capital and annex their country to Canada.

Mr. BOURASSA. I have a slight correction to make in what was said by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier——

Mr. SPEAKER. I do not think the hon. member has a right to speak. He has already spoken twice on the question.

Mr. BOURASSA. It is just a personal explanation.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman has the right to make a personal explanation, but he just stated that he wished to make a correction.

Mr. BOURASSA. It is an explanation. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) said that I admitted that the commission had not secured the submission of the Alaskan boundary question. I would remind the hon. gentleman that the Prime Minister said that two years ago. I cannot consent to separate the motion in the manner suggested by the hon. gentleman, because I am sure of one thing, and that is that if there is correspondence relating to the repeal of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, it cannot be only in connection with the Alaskan boundary. It may be that I will bring up the matter in another form before the session ends.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (South Lanark). The remarks of my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier are perfectly proper. This treaty has been abrogated for some time past. We have had the opinion of the late Minister of Justice published in the newspapers, and spoken of in the highest terms by the 'London Times' and other papers in the centre of the empire, in which he states that this treaty should not be abrogated until there was a settlement of all the questions pending between the United States and Great Britain, and especially this very question affecting Canada. Surely we have the right to see that our representations on that question were properly put before the Imperial authorities, before this treaty was abrogated, especially when we have the statements of the member for Labelle, who is the secretary of that commission, appointed by the Imperial authorities with the consent of the government of Canada, that Great Britain opposed our efforts to have the settlement of the Alaskan boundary question placed before that commission. This is the astounding statement made in this House of Commons, and yet it is made on the authority of the secretary of that commission.

Mr. BOURASSA. The statement was made by Sir Louis Davies, one of the plenipotentiaries.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The statement is made on the floor of this House to-day by the secretary of the commission, who has an Imperial appointment in his pocket. We have at least the right to get a statement from the government of this country and from the right hon. Prime Minister, as to whether there is any truth in such an extraordinary statement as that. It is at all events a very sound reason why we should have all the correspondence in reference to this question, and every document in connection with it placed before the people of this country, so that we may not be forced to depend on ex parte statements. We should at all events have a denial, or if necessary an affirmation of the statement made here, with reference to the conduct of the Imperial authorities in this matter.

Motion (Mr. Bourassa) withdrawn.

THE CENTRAL EXPERIMENTAL FARM.

Mr. URIAH WILSON (Lennox) moved for:

Return showing the names and number of men employed on the 200 acres set apart at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, as a farm proper to be handled as farm, that is, as any farmer's farm might be handled ; mentioned in the evidence of J. H. Grisdale, Esq., given Thursday, April 11th, 1901, at the morning session of the Select Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization. The number of employees and the wages paid to each employee. The total crop of various kinds grown on said 200 acres, and the amount said total crop was sold for.

The PRIME MINISTER. Stand.

Mr. WILSON. I do not propose to discuss this question now. I only move for information.

The PRIME MINISTER. I understood the hon. gentleman to ask that this motion should stand. If he wants to move it now, there is no objection.

Motion agreed to.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

Copy of all papers and correspondence relating to the Coronation of His Majesty the King ; the Imperial Conference which is to be held in London, and the appointment of Canadian delegates to the same.—Mr. Bourassa.

Return showing :—

1. The amount of money spent each year from June 30th, 1891, to June 30th, 1901, on immigration.

2. The number of immigrants reported each year to have settled each year in the Dominion of Canada during the ten (10) years from 1891 to 1901, and the total for the ten years.

3. The number of immigrant agents employed by the Dominion government each year in Great Britain and Ireland from 1891 to 1901, and the total amount paid each year to the said agents, and the amount spent each year for printing and other expenses by the said agents.

4. The number of immigrant agents employed by the Dominion government each year in the continent of Europe from 1891 to 1901, and the total amount paid each year to the said agents ; and amount spent each year for printing and other expenses by the said agents.

5. The number of immigrant agents employed by the Dominion government each year in the United States of America from 1891 to 1901 ; and the total amount paid each year to the said agents ; and amounts spent each year for printing and other expenses by the said agents ; and by the government of the Dominion of Canada. —Mr. Wilson.

Return showing :—

1. The names of all employees in the post office at Belleville, Ontario, on June 30th, 1896, together with the age of each, date of entry in the service, and the salary of each on the said date.

2. The number of employees dismissed from the Belleville post office since June 30th, 1896, with cause and date of dismissal.

3. The number of employees superannuated, the date of their superannuation, reason for their superannuation, how much superannuation allowance has been allowed to each ; giving the names of all said employees so superannuated who have asked to be superannuated.

4. The number of employees employed in the Belleville post office on first January, 1902 ; what were their names and the age and salary of each employee on said date, and date of appointment.—Mr. Wilson.

For correspondence between the department of the Interior or the Minister of the Interior, and Mr. C. R. Devlin, with reference to a letter that appeared in 'United Canada' on the 11th May, 1901, and a letter that appeared in the 'Montreal Hearld' on 18th May, 1901 ; in both of said letters Mr. C. R. Devlin made certain statements regarding members of this House.—Mr. Wilson.

Copies of all letters, telegrams and other correspondence between the governments of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, or any members thereof, respecting trade transportation, cable and other subjects of intercolonial concern.—Mr. Campbell.

Copy of all correspondence, petitions, Orders in Council, and any and all documents in connection with the demands of the Provincial Legislature with regard to the school lands in Manitoba ; moneys derived from sales thereof, together with interest accrued thereon.—Mr. LaRivière.

1. Copies of all applications for any portion of the ground covered by the Matson Concession (so-called), or Lease No. 9, in the Yukon district.

2. Copies of all applications for any portion of the ground covered by the Doyle Concession (so-called), in the Yukon district.

3. Copies of all applications for any portion of the ground covered by the Bronson & Ray Concession, in the Yukon district.

4. A memorandum showing the date on which the application in the Bronson & Ray Concession was granted.

5. Copy of the application for all lay-overs in all these cases.

6. Copies of Orders in Council or other authority under which the Minister of the Interior granted any lay-over in these cases ; and copy of the material, reports or other evidence upon which such lay-overs were granted.

7. A description of the Boyle Concession and a map of same.

8. Copy of the application for Boyle Concession.

9. The exact terms of the application in the case of the Milne Concession.

10. The dates on which this application was made and granted.

11. Map showing ground covered.

12. The date when the application for the Slavin & Gates Concession was made and filed.

13. Copy of Green's original map, with copy of field notes attached in the case of the Slavin & Gates Concession.

14. Copy of telegram from the Deputy Minister of Interior to E. C. Senkler as to the boundaries of this concession, dated on or about the 5th June, 1891.—Mr. Taylor.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR GENERAL—INTERNAL ECONOMY.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) delivered a message from His Excellency The Governor General.

Mr. SPEAKER read the message as follows :—

MINTO.

The Governor General transmits to the House of Commons an approved Minute of Council, appointing the Honourable Sir Richard Cartwright, G.C.M.G., Minister of Trade and Commerce ; the Honourable William Stevens Fielding, Minister of Finance ; the Honourable Joseph Israel Tarte, Minister of Public Works ; and the Honourable James Sutherland, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, to act with the Speaker of the House of Commons as commissioners for the purposes and under the provisions of the 13th Chapter of the Revised Statutes of Canada, intituled : "An Act respecting the House of Commons."

Government House,
Ottawa, 18th February, 1902.

ADJOURNMENT—MINISTERIAL EXPLANATION.

The PRIME MINISTER moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the House adjourns I would remind my right hon. friend that the explanations usually given when changes are made in the cabinet have not yet been forthcoming. We have been in daily expectation of hearing the right hon. gentleman explain the reasons for these changes, and particularly why the well known meritorious claims of my hon. friend from Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) have again been overlooked. If the right hon. gentleman will be good enough to give us these explanations now or at some early day, we shall receive them with great interest. We would also like to know whether the changes made are likely to result in any change in the policy of the government.

I would like also to say to the right hon. gentleman that I propose bringing to his attention in the House, on the first occasion that offers, the advisability of our passing some resolution regarding the baseless charges which have been made against the British forces in South Africa. I simply mention this now in order that the right hon. gentleman may take it into consideration, and will take another opportunity to urge, if necessary, the reasons why a resolution of this kind is advisable. I believe that such a resolution can be so framed as to receive the unanimous support of this House and would be most happy to co-operate with the right hon. gentleman in the matter.

The PRIME MINISTER. I shall take an early opportunity of gratifying the rather fastidious curiosity of my hon. friend with regard to the changes in the cabinet. So far as my information goes, those explanations are only given when changes are made that involve a change of policy, as for instance when a member of the cabinet withdraws because of a difference of opinion between him and his colleagues. Nevertheless I shall waive all technical objections and take the very next opportunity to give my hon. friend the information he desires.

With regard to the other matter which my hon. friend has mentioned, I would simply observe that in matters on which it is desirable that we should take unanimous action, it has always been customary for the leader of the opposition, so far, at all events, as my own experience goes, to bring them privately to the attention of the First Minister before making reference to them in the House.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 4.45 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, February 20, 1902.

The Speaker took the Chair at Three o'clock.

QUESTIONS.

GERMAN DUTIES ON IMPORTS FROM CANADA.

Mr. HENDERSON asked :

What discriminating duties does Germany now impose upon the following Canadian imports, viz.: Apples, butter, barley, beans, buckwheat, clover seed, oats, pease, rye, wheat and agricultural implements ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). I think the expression 'discriminating duties' in the question is apt to be misleading. I do not think it would be correct to state that there are discriminating duties in Germany against Canadian products. Germany has two tariffs ; one of a favoured character which is extended to countries having treaties with Germany ; the other applies to the countries with which Germany has no treaties. Canada having no treaty with Germany, her goods are made subject to the higher tariff, but there is no specific discrimination against Canada.

Mr. HENDERSON. May I be allowed to say that about two years ago——

Mr. SPEAKER. Order.

Mr. HENDERSON. Well, I beg to move the adjournment of the House. About two years ago the same question was asked by the Hon. Mr. Foster, then a member of this House, in exactly the same words, and it was answered by the Minister of Trade and Commerce. I thought that was a good precedent, and I adopted the same words for that reason, thinking the Minister of Finance would give me an answer as the Minister of Trade and Commerce answered the same question.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have answered the question of my hon. friend. I say that there is no discrimination against Canada, but Canada having no treaty with Germany, our goods are subject to the higher tariff. I did not refuse to answer the question.

Mr. HENDERSON. The conditions are the same now as they were at the time the question was asked before, and I simply took that as a precedent, and thought the question would be answered in the same way. I beg to withdraw the motion.

Mr. SPEAKER. There is no motion made, and I would respectfully ask honourable members not to move the adjournment for such purposes, because any question may be brought up on a motion to go into Committee of Supply.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If my hon. friend wants to ascertain the two scales of duties on the specified articles, I will get the information for him.

PRINTING OF BALLOTS.

Mr. MONK—by Mr. Casgrain—asked :

1. By whom were the ballots used in the last election of St. James Division, Montreal, printed ?
2. How many ballots were printed for said election ?
3. What was the cost of said printing ?
4. Why were not said ballots printed at the government Printing Bureau ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). To the first and fourth questions, the answer is that the ballots were first printed at the Printing Bureau according to the form prescribed by the statute, a copy of which I now lay upon the Table of the House. The ballots so printed were sent to the returning officer, with the particulars—the names of the candidates, etc.—left to be printed at the local printing office. In this case the particulars were printed at the office of 'La Patrie.' The cost was $19.25. The number of ballots so sent for St. James division was 11,000.

Mr. MONK—by Mr. Casgrain—asked :

1. By whom were the ballots used in the last Laval election printed ?
2. How many ballots were printed for said election ?
3. What was the cost of printing said ballots ?
4. What is the total number of persons employed at the government Printing Bureau ?
5. How many have been dismissed since 1st January, 1901 ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The answer is similar to that given to the previous question. The ballots were first printed at the Printing Bureau, and were then sent to the returning officer with the particulars left to be printed at a local printing office. In the case of Laval 6,000 were sent. I think the number of electors there is about 5,000. The local particulars were also printed at the office of 'La Patrie.' I have not yet the information as to the cost. The number of employees in the Printing Bureau is 440. None have been dismissed since Jan. 1, 1901, but 26 have been suspended.

TELEGRAPH LINES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Mr. MONK—by Mr. Casgrain—asked :

1. What is the total amount expended by the government on telegraph lines in British Columbia and the Territories since the 1st September, 1896, up to the present time ?
2. What proportion of this total amount has been expended under contract and tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. (Hon. J. I. Tarte). If the hon. gentleman will be good enough to make a motion, the whole statement will be brought down.

PAYMENT TO NEWSPAPERS.

Mr. MONK—by Mr. Casgrain—asked :

1. What is the total amount paid by the government to the Montreal 'Herald' newspaper since the 15th July, 1896, up to the present date?
2. What is the total amount paid by the government to the Toronto 'Globe' during the same period ?
3. What is the total amount paid by the government to the Halifax 'Chronicle' during the same period ?
4. What is the total amount paid by the government to 'Le Soleil' of Quebec during the same period ?
5. What is the total amount expended by the government in the relief of distressed Canadians abroad during the same period ?
6. Why is not the entire government printing done at the government Printing Bureau ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). The information relating to questions 1, 2, 3 and 4 is already before the House, and will be found in the Auditor General's reports for the several years, the items being particularly mentioned. In answer to question 5, my hon. friend the Minister of the Interior will be able to give the information, he hopes, to-morrow. To question 6, it is not always possible for the Bureau to do the work required by the government promptly, and therefore a portion of it has to be sent outside.

EMPLOYMENT OF OSCAR BEAUCHAMP.

Mr. LEONARD asked :

1. Is Oscar Beauchamp in the employ of the government, and what position does he hold at St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary ?
2. When was he appointed to such position ?
3. On what recommendation has he been appointed ?
4. Is the government aware that Oscar Beauchamp, deputy warden of the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, was one of the most active organizers of the last election in Laval, in favour of Charles A. Wilson, one of the candidates ?
5. Has the government been informed that the same Oscar Beauchamp organized public meetings in favour of one of the candidates in the said election ?
6. What attitude does the government purpose taking in regard to public employees who take active part in a Federal election ?
7. Have the employees of the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary the right and permission to make use of the government horses and vehicles for the purpose of political organization in a Federal election ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Chas. Fitzpatrick) :

1. Oscar Beauchamp is deputy warden of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary. He was appointed on the 21st February, 1899, on the recommendation of the then Minister of Justice. To the fourth and fifth, I say no. With respect to the 6th and 7th, certain vicious practices had crept into St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary previous to 1896, and we have done our best to suppress them, and I hope we shall be able to do so in the near future.

PHYSICIAN OF ST. VINCENT DE PAUL PENITENTIARY.

Mr. LEONARD asked :

1. Has the government appointed a successor to the late Dr. Fortier as physician of the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary ?
2. If so, who has been appointed ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Chas. Fitzpatrick) :

1. Yes.
2. Dr. Adolphe Allaire.

POSTMASTER OF ST. JEROME.

Mr. LEONARD asked :

1. Who is the postmaster of St. Jérome, county of Terrebonne ?
2. Has the government been informed that Daniel Longpré, postmaster of St. Jérome, during the last election, remained actively working in favour of Charles C. Wilson, one of the candidates, in the county of Laval ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Wm. Mulock). The answer to the first question is Dr. Daniel Longpré. The government has not been informed that Daniel Longpré, postmaster at St. Jérôme, during the last election, remained actively working in favour of Charles C. Wilson, one of the candidates in the county of Laval.

ST VINCENT DE PAUL PENITENTIARY COAL SUPPLIES.

Mr. LEONARD asked :

1. Who is, or who are, the coal supplier or suppliers to St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary during the year 1901 and 1902 ?
2. What amount of coal has been purchased for that institution from the 1st of April, 1901, from each of the suppliers ?
3. What prices have been paid for each kind of coal purchased ?
4. Were public tenders called for ? If so, in what newspapers and at what dates were they published ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Chas. Fitzpatrick) :

1. E. Cavanagh & Co., contractors for hard coal ; T. F. Moore & Co., for soft coal ; A. Baile, for coal screenings.

2. No coal was purchased between April 1st and June 30, 1901. The following quantities have since been purchased :—E. Cavanagh & Co., 1,350 tons ; T. F. Moore & Co., 1,053 tons; A. Baile, 825 tons.

3. Furnace coal, $5.53 per ton ; egg coal, $5.66 per ton ; stove coal, $5.89 per ton ; soft coal, $4.33 per ton ; soft coal screenings, $3.70 per ton.

4. Public tenders were called for. The advertisement inviting tenders was inserted in the following papers published in the province of Quebec :—Montreal—'Herald,' 'La Patrie,' 'Witness,' 'Shareholder' ; Quebec—'Le Soleil,' 'Telegraph'. Sherbrooke—'Le Progres.' St. Hyacinthe—'L'Union.' 'La Tribune.' Three Rivers—'L'Etoile.' Arthabaskaville — 'L'Union.' The advertisement was issued by the King's Printer on May 31st, 1901, but the department is not aware of the exact dates on which the advertisement was published in the several newspapers.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Annual Report of the Department of the Interior for the year 1901 ; also Annual Report of the Department of Indian Affairs for the same year.—Hon. Clifford Sifton.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND COMMUNICATION.

Mr. A. A. LEFURGEY (East Prince) moved for :

Copies of all petitions, letters, telegrams or correspondence of any kind during the past year between the Board of Trade of Charlottetown and Summerside, Prince Edward Island, and the Ministr of Marine and Fisheries, or any member of the government, with reference to the placing of the winter steamer 'Stanley' upon the route between Summerside, Prince Edward Island, and Cape Tormentine, New Brunswick.

He said : Last year I brought this matter before the House and took occasion to point out the obligation which the Dominion is under to keep up steam communication at all times of the year between Prince Edward Island and the mainland, and the unsatisfactory manner in which that obligation is performed. I also pointed out that the shortest and safest route both for passengers and freight was between Summerside and Cape Tormentine, and that the steamer 'Stanley,' which was then lying at Georgetown at the disposal of the government, should be put on that route in order to ascertain its practicability. Some of the men most experienced in navigating through the ice in our province were confident that this route was very practicable, but the test was continually postponed on untenable excuses. The piers were not in repair, although the Department of Public Works had ample time to put them in condition, and had promised to do so. At all events the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries did not take any action apparently on account of local prejudices, with which he was shackled and to preserve his eastern support, but now we have a new Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland), who is apparently actuated by a desire to have the best route between the island and the mainland put to a proper test. He has had the 'Stanley' put on this route, and the result has been eminently satisfactory, in spite of the obstacles thrown in the way of giving the route a fair and impartial trial.

I have in my hand a copy of a letter addressed to the hon. the Minister of Marine and Fisheries by the Summerside board of trade, which I propose to read to the House :

February 13th, 1902.

Hon. James Sutherland,
Minister, Marine and Fisheries,
Ottawa.

Dear Sir :—After patiently watching the operations of the 'Stanley' on the Summerside—Cape Tormentine route, we are compelled to enter a protest against the manner in which, the intentions of your department are being carried out.

From the first it has been glaringly apparent that the heart of the captain and of the entire crew, has been averse to the success of the test of this winter route.

Without going into a detailed history of the working of the ship from the first, we beg to submit a few of the more recent incidents. It has been claimed that a cordon of ice had formed near the outer edge of the harbour board ice by a strong westerly gale a few days previously, through which Capt. Brown claimed it was almost impossible to put the steamer.

On Tuesday, 4th inst., some 60 or 70 men accompanied the ship—sent out by the board of trade—with the intention of cutting through the cordon. The steamer went out at an exceedingly rapid rate, taking about thirty minutes to get through a cut of about 3½ miles. The men worked where directed by the officers of the ship, for about three hours, when the steamer was backed up avoiding the cutting made, and went through by another way without assistance and without much difficulty ; she returned the same evening without going to the edge of the board ice.

On Wednesday, 5th, again accompanied by 25 men she went out rapidly to the place she left the previous evening ; she was run into heavy ice and stuck. The first officer directed the men to clear away the ice from the bows, which, from the experience of the day before, the men protested against doing, but a captain of the ice-boat service—who was a passenger—indicated another route. The latter route was bushed and the steamer went through it into open water without further difficulty, showing conclusively, that the steamer, properly managed, could have been put through this cordon without any outside assistance.

Having got through into open water at one p.m., instead of proceeding on her voyage to Cape Tormentine, which she could have done quite easily, and where she could have reached without difficulty, she proceeded to within two miles of Carleton Head, island side, with a clear lead of water four miles ahead and two miles wide, turned and came back to Summerside, arriving at four o'clock, p.m. It will be observed that the steamer was more than half way to her destination, returning thence to Summerside in less than two hours when she could have reached her destination in much less time.

On Thursday, 6th, she left Summerside at 7 a.m., and instead of going through her cut as rapidly as she did on the two previous days, when the men who were sent out to assist, were on board and as she did on the previous evening when returning, she took three hours in making the distance to the board ice. No condition of weather obtained to account for this difference; and had she gone this morning as she did on previous days,—and as we are satisfied she could have done—she could have reached Cape Tormentine quite easily and returned that day. Instead, she only succeeded in going about half the distance when it commenced to snow, when she returned to the board ice where she remained until the following morning.

Instead of getting away next (Friday) morning at 7 o'clock as she should have done, and made the trip while the weather was clear, she delayed till 9 o'clock a.m., before leaving, with the result that she again met thick weather and did not cross till the next day, Saturday, when she reached Tormentine at about mid-day. She lay at Tormentine till Monday morning, 10th, when she returned to Summerside ; since when and up to this writing, even worse manipulation has been going on. For instance, on Wednesday, 12th, she left here at 7 a.m., arriving at Tormentine at 11.15 a.m., with only two cars of freight to discharge,—one to take in. And notwithstanding the most favourable conditions, she lay there all night.

On Tuesday, 11th,—the finest day of the winter—she lay at the wharf at Summerside making no attempt to effect a crossing. And so it has been from first to last, with other instances even more glaring than those related. In addition to this we have to say, that the captain's language in the presence and hearing of passengers has been such as to call forth indignant protests on their part.

It is just possible that these difficulties have arisen through the captain's age and consequent timidity, which last characteristic appears to be most pronounced. We have also, good cause to believe that the agent of the department at Charlottetown is aiding and abetting, if not directing, the captain in the adverse manipulations of this ship. In a word, the whole course of this test has been, and is known to have been, a farce, which we respectfully ask the department to investigate and amend.

To avoid a repetition of the difficulties complained of, we would suggest, that with the captain—or with another captain, if the department sees fit to displace the present officer,—an experienced ice-boat captain be employed by the department to act as an ice pilot.

We have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servants,

D. H. CURRIE,

On behalf of Council, Summerside Board of Trade.

This document contains specific charges against the officials of this boat, and implicates also the agent of the Department of Marine and Fisheries at Charlottetown. It is a direct impeachment of the captain—one that calls for an immediate investigation. If the captain of the 'Stanley' is too old or too timid, he should be discharged and a younger and more capable man put in his place. There are certainly other men competent to take charge of the boat. If, on the other hand, he is acting under the advice of the agent in Charlottetown, who appears to be of too vacillating a nature and incompetent to direct the operations, the sooner that official is removed the better. All we ask is that the test, which the people of Prince Edward Island have been for years calling for, should be given every assistance by the department. So far it has proved successful, and should not be further hampered by any incapacity on the part of the officers or agent of the department.

There is another cause also which operates against the complete success of this route. Although the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has been apparently doing everything possible on his part and is evidently not cognizant of the actions of the officers of his department or of the 'Stanley,' he evidently has not the co-operation of the Post Office Department. We find that when this boat was put on the route and was making daily trips, carrying passengers and mails, private individuals, on two different occasions, had to hire special trains to carry passengers and mails from Summerside to Charlottetown. This is a condition of affairs which should not be allowed to exist in this twentieth century. Every facility should be given for the transmission of passengers and mails, and such neglect on the part of the government should meet with prompt condemnation. We were promised a dredge at Tormentine last year to facilitate the landing of freight from the 'Stanley.' And, notwithstanding the promise which was, as I believe, made by the department, the dredge was taken down and was kept at work practically doing nothing all summer, in the locality of Murray Harbour. All I wish to say further is that, the superiority of this route being established, it seems too bad that the intention of one department should miscarry by the non-co-operation of other departments. I would respectfully ask the Minister of Public Works to do all in his power to put the pier at Cape Tormentine in proper condition before next season. I would also ask the Postmaster General to see to it that we have train communication along with the boat. Since the mail has been transferred, as it has been during the past week, when the Str. 'Minto' was fast in the ice, I notice we are getting our mails more regularly and the steamer is making more regular trips, showing that, when the department takes hold of the matter, owing to the necessity of transporting the mail, the officers are ready and willing to perform their duty. I conclude my remarks by asking the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries to investigate this matter at the earliest possible moment and have it put to rights.

Mr. EDWARD HACKETT (West Prince, P.E.I.) I desire to make only an observation or two in support of what has been said by my hon. friend (Mr. Lefurgey). This question has been brought to the attention of this hon. House many times in the past. And it will be brought to the attention of the House many times again, I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, so long as justice is not done to the people of Prince Edward Island.

Last year, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries of that time was absent in Prince Edward Island when the discussion of this subject came up. The two boats, the 'Minto' and the 'Stanley,' were blocked in the ice between Georgetown and Pictou, and the hon. gentleman, after coming here from Prince Edward Island, was obliged to admit that he had been imprisoned for twelve days in Prince Edward Island because the government steamers could not keep up communication with the mainland. In calling attention to these matters, we are not speaking solely in the interests of the people of Prince Edward Island, but in the interests of the people of Canada. For, the people of every province have large dealings with the people of Prince Edward Island, and immense quantities of manufactured goods and other merchandise from all parts of Canada are being sold in the island province. It is very necessary in the interests of all who engaged in or benefited by that trade that communication should be maintained in the winter as well as in the summer, as was guaranteed to the people of Prince Edward Island at Confederation. Sir, after this matter had been brought up last year, and after it had been admitted that communication between Prince Edward Island and the mainland had not been maintained, what did the government do ? So clear was it that the terms of Confederation had not been fulfilled and that communication had not been maintained, that the government actually gave compensation to the extent of $30,000 a year to the people of Prince Edward Island for non-fulfilment of these terms. I believe that if both these boats had been kept on between Georgetown and Pictou, instead of having one running between Summerside and Cape Tormentine, communication would not be kept up constantly with the island. But if the advantages of the western route are recognized, and if these boats are efficiently managed, there need never be any occasion for further demand for compensation. The steamer was brought there at the urgent request of the people of Prince county. And I wish to say that I do not blame the hon. minister, for I believe that he has done his very best in this connection. He saw that there were two boats and that, in justice to the people of the western part of the province, one should be brought there to keep up communication. We have no fault to find with the hon. minister in this regard, but we do find fault with the captain of the boat and his officials. We were told last year that the 'Stanley' could not ply to Cape Tormentine, because there were not proper terminal facilities for handling the freight. Last year the government—I do not know which department—constructed there a good warehouse. I was surprised, when I last crossed from Summerside to Cape Tormentine, to find that that warehouse was packed with goods from every province intended for consignees in Prince Edward Island. But, owing to the incompetence and neglect, and want of energy, of the captain of the boat, these goods remained in the warehouse for days before they could be transported to Prince Edward Island. I took occasion to travel by that boat. I am a strong advocate, as strong as my abilities will permit, of testing the western route. On Thursday, the 6th of February, I sought to cross from Prince Edward Island by that boat on my way to the Capital. We had a fine morning. The people of Summerside had turned out en masse the day before to cut through the cordon or ice bridge that had formed at the mouth of the harbour. We went that Thursday morning from the wharf to the outer edge of the cordon in about two or three hours. The captain made an attempt to push on to Cape Tormentine to land his passengers. He went about a mile or so outside the harbour into the straits of Northumberland, where there was nothing but floating ice alternating with great stretches of open water. Yet, the captain turned around, and in the evening we were at the mouth of Summerside harbour, after losing twenty-four hours of precious time. But I would like to remark that, whereas the usual time of leaving Summerside wharf is seven o'clock in the morning, on this second day, though the weather was fine and everything favourable for a start, the captain did not leave his berth until nine o'clock. On Friday we started again and made progress through the ice until within a few miles of Tormentine wharf when a snow storm came on and the captain returned again to Summerside harbour. If he had left in the morning at seven o'clock he would have landed the passengers at Cape Tormentine as he was required to do by his instructions; but after being in the Straits all of Friday, on the next Saturday afternoon he landed us at Cape Tormentine. I can assure the minister that this letter of the Summerside Board of Trade conveys to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries the sentiment of the people of that section of the country, and of the people of Prince Edward Island generally. I can assure him also that this is not a party question. The Hon. R. C. McLeod, President of the Summerside Board of Trade, is one of the members of the Liberal government in the province of Prince Edward Island. The gentleman who wrote this communication, Mr. D. K. Currie of Summerside, is the editor of the 'Pioneer,' the government organ in that town. It is therefore not a party matter. It is simply a case of the people of the western end of the province standing up for their rights without any bias of party feeling. We are asserting our rights, we are asking what is only a matter of justice. As I said before, so far as the minister is concerned, there is not a word of complaint, but in connection with the captain and the officers of that boat there is great cause for complaint. I don't want to say here that the captain, using his judgment, was not perhaps correct, but I say that what has occurred, according to this memorandum of the Board of Trade to the minister, requires to be investigated. Let him ascertain whether it was owing to any want of energy, any want of push, or old age, or whether it was owing to any political influences surrounding him in the east end of the island. It is said that many people living at Charlottetown and at Georgetown are opposed to this western route. If it was any of these influences that I have mentioned which delayed the boat which was sent there for the purpose of making a thorough test of the navigation of that route, I say the matter should be investigated, and the men who were guilty of culpable neglect or worse, should be dismissed from the government service.

This may be the last for some years that you will hear of this matter, because I trust that the minister will act, having now proper facilities at Cape Tormentine. I am sorry to say that when it became known that the dredge 'Prince Edward,' used for dredging the harbours of Prince Edward Island and the neighbouring coast of New Brunswick, had been ordered to Cape Tormentine in connection with the opening up of the route there in order that the steamer 'Stanley' might lay alongside of the pier, then there was some political action by people living east about Murray harbour, people having political issues at stake, which took that dredge away from where she had been ordered by the department, for the purpose of advancing certain political interests in another direction. I say it was a mistake, more than that, it was wrong to take that dredge away because a few individuals in the eastern end of the province required her services in order to advance their political interests. All we want in the western part of Prince Edward Island is justice and fair play. That is all we require of this government. We may fight them hard, and we do fight them hard, and they fight us hard, but we do not want them to use the public money of this country for the purpose of advancing the political interests of the local government at the expense of the people of any section of this country.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. I. Tarte). I am sorry indeed that the hon. gentleman has yielded to the temptation once more of speaking of things that he does not seem to know much about. There is, as we all know, a place called Cape Tormentine, he should know all about it, and still he speaks of it as if he did not know anything about it. When we took office, there was a wharf there, a pier that had been built with material that the worms had eaten up almost entirely. The work could not hold together, as my hon. friend should know. We had to repair that work at great cost. We could not repair it as fast as my hon. friend would have liked, perhaps, or would have done if he had had half a million dollars at his disposal. The work was badly built, we could not rebuild it, and we have been repairing it. It is not our fault that the condition of affairs exists there of which the hon. gentleman complains, it is the fault of those who built the pier, and my hon. friend should know it. He does know it, but of course he has exaggerated the evil and has made a false impression on the House. The work was badly built, and we could not rebuild it in a day or two. Nor can it be said that the dredge should have been sent there some time ago. Sir, there is in this country a very important island called Prince Edward; a dredge was set apart for the benefit of Prince Edward Island. There is also a place on Prince Edward Island called Summerside. When we took office there were no harbour works there. I have given a contract for the erection of harbour works, and my hon. friend, instead of giving credit to me, sacrifices me to the best of his ability, and tries to create a bad impression on the House against my department. In two words, the works at Cape Tormentine built by the former government were no good, they had been destroyed when we took office, and on this side of the island there were no works at all. We are now erecting these works, and the hon. gentleman is not pleased. Well, I cannot at the present time do anything more for him, except to invite him to exercise a little more moderation when he speaks of things for which his political friends in the past are to blame.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). There can be no objection to bringing down the papers moved for by my hon. friend from Prince Edward Island (Mr. Lefurgey). I must, however, express some regret at the feeling that has been exhibited by the members for the county in discussing the efforts of the captain, under the direction of the department, in endeavouring to find out whether it is practicable to have winter navigation between the points named. Remembering the discussions that have taken place in parliament in years past, and the manner in which this matter has been often pressed upon the attention, not only of the present government but of former governments, on representations made by the Board of Trade of Summerside, and having at our disposal the government boat 'Stanley' I thought it was better to make an earnest, businesslike and honest effort to see whether there was a practicable winter route betwen Summerside and Cape Tormentine. I took counsel with the committee of the board of trade, and I must say that I have discussed with them almost everything in connection with this matter, and accepted their suggestions in almost every respect. After deciding to go on with the trial, and giving instructions as to how it was to be carried on, the board of trade expressed their approval of everything that was done. I must admit that probably as the head of the department I went further than is usual in cases of this kind, because I recognized, and recognize now, that we were risking property, and perhaps the lives of the officers on the boat, and of the passengers that might be on that boat, by forcing the captain to take more risks than in his judgment he thought he should. However, as I said at the request of the members of the board of trade, and hearing what they had to say, and remembering the criticisms of the past, I have pressed upon the agent in the island, Mr. Lord, I think his name is, and the captain of this boat the great necessity of trying to remove any cause of criticism and fault finding with regard to the effort that was made.

My hon. friend, although representing that district, cannot help but know that there is something to be said on both sides and that while he may earnestly think that this route may be successfully navigated I may say that I only hope with him that it may be found to be so. There have been found in the past, and I am afraid in the present trial, great difficulties to contend with. In view of the criticisms that have been made of the representative of the department on the island and of the captain of the boat—I may say that the council of the board of trade, in the hon. gentleman's constituency spoke of the captain, who has been in charge, in the highest possible terms characterizing him as a man capable of undertaking the work and one in whose integrity they have every confidence. At their suggestion I took a pilot living, I think, in Summerside; at least a man who had been on that route for a great many years for a commercial company, so that it would give the greatest possible satisfaction to the people of the district to know that they had a man in charge in whom they had implict confidence and who was also familiar with every foot of the district, both land and water. Further than that I would like to take this opportunity of saying that I think my hon. friend is somewhat mistaken in regard to the feeling of the people of the eastern portion of the island, or of Charlottetown. When the matter was under discussion I received a resolution from the Board of Trade of Charlottetown, a competing port, I suppose, requesting that an effort should be made to find out whether winter navigation could be maintained or not; so that, officially, I have no reason to believe but that the people of that city and of that section of the island were in full sympathy with every effort which was being made. I am told that in the past certain little jealousies had existed, political and otherwise, but so far as I am concerned I can assure my hon. friend who has spoken I have not the slightest intimation from any representative or individual, but what was favourable to going on with this work and making every possible effort to carry it out successfully. I think I may say to the House that I went just as far as it was possible for a minister taking the responsibility in giving instructions to the captain and officers of the boat to make every effort to carry out this work. I may briefly refer to the instructions given to the officers in charge. The agent was instructed to :—

Direct the captain to proceed to Summerside to be in readiness for beginning trips between Summerside and Cape Tormentine when the Steamer 'Northumberland' is withdrawn.

If I understand it the steamer 'Northumberland' is a boat belonging to a commercial line which does the work in the summer time and as soon as it is found to be dangerous on account of ice the government steamer would be ready to be put on this route.

It is the purpose of the department to keep up communication as far as possible by giving this new route a fair trial and every possible effort should be made by you consistent with the safety of the ship and mails, and the lives of the crew and passengers to keep the steamer running. The department will rely upon your discretion and judgment to make the experiment as successful as possible and also to determine whether the winter route between Summerside and Cape Tormentine is practicable.

I may say to the members from that locality and to the members of the board of trade who represented the citizens of the district and on whose representations I authorized this trial to be made, for fear that something might arise such as the hon. gentleman has referred to here to-day and because there would be differences of opinion, that I went to the length that in case of any difficulties being met with, before taking any action to stop the effort that was being made, the captain was instructed to consult with the hon. Mr. Yeo, the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) and the members of the council and the board of trade. It reads here : 'The members of the Board of Trade of Summerside'. I thought it was the council only that I had in mind. If so, this instruction has gone farther than I intended ; therefore, he was to consult with the members of the board of trade before ceasing the effort that he was directed to make. He was also given full authority to wire the department under any circumstances. In conclusion I may say that so far as I am concerned and so far as the officers of the department were concerned, there was nothing suggested to be done by the representatives of the district but what was done and as evidence of that I have had letters, and I have a resolution passed by the people of the district, expressing great satisfaction that the action was taken and that the details of it were being carried out. Although I cannot agree with the criticisms that are being made of the captain to show that at least I am still honest and desirous of making every effort to have this work carried out I may state that yesterday I sent this telegram on the receipt of the letter to which the hon. gentleman referred.

Ottawa, 19th February, 1902.

Hon. R. C. McLeod,
Summerside, P. E. I.

I am in receipt of resolution from Summerside Board of Trade. The department has every confidence in Captain Brown's ability and integrity but I would be willing nevertheless to send down Captain McElhinney the nautical adviser of the department to advise with you if desired.

(Sgd.) JAMES SUTHERLAND.

I have gone futher ; I have asked them to suggest to me the name of any one with the technical knowledge necessary under these circumstances to take charge of the boat. If my hon. friend will suggest a man of character and ability to assist in carrying out this work to see whether or not there has been any lack on the part of the department or of the captain and officers of the boat, I would be only too glad as the head of the department to see that his suggestion is adopted and that every effort possible is made—I may add consistently with using reasonable judgment, and with considering the safety of property and of lives. I do not think that my hon. friend, or any other hon. gentleman, would ask me to insist upon the captain or the officers of the boat committing a useless reckless act. I have made inquiries and even from the members themselves I have the highest recommendations of the captain of the boat who is described as a man of ability and of character and I would be very sorry to know that there is any reason for feeling that he had not been making every effort in the direction in which he has been instructed to proceed. I have chosen I believe, an officer of standing, being at the head of this branch, a man who I am told is familiar with the locality and I believe every person—at least representative men in the island on both sides of politics—have every confidence in his integrity and ability in connection with this matter. Instead of stopping here, or admitting any defeat in the trial that we are making, I would be pleased to have him go down there and advise with the board of trade and with the members of the council in regard to this work. I have no objection to bringing down the papers in connection with the matter.

Mr. A. A. LEFURGEY (East Prince, P.E.I.) Mr. Speaker, I may just say for my own part and for my constituency that we have no intention of finding any fault with the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) for the action he has taken in the matter, nor can any fault be found with the instructions he has given to the agent of the department down there. Still the charges made might very well occur under these instructions without any fault of the minister. Whatever communication or conversation he had with members of the board of trade at the time the arrangement was made, this letter came to us from the board of trade and we were bound to take notice of it. The board of trade is a non-political body and it has for its president one of the members of the local government, which is Liberal. Coming with such strong protestations against the officers and the captain of the boat, we simply had to bring it to the notice of the minister that he might take action on it. For my own part, I think that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has been doing all in his power, in the light of the knowledge at his command, in the interest of that route.

Motion agreed to.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

Statement in detail showing the quantity of vegetables imported from the United States and entered at the ports of Montreal and Toronto during the years 1900 and 1901 respectively, as well as of the amount of duties collected by the government of Canada during the said two years, at each one of the said ports.—Mr. Leonard.

Copies of all petitions, resolutions, letters, &c., addressed to the government in relation to an increase or a readjustment of the duties on vegetables, and of all replies sent by the government to said resolutions, petitions and letters.—Mr. Leonard.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Charges of management, $181,743.80.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The principle item of the increase in this vote is $10,000 for the printing of Dominion notes. That is due to the fact, as the House will readily understand, that the circulation of our Dominion notes is constantly expanding, and also to some extent to the fact that there is a demand on the part of gentlemen both inside and outside of parliament, that we shall supply more notes and cleaner notes.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There has been criticism that the notes are not as good as they ought to be, and in order to do away with the necessity for that criticism we intend to try as far as possible to give a constant supply of new notes. That, together with the expansion of circulation, called for an increased appropriation.

Mr. HENDERSON. Is the minister calling in old soiled notes as rapidly as possible?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes. Perhaps I ought to explain that the banks can almost always obtain clean notes if they desire to issue them. I suppose it is a matter of opinion as at what stage a note becomes unfit for circulation. Some bankers would be very fastidious while others might not be so. Our rule is to supply clean notes whenever the others are returned to us. We intend to do that on a larger scale in the future than in the past, in order to meet the disposition of the public to have clean notes. I do not want to adopt the rule of the bank of England, which is that when a note is once issued and returned it never goes out again. I think we can meet the wishes of the people by a moderate extension of our present system.

Mr. HENDERSON. The action of the minister is very commendable, especially in view of the existence of small-pox throughout the country. I know that bankers are very much annoyed about the condition of these bills and they would prefer very much to have a frequent issue, instead of being compelled to handle these old musty notes which no doubt tend to spread disease.

Mr. SPROULE. They should disinfect them.

Mr. OSLER. I am glad to learn from the Minister of Finance that he proposes to expend more money in the printing of Dominion notes. I think he is rather out when he states that the government is always ready to supply the banks with clean notes. To my knowledge it is a most difficult matter to get from the Receiver General new $1 bills or any kind of $1 bills at all in some seasons of the year. It is almost impossible in Toronto to get a sufficient number of $1 bills to supply the every day requirements of the banks, and so they have to use the old bills over and over again. I am glad to see an increase in this item if it will result in giving a plentiful supply of fairly clean government notes of the smaller denominations.

Governor General's Secretary's Office, including A. F. Sladen at $1,700, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $10,740.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a slight increase, chiefly owing to the advancement of Mr. Sladen, who is virtually one of the Governor General's private secretaries. The other increases are $50 and $30 statutory increases to one clerk and one messenger.

Mr. SPROULE. You have an increase in this department of nearly $1,000—quite a respectable increase. There were increases last year and the previous year as well, so that you seem to be running it up pretty rapidly.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think the number of the staff was increased, but one or two gentlemen in the office have been advanced, for reasons which I think are satisfactory to the Governor General's secretary.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. What is the reason for the clause, 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act?' Has he not passed his examination?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, but he could only be given a $50 increase by the usual method. This gives him a larger sum.

Office of the King's Privy Council of Canada, $31,240.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the hon. minister explain the increase?

The PRIME MINISTER. A new chief clerk is appointed, Mr. F. K. Bennett. He is simply transferred from the first-class without any increase of salary. One junior second-class clerk is promoted to the second class. He now receives $1,000, being at the head of his class, and the change involves an increase to $1,100. There is an increase of $30 for a mesenger and the usual statutory increase of $50 for each of the others.

Mr. SPROULE. I notice that you give the statutory increase of $50 in only a few instances.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is pretty generally given.

The PRIME MINISTER. So far as my department is concerned, I have found all my officers to be deserving of the statutory increase, and I have given it to all except one who was at the highest of his class, and I promoted him.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Are you increasing the staff by appointing another first-class clerk?

The PRIME MINISTER. No. Mr. May, who is promoted, has been twenty years in the service. The number of officers is exactly the same as last year—twenty-three.

Mr. INGRAM. Is this Mr. Bennett the man who was engaged in the Post Office Department?

The PRIME MINISTER. No, he has been in the Privy Council office for twenty years.

The Department of the Secretary of State, including W. Foran at $1,400, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $38,510.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The increase is due to thirteen statutory increases of $50 each, one special increase to Mr. Foran of $100, and a statutory increase to a messenger of $30.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the hon. minister explain why it is that the government appear now to have adopted the principle that not only are all the civil servants eligible for the statutory increase, but all are entitled to it, whereas in previous years it was repeatedly said that only those would get it who were recommended as specially deserving.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not think the government has any different view as to the legal aspect of the case. We have been advised that as a matter of law or right, these gentlemen are not entitled to it. Its payment is discretionary, but the discretion is being exercised this year and last year more liberally than previously.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Has every officer who has been reported by the deputy as entitled to the statutory increase got it?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. And only those who are reported get it?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Except in one case, in which the name is specially mentioned.

The Department of Public Printing and Stationery, $30,300.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The increase is explained by thirteen statutory increases at $50, one promotion, which adds $100, and two $30 increases to messengers.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Who is the person promoted?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Mr. G. Andrews.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Was there a vacancy in the superior class?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The number of second-class clerks provided for is the same as last year. So I presume there must have been a vacancy.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Did every one in that department who was recommended by the deputy get the statutory increase?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is my information.

Office of the Comptroller of the N. W. M. Police, $10,850.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). In this office, which is under the control of Mr. White, there are five different employees, each of whom has been in the service ten years and more. To each of these has been recommended an increase of $50 and to each the increase is given.

Mr. SPROULE. I have some inquiries to make regarding this branch, which I suppose I may make just as well on further estimates.

The PRIME MINISTER. If my hon. friend has any inquiry to make he may make it now or later on when the further estimates come down.

Mr. SPROULE. It would be more convenient then.

Office of the Auditor General, $31,612.50.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). There is a small increase here of $275 but the statutory increases cover that and a great deal more. There has been some re-adjustment in the office so that the full amount of statutory increase is given to all those entitled to it without our requiring the full extra vote.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. What is the nature of the re-adjustment. This office is costing us a good deal, and it is time some reduction should be made.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I can hardly hold out the hope that it will cost any less, for there is no diminution of zeal in any respect on the part of the Auditor General and his officials. I think that the expense is not excessive considering the work done, but whether such a large book is required is another question. There has been one officer superannuated and some changes owing to promotions. The officer superannuated was receiving a salary of $1,800, and it is that saving which has enabled the statutory increases to be paid with a very small total increase in the vote.

Mr. SPROULE. How long was that officer in the service who was superannuated?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He was there the full twenty-five years. He was a very old official—Mr. Simpson, and in the superannuation returns the hon. gentleman will find all the particulars.

Department of Finance and Treasury Board, including J. Fraser at $2,400, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $52,312.50.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is an increase here of one in the number of officials but a diminution of the total cost. That has been brought about by filling the vacancies, which have occurred through death and retirement, with younger men at lower salaries. Two gentlemen died and one was retired.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. What salary had Mr. Fraser before ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He had $2,200 and is now placed at the maximum of a chief clerk. He is one of the oldest officers in the service and has been practically doing the work of the Dominion bookkeeper for about a year, owing to an older official, and a very valuable man, being an invalid and having had a year's leave of absence.

Department of Inland Revenue, $35,460.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Will the hon. minister state how he has been enabled to make a saving here of apparently $2,800 ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Hon. M. E. Bernier). The position of commissioner was abolished. The Deputy Minister remains at the same salary $3,200, and also the chief secretary. There are seven first-class clerks, the same as last year, and nine second class instead of ten. One of these was transferred to the Trade and Commerce Department, making a diminution in salary of $1,100. We propose to increase a number of second juniors from three to five. This is done with the view of transferring them from the temporary service into the permanent service to which they properly belong.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. What is the amount of superannuation allowance which the retiring commissioner receives ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVNEUE. If I am not mistaken, it is $2,800.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Then the whole saving is only $40 because the commissioner is paid out of the superannuation fund.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it intended to fill the assistant commissioner's place in the future ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE No, that position is abolished.

Mr. BENNETT. On page 18—K of the Auditor General's report I find some pretty large items for the purchase of methylated spirits. I find Gooderham & Worts down for $2,438 and the Hamilton Distilling Co., $4,605. Are tenders asked for or are the prices fixed by the department ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I understand that the price is fixed by the department. The department is entirely free to buy where it pleases.

Mr. BENNETT. To what extent are these spirits purchased in the course of a year ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I could not say now, but can bring down the exact figures.

Mr. BENNETT. Is it intended during the coming year to purchase in the open market on tenders or simply let the price be fixed by some party in the department?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I presume the same course is followed as in the past, but I shall inquire and let my hon. friend know what the department propose to do in the future.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The sales of methylated spirits are made by the department at a fixed rate ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. Yes.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The same to all consumers ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. As the matter is at present as well as we can understand, there may be a combination of the vendors of methylated spirits, and by agreement with the department they fix the price; and those who, in turn, wish to purchase practically fix the price to themselves. For, the minister states that no tenders are asked for the purchase. It seems odd that any department of government will purchase thousands of dollars worth of an article without providing for open competition.

Civil Government—Department of Agriculture, $62,262.50.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. There is an increase of about $2,000.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon. Sydney Fisher). While there are some changes, the increase, apart from the statutory increases, amounts to $1,600. Additional expenditure is made necessary by the appointment of two more examiners in the patent office. The increase due to this change is $2,200, but other reductions will bring the net increase down to $1,600.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Have all the statutory increases granted been recommended by the deputy minister ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. By the acting deputy minister.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Has the hon. minister given the increase to every one to whom it is recommended by the acting deputy minister ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. This item includes a vote to Miss E. A. Rodman 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.' Why is this provision necessary ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Miss Rodman passed the civil service examination some years ago, but was not appointed on the permanent staff until she was over the age provided for by the Act.

Civil Government—Department of Marine and Fisheries, $64,430.

Mr. SPROULE. There is quite an increase here.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). The increase, if I figure it rightly, is $1,540. That would hardly be enough to provide for an increase at the rate of $50 apiece for the officers of the department. During the year Mr. Hardy died. His salary, at the time of his death, was $2,600. The place was filled by promoting one of the first-class clerks who, at present, draws only $1,850.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. minister has provided for two more hands.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. One, I think.

Mr. SPROULE. No, there were forty-nine last year and there are fifty-one this year.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. One is to make provision for the minister's private secretary. The other is the case of a young man who was filling the place of a messenger. He qualified himself by passing the civil service examination and becoming competent as a typewriter and otherwise, and has been promoted to be a junior class clerk.

Civil Government—Department of Public Works, $46,530.

Mr. BENNETT. Have any of the clerks in this department received the statutory increase ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. Israel Tarte). Yes; the statutory increase has been given to three first-class clerks, two second-class clerks, and one junior class clerk—$50 each. Two messengers have been granted an increase of $30 each. This makes eight statutory increases altogether.

Mr. BENNETT. Are there only eight clerks in the department who are entitled to the statutory increase ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. How many clerks are there in the department altogether ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My department is divided in such a way that I cannot state off-hand the exact number. There are branches for which separate amounts will appear later on in the estimates. For instance, the chief architect's and chief engineer's branches are separately voted. But, if my hon. friend desires it, I will give the exact number at another time.

Mr. COCHRANE. If the hon. minister has been giving the annual increases how comes it that there is a decrease in the total amount ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The secretary of the department, Mr. Roy, was superannuated. At that time his salary was $2,100 a year. He has been replaced by another gentleman who receives only $1,850. The gentleman who now fills the office was formerly in receipt of $1,250, but he has been replaced by another who receives $1,100.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why was Mr. Roy superannuated ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. He was superannuated last year. He had been ill for a long time and could not do his work. Another decrease was due to the death of Miss Hyman, who was at the maximum of her class and received a salary of $1,000. Her place has been filled by another who receives $650. Mr. Desbrisay died. His place has been filled by one receiving $600 a year, whereas Mr. Desbrisay received $900 a year.

Mr. SPROULE. Why does the hon. minister find it necessary to provide for his accountant 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.'

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Because he receives more than the statutory increase.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say that when Mr. Dionne, the chief accountant, died, he was replaced by Mr. Kingston, who was the assistant accountant under him, and we are obliged to give Mr. Kingston a little more, and to put these words in the estimates.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. With the consent of the House I wish to move to reduce that item we have just passed by $300. My hon. friend from Grey (Mr. Sproule) drew my attention to it. As I explained, a messenger was promoted, and a fair provision will be made for messengers in the supplementaries. I move that in item seventeen, the sum of $64,430 be reduced by $300.

Item as amended, agreed to.

Post Office Department, $218,760.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Wm. Mulock). The only changes are some increases amounting in all to $3,570, and some decreases amounting to $3,560. The increases consist of thirty-three at $50 each, and of twenty-four at $30 each, and two junior clerks. The decreases are made up of a miscellaneous number of items arising from promotions and deaths.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. Does that amount cover the outside service?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Only the inside service.

Mr. SPROULE. I noticed for some time that the letter carriers have been making applications for an increase of their salary.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. They are in the outside service.

Mr. SPROULE. It might not be inappropriate to mention it, merely to know if the minister is giving their claim due consideration. I suppose it would be premature to expect him to tell us now, but there ought to be an item in these estimates somewhere for that purpose.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The item for the letter carriers belongs to the outside service, and the subject will be properly discussed when we come to the outside service. Perhaps my hon. friend will leave it till then.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. Has the hon. gentleman allowed statutory increases in all cases in his department?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Wherever they have been recommended.

The office of the High Commissioner for Canada in England, $8,850.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In that case one of the officers hitherto in the High Commissioner's office has been transferred to the office in London in connection with emigration, under the direction of the Department of the Interior. The work has been divided in that respect, and that officer has been transferred, effecting a saving of $1,800. On the other side, there are three statutory increases of $50, making a reduction of $1,650.

Mr. SPROULE. Am I correct in understanding from the minister that he has divided the High Commissioner's office, or separated from it the branch controlling emigration?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I would rather that question were answered by the Minister of the Interior (Hon. Clifford Sifton). But practically that is correct. The emigration office has been separated from the High Commissioner's office to a certain extent, and this gentleman has been transferred from the High Commissioner's office, and will have his salary provided for in the votes of the Department of the Interior. So it is a saving so far as the High Commissioner's office is concerned, but the salary will appear in another branch of the public service.

Mr. SPROULE. To ascertain whether there will be any saving or otherwise it would be necessary to add the cost of the new office to this one for the coming year.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In this case there is no saving, because the work has to be done and that gentleman's salary will appear in another branch of the service.

Mr. SPROULE. Why were the two offices separated, and under whose recommendation? I understood there was a little friction in the past.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will ask my hon. friend the Minister of the Interior to answer that question.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Hon. Clifford Sifton). The idea of making the change was that an office should be procured in another part of the city where particular attention would be given to emigration matters, and where a proper display of the products of Canada could be made. On the advice of the High Commissioner, one of the officers in his office who had had special cognizance of emigration work was detached from his office, and this is supposed to be a new office established in another part of the city. The gentleman sent over in connection with these matters has not yet returned, and I have not yet received his report, but I will make a full explanation when immigration estimates come up.

Mr. WILSON. Perhaps the minister would tell us who is at the head of the Emigration Department now in England, and whether he is subject to the High Commissioner ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. He will be subject to the High Commissioner by statute. The statute constituting the office of the High Commissioner provides that he is in charge of the emigration work in Great Britain, and no change is proposed to be made in that respect.

Department of Labour.—The whole or any portion may be paid notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $13,450.

Mr. INGRAM. I would like the hon. gentleman to say what that means.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am glad my hon. friend has called attention to it. If he will turn to page 18 of the estimates he will find the particulars. Deputy head and editor of 'Labour Gazette,' $3,200; assistant editor of 'Labour Gazette,' $1,500; two fair-wage officers, $3,000; three stenographers and clerks, $2,950; three clerks, $2,800. The hon. gentleman will observe by reference to this list, for the first time votes the salary of a deputy head to the present occupant of the position. The Act of 1900 created the department and the Civil Service Act calls for a certain minimum salary being paid to the deputy head of such a department. The lowest salary provided by the statute for a deputy head is $3,200. This deputy begins, therefore, at that salary. The next item is $1,500 for the assistant editor of the 'Labour Gazette.' The assistant editor was Mr. Harper, who filled the position with great credit to himself and with advantage to the country, and, as you know, lost his life a short time ago in a very chivalrous act on the Ottawa River. He has been succeeded in the office by Mr. Coates, a man of promise a distinguished graduate of the university, who has made a study of political science to some extent, who is a man of capacity and I look for good results from him. The other officers are those who have always been in this department and there is no proposed change in their salaries.

Mr. INGRAM. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman if this is the only department in which the removal expenses of any new appointee are paid. Take for instance the case of Mr. Frank Plant, of London; his expenses were paid from London to Ottawa. Last year it appeared in the Auditor General's report in respect to Mr. D. J. O'Donohue, whose removal expenses were paid from Toronto to Ottawa. They were paid by order in council and the Auditor General objected to it. I find that the expenses of Mr. Frank Plant were paid from London to Ottawa. Can the department pay by order in council or how were the expenses paid—under the Civil Service Act ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I do not know the technical authority for such a payment, whether by order of the statute and effect given to it by order in council, but I am sure, on reflection, my hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) will take no exception to this particular transaction. The official in question is a most worthy man. His initial salary was comparatively trifling, he was very highly recommended by many of a class in whom my hon. friend takes a very great interest and he has fully justified the recommendation made in support of his appointment. As to whether an order in council was passed or not authorizing the payment, I do not know. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) was the acting minister in my place, last year, when the payment was made, and if my hon. friend desires information, if he would be good enough to allow me to bring it down on another item I will be glad to furnish him with all information on the subject.

Mr. INGRAM. Last year I thought the proceeding was not a usual one. I did not think that any department made a practice of doing that sort of thing. I did not bring the matter up for the purpose of raising an objection to the person whose expenses were paid at the time particularly, but it was against the principle that I was objecting. My reason for asking the question now is to find out whether other departments of government pay the removal expenses of their new appointees because I have this to say that there is a large number of men in this country who would be glad to receive the salaries that are paid to these gentlemen and pay their own removal expenses. I think the principle is a bad one and I object to the principle, not to the parties who have received these expenses.

Mr. SPROULE. I see this note below :—

This amount or any portion of it may be paid notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.

These are civil servants. Where do you get the authority then ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. My hon. friend the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) explains that these officers are not civil servants, not having passed the Civil Service examination. The fact is that up to the present moment the Civil Service Act has not provided a class of officers such as is named in this schedule and therefore though they are here treated as if they were regular civil servants, in fact they are not civil servants, and this makes it quite clear that they are not obliged to comply with the act in order to draw the payment voted by parliament.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. Why not specify those that come under the Civil Service Act and those that are excepted.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I say that none of them have passed the examination. None of the officers in this department outside of the deputy minister is an officer provided for under the Civil Service Act. If you look at the Civil Service Act you will find that it gives a schedule of the various departments and that this department is not named by the Act.

Mr. BROCK. I would like to ask the hon. minister if the sum of $4,700 is the total expense of the 'Labour Gazette'.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. What page ?

Mr. BROCK. In the estimates, page 18, in connection with the department of labour, there are two sums, deputy head and editor of 'Labour Gazette", $3,200, and assistant editor of 'Labour Gazette", $1,500. This paper is published weekly I believe?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Published monthly.

Mr. BROCK. The cost of the editorial management, I suppose in connection with that of the deputy head of the department, is $4,700. Is that the total expense of publishing this gazette ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. No.

Mr. BROCK. Where will we find the balance of this expense?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The balance appears in the Auditor General's report.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Brock) will find in the latter portion of the estimates that there is an item for publishing the 'Labour Gazette' which includes that.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman will find in the Auditor General's report full particulars of the expenditure for the last fiscal year and perhaps he will prefer to discuss it after having looked at these items. There will be an opportunity.

Mr. BROCK. I am not going to discuss the item, but it struck me that the editorial charges for a journal published monthly when compared with the editorial charges on monthly and weekly papers are ex-extremely high. This 'Labour Gazette' has caused a good deal of difficulty. It is a very difficult paper to get at. Statements are made in it at times that are absolutely incorrect, and when an attempt is made to correct them, the communications are quietly ignored. I think it should be more directly under the control of the minister himself, and if so I believe the country would have a good deal more confidence in it. The appropriation taken here is a very large sum for services in connection with the publishing of a monthly paper. I have no doubt that it is caused to some extent by the editor being ranked as a deputy head, which I suppose means chief editor of the 'Labour Gazette' for collecting information and so forth. This paper should be carefully looked after because it is tending to make the department very unpopular. I hear complaints ; I have had occasion to make complaints myself, but we could get no acknowledgment. When it is stated that such a mill is working full time and when the 'Labour Gazette' is informed that the mill is not working full time or half time, no correction is ever made.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Wm. Mulock). As the hon. gentleman (Mr. Brock) has given no particulars I am not able to controvert what he has said. If he will tell me of any misstatements that appeared in the 'Gazette,' his complaint will be very carefully considered. This is the first time I have ever heard of any such charge, and I think the hon. gentleman will search in vain for a case in which a complaint to the department has not received courteous acknowledgment and every consideration that the case called for. We will have this item under discussion again, and if the hon. gentleman (Mr. Brock) informs me of any complaints in advance, I will have them thoroughly inquired into. I can assure him that there is nothing about which the head of the department and the deputy head are more anxious than that only statements of facts, matters that are absolutely true—not merely true technically but substantially true and fair—should appear in the 'Gazette.' No opinions are published ; and it is supposed to be simply a record of facts for the information of employers and employees alike.

Mr. BROCK. This criticism is confined entirely to the very large expenditure connected with the issue of a monthly paper.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is not all for that. The Department of Labour has many other duties to perform besides editing and issuing the 'Gazette.' The Conciliation Act of 1890 charges the department with trade disputes, and the Deputy Minister of Labour has rendered invaluable services to the country in adjusting many of those trade disputes. If the hon. gentleman will be good enough to read the first annual report of the department he will find that out for himself, and when he has read it his views will be entitled to more weight.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. How many pages in the report.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is very brief, but it is a very interesting and a most valuable document.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. It does not seem to compare with the great question of labour, if I judge by the size of the book.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. We must not judge of anything by its size.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. That is exactly where you are mistaken.

Mr. INGRAM. Last year this matter was pretty freely discussed and the Labour Department was strongly advised to be careful of interfering with anything of a party character in this 'Labour Gazette.' I do not know that much fault can be found with the 'Gazette' from a party standpoint but I think the object of the publication of that 'Gazette' is not fully met. Those engaged in the large manufacturing concerns of this country have some interest in labour problems, and I notice that at a recent meeting of the Manufacturer's Association in Montreal, strong objections were made to the manner in which the 'Labour Gazette' was edited. They complained that the manufacturers were excluded from any discussion in that paper. I believe that a similar organ in the United States publishes letters from both sides interested in the labour problem. The manufacturers of Canada complained that our 'Labour Gazette' did not set forth their side of the question, and that they were not permitted to publish their views in it in case of disputes between employers and employees. There ought to be harmony between the employers and the employees, between labour and capital, and there is no way that this can be brought about so readily as through free discussion by both sides to the controversy. I think this suggestion ought to be considered by those in charge of the 'Labour Gazette,' and if its adoption should result in increasing the cost of circulation the wider interest taken in the paper might to some extent repay the extra cost.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. My hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) has alluded to the resolution passed by the Manufacturer's Association. I should have expected to find him on the other side of such a question as this. It is quite true that very important body did pass such a resolution. but I think that the resolution does not fairly express the deliberate opinion of thoughtful members of that association. It was a general resolution, without particulars, and I am perfectly satisfied that whoever were instrumental in causing that resolution to be passed would have reason to change their views if they more fully understood the question. It is quite true that the Canadian 'Labour Gazette' does not follow the 'Labour Bulletin' published at Washington. The Canadian 'Labour Gazette' follows in style and object the precedent furnished by the 'Labour Gazette' of Great Britain which contains a record of facts and not of opinions. When parliament was considering the Bill authorizing the establishment of the 'Labour Gazette' I said that it was not to be an organ for publishing opinions, but that the intention was to give statistical information which statistics, if they be true, and as I believe them to be true, are as valuable to one class as to an other. The 'Labour Gazette' is not a class publication at all. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Ingram) would have us copy the model set at Washington. That is not the model that this government is following. The 'Washington Bulletin' is an organ of opinions, and I leave it to hon. gentlemen to say whether the publication of the opinions of extreme men is as useful to employers and employees in industrial matters as is the publication of statistical information which is valuable to both sides. The 'Labour Gazette' does not purport to give any opinions. We believe that it is better to give the facts and allow the working classes, employers and employees alike, to form their own opinions. We tell them the state of affairs in different industries.

We have correspondents at centres in Canada, whose duty it is to report to us the state of the labour market, and it is to the advantage of the employer and the employee equally to have that information. We have each month a leading article dealing with some great industry—one month the iron industry, its condition and resources, another month the lumber industry, another the fishing industry, and so on. These articles are compiled after the greatest labour and with the greatest care, and not simply by reference to employees, but after having obtained the most accurate information possible from all classes. The department has a form of inquiry which it sends out when the officers are studying a subject. These forms are sent both to employers and employees, and the most thorough and honest effort is made to acquire accurate information for dissemination throughout the country. This is a task in itself involving an amount of research which no ordinary newspaper undertakes; and the information thus obtained is of permanent value. It is infinitely more valuable than the information of a person who perhaps takes an extreme view of a question on one side or the other; and so far as I know, what has been furnished has been absolutely correct. The more the object and the method of this 'Gazette' and this department are known, the more they will commend themselves to the public as being in every respect in the best interest of Canada. My hon. friend from Centre Toronto (Mr. Brock) alludes to the salary of the Deputy Minister of Labour, and unintentionally falls into the error of assuming that he has no duties to perform except editing the 'Labour Gazette.' I can inform him differently, and I am sure that on reference to the report, little as it is, he will see that the department is performing a valuable service not only to employees, but also to the large class in whom the hon. gentleman is especially interested, the employers. I shall expect the hon. gentleman to give me that detailed information.

Mr. BROCK. If this gentleman has something else to do besides editing the 'Gazette,' he has a good many to help him, because I find that $13,450 is added to the expense of that office, for the employment of fair-wage officers, stenographers, clerks, &c. I suppose he attends to his particular department just as any editor does; these people largely do the work for him, while he merely compiles it. I think the pay for journalistic work, as it is paid in this country, especially work on a monthly journal, is very high.

Mr. INGRAM. I do not think the hon. gentleman intended to accuse me of approving of the resolution passed by the Manufacturers' Association. I simply mentioned that incidentally; but I go as far as to say that I think their side of the case should be permitted to be explained at times in the 'Labour Gazette.'

Mr. CASGRAIN. Allusion has been made to the cost of the 'Labour Gazette,' and I find that it does cost a great deal of money. If hon. members will look at it, they will find that it is a monthly publication of fifty pages. The editor-in-chief receives $3,500, and the assistant editor receives $1,500. I will allow for the fact just mentioned by the Minister of Labour that the editor-in-chief has some other duties to perform than simply editing this paper; but, as my hon. friend from Centre Toronto has said, I do not see what the other gentlemen employed in that office have to do. They cannot have much to do, if we are to judge from the report. Then, there are correspondents all over the country who are paid $100 each—not as is generally done in the case of other newspapers, which pay their correspondents as they send in items, but paying them a lump sum of $100 a year, whether they do any work or not.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. That is not correct.

Mr. CASGRAIN. It is so stated in the Auditor General's Report. I find on page N—2 a list of correspondents at $100 per annum; so that if a correspondent works a great deal or only a little he gets this sum.

So far as I know journalistic affairs, that is not the way correspondents are paid. I also find that $200 is paid to a legal correspondent, Mr. Lyon. If this is the Mr. Lyon whom I know in Montreal, I must say he is a most competent young gentleman, and if given the opportunity of reporting decisions concerning labour in this paper, he will earn the $200. A great many other items bring the cost of this paper up to about $18,000 per year, allowing to the Deputy Minister of Labour something for certain other duties. That brings the cost of this small monthly volume to about $1,500. My hon. friend says that this is not a publication in which the editor-in-chief has any opinions to express. He has only the work of compiling; and I say that $3,500 to the chief compiler and $1,500 to the deputy compiler are very large sums to pay. I venture to say that there is not in this country a publication of the same importance which costs as much as this 'Labour Gazette.' No doubt it is a valuable publication; I do not want to depreciate the value of the services my hon. friend has attempted to give by means of it; but I find that it has only 800 subscribers. I would like to know whether these are all bona fide subscribers, who pay their subscription of 20 cents per year. This publication is of course distributed gratuitously to the members and senators, and I would like to know to what other persons it is issued gratuitously. If the publication is as valuable to the labouring classes as my hon. friend thinks it is, it seems to me that its circulation is very limited. At all events the cost is exorbitant—$18,000 a year for this publication—paying editors, sub-editors and correspondents. It is a drain upon the country, which is not compensated for by the services rendered by this department.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. My hon. friend is generally fair and not apt to disregard the facts even by inadvertence. I would ask him is it fair to treat this expenditure as wholly on behalf of the 'Labour Gazette?' If he will study the items, he will find at least one of $3,000 which has nothing whatever to do with this publication.

Mr. CASGRAIN. I did not include that.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. My hon. friend added up all the figures, and he cited something against the 'Gazette' from the Auditor General's report which is not to be found in that report. He said that the correspondents were paid $100 a year, whether they did any work or not, and gave the Auditor General's report as his authority. But there is nothing in that report to warrant any such statement. All through the votes of parliament, you will find votes of so much a year to certain individuals, but you will also find rules governing their service, and if these men do not earn their salaries, it is the duty of the department to see that they are not paid. Each correspondent is obliged to make a monthly report. If he fails to make his report any month, he does not receive the proportion of salary assignable to that report. His $100 is divided into twelve parts, and on the receipt of his report each month, he receives his monthly pay, but not otherwise.

My hon. friend seems to have been on the hunt for argument against this bureau. He suggests that the department does nothing else but compile. Well, my hon. friend has not the faintest idea of what is involved in compiling, or he would not talk so flippantly. If he desires to be informed, let him visit the department and he will there see the amount of detail gathered from all parts of this Dominion, and what has to be utilized in the various statements made and conclusions arrived at. He will find that there is not a single statement made or conclusion reached which does not involve considerable research. If he examines the schedules that come in, giving the statistical details regarding some great industry, I am sure he would have a much higher opinion of the labour involved and the skill required by the officers in the discharge of their duties than he evidently has at present.

The 'Gazette' itself is not a medium for publishing the views of any section or class. I may tell my hon. friend from East Elgin (Mr. Ingram), that there never was any intention of allowing one side or another to ventilate their opinions through its columns, and a study of the 'Gazette' will bear out what I say.

My hon. friend from Montmorency (Mr. Casgrain) quotes the Auditor General's report as showing a circulation of 800 subscribers and find that a very small circulation. But my hon. friend, as a member of parliament must know full well that every public document has a large free list, and the 'Labour Gazette' is no exception. It is sent to the secretary or some other officer of every trade union in Canada, and outside of Canada, it is sent, by way of exchange, to the various governments throughout the world. It is also sent to the libraries in Canada and is forwarded as a useful medium for information wherever any official desire is expressed for it. It is not gratuitously distributed among individuals, and the hon. gentleman must also remember that the 'Gazette' only came into existence in September, 1900: so that the Auditor General's report deals only with a fraction of its first year, namely, up to the 30th June, following.

Mr. CASGRAIN. What is the circulation?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I believe it is many thousands, partly free and partly paid for, and it is doing good work. I will get the information and bring it down, and if there is any other information which the hon. gentleman desires, I shall be glad to give it to him, because I wish to dislodge from his mind these erroneous opinions which have caused him to assume an attitude of hostility towards a movement that has already been of great service and is calculated to be of still greater service to the country. I do not suppose he desires to be regarded as implacably arrayed against this movement.

Mr. CASGRAIN. No.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. We have a Department of Agriculture to deal with the interests of agriculturists, we have a Department of Trade and Commerce, which takes cognizance of all questions relating to the commercial class; and in giving special attention to another great class, the industrial classes. I think we are entitled to the support of our hon. friends opposite, and I know we have the support of the great majority of the people outside this House. The subject is too important to be made a party question, and I hope that hon. members will not allow themselves to consider it from a party standpoint. I am quite anxious to have fair criticism, but I do not think that such sweeping criticism as the saying the 'Labour Gazette' costs too much, and that it is nothing but a compilation, without taking into account the many important duties performed, is one that we should be expected to meet.

Let me point out another duty which the 'Labour Gazette' has to perform, and in which it is of great service to the country as well as to the labouring classes. Parliament in 1900 passed a resolution declaring that in all government contracts the government should see that fair-going wages were paid to the working men. That in itself is a task involving a great deal of labour. The Department of Labour is of great assistance to the other departments in complying with that resolution. The fair-wage officers are obliged, in the discharge of their duties, to travel from ocean to ocean in the search of information for the guidance of the various ministers. The duty of the Deputy Minister is not merely to see that the 'Gazette' is published and that others do their work—although that is of no small importance—but he has many duties outside of the publication of the 'Gazette.' My hon. friend from Centre Toronto is a large employer of labour. Well, I am bound to say that he does very little of the actual labour himself, but he has a manager and men to carry out his will, and is responsible for the success of the institution of which he is the head. And I am sure I can congratulate the men on having him as that employer.

We have to pay for brains and the Deputy Minister of Labour is a very able man. Let me tell my hon. friend the difficulty we have had in retaining the services of that gentleman. I do not wish that gentleman to be the subject of criticism in this House unless he deserves it. It is the privilege of hon. gentlemen opposite to criticise him. It is their privilege to detract from his merits. But it is our duty to see to it that he is fairly understood, and that the sacrifice he is making in serving Canada and in retaining the position he is now filling so well as Deputy Minister of Labour is known. Mr. Mackenzie King is one of the most gifted men, I venture to say, who could be found for the position. Moreover, there is not a man in Canada to-day who has studied more deeply the great problems of labour. After having devoted his university under-graduate career to the study of this subject, he took up a post-graduate course, first in the University of Chicago. He was invited to Harvard and there was given a fellowship, and the authorities of Harvard University thought so highly of him, that they desired him to associate himself with their professional staff. They sent him abroad at their expense for two years to study the great problems of labour, on the understanding that he was to return and take a position in that great university. I was not aware of that offer having been made to him when we were organizing this department; and, knowing of his standing, my colleagues authorized me to make overtures to him. I did so, by inviting him to come here in connection with this Department of Labour. He declined the offer, on account of his engagement with Harvard. But, when he returned on laying the case before Havard University they very generously relieved him of that understanding, for he preferred to serve his own country if possible. After a while a vacancy occurred in Harvard University through the professor of political science there being appointed to a university in Great Britain. The University of Harvard again made overtures to Mr. King and offered him a chair, one of the most attractive offers that could be presented to a young man of talent and ambition such as the Deputy Minister of Labour. He is making large pecuniary sacrifices in remaining in this department in Canada. That is Mr. King's record. He will prove in time, and has already proved, the wisdom of the choice the government made in placing him in his present position.

Mr. CASGRAIN. I am sorry to see the hon. Postmaster General who showed so much good humour at the beginning, exhibit a different feeling now. As I said, I think the country will be grateful to my hon. friend for his good intentions; but I think we may differ as to the results he has achieved. The hon. gentleman can hardly deny that this is a subject open to the criticism of parliament, and one about which we may as fairly question him as upon any other. He must not get angry whenever we touch this enfant chéri of his; for, if he decides to do that, I am afraid he will be angry very often. I should be very sorry indeed if I have laid myself open to the implication of unfairness to the hon. gentleman. I did not take the amounts I mentioned from the item before us, but from page N—2 of the Auditor General's Report. These items relate to the editing of the paper, the paying of correspondents, the printing and distributing of the paper—in a word, all those items which have to do with make-up and circulatiou of the 'Labour Gazette. And I find—and the hon. gentleman if he looks at the figures will see that I am right—that the paper costs $18,000. Now, as to the editor-in-chief, what I said was about the editing of this paper; and, after the remarks of the hon. gentleman, I think I was justified in coming to the conclusion that the editing cost too much. For the hon. gentleman said that Mr. King did not express opinions in the paper, was not engaged in writing articles upon these great questions of labour which agitate the country, but was concerned more directly with the compilation of statistics received from different parts of this country and other countries. I expressed the opinion—I may be wrong and the hon. gentleman may be right—that $3,200 for this gentleman and $1,500 for an assistant editor and $1,817.47 for correspondents, is too much to pay for such a paper as we have before us. I do not say that it would be too much for what would be a good 'Labour Gazette,' for the kind of paper in which the labouring classes of this country could get the proper information to which they are entitled, but I am speaking of the 'Labour Gazette' as I find it before me. Hon. gentlemen who have some knowledge of publishing a paper know that, for instance, a paper of eight pages issued daily, costs only about $1,000 a week. But here is a paper, which is only issued once a month, and it costs $1,500 for one number. I leave it to this committee to say whether that is not too great a price to pay for the paper which is placed in our hands. Is that unfair criticism? I take the figures from the reports that the government supplies, and I take the 'Labour Gazette' as I find it. This being so and my remarks having been what they were, I think it was uncalled for on the part of my hon. friend to say that my criticism was unfair.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I would remind my hon. friend (Mr. Casgrain) that he is charging against the 'Labour Gazette' expenses of the Labour Department generally.

Mr. CASGRAIN. Not at all.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman has charged against the paper the whole salaries of the Deputy Minister and his assistant. I have explained to him that the department has many other duties to perform than the publishing of the 'Labour Gazette.' It has to do with arbitration, with administration of the Conciliation Act, with the fair-wages policy, the Canadian labour policy—all these in addition to preparing the 'Labour Gazette.' The hon. gentleman—and I am sure that he will be the first upon reflection to see it—has made an unfair representation of the case when he charges all this expenditure to the 'Labour Gazette.' I would again say that I did not suggest that the Deputy Minister devoted his time merely to compiling. I merely indicated the course of procedure in the preparation of the 'Labour Gazette.' There is compiling to be done, but I did not say that the Deputy Minister did it. The Deputy Minister is engaged in the management of the department, a large department, and one with which I wish the hon. gentleman and his friends would familiarize themselves. If they did so they would be more friendly to it.

Mr. PUTTEE. The policy of inaugurating this department and the work that the department is doing are not to be considered as above criticism. But I fear that the hon. gentlemen who are criticising it have not paid sufficient attention either to the 'Labour Gazette' or to the Labour Department to make their criticism of much value. I have no idea at all that the whole business of the department is editing and the turning out of the 'Labour Gazette.' In fact my idea was that the Labour Department would have a great deal more work to do than it has done. It is a matter of remark at the present time that the report of the deputy minister contains hardly a word in reference to the railway men of this country, who form one section of labour, at all events, which has been altogether overlooked. In respect to the circulation of the 'Gazette,' which is said to be only 600, if the hon. gentlemen will examine the report which is in their hands, they will find that the paid subscription on the 30th of June last was 4,354. Now, considering that this is a government publication, and that most people expect to get such papers free, it seems to me that is a remarkably good circulation to have worked up in that time. In fact, if any gentleman has been engaged in the business of working up a circulation, he will rather envy the 'Labour Gazette.'

I think probably one of the few compliments that have been paid to the 'Gazette' during the past year is the resolution passed by the Manufacturers' Association, because no sooner had that been passed than the question was put from the chair asking those present what position they took in regard to the 'Gazette'; and from their own reports most of those present stated that they immediately threw all communications into the waste paper basket. Now we have our hon. friend from Centre Toronto (Mr. Brock) saying they had complaints to make, that their representations are not properly attended to in the department. If the department treats their communications in the same way as they treat it's, why of course there is simply a deadlock. I believe that any fair-minded person that has read the 'Labour Gazette' during the past year will say that there is no cause for complaint on behalf of the manufacturers, at least, that their side is not properly put forth. The 'Gazette' is colourless, it is too colourless, that has been the complaint on behalf of the labour men. But that it errs in shutting out the manufacturers' interests seems to me not to be the case. Probably there is a good deal to be said for the minister's argument that the idea of the 'Gazette' is to make it purely a matter of figures, colourless altogether, and to express no opinions. There are other gazettes who deviate somewhat from that line, and I think, with good results. If the 'Gazette' goes a little farther in that respect I believe it will be more acceptable to those for whom it is published. In reference to the criticism that has been made in regard to the circulation, and to complaints being made, I hope the minister, when we come to the items where this can properly be discussed, will bring down all the complaints that are made, and tell us what has been done and what is expected to be done in the future with the 'Gazette,' and by the Labour Department generally. We feel that the department cannot stop where it is now, that it has either to get fossilized, or else take up a more advanced position.

Mr. INGRAM. I am glad the hon. gentleman from Winnipeg (Mr. Puttee), who wishes to be considered a leader of labour has confirmed the idea I expressed. I have certainly found labour men who take a prominent part in labour questions making complaints for the reason that the 'Gazette,' so far as they were concerned, was too colourless. They profess to be leaders of labour, but were unable to express the opinions of the enlightened labour element of this country, and for that reason they were precluded from having such letters as these published in the 'Labour Gazette.' Supposing the department did publish these letters, it would naturally follow that there would be a discussion on the subject by persons taking different views. These labour men believe that a discussion such as that might be in the interest of the labour men throughout the country. That is the reason I expressed the opinion that I did at first.

Mr. SPROULE. I would like to get some further information about the authority which justifies this item as I see it here—

'The whole or any portion may be paid notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.' The answer the minister gave me I understood was that the employees were not included in the schedule contained in the Civil Service Act. I took the trouble to look up that Act, and it reads as follows :

The civil service for the purpose of this Act includes and consists of all classes of employees elsewhere than in the North-west Territories, in or under the several departments of the Executive Government of Canada, in the office of the Auditor General, and included in schedule 'a' and 'b' to this Act, appointed by the Governor in Council.

Schedule 'a' would cover this, I presume. In the first place schedule 'a' is composed of deputy heads of departments, officers who have special professional or technical qualifications, chief clerks, first class clerks and second class clerks. Now this is called the Department of Labour, therefore it is under a department and is controlled by a deputy head, and is under an executive head who is a Minister of the Crown. Therefore it comes under the Act in that respect, it is a Department of Labour. Now, according to the estimates put before us here, you have a deputy head and you have clerks. The only difference that I see between this schedule and the other is that this one says 'Chief clerks, first-class clerks and second-class clerks.' It does appear to me that you cannot evade the responsibility of the Act by saying 'clerks' and leaving out 'chief clerks, first-class clerks or second-class clerks.' they are clerks all the same. As I said, it is under a deputy head, under the executive branch of the government, under a Minister of the Crown. The appointments are made by order in council, and the parties employed come under that schedule. As I interpret it, therefore I think it must fairly come under the Civil Service Act.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. That is for the purpose of examination, they do not pass an examination.

Mr. SPROULE. But they should. I think that is where the mistake is made, or else they must be appointed because of technical knowledge, which is not the claim made here. I think there ought to be a stronger reason given than any we have had for asking us to pass this vote.

Mr. BENNETT. After the description given by the Postmaster General of the abilities of the gentleman who conducts this department, and knowing as he did before that gentleman entered the employ of the government of his transcendent abilities, the House will be surprised to know that this heavy taskmaster, the Postmaster General, insisted upon this gentleman working at the rate of $1,750 a year when he first entered the service. He seems to have done him the greatest unfairness in view of the gentleman's ability of which the minister speaks. Afterwards the salary was increased to $2,250, and now it is raised to $3,200. Last year when this question of the Labour Department was before the House, there was a very long discussion on the subject in view of the fact that the expense had risen by such a large amount. Now I am going to say a few words of local interest in reference to this so-called 'Labour Gazette.' In the east riding of Simcoe, particularly, I can tell the minister that the efforts of the 'Labour Gazette' are not at all appreciated. There was a strike in the carriage factory in the town of Orillia, and instead of that matter being probed to the bottom, instead of its being thoroughly exposed, I am told, though I did not see the reports at the time, that they were far from being truthful, in reference to the strike in that establishment, and the real reason assigned for it was that the owner of the carriage factory, Mr. Tudhope, is the Liberal candidate in that riding for the local assembly. Now if the same treatment is accorded labour men in other parts of the Dominion by this labour journal, then I say its efforts are not appreciated. So far as the labour efforts of the government go they are worth nothing in that part of the country, for this reason, that though an enforcement of the Alien Labour Act would have been highly beneficial, it is allowed to remain a dead letter, American tugs manned with American employees are permitted to ply in and out of the harbours there, while Canadian tugs are not permitted to ply in American waters. By reason of the owners of these tugs being friends of this government they are permitted to ply in Canadian waters contrary to all the coasting Acts of the province or the Dominion. When this item was before the House last year I then took occasion to point to the ridiculous articles that were sent in by correspondents, and as the hon. minister was not here then let him listen for a moment to some of the articles that appeared in this 'Labour Gazette.' Here is one that came from Vancouver.

The bar-tenders report work well. The average wages earned are from $40 to $65 a month, with board.

Then, from that Sodom of Canada, at the present time, London, comes the following :

The local bar-tenders are taking steps to organize the bar-tenders of St. Thomas. They report the organization in a prosperous condition.

If the people of this country want to pay their hard earned money for rot of that kind, they should be well pleased with the efforts of the minister. I thought that Mr. King, the gentleman in charge of the department, sitting as he did sit on the floor of this House last year, and hearing these reports and the complaints to the minister would at least have exercised some restraint and placed some restrictions upon the reports that are published. For example I take the issue of the 'Gazette' for the month of February which shows that in order to earn the $100 that these correspondents are receiving in a year they stick into this publication the most nonsensical and absurd statements possible. In every case I am bound to say that these correspondents are just as in the case of Mr. Phillips Thompson, of Toronto, party hacks of the government. For instance here is a report that the livery business is good on account of sleighing. Is that not a wonderful item of news to be communicated at the cost of this country? How could the livery business be otherwise with good sleighing? Mr. King goes on further:

> Many men are employed at union wages getting out ice for the breweries.

In the name of all that is good what other time would they get out ice except during the winter months? Mr. Phillips Thompson says:

> In addition to the demand caused by the meeting of the legislature, the provincial campaign will give an impetus to the trade.

Of printing. I do not know whether he had ballots in view or not.

An hon. MEMBER. Extra ones.

Mr. BENNETT. Extra ones, of course. It was reserved for this hard worked correspondent at Hamilton to give items that are really of great importance. He says:

> There are hundreds of bar-tenders and waiters employed in the city at hotels and restaurants. Wages are very good. The former are members of the Bar-tenders International League and are affiliated with the Trades and Labour Council.

So that, apparently, he is having a great deal of solicitude again for the bar-tenders. I find another item that is not at all savouring of gallantry on the part of the editor of the 'Gazette,' for coming from the city of London; there is this item:

> The bar-tenders are asking all union men to refuse patronizing any hotel in the city where bar-maids are employed.

Let the people know what they are paying their money for. Let them know that they are paying first and foremost the gentleman who fills this office $3,200 a year. Had it been announced when he came into the position first that his salary was to be $3,200 a year, I am bound to say that some of the hon. gentleman's friends would have objected to it. I have heard something of the salaries paid to editorial writers in this country, and I will be bound to say that there are very few editors in the large cities of this country receiving $3,200 a year. In the smaller cities where a man of necessity must bring to the conduct of a newspaper a large amount of ability they do not receive any such salaries. Take the case of these correspondents and we see that all these party friends and hacks are employed at $8 a month to send in these items that can interest a very few people to say the least. The government had better spend a little of the money in the enforcement of the Alien Labour Act in this country, and in particular on the shores of the Georgian Bay at the present time. There is not a point on the Georgian Bay where navigators and vesselmen are not protesting and protesting strongly against the government permitting American tugs to come in and contravene the laws and securing employment while the same right is denied to men going from this side to the other.

Mr. SPROULE. I think we ought to have some more information, as a discussion on this particular question will not be permitted on the item in connection with the expenditure of the bureau, as to why these officers do not come under the Civil Service Act.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Civil Service Act requires that persons appointed shall pass the Civil Service examination. Therefore, unless we put this exception in, they would not receive their pay.

Mr. SPROULE. I can understand you saying that on each item. When we come to a name in the estimates we say that we vote this sum 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act', but in this case you say that any portion of this expenditure may be paid notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act and you make a lump sum of it.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. They have not passed the examination.

Mr. SPROULE. That would not keep them out.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Auditor General would not pay the money.

Some resolutions reported.

On motion of the Prime Minister, House adjourned at 6 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, February 21, 1902.

The SPEAKER took the chair at Three o'clock.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

Mr. D. C. FRASER (Guysborough) moved:

> That the Public Accounts of Canada for the year ending June 30, 1901, and the report of the Auditor General, volumes 1 and 2, for the same year, be referred to the Select Standing Committee on Public Accounts.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee of Supply.

Department of the Secretary of State—Clerical and other assistance, $2,150.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The increase of $180 is entirely due to the statutory increase of $30 each to the lower officers.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Is the increase general or has the deputy recommended more increases than you have granted ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Speaking generally all those recommended by the deputy ministers in all the departments for an increase are receiving the statutory increase. These increases are being received pretty generally and are only withheld for special reasons.

Department of Printing and Stationery.—Clerical and other assistance, $2,000, printing and stationery, $1,300, sundries, $1,700.

Mr. MACLEAN. Will the hon. minister give some explanation regarding the policy of the government in connection with this department. I believe that a large sum is now being paid to outside offices for government printing. If that be the case the government should outline a policy. The government should declare whether they have confidence in the Printing Bureau as established, or whether that Bureau is not competent to do the work. In the latter case, is it the intention of the government to extend the bureau, or do they propose adopting year by year the policy, which they condemned in former days, of subsidizing political supporters through job printing ? The expenditure on job printing outside the Bureau is this year much larger ; and the charge is made that the government are securing political support by means of job printing contracts given to newspapers for work which should be done by the Printing Department. In former days such contracts were called subsidizing the reptile press. Can this government be doing that which they formerly denounced ? I am not making any charge, but I am simply asking the hon. minister to say whether the Printing Department has lost the confidence of the government, or if not why should the government pay out so much public money to the reptile press, which is the term by which these gentlemen were wont to describe the newspapers supporting the late government.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I cannot undertake to outline any general policy, but I can tell my hon. friend that at present the Printing Bureau cannot do all the work required to be done.

Mr. MACLEAN. Do you purpose enlarging it ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not like to make any rash statement as to what we may do in the future. I am aware that there is a strong opinion in some quarters that the Bureau should be enlarged and also that there is a considerable question as to whether the Bureau is the most economical place in which to do the printing. I would not care to define any policy just now, but my hon. friend can have a general discussion on the question at a later stage if he thinks one necessary. In any case, if we enlarge the Bureau, my hon. friend will have to vote more money, and he is objecting to the expenditure now.

Mr. MACLEAN. We are paying the hon. gentleman to advise us on these subjects and the government ought to have a definite policy. They have been in office six years and do not seem to have any settled policy with regard to public business except to give as much public money as they can to their supporters in the press, or to what they used to call the reptile press. We must conclude that the policy of the government is not to extend the Printing Bureau and not to investigate whether the Printing Bureau is the best means of giving us value for our money, but simply to go on spending as much as $50,000 on job printing given to one newspaper alone. What a contrast between the speech of the hon. Finance Minister today and those which these gentlemen opposite were wont to make in days gone by. It is only another case of broken pledges, and of the worst possible policy being adopted.

Mr. SPROULE. Since we have had of late years such a departure from the custom which heretofore prevailed of having the printing done in the Bureau, the government ought to be prepared to tell us how much printing is done outside so that we may understand whether it is advisable or otherwise to enlarge the Printing Bureau so that it may do our printing work entirely. If our work costs us more than it ought or more than we can get it done for outside, the sooner we know it the better. Until the last few years the work was done by the Bureau and done more expeditiously than at present, and there was a less baneful influence exercised over the press of the country. But this constant departure, during the last few years, and increasing in ratio every year, from the principles laid down by these hon. gentlemen when in opposition, cannot but attract our serious attention. The government should tell us what percentage of the work they have done outside, what the cost has been, and whether they have made up their minds to depart from the usual custom of having the printing done in the Printing Bureau.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. So far as the future is concerned, that is a matter I do not wish to speak about too decisively. But as to the other point raised by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) that is a reasonable one. I shall deal with it. If the information brought down in the Auditor General's Report does not cover the point, I shall be glad to have a statement made showing the proportion of printing done in the Bureau, and the proportion done outside.

Mr. MACLEAN. And the minister should also give us a statement showing which system is in the public interest and which the government intend to follow. Government is government, and should be run on some principle. The principle in this case is, either that we have a Printing Bureau which we intend to maintain at a high plane of efficiency and to have the government printing done there, or else that this is an impossibility and the intention is to distribute the work among the job offices of the country. When the minister gives us the report he has referred to—he has promised it and we will hold him to his promise—he must come here with a policy and he must let us know if he intends to maintain and equip the Bureau as it ought to be or whether he intends to wind it up.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The promise I made was that I would furnish a statement showing what proportion of the work has been done outside of the Bureau. I will keep that promise.

Mr. MACLEAN. But I want further information. I want some policy announced. This is an important question and one upon which we have a right to criticise the conduct of the hon. gentlemen opposite who, in this House and all over the country cried aloud about the iniquity of the Conservative administration with regard to government printing. But if they themselves have no policy in regard to the matter, but simply intend to use the government printing to the best advantage from their own party point of view, we should be informed that such is the case.

Mr. SPROULE. As the hon. gentleman has consented to give us the information I think, perhaps, it should be made a little fuller and a little more intelligible than in the form he has suggested. I think we should have the various items of printing, showing where the printing was done and what it cost. This would enable us to make a comparison of that which has been done in the Printing Bureau with that which has been done outside. It may be true that all this is in the Auditor General's Report, and that by going through that very large volume we can gain the information, but we would rather have it in more convenient shape.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The hon. minister has promised more than that. He hinted that the work outside had been done cheaper than in the Bureau. What we want particularly is a comparison of the cost in the Bureau and the cost outside. The hon. gentleman could easily furnish that. He must have had some authority for—I can not say the statement, but the inference that he leaves us to draw from the statement—that the printing in the Bureau would cost more than the work that we are getting done outside.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. What I said was that it is contended that printing was not done more economically in the Bureau and in some cases not so economically. On that point I expressed no opinion. I have no doubt but that the authorities of the Bureau will say that it is done cheaper, and that outside printers will say the contrary.

Mr. MACLEAN. Yes, but what does the Minister of Finance say? He is here to tell the country about these things. He and his colleagues have asked the country to trust them with the management of public affairs on the plea that they would conduct those affairs in the public interest. He should tell us whether it is in the public interest to get the printing done in the Bureau or to give it out on political lines.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. At present, both seem——

Mr. MACLEAN. The government have political interests pressing upon them, and therefore they think it best to give the work out. The contention is that it is necessary for a Liberal government to maintain its position in the country by the distribution of printing patronage. I am not going to let the hon. minister away from the issue. I will give him another day or a week if he wants it; but I want him to tell the House and the country which system is in the public interest, and which he intends to follow.

Civil Government Contingencies—Department of Interior—Clerical and other assistance including $820 for J. D. Bollard and $515 for T. W. Hodgins, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act, ... $3,932 50
Printing and stationery $8,500 00
Sundries 7,000 00

$19,432 50

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Why are these grants to J. D. Bollard and T. W. Hodgins given, 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act?'

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. Minister of the Interior (Hon. Clifford Sifton) is not in his place to-day, and I cannot explain the reasons in each case. Generally, however, the purpose is to pay larger increases than are usual under the statute. Perhaps it would be better to let the item stand.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I may as well speak on this as on any other item of a similar nature. The hon. Minister of Finance was not in the House, as I was, when his party was in opposition. But if he had been here he would know that whenever a case came up of any public officer receiving a grant 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act,' we would have it discussed for hours and days in this House. But, notwithstanding the professions thus mouthed by every one of these gentlemen during opposition, there is not a single department whose estimates come before us that we do not find a violation of those principles. With this continuous recurrence of exceptions, we might as well do away with the Civil Service Act altogether and appoint these parties and give them their promotion by statutory enactment, for that is what is being done in these cases. A case does sometimes occur, the circumstances of which are extraordinary, making it necessary that this course should be taken. But it is impossible that these extraordinary cases can occur by the dozen and in every department as we will be led to suppose they do from these estimates. Better let the item stand until the minister is here.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. On the general question, I desire to say that the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Haggart) is mistaken in assuming that these cases are so numerous as he says. As a rule, no doubt, the provisions of the Civil Service Act work well. But there will be cases, as the House has told us, where the statutory increase may not be sufficient to recognize the services of a particularly good man. The number of increases to the whole service is small. The hon. gentleman says that there are one or two in every department; but that is not correct. But, even if there were, that would be a small proportion to the whole civil service——

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. You will find it in every department.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, not in every department. But, even if there were in every department one or two men of whom exception was made in this way, that would be an exceedingly small proportion of the whole civil service, and would hardly justify the inference that you might as well abolish the whole Civil Service Act in this respect. There are, perhaps, not more then a dozen cases in the whole estimates.

Mr. SPROULE. I think it occurs more frequently than the hon. minister is ready to admit. We find it in items 27, 29, 32, 35, 36 and 38. These are but a few picked out hastily.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. But this happens to be the class of items in which they are most apt to appear—these that we are dealing with to-day, and the ones we dealt with yesterday.

Mr. SPROULE. But we find this pretty prevalent in these items.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART.

Civil Government Contingencies—Office of the Auditor General.

Clerical and other assistance..	$ 3,700 00
Printing and stationery	1,250 00
Sundries	700 00
	$5,650 00

Mr. SPROULE. How does it come that there is a saving here of $1,000 ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. When we get a decrease, I generally accept it without asking any questions.

Department of Finance and Treasury Board, $7,590.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There are some small increases. We have estimated the items rather closely.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Perhaps the minister will let that stand for a moment, because we want to discuss the overrulings of the Treasury Board, and I do not see any other item as convenient as this.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have no objection. Perhaps I had better give the information on the point, and then the hon. gentleman can retain the item for the purpose of discussing the overrulings. There are two statutory increases to messengers who are paid out of contingencies now. The messengers now appointed are included in the contingent vote—$60 represents that. The rest represents a general increase in the cost of printing, stationery and small sums.

Item allowed to stand.

Department of Marine and Fisheries, $10,000.

Mr. MACLEAN. This might be a proper place to ask the government for some explanation in regard to the negotiations that were conducted between them and Mr. Marconi in regard to wireless telegraphy. Various statements have been made as to the arrangements between the government and that inventor for the use of his invention, and the department has placed certain conveniences at the service of the inventor. The government might let us know what the arrangement is, and what they hope to effect in the interest of the public by such arrangement.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think it would be better that I should bring down the papers and let them speak for themselves. I could give the hon. gentleman the explanation now, but I expect to place the papers on the Table on Monday next, and that will be the most useful way of answering my hon. friend's question.

Mr. SPROULE. There were some subjects of controversy between the Dominion and provinces with regard to the fisheries. We had some information about it last year, but it was not very conclusive, and the evolutions of time were to set it all straight.

Has the Minister of Marine and Fisheries any additional information to give us on the subject ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Perhaps under another item we will have some information to give. I am not so very sure that the evolution that he speaks of has taken place, and a final settlement been made with regard to the different contentions between the provinces and the Dominion. I am free to admit from the opportunity that I have had of looking into the matter, that there will be very little reduction in the expense of looking after the fisheries so far as the Dominion is concerned, unless there is a very important change made in the relationship between the provinces and the Dominion. If my hon. friend will leave this matter until we come to discuss the items under the head of fisheries, I will be able to give him full information on that point.

Department of Agriculture—Clerical and other assistance, including payment up to $800 each per annum to two assistant patent examiners, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $10,000 ; printing and stationery, $3,750 ; sundries, $3,250 ; total, $17,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I notice here a little divergence from the usual custom ; you say 'clerical and other assistance, including payment up to $800.' Heretofore you made the statement of the amount needed for some particular civil servant, of which you gave the name, and then added, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act to the contrary, but in this case you simply ask us to vote the amount, without giving the name for whom it is needed. Consequently, you can use it for whom you like, and also any amount up to the maximum of the sum named.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The explanation is that I have been obliged for some time back constantly to add to the patent examining staff. The system I have adopted is to take the men and pay them out of clerical assistance, on trial. I have made it a rule to take university graduates who have their degree in some scientific course. I think these men are most suitable for this work, and I may say that the results since I have adopted this course have been eminently satisfactory. I find it impossible to keep young men for any length of time at the maximum of the rate which temporary clerks are allowed, and therefore I have asked for two years back—this is the same as last year and the year before—for power to raise those salaries to the extent of $800 before putting them on the permanent list. When they go on the permanent list of course they come under the other part of the civil government vote. But here while they are being paid this $800 they are still on trial.

Mr. SPROULE. Then I understand these civil servants are not required to pass the civil service examination.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, being university graduates they are eligible without such examination.

Mr. MACLEAN. Does the minister accord that treatment to graduates of the Military College at Kingston ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They come under the same category.

Mr. MACLEAN. I very much approve of this policy, and I would like to see it extended throughout the civil service of this country. We are educating young men at that Military College, we give them a first class education, and then we let them go out of the country the moment they are graduated, instead of drafting them into the civil service and distributing them all over the country in order to get the benefit of their services. If that policy is extended throughout all the departments, as I believe it should be, the government will receive the commendation of the country. I congratulate the minister on his action in moving along these lines, and I recommend his colleagues to follow in the same way. The Auditor General's Department have long utilized university graduates as experts, and I believe with great success. The University of Toronto has recently created a department of political economy and civil economy, which has proved most useful, and those young men who have graduated from that department have been taken hold of. The board of trade and the Manufacturer's Association in Toronto have taken these young men and given them employment, and they have proved to be a splendid class of employees, or officials I might call them. I hope this policy will be extended. If this country is educating young men in the Military College, and if we find that these young men have been forced to leave the country to get employment, I hope the ministers of the various departments will see their way clear to find them employment so as to keep them at home, and in that way they will do a great deal to build up the militia of the country.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Before that carries I would like to draw the attention of the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) to it. The whole of the clerks on whom this expenditure of $10,000 is to be made under these items are exempted from the provisions of the Civil Service Act. It is not as the hon. Minister of Agriculture says at all, for the purpose that he may employ a couple of graduates of a college or something of that kind. All the payments up to $800 and above that may be made under the provision that we are now passing notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Is not that in the explanation given ?

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The hon. Minister of Agriculture asks to have this provision inserted for the purpose of enabling him to make payments to a couple of clerks who are exceptional and who have passed university examinations. Instead of that he could do just the same as they do in the Department of Railways and Canals, where all persons who have technical knowledge, such as engineers, are exempted from the provisions of the Civil Service Act. In this case, the hon. minister exempts from the provisions of the Civil Service Act the whole of the expenditure of $10,000 which he proposes to make.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That is not the case.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Well, that is in the wording.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The wording 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act,' applies only after the word 'including.'

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. But it says 'including payment up to $800 each per annum.'

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That applies to only two.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Only two ? Oh, then, I am mistaken.

The Department of Inland Revenue—
Clerical and other assistance..	$2,300
Printing and stationery..	3,000
Sundries..	2,000
	$7,300

Mr. SPROULE. There is an increase of $200. Would the Minister of Inland Revenue (Hon. Mr. Bernier) explain the cause of it ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no increase. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) will see that there is one item increased and the other reduced so that the net result is the same. It is not an increase; only a readjustment.

Mr. MACLEAN. That is good phrase.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Referring again to the vote of the Department of Agriculture, I stated that the exemption from the provisions of the Civil Service Act applied to the whole of the vote. When I read it over I thought that was correct, and upon further examination, I find that I was correct in saying that it applies to the whole of the clerical assistance required. The item reads :

Clerical and other assistance, including payment up to $800 each per annum for two assistant patent examiners, 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.'

You see there is a comma before 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.'

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I move to strike out the comma.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. That applies to the whole staff.

Mr. MACLEAN. The government are saving themselves with a comma.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We do not take advantage of commas.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. If you strike out the comma, perhaps it will be correct.

Department of Customs—
Clerical and other assistance, including $1,750 to be paid notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.. .. ..$5,625
Printing and stationery,..	2,000
Sundries..	2,730
	$10,355

Mr. SPROULE. I think the same principle is involved here, and it is a very pernicious one.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. This applies to the whole of them; there is no doubt in this case.

Mr. SPROULE. No name is given of anyone, and there is nothing beyond the vote of the money. The money can be expended without reference to the provisions of the Civil Service Act, and it can be given to any person the minister chooses. I remember somewhat distinctly some of the discussions which took place upon this question years ago, the object of inserting this provision was this : Every young man or young woman in the civil service was supposed to be getting a fair salary, and if for any cause it was found necessary to employ them in any capacity other than that which had been their ordinary work, and a vote of money passed this House for that purpose, the name was given so that you might look up and see who the party was, the amount of salary he was getting and whether he was getting more than he was entitled to; or, if he was charged with doing one class of work and with doing less than he should do in his ordinary avocation, so as to enable him to get the additional salary, you could readily look up the record and see who the civil servant was, how much his salary was at the time, and how much it would be if the addition was made. Then, the name was given in each case. Now, we are departing entirely from that rule. You give no name, we vote the amount and you can employ any person you choose. I think this is leading to the abuse that we had to correct in 1891 after the long inquiry which we made into the civil service, and it cannot be stopped a moment too early. I think we should have some explanation from the minister.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) will remember—I have been out of the House for a few moments—there was a general discussion upon this question. Speaking about this particular item, I think that three years ago, in taking the general estimates, I had an estimate in for a first-class clerk at $1,750. It passed in committee, but before the estimates were adopted finally the clerk died. I then stated that I would wait until the main estimates were being concurred in and move to reduce them by the sum of $1,750, and that I would take in the supplementaries a vote for an amount without reference to the civil service examination. What I did was, that after the death of that officer I was proposing to get two officers, paying both of them only the amount that had been paid to the gentleman who died. This has gone on from that time to this, not with any desire to hide the names of the persons receiving the money or anything of that kind. Then, I was unable to get the officers to start at $400. I could not get the officers that were required, but I was able to get two officers who had not passed the civil service examination, and as they were good and competent men I gave them $700 each one year, and next year I increased it to $750.

Mr. SPROULE. Who are the officers? They are not named here.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. One was Mr. Norris, who is now in the outside service, and I forget the name of the other gentleman at this moment. But, this is the way it came about, and perhaps now a second-class clerk, starting at $600, would be better for another year when this provision would be dropped and these officers brought under the civil service list.

Mr. SPROULE. It would be better. I think it is a very bad principle, and since attention has been drawn to it, I do not think it would be out of place to change it and adopt the regular system.

Department of Public Works—

Printing and stationery	$4,500
Sundries	5,500
	$10,000

Mr. SPROULE. This is for printing and stationery?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Newspapers, postage, telegrams, printing, and so on. There is not a cent for employees.

Mr. SPROULE. I was going to ask the minister if all this was given to 'La Patrie.'

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. 'La Patrie' does not require any public patronage.

Contingencies—High Commissioner's Office, London, $18,350.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This item contains a special vote to which I invite the attention of the committee. There is a small increase in the general expenses consequent on the increase of the income tax which has always been paid by this government. There is an increase of $100 for stationery, and for rents, alterations, &c., there is an increase of $1,800.14, explained by the fact that the premises have been enlarged, during the past year. The offices in London were found to be somewhat cramped and additional accommodation was obtained last year in the same building. There is a sum of $5,000 proposed to be granted in lieu of house and furniture. It will be remembered that when the office of High Commissioner for Canada was established, a house was bought in London for the High Commissioner and both house and furniture were supplied at the public expense. That system continued for some years. The house was a somewhat expensive one, but the property somewhat deteriorated in that vicinity and the house was never occupied by Lord Strathcona. We came to the conclusion that there was no use in keeping it idle, and so the house was sold. The government no longer owns the house and no longer undertakes to furnish a house in London, and so this appropriation is in lieu of the house and furniture which have hitherto been supplied at the public expense. The High Commissioner, for the time being, has either to buy a house, or he can rent a house and furniture during the term of his incumbency. This is in lieu of the house and furniture which has hitherto been supplied at the public expense.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Will this be cheaper or dearer than the former system?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Speaking from memory the house cost us upwards of $40,000. It was furnished at the public expense and the furniture had to be maintained. Whether or not this is an exact equivalent I am not prepared to say. It may be more liberal. There is no doubt that the whole tendency of the expenses of the High Commissioner in London must be to increase. It is a very expensive place. It is a position which I believe the average public man would hardly desire. It can only be occupied, I am afraid, by a man of private means, and we must expect to make a decently liberal allowance to whoever occupies that office.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I suppose Lord Strathcona lives in his own residence in London?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Of course he does not draw this.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. He will draw it.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I thought this was a provision to carry out the common rumour that there is to be a successor appointed to Lord Strathcona.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I can assure the hon. gentleman that there is no foundation for that rumour whatever.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I am very glad to hear that.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. So far as we know Lord Strathcona has improved in health and strength and the desire of all is that he may be long spared to continue in the office, the duties of which he has discharged with such great ability and credit to Canada.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Contingencies—Post Office Department, $60,885.

Mr. SPROULE. There is an increase here.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Every year the number of savings bank accounts increase, and there is an allowance of 1¾ cents for calculation of the interest on each saving's bank account. The number of accounts has increased by 6,000 last year, and this is the ordinary vote to meet that.

Mr. SPROULE. I have seen the rumour of late in the public press that the Postmaster General is getting a large share of his printing done in Toronto, and has transferred it from the Government Printing Bureau for some reason or other unknown to the general public. Can the minister give us some information on the subject. Where is he getting his printing done now, and is there a saving in the cost ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. My hon. friend is in error in saying that the printing has been transferred to the city of Toronto. It does happen that one single item of printing for this department was done outside the Bureau, but it was not done in the city of Toronto. However, this is immaterial to the question. It was done in the city of Montreal.

Mr. MACLEAN. By whom ?

Mr. LaRIVIERE. The 'Herald' of course.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It was not the 'Herald.' Tenders were invited, or rather inquiries were made to see what was a fair price. It was done by the printing firm of Perrault, I think that is the name. This was one item known as the Money Order Book, and it was sent there because we could not get it done with equal dispatch and cheapness in the Printing Bureau at the time. They complain at the Bureau at times, that their equipment is inadequate and that the accommodation is not as large as it should be. I believe there is something in that, and we may some time or other be called on to enlarge that Bureau. I think the minister is getting more equipment in.

Contingencies—Office of Controller of Northwest Mounted Police, $900.

Mr. SPROULE. I notice that in almost all these items there appears the proviso 'clerical and other assistance notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act.' It does not say who is to be employed, but we put the money at the disposal of the minister to use it as he sees fit. It is a pernicious principle and it is more prevalent this year than ever before. The Civil Service Act is old enough to have a fair trial, and if there is anything in it, we should live up to it as closely as possible. It is true there are exceptions to every rule and the House is liberal in providing for these exceptions, but this sort of thing now appears to be the general rule rather than the exception.

The PRIME MINISTER. As far as the Department of Mounted Police is concerned, I believe there is this redeeming feature for the violation of the rule, namely: That the department is in exactly the same position as it was in July 1896, when we took office.

Mr. SPROULE. The Prime Minister does not quite apprehend the point I make. Not that there was any change in the department of the Mounted Police, but that almost every item in these estimates contains a sum of money that is required 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act to the contrary.' That is, we set aside an amount of money which the head of the department may spend contrary to the provisions of the Civil Service Act, in employing any person he chooses. Formerly when this was done the name of the individual was given, and we could ascertain how much he was getting in the aggregate for the work he was doing. But to-day the names are not mentioned. We only vote the money, and leave it to the judgment of the minister or someone under him in the department to employ any one he likes, perhaps some one in another department who gets a good salary, and who, if he did his duty, would have his time fully occupied there. The result is that we do not know anything about it unless we can find out by looking into the Auditor General's Report.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Perhaps I should say that in a number of cases these words are necessary to enable us to employ messengers who have not passed the civil service examination; and I do not know that it is necessary that messengers should pass it. Perhaps the most useful messenger you could have would be a man of about forty years of age, who could not pass the civil service examination; and in order to employ him it is necessary to insert these words. You might get a boy who could pass the examination, but who, after being a messenger for a year or two, might want to be made a clerk. He probably would not make as good a messenger as the man I have described.

Mr. SPROULE. If this refers to messengers, it should be so stated; but it is impossible to suppose that all these cases, or even a large number, are those of messengers.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. We have an Act of parliament, and if it is not a proper one we should amend it. I know that, as the hon. gentleman states, sometimes the very best messenger you could get is one who cannot pass the civil service examination, perhaps an old soldier, trained to the service; but in that case his name should be mentioned, if he is employed. There must have been a controversy with the Auditor General whether the voting of a particular sum for a certain purpose without mentioning the man's name could exempt the individual from the provisions of the Act. I would suppose that voting the money would not exempt the individual.

The PRIME MINISTER. I think this is the same form that has been used for years. There is no change.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Perhaps the point has never been thought of.

Contingencies—Department of Labour, $1,650.

Mr. MACLEAN. Will the Minister of Labour say whether it is his intention this session to increase the pay of that large class of labourers, the letter carriers ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I would like to satisfy my hon. friend at the earliest moment, but I am afraid this is hardly the opportune occasion. If he will kindly renew his question at a later date, I can assure him he will have the opportunity.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I notice that the minister at the head of the Department of Labour does not take advantage of the phrase 'notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act,' so that none of this money can be applied to any one who does not come under the provisions of that Act.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. We take our chances of that.

Mr. SPROULE. I may remind my hon. friend of the vote taken yesterday, a note at the bottom of which said that none of these come under the Civil Service Act. It is said that they are all exempt.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That was with reference to civil government.

Mr. SPROULE. It applied to the clerks in the department—all below the deputy head.

Mr. MACLEAN. And as we have the Minister of Justice now in the House, and he is a young and energetic man, he can give us the benefit of his advice and straighten out this tangle, so that we shall not have one minister after another getting up and saying that they are taking their chances. We hope the Minister of Justice gives sound advice, and we shall expect it at the next sitting in regard to these important questions.

Care and cleaning of departmental buildings, $28,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is the usual vote.

Mr. SPROULE. As the Minister of Public Works is not present, I presume this is not the proper place to bring up the question of the rooms in this building. Although we were told last year that there was going to be an important addition made which would afford us more rooms and better ones, we find, when we come back, that there is not much change, apart from adding a committee room and a suite of rooms for some employees of the House. Owing to the absence of the Minister of Public Works, who has to bear the brunt of the abuse in these cases, I think we shall have to take up the matter at some other time.

Administration of Justice—miscellaneous expenditure, including North-west Territories, $37,000.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. We are told by the papers that there is some probability of a change in regard to the salaries of the judges, notably the county court judges. I understood the Minister of Justice to say the other day that the government had not arrived at a policy in reference to the judges of the superior courts and the Supreme Court. When this item is being voted it is the time for the Minister of Justice to state what the policy of the government is in reference to the salary of the judges throughout the country.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I do not think the question of an increase in the salaries of the judges has been considered at all. The question that came up the other day was with reference to the retirement of a certain number of county court judges who had reached a period of life when they were not in a position properly to perform the duties appertaining to their office, and the suggestion was that these judges, after they had reached a certain term on the bench, say twenty or twenty-five years, and had attained the age of seventy or seventy-five, should be allowed to retire on full pay. That was the suggestion. We have not got beyond the stage of looking on it as a suggestion. I myself would not be in a position to go further than to say that I do not think a man who has served his country for twenty or twenty-five years and reached an advanced age, should be forced to retire without receiving some consideration for the services he has rendered.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Does this apply only to the county court judges ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Up to the present time it is only with reference to the county court judges that the matter has been considered. I may say that a constitutional difficulty exists with regard to the High Court judges. It is extremely doubtful, in view of the terms of the British North America Act, whether a high court judge can be interfered with in any way. The most we could expect to do would be to make some provision that after he has attained a certain age and done service during a certain period he might be allowed to retire on full pay.

Mr. MACLEAN. Has not the time come for some radical departure by this parliament in the treatment of our judges. Year by year representations have been made to the previous government, as well as to this one, on this subject without any effect. I hope the new Minister of Justice will give the question his most careful consideration, and put the government shortly in a position to grapple with it. I have no hesitation in saying that our judges are not sufficiently paid and that we have too many.

Mr. COWAN. Not High Court judges.

Mr. MACLEAN. No, but altogether. The number ought to be reduced and the salaries increased, and there ought perhaps to be more liberal treatment given them with regard to expenses. At present we cannot get a lawyer of the best class to take a judgeship in Ontario simply because the salary is not high enough. I have actually heard it stated that a certain judge was in a position to go on the Appeal Bench in the province of Ontario because he had private means of his own and could afford to dispense with the $1,000 allowance for expenses given the other judges. That condition of affairs should not be allowed to continue. I believe in paying our judges well so as to get the highest class of men for the position. I believe that our judges should be selected among men of 40 or 45 years of age, because then you get men who are in their prime, but in order to get the best men we must pay a better salary. I hope that the day is at hand when the whole question will be courageously grappled with by the government and a progressive policy brought down. I trust that the new Minister of Justice will take this matter up and give it his best consideration next year if not this year.

Mr. WADE. I am very glad that the hon. gentleman has brought this matter up, especially the matter of the salaries paid judges. In Ontario there are four judges who are paid $6,000 per year each and eleven who are paid $5,000. In the province of Quebec three are paid $6,000 a year and twenty-two $5,000 a year, while in Nova Scotia only one judge is paid $5,000 a year and the other six are only paid $4,000. I submit that the character of litigation which comes before the judges of Nova Scotia is more varied perhaps than that which comes before the judges of any other province. Certainly it covers every possible kind of business—mining, manufacturing, lumbering, ship building, agriculture, banking and commerce and insurance. If the judges in Ontario and Quebec are not adequately paid at $5,000 or $6,000 a year—and I agree with my hon. friend from East York (Mr. Maclean) in that regard—surely he will admit that the judges in Nova Scotia are much more poorly paid and that their salaries should be increased. Shortly before this discussion arose I was going through the figures, and I find that it would take some $29,000 to level up the salaries of the judges in the other provinces to those in Ontario and Quebec, and I would urge on the hon. Minister of Justice this phase of the question. Something might be urged against any increase to the judges in some of the provinces on the ground that the character of the litigation which comes before them is not as varied as it is in Nova Scotia or Ontario, but no such contention can be made with regard to the judges in the province of Nova Scotia.

As regards the number of superior judges being too great, I do not think that such an objection can hold with regard to Nova Scotia. We have only seven Supreme Court judges there. There might be some objection of the kind raised with regard to the county court judges, but certainly not in the case of the Supreme Court judges. I had intended to bring this mater up at a later stage in the discussion of the estimates, but as we are at the vote now, I take this opportunity of giving expression to my views and will refer to the subject again.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. When I first came in to this House, and on the very first occasion when I addressed the Chair, I did so in favour of increasing the salaries of the judges. That was over thirteen years ago, and I am still of the same opinion, but I regret that although I have exerted myself in bringing up the subject before the House every session, nothing so far has been done. Speaking of my own province, we have in Manitoba but four Superior Court judges. They preside over the Court of King's Bench in criminal as well as in civil cases, and they also form a Court of Appeal or Review, so that these judges in Manitoba have to do all the duties which in the other provinces are assigned to special judges. In Ontario as well as Quebec there are several courts, and the judges of each court are confined to the work of that court alone, but in Manitoba our four judges have to do the work both of the Court of First Jurisdiction and the Court of Appeal. This is not the case in the province of Quebec or Ontario or the province of Nova Scotia, of which the hon. gentleman who last addressed the Chair has spoken, and yet our judges are on the same footing as the judges in Nova Scotia with regard to salary. The Chief Justice gets only $5,000 a year and the puisne judges only $4,000 per year each, which is entirely inadequate and out of proportion, considering the excessive cost of living in the western province and the amount of work they have to perform. Their labours extend over the whole of the province of Manitoba where we have three large districts. The result is that in order to keep up with the work, these judges are sometimes subjected to such a strain that their health is undermined through over work. It is unfair to expect men of their ability—and our judges in Manitoba are men of high ability—to do the work they do at such a low salary.

To pay salary of judge of Divorce and Matrimonial Court, N.B., $500.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. May I ask the Minister of Justice if we are soon to expect an appointment in the place of Judge Prendergast who has been removed to the North-west Territories ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Almost immediately.

Mr. MACLEAN. Here is an item for the salary of a judge of the Divorce and Matrimonial Court in New Brunswick. I used that only to bring out the fact that eleven cases are being tried this year in the Senate, in a very expensive way and a very unfair way.

The PRIME MINISTER. Why unfair ?

Mr. MACLEAN. It is unfair to the poor people, and really amounts to class legislation. If we pay salaries for a divorce court in New Brunswick, there is a large section of this community who think there ought to be, in some way, a divorce court for the Dominion.

Mr. LARIVIERE. Let them go to New Brunswick.

Mr. MACLEAN. No, they do not have to go to New Brunswick. The time is coming when this question must be approached. It is very well to try to sidetrack it in this way but we do not thereby remove the trouble. People are leaving Canada for the United States in order to get relief. They may go to New Brunswick also. And yet, notwithstanding all, the Senate, the worst possible court to try cases of this kind, has eleven cases before it this session. I know there is a great deal of objection to the proposal of a Divorce Court, but it is one of those difficult questions which ought to be approached and dealt with by the government.

Administration of Justice—Supreme Court of Canada—The reporter, $2,050.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I notice there is an increase in the general vote for this court. It has been increasing year by year. It was a respectably small sum at one time.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The general staff have been allowed the statutory increase of $50 a year, except the messengers, who have been each allowed $30.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. How many messengers are there ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Two.

Mr. SPROULE. These officers, I see by the estimates of last year, received the statutory increase last year also. Exception seems to have been made of this court, among the civil servants. Nearly all were denied the increase last year, but, on the other hand nearly all the officers of this court received the increase both last year and this year. I do not object to the increase, if it is given to the others. But, to refuse it to so many of the others and give it to all these officers suggests that the injustice is being done to the many, or that more than justice is being done to these.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. When the permanent head of the department reports that a civil servant is entitled to the increase, for my part I have endeavoured to conform to that recommendation.

Mr. SPROULE. I know that that is the contention this year. But that has been strongly opposed in other years, and it has been contended that, notwithstanding the recommendation of the deputy head, it was left to the wisdom or justice of the minister to grant the increase or not as he pleased. And, last year, the judgment of the ministers was that, in most cases, the increase should not be given. To grant the increase generally in one branch and to withhold it generally in others could hardly be defended on grounds of justice.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Before we pass the estimates of the Supreme Court, I would like to have a little discussion with the Minister of Justice concerning the statement he has made that he doubts whether we have power, under the British North America Act, to fix the time at which a judge may be superannuated. Surely, that power must rest somewhere. We have all the power that the British parliament has, there being no reservation under the British North America Act. If a British parliament is all powerful with regard to the judges of Great Britain, we surely have power to say at what age our judges shall retire. When men arrive at a certain age, frailty overtakes them, as a rule—there may be individual exceptions. Surely, when we are paying the salaries, we have the power to say at what age a man shall cease to perform the duties as a judge for which the salary is paid. What the people of this country complain about is not that the salaries of the judges are too large but that there are so many judges and such a multitude of appeals. In no country in the world, except the United States, and partially, Great Britain, can a litigant, when he goes into court to obtain civil justice be delayed so long as in Canada. I am sorry the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) is not in his place today. When he was in opposition he advocated this principle. He drew the attention of the Minister of Justice of that time again and again to the number of appeals and to the delay of justice in Canada. As the hon. gentleman used to ask then, why cannot we adopt the simpler system that they have in Switzerland, or the form of procedure that they have in the German empire, or that of France, or the new procedure of Great Britain? Why should a poor litigant be delayed in this manner when he seeks a simple answer to a request for justice from the courts of the land? Have fewer judges. Pay them well. There is a favoured corporation which exists in this country and to the members of which more prizes, more good offices are open than to all the rest of the people in the community put together. It is a close corporation. Of course it is open to every young man who accepts it as a profession. But how few are in a position to do so. It is virtually a close corporation. And, while the people of this country are proud of the integrity of the judges, proud of their incorruptibility as well as, generally, their intelligence in the administration of justice, they feel that there should be a simpler course of procedure, fewer courts and fewer judges. I congratulate the Minister of Justice on the accessions the Supreme Court of Canada has recently made. I am glad to see that the government have appointed two distinguished members of the House, and I believe they will bring to that court the intelligence and ability which ought to characterize the members of the Supreme Court of the country. I am glad to say that, though they have been opponents of mine in this House. I believe they will bring to that court at any rate that incorruptibility which is as necessary almost as intelligence. I say this though, the appointments are following precedents which the Postmaster General has condemned, of taking members from this House, though I may differ with him upon that subject. But I am glad to see that two gentlemen for whom I have so high a respect as the late Minister of Justice and the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries have been—might I say hoisted, or sent upwards, to the honourable position which they now hold as judges of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Mr. SPROULE. A good many years ago when I was a younger member of this House, a Bill was introduced to do away with the Supreme Court. Perhaps I did not know as much about courts then as I do now. But I hold the opinion which has just been expressed by my hon. friend from Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart) that it was thought then that the courts were rather used for the benefit of the rich man than of the poor man, because when a case was entered you never knew when it would be finished, and unless a man had a very long purse he might expect to be outdone by his opponent. I might cite one or two cases that went on year after year in that way. But the argument made against the Supreme Court was something like this, it was contended that it was very expensive for litigants to go to the highest court in the empire, that is to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and therefore there was a strong necessity for a Supreme Court in Canada where most of those cases could be taken and finally decided. That was the reason the court was established; but it was afterwards found that that object was not fulfilled by the Supreme Court, and a Bill was introduced to do away with it. On that occasion I remember distinctly that the late Rt. Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald opposed the Bill strongly, and held that while there were many things about the Supreme Court that he thought were not just what they ought to be, he still held it was on its trial, and that we ought to let it continue, It was held that there were two lines especially in which that Supreme Court would be advantageous, namely, that it would secure finality in many cases coming from the provinces, and that it would be able to settle constitutional questions that might be submitted to it. I have watched with a good deal of interest the conduct of these cases since then, but I have not found as time went on that there has been much improvement. There is an increasing number of cases being taken to the Privy Council in England. That high court seems to be the aim of every litigant who is able to carry his case there. Instead of securing finality, it appears to me that the Supreme Court is only another stepping stone that the litigant has to pass before he gets his case finally settled and one that adds to the expense. It seems to me that there ought to be some stringent rule laid down to govern the selection of cases that are allowed to be taken from the Supreme Court to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. I think a large percentage of the cases in which application is made to carry them to the Privy Council, should not be allowed, and that we should have some rule laid down by which a majority of those cases would end in the Supreme Court here.

Mr. HACKETT. I want to say just one word with reference to a statement made by the Minister of Justice that there is a constitutional difficulty standing in the way of superannuating the judges of the Supreme and higher courts of Canada. In this country when a man goes to law, he expects to get justice in the courts, and every thing depends upon the honesty and integrity of the courts of justice. Now I want to say here that in my opinion the judges, not only of the Supreme Court and of the other higher courts of Canada, but also of the lower courts, are men against whom not one word can be said in respect of their honesty and integrity. But I chiefly rise for the purpose of expressing my gratification on the accession the Supreme Court of Canada has recently made in the persons of Sir Louis Davies and the Hon. David Mills. They have long been political antagonists of mine. I want to say of Sir Louis Davies that I have known him for thirty years, ever since he was a young man, and I have always found that he was a gentleman of high convictions of honesty and truth which he was ready to carry into any position which he filled in this House or elsewhere. I rise to say this of that gentleman, and also to say that our people in Prince Edward Island look upon his elevation to the Supreme Court as a compliment to their province. We are a small portion of this great Dominion, but I am glad to recognize that the government of Canada has shown that though we are small in numbers we have produced men of great ability. We are proud that they have taken a gentleman from our province and raised him to the honourable position of a judge of the Supreme Court.

Mr. McCREARY. I would like to call the attention of the Minister of Justice to one or two facts in relation to the west. I do not know whether he has yet received from the bar of Manitoba a resolution recently passed to the following effect:

Moved by Mr. Aikins, K. C., seconded by Mr. Phippen :

That as there is now a large and increasing population in Manitoba, the North-west Territories and British Columbia, and in view of the rapidly growing importance of these provinces, it is in the opinion of the bar of Manitoba, due to that portion of Canada lying west of Ontario that there should be appointed from such territory at least one judge to the Supreme Court of Canada, and the bar of Manitoba respectfully urges that the government of the Dominion of Canada make such amendment to the Supreme Court Act as will enable such additional judge to be appointed.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I intended to bring this up at a later date, but as the matter is now up for discussion. I may properly mention it to-day. Most lawyers in this House will agree with me when I say that the legislation of Manitoba, the Territories, and British Columbia, is very dissimilar to that of Ontario, and especially to that of the Maritime Provinces and Quebec; and some of the litigants who go to the Supreme Court have complained bitterly, not that the judges of the Supreme Court were not men of ability, but that they were not in touch with the laws of the western portion of Canada, and consequently they considered their cases had not been dealt with as well as they might have been had there been on the Bench a judge who had some knowledge of the laws of the western provinces. Now, the lawyers from Manitoba are to a great extent acquainted with the laws of the Territories as well as those of British Columbia, in fact one half the bar of British Columbia is composed of gentlemen who have been members of the bar of Manitoba, of gentlemen who have graduated in Manitoba. I think the late Chief Justice of British Columbia graduated in Manitoba, and if I mistake not the present Chief Justice did also. The lawyers in Winnipeg are pretty well acquainted with the laws of all of western Canada, even to the coast; and I submit that the Minister of Justice might now consider whether some amendment should not be made in that Act by which members from Manitoba or the west might be appointed to the Supreme Court Bench. I think he will agree with me when I say that we have just as able men in the west as we have in the east. In fact we see now that one of the most important acts of legislation passed in Manitoba has recently been adopted by the great and intelligent province of Ontario, I refer to the Prohibition Act, which is to be a copy of the Manitoba Act.

Before I sit down I will take this occasion of saying that I endorse the statement made by my hon. friend from Provencher (Mr. LaRivière) with regard to salaries. I notice in looking over the salaries that $6,000 and $8,000 are paid to several judges in Ontario. As I have said, we have just as able judges in Manitoba and the Territories as any in the east; besides we all know that the expense of living up there is 25 or 50 per cent higher than it is in the east, higher than it is in Ottawa or Quebec. I know that if you engage a hack to take you from the station to your hotel in Manitoba, it costs you a dollar, when such a service would cost 25 cents here. My experience has been that it costs from 25 to 50 per cent more to live in Manitoba and the North-west Territories than it does here. Our judges in Manitoba and the west are as able as the judges are here, and why should they not be paid the same salaries or even 25 per cent more ? I submit that an injustice is being done in our western provinces. It may be argued that we are not numerically a large province. That is not a good argument. We ought to have the best men that Canada can procure in a new country which is rapidly filling up with people and they would be amply paid. Next year we expect to have between 50,000 to 100,000 people coming from the American nation across the boundary, and a great deal will depend on how our courts are established and maintained as to the impression which will be made on the minds of those people who settle in that country. Americans as a general rule have a very great respect for our courts and our judges, and it will be well to maintain the courts in a manner which will merit such respect. It behooves the hon. Minister of Justice and parliament to take proper steps to see that the best men are appointed to the Bench and that they are paid the highest salaries that it is practicable to give them. I also notice that you have five or six judges in other provinces to one in Manitoba. We have only four judges of the Superior Court when we should have seven or eight, and they will still have too much work to do. I know that Judge Dubuc, one of the judges of the Manitoba Superior Court, is practically laid up from overwork, over study and overtravel. I know also this, and I state it as a fact, that if we were to ask for a judge to be put on the Superior Court Bench, of the six or eight senior members of the bar of Manitoba not one would accept the $5,000 salary that is offered and go on the Bench. I have spoken to five or six of these gentlemen. I know that their practice is worth much more than $5,000 a year. I would ask the hon. Minister of Justice to carefully consider these matters.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. As to the question of the appointing of the judges, I may state, after the discussion that has taken place here to-day, that up to the present time it is apparent that fairly good judges have been appointed, because it seems to me that each side is vieing with the other in praising the judges we have now. In respect to appointments from Manitoba to the Supreme Court Bench, I may say that what is desired and what is necessary in this country is that we should have as far as possible the best men in the country on the Supreme Court Bench, and in order to accomplish that purpose we should endeavour to eliminate the question of boundaries and take the best men, wherever we can get them, always of course having proper regard for the position of the province of Quebec. Dealing with that point, I should say in answer to the opinion expressed by the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) that appeals to the Supreme Court are final in so far as it is possible for this parliament to make them so. I may say to my hon. friend that when a case has once gone to the Supreme Court it is concluded by the judgment of that Court, and that in order to go to the Privy Council it is necessary to make application to the Privy Council for special leave to go there. In respect to an application to the Privy Council in order to enable an appeal to be taken we have absolutely no jurisdiction. We have absolutely no control over it. It is one of the inherent rights of every British subject to go to the sovereign and ask him for justice. The sovereign is the source of all justice, and every subject can always go to the sovereign and ask to be heard. That is the reason of appeals to the Privy Council. We can limit this right, we cannot take it away; it is impossible for us to do more than to say that in so far as this country is concerned the judgment of the Supreme Court is final, but every British subject may then go to the King, when he has a grievance, and ask him to remedy it. If the King considers that the question ought to be inquired into he says that the appeal should be granted and fixes the terms upon which the appeal may be granted. Then, an appeal is made to the King in council and that is why it was called an appeal to the Privy Council.

Dealing with the question of the superannuation of judges, I would like to say to my hon. friend from Lanark (Mr. Haggart) that at the present time a judge who is appointed to the High Court may, after he has served fifteen years on the Bench, retire and receive his retiring allowance, or, in the interval a judge becomes incapacitated on account of illness or some other cause, he may retire and receive his retiring allowance. But, a judge once appointed, is appointed for all time and there can be no interference with his appointment except with his consent or by impeachment. That is the rule, that is the sacred rule, and it is a necessary rule if we are to preserve the independence of our courts. My hon. friend beside me suggests that of course we may proceed by impeachment. If it were otherwise what would happen would be this; a judge would be appointed and after he was appointed if he became obnoxious to the powers that happened to control the legislation, at any time in his career, legislation might be introduced and his services dispensed with. What would become of the independence of the judiciary under these conditions? It would be impossible to have those judges of whom all have spoken so highly to-day. They would then be dependent upon the whim or caprice of parliament and that would be the ruination of the judicial system of this country. What I should like to do would be to provide that when a judge has served his country for a certain period of time, and when he has reached a certain age, by common consent, or by mutual agreement, as between him and the crown, he may retire on his full pay. The pay is now so small that it is impossible for a judge to make any provision for his declining years, and the result is that we see judges going beyond their period of labour, having passed the allotted three score years and ten of life, and still struggling on and dying in harness practically because they have been obliged to continue work at a time when they should be relieved from that obligation, because the position is such that it is impossible for them to retire, as their financial condition prevents them from doing so with advantage to themselves and their families. The hon. member for North Lanark said that we have too many judges in this country. I am not going to dispute that point, but my hon. friend must remember that we are not responsible entirely for the judicial system of this country. It is an anomalous system that we have; the creation and control of courts is within the jurisdiction of the local legislatures. All that we have to do is to appoint the judges that the local legislatures declare are necessary for the proper administration of justice.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. That is only for the county courts.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. It is applicable to all the high courts. If you will look at the British North America Act you will see that the constitution of the courts is under the control of the local legislatures. As a matter of course, the appointment of the judges remains with us, but the necessity for judges is a matter that is under the control of the local legislatures. Therefore, we are not entirely responsible for the number of judges in the land. On the contrary, I say in the words of Sir John Macdonald—than whom there was no more competent man to discuss such a question—when the point was raised by the Hon. Edward Blake; I say in the words of Sir John Macdonald, that it would be a serious responsibility for this parliament to assume. If the local legislature has decided that it is necessary to appoint a judge in the interest of litigants, it would be a serious responsibility for this parliament to assume the right to refuse to do that which the local legislature asks us to do. After all, we have to bear in mind that we represent here practically the same electorate that the members of the local legislatures represent, and that if that electorate speaking through the local legislature, declares that a court ought to be constituted in a certain division, or that a judge ought to be appointed, it would be a serious matter for us to refuse to acquiesce in the desire of the local legislature.

As to the multitude of appeals, there again, I speak feelingly. Perhaps I should limit my observations to my own province, and I can say that in my province there is a multitude of appeals which I think are entirely unnecessary. But there again my hon. friend must address himself to the local legislature. We have no remedy; we cannot give any redress; we cannot interfere at all. That is a matter of procedure which is governed exclusively by the local legislature.

Mr. SPROULE. If we had never established the Supreme Court they could not appeal to it.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. That is another question. The question of the appeal to the Supreme Court is a matter for which this parliament must assume the responsibility, but, speaking deferentially of course, and after some experience of the Supreme Court, I say it would be rather a disappointment to me at all events if the Supreme Court of Canada were abolished. The Supreme Court has rendered good service, and if you bear in mind that the commercial law of this country, and generally that part of the legislation under the control of this parliament, is uniform throughout Canada, it will be seen to be important that this parliament should have a court to construe its own laws. It is important I say that this parliament should have control over the court that is called upon to construe the laws we enact here, so that we may have some sort of uniformity in our jurisprudence in respect to laws which are uniform throughout the country. There is a class of laws peculiar to each province, but there is on the other hand legislation applicable to the whole country, and with respect to that it is proper we should have a court that would construe that legislation so that our jurisprudence will have uniformity. In that respect the Supreme Court is a valuable body. My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Haggart) has spoken of the judicial system they have in England. I speak with deference on that, because the system is not very familiar to me, but it strikes me that in Ontario and Nova Scotia the Judicature Act is practically adopted, and in those two provinces they have substantially the same Judicature Act they have in England.

I am reminded by the Prime Minister of something which I should say in respect to appeals to the Supreme Court. There is one question we must consider, and that is a question which is entirely under our control. That is, as to whether or not, with respect to the appeals to the Supreme Court, we should say that these appeals should be limited to that particular class of legislation I spoke of a moment ago; namely, the cases arising under the federal laws. There is a question as to whether that ought not to be done. That is a question which I think ought to be very seriously considered by all of us. I do not think that we ought to be hasty in our legislation in that regard. I know that so far as the province of Quebec is concerned, although they are called upon to administer a system of laws which is perhaps not very familiar to all of the judges, still there are cases in which we are glad to have appeals to the Supreme Court, notwithstanding that their system of law is not the same as exists elsewhere. With respect to the general question it would be worth our while to consider it. I think it is a very valuable suggestion, and one that ought to be looked into, as to whether we ought not to limit the appeals to the Supreme Court to cases which arise under the federal laws.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The Minister of Justice tells us that it perhaps would not be just to retire a judge at a certain time of life, and that at all events it is not the constitutional practice followed in England. I know the system that prevails there, and it was a question with me as to whether we had the power to do it. I contend we have the power if there is no constitutional principle against it. As to the appeal from the Supreme Court to the Privy Council, I am glad to hear the present Minister of Justice announce doctrines which are entirely different from those held by his leaders when they were in opposition. When the Hon. Edward Blake introduced the Supreme Court Act he said that the power of limiting the right of appeal was under the British North America Act and that when a question went to the Supreme Court we could by an Act of this parliament prevent it going to the Privy Council.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Mr. Blake never made such a statement.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I beg your pardon. I listened to it and I heard the reply of Sir John Macdonald and his suggestion which was incorporated in the Act.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Mr. Blake knew too much to make such a statement as that.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I remember that Sir John Macdonald stated that a little bird whispered in his ear that an Act which deprived Her Majesty of a certain prerogative would be disallowed. The Minister of Justice tells us that it is the inherent right of every subject to appeal to the foot of the Throne. I rather think, that is a prerogative of the Crown itself. The prerogative of the Crown is to hear the appeal, and it rather appertains to the Sovereign and not to the subject. That is the way it should be put.

Mr. BELCOURT. What is the difference ?

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. We have no right here to interfere with the prerogative of the Crown. When preparing the Australian constitution it was insisted that there should be embodied in it a provision similar to that in our original Supreme Court Act, and they held that the decision of the Australian courts should be final. The contention was made that in the Australian Act, when the King and parliament of England consented to it, the fact of their consent did away with the prerogative as far as it referred to Australia. If the parliament of Canada had a short Imperial Act passed, and if the King assented to it, no appeal would go from the Supreme Court to the Privy Council, because the consent of the King would take away this prerogative. I rose in order to state to the Minister of Justice what my recollection was of the matter under discussion.

Then, as to the question of our jurisdiciton over procedure, the power virtually rests with the government by its refusing to appoint a judge or refusing to pay him, or by delaying his appointment for a long time in order to allow of a consultation between the Dominion authorities and the provincial authorities as to the necessity of it. But when the provincial authorities establish a court and we appoint a judge to it, we virtually become a party to the establishing of that court and the mode of procedure adopted by it. Equal power lies with us in consequence of having the power of appointing a judge and paying him. I will admit the statement of the Rt. Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald as to the convenience of leaving the matter to the different provincial legislatures ; and I will admit that Sir John Thompson, with some qualms of conscience, instead of fighting legislatures which were perhaps hostile to him, or forcing them to come to an agreement, did the same thing as a matter of convenience ; but I contend that in the having the appointment and payment of judges, we have equal power with the provincial governments over the procedure of the courts.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I am obliged to my hon. friend for his correction of my statement as to an appeal to the Privy Council from the Supreme Court. He must bear with me, because unfortunately my knowledge has to be obtained from books, not having had a long parliamentary experience, and my knowledge of the Supreme Court is taken from the statute, which I will read to my hon. friend.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. What is the date?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. 38 Victoria, the statute which created the court :

> The judgment of the Supreme Court shall, in all cases, be final and conclusive, and no appeal shall be brought from any judgment or order of the Supreme Court to any Court of Appeal established by the Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland, by which appeals or petitions to Her Majesty in Council may be ordered to be heard, saving any right which Her Majesty may be graciously pleased to exercise by virtue of her Royal Prerogative.

That is the original statute, which was introduced by Mr. Fournier, and of course it is in contradiction to the hon. gentleman's words.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I will get the debate on the question.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. As to the appointment of judges, if my hon. friend will read the British North America Act again, he will see that the appointment of judges is determined by that Act, and we have no right to interfere with it.

Mr. SPROULE. If the Minister of Justice could give us a statement of the percentage of cases which have reached the Supreme Court and have been appealed to the Privy Council, I think it would be useful. Then, there is the question whether we could not prevent or limit the appeals in some way; but if that could not be done, I think the question might naturally be considered whether it would not be wise to do away with the court. The aim of the court in the first instance was to save appeals to the Privy Council; but it has not resulted in that after a fair trial, and therefore I think it might properly be a matter for consideration whether it is worth while to retain the court. If the number of appeals could be reduced by confining them to a certain class of commercial cases, the court might be made more useful.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. It is in our power to limit the appeals in the way my hon. friend has suggested. That is matter to be considered.

The Exchequer Court of Canada, $11,135.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. When this court was established, we thought we were only going to appoint a judge; but we have a whole staff of clerks and messengers, a registrar and so on. If I remember rightly, the Exchequer Court was appointed for the purpose of inquiring particularly into claims against the Crown arising out of contracts or out of cases in which fiats were issued by the Governor in Council. I understand that in some recent cases, in which disputes have arisen relating to contracts in some of the departments, notably the Department of Railways and Canals, instead of going to the Exchequer Court, they have been going to arbitration, the minister choosing one arbitrator, the contractor another, and the two arbitrators choosing a third. I do not know how they got around the statute.

Mr. BELCOURT. The contract provides for it. It makes the chief engineer the sole arbitrator.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Not since the appointment of this court.

Mr. BELCOURT. Under the contract.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon. There is no provision for arbitration. It is necessary, before a payment is made to a contractor, that a certificate should be granted by the chief engineer, who is made the sole judge as to whether the contract is carried out or not.

Mr. BELCOURT. All disputes under the contract.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The appointment of the Exchequer Court judge was for this reason, that a contractor might have an equitable claim and the chief engineer might refuse to grant him what was evident justice in the case. Then they might apply to the Exchequer Court and have a trial of the case. If I remember rightly, the Exchequer Court was created for the trial of these cases in order to relieve the department of any charge of being smirched or of making arrangements by which contractors might get an unfair advantage of the government. The hon. member for Ottawa (Mr. Belcourt) says now: Oh, the party has no right to go to the Exchequer Court at all.

Mr. BELCOURT. I did not say that.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. The hon. gentleman said that under the clause of the contract, which provides that the sole arbitrator shall be the chief engineer of Railways and Canals, the party could not go to the Exchequer Court.

Mr. BELCOURT. Will the hon. gentleman allow me to repeat what I said? I pointed out that one of the last clauses in all the contracts between the department and the contractors provides that the chief engineer shall be the sole arbitrator of all matters in dispute between them arising under the contract. Under that clause the arbitrators are asked to report to the chief engineer, and the chief engineer finally gives his certificate.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I understand the hon. member for Ottawa now, and the interpretation he puts on the clause is a most extraordinary one. For the purpose of protecting the department, the chief engineer is made the judge of the efficiency of the work and is appointed sole arbitrator. The hon. member for Ottawa appears to contend that because the chief engineer is the sole arbitrator, he may consult three other arbitrators, he may make them the custodians of his conscience, and allow them to decide what the contractor is entitled to, and then certify to their report as required by the contract. I say that the clause in the contract has no such meaning. It was inserted to relieve the ministers of the different departments of the judicial jurisdiction, but it certainly was never intended that the chief engineer could relieve his conscience by referring the decision of disputes to other arbitrators. Nor was it intended to take such matters out of the jurisdiction of the Exchequer Court. I would ask the Minister of Justice whether, in the case of claims of contractors against the Department of Railways or the Department of Public Works, it is the intention of the government to go outside the Exchequer Court and refer them to arbitrators, and then have the arbitrament of these arbitrators certified to by the engineer of the department?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. By the Exchequer Court Act, as I recollect it, claims against the Crown are referred to that court for consideration. These claims are referred to it, on a petition of right, which is granted on the fiat of the Governor General. In addition to that, the minister himself may refer a matter to the Exchequer Court directly without any petition of right at all. References of that sort are frequently made. These are the proceedings which may be taken under the Exchequer Court Act, and such proceedings would fall to some extent under the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice. But what my hon. friend brings to the notice of the House is the reference to arbitrators of differences between the crown and a contractor. With these the Department of Justice has nothing to do at all, and in order to answer my hon. friend it would be necessary to understand the terms of the contract between the parties. If the contract provides that disputes or difficulties may be referred to arbitration, the minister is within his right in granting the reference. But if there is no such provision, then the minister who made the reference must answer for his conduct. I know nothing about it.

My hon. friend from Lanark (Mr. Haggart) has drawn attention to the number of officials connected with the Exchequer Court. Let me tell him that since the change of government in 1896—since my connection with the Department of Justice—we have not added one official to that court. We have taken the court as we found it and have maintained it in the condition in which it was previous to 1896.

To pay L. A. Audette portion of present salary over and above his statutory salary, representing annual increases from Jan. 1, 1891, to July 1, 1896, amounting to $275, together with $50 for 1901-2, and $50 for 1902-3, making a total of $375.

Mr. SPROULE. What was the salary of Mr. Audette before ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The statutory salary of the registrar is $2,000, but it appears that when he entered upon his duties it was stipulated that his salary should increase, by annual increments of $50 each, to $2,400. This $325 is to provide for this annual increase which has now run his salary up to $2,325. He will have $75 more to get in order to reach the amount at which his salary was fixed by the original agreement. This is an unsatisfactory way of dealing with this gentleman's salary. If it is intended to fix it at $2,400, we should not have to come down each year, as has been the practice hitherto, and ask for this annual increase. My intention is to introduce an Act amending the Exchequer Court Act and fixing Mr. Audette's salary at a certain sum so as to get rid of this annual vote.

Mr. PRINGLE. I find that there is a provision in the Act fixing the salary of the registrar at $2,600. I do not know whether it has been repealed or not. Or it may be a provision with regard to the Supreme Court. I may be in error as to that.

Mr. BELCOURT. That refers to the Supreme Court.

Mr. PRINGLE. It follows almost immediately after the Exchequer Court, and provides that the Exchequer Court shall have and possess concurrent jurisdiction. It then goes on to the distribution of business.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. That is the Supreme Court.

Mr. PRINGLE. I was not quite sure, having just taken the Act in my hand.

Mr. SPROULE. There seems to be a very unusual principle in this. If I understand it is practically going back ten years to vote an increase in a man's salary.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No, it had been added on each year. The only addition this year is $50. The additions started in 1891, but we are not responsible for them before we took office.

Mr. SPROULE. But we are voting $375.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. We vote the amount each year, with an increase of $50.

Mr. HENDERSON. This item does not seem very clear. Mention here is made of increases from 1891 to 1896, and then for this year and next year. Did he get increases for 1897, 1898 and 1899 ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I think for one or two years after 1896 he did not get the increases; but the increase has gone on as I have explained, and each year the amount of the previous year is voted with the additional amount of $50. The original salary is $2,000. My hon. friend will see, by reference to the Exchequer Court Act, sec. 9, the salary is fixed at $2,000.

Mr. SPROULE. And this vote for editor and publisher is for the same party as the vote for registrar ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. As editor of the Exchequer Court work—yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Altogether what does the salary amount to ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. $2,650.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I wish to settle that question of the introduction of the Bill by Hon. Mr. Fournier. I thought I was right in my recollection of it. The Bill that was passed was introduced by the Hon. Mr. Fournier. That gentleman stated at the time that the clause in reference to the appeal and the exercise of the prerogative was left off. He said that, had he consulted his own feelings, he would have inserted a clause which would prevent an appeal to the Privy Council—evidently he thought he had the right to do so. My memory extends further then the thought. I can remember when Sir John Macdonald accused the friends of hon. gentlemen opposite of stealing his Bill. He said that his Bill which had been introduced in this House had been pigeon-holed and afterwards was stolen. The measure was introduced four times before the Bill proposed by Mr. Fournier was passed. The first intention evidently was as was the whole tenor of the discussion led by Mr. Blake, who introduced the Bill, to cut out the appeal from the Supreme Court to the Imperial authorities.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. As far as possible.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Sir John Macdonald pointed out the difficulty, that this was an attempt to limit the prerogative. I remember the dispute perfectly well. And, when this clause appeared in this Bill, I remember, Sir John Macdonald said that a little bird had whispered to him that the Bill would be disallowed. When Mr. Fournier introduced his Bill, he still stuck to his idea that, while, in some cases they might act wisely in an appeal to the Privy Council yet, in the majority of cases, the reasons were against that appeal, and he thought there ought to be inserted in the Bill a clause to prevent the appeal to Great Britain. Finally the Bill passed, as stated by the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick). But I was not wrong in saying that the intention of the Bill as introduced was to cut out the appeal to Great Britain.

Mr. PRINGLE. In referring, as I did a moment ago, to the salary of the registrar being fixed at $2,600. I was quite right in this respect—that clause 70, of the Act states that the registrar of the Supreme Court appointed under the Act should also be the registrar of the Exchequer Court. But I understand that that has been amended by the Exchequer Court Act.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. There are two officials now.

Administration of Justice—Yukon Territory. Additional salary of judge, $1,000.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I will ask that the items under this head be allowed to stand. It is probable that there will be a complete re-organization of the salaries of the officials of the Yukon. Pending final conclusion as to that, I would like to have it stand.

Item allowed to stand.

Dominion Police, $30,000.

Mr. PRINGLE. Do I understand from the Minister of Justice that there is likely to be a re-organization with regard to the county courts of the different provinces ?

Mr. MACLEAN. The minister was speaking of the Yukon officials.

Mr. PRINGLE. But we are passing over the estimates for county court judges.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. We are not discussing these. We have just passed the Supreme Court, and these that we have come to are statutory items.

Legislation—House of Commons—salaries, $70,550.

Mr. SPROULE. Would the minister give us some information about the new appointment he has made of Black Rod, whether he has changed the salary, and what necessity there was for continuing the office? There were great objections made years ago from the opposition to that office. They thought it was one of the useless offices. But it appears their views have changed in that respect as in many others. Will the right hon. gentleman explain?

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not know whether the views of my hon. friend have changed. If they are the same as he formerly held he must be in favour of continuing the office of Black Rod. Whether we have acted rightly or wrongly, we have continued the office. The new appointment, Mr. St. John, I think is a very acceptable officer, at all events his appointment seems to have been received with great favour. The former incumbent received a salary of $1,300, and was entitled in addition to his lodging, fuel, light, and the services of messengers. All these perquisites have been abolished. Mr. St. John has no room except one for his office, and he receives a salary of $1,800.

Mr. SPROULE. I feel much as Mr. Blake did when he was asking for a judgment of the Privy Council. He said he was not so much concerned to know what their judgment was as to know the reason for their judgment. I was not so much concerned to know that the right hon. Premier had followed the course of his predecessors, as I was to know why he had changed his mind, and why he had reached the conclusion that what he thought was wrong at one time is right now.

The PRIME MINISTER. I suppose the reason is advancing years. I am afraid I am getting more Conservative.

Mr. SPROULE. I see there is a reduction of $300; how did you accomplish that?

Mr. SPEAKER. Since the estimates have been prepared one of the chief clerks has applied for superannuation, which has been granted, and which will take place in a short time. It is therefore proposed to reduce the item by $1,200, and I move that this item of $70,550 be reduced to $69,350. On page 32 of the estimates the committee will find a detailed statement of the salary of each clerk.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. What is the necessity for appointing a new first-class clerk, or making provision for one who is going to be appointed?

Mr. SPEAKER. Nobody has yet been appointed, because the gentleman who has been superannuated is still on the staff, but it is intended to replace him by another clerk. The work which he is now doing is absolutely necessary, namely, the translation of French documents into English.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I suppose this new appointment is not for the purpose of making special provision for some one, or for the purpose of rewarding some clerk.

Mr. SPEAKER. As I have just explained, the clerk who is to be superannuated is doing work that is absolutely necessary, consequently we need to appoint another clerk to replace him. There is no political patronage exercised in the House of Commons.

Item as amended, agreed to.

Expenses of committees, sessional and extra clerks, etc., $25,650.

Mr. SPROULE. Could the minister tell us how many sessional messengers there are now ?

Mr. SPEAKER. I think there are 48. But they do not come under this item, they will come under the item of expenses in connection with sergeant-at-arms. I may say there has been a reduction in the number of messengers since I have been Speaker.

Mr. HENDERSON. Will Mr. Speaker give us some idea of what the duties of those sessional clerks are, and what privileges members have in asking them for services ?

Mr. SPEAKER. The sessional clerks are appointed to do the work of the House generally, not for the service of members.

Mr. HENDERSON. I do not see how forty-eight men can be kept employed in doing work for the House. I have no idea what the character of that work is. Forty-eight men ought to do a very large amount of work. I was under the impression and I think other members have been, that these sessional clerks were available at times if we wanted to obtain a copy of some document that was brought down for the House.

Mr. SPEAKER. That is right, the hon. gentleman may call upon the sessional clerks for copying all documents of the House. But I thought the hon. gentleman asked me whether they could do the private work of members.

Mr. HENDERSON. I did not intend that at all.

Mr. SPEAKER. The work that is to be done by the clerks is the general copying of documents and if hon. members want to have documents, for instance, returns, copied, they may use the sessional writers for that.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART.

Mr. SPROULE. If I am correct in my information the number is the same now as it has been for several years past.

Mr. SPEAKER. Yes, there is no change in the number. There are twenty-eight.

Mr. SPROULE. What I wanted to know was whether there had been a decrease or an increase. I often heard, especially from Mr. McMullen, who has been translated to the other House, and from the hon. Postmaster General in former years, reference to the fact that the sessional clerks were so numerous that they were stumbling over each other. If the same number is employed still, and I do not think there is much more work to do, I am afraid that argument, like many others that were addressed to the House and the country in the past, was not of much value.

Mr. SPEAKER. The number of sessional clerks has not been increased since I have filled the office of Speaker. I am informed that it has been increased since 1896. I may add, concerning the sessional writers, that the persons who are in the post office are sessional clerks.

Mr. HENDERSON. Could the hon. the Speaker give us an idea of the number of sessional clerks, messengers and pages employed at the present time ?

Mr. SPEAKER. Yes, the sessional clerks are twenty-eight in number.

Mr. HENDERSON. I thought forty-eight.

Mr. SPEAKER. No, those are the messengers. There are seventeen pages, six servants and eighteen charwomen.

Mr. WILSON. How many messengers ?

Mr. SPEAKER. Forty-eight.

Mr. HENDERSON. I merely adverted to this because I had the curiosity a short time ago to look up the number employed in the legislature in Ontario and I found there were 154 in 1898, and I wondered whether they were more extravagant than we are here.

Salaries and officers of the library, $17,130.

Mr. SPROULE. There is an increase of $320. Have you any more appointments, or is this a statutory increase ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is one proposed change in the library and I am not sure that we have carried out here what we intended. There is no change except that one of the officers, Mr. Todd, is to be given the rank of a chief clerk instead of a first-class clerk.

Mr. SPROULE. That would give him much more salary ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That would give him no increase of salary, but it would give him rank with the right to advance in future years.

Books for the general library, including binding, etc., $12,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Who selects these books?

The PRIME MINISTER. The librarians, Messrs. Griffin and Descelles.

Printing, binding and distributing the laws, $7,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What is being done with the revision and consolidation of the statutes that we voted some money for last year ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Nothing has yet been done.

Mr. SPROULE. Has there been any appointment made for the work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Mr. SPROULE. I noticed that one Mr. Cameron had been appointed some time ago.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No appointment has been made, but the matter will be considered in a very short time.

Legislation—general printing, printing paper and binding, $110,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I see there is a reduction in this of $15,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will have to ask the hon. gentleman to let that stand as I have not the information.

Contingent expenses in connection with voters' list, $8,000.

Mr. SPROULE. This is in connection with the voters' lists from year to year.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. I see you have an increase of $2,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, I will get the information if the hon. gentleman will let the item stand. I have no information. If there is no objection this can be passed.

The PRIME MINISTER. We are now at the end of this branch of the estimates, and as we have done a good day's work we might perhaps adjourn. We will consult the wishes of hon. gentlemen opposite.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Adjourn.

The PRIME MINISTER. Very well.

Some resolutions reported.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Annual Report of the Department of Agriculture.—Hon. Sydney Fisher.

On motion of the Prime Minister, House adjourned at 6 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, February 24, 1902.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

DOMINION ELECTIONS ACT AMENDMENT, 1900.

Mr. W. B. NORTHRUP (East Hastings) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 5), to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900. He said: The election law was consolidated and amended by the Dominion Elections Act, passed in 1900. In that Act, there are stringent provisions against bribery of electors and there is one provision against the bribery of a candidate. Section 108, clause (i) provides :—

Every person who, to induce a person to allow himself to be nominated as a candidate or to refrain from becoming a candidate, or to withdraw if he has become a candidate, gives or procures any office, place or employment, or agrees to give or procure, or offers or promises to procure, or endeavours to procure any office, place or employment for such person or any other person, is guilty of an indictable offence under the Act.

There is no provision in the Act as it stands to prevent any person offering money to induce a person to become a candidate or to withdraw after being nominated as a candidate; and the Bill I have drawn is merely for the purpose of adding to this clause another subsection so that the same penalty shall attend the offering of money to bribe a candidate as is now provided in the case of offering an office to a candidate.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

DRAINAGE ACROSS RAILWAYS.

Mr. JABEL ROBINSON (West Elgin) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 6) to amend the Railway Act with respect to drainage. He said: It is not necessary to make any remarks in connection with this Bill. It is similar to the Bill introduced last year, which was passed by a sub-committee, but not acted upon by the House.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

BATTLE OF THE WINDMILL—PENSIONS.

Mr. REID (Grenville)—by Mr. Sproule—asked :

Have any pensions been paid to persons who took part in the battle of the windmill, near Prescott? If so, for what reason? If any persons were paid, are any of these who received such pensions still living, and are they still receiving same?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I am informed by the Deputy Minister of Militia that it will be impossible to answer this question verbally. The hon. gentleman had better move for the papers.

STAFF COURSE AT KINGSTON.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria)—by Mr. Sproule—asked :

What officers are now taking the staff course at Kingston?
What are their occupations in private life?
Who among them are in the permanent force?
Who in government service?
What are the text books used in the course?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) :

1 and 2. Major R. Costigan, merchant ; Major E. A. C. Hosmer, farmer ; Major J. A. McDougall, farmer ; Major F. X. A. Carriere, insurance inspector ; Major W. H. Floyd, boots, shoes and clothing ; Major L. J. O. Ducharme, civil service ; Capt. T. W. Lawlor, lumber surveyor.

3. None.

4. Major L. J. O. Ducharme. Lt. Col. Hodgins, R. O., (joins 15th March).

5. Hereto attached is the syllabus showing the text books.

6. No pay is allowed. A per diem allowance of $2.50 is paid to each officer in lieu of subsistence.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria)—by Mr. Sproule—asked :

How are the officers for the staff course at Kingston selected?
What rates of pay were named in the circulars calling for officers?
How were the officers attending selected?
When were these each selected?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) :

1. Officers for the staff course were selected from those nominated by the D.O.C.'s, except Lt. Col. Hodgins, R.O., who is permitted to attend to complete the staff course interrupted in 1900.

2. The instructions to D.O.C.'s were sent by telegram and the rates of pay were referred to in these words : 'Allowances same as 1900.'

3. By the general officer commanding.

4. 30th January.

REPORTS TO IMPERIAL AUTHORITIES BY G. O. C. OR SUBORDINATES.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria)—by Mr. Sproule—asked :

1. Has the Canadian government a copy of the report or memorandum furnished to the Imperial authorities in 1885 by each, General Middleton and Lord Melgund, on the conduct and qualities of the Canadian volunteers serving in the North-west rebellion of 1885?

2. Is it permitted by the Canadian government to the General Officer Commanding or any subordinate officer, to make reports to the Imperial authorities without the consent of the government of Canada, or the minister of the department concerned ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) :

1. There is no copy of any such report in this department nor is there any record of any such having been rendered.

2. There is no authority for such procedure nor any orders relative thereto.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE CADET CORPS.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

1. Has the government received any petition or petitions from collegiate institute cadet corps, asking for facilities in rifle shooting and for swords for use by officers?

2. Has the government in store any swords suitable for use by officers of cadet corps, and if so, is it the intention to issue the same for this purpose?

3. Does the government intend to place collegiate institutes on the same footing in regard to rifle shooting as it has placed Upper Canada College, that is to say, by issuing Morris tube outfits and granting free ammunition?

4. Has the government received a petition from the Toronto Collegiate Institute Board, asking for Lee-Metford rifles, and for encouragement to cadets to practice at the Long Branch ranges ? If so, what does the government intend to do in the matter ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) :

1. Yes.

2. No.

3. Morris tubes are no longer required. Free ammunition is issued to rifle associations only. None has ever been issued to educational establishments. They are only organized for drill.

4. Yes. By the application received it appears that the corps consist each of fifty young gentlemen between the age of fifteen and twenty years, and consequently all above sixteen years of age can form themselves into a rifle club and thus obtain the advantages they desire under provisions of G. O. 150 of 1901, paragraph 6.

As regards lads under sixteen years, the major general does not consider that they should be entrusted with ammunition and permitted to perform range practices.

WELSH IMMIGRATION FROM PATAGONIA.

Mr. WILSON asked :

Has the Dominion government appointed a commissioner to proceed to Patagonia to negotiate with the 4,000 Welshman now residing there, with a view to their settling in Canada?

If so, has the commissioner reported, and will the government lay his report on the Table of the House?

What was the cost of these negotiations, and is it the intention of the government to give the Welsh colony in Patagonia any assistance to induce them to settle in Canada?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Hon. Clifford Sifton). The government appointed a delegation to proceed to Patagonia with a view to ascertaining and reporting to what extent the members of the Welsh colony there were likely to remove to Canada.

2. The delegation has not yet reported to the head office. The deputy minister, being now in England, has, no doubt, conferred verbally with the delegation.

3. The accounts are not yet in a position to enable an answer to be made to this question. The matter of further assistance is now under consideration.

RETIREMENT OF MAJOR TASSIE.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria)—by Mr. Sproule—asked :

What are the facts connected with the retirement of Major Tassie from the Royal Grenadiers of Toronto?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The facts are as follows) :

1. On the 6th of February, 1899, Major Tassie addressed a letter to his commanding officer in which he stated that, 'if at the expiration of two years' from the date of his promotion to the rank of major, the officer commanding the Royal Grenadiers considered it expedient, the district officer commanding was authorized to forward 'this my resignation' of any position he might hold in the battalion, and that for so doing that letter shall be sufficient authority. On this condition, Lieut.-Col. Bruce recommended Captain Tassie for promotion. He was promoted to be major.

2. Major Tassie submitted the plea that he made it under the assurance of a brother officer that it would be inoperative.

3. The major general commanding, in his reports to the Minister of Militia and Defence, maintained that, in his opinion, Major Tassie's resignation is absolutely valid and binding. The recommendation of the major general commanding was accepted and Major Tassie was retired on the 31st of August, 1901.

YUKON—CONCESSION TO THE TREDGOLD SYNDICATE.

Mr. BELL (Pictou) asked :

1. What is the date of the concession to A. & C. Tredgold, or to the Hydraulic Mining Syndicate, associated with A. & C. Tredgold, and proposing to operate in the Yukon?

2. What are the terms of such concession?

3. What area of the Klondike is by this concession given over to such syndicate, and closed to the general public?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Hon. Clifford Sifton) :

1. Order in Council June 12th, 1901; subsequently amended by Order in Council 29th June, 1901, and by Order in Council 7th December, 1901.

2. The terms are set forth in the Orders in Council above cited, copies of which will be laid on the Table.

3. Claims on Bonanza, Bear and Hunker Creeks and their tributaries, which have been staked out by miners and thereafter abandoned and allowed to lapse.

EMPLOYMENT OF JAPANESE IN YUKON TERRITORY.

Mr. PUTTEE asked :

1. Were Japanese employed as special officers by mounted police officers in the Yukon Territory in December last ?

2. If so what was the emergency necessitating such action ?

3. Have instructions been issued forbidding such appointments in future ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The government have no information that Japanese were employed as special officers by mounted police officers in December last, or at any time; and the government does not credit the rumour to that effect.

BOUNDARY LINE THROUGH DETROIT RIVER.

Mr. COWAN—by Mr. Parmelee—asked :

1. Has the boundary line between the United States and Canada, through the Detroit River, been determined ?

(a.) If yes, when and by what convention ?

(b.) Was the line shown by maps ?

(c.) Has any work been done on the Canadian side of the line in the Detroit River by the American government ?

(d.) If any work has been done by the American government, how much, and at what cost ?

(e.) Has consent been asked by the American government to do work in Canadian territory ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Hon. Clifford Sifton) :

(a.) Yes, by commissioners appointed under the sixth article of the Treaty of Ghent.

(b.) The line was shown on the maps filed by the commissioners with their report.

(c.) Yes.

(d.) The government has no information as to the amount and cost of the work done in Canadian waters by the United States government.

(e.) Yes ; permission was asked by the United States government to proceed with projected improvements in the Detroit River without regard to the exact location of the international boundary line, and permission was granted.

WELSH IMMIGRATION FROM PATAGONIA.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been called to the following cablegram to the Toronto 'Evening Telegram,' which has been republished in other Canadian papers :—

'Toronto, February 18.-"Evening Telegram's" special cable :—London, February 18.—A deputation of Welshmen to-day waited on Right Hon. Jos. Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, to ask that the government provide a transport for the purpose of removing to Canada a number of their countrymen and their families, who had migrated to Patagonia, and who desired a change of settlement. Mr. Chamberlain explained that when the reception of the deputation was first mentioned he understood that the Welsh in Patagonia wished to emigrate to South Africa. Had such been the case, arrangements could easily have been made, but he was powerless to render them assistance to emigrate to Canada. He suggested that the deputation should call on Lord Salisbury, or that a subscription be started in the United Kingdom to raise the necessary five or ten thousand pounds ; or that the Canadian government might increase their liberal offer of a pound per head. The deputation, which was greatly disappointed at the Colonial Secretary's reply, was headed by a representative Welshman, resident in London. The Canadian High Commissioner's office was not represented. It is reported in some quarters that the Elder-Dempster Company will offer a steamship to transport the Welsh settlers to Canada.'

2. Has the government made any inquiries, or, if not, does it intend to make any from the Canadian High Commissioner in London, respecting the foregoing alleged statement of Right Hon. Jos. Chamberlain, as to his inability to assist the families above named to emigrate to Canada, as to his willingness to assist them to emigrate to South Africa ?

3. If the government has made any inquiry from the Canadian High Commissioner, as above, has any answer been received, and, if so, of what nature ?

4. Has the Canadian government made any offer, and, if so, of what nature, and to what extent, to assist the emigrants above, to come to Canada ?

5. Has any steamship company offered to convey the said emigrants free to Canada, and, if so, has the offer been accepted ?

6. What has the government done for the purpose of attracting or bringing the said emigrants to Canada ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Hon. Clifford Sifton) :

1. No ; except through press reports.

2. No.

3. No report has yet been received of this interview.

4. No.

5. No.

6. The government sent two delegates to Patagonia to investigate and report to what extent members of the Welsh colony were likely to move to Canada, to place before this colony the natural advantages offered by Canada as a place of settlement and the regulations existing with regard to free grants of land, and to advise the colony that the government is willing to make a reservation of land on their behalf. The government is now in cable communication with its Welsh agent respecting the desirability of giving further assistance.

THE CANADIAN SOUTH AFRICAN CONSTABULARY.

Mr. MONK—by Mr. Leonard—(Translation) asked :

1. Did the government, or any member thereof, give a public assurance that in the selection of the officers for the Canadian South African Constabulary, which sailed last year, preference would be given (a) to those Canadian officers who have served in South Africa, and to other officers of the Canadian militia ?

2. What persons, officers, or others, applied for commissions in the said constabulary ? What is the military record of each, either in Canada, South Africa, or elsewhere ?

3. (a.) What officers were selected and appointed ? (b.) What is the military record of each ?

4. Who of those selected as officers, had never before been officers ?

5. Were there enough applications from officers of the Canadian militia to officer the constabulary ? If so, why were they passed over, and men without qualification, if there were any such, selected ?

6. How many commissioned officers of the Canadian militia were enlisted in the first and second contingents, in the Royal Canadian Regiment, the Canadian Mounted Infantry, the Royal Canadian Dragoons, and the Canadian Artillery, as (a) non-commissioned officers, and (b) as men ?

7. How many non-commissioned officers and men of the permanent corps were enlisted in the corps named in question ? How many of these were non-commissioned officers in South Africa ? (c.) Why were the commissioned officers enlisted in the corps as privates, not given the non-commissions ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). In answer to my honourable friend, I must inform him that in order to secure the documents relating to this question, it is necessary that he should make a motion.

IMMIGRANTS IN 1892.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

What was the number of immigrants who came to Canada during the year 1892, classified under headings British and Foreign, including the United States ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Hon. Clifford Sifton). The total number of immigrants who came to Canada during 1892, was 27,898, classified as follows : British, 16,357 ; foreign, 6,054 ; total, 22,411. In addition to these there arrived at the port of Montreal, not defined as to nationalities, 5,487. Grand total, 27,898.

ARTICLES PUT ON FREE LIST OR REDUCED IN DUTY SINCE 1897.

Mr. CLARE—by Mr. Henderson—asked :

1. What articles have been put on the free list by Order in Council since the adoption of the Customs tariff of 1897 ?

2. What articles have been reduced in duty by Order in Council since the above date ?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. Wm. Paterson) :

1. The articles transferred to the free list by Order in Council since 29th June, 1897, are as follows :

'Cotton seed oil, when imported by manufacturers of liquid annatto, to be used in their factories exclusively in the manufacture of liquid annatto.'

'Metallic tubes for use in the manufacture of vaccine points, made in Canada.'

'The chemical compounds known as "Safety Bate" and "Tanning Preserver" when imported by tanners for use exclusively in "the tanning of leather in their own tanneries".'

'Cotton yarn, polished or glazed, when imported by manufacturers of shoe laces for the manufacture of such goods in their own factories.'

'Syrup or molasses of cane or beet testing under 35 degrees by the polariscope, for use in the manufacture of compressed food for live stock, when imported by the manufacturers of such food, to be used for such manufacture only in their own factories.'

'Key pins, damper springs, jack springs, rail springs, regulating screws, spoons, bridle wares, damper wires, back check wires, dowel wires, German centre pins, brass pins, rail hooks, brass brackets, plates, damper rod nuts, damper sockets and screws, shell, brass sapstan screws, brass flange plates and screws, hammer wires, fly felt, butt felt, damper felt, hammer rail cloth, back check felt, catch felt, thin damper felt, whip cloth, bushing cloth, hammer felt, back hammer felt, bridle leather and buck-skin, when imported by manufacturers of piano keys, actions, hammers, base dampers and organ keys, to be used exclusively for the manufacture of such articles in their own factories.'

'Botany yarn, single, in numbers 30 and finer, on mule cops, dry spun on what is known as the French or Belgium system, not doubled or twisted in white only, when imported by manufacturers of cashmere socks and stockings, to be used exclusively for the manufacture of such articles in their own factories.'

'Glass caps, shells, containers and capillary tubes, rubber bulbs, boxes and corks, for use in the manufacture of vaccine points; and only when imported by manufacturers of vaccine points.'

'Materials which enter into the construction and form part of cream separators when imported by manufacturers of cream separators to be used in their own factories for the manufacture of cream separators, until otherwise ordered.'

'Silver tubing, when imported by manufacturers of silverware to be used in their own factories in the manufacture of silverware.'

'Hemp Bleaching Compound, when imported by manufacturers of rope, to be used in their own factories for the manufacture of rope, until otherwise ordered.'

'Steel castings in the rough for the manufacture of scissors and hand shears, when imported by manufacturers of scissors and hand shears, to be used in making such articles in their own factories.'

'Steel for the manufacture of cutlery when imported by manufacturers of cutlery to be used in their own factories in the manufacture of such articles.'

'Yarn of jute, flax or hemp, for the manufacture of jute, linen or union towels, to be used in their own factories in the manufacture of such articles.'

2. By Order in Council of February 11th, 1902, the customs duty on news printing paper in sheets and rolls, including all printing paper valued at not more than two and one-quarter (2¼) cents per pound, was reduced from twenty-five per cent ad valorem to fifteen per cent ad valorem.

IMPORTATIONS THROUGH WESTERN ONTARIO PORTS, 1901.

Mr. SPROULE asked :

1. How many bushels of grain, or other seeds, were shipped through the ports of Depot Harbour, Midland, Collingwood, Meaford, Owen Sound and Sarnia, respectively, during the year 1901?
2. How many barrels of flour?
3. How many bags oatmeal?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. Wm. Paterson). As that question is worded, I suppose the hon. gentleman's intention is to get the quantity of grain, not only that has been sent through those ports and exported, but also the trade between one port and another. We are already in communication with those ports to get the information for the hon. gentleman, and if he will allow his question to stand for a few days, I will be able to answer it.

QUEBEC—ISLAND OF ORLEANS MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. CASGRAIN—by Mr. Leonard—asked :

1. How many times each week, in winter and in summer, has the mail been carried from Quebec to the Island of Orleans ?
2. What is the cost of said mail service during the winter and the summer, respectively ?
3. What are the average receipts from such service, considering the different parishes separately?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. William Mulock) :

1. Daily in summer, tri-weekly in winter.
2. The service costs $645 per annum.
3. The receipts from each parish are as follows :—St. Jean, $150.50 ; St. Francois, $8 ; St. Pierre, $76.48 ; St. Laurent, $64 ; St. Famille, $44.62.

MR. ALFRED MARANDA.

Mr. CASGRAIN—by Mr. Leonard—asked :

1. Has Alfred Maranda, of St. Pierre, Ile d'Orleans, been replaced as contractor for the carrying of His Majesty's mails ?
2. If so, by whom, and for what reason ?
3. Were tenders called before the granting of such mail-service contract ?
4. If so, how many tenders were received by the department, and what is the amount of each of such tenders ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. William Mulock). Tenders were called for before entering into the contract with Maranda in 1897. Five tenders were received, namely:—From A. Maranda at $645, from N. Ferland at $700, from O. Vézina at $750, from F. Campeau at $800, from F. Labbé at $900. The contract was awarded to Maranda, the lowest tenderer. This contract expired on the 31st of December, 1900, and was continued on a temporary arrangement during pleasure pending certain changes under consideration. It has since been placed in the hands of Pierre Plante pending the receipt of tenders for a new contract.

ROSEAU INDIAN RESERVE.

Mr. LaRIVIERE asked:

1. Has the government considered the request of the rural municipality of Franklin, Manitoba, signified by a resolution of its council, dated 10th April, 1900, and asking that the Roseau Indian Reserve be opened for settlement; said consideration having been promised by the then Acting Minister of the Interior at the sitting of this House on the 10th May, 1900?

2. When will the few Indians now remaining on that reserve be removed to some more convenient place for themselves, and their land opened for settlement?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Hon. Clifford Sifton). The question of the surrender of the Roseau River Reserve was submitted to the Indians to whom it belongs on the 26th February, 1901, by Mr. Inspector Marlatt, and a report was received from him that the Indians declined to sell any part of the reserve. In view of this decision it is impossible at present to take the action desired by the municipality of Franklin. I may state to the hon. gentleman, that, as he is no doubt aware, the Indian Act requires that before an Indian reserve, or any portion of it, can be sold there must be a surrender of it by the Indians, in order to authorize the government to take action.

DEMAND FOR LABOUR IN MANITOBA.

Mr. WILSON asked:

1. Was there a cablegram sent to the High Commissioner by the Dominion government relating to good crops in Manitoba, and consequently a demand for hired help with good wages?

2. If so, what was the date of said cablegram?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Hon. Clifford Sifton):

1. Yes.

2. July 29th, 1901.

IMPROVEMENT OF ST. ANDREW'S RAPIDS.

Mr. LaRIVIERE asked:

How much has been voted up to the end of the present fiscal year for the contemplated improvements of St. Andrew's Rapids, Manitoba?

How much has been spent so far out of these votes, and what for, in each year?

Is the work done so far meeting the expectation of the Minister of Public Works, as to extent and quality?

Was there any unnecessary delay, and what was the cause of it?

When is it expected the locks will be completed?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. I. Tarte). If the hon. gentleman (Mr. LaRivière) will make a motion for a return the papers will be brought down immediately. The question cannot be properly answered.

RECIPROCITY IN TRADE.

Mr. JOHN CHARLTON (North Norfolk) moved

That this House is of the opinion that Canadian import duties should be arranged upon the principle of reciprocity in trade conditions so far as may be consistent with Canadian interests; that a rebate of not less than 40 per cent of the amount of duties imposed, should be made upon dutiable imports from nations or countries admitting Canadian natural products into their markets free of duty; and that the scale of Canadian duties should be sufficiently high to avoid inflicting injury upon Canadian interests in cases where a rebate of 40 per cent or more shall be made under the conditions aforesaid.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the motion that I am about to submit through you to the House for its consideration affirms what I believe to be a correct principle in regard to the management of our fiscal affairs in this country. The motion first affirms that reciprocity in trade conditions will be proper except in case where such conditions may not be favourable to Canada. The motion next proposes that countries admitting the natural products of Canada into their markets free of duty shall be accorded a rebate or differential duty of 40 per cent or more in the customs duties levied in Canada. The motion next proposes that the scale of duties shall be sufficiently high to avoid injury to Canadian interests in cases where the minimum duty is imposed, as has been done under the present arrangement of a differential duty in favour of Great Britain to the distress and detriment of our woollen interests. The export trade of Canada is largely with the mother country. About 63 per cent of the export trade of Canada is with Great Britain. The import trade of Canada is to a very small extent with the mother country; less than one-quarter of our imports coming from that source. It is, I affirm, a proper course to pursue to have regard to the interests of the mother country which affords us our chief market, in the adjustment and arrangement of our tariff duties.

We have, in the past, been making unsatisfactory progress in this country. An increase of 10½ per cent in the last decade, an increase of less than 12 per cent in the previous decade and an increase of less than 47 per cent during the last three decades is an unsatisfactory rate of increase in population. Canada has a limited increase of population not for the reason that we are incapable of supporting an enormous population, but for some reason Canada has been forging ahead at a rate in the highest degree unsatisfactory to those who desire to see this country become a great nation. We had, in 1871, a population of 3,649,782, allowing an estimate of 50,000 for the population of British Columbia and Manitoba. We had last year, by the last census, 5,338,883. We had an increase in 30 years of 1,689,111 souls, an increase, as I have said, of 10½ per cent in the last decade, and of 47 per cent for the entire period covered by the space of time between 1871 and 1901. Now, the United States, when similarly situated with us, with a growing country, with a small population with great natural resources, with an infinite stretch of virgin land and with practically every inducement to offer to settlers, had, in 1790, a population of 3,929,214 and in 1820 a population of 9,600,781, or an increase of 5,671,569 in 30 years against an increase of 1,689,111 in our own case, or an increase of 141 per cent in 30 years as against an increase of 47 per cent in our own case; yet, during that period of 30 years the United States received but 250,000 immigrants from the old world.

Now, there is something wrong. No doubt we have, living in the United States to-day, 3,000,000 people who are either Canadians by birth or descendants of Canadian ancesters in the first and second generation. We are losing the flower of our population, we have been losing it for the last 30 years, and if by any possible means we can arrest that drain of our population, if by any means we can adopt a policy that will lead to a more rapid expansion of our resources, a more rapid increase of our population, a more rapid increase in the direction of creating in Canada a nation, it is worth our while to study the question and ascertain if there are any possible means by which this result can be reached. We have enormous resources. Without question, in my opinion, Canada can sustain a population of 100,000,000 souls. Some disadvantages and drawbacks, as we deem them, appertaining to our country, are really calculated to make our population a people of virility, of great courage and self assertion. We have the resources of the maritime provinces, the resources of Quebec and of Ontario, the enormous region of the North-west Territories, with an arable area extending over 500,000 square miles, the resources of British Columbia; we have fisheries, and timber and minerals and agricultural resources in great abundance, in unlimited supply; we have all the resources that are necessary to create in Canada a great nation. Now, Sir, our trade with all the countries of the world, except Great Britain, is in an unsatisfactory condition, in my opinion. We had a total trade last year of $191,000,000 with the United States. Our total imports were, from the United States, $119,306,000, and our total exports to the United States were $72,382,000. The balance of trade against us was $46,924,000 and the import percentage of our total trade with the United States was 63 per cent.

United States.

Total imports from	$119,306,000
Total exports to	72,382,000
Total trade	$191,688,000
Balance against Canada	46,924,000

Import percentage of total trade, 63 per cent.

But this statement presents an unduly favourable aspect of the case. While our Trade and Navigation Returns show an export trade to the United States last year of $72,382,000, it is well to take into account that $28,331,000 of that amount was gold and silver coin, nuggets, gold dust, silver concentrates, the product of our mine in the Klondike, and that this $28,331,000 was actually a payment upon our balance of trade with the United States.

Revised.

Total imports, less coin and bullion, $3,335,000	$115,971,000
Total exports, less $28,331,000, coin, bullion, gold nuggets, silver, &c.	44,051,000
Balance against Canada, $71,890,000.	160,022,000

Import percentage of total trade, 72 per cent.

When you eliminate from our exports to the United States the gold and the silver that are included in the returns of exports, you bring the amount down to $44,000,000, which includes the re-exports of articles not the produce of Canada. That leaves the balance of trade against us actually $71,890,000 and it leaves the percentage of imports of our total trade 72 per cent, instead of 63 per cent. So that we imported from the United States $72 of the amount of our total trade, and we exported to that country $28 of the amount of our total trade out of every $100. This is the condition of our trade with the United States, a most unsatisfactory condition; a condition which I shall enlarge upon later on.

Then with regard to Germany: Our total trade with Germany last year was $9,162,000. The balance of trade against us in our trade with Germany last year was $4,879,000. The import percentage with our total trade with Germany last year was 76 per cent.

Germany.

Imports from	$7,021,400
Exports to	2,141,532
Total trade	$9,162,932
Balance against Canada	4,879,021

Import percentage of total trade, 76 per cent.

Our total trade with France last year was $6,979,000. The balance of trade against Canada with that country was $3,806,000. The import percentage of our total trade with France was 77 per cent.

France.

Imports from	$5,398,021
Exports to	1,581,331
Total trade	$6,979,352
Balance against Canada	3,806,690

Import percentage of total trade, 77 per cent.

With Holland, our trade total was $984,000. In that comparatively small trade the balance of trade against us was $610,084 and the import percentage of our total trade with Holland was 81 per cent.

Holland.

Imports from	$797,462
Exports to	187,378
Total trade	$984,840
Balance against Canada	$610,084

Import percentage of total trade, 81 per cent.

With Spain, our total trade was $897,000. The balance of trade against us in this comparatively small transaction was $557,000, and the import percentage of our total trade with Spain was 82 per cent.

Spain.

Imports from	$742,537
Exports to	185,354
Total trade	$897,993
Balance against Canada	557,183

Import percentage of total trade, 82 per cent.

Now, this is the condition of our trade with all these countries; with the United States, with Germany, with France, with Holland, with Spain; and we have a satisfactory trade balance; we have a satisfactory condition of trade relations with one nation only, and that is with Great Britain. Our imports from Great Britain last year were $43,164,000, and our exports to Great Britain were $105,018,000. The balance of trade in our favour in this case was $61,853,000, and the import per cent of our total trade with Great Britain was but 29 per cent; the export percentage being 71.

Great Britain.

Imports from	$ 43,164,297
Exports to	105,018,164
Total trade	$148,182,461
Balance in our favour	61,853,367

Import percentage of total trade, 29 per cent.

Now, we took this $62,000,000, which we got from Great Britain, and we paid tribute to the United States. We paid tribute to the United States, from whom we purchased $3 worth of goods for every $1 which we sold them. We paid tribute to them under the arrangements of their tariff, which have existed for the last 35 years, and which they have arranged with the purpose of buying little and selling all that is possible. The time has come, in my opinion, when this arrangement should be set aside, either by satisfactory and proper concessions from them, or by action upon our part that wall render these attempts nugatory. Great Britain, as I have said, is our chief market. Great Britain will no doubt continue to be our chief market, and as I said at the outset, it is proper that we should give due attention to the cultivating of that market in Great Britain; that market which to-day takes 82 per cent of our total farm products; that market which to-day takes 63 per cent of our exports.

The United States, of course, is a nation contiguous to us. Our boundaries are common from ocean to ocean. Nature has decreed that unless its purposes are thwarted by unfriendly legislation, the relations between these two countries shall be of the most intimate character; and that the trade between these two countries shall be enormous in its proportion. That trade already is enormous; enormous, notwithstanding the obstacles that have been thrown in the way of free intercourse between these two countries. These two countries are one geographically, the very barriers that separate them invite intercommunication. Their railroad lines cross and re-cross and knit them together. The maritime provinces have their natural trade associations with the States on the Atlantic seaboard. Ontario and Quebec can reach the ocean, in winter, at least, more conveniently across American territory than by any other route. Our great North-west is geographically a portion of the Mississippi valley, and its trade will naturally tend to that section. On the Pacific slope, nothing is more natural than that trade relations should exist between British Columbia and the States of Washington, Oregon and California. This contiguity of territory, this intermingling of interests will lead and should lead to enormous trade transactions. But, Sir, these transactions should be and must be upon a different basis from that which exists to-day. Now, this natural tendency to intimate trade relations and rapid increase in the volume of trade between the two countries, if obstacles are not interposed, was strikingly illustrated by the experience of Canada and the United States under the Reciprocity Treaty which existed from 1854 to 1866. That treaty provided for free trade in natural products only. During the first year of that treaty, the exports of Canada to the United States were less than $10,000,000. Twelve years later, in the year 1866, the exports of Canada to the United States (including the usual allowance for inland short returns) was $44,000,000, an increase of 440 per cent in the export trade between Canada and the United States in twelve years under the fostering influence of freedom in the interchanging of natural products. During that same period the Canadas largely increased their import trade with the people of the United States. In 1866, with an export trade of $44,000,000 from the United States, the imports from the United States were $28,000,000, and imports from Great Britain in the same year were $40,000,000, while the exports to England during the same year were, in round numbers, $17,000,000.

Exports.

1866—Great Britain	$ 16,826,000
1890—Great Britain	48,353,000
1901—Great Britain	105,328,000
1866—United States	44,143,000
1890—United States	40,452,000
1891—United States	72,382,000
On deducting coin, bullion, precious metals and goods not produce of Canada	41,626,000

Imports for consumption.

1866—Great Britain	$40,062,000
1890—Great Britain	43,390,000
1901—Great Britain	43,018,000

United States—Imports.

1866	$ 28,572,000
1901	119,306,000

Increase, $90,734,000, or 318 per cent.

Summary Movements, 1866 to 1901.
Great Britain—Imports.

1866	$40,062,000
1901	43,164,000

Increase, $3,102,000, or 7 7-10 per cent.

This gives evidence of the tendency that would be exerted on the trade between these two countries by the removal of restrictions. The year 1866 came and with it came the abrogation of the reciprocity treaty. It was a treaty that was working to the mutual advantage of both countries, and it was abrogated largely no doubt because of the influence of other motives than those appertaining to the loss or gain that might accrue from the operation of it. Unfortunately, we were unwise enough to allow expression to be given in the Canadian Assembly to a feeling of felicitation at the federal defeat at Chancellorville, and although there were as large a proportion perhaps of the population of the North who were copperheads and rebel sympathizers as of the population of Canada, and although the only difference was that in Canada they had a right to express their opinions while in the North they had not, the United States government took umbrage at this display of sympathy with the South; and although we had given evidence of our devotion to the North by sending forty thousand men to fight in the Union armies, and although as large a proportion of our population sympathized with the cause of the Union as of the population of the Northern States, and although we had maintained neutrality and discharged our duties as neutrals wisely and well, yet the single circumstance to which I have alluded probably had a great influence in causing the repeal of the reciprocity treaty of 1854.

We were aware that that treaty was an advantageous one. We were aware that the circumstances under which we exported to the United States so much more extensively than we imported were exceptional circumstances, due to the existence of a war in that country. The importation of American fabrics was rapidly decreasing, and but a few years would have elapsed before the imports and exports between the two countries would have become equalized. Efforts were made on the part of Canada to bring about a modification of the treaty, to do anything within the bounds of reason to make the treaty acceptable to both countries; but all these efforts were spurned. The United States government, in point of fact, refused to consider any applications or arguments with reference to the renewal of that treaty, and entered upon a period of repression, which has been continued for thirty-five years. The United States was then the chief market for our products. The belief in the United States and the belief in Canada was that that market was essential to us. Possibly American statesmen may have thought that putting on the screws and shutting us out from their market would force us into annexation. If this was not the case, pains ought to be taken to disabuse the Canadian mind of that impression. For thirty-five years we have had a war of tariffs, fought chiefly on one side, and the result has been rather disappointing to both the United States and ourselves—agreeably disappointing to ourselves, perhaps not as agreeably disappointing to them. Our exports to Great Britain have increased from 1866 to 1901 as follows:

Great Britain Exports.

1866	$ 16,826,000
1901	105,328,000

Increase, $88,502,000, or 527 per cent.

Our exports to the United States in the same years were as follows:

United States Exports.

1866	$44,143,000
1901	72,382,000

Increase, $28,239,000, or 64 per cent.

But, as I said a moment ago, deducting corn and bullion and the products of the mines of the Yukon and the export of goods not the produce of Canada, our net exports to the United States last year were $41,626,000, or $2,517,000 less than they were in 1866. That condition of trade was brought about by the repressive tariff legislation of the United States.

A summary of these trade movements shows that our imports from Great Britain increased from 1866 to 1901 7·7 per cent, and our imports from the United States increased in the same interval 318 per cent; and this result was brought about, not by the application on the part of Canada of the American principle, which we ought to have applied, but by a liberal low-tariff arrangement which offered no impediment to the importation of their wares into this country, while we were almost absolutely excluded from their markets.

In the same period our exports to Great Britain increased 527 per cent, while our exports to the United States, eliminating the precious metals and the exportation of goods not the produce of Canada, have fallen $2,500,000.

Now, I will proceed to consider some of the reasons that have led to this anomalous and unsatisfactory condition of trade I will look first at our tariff rates. Last year our rate of duty upon the total imports from the United States was 12·5 per cent, and our rate of duty upon dutiable imports from the United States was 24·83 per cent. In the same year our duty upon the total imports from Great Britain was 18·2 per cent, and our duty upon dutiable imports from Great Britain was 24·87 per cent, or 4-100ths higher than our duty on dutiable imports from the United States.

Mr. CLARKE. Notwithstanding the preference.

Mr. CHARLTON. Notwithstanding the preference. Our duty upon the total imports from all countries, the United States included, was 16·6 per cent. and our duty upon dutiable imports from all countries was 27·45 per cent. Here you have the fact that the duties upon United States imports were lower, both upon dutiable imports and upon total imports, than the duties upon imports from Great Britain or upon imports from the whole world; and you can contrast those duties as I now propose to do, with the duties imposed by the United States. While we admitted their total imports at a duty a fraction above 12 per cent, their duty upon our total imports last year amounted to 28 per cent. And while we imposed a duty of less than 25 per cent upon dutiable imports, their duties were 50 per cent last year, or almost exactly as high again as in our own.

And when we come to the percentage of imports, 63 per cent of our total imports came from the United States, 22½ per cent from Great Britain, and 14½ per cent from the rest of the world. It is scarcely necessary for me to say that these duties are unequal, that they are not in our interest, and that the duties we impose should bear some proportion to the duties which the United States imposes upon us. This goes without saying. The American policy has been applied not only to us, but to all the world. The object of the United States has been to sell all that it possibly could of the products of its soil, its mills, and its workshops, and to buy just as little as it could from other countries, and thus have as large a balance of trade in its own favour as possible. The result has been that the balance of trade in favour of the United States last year amounts to $600,000,000 against the whole world, and $71,000,000 against Canada. That is a good thing for the United States. Let them cling to their policy as long as the rest of the world will permit them to do so, but it is not a good thing for us.

I need hardly claim that I am not open to the charge of being biased by racial animosity, or national animosity, or prejudice of any character against the United States. The time has been when I have been sometimes misunderstood, and oftener I imagine misrepresented in relation to the attitude that I have taken on our relations with that country. I have always been in favour of the most friendly relations between all Anglo-Saxon communities. I have realized for many years that any policy which is calculated to draw these commonwealths closer together in the bonds of amity and union is a good policy, and have acted upon that principle, and the Liberal party has acted upon that principle in the past.

It is beyond question that the United States, is a great nation, a mighty nation—perhaps the greatest to-day in the world. I have no intention to belittle their might, and prowess, or to say anything even against their tariff policy, which is no doubt a good thing for them, and one which they should adhere to so long as the rest of the world allows them to do so, but I do not think it is a good thing for us to submit without effort to secure change of existing conditions. But while I recognize that the United States is destined to play a great part in the direction of the world events in the future, while I recognize that it has an immense population, intelligent, energetic and aggressive, while we must admit that the construction of the Isthmian Canal will give it the command of the Pacific and that it is bound to become a great naval and military power, while it is evident that by the possession of the Philippine Islands, it will gain control of the Asiatic trade, and while I acknowledge freely that it is a mighty nation, I still say that as Canadians, we must uphold the interest of our own country and enact such a policy for the development of Canada as the circumstances of the case require. I did believe once that if our friends opposite had shown a proper disposition, and had gone to Washington in a proper spirit, they might have got something advantageous to Canada. I still think it is a pity that they did not make any attempt in this direction under the administration of Grover Cleveland instead of waiting until Mr. Harrison was president. However, I must confess that my expectations are hardly as bright to-day as they were at one time, and while I did believe that we had only to approach them in a proper spirit, when we were governed by an administration known to be friendly to them, in order to get something in return, I must confess that my experience upon the Joint High Commission was not such as to fully justify the entertaining of that belief.

Mr. LARIVIERE. Open confession is good for the soul.

Mr. CHARLTON. This is not a confession, it is simply a statement of the facts.

Mr. McCREARY. That is what confession should be.

Mr. CHARLTON. It is a very easy matter to prove to an American audience that the importance of the trade of Canada to the United States is so great that this country is entitled to better treatment. Canada is the third largest customer in the world of the United States. She is only outranked in that respect by Great Britain and Germany. She is the best customer of the United States for manufactured goods—for the products of the mills, the looms and the factories. The importance of the Canadian trade is illustrated by a comparison of that trade with the trade of the other portions of the American continent. Take Latin America, comprising Mexico, Central America, South America, the West Indies, all but Cuba and Porto Rico, and the total imports of all this vast region, with a population of nearly sixty millions, from the United States in 1900, was $96,140,000, while the imports of Canada in the same year amounted to $116,972,000. Or the five and a half million population of Canada bought $20,832,000 worth, of United States goods more than the sixty million inhabitants of Latin America, the Philippine Islands, although they cost the United States an initial outlay of $20,000,000—being the cost of their purchase from Spain—and a further sum of $300,000,000 in the maintaining of forty ships of war and 100,000 soldiers—the Philippine Islands with a population of nearly 10,000,000, imported from the United States last year only $4,027,000 worth of goods or twenty-seven times less than Canada.

These are facts it is well for the people of Canada to understand and for the people of the United States to understand. They are facts of which the people of the United States were in ignorance, and I have urged for years past that we were making a mistake in not attempting to make the public men of the United States understand the conditions that exist and which should have weight with them in arranging with us their trade relations. I have been doing a little work in that line. I was invited a little less than a year ago to address the Free Trade League of New England in Boston. I took for my subject free trade with Canada, and my speech at Boston was well received. Fifty thousand copies were published by the Boston Chamber of Commerce. A copy was placed in the hands of every member of Congress and of the State Legislatures, and of every board of trade and chamber of commerce in the United States. I next spoke to the Detroit Bankers' Association at Detroit, and the Chamber of Commerce in New York. Then to the Manufacturers National Reciprocity Convention at Washington. Then to the Merchants' Exchange at Buffalo, and at other places.

I have seen the statement made that this was a very injudicious thing to do. I noticed an editorial in the newspaper of my hon. friend from East York (Mr. Maclean) advising my right hon. friend the leader of the government to bring me home, not to allow me to be running up and down among these Yankees giving away the Canadian case. And I have been assured by some highly esteemed friends in this House that they hardly approved of the kind of propaganda that I engaged in in the United States. So far as getting my leader to bring me home is concerned, I hardly think that he would have acceded to such a request had it been made to him. While I did not go at his expressed command, I did consult him as to the best course to take in many matters, and received an expression of his opinion; and I have reason to believe that he thinks the work I did in the United States not an entirely useless work. I happen to know—and I learned this, of course, through having access to means of information that put me in possession of the facts—and I state it not as a matter of egotism, but as a plain matter of fact, that the speeches I made in the United States, the articles of mine that appeared in the 'Forum,' the 'North American Review,' and other periodicals and the other means I have adopted to influence American sentiment, have produced an impression. And I believe that it is within the range of possibilities, and not only that, but that it is highly probable that, by pursuing this course, by bringing the American people to understand the actual condition of affairs between the two countries, a trade arrangement may be secured which will be satisfactory to Canada—and no arrangement will be satisfactory to Canada that does not give us reciprocity of natural products without granting any return or any concession beyond what has already been granted.

Mr. CLARKE. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) mean reciprocity in natural products only ?

Mr. CHARLTON. Certainly. I mean that we are buying $65,000,000 worth of manufactured goods. I mean that we are buying of the United States three times as much as we sell to them. I mean that we are buying of the United States two and a half times as much farm products as we sell to them; and that we are entitled to-day to reciprocity in natural products, absolutely and unrestricted, without granting one solitary iota of a concession, further than that we have granted, without putting an article on the free list that is not already there, and without diminishing our duties by a single fraction. That is what I have been preaching in the United States; that is what I have been assuring the American people was our just due. I have been telling them that they could not give us less than this, and that, if they did not give it, probably we would do something for ourselves.

There have been changes in the condition of affairs since 1866, Mr. Speaker, that it would be well to bear in mind, changes that the ordinary American, who regards this question through impressions he had received from day to day does not understand. For instance, in 1866, the United States was our chief market in agricultural products, while we imported almost all our manufactured goods from Great Britain. Now this condition of things is reversed—actually and absolutely reversed. To-day, England is our chief market for agricultural products, while the United States is our chief supply for manufactures. More than that, in 1866 we bought no agricultural products or food products from the Uuited States, but now, as I say, we now buy of them two and a half times as much as we sell to them. These facts constitute a reversal of the conditions of 1866 that is well to understand and take into account when we deliberate as to the proper course to pursue in the attempts we shall make and the limit to which we shall go in making arrangements.

Now, I wish to say a few words about, perhaps, the most important matter in connection with this question, I refer to the magnitude of the trade in manufactured goods imported from the United States into Canada. I must confess, that when I first commenced to investigate this case, I was amazed at the revelations that were made to me. I suppose, that, as a matter of course, we bought more manufactures from Great Britain than we bought from the United States—never dreamed that the contrary was the fact. But I found that in 1898 our purchase of manufactures, free and dutiable, from the United States, were much greater than our purchases from Great Britain. These are the figures :—

Import of Manufactures into Canada.

From Great Britain—
1898, free	$ 5,181,126
1898, dutiable	21,551,460
Total	$26,732,586
From the United States—
1898, free	$12,271,448
1898, dutiable	31,563,321
Total	$43,834,769

In 1899 our imports of manufactures free and dutiable from Great Britain and the United States respectively were as follows:—

From Great Britain—
1899, free	$ 5,144,804
1899, dutiable	26,501,435
Total	$31,848,239
From the United States—
1899, free	$14,299,330
1899, dutiable	37,247,307
Total	$51,546,637

The figures for the following year afford a still more striking comparison between our imports of manufactured goods from Great Britain and our imports in the same line from the United States. These are the figures :—

From Great Britain—
1900, free	$ 7,610,477
1900, dutiable	30,375,084
Total	$37,985,561
From the United States—
1900, free	$18,021,365
1900, dutiable	44,837,580
Total	$62,858,945

The figures for 1901, I have had in my hands for only a few days. They are as follows :—

From Great Britain—
1901, free	$ 6,906,185
1901, dutiable	30,364,488
Total	$37,270,673
From the United States—
1901, free	$21,941,184
1901, dutiable	43,618,061
Total	$65,559,245

These figures show that our imports of manufactured goods from Great Britain last year were $714,000 less than those of the previous year, while our purchases from the United States were $2,700,000 more than those of the previous year. What does that mean ? There was a preference of 33⅓ per cent in favour of Great Britain, yet we find a considerable falling off in the imports of manufactured goods from that country ; while the United States which enters our market against that preference, made a great increase in the quality of manufactured goods sold to us. The figures show that we purchase from the United States manufactured goods to the extent of $28,289,000 in excess of what we purchase from Great Britain, and to the extent of at least $15,000,000 in excess of what we purchase from all the rest of the world, Great Britain included. There were 381 articles on the list of importations, and, of that number, we purchased from the United States in excess of Great Britain—and very largely in excess in most cases—in the case of 269 articles ; and we purchased from Great Britain in excess of our purchases from the United States in the case of 112 articles. Why, Sir, the United States has command of the market of Canada for manufactures. Now, if we cannot sell to these people of whom we buy manufactured goods to the amount of over $65,000,000 to these people of whom our farmers buy fully $35,000,000 of that $65,000,000 worth ; to these people who allow our farmers on the other hand to squeeze in a paltry $8,000,000 worth of farm produce through their tariff fence, while over $20,000,000 of farm products exclusive of raw cotton comes into our markets from that country. I say that if we cannot secure some arrangement by which we can exchange the products of our own labour for the immense quantity of goods we buy from them, we had better make arrangements to manufacture the goods ourselves. It will cost us something at the start ; but, for my part I am perfectly willing to pay my share of that additional cost.

One more presentation to show how favourable is the position of the United States in this market. I have some figures here that will show the free imports into Canada last year :—

Free Imports, 1901.

		p.c.
From the United States, ex. coin and bullion	$53,549,000	74·66
From Great Britain, ex. coin and bullion	11,118,000	15·50
From all other countries.....	7,063,000	9·84

These figures show that almost seventy-five per cent of our total importation of free goods come from the United States. And what do they give us in return ? Why, they allowed us to send to them the products of our Klondike mines, our gold dust, our nuggets and our rich gold-bearing quartz. They allowed us also to send them free of duty saw-logs, pulp wood and hop poles, and if there is anything else, I have not had time to look it up. We have practically no free list in return for this free list of 53,000,000 odd dollars. And what did we give them on that free list ? Of this $65,000,000 of manufactures I spoke of a moment ago, $21,941,000 are on the free list. Of these free goods there were $3,464,000 of forest products. While they are putting $2 a thousand on our lumber, we are letting theirs come in here free. Of anthracite coal, $7,871,000 worth was free. Of farm products free of duty, consisting of corn, flax seed, wool, hides, hemp, broom corn, tobacco leaf, etc., $14,775,000 were free, or a total of $48,051,000, besides raw cotton, and if you add that to the list, you make it $52,782,000. This is our free list : $22,000,000 of manufactures, and $14,750,000 of farm products from a country that allows us to sell them—I will show how much shortly.

Here are two specimen facts that I want to place before you in connection with this large subject. Last year our importation of corn from the United States free of duty was $6,484,000. Last year our total export of agricultural products of all kinds from Canada to the United States was $2,907,000. It lacks $700,000 of being one-half of what we permitted them to send to us in the shape of free corn.

Now here are some figures in relation to our trade in farm products. Our imports from the United States last year were, of animals and their products, dutiable and free, $7,549,758 ; of agricultural products, dutiable and free, $17,919,000, or a total of $25,469,000 of agricultural products imported from the United States last year ; or if you eliminate raw cotton from the list, which is as much an agricultural product as wool, it still leaves $20,737,000. And in return what did they allow us to send them ? Of agricultural products we sent to the United States last year, the produce of Canada, $2,907,924 ; of animals and their products, $5,331,651, a total of $8,239,581 of the products of the farm which we were permitted to sell to the United States last year. We bought from them almost exactly $25,000,000 of the products of the farm, about $15,000,000 of which was up on the free list.

Now in 1866 our exports of farm products to the United States were $25,000,000, and the trade has fallen to one-third of what it was in 1866. In 1866 our exports of farm products to Great Britain were $3,544,000 ; in 1901 they were $78,527,000. That trade increased 2,115 per cent between 1866 and 1901, an increase of 21 fold in the exportation of farm products from Canada to Great Britain, against a decrease of two-thirds in the trade of the United States in the same article. Last year we sent to Great Britain 82 per cent of our total export of farm products, while we sent to the United States 9 per cent. We sent to Great Britain 82 per cent, and to all the rest of the world, the United States included, 18 per cent. Last year we bought articles of the United States raised on the farm in excess of our sales to that country—I do not want to weary you, but I think it would be profitable to read a list of the articles which we purchased in excess of our sales to the United States.

Corn, oats, rye, wheat, cornmeal, oatmeal, rye and wheat flour, malt, seeds, apples, small fruits, potatoes, vegetables, tobacco leaf, broom corn, hemp, flax seed, horses, hogs, poultry, eggs, butter, lard, bacon, hams, beef salted in barrels, pork in barrels, other meats, grease, hides and skins, wool, and many other articles.

In all these articles, comprising the great bulk of our exportation to the United States, we bought of that country in excess of our sales to them.

Now if the conditions of our trade relations between Canada and the United States are not grotesquely and unfairly unequal, then I confess I am no judge. If these conditions are such as we are called upon to submit to, if we are to go on maintaining trade relations with the United States of the character that have existed for the last thirty-five years, we will certainly show a lack of spirit, and we will also show a lack of comprehension in my opinion of that which our interests require.

I now come, Sir, to the consideration of the question of reciprocity in natural products. I say right here that the very easiest, simplest and most favourable arrangement that we are called upon to make with the United States is to have reciprocal free trade in natural products, without references to any other conditions of tariff or trade. We are not called upon to increase our free list, we are not called upon to reduce our duties; but we have a right to ask, and should be content with nothing less than reciprocal free trade in natural products. I have spoken of the balance of trade, the actual balance of trade of nearly $72,000,000 in favour of the United States, after eliminating from our exports the precious metals that were an actual payment on the balance of trade. I have pointed out that there is a heavy balance of trade between our exports of farm products and our imports of farm products. We buy of the United States, including cotton, three times as much as we sold to them. We buy of them, eliminating cotton from the list, two and a half times as much as we sell to them. Now, if we were to enter upon an arrangement by which there was free passage to and fro for all these natural products, the first thing we would have to overcome would be this balance of trade in favour of the United States in farm products; and if the duty were removed, while there would be a great impetus given to importations into the United States from Canada, there would also be an increased amount of purchases in Canada from the United States. In almost all these articles except Indian corn, we impose duties which are calculated to interfere with the trade and to lessen importation. Now, if these duties were removed, we would export more largely to the United States, and of course we would import more largely from the United States; and I do not believe that the balance of trade, in adjusting balances with reference to the products of the farm, would be a very large sum when we came to let the policy have full scope. For instance here is British Columbia and the Klondike region. Their natural sources of supply for food are Oregon and Washington. Take off the duties and the great bulk of the food that goes into that province and into the Klondike region will come from these two American states. Take off the duties and the maritime provinces will send their coal and lumber to the seaports on the Atlantic coast and will take from these ports nearly the entire amount of food that is consumed by the 900,000 inhabitants, of those provinces. Take off the duties and the mining and lumbering operations of Ontario and Quebec will use largely increased amounts of American corn and meats and other products.

While we would largely increase our exportations to the United States we would also increase our imports not only of farm products, but also of manufactures. The increased trade thus created would be mutually advantageous, and even under this proposed arrangement of free trade in natural products we would round up every year with a balance of $20,000,000 or $30,000,000 against us in our trade with the United States.

There is another question that it is proper to discuss in connection with this matter, a very important question so far as it concerns influence upon American sentiment in relation to this question, and that question is: Would free trade in natural products lower prices in the United States? Well, with regard to the articles for which both countries have a common market, wheat, cheese and all articles of which both countries produce a surplus and sell that surplus in Great Britain, or elsewhere, it could have no influence whatever upon prices in the United States. If all those articles were taken into the United States the merchants of that country would simply act as our factors in the business of exportation and if they went into the consumption of the United States they would merely displace that amount of the products of United States that would go abroad. It would, however, have a good influence in Canada, it would increase competition in our markets and introduce new classes of buyers. But as far as prices in the United States are concerned the placing of natural products on the free list would have no appreciable influence upon the prices of such articles as that country, has a surplus of to export.

Then, let us take into consideration the question as to whether free trade would have any influence in the direction of depressing the prices of articles the United States imported from Canada for consumption into that country. I hold in this relation also that it would not. I hold that the volume of importation in any line would be so insignificant compared with the great volume of production in the United States that the comparatively insignificant quantity that went into that country from Canada would have no influence upon prices. I will illustrate this by a few quotations from the United States census of 1890. I have not the returns for 1900 which would be much more favourable to the view that I am endeavouring to present. In 1890 the production of eggs in the United States amounted to 819,722,000 dozen in volume of a value of about $120,000,000. The largest exportation of eggs from this country, when they were free, was about two and a quarter million dollars worth and last year we sent to the United States $7,185 as against a domestic production of $120,000,000. That little dribblet of eggs could have no influence upon the price of the vast production in the United States. In regard to horses, in 1890, there were in round numbers 15,000,000 horses in the United States. We sent them last year 3,289, or one horse for every 4,550 that they had in the country. Suppose we sent them three times as many horses, the exportation of horses would still be one horse for about every 1,500 in the country. Would that one horse in 1,500 influence the price of horses in the United States? Of cattle last year we exported 46,320 head, while in 1890 there were 51,363,575 head of cattle in the United States. We sent them one steer for every 1,100 they had in the country. In regard to sheep and lambs, there were about 41,000,000 in the United States in 1890. In 1900 we sent them 309,087, or 1 lamb, or sheep, for every 130 in the country. Of potatoes, in 1890, they had 217,546,000 bushels. We sent last year 255,000 bushels, or one bushel of potatoes for every 920 raised in the United States. Of hay they had in the United States in 1890, 66,831,000 tons, and we exported last year 155,000 ton, or we sent them 1 ton to every 430 raised in the United States. In 1890, the United States raised about 79,000,000 bushels of barley, and we sent them last year 85,927, or 1 bushel to every 910. Suppose we increased our export to 7,000,000 bushels, the highest figures of our former importations, the importation of 7,000,000 bushels would have no influence upon the price. Of oats the United States in 1890 raised 809,250,000 bushels and we sent them in 1900 1 bushel for every 42,500 they raised.

Mr. Speaker, when this thing is considered in the light of common sense, when we take the figures of production in the United States and the figures of exportation from Canada, it becomes clearly apparent that the fear that free importation of Canadian products, and particularly of farm products, will have an influence upon American prices is sheer absurdity. Last year we sent to the United States $7,266,000 worth of sawn lumber. This included what came from St. John, the product of the state of Maine logs, and it included what went through in bond for export. It included vast amounts of lumber bought by the Standard Oil Company for boxes on which they received a rebate of 90 per cent. The product of the United States in sawn lumber in 1890 was $446,000,000 worth—last year it was $100,000,000 more—but take 1890 as the basis of calculation, $446,000,000 worth of lumber was produced, while our export to the United States was $7,266,000, or the entire importation of lumber into the United States was 1,000 feet to every 63,000 feet produced in that country.

Let me present this information in tabulated form.

Sale of Farm Products for Consumption.

Eggs in the United States, Census, 1890	819,722,000 doz.
Value	$120,000,000
Largest import from Canada	2,100,000
Last year import from Canada	7,185

	Head.
Horses in the United States, 1890	14,969,467
Exported last year	3,289
1 to 4,550.
	Head.
Cattle in United States, 1890	51,363,575
Exported last year	46,320
1 to 1,100.
	Head.
Sheep and lambs in the United States, 1890	40,876,312
Exported last year	309,087
1 to 130.
	Bush.
Potatoes in the United States, 1890	217,546,000
Exported last year	255,000
1 to 920.
	Tons.
Hay in the United States, 1890	66,831,480
Exported last year	155,000
1 to 430.
	Bush.
Barley in the United States, 1890	78,322,000
Exported last year	85,927
1 to 910.
	Bush.
Oats in the United States, 1890	809,250,000
Exported last year	18,858
1 to 42,500.
Lumber sawn, value produced in 1890.	$446,000,000
Lumber sawn, imported in 1901	7,266,000
1,000 ft. to 63,000 ft.

We had this matter under discussion before the Joint High Commission in Quebec. I presented substantially this argument in relation to lumber, and Mr. Dingley next morning came to me and said: 'Well, Mr. Charlton, I admit the soundness of your argument that importations and exportations amounting to only one and a half per cent of the production of our country can have no material influence upon prices. You have convinced me, but perhaps you would have a little more difficulty in convincing the United States Senate'.

I have no hesitation in saying, and I assert with perfect confidence that the fears of the American lumbermen and agriculturists in regard to the supposed effect of reducing prices in the United States on articles from Canada imported free of duty is a mere bugbear.

I noticed the other day an editorial from one of the Canadian papers copied approvingly by the Philadelphia 'Ledger', an editorial criticising the speech I made in Chicago recently, in which the editor proceeded to set forth that if we had reciprocity of tariffs with the United States it would put us in a bad box, because we would have to impose a duty on cotton and hides and would be obliged to impose a duty on a great many of the things we want for the interest of the people and which we import free. Well, the policy I am advocating does not contemplate any such nonsense. It does not contemplate hampering the operations of the cotton mills by putting a duty on cotton, it does not contemplate hampering the operations of the woollen mills by a duty on wool, it does not contemplate hampering the interests of our tanners by a duty on hides. What I ask for is, that we shall have duties upon such things as it is desirable to produce in Canada. We want to foster our manufactures. They can have all the cotton they want. We want to foster our woollen mills. But I want to see some arrangement made by which this $65,000,000 worth of these American goods for which we pay hard cash which we receive from England on account of the handsome balance of trade we have with that country ; I want to see some arrangement by which the Americans will allow us to pay for these goods in the products of our own labour—or, I want to see that they are manufactured here.

I spoke upon this question before the Merchants Exchange in Buffalo, and one of the leading Republican papers of that city, admitted next morning the force of my arguments ; admitted that the treatment which Canada received from the United States was hardly what the United States would want to receive from Canada. But, the editor said : There is a consideration here that we do not want to loose sight of; we want to avoid adopting a policy that would promote the prosperity of Canada, because we must bear in mind that the day may come when Canada will be hostile to the United States, and then we will regret that we did anything to promote her prosperity. The editor of that paper reminded me of the story of the elder of the Presbyterian congregation, who in the course of his charge to the new minister who was being inducted said : Now my dear brother, may the Lord in his great mercy keep you humble, and we will keep you poor. That seems to be the policy the United States propose to adopt towards Canada. They want the Lord to keep us humble, and they will do what they can to aid the Lord in that purpose and they will take every means that lies in their power to keep us poor. That is the policy that they have pursued for thirty-five years. That is the policy that some Canadians resent. That is the policy which in my opinion, Mr. Speaker, nine-tenths of the citizens of Canada will resent when they come to understand this case thoroughly.

I repeat, Mr. Speaker, that the tariff of the Amercan nation is essentially unjust to us, but I have not the remotest anticipation that the presentation of proof to the American people that their tariff is unfair would have the slightest influence on their policy towards us. These circumstances do not weigh in the United States; they do not have weight here. The policy is that after you have secured the advantage, you should hold it, and that, I think, will be the policy of the United States. I remember discussing this question with John Sherman when he was Secretary of the Treasury for the United States, and I laid before Mr. Sherman the condition of trade between the two countries, and the reason that Canada had to complain of the tariff policy of the United States. I think I made it perfectly apparent to Mr. Sherman that we were not getting, as the saying is, a fair show; but when I got through, Mr. Sherman said : 'Well, Mr. Charlton, I think that our tariff suits us pretty well.' 'Yes,' I said, 'I rather think Mr. Sherman that it does, and I think moreover that the time will come when the Canadian people will discover that your tariff does not suit them, and then you will have either to do something to remove its bad features or we will do something ourselves to counteract them.'

The question is: whether we should not do that now. My proposition, Mr. Speaker, is simply this. I want to give the Americans an inducement to be just; an inducement to the extent of 40 per cent or more, of the duties levied upon their imports into this country. I would make it 50 per cent; I would make it 60 per cent; I would make it 75 per cent; I would make it almost anything to be effectual if we enter upon this business. I know very well the feelings of the American people. If they see a prospect of this being adopted, then they will be prepared to consider the nature of their own policy on its merits, and we will probably be able to do something. If the inducement is not sufficient; if the inducement when it is offered does not bring the concessions we hope and desire, why all right. We have simply threatened to do what we will do, we have simply threatened to do what it will be in our interest to do, and so far as I feel about this thing, I do not know that I care a very great deal which thing is done, but I am very clearly of the opinion that one thing or the other had better be done. I know that my hon. friend to my right (Mr. Edwards) and my hon. friend to my left (Mr. Ross, Victoria) may tell me that I have gone stark mad on the question of protection. Well, this is a matter out of the ordinary line of protection. This, Mr. Speaker, is a question of self-protection. Here, we are alongside of a mighty nation of 80,000,000 people. Our sons and our daughters are drifting to that country; the choice of our population goes there. We have no arrangement in our trade with them that gives us the advantages which we have a right to demand, and if we cannot get fair trade relations with that great nation, trade relations mutually advantageous and just, then I say that it is not a question of protection per se, but that it is a question of self-protection. It is a question whether we will turn the left cheek when we have been smitten on the right cheek, or whether we will assert our own independence, and proceed upon the principle that the best thing possible for us to do is to care for our own interests.

I am not insensible of the benefits of free trade. I am well aware that the greatest blessing the United States enjoys to-day is that uninterrupted free trade that exists between the forty-four states and the seven territories of the American union. I know that this policy has been fraught with nothing but blessings since it was adopted when their constitution was first ratified. I know that very well, and I know that the nearest approach we can make, in our relations with the United States to that same trade condition that exists between the various states of the American union—the better for ourselves. And so far as our condition will permit, I am in favour of the adoption of that American interstate free trade policy. We must have of course a tariff for revenue. We cannot adopt the zollverein, but we can adopt free trade in natural products, and we can allow a trade to grow up between these two countries in all the articles which are mentioned in our imports and exports, which trade will attain enormous proportions and be to our mutual advantage. But we have got to have that matter arranged on a fair basis. We cannot go on as we have been going on. The Americans profess now—many of them—to be prepared to give this country commercial union. Well, the time was—I am perfectly frank in saying it—the time was when I was under the impression that a zollverein between Canada and the United States would promote our interests. In many respects I am prepared to say it would do so now. But, a zollverein is not now practical. A zollverein now would simply involve the sacrificing of Imperial interests that we cannot honourably sacrifice. We have built up a trade with Great Britain; she is our chief customer for our exports; we are a portion of the empire of which she is the head. To adopt commercial union would be to discriminate against England—to discriminate very seriously against England. We would put the United States upon the same footing with regard to our exports. We would adopt the American tariff, or have a common tariff, which would give to the United States the advantage in our markets which would be represented by the amount of duty imposed, whatever that might be; and while it would give us uninterrupted access to the American market, there would be no investment of money in manufacturing operations in this country. We would buy our goods manufactured in the United States, because no man would invest money in manufacturing here under such an arrangement as a commercial union, that would be liable to be terminated and leave his investment worthless. So that is a question which may be ruled out of court—a question to which, after full reflection, we can hardly give a favourable consideration.

There may arise in connection with this matter a complication of an unexpected character. It is possible that Great Britain may conclude to give a preference to the colonies—possible that we may have some arrangement by which duties shall be levied by England and all the colonies on all imports from the outside world; possible that we may get a duty of 10 per cent on wheat. If this policy were adopted, it would turn reciprocity down. I imagine that if the Americans want to improve their trade relations with Canada, and retain a position which is advantageous to themselves, they had better make haste to give this country reciprocity in natural products; for the time may come, and come soon, when this country would not accept or would not listen to such a proposition.

And now, Mr. Speaker, I must apologize to the House for having detained it so long. I wish to recapitulate just a few of the points I have made. One point is that our tariff is one-half lower than the tariff of the United States—that it permits the admission of American goods into this market almost without impediment, while their tariff excludes our products from their market. The next point is that we give to the United States, notwithstanding the lack of liberality and generosity which they show towards us, lower tariff rates than we give to the rest of the world—lower tariff rates than we give to the mother country. The next point is that we buy from the United States three times as much as we sell to them. Last year we bought from them $119,000,000 worth, while we sold to them, after taking out the precious metals, less than $42,000,000. Another point is that we buy from the United States three times as much agricultural products as we sell to them, if we include cotton; two and a half times as much as we sell to them, if we exclude cotton. The next point is that we buy manufactures chiefly from the United States—$15,000,000 worth more than from the rest of the world, $28,000,000 more than from England; and in view of the fact that we are the best customer they possess on the globe for the finished products of their factories, we have abundant reason for complaint. Another point is that while the United States is doing this enormous business with us, while we are their third best customer for total imports and their best customer for manufactured goods, we are not allowed to exchange the products of our labour for the goods we buy, the very first principle of commercial transactions. We are a four-fold better customer of the United States than we were in 1866, while they are not as good a customer of ours as they were at that time. Our business with them has increased with four times the rapidity that their business has increased with us. The United States has nearly obliterated our farmer's market in their country, which is smaller to-day than it was in 1866, when our population was only three-fifths of what it is to-day.

Now, the country tires of these conditions; they are intolerable. Something must be done to change the trade conditions that exist between the United States and Canada. Free trade in natural products would afford a reasonable adjustment; nothing short of this would do it; and this concession of free trade in natural products must be granted by the United States without a solitary concession from Canada further than those we have already made; we cannot afford any more. If we are denied these reasonable concessions, I repeat again, we can resort to self-protection, and that is the policy we must pursue.

Sir, we have illimitable resources. Year by year our conception of the natural wealth this country possesses rises. There is not an intelligent Canadian who does not believe twice as much to-day as he believed five years ago with regard to the potential wealth of Canada. We have in Nova Scotia, as American iron masters were well aware when I was chairman of the Mining Commission of Ontario in 1889—we have in the iron region of Cape Breton conditions which will enable us to produce iron at a lower cost per ton than is possible at any other place in the world, even at Birmingham, Alabama. That business will develop until we shall supply our own wants and export iron and steel in vast quantities, and compete with the United States in the neutral markets of the world. We talk about New Ontario; but we have a New Quebec stretching up to James bay, a great region where there are thirty thousand square miles of virgin country, with admirable soil, with a good climate, and capable of supporting hundreds of thousands of inhabitants. We have New Ontario developing with rapid strides, in agriculture, mining, manufacturing, and lumbering—a region possessing vast wealth. We have Hudson bay, our closed sea, one-third larger than the German ocean, towards which we are stretching out railway lines from Quebec, from Montreal, from Toronto; a great expanse of water, with great piscatorial wealth. We have on the Ungava river, in Labrador and on the eastern shores of Hudson bay, millions and trillions of tons of iron. We have the isothermal line stretching from the American boundary to the shores of the Great Slave lake and inclosing a vast region in every part of which spring opens almost simultaneously, where four hundred million acres of wheat land are awaiting the plough of the husbandman. We have a vast auriferous region extending along the American boundary for three hundred miles to the west of the Rocky mountains, and to the north fourteen hundred miles. We can support a hundred million people from the products of our soil. We have fisheries, minerals, timber resources, and agricultural resources beyond the fondest and wildest dreams we entertained but a few years ago, and, Sir, we putter along, making an advance in population of 11 or 10½ per cent each decade. Shall we go along at the ambling pace we have been pursuing, increasing our population in thirty years from 3,600,000 to five and a quarter millions? Why, it will take us two hundred years at this rate to people the country, which we have awaiting settlement. Something needs to be done; some change of policy is desirable. It is for us to consider what it is. One thing is certain: we do not want to continue the trade conditions that exist between us and the United States. We do not want to pay them tribute annually to the extent of from $50,000,000 to $70,000,000. We want from them some concessions that will enable us to trade with them upon a fair basis. The policy I have to propose is one that will give to any country which admits our natural products free of duty a preference over all countries that do not do so. That will settle the question of the maximum rate with Germany in a summary manner. It will give the United States an inducement to deal with us fairly, and if that inducement does not produce the result desired, we will simply go on and map out a course of our own and strike out our own pathway to empire in the best way we can.

I beg, therefore, to move:

That this House is of the opinion that Canadian import duties should be arranged upon the principle of reciprocity in trade conditions so far as may be consistent with Canadian interests; that a rebate of not less than 40 per cent of the amount of duties imposed, should be made upon dutiable imports from nations or countries admitting Canadian natural products into their markets free of duty; and that the scale of Canadian duties should be sufficiently high to avoid inflicting injury upon Canadian interests in cases where a rebate of 40 per cent or more shall be made under the conditions aforesaid.

Mr. W. C. EDWARDS (Russell). I cannot hope, Mr. Speaker, to command the attention of the House to anything like the extent to which the hon. gentleman, who has just taken his seat, has succeeded in doing, for not only do I lack the well known parliamentary skill of the hon. gentleman in debate, but I labour under the further disadvantage that the line of argument which I propose to take, is not one likely to commend itself to hon. gentlemen on the opposite side of the House, or to appeal to their sympathies as do the sentiments just expressed by the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton). At the outset of his remarks, my hon. friend said that the policy he proposed to commend to the House was one which he considered best in principle. In taking this stand, he nailed his colours to the mast absolutely as a protectionist pure and simple. Had he said that the course he proposed, was one he considered best, under the existing conditions, as a policy, but not as a question of principle, then the position he took would be an entirely different one. He asserts, however, policy, but not as a question of principle, Well, Mr. Speaker, I entirely dissent from the hon. gentleman's proposition. I submit that the course he advocates is neither best as a policy for the Canadian people nor is it best in principle. It is not the policy we ought to adopt, no matter what the Americans may do.

The hon. gentleman pointed out that while our imports from the United States have largely increased, our exports to that country showed a decrease, despite the fact that we are giving a preference of 33⅓ per cent to English goods over American imports. He then went on to show that our tariff in general is higher on the dutiable goods coming from Great Britain than on the same class of goods from the United States. To those who do not consider or understand the situation, that statement may have some force, but to me it has no force at all. In order that it should be properly understood, my hon. friend should have taken the articles imported from the United States and shown what tariff they paid, and then compared the rates of duty with those on goods imported from England. If he will do this he will find that many of the articles which we buy from the United States are those which England does not manufacture at all. But if it be true that Canadians, notwithstanding the more favourable tariff on English goods, wilfully buy their wants from the United States, then the people of Canada are not only disloyal but a pack of fools. Why do Canadians buy more largely from the United States than from England ? Because it is in their interest to do so.

The hon. gentleman then went on to show the very rapid growth of the United States as compared with Canada. No one will deny that the growth and development of the United States has been most wonderful in every respect. And we must also admit that the growth of Canada has not been relatively as great. But there are other causes for this disparity besides the trade question. I am of the opinion that a great many immigrants from European countries, where the governmental system is very autocratic and severe, and no doubt also many people coming from our own British Isles, imagine that in the United States they will find a freer country than Canada. Of course, no Canadian, no one who knows anything of the institutions of this country, will doubt for a moment that we are the freer of the two, but none the less is it undeniable that that is not the opinion of the mass of the people who live in European countries, especially on the continent.

There is another fact which must not be lost sight of, and that is the geographical position of the United States. The United States is a country of great breadth and depth. It has many natural resources which Canada does not possess. Its geographical conditions are certainly more favourable. In Canada we occupy a long strip of country—our transit being from east to west. And until there are more means of outlet for the products of our great North-west, until there is competition for the carriage of these products, that country cannot make its greatest development.

But what are the conditions to-day ? My hon. friend says that Canadians are going to the United States. No, Sir, things have changed in that respect. It is not Canadians who are going to the United States, but Americans who are coming to this country to settle here. There are reasons for that. Canada is, to-day, making the very greatest development it ever made. And I just want to show the hon. gentleman that he has proved the very reverse of the position he takes. Any one who watched his speech closely, cannot come to any other conclusion than that it was one of the most illogical speeches ever made in this House.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. EDWARDS. That is the style of argument we hear from hon. gentlemen opposite, and that is the extent of their understanding of this question. Now, I will make a statement and will challenge satisfactory contradiction. Has our tariff in Canada been raised ? No. The consequence of giving the preference of 33⅓ per cent to Great Britain is to lower the prices of goods in the country. But that is a very small matter indeed. The effect of that reduction of tariff is to lower the prices of all similar goods coming into this country. And my statement is that it is in consequence of the lowering of our duties Canada is now making the greatest development she has ever made.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. EDWARDS. I am quite aware, Mr. Speaker, that when I speak to hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House, I address a very capable audience. But I quite admit also that this is a question that they have never studied. The hon. member for North Norfolk went on to show, about the close of his speech, the glorious advantages of free trade among the many states of the union. If he had been discussing this whole question on the basis of policy and had said that he was going to strike back at the Americans because of something naughty that they had done, I might extend forgiveness to him. But when he says that he is advocating this as a matter of principle, then I desire to ask : If free trade amongst the states of the union has been a great blessing to them on what ground of principle can we possibly say that increasing the tariff as between Canada and the rest of the world will prove a blessing to Canada ? By lowering the tariff 33⅓ per cent on goods coming from Great Britain—the consequence of which is to reduce the protection afforded to the manufacturers of our country—we have been blessed, as shown by the progress we are making. Let the present government go further in that direction and Canada instead of developing as she is now developing, will develop in far greater ratio.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House, who choose to speak, will have an opportunity to speak; but nothing will be made out of any attempt to interrupt me. I am perfectly aware that my views on this question are very divergent from those of hon. gentlemen on the other side.

Mr. MACLEAN. And from those of your neighbour.

Mr. EDWARDS. I am sorry for my neighbour. But I cannot help it. In the discussion of a question of this kind there is a class of people who should not be lost sight of, and they are the men who produce the great wealth of Canada. And who are they ? First and foremost amongst them are the agriculturists of our country. They are the men who should receive first consideration in every question of this kind. It is useless for any gentleman in this House or out of it to pretend that a tariff between Canada and the United States on agricultural products would have any general effect. The fact is that the people of the United States are large exporters of manufactured products, and so are we. The general prices, then, must be governed by the markets of the world, and a tariff would only have a local effect. That is to say, in some certain localities, agricultural products might cost the buyer more, but the seller, the producer, would not get a cent more because of the tariff. The tariff on agricultural products does not benefit the Canadian farmer by a fraction of a cent. Next to the Canadian farmer in importance is the Canadian lumberman. My hon. friend (Mr. Charlton) a few years ago was very anxious that sawlogs should be exported to the United States. I think that now he is glad that they are not so exported. But there is one thing he does desire, and that is that Canadian lumber shall go into the United States free of duty. Though I am a farmer I also do something in sawing wood, and, perhaps, export as much lumber as my hon. friend. But, I will say this—that beneficial as it would be to the Canadian lumberman to have our lumber go into the United States free of duty, I would not cross the line to ask for that concession. And I make this further statement—that if any proposition comes from any hon. member of this House to place a tax on lumber coming into Canada, I will oppose it in any way I can. The taxing of goods imported into the United States is a great detriment and curse to the American people, and because the people of the United States are cursed in that respect, my hon. friend wants the people of Canada to be similarly cursed by a tariff on goods imported into this country. Now, if it is true that the goods coming from the United States are purchased there more cheaply than they can be got anywhere else, who in Canada is hurt by their importation ? Is the Canadian farmer hurt by low duties upon articles that are imported for him ? Not at all. Is the Canadian lumberman hurt by the low duties ? Not at all. Is the Canadian fisherman hurt by low duties, or the Canadian miner ? Not at all. A protective tariff is simply class legislation, legislation for the benefit of the few to the detriment of the many. My hon. friend speaks of our not having made great development in this country so far as population is concerned. My firm belief is that if we had never had the curse of protection our population would be twice what it is to-day. And not only that, but we would manufacture twice what we do to-day. Why, if you want to enable us to manufacture, you must place the people in a position to purchase. Do you place the people in a position to purchase by making it difficult to bring in goods, when the natural products of Canada must be sold in the open markets of the world or in competition with all the rest of the world ? The only effect of such a course is to compel those who are engaged in producing wealth in Canada to pay tribute, not to the public treasury, but to the treasuries of the protected few. There are those who say that, if certain industries in Canada were not carried on to their present extent Canadians could not find employment. What could be more absurd ? In a country such as we have, a country with resources unbounded, is it to be supposed for a moment, that, if a few of our men are diverted from the industries in which they are engaged, they will not be able to find employment within the bounds of the whole Dominion ? There is employment in Canada for ten times the population we have to-day. I have always contended, and I always will contend, that if you would have Canada achieve its greatest prosperity, you must let those who are producing the natural wealth of our country buy in the same way as they sell—in the open market of the world. Until that is done, Canada cannot attain its greatest development.

Mr. A. C. BELL (Pictou). I have great pleasure in seconding the motion made by the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton). I am sure that no more important question has been discussed in the parliament of Canada since those days when discussions of trade and tariff took place during the sessions preceding 1879. I am sure nothing could be of more importance to the people of our country to-day than that this matter which, to a certain extent, perhaps, has been overlooked by the people of Canada, should receive such full and thorough discussion as would make it impossible for speeches so divergent in tone and in intention as we have just listened to, to be delivered on the floor of this House in so short a period of time. I have not a great deal of sympathy with the hon. member for Russell (Mr. Edwards); but believing as I do that he is convinced of the correctness of the views which he holds in reference to free trade, I listened with a good deal of interest, in the course of his speech, for any remarks which would seem to have the effect of weakening the very strong impression made upon my mind by the speech of the hon. member for North Norfolk. Well, I did not recognize anything that to my mind inpaired the force of the argument of the hon. member for Norfolk, to which we listened for a considerable time, without at all, so far as I was concerned, exhausting the great interest that I felt in every word that he uttered. We did hear from our friend from Russell, if not stated with the same clearness and fullness, at least the echoes of the old arguments which were adduced during the debates of almost a generation ago. We did hear in the latter part of his speech what he thinks is the gist of the argument that can be adduced against the speech made by the member for North Norfolk, and that is the contention that a protective system involves a certain amount of loss to the consumers of the country, a certain amount of sacrifice upon their part, and that therefore it is a policy which is not in the general interest.

Those of us who have a clear recollection of the old discussions that took place during the eighteen years of Conservative regime since 1879, have often heard the charge advanced with great force that the imposition of protective duties in any country has the effect of injuring the consumers for the benefit of a protected class, and it is strange to my mind to hear that same argument reproduced in parliament at the present time when we remember that the hon. gentleman from Russell is to-day sitting and voting in support of an administration which has adopted and is maintaining and upholding a protective system in every detail. The hon. gentleman cannot consistently occupy his position as long as he holds the views which he has expressed to-day: he cannot consistently support a government of which he is, I believe, a most loyal supporter holding such opinions as he has expressed to-day. All that he has said, while it leaves his own course in great doubt, and I think it devolves upon him the task of making some further utterance that will explain his course and the support which he sees fit to give to this present administration, does not at all affect that great and important question which has been raised by the hon. member from North Norfolk.

Now, I should not follow the hon. member for Russell in all his remarks, although to my mind one could do so with great profit. I think it would be impossible for him to fail to draw from the speech of the member for Norfolk ample proof of the inaccuracy and mistaken opinions which he seems to hold in reference to this subject. In referring to the abandonment of a protective system as likely to increase the population of this country, he maintained that in this country we have labour sufficient for all the people of this country.

Mr. EDWARDS. And ten times more.

Mr. BELL. And still that state of affairs, as was shown by the hon. member for Norfolk exists in the neighbouring country where there is no free trade, a country which draws directly from Canada many of our labouring people. In that country they have a system which the hon. member for Norfolk rightly praises as being adapted to the maintenance of their prosperity, but which I think is a policy that is antagonistic and injurious to us as a people. Now, it must be borne in mind, and that was very apparent in the speech of my hon. friend from Norfolk, that he does not at all attack the policy of the United States administration in reference to that country; but he does maintain, and I think has proved absolutely, that the two peoples living side by side show such remarkable contrast in the matter of development of population, wealth and resources, as to make any reasonable man consider the relative policies of these two countries in order to discover if possible the reason why the one country is so amazingly prosperous and is increasing at such an amazing rate in population and wealth, while this country is lagging behind in the race.

There are I am sure no gentlemen in this House who have paid the slightest attention to the study of these questions, who are not prepared to admit that a tremendous argument can be made in favour of free trade. The hon. member for North Norfolk told us, at least I gathered as much from one passage in his speech when he pointed to the remarkable career of the United States and attributed it in great measure to that enormous system of free trade which prevails between all the states and territories of the great union. We in Canada have every reason to know and to feel that in that measure of free trade that we enjoy as a people and which, after 1867, threw down all the barriers between the provinces making up the Confederation, Canada has derived an immense advantage.

But this, Mr. Speaker, is not an abstract question as to whether free trade is the right system. That is not the state of affairs that exists in the world to-day. In trade matters we find to-day all countries engaged in rivalry or active hostility, having in view on the part of the governments of all these several countries, the progress and the advancement of their people, and the success of those people in grasping the prize of power and of wealth which is held up for them all to struggle for. The situation is just this: We are living in a world in which the several governments are endeavouring to overcome the disadvantages, if such there be, of their position, and are for the most part, indeed I may say unanimously, relying upon a system of protection to enable them to surpass their competitors in the race.

The really critical point to which the hon. member for North Norfolk directs the attention of the House is this: Can we as a people afford to allow that great people with whom we are so immediately in contact and who are our natural competitors to maintain a system by which they refuse to give us any part of the trade of the country so far as they can prevent it, while they are absorbing the whole trade of our country? I need not go over the figures quoted by the hon. gentleman. They are accurate so far as I can judge, listening to them in gross, and they are startling. The very fact that it appears that in every department of commercial activity the United States are not only shutting us out of their markets and benumbing our trade and cutting off to a minimum our exports to them, but are grasping the larger part of our trade, is one of the most startling statements to which I have ever listened. It cannot be denied that it would appear that our policy is not a well chosen one—I am not speaking in this connection of the government of the day or of the opposition—but there are some defects in the manner in which we are carrying out our system when it appears that the people of Canada, who have been taking great credit to themselves for giving an advantage in their markets to the mother country find themselves in this position, that upon dutiable imports coming into the country they are levying a less rate upon articles from the United States than upon articles from that great country which receives nearly the whole of their exports. There cannot be any doubt that there is something wrong and there cannot be very much doubt either, because there is not very much reason to doubt, that this state of affairs is one that has been brought about by design. When we decreased the tariff in 1897, the government of the day claimed a great deal of credit and claimed that they were exhibiting a great deal of friendliness to the mother country by giving a 25 per cent rebate—at first 12½ per cent and afterwards 25 per cent. At that time it was pointed out that the expected benefit to the mother country would prove to be much less than it promised and that upon the lines of goods we largely imported from the mother country the cutting down of the tariff was preceded by a raising of the tariff. Duties upon the goods which we import from the mother country had been marked up in the first place so that the taking off of one-eighth and then one-quarter and afterwards one-third did not produce so great an effect as it apparently did.

There is no doubt at all that the figures that have been advanced by the hon. member for North Norfolk are correct. They show that at the present time that country which has shown to us the utmost unfriendliness has come to our markets in such a position of advantage that no other country can compete with it in securing the trade of this country. The result is that the trade of this country is passing not only in the matter of raw products, but in the matter of manufactured goods, very rapidly into the hands of the people of the United States who practically have control to-day of the trade of Canada. Now, under these circumstances, it seems to me that it is amazing that more attention has not been given to this subject. I have watched during the last twelve months with the utmost interest the fact that the hon. member for North Norfolk has been bringing this matter to the attention of the people of the United States by speaking on the subject before a great many of the most important bodies in that country. I have sometimes wondered what his purpose was, because, judging from the efforts that have been made by the people of Canada to derive any advantage in the markets of the United States, efforts in which he himself participated in very great degree during the course of a few years past, I could scarcely hope that he had any anticipation that any effort made in that direction would have any effect whatever. We can, in our province, very well remember the enormous change that took place in our circumstances when the old reciprocity treaty was done away with, and while we are forced to admit, that, to a large extent it has interfered with our trade and with our exports, still, I would feel disposed to go so far as to say that the repeal of the reciprocity treaty was not an unmixed evil for our country. I can recollect very well the position of affairs before the repeal of the reciprocity treaty and what was that condition? Actually, in that country, in Nova Scotia, where, to-day, there are very many important industries, some of national importance, some of them of such great magnitude that they are practically national concerns, such as our great iron and steel industries, the fact of the matter was that at that time, under the operation of that treaty, we were supplying natural products to a large extent to the United States and we were absolutely without any manufacturing industries. The commonest articles, the hay rake of the farmer and the cheap chair that is in the workingman's dwelling, everything in the line of those articles which it might be supposed a comparatively young people would be beginning to make were imported, we were making no progress in the direction of establishing manufacturing industries and our principal business was to find raw materials to be sent to our more progressive, more businesslike and more active neighbours from whom we received them back in manufactured forms. Then again the effect of the repeal of the reciprocity treaty, while it was largely to promote manufacturing in this country, was also to develop that condition of affairs in which you see the mother country our great purchaser and in which we have created a state of affairs that makes it clear to the world and to every man who has Imperial interests in view and considers of the safety of the empire that we are now, or very shortly will be, in the position in which we can feed the mother country and make her independent of outside sources of supply. In these directions, both in the stimulus given to our home manufacturers in Canada and the stimulus given in the direction of swelling our exports to the mother country so as to make us more important to that country, to bind us closer together and to give us an enormous part in the welding together of the empire which has built up the Imperial sentiment existing to-day, the repeal of the reciprocity treaty was not an unmixed evil but rather an advantage to Canada. Now, however, we have advanced many steps in the course of our life as a people, and these steps are perhaps best marked in the minds of most of us by the decennial periods in which our census is taken. In 1879 the government of this country adopted a system of protection and they promised and hoped for very great things in the direction of industrial advancement from that policy. The census of 1891 was unquestionably a surprise to the people of Canada. It was a painful surprise; it was startling to find that we had made a progress so small as we had made under the stimulus of the effort to swell our industries and to keep our people at home and increase our population. Living as we have done since 1896 under a government, which has certainly, no matter what else may be said of it, enjoyed a period of enormous prosperity, which has lived under a most auspicious star and enjoyed luck beyond what it is ordinarily to be expected will fall to the lot of any government, We could not help supposing that the census of 1901 would show an enormous increase, or at least, an increase that would prove a fair rate of progression in our population. But what is the result. I am sure there is not a gentleman on the other side of the House who is not prepared to admit as I was prepared to admit in 1891, that the result of the last census is a disappointment. If we are a wise people we must not lose much time in considering the disappointment, and we should lose not one moment in sinking under the disappointment, but we must, following the lines laid down for us by the hon. member (Mr. Charlton) consider whether or not that system under which we are working out our course is so well devised that it does not admit of change. I believe that the resolution introduced by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) should be followed up by a sufficiently exhaustive discussion, from which I would like to see all feeling of party spirit removed, and all party recrimination eliminated. I believe that if we exhaust the subject as this parliament of Canada is capable of exhausting it, we cannot fail to come to some definite conclusion as to whether that course of conduct indicated by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) be or be not a wise one. I must admit that we should all approach such a question with an open mind, and that it is not well that we should have our opinions fully formed upon it. Although I am proud indeed to have the honour of seconding a resolution moved by a public man of such a reputation as the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton), I feel that I cannot at this moment absolutely make up my mind as to the correctness of the course he indicates, though I am prepared to say, from the observations of years past and from that spirit of national pride and self-respect that all Canadians have; I feel very much inclined as a man to follow the course that is marked out for me in that resolution, and when I find Canada treated with unfriendliness and unkindliness, and apparently overreached in the great bargain conducted between two neighbouring nations; I feel inclined to strike back and to meet unfriendly blow with unfriendly blow. I feel inclined to go back to the old ways in which we discussed this matter a long time ago, and to decide that we do not want a jug handled trade system on this continent, but that we want a system that will give equal and fair treatment to both contracting parties.

I am satisfied that the government of Canada feels that having made the fullest efforts possible—and having done so in that spirit that the hon. member (Mr. Charlton) said he could have wished the preceding government had shown—I am persuaded that having made every effort consistent with national self-respect, they are satisfied that they need not hope for any measure of relief from the administration of the United States in the direction of bettering our trade relations. It is not for us to criticize the policy of the government of a nation friendly in a sense, and with which we wish to cultivate the most cordial relations. We in this country cannot lose sight of the fact that we must occasionally suppress our wishes, and modify our demands in view of that larger Imperial policy in which we are all involved and to which we must contribute a share of our support. But I do say that we should not hesitate for one instant to put into force as against that neighbouring country, without apology and without explanation, a system that will enable us to retain for ourselves those industries for which Canada is well adapted, and without which this country cannot achieve that national greatness for which she is unquestionably destined. My hon. friend (Mr. Charlton) waxed almost poetical and undoubtedly eloquent in speaking of the resources of this country. It was a passage in his speech to which he will look back, I believe, with great satisfaction. It was the portion of his speech to which I listened with the greatest of pleasure, and it touched the hearts and to a certain extent the imaginations of his listeners as he painted the advantages, and the possible wealth, and the future greatness of this our country. But after all, could we realize all these advantages, could we realize within that measurable distance of time in which we may expect to do our part as the builders of Canada, could we expect to achieve these results, without some change in the policy under which we have been acting in the past ? I do not think we could. And, while I am prepared to go a long way in the direction of meeting my hon. friend from Russell (Mr. Edwards) in his appreciation of the farmer, and of the fisherman, and of the miner, and of the lumberman, still I do not think that it is wise for us to shut our eyes to the facts. It is very true that the farmer is the foundation of all our prosperity. He, and the fisherman, and the miner, directly receive from the hands of the Great Disposer and Provider of all our wants, these natural gifts that are the basis of all national prosperity. But there is another class which have grown up, since the days the old Latin writer spoke of agriculture as being the fruitful mother of all industries. There is in our country and in our time, an enormous development in the direction of manufacturing industries. It is the outcoming, the extension of that great farming class, and it receives at the hands of the miner, and the fisherman, and the farmer, the food and the materials out of which to create national wealth. And by the enormous development of industry, in which not only the body and the brawn, but the mind of man as well, is an active worker, the artisan creates that state of advancement and elevation which sets some countries in the world far in advance of others. Why, the lesson of our times; the lesson taught by our census, is conclusive on that point. To what do our people tend. Do they tend to go to the farm, or when they migrate from our country do they go to some other country where they can secure farms ? Do they go to work at the fisherman's nets ? No, Mr. Speaker, we find that the people of our country, in common with the people of the most enlightened and model countries in the world, go to the towns, to create great centres and great hives of industries, and in that way to do their part in elevating and building up and strengthening our country.

Now, Mr. Speaker, having as I have, that sentimental feeling and kindly consideration for the farmer, the fisherman and the miner—and thereby taking the line that seems to be marked out for himself by the hon. member for Russell (Mr. Edwards) that nothing whatever must be done to interfere with the freedom of trade—even if I were disposed to accept that course with these ample reservations which the hon. member (Mr. Edwards) has adopted in his own case, and which would allow me to support a government which imposes a tariff which in some cases exceeds 75 per cent, and in other cases maintains a tariff very well up to the protective standpoint, I would still not feel disposed to fall in with that view. I would believe it to be more in the interest of the country that we as public men should not allow ourselves to be influenced by such views unless a careful consideration of all the circumstances, and all the facts and figures that could be brought to bear, would confirm our judgments, and support that sentiment by arguments of such a solid character that we could not get away from them.

Now, I cannot help thinking that the hon. member for North Norfolk has made an enormously strong case. He has shown conclusively that the United States, while not solicitous for the welfare of its neighbours, but exceedingly able in conducting its own affairs, has prospered beyond our prosperity in a manner almost surprising. He has made out a case so strong that at the first blush I would be inclined to think we should all give the most favourable consideration to his arguments, and inquire whether we could not at once adopt a system of reciprocity of tariffs which we could apply to any country which would not give us reciprocity of free trade.

At six o'clock the House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, the resolution of the hon. member for North Norfolk, which we were discussing at 6 o'clock, calls practically for a measure of reciprocity—reciprocity in the direction of a very liberal measure of free trade between Canada and the United States. From my understanding of the speech made by the hon. member, his first alternative seemed to be, if it were available, that the United States should lower its tariff and show the same liberality in dealing with the products of this country that we have shown in dealing with theirs. At the same time, it was impossible to avoid the impression that from his knowledge of our relations with the United States, and his experience and the experience of the government in dealing with that country, he had not very much hope of seeing any great lowering of its duties. Practically, then, such a resolution, if it were to take the form of a measure to be adopted by a government and put into operation, would carry us entirely and irrevocably, if logically followed out, in the direction of a reciprocity of tariffs. Of course, it could not for a moment be supposed that this parliament or any member of it would adopt a policy aimed particularly at any country without some good reason ; and yet one noticeable fact in the speech of the hon. member was that it dealt almost exclusively with our relations with one particular country, that is, the United States. The fact first cited by the hon. member, the foundation fact as it were, was a contrast which he drew between this country and the United States exhibited by the census in regard to the growth of population. Not taking into account for the moment any other facts revealed by the census, he showed that Canada has made very trifling gains—only 10½ per cent in the last twelve years, 12 per cent in the preceding, and only 47 per cent in the whole period since confederation—whereas the United States in a similar period, and at a time when there was not the same great activity in business that there is to-day, had made an increase in population three times as great.

There is one noticeable distinction between the policies of the two countries. The United States, with one or two reversions to a comparatively free trade system, has been a protectionist country we may say throughout, whereas Canada has not, in my opinion, been a protectionist country in the full sense of the word. It is certainly not a highly protectionist country. In the old days of the provincial governments, we had duties that were revenue duties solely, and these were placed at such a low point that they afforded no protection whatever. The province of Nova Scotia not long ago had a tariff of ony 10 per cent. While the upper provinces went a good deal beyond that, still we have not had in Canada, either before or since confederation, a really high and effective protective tariff at any time. Now, contrasting the two countries, we have equal natural resources, quite as healthful a climate, and people not at all inferior, and it does not seem unnatural to argue that the marked difference of growth in them is due to the wide difference in their tariff policies. We have had, it is true, since 1879, a certain amount of protection. We have been supposed to have a protective system, but it has not been a high protective system. It has not gone the length of the United States system, either in setting up the duties in the first place or in maintaining them at a high and efficient point afterwards. There are only two exceptions to this remark in our tariff system. We have had adequate protection given to the coal oil industry, and a fair measure of protection to our iron and steel industries in the form of government bounties. What is the result ? While in some other lines Canada may not be holding her own in the struggle for mastery, in these particular industries we find Canada achieving a great and splendid success ; and if that system is maintained without weakening, these industries will be not only established, but will go on and develop their strength to a point at which they will be able to enter into competition and hold their own in the markets of the world with the people of the United States or any other people.

Taking into consideration the fact that we have, on the whole not, afforded protection to our manufactured industries as compared with the United States, and have therefore not made a proportionate advance, and considering on the other hand the instance cited of the iron and steel industry, which has been afforded more generous protection and achieved more gratifying success, it strikes me that a good prima facie case has been made out to justify our revising our policy and entering upon a genuine, earnest system of protection. To any one who has followed the tariff discussions and changes in Canada, it must be evident that even when the principle of protection was adopted by the Canadian government, a very strong influence was exercised by public men, who were sympathetic with free trade and who impressed with great force the interests of the consumer on the attention of parliament. The result followed that even while adopting the principle, only a so-called system of protection was adopted, which did not prove itself efficient and which therefore prevented the development that would have followed the adoption of an effective system. The force of circumstances is compelling us to reconsider our position. A certain condition of affairs is revealed to us. We know that we enjoy natural advantages unsurpassed elsewhere, and yet we have made a noticeable failure to make such increase in our population, wealth and development as might have been expected from our circumstances and the character of our people. We are therefore confronted with a condition of things which compels us to seek its causes, and if we should fail, as we are almost certain to do, in inducing the United States government to reduce its tariff and make it as favourable to our natural products as ours is to them, we will be compelled, by the sheer force of reason and necessity, to adopt the other alternative suggested by the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton). We will be compelled, if we cannot obtain reciprocity or a reduction of tariff, to adopt, not only against the United States, but against the whole world—with the sole exception of the mother country which has treated us with every liberality—a policy of protection similar to that under which our American neighbours have achieved such great success.

No doubt the arguments advanced by the hon. member for Russell (Mr. Edwards) will be pressed with great force, not only in this House but outside, especially in the agricultural sections of the country. No doubt people will be told that the consumer pays too much for protection. Well, if we are driven into that discussion again, we will be merely going back to the old controversy, and we will have to prevail upon the consumer to submit to some sacrifice—temporary and not at all serious—as may be necessary in order to give him those advantages that unquestionably flow from great manufacturing industries, such as a large increase in population and consequently magnificent home markets for the farmer, the fisherman, the miner, and every man who is drawing on natures bounty and passing it into consumption. But that question has been threshed out already. It is not possible that the Canadian people could ever have consented to the measure of protection they did adopt unless they were convinced that it would give them some compensation, and the time I believe is within measurable distance when this whole question of developing home industries, and thus increasing our population and creating a home market for our natural products, will force itself upon the attention of the government. It is possible that a government may continue in power which will be half-hearted in this matter—which will give a certain measure of protection—which will pose both as a friend of the manufacturer and of the farmer, but it is not likely that such a state of affairs can long continue, and I have no doubt the time is near at hand when the administration will have to come to a decision and shape its course definitely, either as one of decided protection or free trade. Free traders we cannot expect or hope to be, and therefore it strikes me that the only alternative before us is one leading to a system of protection, which shall be really effective and not merely nominal—one which will give to our manufacturers and capitalists the assurance that their investments of energies and labour and money will rest on a solid and durable foundation. It is therefore of the highest importance that every view on this matter should be expressed—the view both of the man who is in favour of protection and of the man who is opposed to it. There are innumerable instances which may be cited, and special circumstances that may be urged, which we cannot expect to meet in speeches made in general terms. There are special circumstances that modify and affect almost every industry. There are some things we can do better in Canada than elsewhere, and others which it would not be advisable for us to undertake. But a full and thorough discussion of the subject, embracing almost all the various industries of the country and the circumstances which affect each, will bring us no doubt a remedy to our present condition, which is that of stagnation. It will then be incumbent on those gentlemen who do not agree with the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), who do not believe in the remedy which he suggests and the reasons in favour of which he gives with great force and power—it will then be the duty of these gentlemen to suggest some alternative measure by which some relief can be brought to this country. We have not done what we should have, and we are doing now still less than we did in the immediate past. Our population, instead of increasing more rapidly, is increasing less rapidly. The exodus is not a thing of the past, but is going on now as it went on before. Our people are leaving the country and going to the neighbouring republic where, owing to protection—owing to their efficient protective system—their young men and women find an ample field for the exercise of their energy and their ability which is lacking in this country. We can unquestionably in Canada, in a comparatively short time, establish some industries on such a footing as to make them perfectly safe. We have already established the iron and steel industry upon a perfectly safe foundation, and there is at least one other great industry which can be established and built up in Canada.

For some things, we have peculiar advantages. I cannot hesitate for a moment to believe that a similar system of protection, not as great in amount perhaps, but given with the same freedom with the same liberality and heartiness, that established our iron and steel industry, would, in a short time, establish an enormous pulp industry that would make Canada not only the great producer of pulp, but the manufacturer for the whole world of those classes of paper which are to-day so extensively consumed. We cannot do these things without making sacrifices, without drawing on our resources, without taxing ourselves. There is another direction in which the government will be bound to give protection in some form, either by bounties or by subvention; and that is in the direction of restoring Canada to the position which she at one time held of being pre-eminently a maritime country, a country with an enormous marine in proportion to her population. In that respect we have fallen behind. We cannot hope, in the face of the competition of countries where the governments are liberal, where they realize the importance of having control of the high seas and of the commerce of the world, to recover our place in the handling of that great world-wide business which has poured its wealth into one country after another and has given every country that has for a time held supremacy in it a leading place among the nations of the world—we cannot hope to have maritime supremacy restored to our country, unless the government rises above too small, too close, consideration of petty matters, and demands from its party, support in establishing a broad system by which the country will pledge its wealth and resources to the great national duty of pressing Canada forward into its true position as a manufacturing, commercial and maritime country. I do not propose to speak at greater length at this time, because I feel sure that many special cases will arise to which careful attention should be given, and further opportunity for discussion will be afforded as these subjects are considered. It is true that there are some things that cannot be effected by government aid and action; it is equally true that there are some things that cannot be effected without government aid and action. And I believe that careful examination of the questions that rise under the resolution placed in your hands by the hon. member for North Norfolk will lead to a comprehensive view of our situation and will indicate the line that the government should take and that it will be warranted in calling upon its followers to support it in taking.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). It has been a matter of curiosity for me during the last few hours to see what course the government would take upon this question. I made up my mind, from the start, that they had sent up this balloon to see which way the wind blew ; they wished to keep silent on the question itself so that they may not be committed before the country. The hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) is listening to me, and I have no doubt that I have been sufficient of a mind-reader to express what is passing in his mind. I have been much interested in the figures given by the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton). Looking over those figures we can come to but one conclusion, and that is that our country is not in a healthy condition with regard to its trade. We have heard it said many times, and the representatives of the Crown was caused to say it in the Speech from the Throne, that our country is in a thriving condition, that the people are prosperous and happy. But, if the conditions exist which the hon. member for North Norfolk has shown by the figures he has given, it is not possible for the country to be in as favourable position as we would desire. The hon. member for North Norfolk, last summer, was sent to the United States, if not on the advice of the government or the premier, at least with the premier's approval, to make a missionary tour of that country, either to convince the Americans of the truth of the views he laid before them or to ascertain what their feelings were with regard to this question of trade or reciprocity. When I saw the announcement of the hon. gentleman's meetings, I said that it seemed to me that it was belittling the country from which he went. I thought that if the government did its duty, it would call him home and say to him that our highest duty would be to assemble the representatives of the people in parliament and have them pass such legislation as the interests of the country required, quite regardless of what other countries did against us—saying nothing about retaliation, not going upon a begging expedition to a foreign country, not going upon our bended knees to any other country to implore them to change their tariff because if they did not it would bring us to ruin. Such a course seems to me unworthy of a great nation like Canada, and it seems to me belittling to Canada that any prominent supporter of the government should be found going through the United States with such a wail. The hon. gentleman went to Detroit, Chicago, New York, Boston, Washington, and some other places I do not recall at the moment. But he came home without having brought about any beneficial results so far as we know, and, I think so far as he himself knows. I can only tell the hon. gentleman that, so far as I can judge the sentiment of the Canadian people, that sentiment entirely disapproves of his course. We should legislate for the benefit of Canada, and let the United States legislate according to their own sweet will. We need not talk about retaliation or about what we can do to drive eighty millions of people to take the course we want them to take. We should take the means which seems to us most liable to promote the best interests of our country and say no more about it. The hon. gentleman's speech will be an interesting disclosure to the Canadian people, one that they did not expect, especially in view of the speeches that have been made, not only by the ministers of the Crown, but by prominent members of the Reform party throughout the country during the past few years. The country has been told that the policy of the present government was a wise one—that it raised revenue, that it kept Canada for the Canadians, that it did something for the mother country, and developed our trade with that country, and, in every respect was an advantageous one. And the result of this policy was, we are told, that there was nothing but prosperity and happiness in this country. But to-day the hon. gentleman tells us that the condition of affairs in Canada is a very unfavourable one. He said that, last year, we sold about $42,000,000 worth of goods to the United States, leaving out gold and the goods of other countries that only passed through Canada. But we took back $119,000,000 worth from that country. That is, the balance of trade against us with the United States that we must pay for in gold or something else, is $71,890,000 for one year. That is going on with increasing ratio every year. The balance of trade against us with Germany, after this government had succeeded in getting England to denounce the German treaty, was $4,829,000; the balance of trade against us with France was $3,816,000; the balance of trade against us with Holland was $610,000; the balance of trade against us with Spain was $557,000.

We have been told over and over again that the reduction in the duty on British goods was in favour of the mother country, that we did it in our generosity to favour the mother country, and that we were giving her this advantage which other countries did not enjoy in our market. But the hon. member for North Norfolk tells us that the rate upon dutiable and free goods coming from the United States was only 12·05 per cent, on the total importations from that country, while the goods coming from England, dutiable and free, paid an average rate of 18·2 per cent. Yet we are told that we have been giving England a great reduction in the duty so as to favour her.

Now, the hon. member disclosed what many on this side of the House have always contended, that instead of the tariff change favouring England it was in reality a discrimination against England. We said years ago when that duty was put on that such would be the result, and facts have verified our contention. What we contended years ago is amply justified by the speech which has been made to this House this afternoon. Take the dutiable and free goods from England and what do we find? That the duty on them is 18·2 per cent, while on the dutiable and free goods from the United States it is 12·02 per cent. We have often heard it said that the bulk of our free goods come from the United States, and if we take the rate of duty on the dutiable and free goods from the United States, it is unfair to take the rate on dutiable goods from England, and we are told that 33⅓ per cent of the duty as against other countries is thrown off in favour of England. But the average on dutiable goods from England last year was 24·83 per cent, while on the dutiable goods from the United States it was 24·87 per cent. Is it not as plain as anything can be that instead of the duty being in favour of England it discriminates against England? Or in other words, notwithstanding the fact that the Minister of Finance told the British people that in our generosity towards the mother country we had thrown off 33⅓ per cent, we still are charging a higher duty upon the goods coming from England than upon the goods from the United States. I think he will be loath to admit that. But if he is not inclined to do so, let him establish beyond any question that the figures given by the hon. member for North Norfolk are incorrect.

Mr. SPROULE.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). My hon. friend is proving there is no reduction. Then how can this preference do all the harm we hear about if it does not exist?

Mr. SPROULE. I am proving that the contention of the Conservative party all along was that there was no substantial preference given to England, and the trade figures now prove it beyond question. If these figures be correct, and I assume that they are, Canada has paid a higher rate of duty upon free and dutiable British goods, than upon free and dutiable goods from the United States. We were told that this was going to do a great deal of good to the people of Canada, but we find now that it has not done a great deal of good. We were told that it was going to improve our trade with other countries, and the balance of trade would turn in our favour; but we find now that the reverse is the case and the balance of trade is against us, and yet we have a government sitting still. We ask them, what are you going to do about it? Will you give us any information, as to what you propose to do to remedy this terrible state of affairs? But not a word from the government benches, they are as silent as the grave upon these questions. They have sent up a balloon to see what is the sentiment of this House, and then they will try to square themselves with the favouring gale. We ask the government, what remedy do you propose for this unfavourable state of affairs to Canada? When told they were making no reforms, the Prime Minister said to the people of Canada a short time ago, in Montreal, the older I grow I am becoming more and more conservative; and I find myself and my colleagues in the happy position that we are reformers without anything to reform. What an acknowledgment to make to the country! Is it possible that the evolutions of time bring us to no new conditions that require reform year after year? If so, this is the only country in the world in that happy condition. But that is the acknowledgment of the present government—they are reformers without anything to reform. They have nothing to reform, though the trade is going against us in our dealings with every country in the world. We are being out-done in every market, and there is no effort being made to remedy that condition of affairs. There is a balance against us everywhere, and the government are allowing it to go on, still drifting—yet they are reformers without anything to reform. Now, we are told that they have done a good deal. If the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) were talking he would tell us how much we had developed our trade with England, and how many agricultural products we have sent there, and what a wonderful thing his cold storage system was in increasing that trade. I was struck with the figures in a speech made a short time ago by the Hon. Dr. Montague, who spent eight months in Australia, and I wish to quote those figures to put them alongside the figures we have heard in regard to what has been done with the admirable cold storage system given to Canada, so that our people may understand how much they are entitled to appreciate the efforts of the Minister of Agriculture. Dr. Montague said :

> The recent figures published by Waddell & Co,. London, go to show that England imports about 425,000,000 pounds of frozen meat. Of this Australia and New Zealand sent 72,000,000 pounds, while Canada contributes a little over 10,000,000.

And yet Australia and New Zealand, that are over three times the distance from England that Canada is, and with her advantage of cold storage, have been enabled to send to England 72,000,000 pounds of frozen meat last year, while Canada only sent 10,000,000 pounds. Does not that tell a great deal on behalf of Australia, and is it not a wonderfully strong argument against the contention of the Minister of Agriculture that he has done so much for the Canadian farmer in giving him the cold storage which he speaks about so much ? But we find that the United States have sent over 408,000,000 pounds as against Canada's 10,000,000 pounds. So I do not think we have so much to boast of in the success of the present Minister of Agriculture. But in face of these figures and the disclosures that have been made to-day, we are entitled to ask the government what they are going to do about it. Have they got up and told the Canadian people what they are going to do about it ? Not at all. Have they given us any information in the Speech from the Throne ? Not at all. They are silent on that as on many other things. When they came to power a few years ago they were going to do wonderful things. They have been in power six years and have allowed things to drift along. They have accomplished little or nothing. What have they accomplished ? We have no new or better markets for the people. But what advantage have they been to us when the figures show that the balance of trade is against us in every country in the world with whom we are dealing ? Not a single market has been secured for the people of Canada since the present government came to power six years ago that we did not possess before. But they are drifting along—reformers with nothing to reform.

They were going to get a reciprocity treaty which would help to improve trade between Canada and the United States. With their sunny ways and their liberality, and their good fellowship towards the Americans, they were going to accomplish much. But the figures that have been given to-day by the hon. member for North Norfolk show that although our trade with the United States is increasing rapidly every year, the balance of trade is against us, and they have failed to secure either a reciprocity treaty or any other treaty that would be in the least degree favourable to the people of Canada.

They told us that they would settle our disputes with the United States and that we would be able to trade with them on more favourable terms. But, these disclosures prove that they have not done so. What disputes have they settled ? Is it the Alaskan boundary or the Atlantic fisheries or the seal fisheries dispute ? Not a single dispute has been adjusted between us and the United States since they came into power and yet they are sitting there helpless and telling us that they are reformers when they have nothing to reform. They are practically doing nothing. They told the farmer of the great wonders they would do for him. They said that they would help the farmer to get the market of 65,000,000 to the south of us which the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) said was the most valuable market in the world. They would get that market if the Canadian people would return them to power. Well, the Canadian people took them at their word and have they got any market in the United States ? The government have done nothing for the farmer. The hon. member for North Norfolk has told us that the American manufacturers are rapidly taking control of our markets—not taking control of our markets because they have control of them to-day. They practically control our markets to-day in the manufactured goods of our country. They are driving our own manufacturers out of the market, they are hampering their operations and compelling many Canadians to seek homes in the United States. Are the government making any effort to remedy this unfortunate condition of things ? They have not given us any evidence of a single effort that they have made to remedy this condition. They have not given us efficient cold storage, they have not saved our markets, they have not reduced our taxation. What have they done and what do they propose to do in the future ? They have remained in office and drawn their salaries and they have taken pleasure jaunts all over the country. Half of them are in England almost every summer. They have had a Joint High Commission sitting in Washington. It has been going on for the last three, four, or five years and we cannot even get the papers that should be laid before the House and the country to inform us what offers and proposals they made. They are always held back on the plea that these negotiations are not completed. The right hon. leader of the government said, in Montreal, a few months ago, that he did not expect that there would be anything more done by this commission. Then, I say, lay the papers on the Table of the House so that parliament will see what efforts are made on behalf of the country by our representatives who are sent to negotiate upon the questions considered by the commission. We have no information at all regarding what has been done and we are practically drifting. The government of to-day are doing very little beyond taking their jaunts through the country, drawing their salaries, having a good time and trying to hold themselves together.

I was very much amused at the hon. member for Russell (Mr. Edwards) who endeavoured to answer the hon. member for North Norfolk, especially so when I remember that they are both ardent supporters of the present government, the one an extreme protectionist, the other an extreme free trader, the one as directly opposed to the other as day is to night or light is to darkness, and yet they are both together in supporting the same government. The free trader thinks the principles and policy that he stands by are the best for Canada, and the protectionist thinks the principles and policy which he supports are the best for Canada. Well, I am pleased to agree with the principles promulgated by the hon. member for North Norfolk and I would like to say right here that I was especially pleased with the compliment to the policy carried out by the Conservative party during the eighteen years that they were in office, and if anything more were needed to justify the wise policy they carried out in the interest of Canada beyond what we have heretofore heard and seen we had it this afternoon in the free and frank acknowledgment of the intelligent member for North Norfolk who opposed that policy as strongly as he could for eighteen years and more and who came around to-day and frankly admitted that this is the only policy that is suited to the wants of Canada. It is a justification of the policy so wisely carried out by the Conservative party from 1879 to the time they left office, it is a verification of all the arguments they addressed to the Canadian people and it is an acknowledgment from a source that was scarcely expected. I have often seen these two hon. members sitting beside each other, the hon. member for Russell and the hon. member for North Norfolk, and I have asked myself, how could it be possible that they were held together. I could only explain it upon the theory that there is some electro-magnetic influence at work between them. You know that in electricity there is the peculiarity that likes repel each other and unlikes attract each other. If you put a positive pole to a negative pole they will attract each other and stick themselves together, but if you put two positive poles together they will fly asunder. That is the only explanation I can offer as to why these two hon. gentlemen stand together supporting the government. Likes and unlikes attract each other. I am of the opinion that if other hon. members supporting the government were as frank as these two hon. gentlemen it would be found that they hold quite as divergent views as those expressed by the hon. member for Russell and the hon. member for North Norfolk. I am not so much concerned with the divergence between the opinions held by the hon. gentlemen as I am to know what the government are going to do with this proposal. I know if they would speak as freely as the hon. member for North Norfolk what some of them would say. I am sure that if the Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) would get up, if he wished to save time, he would say, like the old Quaker 'Them are my sentiments'. I believe he is right and I commend him for it. Notwithstanding that he has gone over there, a protectionist of the protectionists and stands by the free traders, he imbibed his old doctrine too early in life to ever be relieved of it despite the fact that he occupies a place amongst those who hold a doctrine the very reverse of his. I commend him for his courage and intelligence and the Canadian people regard him as being a better statesman in that line especially than many of his colleagues. I believe though that he is bringing them over to his way of thinking. It is sometimes said that he is master of the cabinet. I think he will prove himself so, because, if I judge by the signs of the times in political life, it seems to me they are drifting over there very rapidly and I would not be surprised to see the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding), notwithstanding all that he has said against protection, or the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright), who sits beside him and who is one of the strongest free traders in Canada, getting up and propounding a radical protective policy in the interests of Canada, saying that the interests of Canada required it to-day and that they were prepared to give it and stand by it. I know that the country would give these hon. gentlemen credit for doing what is right though it might not be in accord with their previous history. I think it is a humiliating position for us and for this government that we have not a single word from any member of the government disclosing to the House whether they approve or disapprove of the principle involved in the resolution which the hon. member for North Norfolk submitted to the House this afternoon. I hope that before this debate closes, the Minister of Finance or some prominent member of the government will give his views upon this question. In justice to the country, and to the House, and to the government itself, it is incumbent that this should be done. The government seem inclined to let this question pass without comment. They have got beyond the line of Torres Vedras on this question, as the prime minister has on other questions, and unless the over sanguine Minister of Public Works gets on his feet to speak out his mind plainly, we may not have the pleasure of knowing what the government think on this question. If the government fail to give its views on this matter they will fail in their duty to the people.

Mr. C. B. HEYD (South Brant). Mr. Speaker, under the circumstances in which I am placed, I do not think it is wise for me to permit this debate to close without saying a few words in connection with the resolution presented by my hon. friend (Mr. Charlton). I do not intend to follow the hon. gentleman from Grey (Mr. Sproule) in an address that would be suitable on the hustings, but which is hardly quite germane to the question we are now discussing. It is only necessary to allude to one or two statements he has made to show how inaccurate are his conclusions. When the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) tells us at this date that our trade is in an unhealthy and unhappy condition he manifests an ignorance on the trade question that is surprising to me. He could easily have seen from the returns of the deposits of the people in the banks, that the wealth of the people has doubled within the past five years, while the foreign trade of the country has likewise doubled during the same period. With our revenue buoyant, with our coffers overflowing, to tell us that the trade of the country is unhealthy and that the people are unhappy is something that one would not expect to find believed by even the most credulous member of this House.

I agree with the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) when he says that it is the duty of Canadians to make their tariff in their own interests. I go with him hand and hand in that statement. While the United States in the exercise of their rights have raised a prohibitory tariff not only against Canada but against the people of the world, they have simply done what they had the right to do. They did what they believed to be in the interest of their own people, and having done that the only right we have left is to follow in their footsteps if it is in the interest of the Canadian people to do so. I take exception to the statement made by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) when he said that the preference given to Great Britain is an injury to the people of the British empire and to Great Britain herself. It hardly needs the intelligence of a school boy ten years old to appreciate the fact that 33⅓ per cent preference in favour of British goods cannot be injurious to the British manufacturer. It is against all reason, it is against the dictates of common sense that it could be so. Indeed, such a statement does not require an answer. Neither is it fair for the hon. gentleman to say that our tariff is hostile to Great Britain, because the rate of duty on British products is higher than upon American products. That argument can be easily answered by saying that we do not import from Great Britain free goods to the extent we do from the United States. We import from the United States nearly $60,000,000 worth of free goods, and it necessarily follows that the tariff based upon the entire imports from the United States must be lower on the average than the tariff on goods coming from Great Britain, which practically sends us nothing but manufactured articles.

Mr. SPROULE. But it is higher on the manufactured articles.

Mr. HEYD. No. In order to get the facts as to the tariff on the manufactured articles you have to compare the articles on which the duties are levied. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) will see at once that the very high average duty on British goods is influenced by the fact that all manufactured goods are not subject to the preferential tariff, and that on $5,000,000 worth of spirits, tobaccos, and other goods which are exempt from the preferential tariff, a duty of nearly 50 per cent is collected. Therefore, in striking a grand average rate that factor must not be eliminated. But, take it article for article on every article with reference to which the preferential tariff operates, and you will find that the preference is in favour of Great Britain. And, Mr. Speaker, it is not the American competition now that has given rise to the trouble in this country. It is this very preference that is precipitating this discussion, and bringing once more this tariff question before the attention of the House and before the country. It is not the competition from the United States that induces the manufacturers' associations to meet together. It is the trouble the woollen manufactures are experiencing in this country because of the preferential condition that exists, that is accentuating their troubles and precipitating the tariff question upon the people once more. It is hardly worth while to waste any more time over the statements made by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule). However, as I partially agree with my hon. friend from Norfolk (Mr. Charlton)—though I do not go to the extent he goes—I want to say a few words in connection with this resolution. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) has been for so many years engaged in bringing about more amicable relations between the people of Canada and the United States, and has put forth more effort in that direction than almost any other man in Canada, certainly more than any man in this House; that he, not having been successful in the work he had at heart, like a bow relaxed has gone to the other extreme and from being what, we might almost call a free trader in days gone by, he has now become one of the most ardent protectionists there is in this House. But the hon. member (Mr. Charlton) is not a protectionist for the same motive that makes other men protectionists. He is a protectionist to-night because through the medium of protection he wants to bring about reciprocal trade relations. He does not believe that extending the hand of friendship across the border will bring about the conditions he has at heart, but he believes that by protection he may bring about conditions that we cannot obtain by any other method. His position is entirely different from that occupied by protectionists on the other side of the House who are protectionists purely and simply because of the benefits of protection to the manufacturers.

I am sorry that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton) introduces his resolution just at this juncture. When a country is particularly prosperous it is not the time to bring about violent changes. I myself am in favour of changes in the direction of assisting the manufacturing industries that are established in this country. Although I am not a high protectionist, I am not one of those who believe that Canada should not remain for ever only a farming country. It is all right to have agriculturists in our midst, but there is a time in the history of a country when it should strive to develop all the resources that are placed within its control. That we should go on for ever raising wheat and corn, and cattle, is not the height of my ambition and I am a loyal Canadian

But, Sir, while that is the fact, I am prepared to go only so far as will be in the interest of the people of this country. I am not willing, through the resolution which the hon. gentleman has placed before us to-night, to make changes so vast and so violent that the National Policy, which we had in this country for so many years, will bear no comparison with them. He did not explain to us what the full effect of his resolution was. He did not tell us how high, in his opinion, it was necessary to raise the tariff in order to enable us to take 40 per cent off, and still do no injury to the manufacturing establishments of this country. He did not tell us how we who have been prating about what we have done for Great Britain, would be able to reconcile the statement that we have given her a preference in our markets of 33⅓ per cent with a proposal to take it away again as soon as it pinches. I am in favour of increasing the protection of the woollen industry of this country. I believe in a system that will protect industries that are not alien, but are indigenous to the soil. I am one of those protectionists who say you cannot protect the natural industries of this country too highly. From the iron ore which comes from the mine to the steel spring in a watch, through all the various stages of the iron industry I am a high protectionist. I am not a protectionist with regard to any industry which requires for its success the importation of its raw materials, especially when those materials bear a large proportion to the cost of manufacture. Such an industry, whatever it may be, will always remain a spoon-fed industry, maintained at the expense of the great mass of the consumers. But an industry that is indigenous to the country, and requires for its development only the intelligence, the industry, and the skill of Canadian workmen, I am willing to protect even to the extent of extreme protection. Therefore, holding the views I do, there are some objections to my hon. friend's discourse that appeal to me. The high protectionist notions which he has expressed to-night as applicable to industries that are alien and not indigenous to this country, industries which would never thrive here, do not appeal to my reason, although my antagonism to the United States makes it less hard to swallow them than would have been the case four or five years ago. The mode of operation which my hon. friend proposes is retaliation, which is a very poor mode for securing the object we have at heart. If he supposes for one moment that the people of the United States can be driven to give the people of Canada access to their markets in natural products without expecting anything in return, he mistakes the intelligence of the American people. They have never manifested a disposition to give something for nothing, and they are not going to do it to-day. One of the things I most decidedly object to at the present stage of the proceedings is any kind of reciprocity with the people of the United States. I believe the time has come when Canada may well realize that it has such a future before it that we need not enter into any entangling alliances either with the empire as a whole or with the United States. I as a Canadian want to leave my hands untied, and to be free to take advantage of the bounties which a kind Providence has placed within our reach, to develop our resources to the very best of our ability, and do the best we can for the people of Canada; and I do not think it is necessary to conciliate either the people of the United States or those of any other nation under the sun.

Holding these views, I am not in sympathy with the conditions as they exist to-day. But the resolution which was brought before us gives us the opportunity to express our opinions upon those conditions. It may be said that men such as I have changed our views. True, I do not claim to be so wise or to be so much of a prophet as to see changes in the distant future; and even in 1893, when I endorsed the platform of the Liberal party adopted at the convention in Ottawa, who could have anticipated the changes which have taken place? Great Britain, which was once the most conspicuous figure in the manufacturing world, has assumed an entirely different relative position in comparison with the rest of the world. She no longer reigns supreme in the manufacturing heaven, but, according to the statements of even some gentlemen in this House, she has been compelled to take a second place to the United States. Germany also looms up on the horizon; and who ten years ago could have foreseen the position that Canada itself would occupy? Who dreamed of the resources that have been lying undiscovered and unused in the bowels of the earth? Who could realize that an industrial development would take place in Canada within ten years such as we see down by the Atlantic coast, at the Soo, and away out on the Pacific coast? All these things were in the future, and I am not so ignorant nor so persistent in my beliefs that I am not prepared to change them when a change in the conditions makes a change in my beliefs necessary. I believed then that it was in the interest of the country to adopt that clause in the policy of the Liberal party. I believe still that it is in the interest of the country to adhere to it as closely as possible, and not to depart from it simply from protection's sake. But when cases present themselves that require special treatment, I do not think we should adopt a cast-iron rule and refuse consideration to industries that are suffering unfair competition for the want of that relief which in other circumstances they might not require. The views I entertain are entertained by the Board of Trade of the city of Brantford. Hon. gentlemen know that Brantford is a manufacturing city, an industrial city. It is the third largest exporter of manufactured products among the cities of Canada; and yet what is the opinion of the Brantford Board of Trade, seven-tenths of whom I presume are Liberals, loyal adherents of the present government? That body passed a resolution not so extreme as that proposed by my hon. friend, who has not a five-cent piece of interest in any manufacturing concern in this country, unless it be in a lumber mill; but these men of Brantford, who own the great industrial establishments of this country, whose names are known from one end of the country to the other, simply say:

> That, in view of the present conditions of trade and the expansion of Canadian industries, it is highly desirable that the government revise the present tariff with a view to the preservation of our markets against unfair competition, thus assisting to maintain and increase our present industries and to establish new ones.

Now, what is meant by unfair competition? That is one of the phrases that must be explained. It appears to each man according to his humour. Some men may consider a legitimate competition unfair. I do not; but I do say that where prices are maintained by a combination in the United States, which sells goods in Canada at lower prices than they receive for the same goods in the United States, that is an unfair competition, and should be put down by an increase in the tariff in the particular line affected. In order to show what I mean, I will give you a specimen case which took place in my own city. In 1898 the first cutlery establishment that has been established in Canada, began its career in the city of Brantford.

They began, knowing full well the conditions under which they were starting their industry. They knew that the duty upon cutlery was 30 per cent. They figured out the cost of raw material and labour, and decided that they could make money upon the prices which the American, English and German manufacturers were receiving, and they put $75,000 capital into the industry, and are to-day making the various branches of cutlery and selling them in the Canadian market. They have secured some of the largest wholesale dealers to handle their goods. But what is the result? Let me just take the article of shears, as an example of the way in which business is done. In 1898 a certain brand of shears was selling at $4.80 per dozen in the American market. The same quality of shears was sold in England at $4.80, and adding the Canadian duty of 30 per cent, made the price to the wholesale dealer in Canada $6.24 per dozen. That was the competition which the home industry anticipated it would have to meet. But what are the conditions to-day? After it was established, although the price in the United States has not varied up to the present time, and although the same shears are selling in England at the same old price of $4.80, when the American travellers came into Canada and found that the Canadian wholesalers were tied down to this Canadian concern—first because its goods are equally good, second because it is a Canadian institution, and third because it sold cheaper—what did they do? They reduced the price of shears in the Canadian market to $2.88, so that the shears which, four years ago, were selling in Canada at $6.24, are now selling at $3.74. I call that unfair. The Americans have a protective tariff which prevents us, under any circumstances, from selling a single razor or knife or pair of shears in the United States, but they can take their goods, which they sell at $4.84 in their own market, and sell them in Canada at $2.88. Of course that would not continue once the Canadian industry was out of the way. The Canadian consumer will no doubt ask why should I be deprived of the benefit of cheap American cutlery? But this benefit is only temporary, and these low prices will only last until the Canadian industry is destroyed, when the price will be raised again. That case is not an unusual one.

We have a similar condition of things in the pottery at Brantford. A few years ago, for the lack of baking capacity, this company was compelled to make arrangements with an American pottery, and it was given a remarkably low price on American goods. The Canadian company consequently did not build an oven, but at the end of the year, when it wanted to make a new contract, the American establishment raised its prices. Then as soon as the Canadian manufacturers built themselves a second oven, immediately the Americans dropped the price of their earthenware, and again our home industry had to compete against low priced American articles which were selling much higher in the American market.

It is this discrimination and these inequalities which give rise to a great deal of the trouble. If we can succeed in preventing the slaughtering of American goods in the Canadian market and give our woollen manufacturers some measure of relief, which I think they are entitled to, we would do a great deal towards stifling the cry for retaliation, which we hear so often raised, but which is a policy we should never resort to except in the most extreme cases.

It may be that this is an inopportune time for our government to revise the tariff. There will shortly be a meeting of the representatives of the various colonies in London, England, and at that meeting there may be devised some scheme of colonial and Imperial trade that may inure to the interests of this country. And on the eve of a great gathering of this nature, it may be premature and inopportune for the government to declare what they intend to do in the matter of tariff changes. It seems to me that the demand of our hon. friends opposite on the government to express its views in an academic discussion of this kind, when capitalists, who have invested millions of dollars in manufactures, are waiting to hear what possible tariff changes are in the minds of the government, is rather an unreasonable one; and while I go with my hon. friend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) a certain way, I am not prepared to go so far as he advocates. But any action the government may take for the purpose of removing this unjust competition to which our manufacturers are subject, and anything that we may do to relieve what is apparently the injustice, under which our woollen manufacturers are suffering, I will most heartily support them in doing. We may have gone a shade too far in our Imperial preference. With our first 25 per cent reduction we got all the sentimental advantages that we now get under the 33⅓ per cent, and we have subjected our woollen manufactures to that extra 8 per cent preference against them. I urge with considerable confidence that something should be done, and I am satisfied it will be done. I am satisfied that the men who introduced a tariff in 1897 which, notwithstanding what our friends opposite may say, was immediately followed by a prosperity such as this country never saw before, are themselves capable of solving the vexed question which now presents itself for solution.

Mr. HEYD.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (East York). The House will pardon me for citing a quotation from scripture, for the special edification of my Highland friend from Cape Breton—though not so much for his spiritual edification as his political illumination.

And Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest.

And desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus; and suddenly there shined round him a light from Heaven :

And he fell to the earth and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me ?

And he said, Who art thou, Lord ? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest ; it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

* * * * *

And the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.

* * * * *

And he was three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

* * * * *

Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem :

And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call on thy name.

But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings and the children of Israel :

* * * * *

And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.

And when he had received meat, he was strengthened. Then was Saul certain days with the disciples which were at Damascus.

* * * * *

But all that heard him were amazed, and said : Is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests ?

* * * * *

And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews took counsel to kill him :

But their laying await was known of Saul. And they watched the gates day and night to kill him.

Then the disciples took him by night and let him down by the wall in a basket.

Mr. Speaker, if this falling of the scales from the eyes happened to John of Norfolk, if it happened to Saul of Tarsus, when may we expect it to happen to Richard of Oxford? It may happen at any day. And then even William of York will find it hard to kick against the pricks. After the conversion announced here this afternoon, after the falling of the scales from the eyes that we have seen, we may hope for anything. I congratulate the hon. member for North Norfolk upon his conversion, and I congratulate him no less upon the manliness with which he has admitted that conversion and has advocated the couse of protection for Canada. This conversion may run through the whole government, and, before six months have passed, we may have even the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) making the same statement of conversion as we have heard here this afternoon.

I desire to say but a word about one or two things said by the hon. member for North Norfolk, and also by the hon. member for Russell (Mr. Edwards), with regard to the exchange of natural products between this country and the United States. The hon. member for North Norfolk said that we could afford to have an exchange with the United States in this respect. I deny that in toto. There is an advantage which the United States enjoys over Canada which invalidates the hon. gentleman's argument, and that is the geographical, or rather the climatic advantage. If we allow the natural products of the United States to come into Canada free, the effect will be to ruin a great many Canadians, such as our gardeners, the people who raise small fruits, and, to a large extent, the people engaged in the poultry business. As a matter of fact, we have had the gardeners of Montreal and the gardeners of Toronto—and they represent an immense industry—protesting against that very thing. I am strongly against the doctrine of free exchange in natural products. Another thing that was said by both these hon. gentlemen was that if free trade was a good thing as amongst the forty-two states that make up the union, it would be a good thing for Canada and the United States, these being contiguous countries. True it is that free trade has made a great success amongst the forty-two states of the union. But that was because of their community of interest. As between us and the United States, there is a diversity of nationhood, and this principle of community of interest does not apply. The whole argument of the hon. gentlemen, then, falls to the ground. The very fact that these countries are contiguous, and yet have a divergence of nationhood, dictates a wholly different policy, even a policy of retaliation if such becomes necessary. These hon. gentlemen may talk about the beauties of free trade as exemplified amongst the states of the union, but what is that compared to the great fact that the United States has vindicated the principle of protection as it has never been vindicated before? Because it has adopted that principle the United States is to-day the greatest country in the world. It is to-day raiding the markets of free trade England, raiding the markets of Canada, raiding the markets of the world. This is not, as is sometimes said, because the United States is a country of great resources—we are a country of great resources and would be in the same position if that were all that was required—but because of her fixed and determined policy to build up her own industries, to create work for her own workpeople, to keep her own markets for her own products, and, for these purposes to adopt a high protective tariff. This is the cause and nothing else. Great Britain to-day has failed in the eyes of the world, because she has allowed protective nations like the United States, like France, like Germany, to raid her markets. Free trade has not vindicated itself, but protection has vindicated itself in the United States, and in every country where it has been adopted as a determined policy. The hon. member for Russell talked a great deal about free trade, but did not bring forward a single argument. He had to admit that this country had gone back, he had to admit the great success of the United States. These two things of themselves are enough to prove that Canada, if she would hold her own, must adopt the principle of protection to the hilt—not quarter protection, such as we have to-day, not half-way protection such as we have to-day, but sufficient and adequate protection to keep our own work for our own work-people, and our own markets for our own products. If we may infer anything from the speech of the hon. member for North Norfolk, we may infer that he is a protectionist, that he can only for a very few more weeks continue to support hon. gentlemen opposite, unless they take up the principle of protection and carry it on as he has advocated.

I want to tell the Prime Minister and his government that this country has no future, if we allow the present state of things to continue. There is an invasion, as he called it the other night, and as I call it—an invasion of the manufacturers and workmen of the United States to possess this country. And they are possessing it, according to the evidence that Liberals themselves advanced here this afternoon. There is an invasion of American capital into this country that is taking possession of the railways and other great institutions of this country. Hon. gentlemen opposite say they welcome this invasion. But if it continues, if the American manufacturers continue to raid our markets, if American capitalists continue to get possession of our great railway and other corporations, the day is coming when our hope of a separate and independent nationality on this continent must look very black indeed. I have very poor hope of this country if we do not soon do something on the line of the policy advocated here this afternoon by the hon. member for North Norfolk.

The people of the United States are a wise people. They have made their tariff to suit themselves, and no supplication on our part will induce them to change it. I never was—thank God for it—a suppliant to the people of the United States. The right hon. gentleman (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) who leads this House, has told us that hereafter there are to be no more missions to Washington. Even that indicates progress.

Let there be an end to this supplication of Washington, and, in a way, let there be an end of all threatening of retaliation. On the other hand, let there be a determination on our part to do for our country what the people of the United States have done for theirs. Let that be our ground of action. The people of the United States will pay no attention to either threats or supplications from us. They are too big a people—too great a people We cannot bring them to time, but we can do something for ourselves. Don't let us go any more to Washington. Let us do something for ourselves, let us show we are equal to the occasion; let us do something on the lines laid down by the hon. member for North Norfolk this afternoon, on the lines laid down by the member for Brant (Mr. Heyd). He was only telling half of what he was told by his own people. The people of Brantford are out and out protectionists, and the people of Ontario, and the manufacturers from one end to the other of the province, and the farmers of Canada are for protection. The farmers of Canada know one thing very well, and that is that wherever there is a great home market, wherever there are prosperous manufacturers, wherever there is a great manufacturing centre, wherever there is a great number of workingmen, there is a splendid home market. You can always get the farmers to support a national policy if it is on good lines. I trust that after the confession that has been made here this afternoon by these two hon. gentlemen, and the statements that have been made throughout the country, and the new principles advocated by the Liberal press throughout the country, that we will have some kind of effort made by the government to move on the lines indicated by the member for North Norfolk.

Now, the Prime Minister dealing with this very question not long ago said: We are a people who wish to buy and who wish to sell; the Americans are a people who do not wish to buy but who wish to sell. Now accepting that definition, I would ask him what is he going to do about it? If they insist on their policy of selling to us and not buying from us, what does he propose to do about it? Are they to continue to raid our markets? I say no. Let us treat them as they treat us. No, I won't use that term, I will say, let us follow their example, and perhaps if we follow their example they will be ready to buy from us as well as sell to us.

Now, what should be the policy of Canada?—we won't call it protection. What should be the policy of the empire?—we won't call it protection. But what is the lesson of this debate? What is it that is coming home to Canadians? What is the thing coming home to Englishmen all over? It is this: If not free trade, then fair play. Fair trade is the word, fair trade is the sign, and in that sign the empire can conquer, and will revive. I will put it in another way, reciprocal trade, or preferential trade between the various members of the empire, and fair trade to all outside the empire. I think that policy was very nearly suggested this afternoon by the hon. member for North Norfolk. I prefer to call it fair trade to retaliation. I have spoken a good deal in favour of what I called a retaliatory tariff. Perhaps another better term is reciprocity of treatment. But the thing for this country, the thing for the empire, is preferential trade within the empire and reciprocity of treatment to all outside of it.

The hon. gentleman who just sat down said that he did not want to interfere with the great conference that was to take place this summer in London. Now, that conference is to take place, and it is well there should be frequent discussions in this House on the subjects likely to come up there. Now the lesson that is coming home to us, and the lesson I am trying to convey to the government is this, that we have two problems to settle, and we must settle them now before that conference takes place. I wish to impress it upon the leader of the government, and upon the keeper of his political conscience so far as the tariff is concerned, the Minister of Finance, that there are two things to do. We have to do something in regard to our attitude towards the United States, and we have to do something in regard to our attitude to the mother country. And we must do it this summer, and we must state clearly and explicity what we intend to do. We must take up the gauntlet that has been thrown down to us this afternoon by the member for North Norfolk. We must say what we intend hereafter to do toward the people of the United States, and we must say what we intend to do toward the people of England in regard to trade between the mother land and Canada. We ought to lead in this matter as I believe we are competent to lead. As I said in Toronto the other night at a public meeting, and it seemed to meet with a good deal of approval, we Canadians as a portion of the empire, have the clearer vision in regard to the trade future of the empire. We vindicated that, and Englishmen to-day are calling on us to make suggestions as to the trade policy of the empire. Then what ought these suggestions to be?

What ought the Prime Minister to say this summer when he goes to England? He ought to go there prepared to say to the empire and in the face of all the world, that we Canadians are determined at last to build up our own country and to follow, if necessary, the example of the United States, and to force them if we can to trade fair with us; and also to say to the empire that we are prepared to join with them in forcing the whole outside world if necessary to trade fair with the empire. Now those are the two great things. I do not know whether the Prime Minister will rise to the occasion, whether he will make a declaration or not. But this discussion this afternoon, and other discussions in this House at other times, and discussions yet to take place will make clear the fact that the manufacturers, the workingmen and the farmers are waiting to know what the new policy of the government is to be under these new conditions. The conditions are new. The future of Canada is in the scales. If something is not done we will be a portion of the United States in a short time. We cannot help ourselves, if they control our trade, if they control our great corporations. But if we have confidence in ourselves, if we adopt those principles which have been vindicated in regard to trade, the principles of protection, then we are bound to stand for our own interests and to keep our own markets to ourselves. We are bound to become much stronger protectionists than we are to-day, and we are bound to tell the empire that we are willing to join with the empire, not only for preferential trade between the different portions of the empire, but for fair trade between the empire and all outside portions as well.

I say the Prime Minister should not let this resolution pass without telling us where the government stands in regard to it. He cannot gain the support of the hon. member for North Norfolk unless he accepts the doctrine laid down here to-night. There is no time like the present to make a new departure. It has got to be made, and it has got to be made in a manly way. There has got to be a confession of mistake in the past. Hon. gentlemen opposite were free traders and nothing else in the past, they were for free trade in Canada as they have it in England. But that won't do. Free trade is a failure in England to-day. What Canada wants is protection as they have it in the United States. What the empire wants is that kind of attitude and that kind of treatment from other nations which she accords to them and if she does not get it she will give to other nations that treatment which they accord to her.

Now in face of all that, in face of the new conditions, in face of the way that the empire is trying to hold its own when it is raided from all quarters from protectionist nations, what advice is the Prime Minister going to give this House to-night on this motion presented by the hon. member for North Norfolk ? What advice is he going to give the empire when he goes to the celebration in the coming summer ? The question must be faced. There is no way of escaping it. If it must be faced let it be faced courageously here and now. Let us not be afraid, as at last the member for North Norfolk has shown that he is not afraid and as the Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) is not afraid to avow that the only salvation of this country is in the adoption of a protectionist policy.

I congratulate the hon. member for North Norfolk on freeing himself from his bonds. I take it that he is honest in his purpose. They say, and it is said freely, that he is flying a kite in the interests of the government. I believe the conversion is deep and pronounced and that there are scores of hon. members on the other side of the House ready to speak as the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Heyd) spoke here to-night. If there is one vindication of that old man now dead and buried in Cataraqui Cemetery who introduced the national policy into this country, it is afforded in the conversion of John of Norfolk that we have heard this afternoon. If there ever was a man who went about persecuting the people who believed in protection, it was the hon. member for North Norfolk. Now, he has made his peace. He will feel all the better for it. He has got the trouble off his mind, he has made his confession and he will be a much happier man. The hon. member for North Brant should do the same and the hon. Minister of Public Works should do the same. I believe the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce will yet do the same and that we will have him coming down and approving of the policy of protection. The right hon. Prime Minister has no political principles in regard to the tariff or the future of the country. He has said time and again that he is an opportunist and it will be no trouble for him to do what the hon. member for North Norfolk did here to-day. It will only be making a slight change to adapt himself to circumstances so that he will not be wrestling with his conscience as the hon. member for North Norfolk did. He will do it easily and I believe the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) will be able to do the same thing. Why not take the manly course and take the step to-night ? I am following out the line of the exhorter in the revival meeting. Do it now, and do it completely. Don't wait ; to-night is the accepted hour, now is the appointed time. If the hon. Minister of Public Works would only walk up and down among the brethren as the revivalist does, he would be able to bring them in. The wandering boys would all be home to-night, if the head of the government should make a straight and sudden departure just as the hon. member for North Norfolk has done here to-night. This is the easiest way out of it, it is the way that will benefit Canada and benefit the empire and the easiest for his reputation. These hon. gentlemen are like the woman in the problem play ; they have a past and they are ashamed of it. We will give them an opportunity here and now to come out straight and completely for protection as the hon. member for North Norfolk has come out to-night. I hope this is the last time that we will have to appeal to them. Having gone so far as they have on the road to protection they should take the final leap and admit before the whole country that the only salvation of this country is the national policy lived up to by the government and not the one-sided jug handled protection they seem to favour at the present time.

Mr. W. B. NORTHRUP (East Hastings). Mr. Speaker, I would not have intruded on the time of the House even for a few minutes were it not that I have been very deeply impressed by the vast difference between the speech of the mover of this motion and the utterly meaningless and illusive motion that has occupied the attention of the House this afternoon. If I were as conversant as the hon. gentleman who has just resumed his seat (Mr. Maclean) with the political history of the hon. gentleman who has placed it before the House I might take a different view of the motion from that which I have derived from reading it, but, referring to the motion and confining myself to the subject before the House without wandering over the whole sphere of political economy, I would like to direct the attention of the House to the actual words in the motion which we are asked to adopt. The motion reads :

That this House is of the opinion that Canadian import duties should be arranged upon the principle of reciprocity in trade conditions.

Any person can understand that. It means that our import duties are to be arranged on the principle of reciprocity ; that is if one country favours us we shall favour that country and if another country taxes our products we shall tax the products of that country. But, the sting of this sentence is in the end.

So far as may be consistent with Canadian interests.

Consistent with Canadian interests. In my humble judgment this is dallying with the intelligence of this House. It is a waste of time for any hon. gentleman to bring before the House a resolution asking us to approve of having duties arranged on the principle of reciprocity in trade conditions in so far as may be consistent with Canadian interests. We might take the scene that was witnessed a short time ago in Montreal at the manufacturer's banquet. We had the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) speaking as an out and out free trader. We had the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) speaking, as he has always been, a consistent protectionist, and we had the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) smiling blandly on both ; yet, all these hon. gentlemen can accept this proposition, and while they would differ entirely as to the working out of the proposition, they could all raise their hands to heaven and sincerely say that they would subscribe to the principle of reciprocity in trade conditions so far as they were consistent with Canadian interests. When we go on we find that :

A rebate of not less than 40 per cent on the amount of duties imposed should be made upon dutiable imports from nations or countries admitting Canadian natural products into their market free of duty.

This is a very plain proposition, that if any nation will admit the natural products of Canada into its markets free we will give it a reduction of 40 per cent on manufactured goods. If the manufacturers had no rights in this country, if the desire were to slaughter them and close down their factories, I could understand this proposition but I appeal to any hon. member in this House and even to the hon. member for North Norfolk to say, whether in order to obtain the free introduction of our natural products, or of our agricultural products into the markets of any country we should consent to a reduction of 40 per cent in the duty on manufactured goods is not the height of absurdity. The hon. gentleman goes on to obviate that difficulty by the concluding clause :

And that the scale of Canadian duties should be sufficiently high to avoid inflicting injury upon Canadian interests in cases where a rebate of 40 per cent or more shall be made under the conditions aforesaid.

It may be 40 per cent or 60 per cent or 80 per cent or a hundred fold under this resolution. No matter what reduction you may make Canadian industries are to be protected in the way referred to in this closing part irrespective of protection which these Canadian industries require. Of that I shall speak presently. You are to have a measure of protection according to the views of the free trader. It is asking for bread and receiving a stone. As far as we know this is the motion made by the hon. member for North Norfolk. Unfortunately that hon. gentleman has expressed himself on the subject of protection and free trade very frequently in this House and it is absolutely necessary to use a glossary to understand what he means by any particular words. In the session of 1876 he addressed the House and no man could have given more thorough going or consistent protectionist utterances than the hon. member for North Norfolk. In 1876 as reported in 'Hansard,' page 312, the hon. gentleman said :

It may be safely assumed that no nation has attained to greatness in commerce or manufactures without having in the course of its history imposed exactions and restrictions. This has been notably the case with Great Britain herself and I think that the assertion of the various industries as necessary to the cultivation of the self defensive power of a nation is incontrovertible * * * When 'industries' are suited to the land it is the duty of the government to foster them.

These are the protectionist views of the hon. member for North Norfolk in 1876. He went on to say :

I believe that the agricultural interests of the Dominion would be promoted by protection—

Unmistakable words these—

—and that the manufacturer, being brought to the door of the farmer, would afford a market for a great many articles of produce that would not be saleable if the market were 3,000 miles away.

These were his views in 1876. In 1895 again, the hon. gentleman addressed the House. It is true there was a change in the conditions; in the first instance he being on the government side of the House, and in the second place he being on the opposition side of the House. But when he came to express himself on the subject of protection, he was just as unequivocal, just as clear, and distinct as he had been years before. He spoke of protection to the various industries of the land, and he spoke of protection to the farmers. This is his idea in 1895, and that date you will notice is a great deal less remote than 1873. As reported in 'Hansard,' 1895, page 1189, he said :

I deny in toto that the farmer requires protection or that he has received protection, or that he has anything to thank the government for in connection with its fiscal policy.

At page 1109 he said :

He is in the highest and noblest sense a manufacturer, and he depends not upon man's legislation, but he depends for the outcome of his labour upon the blessings of a kind Providence.

Now, Sir, looking at this resolution framed by the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) and presented to this House by him, asking us to agree that we should adopt the principle of reciprocity so far as may be consistent with Canadian interests, I must read in with that, the glossary of his language which is given in his speech of 1895, and I find that it means that the farmer does not require protection. Therefore, I know that in his judgment the farmer would be injured by protection. In this speech of 1895, further on he spoke of the manufacturers. He discussed exhaustively the question of protection to the farmers, and then he said :

I proceed next to consider the assertion that our manufacturers depend for prosperity upon protection, and I think that I shall be able to show that protection, even in the case of the manufacturers, has not exerted the beneficial influence which is claimed for it.

Further on in the same debate (pages 1200 and 1201 of 'Hansard') he spoke of protection to the mining industries, to the lumbering industries and to several other industries. I will not quote the hon. gentleman at length, but he practically mentioned the whole list of Canadian industries and proved to his own satisfaction conclusively that protection was of no conceivable use to these Canadian industries. Now, then, I am asked, representing a constituency which is not exclusively agricultural but having large manufacturing industries; I am asked to subscribe to this proposition drawn by the member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), that I should vote for protection so far as may be consistent with Canadian interests—which means in his mind, no protection to the farmer, no protection to the mining industry, no protection to the manufacturer. I venture to say that with that explanation of the true views of the member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), no hon. gentleman in this House would be justified in supporting such a proposition.

I must confess that I was rather surprised at the view expressed by the hon. member for South Brant (Mr. Heyd) in regard to the speech and motion of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Charlton). Judging from some of the utterances given expression to by the hon. gentleman from South Brant (Mr. Heyd), he so absolutely fails to conceive the faintest idea of the underlying principle on which this motion is based, that he may be excused for almost any statement he would make in this connection. He referred to the woollen industry more than once, and he expressed the opinion that the government that he faithfully supported had not done justice to the woollen industry, and he hoped that ere long they would rectify the injustice they had done and give additional protection to it. I have not the slightest doubt that the hon. member was sincere in what he said. I have not the slightest doubt that he hoped from the bottom of his heart that the government would give protection to the woollen industry. But time passed on; changes came; new conditions arose; two minutes had rolled by into eternity, and the hon. gentleman then informed the House that he was opposed to the granting of protection to any industry which was confined mainly to the manufacture of goods not made from raw material produced in Canada. Yet, we know that the woollen industry imports the greatest part of the wool, the raw material under which the business is carried on. If the hon. gentleman meant what he said—and I assume he did—if he understood what he meant—and I am bound to think he did—then in one breath he said that there should be protection to the woollen industry and in the next breath he said he was opposed to any protection being granted to an industry situated precisely as the woollen industry is. The hon. gentleman from Brant (Mr. Heyd) went on to speak of the sacrifices that had been made on our market by American manufacturers, and he referred to the question of retaliation, as did the mover of the motion. I venture to say that when these hon. gentlemen spoke on the subject of retaliation they displayed a want of acquaintance with the first principle of the doctrine of protection. One would think that every man in the country knew by this time what the doctrine of protection means, and yet these hon. gentlemen failed to recognize what protection means, or else they wilfully perverted its meaning. Protection means protecting some one from impending ill. It may be that at one time a duty of 25 per cent would be ample protection, and it may be that at another time a duty of 50 per cent would be required. But nobody will dispute that the harder the times the greater the danger of an inflow of goods from foreign countries; the more necessity there is for protection and the greater the protection must be in order to be effectual. Now, Sir, if I went on to discuss the question of free trade and protection I would be doing what I promised at the outset not to do. I will content myself by saying that I am unable to support the motion of the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), firstly, because it is so ambiguous that no meaning can be attributed to it, and secondly, because I believe that a motion of this kind, committing the House to the most important question that can come before us, should be so clear-cut, that every voter in the Dominion of Canada might know where his representatives stood on that question. I believe that it will be a happy day for Canada—whichever the party to occupy one position and which ever the party to occupy the other—when the people of this country will be able to go to the polls and intelligently vote for a party, knowing that party has understood the promises it has made and is prepared to carry them out when placed in power.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). I do not imagine from what I have heard from hon. members of both sides of the House, that there is a desire to have a division taken on this interesting and important resolution. In fact, the hon. gentleman who seconded the motion intimated that while he did so he was somewhat in doubt as to whether ultimately it would commend itself to his judgment. I take it that the object was to invite discussion on what is a very important question, and then have the debate on the motion adjourned, if the motion be not withdrawn. However that may be, so far as the government is concerned, I am sure the House will anticipate what I am about to say, namely, that the general practice in matters of this sort is that the government shall declare its intention in connection with the tariff when the budget speech is made, and it is not usually deemed wise to forestall any action in that direction by making announcements in advance. Adopting that view, which has always been adopted by Ministers of Finance in the past, I desire to say that while I agree with some things that have been said and while I dissent from others, I do not think it would be expedient to enlarge on the subject now, though. I have no desire now to preclude any gentleman who wishes to address the House. Therefore, I beg, Mr. Speaker, to move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Might I ask, if the suggestion of the minister is that this debate shall be resumed after the budget speech has been delivered ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I would almost suppose that the debate could be merged into the budget debate as it is on a cognate subject.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This debate will be left over for the present.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Of course, the motion remains on the Order paper.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Might I ask the minister if he proposes to name the date on which the budget speech will be delivered. We would like to have the customary notice.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As usual a few days notice will be given.

Motion agreed to, and debate adjourned.

On motion of the Prime Minister, the House adjourned at 10.05 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, February 25th, 1902.

The SPEAKER took the chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 7) respecting the Canada Southern Railway Company.—Mr. Ingram.

INTERPRETATION ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 8) to amend the Interpretation Act.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Will the hon. gentleman kindly explain.

Mr. MONK. The object of this Bill is to declare more clearly in the Interpretation Act that company's incorporated by the Federal parliament or acting under charter from Federal authority are, nevertheless, subject, in each province, as regards damages or torts, to the civil law of that province. The necessity for that law has become apparent from the recent decision of the Privy Council in the cases of the Canandian Pacific Railway Company vs. Roy. In this case our courts decided that, though a railway company incorporated by and subject to the Federal law was authorized to prosecute its business, it nevertheless was subject to the law of our province as regards damages. The effect of the decision was that if an engine of the company, though worked with all the necessary appliances to secure immunity from fire, should cause a fire in the course of its use in the business of the company, the company was liable for the damages occasioned by that fire. That was the unanimous decision of our courts. It was held, however, in England, conformably, as I understand, to the English law, that when a railway company is incorporated and authorized to prosecute its business, and when it prosecutes that business with all the necessary precautions, it is not liable in damages. Consequently it has been thought necessary that an Act should be passed to declare that in our province although railway companies are incorporated by Dominion charter, they are nevertheless subject, under the constitutional Act, to the Civil Code of Lower Canada as regards damages.

Mr. FRASER. Might I ask the hon. gentleman if it refers to the province of Quebec alone ?

Mr. MONK. It does not refer to the province of Quebec alone, but the main disposition declares that laws of that nature will apply to the whole of Canada.

But no law, power of privilege granted by a Federal law, or a charter emanating under some Federal law will have for effect to remove any person or company from the responsibility which it would incur under the civil law or the common law of each province in the exercise of such right, power or privilege.

It merely declares that in cases such as the one I have just described, the civil law of each province will apply, conformably to the dispositions of the Constitutional Act of 1867.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (East York). The question raised by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) is a very timely one, and it is coming up in this House in another respect in regard to the Bell Telephone Company. That company is incorporated under Dominion law, and yet it claims to override the municipal law of Ontario in so far as taking possession of streets is concerned. I imagine that question will come before the House this session. The contention of the Bell Telephone Company all along has been, as against the municipalities, that because it is incorporated under a Dominion Act it does not come under the municipal law. Now, I believe it was laid down in this parliament some years ago that a company so incorporated, no matter what rights they alleged had been given to it in its charter, was still subject to the municipal law, and that it did not require an exact definition of what its rights were, of a clause protecting the municipality. But the question is coming up, and it may come up in a very wide way. I am glad the hon. gentleman has introduced this Bill for the purpose of making the whole question clear.

Mr. R. LEMIEUX (Gaspé). I may add to the remarks made by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) that this Bill is a very timely one, because, according to a recent decision rendered by the Privy Council in the case just cited, that of Roy and the Canadian Pacific Railway, the jurisprudence of our courts in the province of Quebec has been completely reversed. In that case, it was decided by our courts, that the railway company was responsible for damages caused to a settler in the northern district of Montreal, and the judgment so rendered by the Superior Court was unanimously confirmed by the Court of King's Bench. The same jurisprudence has been upheld by the Supreme Court of Canada in cases arising in the province of Quebec. But when we go before the Privy Council the whole jurisprudence, all the precedents, are reversed, and a new jurisprudence is created. The above judgment, I may say, has caused an uneasy feeling in the province of Quebec. Our judges have been slighted and our law has been completely ignored. We have been told by their Lordships of the Privy Council, that in matters of damages and torts we are to be governed by the English common law. With all due respect to that law, I may say that we, in the province of Quebec intend to maintain the system of laws and the customs which have been granted and secured to us by the constitution of this country. I think the Bill presented by my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier is a timely one, and ought to receive the full support of this House.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). My sympathies are altogether along the lines enunciated by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) and by the hon. member for Gaspé (Mr. Lemieux). But my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier, I am sure, who is an eminent counsel, cannot fail to realize that it is questionable whether the legislation which he has in view will remedy the evil which he seeks to remedy. The question is whether we can at the present time evade the powers which have been granted to us under a Federal Act. I doubt if we can do so. But the question which my hon. friend has raised is not a new one. That question is as to what extent a charter granted by the parliament of Canada can invade a disposition of the Federal Act which provides that civil rights are under the control of local legislatures. There is a line of demarkation between the two, but it is sometimes difficult of application. Whenever we give a charter to a railway company we necessarily invade private property. For instance, we give to the chartered railway company the power of expropriating a property for the benefit of the company. That is clearly an invasion of civil rights. Still there is no doubt whatever that parliament has power to invade civil rights to that extent, in other words, there is no doubt that we have the right to invade civil rights so far as it may be necessary to carry out the object of the franchise which is given by the Federal parliament. But here is a question : How far can these civil rights be invaded ? That they may be invaded to the extent of accomplishing everything which is the consequence of the charter given, there can be no doubt whatever. But there is a great doubt whether the consequences which are not the immediate consequences of the charter, can be invaded. In the case which has been cited, as stated by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier, the circumstances were these : The Canadian Pacific Railway Company had committed a tort against an individual, unwillingly and unwittingly, that is to say, a spark which blew from an engine set fire to a barn and destroyed it. Under the civil law of the province of Quebec, which is certainly, in my estimation, most just and most equitable, the company would have been responsible, even if it had taken all the precautions which it could take before the accident. Under the common law, as I understand it, which prevails in England, the moment a company had done everything that could reasonably be done, when they had taken all the precautions they could take under such circumstances, they would not be liable for the consequences. Well, the Court of Appeal of the province of Quebec determined that under such circumstances the law of the province would apply, and the company would be liable for the tort. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council decided to the contrary. I do not know that the evil which it is sought to remedy will be covered by the Bill introduced by my hon. friend; I doubt it very much, because we cannot infringe upon a Federal Act. But in my opinion the judgment of the Court of Appeals of Quebec was the better judgment of the two. I think that is the law, and not the interpretation laid down by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Mr. T. CHASE CASGRAIN (Montmorency). I have no doubt the Bill which my hon. friend from Jacques Cartier has introduced should pass in some way, if not in the terms in which it is drafted, at all events in such terms as will relieve those who suffer under circumstances similar to those suffered by this man Roy.

I do not quite agree with what my hon. friend from Gaspé (Mr. Lemieux) said when he stated to the House that the Privy Council had held that this question should be decided according to the law of England and not according to the law of the province of Quebec. As I read the judgment, their lordships came to the conclusion that the common law of the province of Quebec was similar to the common law of England and they decided it according to the principles of the English law, which they stated were also the principles of the law of the province of Quebec. The whole question turned upon the interpretation of article 1053 of our Civil Code, which says that if damage is caused by any fault, whether by an unskilful act or neglect, the person is responsible in damages. But their lordships asked : How can it be possible that there will be fault upon the party if the act complained of is authorized by statute ? The present charter of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company gives the railway company not only permission to run its railway but directs that it shall be run in such a way and on the line which is set out and this becomes part of its charter by following the provisions of the general Railway Act. Therefore, their lordships said this Act being authorized by statute—the particular Act being authorized by a particular statute—there could be no fault upon the company and therefore the case would not fall within the purview of article 1053 of the Civil Code. On the other hand there is a principle of our legislation, which exists in all legislation, and it is that nobody can be expropriated without an indemnity being paid to him. If a railway line is run across the country those whose lands are taken have a compensation fixed either by arbitration or otherwise. Their lands cannot be taken without an indemnity being paid to them, and also those whose lands are injuriously affected, whose lands in part are taken and whose lands are injuriously affected by the passing of a railway have a remedy. They are to be indemnified, but the difficulty, as far is I know the jurisprudence of the country, has been that every one cannot be indemnified for the passing of a railway unless a part of the land is taken in such a way that when a part of the land is taken not only should the party receive compensation for the land taken, but also compensation for the other part of the land which has been injuriously affected by the passing of the railway. If no part of the land is taken then a party has no right and cannot be compensated for the reason of being injuriously affected by the passing of a railway. For instance, here is land which has a barn on the line of railway. The railway company by operating its line sets fire to this barn. The owner of this property is expropriated just as much as if the company took his barn. But, the law does not give him any remedy. I think that this man should be compensated just as much as if his land, or barn, had been taken for the purpose of the railway and probably when the question comes to be studied in committee, a Bill can be drafted so that not only those whose lands are taken and injuriously affected by the passing of a railway may be compensated, but also those upon whose lands a railway does not pass, or whose lands are not taken, but whose lands are injuriously affected may also be compensated. It seems to me that there lies the remedy to meet the case, and that it would be only fair and equitable that such a person should be indemnified. On these lines compensation could be given and a proper remedy provided in such a case, as the circumstances should warrant.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Archives, $8,000.

Mr. CLANCY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to suggest to the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) that I think time would be gained by not going on with these estimates to-day. The hon. gentleman well knows the House has only been a very few days in session and that hon. members on neither side of the House have had any time whatever to consult the reports that I confess have been promptly brought down. I think we would gain time by giving a reasonable opportunity for hon. members on both sides of the House to consult the reports. These are important estimates and while I have no desire whatever to delay them I think we should have time to look somewhat into the reports.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon. Sydney Fisher). I may say, in the first place, that notice was given to the leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden, Halifax) last night that these estimates would be taken up to-day, and in the second place, I may say that the report of the department was laid on the Table of the House on Friday last, so that it has been in the hands of hon. members for three or four days. Of course, I have no desire at all to press hon. members opposite, or to debar them from every opportunity of discussing these estimates, or of getting all the information possible, but, I think, perhaps, that the business of the House would be unduly interfered with and delayed if the estimates are not taken up. If these estimates are not gone on with it practically means that none can be, because the estimates of the other departments are just in the same position. I do not see very well therefore how, with due consideration for the progress of the work of the session, we can delay taking up the estimates. I will ask the hon. gentleman to allow them to proceed, of course, with all necessary discussion which he and his friends wish to give to them.

Mr. CLANCY. I think there is a disposition on this side of the House to take as little time as is absolutley necessary to have some intelligent discussion. I hardly thought for a moment that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fisher) would urge, that the reports having been placed for three or four days in the hands of hon. members on this side of the House was a reason for proceeding at once. Unless they are more apt than I think hon. members of this House are, we will be able to have nothing like intelligent criticism. Time would be saved if a reasonable opportunity were given to members to look into these reports. We are in the early days of the session, and while I value the importance of doing some work each day, yet it would be better to have the criticism an intelligent one.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I fully appreciate the necessity for an intelligent understanding of the details of the department, but I would suggest with a view of expediting the business of parliament that there are many items which have never been the subject of very great criticism.

Mr. CLANCY. They might be now.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They might be now, and the hon. gentleman is fully within his rights in criticising them. However, the argument of the hon. gentleman amounts to the contention that under no circumstances can estimates be taken up early in the session, because the reports can only be laid upon the table of the House at the opening of the session. We went into Supply last week and no objection was taken. I do not think we should call a halt to-day and practically suspend the business of the House. I hope the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clancy) will appreciate the reasonableness of this suggestion. Should any controversial item come up, I will be glad to allow it to stand; and if there is any information which the hon. gentleman wishes and which I cannot supply at the spur of the moment I will be very much pleased to let the item stand until I get that information. If the hon. gentleman's contention is maintained, it would mean that no work would be taken up to-day and that would be rather unfortunate.

Mr. CLANCY. The members on both sides of the House should have a reasonable time for consulting these reports, and if the work of the House cannot go on by reason of no other business being ready that is the fault of the government. So far as I am concerned, and in order to facilitate business. I will give the minister notice in advance, so far as I can, of what information I may require so that it will be on hand when needed. I confess that I have not had time to open a book. When the minister says that these items usually have gone unchallenged, that is no argument, because reasons may present themselves this year why they should be sharply criticised.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The argument of my hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) means not merely that we should not proceed with these estimates, but that we should not proceed with any estimates, because his criticism would apply to all others.

Mr. CLANCY. I have not been discussing the other estimates. I speak particularly of these.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. But the same reasons given by the hon. gentleman will apply to all the other departments as well as to the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. CLANCY. They are good reasons.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If they are good reasons they should have been given at the beginning when we commenced Supply last week. Hon. gentlemen opposite, with the object of proceeding as rapidly as possible with the estimates, did not take that objection. The leader of the Opposition asked me last evening what estimates would come up to-day, and I told him that we would take the estimates of the Department of Agriculture. Every reasonable provision has been made to meet the wishes of hon. gentlemen opposite, and when the minister states that he will allow any controversial items to stand over until he can supply the information required, I think that ought to commend itself to the fairness of hon. gentlemen opposite.

Mr. CLANCY. Although there is no increase in this vote I hope the minister will give us some information as to the nature of the expenditure. There are some new members of the House who probably have given this only a passing notice.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am very happy indeed to meet the desire of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clancy). This vote is for the purpose of carrying out the work which has been entrusted to Mr. Brymner, Dominion Archivist. He issues every year an annual report dealing with the historical documents and incidents in the history of Canada. This report is considered by students, and by every one who is interested in the history of our country, to be of the utmost value. Numerous endorsations of this work have come to my predecessors as they have come to me. About half of the vote, roughly speaking, is expended to pay the salary of the Dominion Archivist and his small staff at Ottawa. A great deal of the work is done in Europe, and about $4,000 is expended in the investigation of works in the British Museum and the Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris, and in the transcription of documents relating to the history of Canada. The Archivist himself, from his knowledge of these libraries, indicates what works and documents ought to be copied, and we have in Paris an officer whose duty it is to search in the records there for papers and items connected with the early history of Canada. The expenditure is represented by the salary of that gentleman and the expense of copying in London and Paris. The work here is carried on by Dr. Brymner, with a clerk, a binder, and a young lady who answers letters and makes copies. We also have to buy standard periodicals to keep up the record from day to day, and occasionally books, which are available and useful in connection with Canadian history.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. For how many years has the copying of these documents been going on in London and Paris ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I could not state the exact time, but practically ever since the archivist has been at work. There was an assistant archivist for many years, a Mr. Marmette, who died some time ago, and I appointed as his successor Mr. Richard, shortly after coming into office. There was a slight interregnum during which there was no person in Paris, but the copying went on. When I came into office I found that there was a large mass of material which Mr. Marmette indicated ought to be copied. The work must have been going on for about 15 years.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. By this time I should think whole libraries might be copied.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Oh, no ; there are hundreds of thousands of volumes.

Mr. INGRAM. How many of these reports are circulated, and to whom are they given ? Does the department furnish them free to the different historical societies ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. This report is a supplement to the report of the Minister of Agriculture, and is printed by order of the House, as are all other documents which are laid on the Table. I could not say off-hand just how many are supplied to the department. The department has a certain number given to it, which the archivist distributes to certain scientific and educational bodies in the country regularly, and there are a number of copies available for persons who are interested in these subjects, and frequently apply for them.

Mr. INGRAM. The different historical societies would be very glad to receive this report, and if they are not supplied with them now, I think the department would do well to supply them.

Mr. TAYLOR. I would like to ask the minister what was the amount in the estimates for this service in the year 1895-6 ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. $6,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then, why has the amount been increased $2,000 in the last five years?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. More work has been done.

Mr. TAYLOR. More employment for friends of the government.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I may say that out of this $8,000 is paid the salary of the gentleman in Paris, whereas formerly it was paid out of the civil government contingencies. I think, speaking from memory, that he was paid $1,500.

Mr. CLANCY. Will the minister state to the committee how much is paid for each service ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. Richard is paid $1,400, Mr. Pennington, the binder, $804, Miss McKay, who is described as a stitcher, $400, and Miss Casey, a clerk, $600, making $3,204. The amount required for the London office is $4,000. That includes the expenditure in Paris, which goes through the High Commissioner's office. The purchase of periodicals and newspapers, binding, and some travelling expenses, make up $796. These items make up the $8,000.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman has not given us the expenditure for each service in the London office.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is entirely for copying, which is paid for as it is done at a certain rate per folio. There are four or five people in London and several in Paris. I have not the details of the amount paid to each. The items are brought in monthly from the High Commissioner's office, the money is sent over there, and the details are managed there.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. Is this copying done by Canadians appointed by the government here ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is done by people who have been copying in the libraries for years. In London it is done chiefly by women, and in Paris chiefly by men. I cannot give the names of the people employed in London, but they are people of London who are engaged there. I do not know whether they are Canadians, or English, or what they are.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think it is just as well that we should not hasten too rapidly over this item. It is a very interesting one, as is anything connected with the history of our country. I would like to learn from the minister how far down the copying of these records has proceeded—whether it has reached the beginning of the last century, or the middle of it. For my part, I have always regarded the archives as rather dry reading, and have spent very little time over them. I do not doubt the desirability of a proper and sufficient record of interesting historical facts being made and preserved in our vaults. I do not suppose it is the intention of the minister to continue the work from year to year down to the present time, because it seems to me that when you reach a certain period, the records which we have will be amply sufficient for the purpose ; or is it the purpose to continue this work from year to year in order to give persons employment and to spend a little more of the money of the tax-payers of this country ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I can assure the hon. gentleman that this work is not going on for any such purpose, but for the purpose of obtaining information which Dr. Brymner, the Dominion archivist, who has been at the head of this branch since its inception and, whose reputation is very high both inside and outside of Canada because of the work he has done, thinks it necessary to obtain. These documents are not available to Canadians ordinarily. I may refer to my annual report which states :

> The state papers for Lower Canada published in this report, including the years 1836 and 1837, contain the correspondence of the Earl of Gosford, who was sent out as the head of the commission to investigate grievances. Those for Upper Canada contain the final correspondence of Sir John Colborne, afterwards Lord Seaton, and the appointment of Sir F. B. Head, who succeeded him, with copies of dispatches addressed to him in 1835 and 1836.

The House will see, therefore, that the work which is covered by the report of this year deals chiefly with the troublous times of 1835-6-7, a time sufficiently removed to be called historic in the young life of this nation.

Mr. INGRAM. But there is very slight reference to these documents in the report, and members of the House and others can have but little idea of what those documents show. Would it not be better to have more extended account of these documents given in the report ? It would make a more bulky volume but it would give information in a form more satisfactory to the public.

Mr. CLANCY. Perhaps the minister could tell us what the instructions were that Dr. Brymner sent to the high commissioners to have these papers copied, or might, possibly, give us a copy of those instructions. As my hon. friend from East Elgin (Mr. Ingram) points out the report is so meagre that the reader cannot draw intelligent conclusions from it. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will be able to give that information and, if he has it, a copy of that report, that we may see what work is being done there. There is now in the neighbourhood of $4,000 spent on the London office; but, so far as anything disclosed in the report is concerned, there seems to be little explanation of it.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Of course, the report of my department does not contain this information; it is to be found in the report of the archivist, which is a supplement to the report of the department. Dr. Brymner's instructions to the people in London are of the ordinary nature of departmental instructions from the head of a branch to those under him. I might bring down the letters Dr. Brymner has written to the London office in the course of the year, but I fancy they would not be very instructive or interesting to the House. I know I would not care to read them myself. The hon. member for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram) speaks of the report of the archivist not being a summary of the documents, but I think, perhaps he did not apprehend what I tried to explain. The copying is not done for the report of the archivist. The documents are put upon the shelves of the archivist's office, and there they can be consulted by students. The report comprises a list of the documents and also, generally, papers on some particular subject—I mean articles taking up some particular phases or periods of our history. This conveys a great deal of information for the public; but students who wish to consult the documents are expected to visit the archivist's office and consult them there. It would be impossible to print all the papers that are copied; or, at least, it would make a large addition to the report each year and would greatly increase the cost of printing.

Mr. INGRAM. I have been spoken to on this subject by members of historical societies. It is of no particular advantage to many of the members of such societies to know that they can come here and consult the documents. Nor can these students obtain such information by consulting the reports as they are now compiled. But whether it would be wise to extend the report so as to cover, more or less the information I suggest, is a matter, it seems to me, worthy of consideration by the minister. It certainly would add to the practical value to the public of the report.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I will speak to the archivist on the subject.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Fisher) has stated that there has been a considerable increase since 1896. The expenses were about $6,000 in 1896, and they are about $8,000 now. I think the committee would like to know the reason of that increase—what portion of the service has been increased and what additional work is done.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. In reply to the hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor), I pointed out a few minutes ago—the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) could not have heard me—that, before 1896, the salary of one officer in Paris, then $1,500 a year, was paid out of civil government through my department, but it is now paid out of this vote. The salary now is $1,400, but paying it out of this vote, accounts for by far the greater part of the increase of $2,000. The rest is due to the fact that more work is done and a larger number of documents are being copied year by year.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. Though I have been asking for information about the archivist's branch, it must not be supposed that I am opposed to the expenditure made with the object of securing information bearing upon the history of our country. I read every report made by Dr. Brymner, and I regard the compilation that is brought down every year as a very important one. I approve of the efforts that are made to get at the documents lying at the archives both at London and at Paris, because they throw light upon the general history of our country, and also because they form part of our political history. These are most important documents and we read them with interest when they come to us. I can readily understand that they cannot all be published because they would be too voluminous and some are of much less importance than others. Still they are so classified that we can readily refer to them and get copies, if required for any special purposes. I would ask the hon. minister if the allowance of $1,400 to Mr. Edouard Richard in Paris is all he gets for his expenses and salary ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. Mr. Richard is certainly a very good man and very well qualified for the position, but he is not paid commensurately with the services he renders. I cannot understand how a man of his ability will remain in Paris for the paltry salary of $1,400 a year. I can speak more freely with regard to Mr. Richard perhaps than any other member of this House because he was the first opponent I had when I presented myself for election to the House of Commons, and I, therefore, cannot be charged with being biased in his favour by my political opinions. I believe him to be thoroughly qualified for the position and to be very poorly paid.

Patent Record, $12,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. There is an increase here of $3,000 over the estimate of 1895-6. How does the hon. gentleman account for that ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. By the increase in the number of patents and of publications. We are publishing all the trade marks and the list of the copyrights and this whole expenditure is for printing.

Mr. INGRAM. Is it the intention of the government to amend the Patent Act this session? Every session we are called on to pass legislation renewing patents that have lapsed, and if the government would amend the Patent Act we might be relieved from that work entirely.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. If I understand the hon. gentleman rightly, he wishes to have the Act amended in the direction of providing simpler machinery for the renewal of expired patents.

Mr. INGRAM. Yes.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Well, that question came up in the Committee on Private Bills and also in the House, and the expression of the House indicated clearly its desire to hold that power in its own hands and not delegate it to anybody else. The most frequent applications are in cases where the parties allowed the time to elapse within which they had the right to extend the life of their patent by paying the additional fees, and then apply to parliament to have that extension of life which the department is debarred from granting them through their own fault. I have constant application for such extensions but am absolutely powerless. If the government were to undertake to grant an extension by Order in Council, once the delay for granting it has expired, that would be of no effect, because it is distinctly contrary to the law. The parties have to apply to this House to pass a private Bill for that purpose, and the question which the hon. gentleman has put has frequently been discussed both in the Private Bills Committee and the House. Two years ago the question came up of amending the Act in the direction suggested. What I proposed was that after a patent had expired without any commercial use having been made of it, and the inventor subsequently found a chance of utilizing his invention, we should give to the Exchequer Court the power to reinstate such a patent under certain conditions. A Bill to that effect was submitted to a special committee and the committee failed to report on it, and I believe did so designedly. Under the circumstances, I felt that this House did not desire to delegate its power in this respect to any other body. On several other occasions also, both in the Private Bills Committee and in the House, it has been made clear that parliament does not wish to divest itself of this power.

Mr. BENNETT. In the event of a party applying for a patent and the examiner refusing to grant his request on the ground that it clashed with an already patented article, is there any appeal from his decision ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, to the minister.

Mr. BENNETT. Have any such appeals been made ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not remember any particular one, but there have been two or three since I have been in office.

Mr. BENNETT. When were these two or three made ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I cannot give the dates. I think there was one last year, but am speaking only from memory.

Mr. BENNETT. I presume that in such cases both parties—those making the application and those opposing it—are represented by counsel.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. Were the counsel members of the House ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not remember, but I do not think so. I am certain that the counsel were not members.

Mr. BENNETT. Were the parties who appeared before the Minister to argue the cases members of this House ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No.

Mr. BENNETT. Does the hon. gentleman recollect any cases which, if not dealt with by himself, were dealt with by an officer of the department who afterwards reported to him, and in which members of this House did appear on behalf of the parties interested.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I remember no such case. The usual course is for the deputy minister, who is the assistant commissioner of patents, to go into the details and prepare a memo. for me. Then when the case finally comes before me, I take that memo. and hear the case. What occurs before the deputy minister I am not aware of in all cases.

Mr. INGRAM. Are not all those cases, cases which have been legislated upon since by the House of Commons or Senate ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not think so. I do not carry in my mind the exact cases. There were three or four, but I could not mention one of them.

Mr. INGRAM. Has it never been suggested to the hon. gentleman that a period of eighteen years was sufficiently long and that there should be no extension after that time ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There is no extension after that time. The only proposal was to give power to increase the time.

Mr. INGRAM. Has there been no application to have that part of the Act wiped out which allows the parties, after twelve years have elapsed, to have the term extended ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not think so.

Mr. INGRAM. Once the term elapses there is no power to grant an extension ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The only power is the one we have now, of granting an extension by special Act of parliament. There has never been any proposal to legislate that that should not be done, and if we did so legislate parliament could the next day legislate to do it.

Mr. INGRAM. There are many cases where a patent lapses, and some parties may have acquired certain rights after the lapse of a patent. Is it not sometimes possible for the parties who have acquired those rights to suffer an injustice ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They can come before parliament with a private Bill, and parliament can protect them if it sees fit. As I pointed out to the hon. gentleman a few minutes ago, the parliament of Canada has retained that power in its own hands, and not delegated it to anybody else. That is the law to-day, and I do not think there is any disposition to change it.

Mr. CASGRAIN. I desire to say to the hon. Minister of Agriculture that in the course of my experience I have become convinced that our American cousins have not a very good opinion of our patent office as it is now constituted. I do not for a moment wish to throw any blame on the officers who are there now, and who I know are doing their duty. But I think the law so far as I can see should be amended so as to be assimilated as much as possible to what I consider the most perfect patent law in existence, and that is the law of the United States. In the matter of examinations, for instance, the safe-guards which are given by their statutes to patents are much better than the safe-guards which are given patents by our laws. I think that the manner and mode of examination here should be improved, and the number of examiners should be increased if possible. I suggest to the hon. gentleman that it would be expedient now, not only to amend our patent law, but probably to make a consolidation of it, and change it so as to make it resemble as much as possible the law of the United States. If this were done not only would our patents in the United States have greater authority, but our counsel and courts who are engaged in patent cases could get more assistance, more knowledge, from the decisions of American courts than we are able to get now. Of course the United States are noted for the great number of inventions which come out every day. The American people have a genius for invention, the patent office in Washington is flooded with patents every day. Their patent officers have to pass upon numberless patents, and of course their experience is greater than the experience of our men here. Their courts also have to pronounce upon more patent cases than our courts, and the experience derived by their courts and counsel would be of great advantage to us if our law resembled the law of the United States more than it does. In my opinion the patent law of the United States is superior to the patent law of England; and if our law could be made more like the law of the United States it would be to the advantage of patentees, and to the advantage of the courts and the profession in general in Canada.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am a little surprised to hear the hon. gentleman say that our law is so inferior to that of the United States. As a matter of fact it is largely similar. I am not a lawyer myself, but I have to discuss these questions a good deal with patent solicitors, and have compared the American patent law with our own pretty closely. I would not like to acknowledge that our law is so far inferior to their law. I do not think that is the opinion of most patent solicitors who apply to my department. When our law was amended some years ago it was largely modelled on the law of the United States. The system of patent examination of Canada is much the same as that of the United States, not at all the same as it is in England where a totally different principle obtains.

So far as the examination itself is concerned, I may say we have had quite a number of instances within the last few years where patents have been issued in the United States to patentees, and when applications came before us here our examiners have found that the patents had been anticipated, and that the issuance of those patents in the United States was really a mistake, and they were not issued here because they were not novel, and because the examiners here had really found anticipation of the patent which examiners in the United States had failed to find. At the time the patent was issued in the United States there was anticipation, the same anticipation of that patent which was found here by our examiners. I may say, however, frankly, that we have not got as large a force of examiners in Canada, in proportion, as they have in the United States. I have been adding to that force, I am glad to say the House has been generous, and I think wise, in allowing me to add to that force, and we have been trying very hard to catch up with the arrears of patent applications which I found when I came into the office. During the last few years there have been a great many more patents issued than previously. I think this last year there were 5,000 patents issued, and when I first came into the office there were but little more than 3,000. We have added fully 50 per cent to the number of patents issued during that period. I may say that during this last calendar year we have issued about 40 or 50 per cent of the patents for which there were applications coming before the office. But unfortunately at the beginning of the year there was a considerable number of patents in arrears, and we have not been able to obliterate that arrearage.

I am adding constantly to the staff of examiners. But when a young man comes in at first as patent examiner it takes him nearly six months before he can become effective, and sometimes longer. Generally I find that the first six months after a young man enters upon the work of patent examiner, he does not render much aid in deciding upon patents, although it prepares him to take his place after that time, and to aid the office effectively. The consequence is that the increase of the effective force of the office has been slow. Patent examining is a profession by itself. You can hardly expect any man outside the office, unless he is a thoroughly equipped attorney for patents, or a patent solicitor, to do the work of an examiner. It takes six months and sometimes eight or nine, before a young man coming in is able to do much effective office work. I am glad to say that nearly all the young men who have been brought into the office have proved effective, and in the course of a little time have aided very much. I think I shall have to add still more to the effective force, because we have not yet caught up with the arrears, although we have come much nearer to it than we were a few years ago. I have hopes of being able gradually to obliterate the arrears and to accomplish that end without having to add much to the staff, because, after having obliterated the arrears, I would not like to dismiss any of the men, as I think that would be hardly fair and hardly wise. I may add further that in choosing patent examiners, I take those who are university graduates, who have had a thorough training in some scientific course, either chemistry, or mechanics, or engineering, or electricity. In that way I have secured an excellent class of men who are eminently suited for the work, and as they gain a little experience and more practice, the work of the office will be very much better done than it ever was before. I may add in this connection that at a meeting held by the Manufacturers' Association in Toronto a few months ago where the patent office was discussed, some suggestions were thrown out for improvements, suggestions which I was glad to receive, and some very complimentary words were used in regard to improvement in the efficiency of the examining force.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). I would like to ask the hon. minister if it is necessary for a patentee to produce a model of his patent?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, it has not been necessary for about twelve years.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. minister said that he had increased the staff. If the hon. gentleman will turn to D—2 of the Auditor General's Report he will find that $4,821.48 was paid as follows :—

Classifying all Canadian patents and comparing drawings of same for classification and for exchange with the United States in return for their patents, to be paid notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $4,821.48.

Will the hon. gentleman tell the committee how many are employed in the department, the salary of each, the number of new men the hon. gentleman brought in as experts, as I think, he has told the House in the past, several young men were brought in for technical work, and the number of patents exchanged with the United States ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I think part of that work comes in under another item farther on. I am perfectly willing to give the hon. gentleman the information and only hope he will not ask me to repeat it when we come to the other item, No. 47, for classifying all Canadian patents, preparing drawings and so on.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman will see that there are two items. There is a sum put under item 87, but here he has a service for the 'Patent Record' in the estimates amounting to $12,000, and there is an expenditure under the same heading in the Auditor General's Report of $4,821.48.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That is out of the vote of $5,000 which is down below in item 87.

Mr. CLANCY. I have reference to the expenditure of $4,821.48.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That comes out of vote No. 87, which we will get to in a few minutes, and which amounts to $5,000. It does not come out of the vote for the 'Patent Record' at all.

Mr. CLANCY. Then why does it appear here ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We are now discussing item No. 80, being the vote for the 'Patent Record.' Of course, I can give the hon. gentleman all the information, but it will come more appropriately under item 87, which is a special vote of which that $4,821.48 is the detail.

Collection and compilation of criminal statisics (R.S.C., chap. 60), $1,800.

Mr. CLANCY. Has the vote been exhausted which was given last year ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, this vote is exhausted every year. It is the vote which covers the payment to a lot of local officers all over the Dominion for giving us criminal statistics. You will find it detailed in the Auditor General's Report. The money is paid in small sums to secretary-treasurers and officers of courts and people like that all over the country.

Mr. CLANCY. How many are there of these ? I know no more dangerous thing than a service which stands still. It seems to be seized with dry rot. It is incredible that an efficient service should go on from year to year with the same sum of money being voted for it. I have no conception whatever that an important service would pass this House year after year, the same vote being given and that it should go on without the public or this House having any definite knowledge of it. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will tell us how many officers there are in receipt of pay for the information contained in the report, how much each of them is receiving, and who directs that work in his department, or whether the hon. gentleman gives it any personal supervision or not.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clancy) will look up page D—10, Auditor General's Report, he will see the commencement of the list. The list goes over pages 11 and 12 and nearly half way down page 13. I will not undertake to read all these names or to count them. Opposite each name is the amount which is paid. This work has been done for years under the supervision of the statistician, Mr. George Johnson, and has been carried out in the same way. I have not the details as to the exact number of cents paid to each individual, but the same principle has been carried out and if a change is to be made it will have to be made by practically wiping out the collection of these criminal statistics. I confess that I have not myself gone into the value of these criminal statistics. I found the system in vogue when I came into office and I was informed that it was useful to statisticians, lawyers and others who are particularly interested in criminals and I left it in their hands.

Statistical Year-book, $4,000.

Mr. BENNETT. Would the hon. gentleman inform us what the Statistical Year-book cost in 1896 ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I think it was about $4,000 in 1896.

Mr. INGRAM. Have you increased the number in circulation ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR. I notice that the two items for the services that Mr. Geo. Johnson, the statistician, has charge of, that is the item for the collection of criminal statistics, and the item for the publication of the Year-book are the same now as they were in 1895 and 1896. This work certainly has increased in proportion to all the other services rendered by the hon. gentleman's department, but notwithstanding this fact, there is an increase in every other branch of from 50 to 100 per cent, while the votes for these services are not increased.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. When I came into office in 1896 I found that expenditure. I found also that I was able by reducing the volume of the Statistical Year-book I was able to reduce the expenditure and if the hon. gentleman will go to the years 1898-1899, 1899-1900, he will find that we only spent $3,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. $3,200.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. $3,000 in 1899-1900. Last year it was $4,000, and it is $4,000 again this year.

Mr. CLANCY. Will the hon. gentleman tell us how the distribution is made ? I understand that four copies are given to each member of this House, so many copies go to the Senate and certain institutions of learning, ministers of the gospel, and so on. Will the hon. gentleman tell how the distribution is made and in what proportion besides the distribution to members of this House as well as the whole number published ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. Johnson has a list of institutions and people who seem to be interested in the statistics comprised in this book. That list is occasionally gone over and occasionally added to. The increased number has been owing to the fact that recently, by request of this House, we have established a regular distribution to members of the House and the Senate. This book is not distributed in the same way as printed matter printed by order of this House. It is paid for by the vote of my department. Ordinary reports which are distributed wholesale to the members of the House of Commons are paid for by the House of Commons and are under the control of the House of Commons Printing Committee. This Year-book is not, but notwithstanding that we are asking in this vote a sum of money to print it and to distribute a certain number to every member of the House of Commons and every senator. The others are distributed to public libraries, mechanics' institutes, to some teachers, and to those who have asked for it. The list is in Mr. Johnson's hand, but I have no doubt I could get it. It would be very voluminous.

Mr. CLANCY. How many copies are issued ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Last year 5,000 English and 1,200 French. Four copies are sent to each member and senator. making about 1,200 copies, and the rest are distributed generally.

Mr. CLANCY. In what proportion ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I cannot say.

Mr. CLANCY. Then the item had better stand.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There is only one copy sent to any particular body. Fifty copies are sent to the High Commissioner in London, and a considerable number are distributed on personal application.

Mr. CLANCY. My reason for asking is that some persons, for unaccountable reasons, seem to be in possession of the Year-book, while others seem unable to get it. There should be some uniform distribution and some system adopted. I would ask the item to stand.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I will certainly consent to that, but I may say that I do not think that any application for the Year-book has been refused so long as there was a book available in the department. There has been no picking and choosing. There has been considerable demand for back numbers, but the English edition for 1893, 1894, 1895 and 1896 is exhausted. There is now a greater demand for the French edition than in former years, but there are no copies of the French edition left for 1891, 1893, 1894 and 1895. I repeat that no applicant has been refused so long as there was a copy of the book left.

Mr. CLANCY. My object is to arrive at some uniform system of distribution, and with that object in view I want the information.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Would it suit if I got a report from the statistician and sent it to the hon. gentleman ?

Mr. CLANCY. The minister is very anxious to get his estimates through and he should have all reasonable information ready to give us in the House.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Very well, I will let it stand.

Mr. WILSON. The Year-book is a very valuable document and it would be more valuable still and much more appreciated if it could be published earlier in the year. To get the information it contains, requires research in many other public documents, and when we get that information in the Year-book it is so old that it is comparatively valueless.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman himself gives the reason for the Year-book not being published earlier. The gentlemen who compile the Year-book have to go through the blue-books, which they cannot obtain until they are compared and finished, although as a matter of fact they get them before they are published. The blue-books of the last fiscal year are not generally ready to be placed in the hands of the statistician until the beginning of the year that follows. Last year the book was out very considerably earlier than it ever had been before, and the same will be true of this year.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria). I am not going to raise a question about the figures, but I think our Year-book should be bound so that it may compare favourably with the year-books of the other colonies. The Year-book of New Zealand and the Australian colonies is well bound and presents a very pleasing appearance. I do not think that any member of this House will ever go through all the weary details of figures that we find in our Year-book. The practice in other countries is to give a chapter on important subjects such as butter and cheese-making, wool products, mining interests, agricultural interests, the fishing industry, and interesting information about the history and habits and progress of the natives. If some able writers in Canada were to treat on these different subjects in our Year-book, it would be of more value to ourselves and of far greater value when it is distributed abroad. I throw out these suggestions in the hope that the minister may be able to adopt them.

Mr. HOLMES. My objection to this vote is that the amount is too small. Last year the discussion took the same trend, and I urged that the item should be increased, because I think the Year-book is so valuable that the more we can distribute it the better for the country. I would be glad if the minister could see his way to increase the vote in future years.

Mr. CLANCY. I would expect an objection to this from the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright). He worried this book for many years in this House on the ground that it was unreliable and of no value. If the hon. gentleman is not too modest now, I expect that he will object to further expenditure on the Year-book; unless indeed he has changed his mind with regard to this, as he has with regard to everything else.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. The hon. gentleman is slightly mistaken. I have not changed my mind in the slightest degree, as he will possibly find out before the session is over. With respect to the Year-book, I think there has been considerable improvement in it since it came under the management of my hon. friend (Mr. Fisher).

Mr. MACLEAN. Then the speech of last night is to have no effect.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. Your speech.

Mr. MACLEAN. Oh, no.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. I had not the pleasure of hearing it, but I understand it did great credit to my hon. friend's acquaintance with Scripture.

Mr. MACLEAN. Hear, hear.

Item allowed to stand.

General statistics, $3,200.

Mr. INGRAM. What is this for ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. This has appeared in the estimates for many years. It is to pay temporary clerks engaged on statistical work ; but these clerks are about as permanent as any clerks in the department. Mr. Johnson finds work for them to do all the time.

Mr. CLANCY. Who is Mr. Washington, whose name appears in the Auditor General's Report as having received $722.31 for 124 days' services and for railway fares and other expenses ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. Washington is a gentleman who was employed to investigate certain statistics in regard to the trend of land values last year and the year before.

Mr. CLANCY. What was the nature of the service ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The service was to investigate and find out the trend of land values in the country parts of Canada.

Mr. CLANCY. Does the hon. gentleman mean to say that any person engaged for so short a time could give any definite or even approximate idea of land values ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Oh, yes.

Mr. CLANCY. Well, he must be a very clever gentleman. It is utterly imposible, as the hon. gentleman knows, for any person to obtain any fair notion of land values in the country in so limited a period. If we are to have statistical information of this kind, it ought to be reliable. I am not complaining of the item, but one can see at a glance that the information obtained under such circumstances must be so very limited as to be of no great value. Has he made a report ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Oh, yes. While I appreciate what the hon. gentleman says that a complete investigation of the trend of land values would be a very valuable affair, and would extend over a long period, what was done was this. Certain counties in the older provinces were taken, which were supposed to be fairly representative, and the registry offices of those counties were examined to show the sales of land at different periods, and in that way a fair criterion was obtained of what was generally the case throughout the country.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman knows that it is not a new thing in this House to cite the increase or decrease of land values as showing the failure or the success of the existing government. I suppose the hon. gentleman has in his possession the report of Mr. Washington, showing the number of registry offices examined throughout Canada.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, and I shall be very glad to lay the report on the Table if I have not already done so. I am rather under the impression that I laid it on the Table last session.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought a good deal of this information was got from the Ontario Bureau of Industries.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The information which we got was not obtained there.

Mr. SPROULE. I know that when it was proposed to supply these general statistics, that was one of the sources from which they were expected to be obtained, and the reason was that the work could be done cheaply.

Mr. INGRAM. Is this Mr. Washington provided with any transportation by the department ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. His expenses were paid when he travelled.

Mr. INGRAM. I see that his railway fares amounted to $54.67. It would be impossible for a man to examine the registry offices of Ontario for that amount. He must have relied upon correspondence.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman misunderstands me. There were only some registry offices selected.

Mr. INGRAM. But I doubt whether he could do that in the province of Ontario alone at so small an expense. Were these inquiries confined to one province ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, I think he went to three counties in Ontario, to one or two in Quebec, and to one or two in the maritime provinces. I know he was in Prince Edward Island, and I think he examined a county in Nova Scotia.

Mr. INGRAM. Could the hon. minister state the counties he examined ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I could not off-hand. The report contains that information.

Mr. INGRAM. Because I think it would be unfair to the counties which were not visited. I know that some counties flatter themselves as being the garden of Ontario. If only three were picked out, it would not be a very good way of obtaining reliable information.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Carleton county, I know, was one.

Mr. WILSON. Who selected the counties which he was to visit and report upon ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I did myself.

Mr. INGRAM. At whose recommendation was this gentleman engaged ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not know that he was recommended by anybody. I think I proposed the idea myself.

Mr. INGRAM. Who is this Mr. Washington ? Is he a relative of the late George Washington ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I cannot say. I never looked into his genealogy.

Mr. TAYLOR. Has he been permanently appointed ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, only for particular work.

Mr. TAYLOR. Where did he reside before he came to Ottawa ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I could not say.

Mr. TAYLOR. Did he simply come to Ottawa and ask for the position and obtain it without showing any qualification ? Was he recommended by Mr. Johnson the statistician ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not think so.

Mr. BENNETT. The hon. minister says that the inspiration to appoint such an officer came from himself. As it was he who inspired the idea, he must have known who this gentleman was and where he came from. Did he come from the hon. gentleman's own riding ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, he did not. I never knew the gentleman until I met him here at Ottawa and do not know where he came from.

Mr. BENNETT. Are we to understand that he was a casual visitor who dropped in on the minister just as the inspiration came to him, just as the minister conceived the idea of appointing such an official, and having dropped on the minister at the phsycological moment, got the appointment?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. Washington is a gentleman who has been engaged for years in statistical investigation. When I first met him we had a discussion on statistical work. I believe he was at one time in the press gallery, but I did not inquire particularly into his antecedents.

Mr. BENNETT. Was he on the Montreal 'Herald' ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not think he ever was connected with the Montreal 'Herald,' and I cannot remember who introduced him to me, but I have known him a good many years and have frequently discussed statistical work with him.

Mr. COCHRANE. When was he in the press gallery ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not know. Some years ago.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman seems rather hazy about this appointment of this mythical gentleman who bears a very distinguished name. He does not know who introduced him or how he came to know him. All he remembers is that Mr. Washington was engaged in statistical work. Where was he engaged in such work and how ? Was it under Mr. Johnson ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No.

Mr. CLANCY. Did Mr. Johnson recommend his appointment ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not think he did.

Mr. CLANCY. Well, this man is putting into the statistical Year-book information utterly worthless as the hon. gentleman must admit himself, and there cannot fail to be a lurking suspicion in the House that Mr. Washington, although he may be a very estimable gentleman, was, in a party sense, a lame duck who had to be taken care of. I might venture to guess that Mr. Washington will disclose in his report a very extraordinary advance in land values since the hon. gentleman came into power.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Naturally.

Mr. CLANCY. Can the hon. gentleman give any other reason for the appointment ?

Mr. BLAIN. His appointment was about the time of the general elections.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. Washington began the work about three years ago. It was rather intermittent.

Mr. BENNETT. Has the hon. minister ever read any of Mr. Washington's tracts on free trade ? I am informed that he was a gentleman of a literary turn of mind and that he published in the days of old tracts on free trade. Did the hon. gentleman ever read them ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I never did. Perhaps I did not need the enlightenment.

Mr. GANONG. Will the hon. minister tell his nationality ? This government has been appointing United States citizens to office and the name is very suggestive of that citizenship.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I should say he is an Englishman from what I have seen of him.

Mr. SPROULE. The information given in this statistical record must of necessity be very unreliable. Every one knows that the differences in value among different counties in Ontario are so great that you could never get a fair approximate estimate by taking only three centres. In some counties around Toronto land is worth $100 per acre, and in other counties it is worth only from $10 to $40 per acre. You can scarcely find two counties in which the values are alike. In some they are very high and in others very low, and to strike an average from three counties, and give that as an average of the whole, is absurd.

Item allowed to stand.

Aid to agricultural societies, $7,000.

Mr. CLANCY. That is not a large sum. What is the nature of the service ? It is a service which I think ought to be increased.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. This money is for the purpose of aiding agricultural societies in the North-west Territories. Ordinarily these societies are supported by the provincial government, but as the North-west Territory has no provincial government, this government many years ago stepped in and granted this money. It is paid through the agency of the territorial government, to the different societies according to their membership. The amount is distributed among 23 societies.

Mr. CLANCY. Is there any increase in the number of agricultural societies ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The local authorities there have been rather hoping to decrease the number of agricultural societies by getting two or three to join together and so make a stronger organization. The same amount of money has been paid out to societies actually fulfiling certain conditions required, mainly with regard to membership.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. minister knows better than I can explain to him that that country is growing rapidly and that agriculture is its chief interest. This item, it seems to me, is entirely inadequate for the important service for which it is intended. It is a mere beggarly sum for such a service. If the people there prefer to consolidate their societies, the result, no doubt, will be commendable as making the organizations much stronger. But that is no reason for voting so small a sum for this most important work. I, for one, would be prepared to support the hon. minister in vastly increasing it.

Mr. WILSON. Would the hon. minister tell us in what proportions this money is distributed ? Some societies seem to get much more than others.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The money is distributed in proportion to the membership of the several societies.

Mr. WILSON. Are these societies on a basis of paid membership ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They must have a certain paid membership—I think the number is fifty—before they can be accepted as efficient societies under this vote.

Mr. LANCASTER. How does the hon. minister get the information on which the payments to societies are based ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That detail is managed by the Agriculture Department of the Territories. The societies must send to that department a statement of their membership before they can receive any money.

Experimental farms, $80,000.

Mr. CLANCY. I would ask the hon. minister to allow that item to stand. It is a very large item and involves a great deal.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Very well.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Before we pass from that item, I would like to say to the Minister of Agriculture that, when it comes up for further consideration, I intend to direct attention to the necessity of making experiments in the North-west Territories in the growing of beet root for sugar purposes.

Item allowed to stand.

Printing and distributing of reports and bulletins of farms, $4,000.

Mr. CLANCY. How many of these reports are sent out, and what is the number printed ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. This is a special vote, which is practically added to the Experimental Farm vote so as to enable the farms to put out a large number of bulletins for the information of farmers from time to time.

Mr. INGRAM. I understand that if names are supplied by hon. members to the department the parties whose names are thus given will be supplied with bulletins.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There is a list at the Central Experimental Farm of something like 50,000 names of persons, to all of whom these bulletins are sent. That list we try to keep up to date as much as possible. Anybody who asks, can have his name put on that list. Members of the House frequently send in names.

Mr. TAYLOR. I notice that, in the estimates of 1895-6, this item of printing of bulletins and distribution of seed grains, trees and shrubs amounts to only $2,000. The hon. minister now asks for $4,000. How does this increase come about ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am not aware of any increase in this item, and am surprised to hear what the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) says. I cannot but think that he is in error. Of course, I have not the estimates of 1895-6 before me.

Mr. TAYLOR. I have them here and will send them to the hon. minister.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I confess I cannot explain the point. I am pretty certain that when I came into office this item was $4,000. The estimates the hon. gentleman has sent me are those of 1895-6, and the increase may have been made the year I came into office.

Mr. CLARKE. Where is the printing done ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. At the Printing Bureau—all of it.

Mr. SPROULE. There was an arrangement some years ago under which every member of a farmers' institute received these bulletins. Is that continued ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That arrangement never existed.

Mr. SPROULE. I feel sure it did, for I have attended meetings at which the speakers sent out by the government urged those present to join farmers institutes, giving this as an inducement.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) is thinking of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Mr. SPROULE. No, of both, I know that on several occasions a number joined the institute for this very reason. They were told that they would receive not only the bulletins of the Experimental Farm at Guelph, but those of the Dominion Experimental Farms as well.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I dare say the hon. gentleman is quite correct as to what was said. I know that Ontario speakers frequently talked in that way; and, whenever lists of names were sent in those names were added to the list at the Experimental Farm. But, frequently, large numbers of the names sent in were already on our list. Neither since my time nor before, has it been the rule to put the names of members of farmers' institutes or any local societies, ipso facto, on our list. It has been found, as a general rule, that these names are already on our list. But if any of these members ask to be put on our list they are put on individually.

Mr. SPROULE. Our whole membership list was sent in.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That list would be compared with the list at the farm, and any names not found there would be added.

Mr. SPROULE. I want to know what other distribution is made of the farm report. This only refers to the bulletins, as I understand, in connection with the Experimental Farm. But there is an agricultural report and an Agricultural Committee report.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The farm has nothing to do with these, the House deals with them. This vote is simply for the printing of the bulletins, and for the cost of distribution of the bulletins and and also of the report. But this does not pay for the printing of the report. The report that is laid on the Table is printed by order of the House. This $4,000 pays for sending out about 50,000 copies. When you come to mail 50,000 copies of a pamphlet, or a volume as thick as this, it costs something.

Mr. CLARKE. Why is that not done at the Bureau ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The farm has the list, and the work has always been done there.

Mr. CLARKE. Could not the work be done more expeditiously at the Bureau ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not think so. It is better done under the supervision of the farm officers. They are the people who have to make up the lists, and to correct them, and if the distribution was done at the Bureau they would have to be constantly sending corrections to the Bureau. It would be a very awkward arrangement.

Mr. SPROULE. Am I correct in understanding that this only applies to the bulletin ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It applies to the printing of the bulletin, also to the distribution and mailing of the same.

Mr. TAYLOR. What about seed grain and shrubs ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That is paid for out of the $80,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Probably the minister could inform us as to the mode of sending these out from the farm. How are these reports sent out from the farm for which an expenditure of $4,000 is asked here ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. In the first place the great bulk of this money is spent for printing the bulletin, and the rest of it is spent to pay people for mailing it, men who mail not only the bulletin, but the report. There are 50,000 odd copies of the report and 50,000 odd copies of each bulletin sent out. I do not mean to say that every bulletin is sent out to that number, but the ordinary bulletins which apply to farmers generally are sent out to the number of over 50,000. They have a printed list like that of a newspaper, and each name is cut off the list and put on by a machine which is used in the office of the farm.

Mr. CLARKE. From information I have obtained I am rather strengthened in the opinion that if these documents were sent to the Bureau with the lists, the work could be done there much more expeditiously and more economically. If the hon. gentleman will inquire into the method of large newspaper offices sending out their papers, he will find that persons employed in that work become expert.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is not likely anybody could be more expert than the men at the farm who are doing this work. They send out every year from 300,000 to 400,000 copies. They are practically engaged in that work the year round, and they are as likely to be expert as anybody the hon. gentleman could find. They employ the same system as is employed in newspaper offices, although of course they do not send out as many copies as large city newspapers.

Mr. CLARKE. How many men are employed at this work ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Two.

Mr. SPROULE. How is this list of the report kept up from year to year ? Is it revised periodically ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is revised not only from year to year, but constantly. A notice is sent to every postmaster in the country asking him to notify the farm when any of these reports or bulletins fail to reach the person to whom they are addressed, that is to say, if they are not called for or refused. It is almost unknown that any are refused, but people who die or remove from place to place fail to call for their reports, and postmasters are requested by special notice to inform the Bureau whenever that occurs, and then the name is stricken off the list. In addition, we constantly get reminders from people about their reports, and correspondents of the farm frequently ask us to replace some names by others. The result is that changes of address are constantly taking place. We are always glad to receive such information from the members of parliament or others.

Mr. MONK. Does this item cover the cost of printing the departmental report ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It has nothing to do with it.

Mr. SPROULE. A system was adopted a few years ago which I thought was a very good one in connection with the distribution of these reports and bulletins. A copy of the list was sent to each member of the House, and he was asked to go over it and revise it according to his knowledge of the persons on the list. In looking over the list in my riding I found a good many changes had to be made. I think that with all the means the minister is taking to keep the list correct, he will still find that many of these reports are sent to people who are dead or have left the country. It ought to be revised in some other way from time to time.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We are doing that constantly, but unfortunately a good many members of parliament do not take the trouble to help us.

Mr. MONK. Has the departmental report been printed at the Bureau this year ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, it always has been.

Classifying all Canadian patents, and preparing drawings of same for classification and exchanged with the United States in return for their patents, to be paid notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $5,000.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman promised to give us some information as to the number of clerks employed, the salaries paid, the number of exchanges made with the United States, and so on. I would like him to explain a number of items here, and first I will ask his attention to the item of $4,-821.48 on page D—2 of the Auditor General's Report, and to another item of $9,900 on page D—10.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. What is the other item ?

Mr. CLANCY. The first is D—2 and the second D—10.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They are the same item. The one at D—10 contains the details of the one at D—2.

Mr. CLANCY. Ah, but it is more ; one is $9,000 and the other is $4,000.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. One is $4,821.48. This is the only item in this vote, and the details of that are at page D—10, under the heading of 'Classification of Patents'.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman will see that the principal cost, here, at D—10, is for lithographing and printing, while the other is paid under the head of 'Classification' and amounts to $4,821.48.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is the same work. Classification requires lithographing and printing. The practise is this ; we had 60 odd thousand patents in the department which were not classified in any way. They were filed on shelf after shelf without classification. The result was that when an application came in for a patent, the patent examiner had to trust to his memory, or to his general knowledge, to find any patent which he thought might clash with that of the application. I found that at Washington there was a very good classification ; that is to say patents were divided into general classes and these again into several classes. I have not the technical knowledge to describe the method employed, but hon. gentlemen can quite understand how mechanical patents would be in one class, which would be divided again into a class containing the different classes of machinery, the chemical class, the electrical class and so on. In a report made by the examiners of that day, I was requested to make a classification of Canadian patents as being a necessary thing for the easy and proper investigation of every new application. I explained that item at the time I first asked for this vote, and I set the most experienced patent examiner, Mr. Caron, at that work. He has been at it ever since and he has made progress to the extent, speaking from memory, of having completed about three-quarters of the work. In that connection we found it was necessary for two reasons to take photographs and have duplicate copies of the plans, or designs, or drawings of the patents which had been applied for and in that way we were obliged to take photographs of these old patents and these are to be put into folios in the classification. A great deal of this work has been work of a photographing or lithographing nature. In this connection I would say that at the same time we were doing this we were exchanging with the Washington authorities our classification for theirs. On the occasion of the visit of the deputy commissioner of patents, Mr. Scarth, an arrangement was made with the Washington people by which they were to send us copies of their classification and we were to send them copies of ours. The Washington classification is the one that is most needed by our patent examiners of all classifications because, in a great many instances, I think in about three-quarters of the instances, patents applied for here are also applied for in Washington, and when a man applies for a patent here it is more necessary for our examiners to find out whether it has been anticipated in Washington than to find out whether it has been anticipated in any other foreign country. We therefore arranged not only to take photographs for our own use here but also to send two copies to Washington in exchange for which we were to have copies of their classifications. I regret to say that recently the authorities of the Washington patent office have ceased to send their classification. They kept it up for a while, then they began to drop off little by little and quite lately they have told me that they cannot longer continue it as they have not a sufficient vote to enable them to make that expenditure. I was surprised at this, I was very much disappointed indeed, because it was a distinct, although an informal arrangement, made with them. They carried it out for two or three years and it has been of very great use to us but unfortunately they gradually dropped off. I inquired of the commissioner of patents there officially in regard to the matter and he has informed me that he was no longer able to continue the arrangement. Still, we go on with our own classification and I think it will take fully another year to finish all the arrears of patents which have never been classified before. There will always be a little of this work going on in the classification of the 5,000 or 6,000 patents which are issued every year. Of course, they are classified as they are issued. This is the reason why we have to pay out money for paper, photographing and so on.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman has raised a very important question respecting foreigners who are seeking patents in Canada. If I am rightly informed the life of a patent in Canada is the life of that patent in a foreign country, say the United States. For instance, if a patent expires in five years in the United States I understand that the life of that patent will not extend beyond that time in Canada. I am speaking now generally rather from hearsay than from any explicit information I have myself. If there be anything in what I have just said, the hon. gentleman will see, as he has seen long ago, no doubt, the importance of being furnished by the United States with all the information that will enable the office in Canada to place that limit that I understand is already placed on an American patent; namely, that when it expires in the country where it originated, it expires in Canada. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will state whether I am correct in the information I have given in regard to it.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is true that a patent expires in Canada when it expires in a foreign country ipso facto. As a rule we have patents here issued almost simultaneously with those of the United States. A patent cannot be issued here one year, I think it is, after it is issued anywhere else.

Mr. WILSON. What regulation is there in the United States with reference to that?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I cannot give any information off-hand about the United States law, but I think it is about the same as ours. The actual time allowed may be a little different. As a matter of fact the life of a patent in the United States is seventeen years and in this country it is eighteen years. If you were to get a patent in the United States to-day it would expire 17 years from to-morrow, and if you were to get a patent in Canada to-day, it would expire 18 years from to-morrow, but if it expired in the United States at the end of 17 years, it would expire here also.

Mr. CLANCY. How does the office in Canada manage, since the American patent office has refused, or neglected, to furnish the classification, for the office in Canada must to a very great extent be in ignorance of the time at which a patent was taken out in the United States?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The classification is not a record of patents, or anything of that kind. The classification is for the purpose of facilitating the search by the examiners of old patents so as to see whether a new application has been anticipated or has been already patented. We have the record of all the patents issued in the United States. It comes to us and it has always come to us. We have all the records of the United States patent office in our office, and therefore we have available the exact date of every patent issued in the United States and consequently we know the date of its expiry by the laws of the United States. But the classification is another thing, and it is a description of the patent or the pictures of the plans of the patent to enable the examiners when a new application comes in, to look up the classification of the United States as well as of Canada to see whether a certain invention has already been patented.

Mr. CLANCY. How many are employed in the classification?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. Caron is the patent examiner, and he gets $500 a year for the expert work required, in addition to his salary as clerk. When this work was undertaken he was practically the only specialist in the department able to discharge the duties which were far more important and intricate than the work of an examiner. His salary was then $1,400 and I gave him $600 extra, but he has been getting statutory increases since and I have reduced the $600 to $500. The other employees are Mr. Kilgallin $700, Mr. Bourrett, $625, Mr. Brown $550, Mr. Rae $500, Mrs. Brunet $400, Mr. Proulx $300, Mr. Foley $365 and Mr. Desjardins, who is also a clerk, gets an extra allowance of $50. This amounts to $4,115 and there is $600 spent on photographing paper, $75 in stationery, and $210 in sundry small items.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is the 'Patent Record' printed in the Bureau?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR. The Minister of Agriculture asks $12,000 for the 'Patent Record' besides a new item of $5,000 that was not in the estimates in 1895-96. This makes a total expenditure of $17,000 for the 'Patent Record,' whereas the Conservative government did exactly the same service for $9,250 according to the estimates of 1895-96. There we have an increase of $7,750 in this item.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman is mistaken. In the first place the classification has nothing to do with the 'Patent Record,' and in the second place the Conservative government did not classify the patents at all. That work was commenced in 1897.

Mr. TAYLOR. And you are asking $5,000 additional for that, and increasing the old vote by $2,000.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That is because of the increase in the number of patents. When there are 5,000 patents, it takes more to print the book than when there were 3,000, and in addition to that the trade marks and designs are included in the 'Patent Record' now, which was not the case in 1895-6. I was asked by members of the House to include them, and I thought it right to do so, but it adds to the expense of issuing the volume.

Mr. CLANCY. Where is the lithographing done ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. In a room in the Langevin block.

Mr. CLANCY. Under the control of the department ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. You mean with regard to the classification ?

Mr. CLANCY. Yes.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Fumigating stations, $3,000.

Mr. CLANCY. Although the amount of this item is small, it is still very important and the committee should have full information.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am ready to give as full information as I can. The hon. gentleman is aware of the origin of this work. Some years ago parliament passed a law prohibiting the importation of any nursery stock from any country where the San José scale was known. This prohibition lasted for about two years without relaxation, and an amendment was then passed by which nursery stock was permitted to be imported at certain ports of entry designated by Order in Council on the condition that it should be carefully fumigated. This sum is for the carrying out of that law. Nursery stock is allowed by the Order in Council passed under that Act, to come in during a certain season of the year at St. John, N.B., St. Johns, P.Q., Niagara Falls and Windsor, Ont., Winnipeg, Man.,and Vancouver, B.C. At each of these ports there is a small building made as nearly air tight as possible and a man is employed there during certain months of the year who takes the stock from the customs, puts it in the air chamber, fumigates it with hydrocyanic acid and then sends it back to customs. This has been carried on for two seasons and has been found to work on the whole very satisfactorily. There have been many requests that the period for importation should be lengthened, but the Order in Council was drawn up on the advice of the experts of my department, and I believe that the time is sufficiently long for people who pay attention to their work to import what they find necessary. The relaxation of the original San José Act was due to the request of growers of trees and shrubs in this country to enable them to import certain varieties, in some instances which they could not get in this country. It was also due to their demand that they would be allowed to have some check, so to speak, on the growers of nursery stock in this country who at that time were hardly able to meet the market demand.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman will see from his experience that good came of the necessity. It has been the means of largely increasing the growth of nursery stock in Canada. Whether or not that stock is entirely free from the San José scale is yet an open question. It has no doubt come to the notice of the hon. gentleman that there is a murmur throughout the country that either from imperfect examination at the fumigation station, or from the rapid spread of the insect in Canada, it is becoming more dangerous all the time, to such an extent that in some directions people are somewhat discouraged at the prospect. I fully approve of the measures that were taken with regard to nursery stock imported into Canada ; but there is the greater question as to how we are to deal with the insect as it is now planted on Canadian soil. The hon. gentleman and the Ontario government made some efforts to stamp it out, either working together or working separately, I am not prepared to say ; and some orchards were cut down in the face of almost open rebellion against the conduct of the two governments. It seems, however, that the whole matter has come to a standstill. I am told, although I am not prepared to vouch for the correctness of the statement, that forest trees are becoming infected with the insect. I believe it was stated at one of the meetings of the Agricultural Committee last year, that that was not the case ; but I have made some inquiries since, and I am told that many forest trees have become infected with this insect. If that is true, it becomes a very serious matter, and I am sure nothing would be more welcome to the committee than to have some intimation from the hon. gentleman as to what his policy is for dealing with this very important matter in the future.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am very glad to meet the hon. gentleman's wishes. First, I would like to say, not in connection but in amplification of what he has said, that while the Ontario government has done something towards stamping out the scale in the province of Ontario, this government and my department have had nothing whatever to do with that part of the work, which has been entirely under the control of the provincial authorities and their officers. The work which we have done in my department has been two-fold : First, by means of the San José Scale Act, to prevent the importation of the scale into this country from abroad—that was the object of this vote ; and, secondly, by means of the officers of the Experimental Farm—through Mr. Saunders, the head of that establishment, who is himself a horticulturist, a botanist and an entomologist ; through Mr. Fletcher, who is the entomologist and botanist of the farm, and through

Mr. Macoun, who is the horticulturist of the farm we have been spreading information among the fruit-growers and tree-growers of the country in regard to the dangers of the San José scale and the best treatment for exterminating or checking it. That has been the work of my department. Now, I think I may safely say that there is hardly any San José scale, if any at all, in any part of the Dominion of Canada except in the province of Ontario. It is barely possible that there may be a little in the province of British Columbia, but the people there say that it has been entirely stamped out, and I am disposed to believe them. We are not aware of a single instance in the province of Quebec or in the maritime provinces. In the province of Ontario the provincial authorities have passed laws and issued regulations which have been fairly effective. They have been trying to stamp out the disease in some instances by cutting down the trees and burning them, and in other instances by elaborate methods of fumigation. They have been checking it by the regulation that all nursery stock grown in the province of Ontario must be fumigated by hydrocyanic acid gas before being issued from the nursery. If the fumigation is properly conducted—and the report of the officers is that it is—it effectually kills any scale that may exist on nursery stock; and I think I am safe in saying, what I have stated frequently—and I have been supported and corroborated by experts, that the San José scale is not being spread by nursery stock grown in the province of Ontario. I do not believe that the stock sent out from the province of Ontario can carry the scale after the treatment it universally receives before it is issued. The scale does spread most wonderfully by the ordinary means of spreading disease or insect life, and in days gone by it has spread somewhat considerably in certain parts in the province of Ontario, but only in that province. I am happy to understand, from the reports of those who have been inspecting it of late, that the methods of fighting the scale have been very much improved, and that if the proprietors of orchards and forest trees and shrubs choose to carry out properly and effectively the instructions given to them by the entomologists and botanists, they can destroy it. Unfortunately, however, these gentlemen are human, like the rest of us, and a great many do not attend to their work properly, while others do not attend to it at all. So that occasionally no doubt the scale will get on forest trees. If this kind of thing goes on, the scale will perhaps increase in certain parts; but any one who chooses to carry out the instructions given by experts on the subject can stamp it out and keep his orchards and small fruits free of it.

Mr CLANCY. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will remember that Professor Fletcher stated that there were two methods of meeting the difficulty. One was to use certain solutions on the trees, and the other was to fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas. The latter method, however, was said to be so expensive although the really effectual method of destroying the insect that it would not be generally adopted. Therefore, the milder and less effective method was being pursued, and while it served as a sort of check, there was no assurance that it was stamping out the disease.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The treatment by hydrocyanic acid is very difficult in the case of large trees and very expensive. The cost and the trouble makes it almost prohibitory. That method is used in fumigating nursery stock and small bushes, which can be easily covered and effectively fumigated.

Mr. CLANCY. Where is the nursery stock fumigated ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is only fumigated in Ontario. There is none grown anywhere else where we are aware of any scale being in existence. That work is done by the nursery men at their own nurseries under the inspection of an officer of the Ontario government. The fumigation stations only deal with importations and have nothing to do with nursery stock grown in this country. As regards the methods of destroying the scale, the fumigation by hydrocyanic acid gas of large trees is a very difficult, expensive and troublesome operation, and, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred would probably not be effective. But no doubt the hydrocyanic gas is absolute death to the scale wherever the scale is touched by it. The ordinary method of spraying petroleum or whale oil is much more easy and cheaper and can be applied by anybody. It is not as effective as fumigation but is none the less a very effective method of dealing with the scale. While in one treatment all the scales might not be destroyed, any one who would take the trouble to spray the trees several times will effectively destroy them.

At six o'clock the committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at Eight o'clock.

Towards compiling historical data in regard to the Acadian families in Canada, $1,400.

Mr. HACKETT. Might I ask how this work is proceeding ? There is no more interesting work, or one that could be more advantageous to Canada than ascertaining and compiling information with regard to the old Acadian families. We know that after the expulsion of the Acadians from Grand Pré, they were scattered all over the maritime provinces, and of their descendents, many hardly knew who their ancestors were. I do not criticise the vote, but I would like to know when we may expect the report. The matter is in the hands of an able gentleman and one who will carry out the work faithfully.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The work has been going on steadily. The gentleman in charge of it, Mr. Gaudet, has spent a considerable time in the maritime provinces investigating and making notes. For some little time he has been in Ottawa compiling his notes and preparing the book. He has not yet placed in my hands any portion of the work, but I understand, from what he tells me, that the work has been progressing satisfactorily. I have no definite information to give the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hackett), but as Mr. Gaudet is in town, I could without doubt, learn from him anything that might be desired by hon. members. The work has not progressed quite so fast as I had expected. Mr. Gaudet informs me that there has been more work than he anticipated, that he has had more travelling to do, and more work of investigation, if I may call it so, though that is not the right word, than was originally expected. As his work proceeded he found new facts which led to further investigation. This item covers $1,200 for salary, at the rate of $100 per month, and an allowance of $200 per year for travelling expenses when moving about.

Mr. MONK. I think that it is desirable that we should have communication of the results of the labour of this gentleman as they advance. We had, in the province of Quebec, a gentleman who made a similar compilation in respect of the old French families, and, from time to time, he gave the public the results of his investigation. I do not know how long the work under this item has been going on, but I think it is most desirable that we should have part of the results as they are gathered. Has the hon. minister any objection to that ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have not the work in shape to communicate to the House, but I will see if it is not possble to have a volume put in form for publication as soon as possible. I quite agree that it is desirable that this should be done.

Mr. TAYLOR. When did this item first appear in the estimates ? How long has the work been going on ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I think the item now before us is the third one. That is, the work has been going on during the current year and the last year.

Mr. CLANCY. Before we pass to the next item, I desire to ask a question with regard to the Glasgow Exhibition and the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. Have the votes for these exhibitions been exhausted, or will the House be asked later on to vote a further sum to clean up matters ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The amount voted for the Glasgow Exhibition, I believe, will cover the whole expenditure. The amount voted in the original item and in the supplementary item made a total of $66,000, if I remember well, and the commissioner has informed me that he expects to pay everything with this amount, though he will have little to spare if any. As to the Buffalo Exposition, $50,000 was voted for that service, and I expect to bring down an item in the supplementary estimates for the current year to cover some additional expenditure.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Will not this come up under the next item ?

Mr. CLANCY. No; but if the hon. minister wishes to put the item, I will discuss it later on.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, I am perfectly willing to give the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clancy) all the information I can now.

Mr. CLANCY. What I wish to point out is that the hon. minister's main estimates are rather misleading to the country. He pretends that there has been a reduction of $20,000 in the expenditure on this service of arts, agriculture and allow me—the estimates we are now disclose there is to be no further expenditure but——

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clancy) will allow me—the estimates we are now discussing are for the next fiscal year, and there will be no item in the estimates for the next fiscal year for the Pan-American Exposition. That item will be in the supplementaries for the current year. Therefore, the statement as it appears in this item is correct.

Mr. INGRAM. Then, there will be no item in these estimates under which we can discuss the Pan-American Exposition ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It can be discussed on the item in the supplementary estimates for 1901-2.

Mr. INGRAM. Would the hon. minister have any objection to stating what he did with the Canadian building at the Pan-American ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It was sold.

Mr. BENNETT. Who exercised supervision over these expenditures at the Glasgow Fair ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. W. D. Scott.

Mr. BENNETT. And who is Mr. James Brodie ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. He was appointed secretary to the Glasgow Exhibition. He is a gentleman from the city of Quebec. He has shown the most excellent capacity for work of this kind, so much so that I have appointed him secretary for the Wolverhampton Exhibition this season.

Mr. BENNETT. At page D-14 of the Auditor General's Report appears a detailed statement of the expenditure in connection with the Glasgow Fair, and it seems to me that there are items there that ought not to be charged to the country. When this Mr. Brodie started off on an expedition of this kind, I should think he ought to have provided himself with his own travelling bag. We find here that he charged the country $12 for a travelling bag, kit bag, I presume he meant. Further on 'portfolio, $8.' The whole bill throughout seems to me to have been on a most extravagant style. Then I contend that these gentlemen were not treated fairly. For instance, Mr. Brodie had a living allowance of $6 per day.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That included his pay.

Mr. BENNETT. Then there were other gentlemen, for instance, Col. O'Brien was allowed $5 a day for living expenses. Coming down to Mr. Scott, I think Mr. Scott has great cause of complaint against the government. He, apparently, was not afforded sufficient means to enable him to keep up his position, because I find this item: 'Grub on boat, $7.78.' Perhaps the minister can explain that item. Surely, if we have men going abroad let us pay their expenses decently, and not limit them on an ocean trip to $7.78 for grub.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I suppose he had a big appetite.

Mr. BENNETT. All through these accounts are such items as tips for porters, tips for waiters, and that sort of thing, stewards on the steamers. It seems to me when these gentlemen are allowed such liberal expenses as $5 and $6 per day, they can pay petty tips out of their own pockets. It may of course appear light to the minister that these men should travel in this style, but to the ordinary taxpayer it must be a matter of comment that, allowing them $5 and $6 a day, they are still permitted to indulge in all these extravagances. No doubt as one of these gentlemen was to have charge of the expenditure everything went according to his taste. I hope that when Mr. Brodie goes to Wolverhampton, as the minister states he will, he will not ask the country to pay for one or two travelling bags for himself.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The living allowance was paid to these gentlemen when they were in Glasgow. The usual incidental expenses of transportation to and from, they are paid for over and above; but when they were on board the boat or travelling, their living allowance was not allowed.

Mr. BENNETT. How is it some of these only had their ship fare paid one way ? In the case of Col. O'Brien, 'Portland to Liverpool, $60'; in Mr. Brodie's case, 'Portland to Liverpool and return, $108.'

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. As a matter of fact that ticket is still good, because Mr. Brodie is still in England. I have no doubt if the ticket is not available or good when he does come back, he will get a refund.

Mr. BENNETT. Why were not the others paid their fares both ways ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I think they were, those that came back.

Mr. SPROULE. The minister told us that the Canadian building at the Pan-American was sold. What did he realize for it ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I cannot say off-hand, I have not the details of that vote here. It was a very small sum, a few hundred dollars. Practically it was given away. I will bring down the information.

Mr. CLARKE. Do you recollect to whom it was given away ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It was not given away, but it was sold for so little you might call it given away.

Mr. INGRAM. Have the Canadian government any idea of taking part in the St. Louis Exhibition, and could not this building be utilized for that purpose ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am afraid the expense of transfer from one place to another would be a good deal more than the buildings are worth. When they were built the St. Louis Fair was not even started. I may mention here that I have been authorized by council to accept the invitation which has been extended by the authorities of St. Louis to Canada to participate in that exhibition, which will take place in 1903.

Mr. CLANCY. From the appearance of the Canadian building at Buffalo the country will not be astonished to learn that it did not bring much. I have no hesitation in saying, Mr. Chairman, that the Canadian building was a perfect disgrace to Canada.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Oh.

Mr. CLANCY. I appreciate the hon. gentleman's difficulty in securing a location.

He was much in the hands of the authorities there, and perhaps could not help himself. I am not disposed to find fault with that, although it is a regrettable matter that the building was not better located. But those who attended that exhibition could not help but be impressed with the poor appearance of the Canadian building. The smallest state in the union had a more presentable building than we had. I think there is nothing more damaging than to be beggarly, if that was the reason of it. When Canada was taking part in an exhibition of the continent of America, it should not have been behind any state in the union. If we could afford to expend any sum of money in the interest of Canada we should at least have expended enough to make a respectable appearance. Why, Sir, that building looked more like a barn than anything else. I could find horse stables in Canada that had a better appearance. It was not so bad inside, but outside the appearance of that building must have stamped Canadians as a set of people a generation behind the times. Now, I repudiate any idea of that kind. But I think it is not creditable to the management of the hon. gentleman that he permitted a building for Canadian exhibitors to be shown to the whole world as the most shabby building upon the whole ground. There were buildings not so large by some of the states, but they were all tastefully got up, they were presentable. While I think that great care should always be taken in the expenditure of public money, I know nothing of greater importance on such occasions than to present an appearance in keeping with our position. I think we have lost reputation in consequence of that building, if we did not redeem ourselves by other means, namely, by our splendid exhibits that came from all the provinces, and particularly from Ontario, and which gave all Canadians a very laudable pride. But the disgraceful part of it was the shabby appearance of the Canadian building.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). I take exception to the remarks of the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy). I think the building was a credit to Canada. I had the pleasure of attending the Pan-American twice. I went through that building, and I am satisfied that there was no building on the ground more creditable than that building was to Canada. The way it was fitted up inside and the display that was made in it, was something grand, and every man I spoke to was proud to think that Canada made such a showing.

Mr. CLANCY. I confess I have not that practised eye for architectural beauty that my hon. friend has who lives on the back concessions. I will venture to say that there is not an intelligent man in Canada who will support his opinion. I call upon the Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte) an experienced judge.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not a judge.

Mr. CLANCY. No, but I have no hesitation in saying that the Minister of Public Works would not be prepared to say that if Canada made an exhibit there at all it included the building as well as the contents, and the building ought to be of high order. My hon. friend knows that it had a shingled roof on it, without paint, as other buildings had, and when the hon. gentleman says that it was a credit to Canada, then we will have to ascribe that entirely to his exalted taste, which is at variance with that of every half-cultured gentleman in this country.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I fear that I must set myself down as having no intelligence, in the opinion of the hon. gentleman. But I was very much surprised at his strictures upon the Canadian building at Buffalo. I myself have heard very many encomiums made on the style of architecture and the suitability of the building for such purpose. It is true it had a shingle roof, but I think that if the hon. gentleman will examine a great many of the other buildings at Buffalo he will find that they have shingle roofs, too. If he will examine many of the most beautiful and artistic buildings of the present day he will find that they have shingle roofs. The hon. gentleman has spoken of the situation of the building in the Buffalo grounds.

Mr. CLANCY. I did not criticise that.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman has not criticized that, but I want to point out to him that the situation was for business purposes an extremely good one. The situation was near the exhibits at the exhibition buildings and especially near to where the agricultural exhibits, in which Canada was most largely engaged, were placed. The other state buildings, which the hon. gentleman has compared with it, were placed away at an outside corner of the grounds, a place which would have been extremely inconvenient for Canadian visitors or exhibitors to make their rendezvous or headquarters. As a matter of fact at the end of the Pan-American exhibition there was a gathering of the different state commissioners and they severely took to task the exhibition authorities for having placed their state buildings in such an unsatisfactory situation. They instanced the situation of the Canadian building as being so superior to that in which the state buildings were placed and said that it was an unfair advantage which had been given to Canada, an unfair advantage due to my own insistence that the Canadian building should not be placed among the state buildings.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman was wise in not putting it among the state buildings.

Mr. INGRAM. Who is H. C. Bride, the architect? Is he an American or a Canadian architect?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. He is an architect, of London, Ont.

Mr. INGRAM. I see that he received $1,300 in fees. What was the total of the fees he received for his work in connection with that building?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I cannot, off-hand, say what the total would be. I will give you the total when I come down with the supplementary vote. Mr. Bride got the usual architectural fees with the addition of some travelling expenses for having to go to Buffalo and spend some time there arranging the contracts for the building.

Mr. HENDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I do not pretend to be a critic of the building; in fact, it was scarcely completed when I saw it. My attention was drawn more to the character of what I saw inside. I thought that if the furniture in that building was intended to be an exhibit of Canadian furniture, it should have been of a higher order. I think I mentioned this to the gentleman in charge at the time. I thought it was a grand opportunity to make a first-class exhibit of Canadian woods and furniture. I do not know whether the furniture was made there or whether it was made in Canada, but it did not come up to the mark of what I thought should have been found in the Canadian building.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The furniture was not intended to be used as an exhibit, but it was supplied by the company, which, I believe, is a consolidation of the furniture manufacturers of Ontario. I forget the exact name, but I think it is the Canada Furniture Manufacturing Company. They asked to be allowed to furnish that building free of charge to the government and they put in what they considered to be their very best exhibit.

Mr. HENDERSON. I do not think it was.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am not responsible for it. They had a free hand, and they did what they thought to their own interest. I must confess that I thought, myself, while visiting it, that it was very handsome furniture. At the end of the exhibition there was some slight damage to some of it and the commissioner recommended that we should pay them a small indemnity for that damage—I think $250. That is all the government had to pay for the use of all the furniture in the building.

Hon. Mr. FISHER.

Mr. TAYLOR. What disposition was made of the furniture?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It was returned to the people who sent it.

Mr. TAYLOR. No, but that which was used?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It was all used and returned to the people who sent it.

Mr. TAYLOR. I see that is not the case with the Glasgow exhibition. I see that there were large sums paid for carpets.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, there was no such arrangement at Glasgow.

Mr. TAYLOR. What was done at Glasgow?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The furniture has been packed away for use at Woolverhampton.

Mr. CLARKE. I suppose we will get all the particulars of the sale of the building at Buffalo?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, when the supplementary estimates come down.

For renewing and improving Canadian exhibit at Imperial Institute, London, $3,000.

Mr. CLANCY. This is a matter that has invited discussion in the past. It has been stated in this House that the Imperial Institute, as far as it was educational in Great Britain, was a failure. The hon. gentleman is asking for the same sum this year that he had last. I am not urging an increase of the expenditure, but I think the hon. gentleman will agree with me that if we had an exhibition of that kind in Great Britain which is ever to serve some useful purpose, it ought to accomplish that end to some extent. Those who have visited Great Britain tell me, because, personally I have no knowledge of it whatever, that it is not in the right place, that it is a back number if one may be permitted to use such a slang, and I think we had a promise from the hon. minister last year, as well as, I think, from the Minister of Finance (Hon. Mr. Fielding) that something would be done to make that expenditure although a very small one, somewhat effective, either by increasing it or in some other way.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Before the hon. minister rises to speak possibly one answer will serve for two questions. I understand that the Imperial Institute so far as it is being utilized for the purpose for which it has hitherto existed and was designed has been closed and that the materials have been moved to some other part of the city of London.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. In reply, first to the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. Hughes), I would say that the Imperial Institute just now is in a transition stage and has been within the last few months. It has been an entirely independent organization under a commissioner, or a president—I think he is called—and a board appointed by various authorities in the old country. Lately there have been several meetings at which it is apparent to me, having had reports of those meetings both from Lord Strathcona and through the press, that the Imperial Institute has been handed over to the Imperial Board of Trade, one of the departments of the Imperial government. So far I have not been able to find out exactly what that department intends to do. The representative of Canada at the Imperial Institute, Mr. Watson, has written to me several times and he informs me that, as far as he can gather, not having entire information from the authorities, that the work and objects of the Institute will be continued very much on the same lines, but under different authority and control. The exhibits are still in the same building and they are to be continued there as far as I can obtain any information, but it is in a transition stage. In regard to the exhibits there, I would first like to point out to the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) and the committee that the exhibits have not been under the control of this parliament. They have been supplied by the various provincial governments, and it has been the provincial governments which have managed them, looked after them, repaired them and kept them in order. At the time of the Paris Exhibition, when we had a very extensive collection of mineral exhibits from Canada and very considerable forestry and other exhibits, I was urged by Lord Strathcona and those interested in the Imperial Institute to place them in the Imperial Institute. When I was in England I visited the Institute, and I found the conditions much as the hon. gentleman has described. Our exhibits there are not a credit to Canada in their numbers or their character, or in the condition they are in. Many of them are very old, and should be replaced, while others ought to be repaired. In consequence of the opening of the Glasgow exhibition, the Paris exhibits which I intended for the Imperial Institute were sent to Glasgow, and at the present time they are in the exhibit at the Royal Exchange in London. Last autumn various people in London interested in colonial investments decided to have a London exhibition of the colonial exhibits at Glasgow. We were asked to send our exhibits there and after a good deal of discussion and some hitches the exhibit at the Royal Exchange was arranged for, and will be opened on the 1st of March. I was authorized by my colleagues to do this, and as it was believed that especially the mineral exhibit would be of vast interest to the investing public in London, many who are interested in mining matters in Canada urged strongly that these exhibits should be shown in the financial centre of the world. At the close of the Royal Exchange exhibition, it is the intention to send a large portion of this exhibit to the Imperial Institute if the arrangements in connection with the Imperial Institute then admit of it. Some of this vote last year was used in carrying the exhibits to London, and in cleaning them up and repairing them.

Mr. CLARKE. If my memory serves me right, the attention of the minister was drawn on a former occasion to the unsatisfactory character of the Canadian exhibits at the Imperial Institute. Did I understand from the hon. gentleman, that the Imperial Institute is not under the same management now as it was formerly? Are these old exhibits to be permitted to remain or are they to be brought up to date? Friends of mine who have visited the Imperial Institute have expressed their regret to me that a more creditable Canadian exhibit was not made there. Are any steps being taken to direct the attention of those who placed the exhibits there, to the necessity, in the interest of Canada, of having them renewed? There is no use spending money to have a second or third-class exhibit, because that does the country harm rather than good.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have urged on the representatives of the provinces whose exhibits these are that they should do something. I confess that there has been an inclination on the part of the provinces to throw that responsibility and expense on us. I have not received any official documents which would bear on this, but the tenor of the replies I have had in conversation is: If you do not think the exhibit good enough, go ahead yourself. I fear that the probability of the provincial governments doing a great deal towards having a good exhibit at the Imperial Institute is, to say the least, doubtful. Of course, I have no authority to interfere with these exhibits, but I hope that when the Royal Exchange exhibition is over, the management of the Imperial Institute will be finally settled upon, and then I will be able to utilize this vote to the best possible advantage. I want to warn hon. gentlemen, that $3,000 will not be sufficient to make a very creditable exhibit at the Imperial Institute, and especially if the provincial authorities are going to drop out I will have to ask for a larger sum.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Has the new emigration building which is to be opened up by this government on the Strand, anything to do with the Department of Agriculture?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). In some parts of the United States which it has been my privilege to visit, the minister has Canadian products exhibited.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Not my department.

Mr. INGRAM. I understand that the superintendent of immigration in London is to have new offices, on account of the complaints made that the intending emigrant had no means by which he could judge of the resources of Canada, and for that reason arrangements were being made to exhibit the mineral and agricultural products of Canada in the business centre of London. Is it the intention of the department to provide the London immigration office with exhibits, as well as the Imperial Institute ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That matter is entirely in charge of the Minister of the Interior. While it has been discussed in general terms and the council has quite approved of his action, I have not the details which I would like to give to the hon. gentleman. The Minister of the Interior will have estimates before the House in connection with which he will give full details.

Mr. MONK. Has the minister explained how this $3,000 is to be expended ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. As I have already explained, the intention is to utilize the exhibits at the exhibitions which have been taking place in Europe. All the exhibits that are not at the Royal Exchange are in the Imperial Institute, and are being cleaned up, so that they may be in thorough order and be creditable to us. When I was in England last summer the authorities of the Imperial Institute, who then appeared to have no expectation of the changes which have since occurred, had arranged for a city show room in the centre of the city near the Royal Exchange, and I agreed with them that if they provided such a place I would take money out of this vote to send Canadian exhibits periodically there. They asked me to pledge myself to spend at least £100 a year on that service. That would be $500 out of this amount. The rest I expect to spend in collecting and preparing exhibits to send to the Imperial Institute; but in the present uncertain arrangements of the Imperial Institute, that work is at a standstill.

Mr. MONK. Then a portion of this $3,000 will be for rents ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, for the purpose of utilizing the showroom in the city by preparing and sending temporary exhibits of fruit, poultry, &c.

Mr. MONK. The minister is of course aware that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company intend erecting a very large building in the city of London, in a very favourable spot, and instead of selecting a showroom for Canadian exhibits, it is a question in my mind whether it would not be more economical and better to make some arrangement with that company.

Commissioner's branch for agriculture and dairying, including cold storage on steamships, on railways, at warehouses and creameries, and for expenses in connection with trial shipments of products, and for securing improvement and recognition of the quality of Canadian farm products, employees paid from this sum not to be subject to the Civil Service Act, $210,000.

Mr. CLANCY. I do not suppose the hon. gentleman intends to go on with either this or the next item to-night. They are items of very great importance, and I hope he will allow them to stand.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not want to press them unduly, but I would like to discuss this item to-night. Professor Robertson, who is in charge of this expenditure, is in Ottawa to-day. He will have to leave to-morrow or the next day on some important business, and he has frequently to be away from town ; so that it would be very convenient, and I would like very much to supply the information which my hon. friends would like to have on this very important item to-night. The night is young, we have still a couple of hours before us, and I think the hon. gentleman could get a good deal of information out of me in that time if he made the effort.

Mr. MONK. I do not think it is fair to ask us to enter upon the discussion of such a large item until we have had a meeting of the Committee on Agriculture to examine this gentleman. He is going to be in Ottawa again during the session, and before we go into this item, which shows a considerable increase over previous years, we should have a chance to find out from him what the cause of this increase is.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The question of the Committee on Agriculture is hardly germane to this.

Mr. MONK. Oh, yes it is.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Professor Robertson, it is true, appears before that committee, but does not deal very much with this vote. Besides, the Committee on Agriculture has already asked that the immigration evidence should be given to it before the officers of my department are called, which means that their evidence will be postponed to a considerably later date ; and if my estimates are to stand until Professor Robertson and other officers of my department appear before the Committee of Agriculture, the work of the House will be seriously impeded, in a way that I do not think would be fair or right.

Mr. CLANCY. Well, I imagined that Professor Robertson was a servant of the people of Canada, and that we should consult the convenience of this House rather than that of Professor Robertson or any of the employees.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Nobody is suggesting anything else.

Mr. CLANCY. My hon. friend is asking too much in asking us to proceed to-night with an item of this importance, involving such a large expenditure and such large interests. He surely does not propose that we should go on with it before we have had time to consult a single report or to obtain some knowledge of it. The hon. gentleman may be very anxious to make this statement, which will be of use to the House and the country ; but it is only fair to the members of this House that they should have some opportunity of acquiring such information upon it as will enable them to judge intelligently of the hon. gentleman's statements. To deprive us of this opportunity, it seems to me, is going too far, and I hope the hon. gentleman will not insist on taking up any of these large items to-night.

Mr. WILSON. Did the Minister of Agriculture say that the committee have asked that Mr. Pedley should be examined first ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I had it from the chairman that they wished to have the immigration officers before the officers of my department.

Mr. WILSON. No, sir. All I know is that the chairman of the committee came to me some time last week and told me that Mr. Pedley would be before the committee to-day. This was changing the regular order of things. Last year the committee did not meet until late in the session to discuss these questions, though I was anxious that immigration matters should be taken up. They said no, it is much more important that we should first take up the work of the farm, so that the evidence given before the committee would be distributed to members while they are here. The committee has not asked for Mr. Pedley, neither was I anxious at this particular time to go on with Mr. Pedley, because I wanted to have more time to look into the reports of the Minister of the Interior and the evidence given on immigration last year ; but, as a matter of course, when the chairman of the committee said to me that Mr. Pedley was to be before the committee to-day, I raised no objection, and I think we on this side of the House are perfectly willing that the people from the Experimental Farm should be examined first. The committee had a very short session to-day, for two reasons : in the first place, the chairman missed his train yesterday and was not present—he was not to blame for that and, in the next place, we appointed a temporary chairman and had the report of the first meeting read, and, as Mr. Pedley had not come there sharp on time, and there was another meeting which many of us wanted to attend, the committee by a unanimous vote decided to adjourn until next Thursday ; and it was decided that Mr. Pedley should then come before us. But there is no reason why Mr. Robertson or anyone else cannot be substituted for Mr. Pedley, so far as I know.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. All I can say is that the chairman of the committee came to me the other day, immediately after the first meeting, and said that an expression had been given in favour of having the immigration officers first—and I think the hon. gentleman himself was the one who asked it.

Mr. WILSON. No, sir.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I of course acquiesced in the desire of the committee, and Mr. Pedley came this morning. The chairman himself was not present. Mr. Pedley arrived about five minutes after the hour fixed for the meeting, but the committee had adjourned at the desire of some hon. gentlemen opposite who wished to attend their caucus, which of course was a proper desire. If the hon. gentlemen wish to change that and have the officers of my department brought first, they must deal with that in the Committee on Agriculture. I have no control over that committee, and the committee will call such officers as it wishes in regular order. But it has commenced by calling Mr. Pedley, and not my officers.

Mr. WILSON. Well, I do not think the Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture would wish to misrepresent anybody. He was chairman last year, and a very fair chairman. But he must have misunderstood me. I certainly did not propose that we should have the immigration business first. I may say it has not been customary for the Committee on Agriculture by motion to ask people to come and give evidence. The chairman of the committee has usually arranged that. It is true we brought up the matter at the first meeting of the committee this year, and there was a desire expressed by the members that we should know in advance who were to come before us to give evidence. There can be no difficulty about arranging for Mr. Robertson or any other person the Minister of Agriculture desires, to come and give evidence before Mr. Pedley is heard.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cardwell). The hon. Minister of Agriculture is labouring under a wrong impression when he says that the committee only sat five minutes after the hour fixed for its meeting. I am a member of the committee and was there the whole time, and I know that the chairman remained there for twenty-five minutes after the appointed hour.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. minister must remember that these items relate to his department, as to which there is a regular meeting of the committee, and in this respect they differ from the items of almost every other department. Some of the work, which might ordinarily be done in Committee in Supply, is done before the Committee of Agriculture, and therefore there is grave reason for not pressing any of these items before they have been threshed out in that committee.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am quite ready to allow them to stand or to go on, but if we do not proceed, I will have to throw the onus on hon. gentlemen opposite. I would ask them to allow me to go on with some other items.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Certainly, I suppose there are other items concerning which the meeting of the committee is not so important.

Item allowed to stand.

Quarantine—Salaries and contingencies of organized districts and public health in other districts, $110,000.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. This is an item which covers the whole quarantine service of my department. It deals with the seaboard quarantine, and this year it deals very largely with the quarantine along the international boundary line between Canada and the United States. The item has assumed much larger proportions recently in consequence of the unfortunate prevalence of small-pox in the United States and the alarm which our people all along the frontier have felt with regard to it. The vote is however the same as it was last year when we had the same difficulty to contend against. It covers the quarantine at Halifax, Charlottetown, St. Johns, Sydney, Grosse Isle at Quebec, Victoria, British Columbia, and also all the unorganized quarantine work done on our seaboard and along the frontier. In addition to this we have recently had to do a good deal in connection with public health in the territories in consequence of the prevalence of small-pox. We have had to take steps to protect that portion of the country which, not being organized into a province, has no provincial authority or organization to deal with public health. We have had to assume that work and will have to continue it for the future until the territories are so organized as to have proper provincial organization.

Mr. MONK. What proportion of this sum is devoted to quarantine in the North-west Territories, and what portion is rendered necessary by the prevalence of small-pox there ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The work in the territories has been all on account of small-pox. I have here an item for frontier inspection and the prevention of small-pox, of $50,000. That is not altogether for the territories but a good deal has been spent in the protection of the frontier and the international line between us and the United States. I have not the details of how much was spent for the interior work in the territories and how much on the international boundary.

Mr. MONK. That $50,000 is for the protection of the frontier through the whole of Canada.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, as well as the territories.

Mr. MONK. What amount are you obliged to expend in the territories out of this sum against small-pox ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. In round numbers about $30,000 for the territories alone.

Mr. MONK. That is impossible.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman does not realize that that includes the Yukon. That was the amount of the supplementary vote last session, called for by the work in the territories. I cannot say positively that the whole of it will be expended this current year, but it is not unlikely, as the distances are very great and the expenses very heavy and every precaution must be taken to prevent the small-pox spreading among the Indians.

Mr. MONK. What proportion of the $50,000 is spent to protect the Yukon ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I said $30,000 for the whole of the territories including the Yukon, and I could not divide it off-hand.

Mr. CLANCY. I suppose the hon. gentleman is prepared to give the names of the physicians appointed for the frontier service, the dates of their appointment and the sums that they received.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We do not appoint these gentlemen permanently for the frontier service. We appoint them whenever necessary. They are appointed by the month at the rate of $100 per month. Sometimes their work lasts several months and in some cases the whole year. The reasons of that difference is this. We keep close track of the existence of small-pox on the frontier, through the reports issued by the health authorities in the United States, and where it appears there is a sufficient outbreak of the disease on the other side to menace the people on our side, we appoint an officer to watch the frontier. Then, when the disease seems to disappear from the other side of the line and the necessity for guarding that point of the line ceases, we dispense with the services of the officer. If the hon. gentleman wishes I can give him a full list of the officers so appointed, but it is a lengthy one.

Mr. MONK. The hon. minister might give the principal officers.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They are all the same in this list. The principal officers are the permanent officers.

Mr. MONK. Are they all paid the same salary ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, except that there are a couple of officers in the west who receive more. For the rate of pay given in the east, $100 a month, we could not get men for all points in the west. I understand that we are paying one man in the North-west $125 a month and one in the Yukon $150 a month.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman might give the list of names.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. In Prince Edward Island, there is Dr. James McLennan, who was appointed on the 15th November, 1901, at a salary of $100 a month, though his services have been dispensed with.

Mr. CLANCY. What was the date of dispensing with his services ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I find that while Dr. McLennan appears on this list as having been released from employment, yet, in consequence of a winter trial service at Summerside, he is acting again. He commenced work on the 15th November, 1901, and has been working since with some intermission.

Mr. CLANCY. In fact, he has been permanently employed so far.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. He commenced on the 15th November last, and is still employed. As soon as the necessity for his employment ceases, his services will be dispensed with. At Georgetown, P.E.I., there is Dr. D. A. Stewart, who began on the 13th February, 1902 and is still employed at $100 a month. In Nova Scotia, there are the following :—At Digby, Dr. L. H. Morse, who commenced on the 16th March, 1901, still employed ; Yarmouth, Dr. A. J. Fuller, commenced 18th March, 1901 ; Bear River and Clementsport, Dr. L. J. Lovitt, commenced 20th March, 1901 ; Weymouth, Dr. E. J. Elderkin, commenced 21st March, 1902 ; Louisbourg, Dr. F. O'Neil, commenced 18th May, 1901. In New Brunswick, at McAdam Junction, there is Dr. W. T. Ryan, commenced February 3rd, 1902. The list for Ontario is as follows :—Sault Ste. Marie, Dr. R. J. Gibson, commenced 22nd November, 1900—this was one of the first appointments and this officer is still employed ; Mine Centre, Dr. David McKenzie, commenced 15th March, 1901 ; Beaver Mills, Dr. A. A. McCrimmon, commenced 30th May, 1901 ; Cornwall, Dr. J. H. Wheeler, commenced 17th January, 1902. In Manitoba, there are the following :—At Sprague, J. W. Caldwell, commenced 22nd January, 1901. This officer, I should explain, is a guard, and not a doctor. In some places, we employ a guard to watch the trains and report to a doctor in the neighbourhood. The guard gets $2.50 a day. At Emerson there is Dr. D. Henderson, commenced 22nd November, 1900 ; Gretna, Dr. F. B. McKenty, commenced 22nd November, 1900 ; Morden, Dr. C. F. Sharp, commenced January 3rd, 1901 ; Crystal City, Dr. G. Riddell, with two guards under him ; Killarney, Dr. J. A. Whyte, commenced 22nd November, 1900 ; Boissevain, Dr. R. K. Campbell, commenced 22nd November, 1900 ; Deloraine, Dr. R. S. Thornton, commenced 22nd November, 1900. In the North-west Territories, there are three :—At North Portal, Dr. R. M. Mitchell, commenced 7th February, 1901; Northport, Rr. J. J. Travis, commenced 7th November, 1901; Carnduff, Dr. T. W. F. Lockhart, commenced February 20th, 1902. In British Columbia, there are the following :—Huntingdon, Dr. R. H. Port, commenced 24th April, 1900 ; Grand Forks, Dr. John Westwood, commenced 29th November 1900 ; Carson, T. K. Dunlop, guard ; Cascades, W. W. Coates, guard ; White's Camp, W. L. Wells, guard ; Rossland, Dr. A. C. Sinclair, commenced February 2nd, 1901 ; Northport, Dr. J. J. Travis, commenced February 7th, 1901 ; Kettle River District, Dr. R. W. Jakes, commenced November 29th, 1900 ; Rykerts, Dr. W. W. Walken, commenced February 1st, 1902 ; Fort Steele, Dr. Watt, commenced 9th April, 1901 ; Tobacco Plains Trails, M. Phillipps and Jas. Langley, guards ; Log Cabin, Dr. S. D. Cameron, commenced July 3rd, 1901.

Mr. CLANCY. Is that the whole list of those employed in the frontier service ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. CLANCY. As the hon. gentleman gave it, they still seem to be in the service. Now, if the reports that come to me are correct there are others than those the hon. minister has mentioned. I would like to ask him if there is not a medical gentleman by the name of Dr. McCully employed at Rondeau Point, Ontario ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I was wrong in saying that these were all that have been employed. This, I am informed, is a list of those who are still employed. Some have been engaged along the chain of lakes during the summer for short periods at different times. I have not a list of them here.

Mr. CLANCY. I think the committee would be interested in hearing the list of those that have been employed, with the length of service of each and the amount paid. Perhaps the hon. gentleman could give us that ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have not that list with me to-night.

Mr. CLANCY. Then, the hon. minister had better let the item stand.

Mr. MONK. The hon. minister did not give the list of the chief officers for Quebec employed along the frontier.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am glad to say that the United States immediately south of Quebec is in such a healthy state that we have not required to watch the frontier. We have not had to appoint any one in the province of Quebec, and, I believe, with the exception of Cornwall, none in eastern Ontario.

Mr. MONK. We have had a good deal of small-pox coming into Quebec from the States.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We have no reports to that effect either from the local authorities or from anybody who required our action. As a general rule we have taken, in the first place, reports of the United States authorities as to the condition of affairs in the country south of our boundary ; and, in the second place, the request for reports of the provincial health authorities. Where the provincial health authorities have not expressed any fear in regard to the frontier, and where we have reports of satisfactory conditions to the south of the line, we have not appointed any officer.

Mr. MONK. Has there been a report from the provincial health authorities that there is no small-pox in the New England states ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, I did not say that. I said that the provincial health authorities have made no request for us to guard the frontier, and that we have had reports from the United States health authorities as to the condition of health in the different states along the border, and that we took these two sources of information as our guide.

Mr. MONK. Is there any report as to the state of health in the New England states in the possession of the department ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The reports of the health authorities of the United States are all sent to my department, and my chief superintendent of public health studies these all the time.

Mr. MONK. I understand there is a report in the department that there is no small-pox to fear in the New England states, no smallpox in existence in the New England states. I would like to see that report.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There is no report showing there is no small-pox in the United States. But their reports do say that the health authorities there are handling it and managing it so that there is no likelihood of its spreading.

Mr. SPROULE. Can the minister tell us how these medical men operate to prevent the importation of small-pox ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They watch passing trains. They go down below the frontier and look at the people on the trains, wherever an officer is appointed.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood the minister to say that he does not put an officer on unless he has information from the American health authorities that there is small-pox on the other side of the line.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Not quite that. We watch the health reports of the United States, all the health reports from all sources in the United States come to our department, and the superintendent of public health keeps watch of these, and if the conditions south of the line are not such as to be a menace to our health, we do not appoint any officer; but when in his judgment they menace our safety, then we appoint an officer.

Mr. SPROULE. I noticed last season that the disease was imported especially from Michigan. What precautions have been taken to prevent travellers bringing it across the line from that part of the United States ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We have had officers at the several ports opposite northern Michigan, where boats come from that region, and they watch the travel all the time.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Has the minister under consideration the formation of a Dominion board of health, or would it come under his department ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I think if any board of health were organized it would come under my department, which now deals especially with that subject. While that question might be discussed, it has hardly reached a point where I could make a statement.

Mr. SPROULE. In case of the importation of the disease by trains or otherwise, has any effort been made to have the health department on the other side bear the expense of looking after this ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They do it for themselves on their own side of the line, the same as we bear the expense of looking after small-pox on our side of the line. We have not asked them to share the expense of protecting our health.

Mr. PRINGLE. Is there any small-pox now in that portion of New York state known as the Adirondack Mountains, through which the Ottawa and New York Railway runs ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I noticed something of that kind, and therefore put a man on at Cornwall.

Mr. PRINGLE. What are the reports now in regard to small-pox in that locality ? I understand that there is none, that there is no possibility of any small-pox coming over that line, and that that man is only employed in examining passengers on that railway.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. My officer says that the later reports show that there is no danger, and that we may be able to dispense with that man's services.

Mr. HACKETT. I want to ask the minister to take better means to protect the people of Prince Edward Island from a small-pox epidemic. The minister has read the names of several doctors who are stationed at ports along the shores, and they are very good men, vigilant and active, who attend to their duties in every respect. But I want to make a remark concerning a case that occurred at Georgetown, in Prince Edward Island, last fall. I do not know if the hon. gentleman who was at the head of the provincial government at the time is in the House; but I know that a man was smitten with small-pox and so declared by the doctor at that port, and he was taken into a carriage and driven from Georgetown to Keppoch, where there is a marine hospital, a distance of thirty miles, right through the country, exposing the people to the danger of infection all through that section. I would ask the hon. gentleman why that was allowed to occur ? Is there any conflict between the two authorities, or why should not both authorities unite to guard the public health in that respect ? I also want to ask the hon. gentleman if all the employees—not speaking of the doctors, who are able to look after themselves—if all the attendants, and the nurses at the marine hospital at Keppoch, have been paid by the government ? Have all the bills in connection with the marine hospital at Charlottetown been paid by this government ? When we are again threatened in Prince Edward Island with an epidemic originating outside of our island, I want to impress upon the hon. gentleman that he should take the greatest care to protect the people of that province. I say it was a shameful thing that this man, declared to have small-pox, should have been driven across the country in a carriage that was not flagged to warn the people that he had small-pox, that he was allowed to talk and chat with the people on the way, and the driver broke his carriage on many occasions, and all these circumstances increased the danger of spreading the contagion. I would ask the minister why it was that that thing occurred ? Whose fault was it ? Was it the fault of the Dominion government or of the local government ? I would ask the hon. minister to make some statement in connection with the facts and also to say whether these nurses who were employed at the hospital at Charlottetown have been paid as they required.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. In reply to the hon. gentleman I would say that I suppose I know by report the case to which he refers. It was the case of a seaman who had been some days in the port of Georgetown before the disease was discovered and the man was no longer subject to our supervision, inspection, or examination. We are responsible on the arrival of the vessel for giving that vessel a clean bill of health. When the vessel receives a clean bill of health from our officers, we have no more responsibility for anything in connection with its crew than we would have in connection with a farmer in the neighbourhood of the town. I am not aware of the details of the case such as the hon. gentleman describes. If anything has been done it has been done in no sense under the authority or control of my department. Such a case would be entirely under the control of the provincial health authorities over whom we have no control and with whom we do not interfere. As far as the hon. gentleman's question about the marine hospital at Charlottetown is concerned, I would say that there is perhaps a little confusion in the name. We have a quarantine hospital there. I do not think there is anything that is called a marine hospital at that place. The marine hospitals are in charge of my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland). I have no control over them and they are used for a different purpose to that for which the quarantine stations are used. As far as the quarantine station at Charlottetown is concerned, there was one case which was dealt with by my officer there and the doctor and nurses and everybody connected with the case have been paid. I am informed that at the request of the authorities at Charlottetown, a local case was allowed to be treated at the quarantine hospital, but the local authorities have to deal with it and they have to pay for it. I simply allowed them to utilize the quarantine hospital for the convenience of the city of Charlottetown.

Mr. HUGHES (King's). Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to dispute with the hon. member for West Prince (Mr. Hackett), but I wish to say that he has exaggerated the facts in connection with this matter. This man was taken sick at Georgetown, and as the Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Fisher) states, the marine hospital at Keppoch, near Charlottetown, was used for the reception of the patient. As soon as it was known that the man had smallpox he was driven to the hospital in a closed carriage. How could he have been taken otherwise ? He could not have been taken on the railway. That would have been a greater danger to the public health. He was driven to the hospital in a closed carriage by a man who had had the small-pox, himself, previously. A bolt came out of the carriage on the way and they had to go to a blacksmith's shop to have the bolt put in. There is no reason why this matter should have been brought up here at all. No government did wrong in that respect and I would ask the hon. member for West Prince if he could suggest any other way for bringing a man from Georgetown to the Keppoch hospital ? There is no use in exaggerating these things, or trying to mislead the committee, or attempting to create a false impression.

Mr. CLARKE. I would like to ask the hon. minister if there were any outbreaks of small-pox or other contagious diseases amongst the immigrants who arrived during the last twelve months ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, there were several cases and they were quarantined at the various quarantine stations.

Mr. CLARKE. Where were they from ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not know. They were quarantined at Halifax and Victoria, and I think Grosse Isle also. They were in every case dealt with and the disease did not spread.

Mr. CLARKE. Where were the immigrants from ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I could not say off-hand. We do not investigate where they come from in our quarantine stations.

Mr. CLARKE. The reason I asked the hon. minister is that I notice in one of the reports of the American officers who inspect immigrants going through Canada to the United States caustic references to the condition in which some of the immigrants arrived in Canada. I want to know if there is any laxity on our part in the examination of immigrants which would cause such a report by these American officers ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not think the hon. gentleman has quite understood the situation. Of course, we are not responsible for what the steamship companies do in bringing out immigrants. When they arrive in Canada we have them examined for disease and if there is any disease among them, we quarantine them and treat them. The American authorities, I believe, have an arrangement for officers to watch immigrants arriving in Canada and this has been done at the express desire of the transportation companies who want to get this travel for their lines. It is done by the immigration officers of the United States, I do not think with any intention or desire to examine as to disease, but to examine as to what they consider proper qualifications of immigrants both as to their financial and mental conditions. The United States have stringent rules as to the landing of immigrants and their rule at United States ports is that ships must carry back rejected immigrants. Of course, if ships landed these immigrants in Canada and they were discovered in Chicago or Detroit as being unsatisfactory, the United States authorities could hardly force the ships to carry them back. They therefore made an arrangement by which their officers go to the port of landing and there deal with these immigrants.

Mr. CLARKE. What becomes of those who are rejected ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The ships have to take them back.

Mr. CLARKE. They are not allowed to land in Canada ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No. We have nothing to do with them at all. This is an arrangement between the shipping companies and the United States authorities over which we have no control and over which we have no responsibility.

Mr. CLARKE. If these immigrants are found unsuitable by an officer of a foreign government they are not permitted to land on Canadian soil and are sent back again. Is that the situation ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I believe so. I cannot say positively, but I believe that is what it amounts to. Of course the immigrants they deal with in this way are only those that are booked for the United States.

Mr. CLARKE. Charges are made that a great many of these immigrants land in Canada, remain here temporarily, and then cross the boundary so that practically a general surveillance is exercised by these foreign immigration officers over our immigrants ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, none whatever. The immigrants that are dealt with are only those that are booked through to United States points, and who declare themselves as intending to go to the United States. Any immigrant for Canada is not touched or dealt with by these United States officers.

Mr. HACKETT. My hon. friend from King's (Mr. Hughes) who spoke a moment ago said that I had exaggerated the statement I made in connection with small-pox patients being driven from Georgetown to the marine hospital at Keppoch. The hon.

gentleman corroborated every word I said. Instead of exaggerating the statement I made it as mild as possible. Here was a case of small-pox, a case coming to our shores where an epidemic might have been spread all over Prince Edward Island and the government of this country, or the local government, let that patient be driven through a part of the hon. gentleman's riding of King's, and a part of the riding of East Queen's from Georgetown to a point near Charlottetown, a distance of thirty miles. That man went in that carriage on which there was placed no flag, without anything being provided to notify the people along the line of the route of the fact that a small-pox case was being carried. The hon. gentleman says that the carriage broke down and that they had to go to a blacksmith's shop to repair it. I am not exaggerating the statement at all, and the hon. gentleman has himself confirmed my statement that this patient having the small-pox was driven thirty miles through the province of Prince Edward Island, liable to spread the disease all over the country, and yet the hon. gentleman makes light of it. The public health of our people is of great importance, and every precaution should be taken to safeguard it. When this gentleman gets up here and says I have exaggerated, he says what is not correct.

Mr. HUGHES (Kings). What would you do with the patient under the circumstances ?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Kill him.

Mr. HUGHES (King's). Let me make a further statement. There was some local discussion about this, and the patient stated himself in the newspapers that he was quite comfortable during the drive, that every precaution was taken, that he had no fault to find with the means to bring him to the hospital where he would get the best medical treatment, and the proof of his being well cared for is that he recovered in a short time, and that the disease did not spread.

Mr. TAYLOR. Last year this same vote was asked for and also a supplementary vote. Will the $110,000 cover the whole service this year or will the minister ask for more ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I hope that this will be sufficient, but that will depend entirely on the extent of the outbreak of the disease, which I cannot foretell.

Mr. TAYLOR. In 1895-6, $35,000 was all that was asked for this service but this year three times that amount is to be voted. How is it possible that there could be such an increase in this item ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. In the first place, the work in connection with the frontier was not in existence at all in 1895-6, and in the second place we had not a small-pox outbreak, and we had not the Yukon to look after. All these additions have caused the increase.

Mr. TAYLOR. I think the real explanation is that the minister had a number of doctors that he wanted to give $100 a month to, in order that they might draw the money and do nothing. I suppose the minister will give us the names of all the doctors that are employed in the department so that we may know where this extra $70,000 went.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I will get that information.

Mr. MONK. Did we spend the entire $110,000 last year ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The $110,000 is for the current year, and I am afraid we will have to ask for a supplementary vote.

Mr. MONK. What was the amount we spent last year ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. $75,000.

Mr. MONK. And you are asking for $35,000 more.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, and we will have to ask for more still. I regret to say that this expenditure by my department is only a small part of what the people of Canada are to-day paying on account of this small-pox outbreak. If the hon. gentleman will refer to the expenditure by the local and municipal authorities, he will find that probably several million dollars are expended in Canada this year on account of this outbreak of small-pox.

Mr. MONK. But the damage small-pox may cause has nothing to do with the inspection along the frontier. The minister tells us that there is no danger from the New England states, and that the only danger is from the Western states. Thirty-five thousand dollars in addition to what we spent last year is a very large amount, when the prospect is that we will not require so much. I think that vote ought to be reduced.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman does not seem to have followed the discussion. The expenditure along the frontier has been intermittent but constantly increasing, and the prospect seems to be that it will go on. If it does not go on the money will not be spent, but I fear that it is necessary to provide for this contingency, and this year not only will I have to spend $110,000, but I shall have to ask for a considerable amount more to cover the expenditure for the next four months of the current year. A large amount of this money has been spent in the Yukon and in the territories dealing with small-pox outbreaks, and the hon. gentleman is mistaken in thinking that it has all been expended in watching the frontier.

Mr. MONK. It seems to me that we are mounting up this vote at a great rate.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We unfortunately are.

Mr. SPROULE. The minister tells us that a doctor goes on each train and examines the patients. At what distance from the boundary line does he board the train, and what does he do in the case of travellers who come from infected districts, but who may not have the disease themselves ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The doctor works as conveniently as he can, and he boards the train at different distances from the frontier according to the location of the stations. Whenever people come from what are called infected districts in the United States, we require them to be vaccinated if they have not been already. The officer examines them as carefully as possible, and if he sees any suspicious cases, he detains them.

Mr. SPROULE. What does the hon. gentleman mean by suspicious cases? A traveller coming from a district where small-pox is prevalent may have signs of the disease, and he may have been vaccinated. Is he refused admission ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, and is vaccinated.

Mr. SPROULE. I have no doubt the hon. gentleman takes due precautions for preventing the importation of disease ; but if the press can be relied on, we imported a good many small-pox cases from Michigan last summer, and I believe it is pretty prevalent in some of the lumber districts in Canada to-day. It does seem as if some more stringent precautions ought to be taken.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman understands that there is a period of incubation for this disease during which it is not recognizable ; and of course we cannot expect to keep everybody who comes from the United States in quarantine for fifteen days. That would be an interruption of traffic which people would not submit to. What we do is to vaccinate any who are suspected of disease. Of course, any actual cases which are discovered we stop at once and deal with. I do not think we can do much more ; I do not know what more we can do. That has been the working out of the problem by the Superintendent General of Public Health, and I confess I have not myself been able to suggest any further precautions. I may say that one or two cases have occurred which are supposed to have come from the United States. They are cases in which the disease was in incubation and quite unrecognizable ; and we must acknowledge that no quarantine regulations would absolutely shut out such cases when they come into the country overland. If they came across the ocean, we might do so.

Mr. SPROULE. I refer to cases which have come in on trains. I was informed last summer by a passenger that many passengers came from districts in Michigan where the disease was prevalent, and they were neither vaccinated nor detained, but were coming into the province with perfect impunity.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Was there a doctor on the train ?

Mr. SPROULE. I do not know.

Mr. HACKETT. I understood the hon. gentleman to say that if an epidemic were brought by a vessel to Prince Edward Island, the local authorities would be charged with the cost of dealing with it. At all events, we have this fact, that this small-pox patient was taken charge of by the local government and was driven through the province for thirty miles without any precaution being taken to prevent the spread of the disease. My hon. friend from King's asked, what would you do in a similar case? The proper course to pursue was this—to have a building in the vicinity of Georgetown, where this patient could be placed and attended to by nurses. They have had another case since, and the patient was placed in the vicinity of Georgetown and attended by nurses, and not driven through the country, as the other one was, it would almost appear for the purpose of spreading this dread disease through the province. I have only stated what I know to be correct, and the hon. member for King's has corroborated the statement I made. I think there must be some difficulty between the government of Prince Edward Island and the government of Canada when small-pox cases can be treated in this way. The hon. gentleman said the man was comfortable when he was driven thirty miles through the country, and had his carriage broken down. How could he be comfortable, or how could he be expected to recover ? I was told that the poor man was so terror-stricken that he was unable to walk from the carriage to the hospital, and had to be helped. I say that such conduct on the part of the government or on the part of any man is a disgrace and a discredit to our country, and that we should unite to see that humanity, at all events, is extended to people in such a condition.

Mr. CLARKE. I took the liberty of making an inquiry of the Minister of Agriculture respecting the steps which had been taken by the United States authorities to examine immigrants arriving in Canada. I had glanced over the report of the United States Commissioner of Immigration for the past year, and I thought I was justified in asking the question I did from the recollection I had of the statements contained in that report. I have obtained a copy of the report since, and it fully justifies the statement I made. I find at page 32 of the report, under the heading of 'Diseased Immigrants' the following statement. I will not occupy the time of the committee by reading the statistics of the number of diseased immigrants sent back by the United States. They totalled 309, composed of various nationalities. The report states :

These represent, however, only such as applied for admission to the United States, and the bureau reiterates the opinion heretofore expressed that the vigilant inspection at our ports has resulted, to some extent, in diverting diseased aliens to Canada, whence they surreptitiously effect an entrance across our northern boundary line. An attempt was made to check this evil by locating a surgeon of the United States marine hospital service at Liverpool, England, who by the consent of the various steamship lines plying to Canadian ports, was permitted to make a physical examination of the passengers. The experiment, however, proved unsuccessful, as some of the vessels brought diseased aliens who had been rejected by the said officer, and there were no means of deterring any of the said lines from bringing diseased persons to Canada, whose declared purpose to remain there would be no bar to their subsequently crossing the boundary line and coming into this country. That diseased persons who have been rejected at ports of this country do actually effect entrance later, probably through Canada, the bureau has heretofore reported that it had satisfactory evidence.

As a partial check on this practice Dr. Victor G. Heiser, of the marine hospital service, has been stationed with the force of immigration officials at Quebec, and there makes an examination of arriving aliens, though, of course, his report that any alien is diseased does not debar that alien from admission to Canada, although the steamship lines agree to return to the foreign port of embarkation those destined confessedly to the United States who are found to be afflicted with a dangerous contagious disease. This action of the steamship line in any particular instance, it seems hardly necessary to say, is contingent upon the willingness of the diseased alien to be returned to the port from which he embarked.

Then there is on page 34, under the heading of Immigration Through Canada, a statement showing an increase since the 30th June, 1897, from 6,542 to 21,647 last year, and the commissioner goes on to observe :—

While the ratio of increase over the arrivals of aliens through Canada last year is comparatively small, it is to be remembered that the figures above represent only such as state their ultimate destination to be this country ; others, who feel a doubt as to their ability to pass inspection, may, and doubtless do, avail themselves of the advantage of a landing and temporary residence in Canada to effect an entry over the boundary line.

The subject of immigration through Canada is now being considered by the department and the various Canadian transportation interests, with the view to effecting an agreement whereby the evils of the present system may be, if not obviated altogether, at least materially lessened.

That is a most extraordinary statement with regard to the quality and character of the immigrants arriving in Canada to appear in the annual report of the commissioner of the United States. It seems to me extraordinary that an officer of a foreign government should go to Quebec and inspect, not only the immigrants ostensibly for the United States, but all the immigrants on the vessels.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. He has no authority to do so.

Mr. CLARKE. I take this from the official report of the Commissioner General on Immigration. Surely it is not the practice to bring to Canada immigrants, who would not be admitted into the United States direct because of their physical disability, in order that these immigrants may work their way through this country into the United States ? Should we not have as rigid an inspection of all immigrants as exists on the other side of the line? If they are not fit mentally and physically, they should not be permitted to land here. We should put some barrier in the way of promiscuous immigration. I should like to know whether the Commissioner General of Immigration of the United States is justified by the facts in making the statements I have just read. Those who read this report must be very unfavourably impressed as regards the quality and character of at least some of the immigrants who find their way to Canada, and I would like an explanation from the Minister of Agriculture.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. What the hon. gentleman is discussing is an immigration matter and not a quarantine matter.

Mr. CLARKE. I am speaking of diseased immigrants.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. At New York and Boston and other American ports, there are a quarantine station and an immigration station. In the one the immigrants are dealt with from a quarantine standpoint solely, and in our ports we deal with the immigrants more severely than they are dealt with by the American officials. The diseases referred to in the report the hon. gentleman has just read are not what are called quarantineable or contagious diseases, but are dealt with by the immigration authorities at the immigration stations. I have not the detailed information necessary to satisfy the hon. gentleman on the point he raises, but that is a point which should properly come up when discussing the estimates on immigration, and will be dealt with by the Minister of the Interior. What I said a few minutes ago was strictly correct, that while this gentleman may make a report to the United States government with regard to immigrants coming to Canada, that report does not prove that the United States officials have any control over such immigrants. It is only a private arrangement allowed by our own immigration authorities, and agreed between the United States immigration department and the transportation line, so as to facilitate the bringing of these people by our lines instead of directly to the United States. The statements as to our Canadian immigrants I do not believe to be well founded, and I am sure my hon. colleague the Minister of the Interior will deal with that matter when his estimates come up. I do not believe for a moment that the character of the immigrants who come to Canada is such as would justify statements such as have been read by my hon. friend.

Mr. CLARKE. I am very glad to hear the Minister of Agriculture say that the statements contained in this report of the Commissioner General of the United States are not justifiable. It is only fair to Canada that the Minister of the Interior should have an opportunity, when his estimates are under discussion, to make a full reply to the charges contained in this report. I took the liberty two years ago to draw attention to some statements not at all satisfactory, which appeared in the report for the then current year of the United States Commissioner General of Immigration, and I should be very glad to learn from the Minister of the Interior that the same rigid inspection is made of immigrants on this side, which is made of immigrants on the other side, and that the statement that undesirable immigrants are allowed to enter Canada because of lax inspection, is not well founded.

Mr. TAYLOR. I must ask the hon. minister to allow this item to stand until he brings down a statement showing where this money has gone. Take the Auditor-General's Report, page D—71, and you will find there an explanation of how this expenditure has grown from $35,000 in 1895-96, to $110,000 now. The hon. minister has told us that he spent $75,000 last year, but in the Auditor General's Report you will find that the expenditure was $94,000. He has thus deceived the House by $20,000 in his statement. He asks now $110,000, and says he will have to ask for an additional amount in the supplementaries. In the Auditor General's Report, page D—71, you will find an explanation of this extravagance down in the village of Montmagny. I find that Alphonse Labarge draws $848 for a few supplies. Let me give a few of the items so as to show the outrageous prices charged. I find four kegs of nails at $16.25; eight gallons of linseed oil at $1.10 a gallon; 163 pounds of putty at 8 cents a pound; Here is another charge of 163 pounds of putty at 8 cents per pound. You can go to any retail hardware store in the city of Ottawa and buy it at 3 cents a pound. 200 pounds of soft soap is charged at 13 cents per pound. There is another gentleman, Mr. Lesperance, in the same constituency who furnished some supplies. We find, for instance, a ton of coal $8.50; 22 pounds of beef at 22 cents, and 22 pounds of beef at 20 cents; coal oil, 464 gallons at 32 cents a gallon, 306 pounds of sugar at 6½ cents per pound. And so it goes, hundreds and hundreds of dollars paid out by this government buying from retail merchants and paying three or four times what they can get the goods for in any respectable store. Any person who has purchased any of these goods must know that the prices named here are, to say the least of it outrageous ? But, it is just the same through all the Auditor General's Report. This accounts for the amount of expenditure of this government. They spend here $110,000 on a service that was given in 1896 for $35,000. It is no wonder the expenditure of this country has crept up to $57,000,000, instead of $37,000,000, the amount for which the late government conducted the affairs of the country with as great efficiency or more. But there were not so many doctors employed at $100 a month to do nothing.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Carried.

Mr. TAYLOR. No, it is not carried. The minister will furnish the statement he promised before the item passes.

Mr. ROSS (Ontario). I think this discussion has been useful. I know that I have gained information regarding quarantine that I had not even dreamed of. When the minister was reading the list of those employed, I did not hear the names of any officers read out as being appointed at Sarnia, Windsor or Niagara, at which points the trains come over from the United States.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, we have none there now. I think that for a time last summer officers were appointed at one or more of these places. I have promised to give a list of those temporarily employed, but not now employed. When that list is ready it will show the hon. gentleman what has been done at the frontier referred to.

Mr. ROSS (Ontario). It is generally felt in this country that the state of Michigan is responsible for the small-pox in Canada. In that case, we might expect that the small-pox would come in at Sarnia. To show how the Americans do, I may say that I met a gentleman from our town returning from the west who told me that he had been going to Michigan, but was stopped at Sarnia and not allowed to go over because he had not been vaccinated within two months. The United States know how to look after the people going into their country. Here was a man perfectly healthy in appearance, but kept out of the state of Michigan, prevented even from going through on the regular line of railway, because he had not been vaccinated within two months. I do not agree with the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) that too much has been spent on quarantine. My fear is that the minister has not asked for enough to guard the country against the terrible scourge of small-pox.

Mr. INGRAM. The difficulty does not seem to be that not enough was asked for, but in the way it is distributed. The province of Ontario, is paying a great deal to prevent the spread of small-pox. The matter is in the hands of the provincial government. But, when we refer to British Columbia we find large sums paid out by this government to prevent the spread of disease in that province. So far as I know, in the past few years they have been troubled a great deal in that province. But, if they forget to look after that matter I do not see why this government should be called upon to pay money for that province if it does not pay for the others. Take, for instance, the case of Rossland, in British Columbia. It is a small place and in from the boundary line. Yet, there are two doctors there employed by this government. And other doctors are employed in many cases in British Columbia. It is unfair that the government should take these measures in one province, and, to a great extent, overlook other provinces.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Ingram) must not imagine that the expenditure of the money of this vote in British Columbia has to do with the interior of that province. It has to do with the international boundary line. I have already explained that we acted when we knew there was the disease at any point south of the boundary line, and also that we acted on representation being made by the health authorities of the province that it was necessary. In the province of Ontario, it happens, we have been remarkably free from demands, except so far as the traffic between Ontario and Michigan was concerned—and, mainly that with the northern part of the state. We have a number of officers around Sault Ste. Marie and adjacent ports to protect our people. In the state of Washington and Oregon, the position is much worse than it is in the eastern states; and it is for that reason, largely, that we have spent more money in proportion than in Ontario. As to the two doctors at Rossland, there is a junction just across the boundary line at North Port, and two lines come in and Rossland doctors have to watch them both.

Mr. SPROULE. I understand the hon. minister to say that there is disease in northern Michigan, but not in southern Michigan. How is it, then, that the papers in Essex county say that small-pox is imported into that county from Michigan ? We see it stated in the local press also that there is small-pox not very far from Detroit—for instance I see it spoken of as existing in the Plymouth district, seventeen or eighteen miles from Detroit. If that is so, it must be the easiest thing in the world to import it with the regular travel across the line. When Canadians seek to go there without being recently vaccinated or under the influence of vaccination at the time, I am told, they are not allowed to cross. We do not seem to be exercising the same strictness against small-pox as the people of Michigan do. But we are told small-pox has been brought across the line not once, but repeatedly, last summer.

Mr. SUTHERLAND (Essex). At the present time, the municipalities of Windsor, Walkerville and Sandwich are about to apply for a quarantine station. From time to time we have been very much exposed, and these municipalities have acted as a sort of buffer to the whole province. The result is that they have been obliged to spend large sums of money, much in excess of what other municipalities throughout the province are called upon to pay. I think along the line of the discussion to-night it would be a proper thing for the government to establish at that point a suitable quarantine station for the protection not merely of these municipalities but of the whole province.

Mr. SPROULE. That seems to verify our contention that the quarantine regulations are so lax that the disease is brought across the line. There are dozens of cases of it in Essex to-day. I saw the statement within the last two days that there are between 100 and 200 cases in the county of Essex.

Mr. SUTHERLAND (Essex). There are not more than two or three cases in the whole county.

Mr. OSLER. The Ontario government is spending a large amount of money in connection with this quarantine. Are the Ontario government and this government working in harmony or on separate lines ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They are on separate lines, because the Ontario government's duty is to look after health within the province. Our duty is to look after the frontier alone, we do not undertake to deal with the interior of the provinces. When we have been notified by the provincial health authorities that there seems to be danger of the disease coming across the frontier, we take the necessary steps to protect them.

Mr. BENNETT. I would like to call the minister's attention to page D—75 of the Auditor General's report, to the following item : 'Baxter, John, M.D., Thessalon, paid $810.71 ; Parker, F., M.D., Bruce Mines, $387.09 ; Aylesworth, G. M., M.D., Collingwood, $520,000. Now these payments are all in connection with looking after small-pox. May I ask the minister under what rule or system these gentlemen were paid, because these are not frontier towns or villages.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I think Thessalon is one of the lake ports, and I think the other places are too. It was represented that ships were coming in from infected parts in the United States and liable to bring small-pox ; therefor we appointed doctors there.

Mr. BENNETT. I am sorry the hon. member for Algoma (Mr. Dyment) is not in his place. But it does seem odd that a small village like Thessalon should require a doctor to be paid the enormous sum of $810. There no trade at Thessalon beyond an odd vessel coming in for lumber. There is some reason for the services of medical gentlemen at the Soo. There is Dr. Gibson, $1,130, and Dr. Shepherd, $354. I may tell the minister that the complaint is current that all the small-pox that has infested the northern part of Ontario has been brought in across the border at Sault St. Marie. The result has been not only a huge expense to the province but to the municipalities as well. There must have been a great deal of laxity at the Sault St. Marie to have permitted so many cases to come in across the border there. What was the result ? Men coming from Michigan went to the lumber camps in that district, and with the breaking up of operations in the spring they proceeded to different parts of the province and thus transplanted these cases for distances of 100 miles. I know in our own neighbourhood, in the town of Midland and in the township of Tay, the result has been the expenditure of hundred of dollars by the municipalities in looking after these cases. I am well within the mark in saying that in the township of Tay there were seven or eight cases imported directly from these districts, and the result has been that the township authorities were compelled to quarantine the people in their houses, to place guards over them to prevent communication with other persons. More than that, they had to provide means and supply provisions for them for a long time. There must have been a great laxity of surveillance at Sault Ste. Marie not to have prevented so many cases crossing the border. While I regret to bring up this case of Thessalon in the absence of the member for Algoma, it is a striking thing that at a small village like that a medical gentleman should have been paid the huge sum of $810. Dr. Aylesworth of Collingwood was also paid a large sum, that is in the riding of North Simcoe. For the future I trust the minister will see that better means are taken at Sault Ste. Marie to prevent cases coming across and spreading through the northern part of Ontario. It is not simply a matter of spending money in looking after cases when they had got so bad as they did, but there were many cases where people died. I may mention a case that occurred in the town of Orillia. A man came in from one of those lumber districts and went to a leading hotel in the town, and it was found that he had the small-pox. The result was the closing of the hotel for a long time, and a great loss of money to the proprietor, all in consequence of this small-pox spreading from the Soo eastward and all over that district of northern Ontario.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). In my experience I chanced to be in the neighbourhood of the Soo about a year ago. There were two cases of small-pox detected on a train, not by a medical health officer of the provincial government, not by a medical man at all, but by some gentleman who happened to be on the train and who was familiar with it. They were in a second class car. The passengers with whom they had been associated, for how long a distance I do not know, were turned loose into the first class car and those in the first class car were run into the sleeper. One can readily imagine the sensation on that train. Those two passengers were finally quarantined in a second class coach at Sudbury and the train moved on. I can assure the minister that there was a very nervous feeling among the passengers, at all events I can speak for a good many of them. They were in doubt as to whether they should voluntarily go into quarantine, or whether they should go and get themselves fixed up by being fumigated, or what other course to pursue. I mention this to show that these two men had small-pox opened out on them and yet they had been roaming round the country and spreading the contagion.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Did they come across from Michigan ?

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Certainly.

Mr. INGRAM. I do not know whether it is the intention of the government to appoint a travelling inspector of public health, but if they have not one, it would be well to do so. I have not had the pleasure of reading that report.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The report of the Superintendent General of Public Health is in the Departmental Report.

Mr. INGRAM. What is his name ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The Director General of Public Health is Dr. Montizambert, located at Ottawa. He travels around the country.

Mr. INGRAM. And makes it his business to inquire how the medical authorities are doing their duty.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. He does not inquire into what the provincial authorities are doing, they are outside of his purview. He does not interfere with the local authorities.

Mr. INGRAM. I am asking about the Dominion officer appointed by this government. He makes a report as to how the provincial authorities are carrying out their duties, I presume.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. In respect of these two cases, that of Dr. Baxter, of Thessalon, who is paid $810, and the case of Dr. Parker, of Bruce Mines, paid the large sum of $387, what I said as to Thessalon is equally applicable to Bruce Mines. Bruce Mines is not a port of entry for vessels coming from the United States at all. I don't think there is a foot of lumber shipped from that point. There are no saw-mils there. May I ask how these two gentlemen commenced to enter upon their duties ? Was it by the direction of the minister from here upon the complaint of some person, and who was the person that did complain ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I cannot offhand tell you who it was that complained or what representations were made. It was certainly on the local representations that there was a danger of the arrival of the disease at these ports. I have not in my mind the exact representations that were made.

Mr. BENNETT. Since the hon. gentleman has no recollection of the complaints, was it upon the representation of the member for the district ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Possibly ; I cannot say.

Mr. BENNETT. May I ask if in the case of Collingwood it was on the representation of the local member ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Possibly ; I cannot say.

Mr. BENNETT. These are striking coincidences in one or two of these cases. I know that these medical gentlemen are strongly of the same political stripe as the hon. gentlemen who represent these ridings and it seems to me very odd that at a small place like Thessalon this doctor should have commenced on July 1st and continued until the 31st October and that he should have commenced on February 26th and continued until June 30th. It is absurd to claim that in the case of Thessalon it was to watch any suspected parties who might come in on boats because it is absurd to believe that boats were plying there at that time of the year, February 26. In the case of Dr. Parker his time commenced on the 5th of March. No boats possibly could have come in at the time. If the minister has reason to pay these medical gentlemen for services performed there, may I ask him if in the case of these applications which have been made by any of these municipalities he will be disposed to recommend the payment of any of the bills that they have been required to disburse.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I could not make any statement upon such a question until I receive representations from these municipalities.

Mr. CLARKE. Are these medical officers appointed by the Superintendent General of Public Health ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They are appointed by him under the minister, of course.

Mr. CLANCY. It seems to me that after this discussion——

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am a little in error in saying the appointments are made by the superintendent general. They are made by me as minister through the superintendent general of public health.

Mr. CLARKE. He does not recommend the appointments ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. He does not recommend the individual. He recommends the appointment.

Mr. INGRAM. I intended to ask the hon. minister if it is his intention to appoint a travelling inspector under the general superintendent of public health.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have not any such intention.

Mr. CLANCY. I would like to say to the hon. minister that after this discussion, which has brought out some very important information as to the management of his department, we should have some further information. I am in no sense disposed to minimize the importance of a very effective service to prevent the spread of small-pox in Canada, but it would seem, as has been pointed out by the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) and also by the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Ross), that there has been a great deal of laxity. Now, the hon. minister will see the importance of giving the committee fuller information. The hon. gentleman stated that wherever an appointment was made for the frontier service it was done upon the recommendation of the local health authorities.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No.

Mr. CLANCY. Then the hon. minister would say the local member ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, I do not say that.

Mr. CLANCY. Then I will leave it an open question, whether it be on the recommendation of the local member, upon the recommendation of the local authorities, or upon the recommendation of some person or persons other than those already stated. It is important that the committee should have that information before them, also the instructions given to persons employed under such circumstances. If the hon. gentleman will permit me, I wish to point out, while we all admit the importance of an effective service, that abuses may grow up under it. The hon. gentleman has stated that many doctors are still in the employ of the government who were originally appointed, while the services of others have ben discontinued. What the committee ought to have in the first place is the information that induced the minister to give the appointment, and in the next instance where there has been a cessation of the service, the reason for its discontinuance. I think the hon. gentleman had better let the item stand until he gives the committee that information.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is quite impossible, and I do not think it would serve any particular purpose for the director general of public health to go and visit these different localities from time to time. At the time he might visit one there might be no case of disease, and the next day after he left, there might be cases of disease.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman quite misunderstands me. What I asked of the minister was the information that induced him to make the appointments first ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I understand that. I was coming to that.

Mr. CLANCY. Then, again, what induced him to dispense with the services of those who had been employed. Was it upon the recommendation of the superintendent general who made a report to the hon. gentleman before he could act, or upon the report of the local physician employed in the meantime in addition to the report of the superintendent general ? The committee ought to be in possession of that information.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not know if I can explain it thoroughly so that the hon. gentleman will understand it. The ground upon which these gentlemen have been appointed is that it has been caused to appear to the director general of public health that there seemed to be a necessity for guarding the frontier at any one particular place. The necessity, or appearance of it, was derived from two things in particular, although other things might enter into it—the first thing, the conditions prevailing on the other side of the line, and, secondly, the representations of the provincial health officers who had more information in connection with a particular locality than we had. If local or municipal representations were made they were taken into consideration. If representations were made by any well-known individuals in the locality they were also taken into consideration. But, the appointments were made simply and solely when it was believed by the director general of public health and myself that it was necessary to guard the frontier at these particular places. The physicians who are appointed make monthly reports and the condition of affairs on the other side of the line is carefully watched by the director general. Just as soon as these monthly reports showed that there did not seem to be any further necessity of a doctor's continuance in office and when the condition of affairs on the other side of the line showed that the danger had ceased, this gentleman was notified that his services were no longer required and his appointment and pay ceased. There has been continuous employment of some. In the lake ports during the winter time the danger ceases, no vessels are arriving, and therefore there is no danger of contagion being carried. In other ports which are open all winter there might be danger. This is the system which has been carried out and it seems to me to be the only rational system we could carry out. Of course, if we had at the time immediately the scare occurred—I say 'scare,' but I do not mean 'scare' in a discreditable sense at all—but, when the fear occurred, if we had immediately appointed, on all lines of communication betwen Canada and the United States, a doctor to watch for evidences of the disease, this vote would have had to have been two or three times greater than it is, and it would have involved an unnecessary expenditure if we were to adopt such a system. We have tried by all means possible to keep down this expenditure. I know that the director general of public health has kept as close a watch as possible and with my full approval and under my direction he has always tried to dispense with the services of these officers just as soon as the danger ceased to exist. I can assure the hon. gentleman that has been the instruction given, and I believe it has been most fully carried out by the director general of public health.

Mr. CLANCY. Well, every member in this House knows that the inspector general is often helpless against the pressure brought by members and friends of the government.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No.

Mr. CLANCY. The minister knows very well that is the case, and he need not try to deny it. It is the tendency under the system of our government, and every one knows that it is the case. The very statement of the minister himself shows that it is necessary that we should have this information.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I will give all the information.

Mr. CLANCY. And the item will stand until we get that information ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I will let it stand if you wish.

Mr. CLANCY. I assume there is some correspondence between the federal government and the provincial governments on this matter, and I think we ought to be in possession of that.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That correspondence would be very voluminous.

Mr. CLANCY. It is very important.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman had better move for a return and I will bring it down.

Mr. CLANCY. The minister cannot get this item passed without giving this information.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. If I am to read all the correspondence between the director general of public health and the local authorities on this matter, it will take the House several days to listen to me.

Mr. CLANCY. If the minister places the correspondence at our disposal he will have the assistance of this side of the House.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I will have to get copies made.

Mr. CLANCY. The minister has a staff of officers, and the difficulty of getting copies is not insuperable.

Mr. MONK. Has there been correspondence with the provincial authorities of Quebec ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. MONK. The minister told us that we spent $75,000 last year in connection with this service, but as a matter of fact we spent $20,000 more.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That was the figure supplied me by the acting deputy minister, and I took it to be correct.

Mr. MONK. There was a mistake made.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I will find out where the discrepancy is.

Mr. MONK. If the minister does that he will do something which is less necessary than what I want him to do. During that year we were threatened with small-pox, because in the expenditure of $94,000 there is included the cost of vaccine and patrolling and other items which indicate that we feared an invasion of the disease. The minister tells us that this year we are spending not only that amount and $15,000 more, but also a great deal more than that. In what particulars have that increased expenditure been made. Now, the question put by the hon. gentleman for Toronto (Mr. Osler) is very pertinent. In the province of Quebec when we are threatened with an invasion of small-pox, we attend to it ourselves, a fact which is borne out by the statement of the minister that although there is small-pox in the New England states, he has not been asked to take precautions in regard to the frontier of Quebec, and he has not done so. The frontier of Quebec is guarded, and I assume it is done by the local authorities. But the minister has guarded the frontier of other provinces. This very fact shows that the correspondence with the provincial authorities is necessary. I want to know if the department follows one rule in one province and another rule in another province.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No.

Mr. MONK. Then there must be some fixed rule in the department, and we have a right to know what it is before we vote this increased expenditure of $30,000.

Mr. INGRAM. I venture to say that the minister cannot tell me how many cases of small-pox have occurred on the frontier during the past month, because so far as I can see from the report of the director general of public health, there is very little reference to that matter. It is not the duty of the department to tell us where the small-pox is located along the frontier. I have here the Public Health Report of the United States, published according to Act of Congress, and this report shows at a glance the number of cases of small-pox in the frontier states and the date of each case. In Minnesota, for instance, there are 2,676 cases and 12 deaths; in North Dakota, 183 cases and 1 death, and so on. That is a very satisfactory report, and it shows that the authorities in the United States are alive to this important matter, and place before the public the very information which we have tried to get from the minister this evening. If it does cost the people of the United States money they have something to show for it ; but so far as I can find from the report of our department, there is nothing to justify the expenditure that we are making.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The information contained in that report issued by the United States authorities, is obtained from the state authorities. We have not done that.

Mr. INGRAM. Why not ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We have not attempted to do it. That information is published in the reports issued by our provincial authorities, who have charge of such matters within each province. We are only supposed to deal with the importation of the disease across the frontier, and in our report you will find the number of cases that our quarantine officers have dealt with.

Mr. BENNETT. I understand the minister to say that in the appointment of these doctors in the Algoma district, he acted on the representations of the member for Algoma (Mr. Dyment).

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Speaking from memory, I think so.

Mr. BENNETT. I think so too, and I think it is rather creditable to the hon. gentleman who represents that district, that he seems to have passed the word to his medical friends—for I assume they are his medical friends—that they had better start at this calling on a certain date; because it is a very odd coincidence that Dr. Baxter of Thessalon, started on his duties on July 1st, and ended them on the 31st of October; that Dr. Hamilton, of Fort William, started on the same date and ended on the same date; that Dr. Gibson, of Sault Ste. Marie, also started on the same date, and ended on the same date. It seems that the word was spread about that these gentlemen might give their services to the government at the very fair salary of $100 a month. I find also that Dr. Aylesworth, of Collingwood, started on the 1st of July, and ended on the 31st of October. It is absurd to argue that they were all on the look-out for vessels, because Dr. Parker, of Bruce Mines, started on the 5th of March, long before navigation opened. I would ask the hon. minister specially to bring down the correspondence which relates to the appointment of these medical gentlemen in the district of Algoma at the points which I have referred to.

Mr. STEPHENS. I may state for the information of the committee in regard to the health officer at Rondeau, that in some winters the boats run all winter, and in others they only run to the 1st of January. This year they stopped running in December, and of course the officer quit work when the boats stopped running.

Mr. CLANCY. Did the hon. gentleman recommend the appointment, and was it solely upon his recommendation that Dr. McCullough was appointed at that port?

Mr. STEPHENS. I did not recommend the appointment at all. I think the appointment was recommended by the Ontario Health Department—by Dr. Bryce.

Mr. CLANCY. I think Dr. Bryce has quite as much zeal in a party sense as the hon. gentleman himself.

Mr. STEPHENS. I have no doubt it was a good appointment, because I understand that he found men who actually had small-pox, and sent them back to Cleveland. On the whole, it strikes me that it would be very hard for any minister to do what the opposition recommends. One man gets up and complains that he is spending altogether too much money, while others recommend that more money should be spent.

Mr. CLANCY. I had no intention of referring to the appointment, which I believe was made on the recommendation of the hon. member for Kent. I prefer to discuss the question on its merits. So far as I can learn, there was not a case of small-pox in that quarter; but I ask the hon. member for West Lambton (Mr. Johnston), who represents a constituency where people may come across at all times, whether it was not reported on good authority that there were a good many cases of small-pox in Marine City on the River St. Clair. That hon. gentleman, I will say it to his credit, did not load physicians on the public service, although he is a physician himself. My hon. friend from Kent knows perfectly well that the object was simply to take care of Dr. McCullough. I would have preferred to be spared making any reference to the appointment, for which there is no defence whatever. If Dr. Bryce made the recommendation, he had better turn his attention to the frontier along the River St. Clair or to Windsor, which escaped his vigilant eye.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman has spoken of Rondeau. I may say that boats run direct to that point from Cleveland, which was one of the places most infested with small-pox. In regard to what the hon. member for Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) has said, there is a very simple explanation. The fear of small-pox existed in the month of June, and there was a very general demand for the immediate appointment of health officers. These appointments all commenced about the 1st of July, because that was when the fear arose and the demand was made, and they ceased on the same date, because that was the date when navigation on the lakes ceased.

Mr. STEPHENS. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) tries to make out that the appointment of an officer at Rondeau was all my doing. I say openly and above board that I never recommended it.

Mr. CLANCY. I am glad the hon. gentleman repudiates it.

Mr. STEPHENS. I did not know the government were going to place an officer there until I was told so by the department here. The hon. gentleman knows that Rondeau is seven or eight miles from any town or any medical man. It is far different in that respect from Windsor, where there are many doctors, and also a medical health officer, who could prevent any person with small-pox from coming into the country. At Rondeau boats come from Cleveland every day, and on some days there are two or three boats. As soon as the boats start again, if the department does not appoint a man there, I will ask it to do so, because I think it is really necessary.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Does the minister keep himself posted as to the prevalence of small-pox in the large centres along the boarder ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The director general of public health does. I do not.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). The minister is the Minister of Public Health. There is no need of quibbling.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There is no intention of quibbling.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). What are the steps which the minister takes ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The director general of public health receives the reports of the local health officers, as I have already stated to the committee.

Mr. INGRAM. Is there a health officer at Port Stanley, from which a boat runs to Ashtabula, Ohio ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I cannot say whether there was an officer there during the summer or not. There is not now.

Mr. BENNETT. I think the minister's reason why the services of these men in Algoma were discontinued in October is a very poor one, because I am informed that small-pox assumes a worse phase as the weather gets colder, and instead of the boats stopping running on the 31st of October, they often do not stop until November, and sometimes December. I am afraid that the fact is that the pressure on the minister was too great for him to resist, and that after a time the appointments were swelling so much that the gentleman in charge of the department called a halt. However, when the reports come down, they will show who recommended the appointments of all these doctors in Algoma. It appears they were appointed for very different reasons. At some places, where a large vessel called, they were appointed on account of the vessel; in other cases, where there was superior zeal on the part of the doctor in applying for the position and on the part of the member in recommending him, the doctors started their duties before navigation opened at all. When the minister brings down the papers, I hope he will bring down those respecting the appointment of Dr. Aylesworth, of Collingwood.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Did these officers give certificates or clean bills of health to persons coming on the trains ? What charge per head was made for the certificate ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There was no charge and no certificate.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Certainly the doctors issued certificates and there was quite a rivalry among them. In some instances, in the absence of the doctor, their wives made out the certificates. The usual charge was a dollar, but finally they got it down to 50 cents each.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have no knowledge of it.

Mr. MONK. I think it would be necessary for us to see the reports of these medical appointees.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There are monthly reports from each of them.

Mr. SPROULE. I understand the minister to say that I was complaining that the expenditure was too heavy. What I complained of was that we were either spending too little or too much. We are spending too much for a very imperfect service and too little for a very good service. And while we have been spending a very considerable sum, our expenditure is without much effect, because the disease has been imported over and over again from the other side notwithstanding all our precautions. I cannot understand how so large a number of cases could come in if ordinary precautions had been taken. I do not complain of the expense, but of the laxity of the regulations and the provisions taken to prevent the importation of the disease.

Mr. CLARKE. Are the services of these local medical officers dispensed with on the recommendation of the chief medical officer ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, he reports to me and I authorize him to dispense with their services.

Mr. CLARKE. Have any steps been taken by the officers of the department to secure the co-operation of the provincial authorities ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The work of each is entirely separate. We have not asked them to do our work, nor have they asked us to do theirs.

Mr. CLARKE. Is there any correspondence in the department between the two ? It would be very advisable for the Dominion to secure the co-operation of the local authorities in stamping out this disease. In some sections of Ontario it has made considerable ravages, and our urban municipalities have had to expend large sums. It is utterly impossible to think that if there were co-operation between the Dominion and the provincial officers more satisfactory results would not be obtained. It is unfortunate, notwithstanding the appointments of so many officers along the frontier in Ontario, that such a vast number of cases have been allowed to pass.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman is exaggerating. We have no such information.

Mr. CLARKE. The newspapers say so, and they got their information from the medical authorities very largely, and their reports have been found substantially correct. At any rate, I think that better results would be obtained if the Dominion officers would co-operate with the provincial officers.

Mr. MONK. Is there any correspondence between the Quebec Board of Health and the hon. gentleman's department on this subject ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There are one or two letters and I will bring them down.

Mr. CLARKE. Is there any correspondence with the Public Health Department of Ontario ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I will bring that down also.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. I would ask for the same privilege for Manitoba. I understand that the disease spread considerably in Manitoba on account of the laxity of the service at the boundary in allowing cases from Dakota to cross the line. We have had several cases traced to Dakota.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. My inspector denies point blank that anything of the kind occurred.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. There is a general complaint in Manitoba that cases of small-pox were allowed to cross the border. The fact is notorious.

Item allowed to stand.

Tracadie Lazeretto, $5,500.

Mr. CLANCY. Has the vote been exhausted ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is exhausted each year. It is a fixed sum paid the Sisters of Charity to manage the hospital and to pay the doctor's salary, and other expenses.

Public Works Health Act, $4,000.

Mr. CLANCY. Has the hon. gentleman appointed a travelling physician, as he stated he intended to do ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I appointed a travelling inspector, but not a physician. His name is C. A. L. Fisher, of Montreal.

Mr. MONK. What are his particular qualifications and what are the duties ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The duties are to inspect the operations of contractors and managers of public works, to see that they carry out the provisions of the Health Act.

Mr. MONK. Is not that more the work of a physician ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Not necessarily.

Mr. MONK. Has it no reference to hygiene ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It has reference to carrying out the provisions of the Act.

Mr. MONK. What was Mr. Fisher's occupation up to the time of his appointment ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I think he was a real estate agent in Montreal.

Mr. SPROULE. It would seem much more proper to have appointed a medical man. To look after the sanitary condition of a public work would require the judgment and knowledge of a physician. In many cases an ordinary person could judge, but in others the knowledge of the physician would be necessary.

Mr. MONK. What is Mr. Fisher's salary?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is $1,800.

Mr. MONK. Is he paid expenses ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Travelling expenses, not living expenses.

Mr. INGRAM. I suppose this has to do with public works under the authority of the Dominion, not those under provincial authority ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Quite so.

Mr. INGRAM. Has this officer furnished a report ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, it forms an appendix to the report of the department.

Mr. INGRAM. Has he visited the public works during the year ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, those coming under the Act.

Mr. SPROULE. All public works carried on by the government would be under the Act ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, or those under contract with the Dominion or on which Dominion money is being spent.

Mr. SPROULE. If he finds an unsanitary condition of affairs, would he be competent to deal with it, not being a medical man ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Under the Act, the manager of the work or the contractor or his representative is obliged to have a physician on the work or within reach. The duty of the inspector is to see that these provisions are carried out. He is not required to act as a physician himself. It was thought that we could get a layman to carry out the provisions of the Act as efficiently and at less expense than by employing a physician. The Act calls for proper accommodation in the way of hospitals, proper medical attendance for employees and so on. The inspector sees to it that these provisions are carried out.

Mr. SPROULE. If the inspector found something in an unsanitary condition and referred it to the company's physician, he would refer it to one whose interest is with the contractors. The contractor will not wish to undertake the expense necessary to change the conditions. How are they to agree upon what is a proper sanitary condition ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There is a sanitary board for each public work under the regulations. This board consists of the physician, the manager, or contractor, or his representative, and the inspector. If there were a serious dispute, the director general of public health would be called in. This work is done under his supervision and control, and he would be the professional referee.

Mr. SPROULE. I apprehend that the inspector would have but little influence, having against him two men whose interests are those of the contractor.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. He can always refer to the director general of public health.

Mr. SPROULE. How many times is it necessary for the inspector to visit these public works ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Taking up his duties last year, he visited every public work, and he will probably visit them again during the coming year. We get reports from these local boards.

Mr. SPROULE. I fear that these reports will not be as valuable as if coming from the inspector, because of the fact that they are from the representative of the contractor, and it would be their object to defend themselves as far as possible.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Of course, there is a penalty upon the contractor if he does not carry out the regulations, and it is the inspector's duty to see that the law in this respect is lived up to. Of course we cannot have an inspector on these works all the time, but we can have him go whenever possible. Mr. Fisher went through to the Pacific Coast last year and visited every work.

Mr. SPROULE. It seems to me that if the work is to be effective it will be necessary for the inspector to visit each public work from time to time. Premises might be in a sanitary condition to-day then, a month hence, be in the very opposite condition. The object is a good one if properly carried out, it would no doubt have beneficial results for the labouring men who have but little influence in controlling the situation in these matters. But, to carry out the Act effectively it seems to me, an intelligent medical man should be appointed, and he should visit the works every two or three months.

Mr. MONK. I think it a great pity that the government, when inaugurating the work of this Act, did not choose as inspector a physician. From what I know, of Mr. Fisher, I believe that he is an old man. I have known him as a real estate agent, I believe, and, I think he is one of the principle organizers of the Liberal party.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. He was secretary of the Liberal Club.

Mr. MONK. I think the department made a great mistake in not choosing a young physician. One could have been employed at far less expense than this. The government could have chosen a young physician, one at the beginning of his career, and thus have given him encouragement, which is always welcome at such a time. I cannot understand why we have an expenditure last year of $600 and, with a salary of $1,800 which is far too great for the nominee, we have now an expenditure of $4,000. Is there mention in Mr. Fisher's report of travelling expenses ? There must have been considerable to bring the item up to such a figure.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. When this question came up on the first item for this purpose, it was distinctly stated in the House that the appointment should not be given to a physician. The work is being done largely in the interests of the workingmen employed on these public works, and it was thought that there would be far more confidence in the operation of the Act if a professional man were not appointed. So far as the expenditure is concerned, Mr. Fisher's term of office did not commence until quite late in the year, the expenditure for travelling will be considerable, as he has to travel nearly all the time.

Winnipeg and St. Boniface hospitals $4,000.

Mr. McCREARY. Last year when this item came before the House, I asked that it be increased, but I find that it still remains at the same figure. I think it is well to draw the attention of the Minister of Agriculture and of the committee to the fact that these two hospitals are practically doing Dominion work. Most of the members of this committee are aware that we have coming into that province now pretty nearly 50,000 people per year, coming from Europe, from Great Britain and from the United States. We have two hospitals there, the St. Boniface hospital, under the supervision of the Roman Catholic Church, but which is by no means confined to members of that church, it is a general hospital in every particular; then we have the general hospital at Winnipeg. But I want to say that nearly one-third of all the patients treated in these hospitals are immigrants who have arrived either at once or within a year. Now, is it fair to the people of the west that they should be asked to support these hospitals when the balance of Canada gets the benefit ? I think this item should be increased to at least $10,000, and should be distributed equally between the two hospitals. It should be charged, if that can be done, to the Department of Agriculture, if not, then to the Interior Department. I know when the Minister of the Interior comes to lay his estimates before this House, and when the Minister of Finance comes to make his budget speech, they will both boast of the great progress the west is making, of the large number of immigrants coming in; they will both talk in loud tones of the large quantity of wheat being exported from that country, and undoubtedly will talk loudly of the great progress of the west. If that is so, why should they not contribute at least something to help the sick of those people who come to the west to create that wealth ? I think my hon. friend from Provencher (Mr. LaRiviere) will back me up in saying that the amount voted for these two hospitals is too small, that the Dominion governmen should pay at least $10,000, to be divided equally between them.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. We had in the estimates in former years the sum of $10,000 for these two institutions. I am sorry it has been decreased, not so much by the present government as by the former one. At any rate, the amount is quite inadequate, as my hon. friend from Selkirk (Mr. McCreary) said; because these two institutions are performing the duty of taking care of sick people not only for Manitoba but for the Northwest. When immigrants arriving at Winnipeg take sick, as they frequently do after the long sea voyage, they are sent to either one of these two institutions regardless of creed or nationality. They are both general hospitals. In fact, I may say that the St. Boniface hospital, though known to be a Roman Catholic institution, cares for more Protestants than Roman Catholics. I agree with my hon. friend who has just spoken, and join him in begging the government to reconsider their recommendation and to increase the amount which is offered to these two institutions.

Mr. McCREARY.

Some resolutions reported.

On motion of the Minister of Finance, House adjourned at 11.30 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, February 26th, 1902.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 9) respecting the United Gold Fields Company of British Columbia, Limited.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 10) respecting the Orford Mountain Railway Company.—Mr. Parmalee.

REPORT PRESENTED.

Annual Report of the Department of Marine and Fisheries.—Hon. Mr. Sutherland.

MEDICAL COUNCIL IN CANADA.

Mr. T. G. RODDICK (Montreal, St. Antoine) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 11) to provide for the establishment of a medical council in Canada. He said : Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention to take up the time of the House at this stage with any lengthy remarks, but I would simply like your permission to say, Sir, that since I had the opportunity about a year ago in this House, of explaining this measure fully, I have met representatives of the medical profession from every province in the Dominion of Canada, at a convention held in the city of Winnipeg in August last at which this measure was endorsed in its entirety with one or two exceptions or amendments, notably an alteration in the proposed composition of the council. The council, will, under the present draft bill, be somewhat changed in its method of election ; that is to say, that instead of three representatives from each province, as was originally intended, the representation shall now be based on the number of medical men in each province, making for the larger provinces a very considerable increase. Another change which was decided upon was to have the ten universities of Canada represented on this council. With the exception of these there have been no alterations in the original Bill as presented to this House at the last session of parliament. I have reason to believe that the medical men in this House, of whom there are fourteen or fifteen, are almost unanimous, if not unanimous, in their endorsation of this measure, and I hope they will join me in the request which I intend making on the second reading of this Bill, that the right hon. leader of the government shall consent to the appointment of a committe, which shall be composed chiefly of the medical men of the House with one or two legal gentlemen, who shall have an opportunity of studying the measure and of hearing any delegates who may come from the various provinces in order to suggest changes or amendments in it. I have been anxious that the profession should thoroughly understand the measure, and now I am exceedingly anxious that the medical men in this House and my hon. friends of other persuasions, shall also thoroughly understand it. I have purposely not pushed the Bill because I was most anxious that every one should be thoroughly satisfied with it. Now, I think the time has come when I may proceed to a second and a final stage. My motion is seconded by Mr. Bell.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the first time.

QUESTIONS.

WATER PRIVILEGES IN WELLAND CANAL.

Mr. HOLMES asked :

What is the nature and extent of the water privileges on the Welland canal enjoyed by the Merriton Paper Company ? What rental do they pay therefor ? Have they any privileges granted by a previous government for which they are not paying the usual rate ? If so, how long have they had the same, and for what length of time is it yet to run ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). The name of the Merriton Paper Company does not appear on the records of this department either as lessee or as the assignee or sub-lessee of any lease of water privilege on the Welland Canal.

THE PERMANENT CORPS.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked :

1. What was the total cost of the permanent corps for the year 1901-2

2. How many military certificates were issued to officers during the same year ?

3. How many to non-commissioned officers and men ?

4. How many of each (a) officers, (b) non-commissioned officers and men attending the schools were from (1) rural corps, (2) city corps, (3) permanent corps ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. F. W. Borden) :

1. The cost to 31st January has been about $300,000, divided as follows : Pay, $181,619; supplies, $83,909; clothing, $19,000; stores, $12,000; transport, $4,000.

2. Officers, 323 certificates.

3. N.C.O.'s and men, 256 certificates.

4. This information is being obtained from the officers commanding the units of the permanent corps. It will be some time before it is complete.

SALE OF BINDER TWINE.

Mr. BLAIN—by Mr. Ward—asked :

1. How was the binder twine advertised that was unsold on June 30th, 1901 ?

2. Was the binder twine sold by public auction or by tender ?

3. To whom was it sold, and what was the price ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick) :

1. By advertisement in newspapers, and also by circular to previous customers.

2. By tender.

3. To S. S. Dickinson, one ton of sisal at $6 per cwt. To Henderson Black, balance of twine at $4.80 per cwt. for sisal twine, $5.10 per cwt. for mixed twine.

EMPLOYEES KILLED ON CANADIAN RAILWAYS.

Mr. PUTTEE asked :

1. How many employees of Canadian railways were killed during the year ending June 30th, 1901 ?

2. How many were injured ?

3. What was the classification of employment of each ?

4. In how many cases were railway companies found contributory by negligence through faulty appliances or otherwise ?

5. In how many cases was indemnity paid by railway companies (a) to the injured, (b) to the relatives of those killed ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). In the absence of the Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) I beg to say :

1. One hundred and eighteen employees were killed.

2. Nine hundred and seventy employees were injured.

3. Unable to answer this question, as there is no such information on record in the department.

4. Unable to answer this question, as there is no such information on record in the department.

5. Unable to answer this question, as there is no such information on record in the department.

AMENDMENT TO SUPREME COURT ACT.

Mr. LaRIVIERE asked :

1. Has a copy of the following resolution, adopted at a meeting of the bar of Manitoba, held at Winnipeg on Saturday, the 15th day of February, 1902, been received by the Honourable the Minister of Justice :—

'That, as there is now a large and increasing population in Manitoba, the North-west Territories and British Columbia, and in view of the rapidly growing importance of these provinces, it is in the opinion of the bar of Manitoba due to that portion of Canada lying west of Ontario that there should be appointed for such territory at least one judge to the Supreme Court of Canada, and the bar of Manitoba respectfully urges that the government of the Dominion of Canada make such amendment to the Supreme Court Act as will enable such additional judge to be appointed.'

2. Will any amendment be proposed by the government to the Supreme Court Act in order that judges of that court may be appointed from the bars of Manitoba, the North-west Territories and British Columbia ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). A copy of the resolution referred to was received in the Department of Justice. It is not the present intention to make any amendment to the Supreme Court Act.

TRENT VALLEY AND RICE LAKE CANALS.

Mr. WARD asked :

1. Has the Minister of Railways and Canals taken any action since last session regarding the continuation of the Trent Valley Canal from Rice Lake to Lake Ontario ?

2. Has any engineer's report been obtained by the Department of Railways and Canals since the last report of Mr. Rogers, C.E., as to the comparative advantages of the routes by the Trent River and Port Hope ?

3. Has the government decided upon the adoption of either of these routes ? If so, which ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland) :

1. No action has been taken since last session.

2. No engineer's report has been obtained since the last report of Mr. Rogers.

3. No, the adoption of either route has not been decided.

YUKON TERRITORY—SHERIFF EILBECK.

Mr. WARD asked :

1. Is Mr. R. J. Eilbeck, sheriff of the Yukon Territory ? If so, when was he appointed, and at what salary ?

2. Has Mr. R. J. Eilbeck had leave of absence from his duties for several months past, and, if so, has he being drawing his salary as sheriff during the time of such leave ?

3. Is the Minister of the Interior or any other member of the government aware that Mr. Eilbeck took an active part in the recent election in West Durham ?

4. Did the Minister of the Interior or any other member of the government meet Mr. Eilbeck in the West Riding of Durham while the election was pending there ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick) :

1. Mr. Eilbeck is sheriff of the Yukon Territory and was appointed 24th October, 1899. His salary was fixed later on at $2,000 per annum. His present salary is $3,000 per annum.

2. Yes, as to leave of absence. He has drawn his salary up to the end of December last. In regard to the third and fourth paragraphs, I have to say that it is not to my knowledge that Mr. Eilbeck was in West Durham during the last election, and I am requested by the Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Sifton) to say that it is not to his knowledge that he was there.

CHANGES IN THE CABINET.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Before the business of the House is proceeded with, I may call to mind that some few days ago the hon. gentleman who leads the opposition asked the government to make some explanation as to the ministerial changes which have taken place recently. I thought at the time, if I may say so, that his request came a little too late for he had noticed the changes in his speech in the debate on the Address from the Throne, and he presented to the House his observations in regard to the matter, which on the whole were not at all unfavourable. But, if my hon. friend wants to have the subject re-opened, of course there can be no objection.

I have only to say, what is within the knowledge of every one, that in the interval between last session and the opening of this session two vacancies occurred on the bench of the Supreme Court caused by the deaths of Mr. Justice King and Mr. Justice Gwynne. The government, in view of the situation, came to the conclusion that these vacancies on the bench would be worthily filled by Sir Louis Davies and the Hon. Mr. Mills. As to the qualifications of the Hon. Mr. Mills and of Sir Louis Davies it is needless to say anything in this House. They had both been for many years very valuable and trusted members of the House of Commons of Canada. Mr. Mills was one of the oldest of our parliamentarians ; he having sat continuously, with the exception of one session, either in one branch of the legislature or the other, since confederation. Of his legal abilities, and of his constitutional talent and knowledge, we who are his old colleagues in this House have had many and many evidences.

Sir Louis Davies after having served an honourable career in his own province came to this House for the first time in 1882, and he immediately took a leading and commanding position which he retained to the end of his parliamentary career. Those who have been members of parliament and in public life for a great many years, know that the responsibilities which are involved in this country by the discharge of parliamentary duties are very exacting and very absorbing in their nature, and that they tend to produce a strain upon the system which it is hard to bear. There comes a craving at a certain period of life for rest —not absolute rest, at all events that comparative rest which is to be found in the performance of duties which are not so absorbing. Had it not been for this consideration, for my part I would have hesitated very much before thinking of offering these gentlemen a position on the bench, because I realize as parliament must realize also, how much the government and parliament loses by their absence. Nobody can realize how much I shall lose personally, having had their valuable support since it was my privilege to become the leader of the Liberal party in Canada. However, these considerations were put aside and we thought we owed it to these veterans in public life to call them to a sphere where their services would be of a different nature but still equally profitable to their country. But what parliament will lose the bench will gain. As to the fitness of these two gentlemen for the position to which they were called, I have not heard a word of dissent, nor do I believe that on this occasion there will be any objection raised. That they are eminently fitted for the positions they occupy was testified to, I am happy to say, by such a prominent member of the House as my hon. friend from Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart), and so far as Sir Louis Davies is concerned a tribute was paid to him by the hon. gentleman from Prince (Mr. Hackett) who has been a long life friend, although a political opponent of the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

The question then arose as to how the portfolios which were vacated by the accession of these gentlemen to the Supreme Court bench were so well filled. Sir Louis Davies had been Minister of Marine and Fisheries from the formation of this government, and the administration came to the conclusion that we would recommend as a most fit and proper person to succeed him, the Hon. James Sutherland, member for North Oxford.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The PRIME MINISTER. We believed that Mr. Sutherland was a most qualified person to discharge the duties appertaining to that important office. We knew Mr. Sutherland beforehand. He had been for two years a member of the administration without portfolio and during these two years the House has had on more than one occasion reason to appreciate his great administrative abilities, as the House had also occasion to appreciate for many years before the sterling qualities with which he is endowed.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The PRIME MINISTER. This is the first time that the portfolio of Marine and Fisheries has been held by a gentleman who does not belong to the maritime provinces, but though the fishing industry in the maritime provinces is of very great importance, it must be remembered that there are other provinces in the Dominion which also have very great interests in that industry. The province of Ontario, if it is a second, is a good second to the maritime provinces in the extent of its fishing interests. Moreover, while it is proper that the portfolio should be held by one who represents a province in which there is a valuable fishing industry, it is not to be disputed that it is fit and proper that in the representation in the Cabinet all provinces should have a voice, and everybody will agree with me that the proportion as to the representation between one province and another province is not absolute, nor can there be a cast iron rule about it. Some elasticity must prevail according to time and circumstance, and I think that under the present circumstances the choice that we have made will not be criticized in any part of the Dominion.

With regard to the portfolio of Justice we came to the conclusion that nobody could fill it better than the hon. gentleman who for five years has been Solicitor General, and who has discharged the duties of that office not only with marked acceptance from both sides of the House, but with conspicuous ability.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The PRIME MINISTER. We believe that although the portfolio of Justice has been held in the past by lawyers of very great eminence, the Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick will prove himself in every way their peer.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The PRIME MINISTER. This left a vacancy in the office of the Solicitor General, and though the Solicitor General does not belong to the Cabinet, perhaps it may not be out of place that I should say that we thought of offering the position to a young gentleman from the province of Quebec, who has shown himself on every occasion that he addressed the House, to be a man of very great ability indeed. Mr. Carroll is Solicitor General.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The PRIME MINISTER. It only remains for me to say that in view of the growing importance of the west, Senator Templeman has been appointed and sworn a member of the Cabinet without portfolio.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The PRIME MINISTER. These are the changes that have taken place in the Cabinet, and such as they are we present them to the House with the full belief that they will command the support of our friends and challenge the criticism of our opponents.

Mr. SPEAKER. It is perhaps better that a motion should be made. It is moved by Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Mr. Speaker, as there seems to be some doubt in the mind of my right hon. friend as to whether or not it was proper that these explanations should be made to the House, I took the opportunity of looking into that question, and I find that it is laid down by the highest authorities that a government should, even when reconstructed, offer explanations to the House. In 'Todd's parliamentary practice in England,' at page 489, it is said :

> The most eminent authorities agree that when a cabinet is reconstructed it is as necessary to enter into explanations as when a total change of government takes place. When Mr. Gladstone retired from the cabinet, in 1845, he said, that he freely and entirely recognized the claim of the House to be correctly informed of the motives which lead members either to accept office under the Crown or to undertake the scarcely less grave responsibility of quitting it.

If my right hon. friend supposed that I desired to have these explanations for the purpose of making any extended criticism upon them, he is entirely mistaken. I took the ground from this side of the House that it was proper that the leader of the government should, with respect to the reconstruction of his cabinet, make the explanations to the House which he has now made. With regard to the two gentlemen who have been appointed to the bench of the Supreme Court, I can only say that my relations with them, during the short period I was with them in parliament, were of a very kindly nature. I do not know that it would be proper for me, a barrister, likely to appear before them in the Supreme Court of Canada, to make any remarks with regard to their fitness for that position. I can only add to what the right hon. gentleman has said, that the position occupied by both of these gentlemen in the parliament of Canada was a very high one.

With regard to the changes which have been made in the cabinet by the appointment of my hon. friend from Oxford (Hon. Mr. Sutherland), I am glad to add my word to that of the right hon. premier, that I do not see any particular reason, although I am from the maritime provinces, why that position should always be held by a gentleman from those provinces. Possibly it may be of advantage to the country that a gentleman from Ontario should hold that position and come into nearer touch with the maritime provinces than he otherwise would; because I am prepared to say here, what I have said elsewhere, that I believe it to be very much to the interest of this country that the public men of one section should become thoroughly familiar with other districts of the country, and the hon. gentleman's duties will necessarily bring him into contact with the maritime provinces. I desire to say further that I believe the hon. gentleman will find plenty of opportunity for active, careful and energetic administration in the Department of Marine and Fisheries, that he is undertaking great responsibilities when he assumes that department, and that I trust that in the future we may have the opportunity of congratulating rather than criticising him upon his work there. At the same time, I am bound to tell him that when occasion does arise for criticism of his future work in that department, we shall always be ready to give him a helping hand in that way, and to point out the right course when we think he is not steering exactly in the proper direction.

With regard to the position of Minister of Justice, I agree with the right hon. gentleman that that office has been held by very able men, and I believe that my hon. friend the present Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) will uphold its high traditions. I may say in passing that the office of Minister of Justice has been held by no less than four members of the bar of the province of Nova Scotia, of which I have the honour to be a member. The first was the present chief justice of the province, the Hon. James McDonald, the next was Sir John Thompson, then Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, and lastly the Hon. Arthur R. Dickey. Therefore, we of the bar of Nova Scotia always feel a considerable interest in the Ministry of Justice and in the gentleman who happens to fill that position for the time being. I have not the same intimate acquaintance with the hon. gentleman who takes the position of Solicitor General (Hon. Mr. Carroll), that I have with the Minister of Justice, but I desire also to extend to him my congratulations on the honour which has been bestowed upon him.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). Mr. Speaker, I rise to ask how the present government can reconcile these acts with the position of their colleague, the Postmaster General (Hon. Mr. Mulock), in view of the fact that he placed on record a few years ago their opinion, that no member of this House should be appointed to a place of emolument under the Crown until at least two years after he had left the House.

The PRIME MINISTER. That is something which is very easily explained. That is one of those falsehoods which have been started by some gentlemen on the other side, repeated by his neighbour, and then by him to his neighbour, and at last by everybody. The truth of the matter is simply this, that I think in 1894 or 1895, my hon. friend the present Postmaster General, who was then a private member of this House, introduced a Bill in the sense which has just been mentioned by my hon. friend from Grey. My hon. friend the Postmaster General thought, rightly or wrongly—for my part, I thought wrongly—that we should have that legislation on our statute-book. I never favoured it, nor do I know of a single member on this side of the House who expressed approval of it. My hon. friend the Postmaster General was in advance of the time. He received no support from the other side of the House. Hon. members opposite scouted his Bill, they would not vote for it, and it never came even to a second reading. It was read the first time, and never went beyond that, and the matter was absolutely forgotten until four or five years afterwards, when these hon. gentlemen sitting on the other side of the House thought fit to resurrect that old dead issue in the hope of making some political capital out of it. But I can say to my hon. friend that after all I am only flesh and blood, and I am satisfied to have the approval of the country for the changes we have made.

Mr. MONK. May I ask the right hon. gentleman if there is any truth in the rumour of the resignation of the hon. Postmaster General ?

The PRIME MINISTER. I can assure my hon. friend that there is no truth in it.

Hon. DAVID TISDALE (South Norfolk). Mr. Speaker, however the right hon. leader of the government may have answered the remark of the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), I hope he does not deny that that position was a strongly advocated plank of the Liberal candidates throughout the province of Ontario. I really forget what happened to that Bill, but I know that a number of Liberals were in favour of it, and I know that throughout the province of Ontario, not only during the contest of 1891, but in 1887 and previously, one of the great subjects of complaint by Liberals was that the Conservative party were appointing members of parliament or men which had been members of parliament to offices of emolument. For my part, I am on record in 'Hansard' in favour of doing so, because I am one of those who are willing to express their opinions, whatever they may be, upon all questions that come before this House. At the same time, it is perfectly proper—and that is one of the reasons why I rose at this time—to ask explanations from a party which in opposition advocated a measure on which a great principle was at stake, and in regard to which the electors of the country held very different and very strong opinions. It is very proper to recall to the recollection of hon. gentlemen a principle which they advocated when out of power, and which they abnegate when they are in power.

This is not a matter worthy of long discussion, but there is another subject on which I would ask leave to trouble the House in connection with these same appointments. Let me say that, so far as the two hon. gentlemen themselves are concerned, I have every confidence in their integrity and ability to fill the high positions to which they have been called. I think their appointments are excellent ones, but there is, in this respect, another high principle departed from entirely. In a session not long since, legislation was introduced to fix a limit of age, after which no one should be appointed. It was proposed to go even further and make this legislation retroactive. I opposed it because I considered that it would be a breach of faith on the part of parliament to make ex post facto legislation with regard to gentlemen who had accepted positions under the law guaranteeing their retention of these positions during life. What more do we find ? We find the hon. the Minister of Justice declaring that he proposes to introduce this session a Bill fixing an age limit in the case of the county court judges of Ontario, and fixing a limit which would have prevented the making of one of the appointments lately made. I could not gather from the remarks of the hon. minister whether he proposed to make the Bill relating to the county court judges retroactive or not, and I wish to place myself on record as opposing any such proposition. Why should he deal with the county court judges of Ontario and not with the judges of other courts ? Why is Ontario specially singled out, whose county court judges are in every way capable ? And if you are going to apply any limit to the county court judges, you should make the same limit apply to the higher judges. Were you to apply to the Supreme Court the age limit, which it is proposed to apply to the county court judges, you would render the last gentleman appointed to the Supreme Court bench ineligible for the position.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. My hon. friend was not in the House when I made a few remarks a day or two ago with reference to prospective legislation affecting county court judges, and I know him to be an extremely fair minded gentleman who would not willingly misrepresent any statement made in this House. My hon. friend must bear in mind that there never was any intention to introduce exceptional legislation with regard to Ontario. Any legislation that may be introduced with respect to the county court judges must be made applicable to all such judges throughout the Dominion. With respect to the other question, as to whether or not similar legislation might be made applicable to the High Court judges, I drew attention to the fact that the county court judges hold their office under an entirely different tenure, and while we have no right to interfere in any way with the High Court judges, we have special jurisdiction by statute with respect to county court judges. In any event there is no desire to interfere at all unnecessarily with any judges. On the contrary, my desire is to respect the bench in every particular, to hold absolutely sacred the position of judges. But at the same time, while I hold their position sacred, it must be borne in mind that the public have certain rights and that it is no advantage to the bench that men should occupy positions there for which they are admittedly not qualified. With respect to the age limit, it was intended to provide a limit which would vary from seventy to seventy-five years, coupled with a tenure of office of at least twenty-five years. And in addition it was suggested that the change should be made optional, so far as the High Court judges are concerned, because we could not make it compulsory with them. With respect to county court judges, if a man has reached the advanced age of from seventy to seventy-five and has in addition been twenty-five years on the bench, to allow him to retire on full pay would not be a very great hardship.

COMMUTATION OF SENTENCES—ARSON OR INCENDIARISM.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier) moved for :

Return showing (1st) the number of commutations of sentences that have been granted through the Department of Justice to prisoners convicted of arson or incendiarism during the years 1899, 1900 and 1901 respectively ; (2nd) the places where the crimes were committed ; (3rd) the sentences imposed ; (4th) in which cases the report of the trial judge was favourable to conviction.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). There is no objection to the motion, except so far as concerns the fourth paragraph, that which refers to the report of the trial judges. These reports have invariably been considered by the Department of Justice as confidential communications, and it is not intended to depart from the rule that has been followed by the department since confederation. I am sure that my hon. friend will see that we cannot bring down these reports.

Mr. MONK. I have no objection to withdrawing the fourth paragraph.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. In that case I will move to strike out all the words after the word 'imposed.'

Motion (Mr. Monk) amended as proposed, agreed to.

COMMISSIONS TO CANADIAN OFFICERS IN THE BRITISH ARMY.

Mr. HENRI BOURASSA (Labelle) (translation), moves for :

Copy of all papers and correspondence relating to the granting of commissions to Canadian officers in the British army.

Mr. Speaker, last year I moved a similar resolution to this one ; it was agreed to, on March 11th. On May 11th, I again moved for the production of those papers, and the government gave me the formal promise that they would be brought down as speedily as possible, but it was only on the day before prorogation that I got a certain number of the documents called for. I have now before me papers brought down last year ; and they came partly from the Department of Militia, partly from Rideau Hall. In the file coming from Rideau Hall is to be found, a telegram dated March 31st 1900, from Mr. Chamberlain to His Excellency, in which reference is made to two despatches sent by His Excellency to Mr. Chamberlain, the first one dated March 20th, the other dated March 30th. The latter is not to be found in the return. It seems but fair that, having the answer, we should also have the question which called for that reply.

In the other file, I find a despatch from Mr. Chamberlain to Lord Minto, dated April 9th, in reply to a despatch from His Excellency, of April 6th. Well, I should like to have the despatch of His Excellency to Mr. Chamberlain, which has given rise to the reply of the latter. On April 19th, Mr. Chamberlain wires again to Lord Minto, replying to a despatch of April 15th. Here again, we have the answer ; but the telegram which called for this reply we have not. Then comes another despatch dated April 27th, from Lord Roberts, the then Commander-in-chief of the troops in Africa, to His Excellency the Governor General, in reply to a despatch of April 17th from His Excellency to Lord Roberts. The latter despatch is not to be found in the return. Then we have a despatch from Mr. Chamberlain to Lord Minto, dated May 17th, in reply to a despatch from His Excellency, dated April 18th. That despatch of His Excellency is missing from the return. Then comes a despatch sent by Lord Minto to Mr. Chamberlain, on November 25th, 1900, which reads as follows :

'It will be recollected that Her Majesty's government originally offered 30 commissions, and it was arranged that of these 24 should be allotted to Canadian troops serving in South Africa, the nominations to be forwarded to me by Lord Roberts, and submitted by me to the War Office, and the remaining six gentlemen of the Canadian Militia not serving in South Africa, recommendations to be forwarded by myself to the War Office.'

So, in this despatch, reference is made by His Excellency to arrangements entered into—between what parties ? I do not know. How those arrangements were made is another matter as to which we are left in the dark. Under these arrangements, the terms on which Canadian officers were offered commissions in the English army seem to have been altered.

If we are to be enlightened as to that matter, the whole correspondence must be brought down.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we are met with a very important question here. Last session, I raised that question ; but as it was on the eve of prorogation day, and as from want of time, I could not use the phraseology required by parliamentary etiquette, I recollect, Mr. Speaker, that you called me to order ; but it is desirable that we should once for all come to an understanding on the point I am now referring to.

That His Excellency the Governor General does occupy a position in this country which is perfectly identical to the position occupied by the Sovereign in Great Britain or, by sovereigns in countries where a representative form of government like ours obtains, is a fact that no member in this House questions. But if we are to take any stock in what well recognized writers on parliamentary law state, the inference to be drawn is that the conduct of the Governor General was not always what it should have been, for one who really occupied the position of a constitutional sovereign.

We have been told over and over again that the Governor General is the chief of the Canadian executive, the representative of the British Crown. In that capacity, of course, His Excellency plays in this country the part acted in Great Britain by the King. I do not wish to drag in the personality of His Excellency, which I am forbidden to do by rule 13 of this House, not to mention the rule imposed by good breeding in such matters, But I think, Sir, that if the constitutional rule laid down by Todd and several other authorities in parliamentary procedure holds good ; namely, that His Excellency is in this country both the chief of the executive and the representative of the British Secretary of State for the Colonies, there is, so to say, a dual personality in His Excellency. As chief of the Executive, he is, just like the chief of the Executive in England, liable to err. If the conduct of His Excellency is open to blame, that blame I have to cast upon the Governor General's advisers, namely, his responsible ministers. But when we come to deal with the representative of the Colonial Office, with the employee of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, I think the representatives of the people of Canada have the right to criticise his course of action and to say whether the acts of the functionary of the British government, as well as the acts of the colonial secretaries, are deserving of blame or not.

From that two-fold doctrine it follows that the Governor General is playing a very dangerous rôle when he seeks shelter under his prerogatives as the representative of the British Crown.

So the Governor General could establish two classes of papers, in his files : he could give publicity to such documents as he might think fit to communicate to parliament, and in the same breath, assuming the rôle of an employee of Downing Street, he could withhold other documents and say : ' For these papers I am not responsible to the people of Canada, as they refer to my secret relations with the Colonial Office.'

Within the last two years this question has been threshed out in the Canadian press. On several occasions, if we are to believe press reports, differences of a rather serious nature have arisen between the Governor General and his ministers, either in connection with the sending of troops to South Africa, or as to the production of such papers as I have just referred to. Later on, last fall, similar controversies are said to have occurred upon the occasion of the distribution of medals and decorations bestowed by the Crown upon the Canadian subjects. The ministers are said to have claimed the right of advising His Majesty's representative as to the bestowal of such rewards. That such a doctrine is a sound one I firmly believe. We have been told that His Excellency, using a prerogative which the King himself does not dare arrogate to himself in his own kingdom, and relying upon his dual responsibility, did exercise the right of awarding decorations to whomsoever he pleased. In the matter of decorations, whether medals or titles or other knick-knacks of the same kind, I confess that I remain perfectly indifferent.

But here, what is at stake is the production of papers which would materially help us to understand whether, in this matter of sending out troops to South Africa, and of enlisting volunteers, two years ago, and again last fall, the advisers of His Excellency did really take action with proper freedom ; whether His Excellency did consult them on all those points, or whether, His Excellency thought it expedient—always assuming that dual personality referred to above—to act now the rôle of a representative of the Crown, now the part of a representative of Downing Street ; seeking above all to safeguard the interests of the mother land and leaving it to his advisers to watch over the interests of the colony. Such is the question which now confronts us. And while I call for this return, I should like the right hon. the Prime Minister to throw some light on a point which affects very materially his constitutional position, as also the relations which should exist between the Governor General and his advisers, and the broader relations which should exist between Great Britain and her colonies.

I often heard the right hon. Prime Minister claim as his leader—Sir Louis Hypolite Lafontaine, and I may say that whenever he referred in such eloquent terms to that political fathership, I cheered him to the echo. Now, Mr. Speaker, Lafontaine did not hesitate to provoke a ministerial crisis, even at the risk of bringing Canada to the verge of rebellion, and why, Sir ? It was in order to have it settled once for all, whether the people of Canada, like the English people, were free to manage their own affairs without any foreign power having the right of interfering with their domestic policy.

The debate which culminated into the breach between Lord Metcalfe and Lafontaine grew out of a very trivial circumstance: namely, the appointment of a deputy-sheriff for the county of Carleton. But, to quote Lafontaine's words, the question was as to whether the Governor was to be advised by his ministers or not ; the question was as to whether the people of Canada were free to manage their own affairs, reserving to the sovereign the allegiance which is the bounded duty of every portion of the British empire, without the Governor having the right to assume when it pleases him the functions of an agent of the Colonial Office and to exercise a dual personality.

I am led to think, Mr. Speaker, that the question was discussed by His Excellency and his advisers, from the fact that in the first despatch from Mr. Chamberlain to Lord Minto, dated March 20th, 1900, the following occurs :

'The Secretary of State far War offers four Royal Artillery eight infantry commissions to students Royal Military College, Kingston, recommended by Commandant as in every way suitable, ten Royal Artillery twenty infantry to gentlemen selected by your coming Imperial Officer Commanding local forces.'

So, as the House will see, Mr. Chamberlain pointed out that those commissions were to be given to gentlemen recommended by the commandant of the militia.

In another despatch sent by Mr. Chamberlain to Lord Minto, on the 9th of April, in reply to that despatch of the 6th April, which is missing from the return, I read what follows :

'Referring to your telegram of April 6th re the selection of candidates for commissions, the candidates should be recommended by you after consulting with your Ministers and Imperial Officers.

"You should communicate to your Ministers suggestion contained in your confidential despatch of 24th ult. as to Board for wise selection of candidates, and list should be submitted to you through your Ministers with their recommendations. Responsibility for the final selection remaining with you."

(Signed) CHAMBERLAIN.

What happened between March 20th and April 9 ? Whether there was controversy between His Excellency and his constitutional advisers is more than I can say. But I incline to the belief that the matter was discussed between them, and that His Excellency then wrote to Mr. Chamberlain for his opinion, and that the Colonial Secretary thought it wiser to split the difference. The selection of the officers he left to the ministers, or rather, he advised the Governor General to invite the opinion of his advisers on this point, adding that responsibility for the final selection remained with the Governor General. Neither can it be questioned, from the tone of the first despatch of Mr. Chamberlain, that His Excellency was free to take action after asking the sole advice of the officer commanding the Canadian militia.

A constitutional question is at stake here of the utmost importance. To ascertain on what point the controversy then turned is the question. It is desirable that the issue should be clearly defined as between His Excellency and his advisers.

After a debate, the first and last landmarks of which we have, but the intermediate stakes of which are missing, as showing the route travelled over, it stands to reason that there was a difference of opinion ; for, otherwise, how are we to account for what, apparently, has transpired ? What is the position which the government occupies towards the representative of Downing Street ? That Canada is a nation, enjoying the full privileges of self-government is a boast we are now familiar with. But the question which is now being raised is one that bears upon the relations existing between the irresponsible representative of the Crown and his constitutional advisers. The question which now confronts us is this : whenever there arises a question as to which the interests of the Canadian people and the interests of the English people clash, ought not the Governor General to refer the matter to the cabinet, which is the sole medium of communication between His Excellency and the will of the people, and should he not act upon the advice of his ministers ?

This doctrine Australia for one, upholds. What happened, last fall, in that colony ? Bills concerning immigration, trade and navigation were brought up and carried through parliament. The bill on immigration had been framed on the lines of the bill carried through the legislature of British Columbia in connection with Mongolian labour and immigration. Mr. Chamberlain wrote to Mr. Barton, the Prime Minister of Australia, asking him to commit himself to have this Act amended, so as not to create bad blood in Japan, a country with which Great Britain was seeking to make a treaty. In the same despatch, it was recommended that the Act respecting trade and navigation should be amended, so as not to interfere with the interests of the great British companies which were engaged in trade with Australia. Mr. Barton replied through the Governor General, Lord Hopetoun, simply promising that he would do his best to comply with the wishes expressed by Mr. Chamberlain. The Australian parliament was called together, and the first debate that was raised in the House at the beginning of the session, turned on the very question whether the Prime Minister had been warranted in writing to Mr. Chamberlain that he would endeavour to have the Act modified, which was mentioned in the despatch referred to, so as to make it tally with the interests of the mother country. The opposition leader, Mr. Reid, strongly criticised the government because the premier had assumed upon himself to send an answer to Mr. Chamberlain's despatch before first ascertaining the views of parliament. From Mr. Reid's firm attitude, Mr. Barton was frightened into notifying Mr. Chamberlain that he could not comply with his wishes.

What happened in Canada ? Following in the footsteps of Australia, British Columbia had passed a bill regarding Mongolian labour and immigration. Into the merits or demerits of that legislation I do not wish to go. Let it suffice to say that the provincial legislature, in passing that measure into law, acted within their constitutional jurisdiction. And this measure it was at the demand of Mr. Chamberlain that it was set aside by a Liberal government, a government the members of which formerly stood up here and championed provincial rights. The Dominion government did not hesitate to blot out from the statute-books of a province of Canada an Act passed by the legislature of that province, in the full exercise of their constitutional prerogatives.

On the floor of the Australian parliament, Mr. Reid has laid down this principle, that no prime minister of a British colony, enjoying free institutions, has the right to enter into relations with the Colonial Office and to communicate to the same his policy, whether actual or contemplated, before having first secured the assent of his parliament. To quote Mr. Reid's own words : 'The prime minister of Australia is responsible to the people and the parliament of Australia, but he is neither responsible to the Colonial Secretary nor to the British parliament.'

It was not my intention to have gone into the matter in all these details, nor to have spoken at such great length, but this I am bound to say, that after having been in waiting four mortal months for this correspondence, and after having received but a garbled correspondence, while, as I have pointed out, the Governor General's answers to despatches have been withheld, I think I am warranted in hoping that more light will be shed on the matter by the government bringing down the documents which have been withheld, so that our doubts may be cleared up as to the relations which ought to exist between the Governor General and his advisers.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). There can be no objection to this motion passing, and I will make my best efforts to have the papers brought down as quickly as possible—for many reasons, first and not the least, because I am sure my hon. friend (Mr. Bourassa) will find how much he has been led astray in some of his surmises.

Mr. BOURASSA. I will be very happy.

The PRIME MINISTER. I don't know about that ; I do not think my hon. friend will be as happy as he pretends to be. I may say to my hon. friend that so far as concerns any subject which has been concluded, which is no longer pending, such for instance as the one now under discussion concerning the granting of commissions in the British army to Canadian officers, which subject is concluded, there is no reason whatever why every document which we have in our possession should not be brought down. I may say in the meantime that there are some classes of subjects in respect of which it is not possible to comply with all his wishes. Last year my hon. friend laid great stress upon the fact that a dispatch of the Colonial Office to the Governor General of Canada, of the 24th of March, had not been brought down. I refreshed my memory this morning upon the debate which took place last year, and I gave my attention to this dispatch of the 24th of March, 1900, which had not been brought down. I took occasion also this very morning to look over that dispatch, and I find it is a confidential dispatch, nor is it in my power to disclose its contents. I will say to my hon. friend that there may be cases in which it would not be advisable, indeed it would be a great breach of public duty, to lay the dispatches on the Table of the House. For instance, let us suppose that one of these dispatches referred to the arbitration which was at that moment going on between Russia and Great Britain regarding certain seizures of our vessels which were made a few years ago by the Russian authorities. That is a subject the last of which we have not heard yet. We have an arbitration going on, and until that is disposed of my hon. friend will agree with me that it is not advisable to bring down the dispatches relating to it. Then let us suppose another matter, let us suppose there was another dispatch of the nature, for instance, of a confidential communication between the Canadian and the British governments with regard to fortifications, either at Halifax, or Esquimalt, or some other strategetical point. My hon. friend will agree that it would not be in the public interest to bring down such a document and place it on the Table of the House, giving it publicity, making it possible for the foreign press to publish it, and giving away secrets of a military character which in their very nature ought to be treated as confidential. Therefore my hon. friend, I trust, will realize that there are certain communications confidential in their nature which cannot be brought down. But I am free to lay down the principle that whenever a subject has been completed, which subject is not of a foreign nature, which is not of a confidential character, a subject regarding the relations of the Canadian government or any official of the Canadian government with an Imperial officer, upon a subject which is completed and is no longer at issue, in that case my hon. friend is entitled to have all the information which is at our disposal, and that information he shall have. I have only to add that perhaps he will have an opportunity then to change his mind, and to offer us some apology for the bad opinion he has entertained of some of his friends.

Mr. F. D. MONK. (Translation.) Before this motion carries, I wish to offer one or two remarks. Does the hon. member for Labelle mean to stand up on the floor of this House as the champion of popular rights ? Can he say with the French poet :

'Je suis venu trop tard dans un monde trop vieux.'

Or, again, has the hon. gentleman mastered the elementary principles of the British constitution ? Had he been conversant with the principles by which our parliament is guided, as well as all other parliaments in which a constitution obtains which is based on constitutional principles similar to ours, he could, to say the least, have dispensed with going at such great length into a review of an uncontested right, and one which no member of this House who is conversant with the principles of our constitution, would even dream of questioning. The hon. gentleman no doubt forgot in addressing the House that on both sides, and even among his friends and colleagues, are to be found, men who are acquainted with these principles as well as I am, and who, being his elders know better than he does what those principles mean. After all this is a motion to which, according to British parliamentary rules, no objection could be raised.

It refers to militia matters ; it refers to the commissions granted to Canadians in the British army. The hon. gentleman in dealing with this matter, indulged in much hair-splitting. To his mind, His Excellency the Governor General now represents the Crown, now represents something else. The Governor General represents the King, and, at the same time, he is the servant of the people of Canada. Then, the hon. gentleman, launched out, with great flourishes, into a recital of our long-continued struggles for the conquest of our rights. That the Governor General in Canada represents the Crown ; that he discharges a dual function, namely, as the representative of the Crown on the one hand, and as an official of the English government on the other hand, everybody here is aware. But no matter how you may look at the question, can there be any doubt, or has any one ever questioned our rights to control our own domestic affairs ?

A mere glance at the constitutional history of England is sufficient to satisfy us that there is no room for the least doubt in the matter. Only to such people as are not conversant with that history can it occur that we are without the right of self-government here. But, for our part, we know that history, and I would advise my young friend from Labelle to peruse the three volumes written by Mr. de Franqueville on the British constitution, and he will find there that we are enjoying the right of self-government. Does the hon. gentleman wish to pose in this House as the champion of our blood-bought liberties, within the last centuries ? This motion refers to military matters. Now, these matters come under the direct control of the British parliament, and the same applies here. This control was secured long ago, with the abolition of the 'Mutiny Act.' In the Middle Ages charters, it is expressly provided, that the people of England, through their parliament, shall have the control of all military matters. Under the 'Bill of Rights' and the 'Act of Settlement' of 1701, all military matters are placed under the control of parliament. This was a recognized right from the reign of William of Orange. For many years, the 'Mutiny Act' had to be resorted to, in order to give a further sanction to the principle that parliament which appropriated the public moneys, also had the sole control of military matters. But the 'Mutiny Act' is a thing of the past. And the hon. gentleman laboured to no purpose, when reviewing the conduct of Governor Metcalfe and the history of those times.

Should any one dream of re-enacting now the 'Mutiny Act,' well might he compare with Rip Van Winkle who slept for twenty years, and never knew what had transpired within that lapse of time. A motion such as the one proposed by the hon. gentleman, would carry without any objection being raised to it, in the British House of Commons. In that House it would not even be debated, there being so many useful and practical questions which come up for discussion, and owing also to the fact that this right of control of parliament is so uncontested a right that nobody would ever dream of calling it in question.

DISMISSALS FOR POLITICAL REASONS.

Mr. A. C. BELL (Pictou) moved for :

Return showing the number of employees of the Departments of Public Works, Railways and Canals, Post Office, Marine and Fisheries, Customs and Inland Revenue, who have been dismissed between July 12th, 1896, and January 1st, 1902; also, how many of these dismissals have been made for political reasons.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). I would suggest to my hon. friend (Mr. Bell) that a return was brought down giving this information down to March, 1901. If the hon. gentleman would amend this resolution so as to cover the dismissals since that time, he will have all the information he desires, and it will be possible to have the returns on very short notice.

Mr. BELL. Does it cover all these points?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I cannot speak for all the departments. There is no desire to deny the hon. gentleman any information he wishes, but it will facilitate matters if he will amend his motion so as to make it cover the facts since the last return.

Mr. BELL. The motion then might be amended to make it read 'since the last return' ?

Mr. SPEAKER. If the words 'not already brought down' were added, that would cover the point.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Then, I would move that the motion be amended in that way.

Motion (Mr. Bell), amended as proposed, agreed to.

TABLE OF PRECEDENCE FOR CANADA.

Mr. SAMUEL HUGHES (North Victoria) moved :

That in the opinion of this House the 'Table of Precedence for Canada,' as set forth in the Statutes of Canada and 'Canada Gazette,' should be amended either by omitting section 11, 'Archbishops and Bishops according to seniority,' or by giving a place in said section 11 'to the clergymen of religious denominations other than those having' "archbishops and bishops," the word 'seniority' to be interpreted by 'territorial' area, or in some other appropriate manner, and in other ways.

He said : In making this motion I will state briefly that in doing so I have no bias whatever. We find in the Dominion of Canada, where there is no union of church and state, that last autumn as well as on a former occasion of considerable political importance to this country, precedence was given to the members of certain churches over equally prominent, equally cultured, equally good and equally noble minded men of other churches in this country, although, as I say, there is no union of church and state here. I do not need to make any apology for introducing this question. The custom of recognizing the clergy in the table of precedence is undoubtedly a relic of old times, of former days, when there was a union between church and state. It is a relic which possibly does no harm and which, so far as Canada is concerned, may be allowed to continue, only I maintain that all the great denominations in this country should be equally recognized. It has been stated that my motion is not in the right form, that I should have moved that a humble petition be sent to His Majesty and to the Imperial Executive. I do not think that is the proper course at all in this connection. I have taken the course of presenting the facts to the House, of presenting my views to the House, of bringing the subject before the House, and if it meets with the approval of the House, as I am satisfied it will meet with the approval of this country, then it becomes the duty of the Prime Minister to lay the matter by petition before the Imperial authorities, asking them to make a change.

It has been stated that this is a personal matter with His Majesty the King. I need not tell an intelligent legislative body such as this that His Majesty the King has no personal authority in such matters whatever. A great many people are under the misapprehension that His Majesty, or His Excellency the Governor General, in his individual capacity, has certain prerogatives in certain circumstances. They have none. When the question of purchase of commissions in the British army was done away with, people were told that it was one of Her Majesty's own personal prerogatives that was exercised. But she exercised that prerogative with the advice of her responsible ministers. The Sovereign, or His Excellency the Governor General, have no prerogative other than as they are advised by the Prime Minister in Great Britain or in this country. The statement that the sovereign, being the sole fountain of honour, has absolute control of this matter is not borne out by either law or custom under the British or Canadian constitutions. These tables have been changed from time to time on petition, possibly not in this colony, although I believe that in this colony they have been changed. On representation from the people in the various colonies concerned they have been changed, and they may be changed, and should be changed again. I shall not discuss the question at any length further than to reiterate that if the government of this country sees fit they can petition the Imperial authorities to have the table of precedence changed in order to include the leading ministers of other churches, gentlemen equally prominent, equally cultured, equally noble, equally good. I make no reflection on those of any church that is now recognized. I say if the government make a proper request to the Imperial authorities there is no doubt that the request will be acceded to, and we will find that the various non-prelatical churches will be recognized in the table of precedence along with those already recognized. I need not say that the table as at present constituted is offensive to many of the denominations that are recognized on account of their desire to see all parties recognized. It is offensive in the fact that it gives some churches prominence while it does not recognize others. I shall conclude the few remarks that I purpose making upon this question by reading one of many letters which I received from prominent clergymen and others throughout the country. I read this one because it is a copy of a letter which was forwarded to the Prime Minister some time ago by a very prominent ecclesiastic. It is as follows —

Montreal, October 28, 1901.

The Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G.C.M.G.,
Premier of the Dominion of Canada,

Dear Sir,—In the matter of ecclesiastical precedence at state functions in Canada, permit me to approach you in a spirit of candour without narrowness and with a desire to avoid religious agitation by public discussion. I wish to present this matter in the same broad minded spirit with which I have tried to consider any public question in which I have been interested. As a resident of this province where I have spent most of my life and where I am now honoured with being appointed to the chief official position in Protestant education under the government, I desire to state this matter without any sectarian bias, all the more because of my pleasant and friendly relation to members both of the Roman Catholic and Anglican hierarchy.

I therefore respectfully submit to you the following facts :—

1. The present order of precedence is a glaring insult to the non-prelatical churches. It chooses out for special favour two denominations, one of them the largest and the other only the fourth largest simply because of their Episcopal polity, a consideration which should have no more weight in Canada than a preference for churches with steeples in opposition to churches without steeples. According to the census of 1891 these denominations numbered respectively 1,992,017 and 646,059 as against 2,395,163 of other denominations. In the name of common sense, in the name of the freedom and equality of which we boast, why should there be any such unjust discrimination as the Imperial order requires ?

Thousands of intelligent men of the larger Protestant denominations feel the insult but are averse to creating agitation about it, but you can well understand that in their silence there is the deepest resentment and in many a heart there is prudentially concealed much natural bitterness of feeling at so glaring an insult to some of the largest denominations of our Dominion. I will not condescend to make any invidious comparison between the denominations so favoured and others, but this I will say that the denominations so slighted are everywhere distinguished by intelligence, thrift and loyalty and should not be exposed to this perpetual insult.

2. This order is repugnant to the spirit of Canadian political institutions at least the past 60 years. It is the sole surviving remnant of the intolerable policy of ecclesiastical discrimination which that great man, the Rev. Dr. Ryerson, did so much to terminate. It is contrary to the statutory principle stated in the preamble of the Act of 1854 for the settlement of the Clergy Reserve Fund question, viz.: 'It is desirable in Canada to remove all semblance of connection between church and state.' It is specially contrary to the traditional and historical position of the great Liberal party of which you are so distinguished and worthy a representative. Let me say briefly that in this communication I have in my mind no reference whatever to the privileges guaranteed to the Roman Catholic Church by the Treaty of Paris of 1763.

3. It is a mere truism that there should be some order of precedence in state functions. The demand made in some quarters that the order be altogether rescinded instead of being amended, would I fear lead to most unfortunate confusion, that is if the clergy participate at all.

4. For this order I admit your government is, of course, in no way responsible. I am convinced, however, that on your representations the Imperial government would readily change it to meet the views and feelings of the majority of the Canadian people.

What remedy then can be suggested ? I can well believe that you are ready to say, instead of useless ecclesiastical resolutions and newspaper agitation, have some just and practicable method of settling the matter and it will be fairly considered. In answering this important question, difficulties will necessarily arise. If the people of Canada are to be considered, certainly the present order must be changed and no better time for this can arise than now, after the visit to our country of the Heir to the Throne of our Empire, on which occasion I assure you a painful affront has been silently borne by the majority of our people owing to this odious order.

Some suggest the order of seniority of ecclesiastical officers either in age or office. This is as unwise as to propose that it should be based on relative physical height or weight and might result in the representative of the most obscure and the smallest sect being elevated to the highest place.

Some would say let the precedence be by historical priority. But in the case of the church of England most Protestants and all Roman Catholics locate its origin at the Reformation and later than that of the Lutherans, if not also of the Presbyterians, and what government would undertake, officially, to settle this question as to its claims ? Again of all Protestant denominations the Lutheran would take precedence on this ground though almost the smallest of all religious bodies in Canada.

I now freely suggest the following. 1. That the Order in Council be based on the relative strength of denominations in the previous census. 2. That in the case of non-prelatical churches the governments, federal and provincial, should be officially informed by them of the names and addresses of their chief officers, that is of their representative officer in each case, seeing that in most instances these are likely to be unknown to the executive, owing to frequent change of office. Several smaller bodies would probably be indifferent about the matter and would omit to send such notice. I submit that this plan is fair and reasonable and practicable and best suits the spirit of our political institutions. Can any better be suggested ?

Let us see how it would work. Under it in federal state functions, according to the census of 1891, the order of leading denominations would be Roman Catholics, Methodist, Presbyterian, Anglican. In Quebec it would be Roman Catholic, Anglican, Presbyterian, Methodist. In Ontario it would be Methodist, Presbyterian, Anglican, Roman Catholic. In Nova Scotia, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, Baptist, Anglican, Methodist, and so on in different provinces. How absurd and unjust the present order is in Ontario, will appear from the fact that the Anglicans and Roman Catholics are each only $\frac{1}{3}$ of the entire population and the remaining $\frac{2}{3}$ are most unjustly ignored. There are almost as many Methodists in Ontario as Roman Catholics and Anglicans together and more Presbyterians than either of these denominations.

Please be assured again of my desire in this matter to avoid religious prejudice as much as possible.

Trusting my proposal may commend itself to you and your colleagues and so terminate a long standing grievance, as old as the 'Family Compact.'

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed) WILLIAM J. SHAW.

It is marked as an open letter and I have therefore read it. I need not again state that it is useless to tell this House or the country that the table of precedence is a personal matter with His Majesty the Sovereign King of England. His Majesty the King of England has no prerogative other than as he is advised by his ministers. His Majesty and his ministers would be only too willing in case of a large colony like the Dominion of Canada through its Prime Minister making a sensible suggestion and asking that these other denominations may be recognized in this table of precedence to grant the request. I am satisfied that the executive-in-council, or the Crown, which, of course, represents the sovereign acting upon the advice of his ministers, will, without a moment's hesitation, accede to the request of the Prime Minister of this country. It is useless to say that in state functions His Excellency is the sole arbiter of what the order of precedence shall be. His Excellency has no authority in these matters other than by following the rules laid down in matters appertaining to state occasions, and as he is advised by his Imperial masters and further as he is advised by the Prime Minister of this country. Therefore, if the matter meets with the approval of the Prime Minister of this country it is settled. If it does not, it cannot be settled. I have nothing further to say on the subject other than to express the hope that the Prime Minister will be good enough to allow the motion to pass. I do not desire to present a petition, but I hope he will take such steps towards the framing of such a petition as will do no injury to any one but as will do the justice we ask to those large and important denominations which have furnished so many of the finest men in this country and which have done so much to uphold the Dominion of Canada.

The PRIME MINISTER. I cannot complain of the manner in which the question has been brought before the House by my hon. friend (Mr. Hughes, Victoria). The question itself is not of very great importance, but unfortunately it is one of those questions which have created a good deal of friction at different times in the history of confederation. I must take issue at once with the statement made by my hon. friend (Mr. Hughes), that the government of Canada—whatever government may have been in power—is responsible for the present condition of things. As a matter of fact the authority which is responsible for the present table of precedence is not in Canada, but in England, and it is His Majesty the King. The Governor General is not a free agent in this matter, I may say. It is not permitted to him to follow his own inclinations as to what degree of honour he shall give to those whom he invites to his table, but he is instructed from England as to how he shall proceed in all state ceremonies, and as to how he shall seat those who are his guests. The present table of precedence is, I believe, as old as confederation, although modified since in a very slight degree. Before confederation the instructions as to precedence went back as far as the union. For my part I am of opinion that the dissenting churches have good reason to feel aggrieved at the manner in which they have been treated in this respect, the feeling became more acute at the time of the visit of the Prince of Wales. I believe, however, that the churches are somewhat to blame if they find themselves placed in that position. For thirty years or more, the bishops and archbishops of the Episcopal churches—in this country the Roman Catholic Church and the Church of England—have alone been recognized in the table of precedence. I would not offer my own interpretation of history in this matter, but if I have correctly interpreted history, my impression is that in former times the dissenting churches did not seek any such recognition as is now sought by the motion of the hon. gentleman. Whether they were right or wrong it matters not, because if at the present time the Dissenting churches wish to be recognized in this country they ought to be recognized. There can be no doubt as to that. I would point out that the difference in this respect between Canada and Great Britain is all to the advantage of Canada. In Great Britain the Church of England is alone recognized.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). No.

The PRIME MINISTER. I think so.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Roman Catholic bishops are also recognized.

The PRIME MINISTER. If the Roman Catholic bishops are recognized in Great Britain, it is I think by tolerance and not by established rule. But whether or not the Roman Catholic Church is recognized there, I think I am safe in saying that the dissenting churches are not recognized in the table of precedence. There is a reason for that. In England they have a state church, and in Canada all churches are on a footing of equality. I have no hesitation at all in stating my convictions; convictions which are not mine alone, but which I share with, I am sure, every member of this House. I must say to the hon. gentleman that the task of framing a table of precedence which will give proper recognition to all churches is very difficult and is surrounded with serious intricacies. For instance, the question arises: Which church shall be given precedence over the other. The letter which was addressed to me some months ago by the Rev. Dr. Shaw, of Montreal, would indicate, if I understood aright the reverend gentleman, that precedence would be given to the Lutherans, because he said that if you look upon it from the point of view of antiquity, the Lutherans should come first. The Lutherans are a small body in Canada, and although I do not know that the Rev. Dr. Shaw meant they should get precedence, at all events it was a suggestion which he submitted for our consideration. In the Roman Catholic Church and in the Church of England the dignitaries of these churches are permanent officials, but when you come to the Presbyterian Church, or the Methodist Church, or the Baptist Church, the difficulty is to recognize who are the proper dignitaries. Dignitaries in that sense they have none; they do not admit the term I believe, but they have certain officials. The Presbyterian Church has a moderator, which if he does not change annually at all events changes frequently. Who shall be placed on the table of precedence as representing the Presbyterian Church? Should it be the moderator, whose tenure of office is comparatively brief. I understand that the Methodist body have certain functionaries who are also elected for a fixed term. As to the Baptists, I understand that their organization is absolutely democratic, that they recognize no such rule of precedence amongst themselves, and that they have no functionaries corresponding to those in the other churches. It would, therefore, be very difficult to place the representative of the Baptist Church upon the table of precedence.

I may say to my hon. friend that all these difficulties have been looked into by the government. At the time of the visit of the Prince of Wales we knew there were very serious complaints from some eminent divines of the disseneting churches in this and other cities. They complained very strongly that they had been ignored and had not been extended the courtesy which was extended to the dignitaries of the other churches. The government was not callous to such representations. A sub-committee of the council has been appointed to look into this matter and to prepare a report. It is now under investigation. I repeat to my hon. friend, that when we come to the point of framing a table of precedence such as we should have, the difficulty is almost insurmountable in finding a way to give precedence to those entitled to it. We are doing our best at the present time to overcome the difficulty. I would be very much obliged indeed if the members of this House would give us the benefit of their views as to what table of precedence we should recommend to His Majesty the King. At the present time we are very much in the dark, and we have not been able to arrive at a solution which we would like to recommend to the Imperial authorities. The matter shall not be forgotten by us. I hope, before this subject is dismissed, that members of the House, especially members who belong to the Dissenting churches will give us the benefit of their views on this subject so that we may be enabled to make representations to the proper authorities. I agree with my hon. friend that the moment the parliament of Canada, represented by the government, makes proper representations to the Imperial authorities, these representations will be immediately acceded to.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). If it be the case, as I understood the premier to say, that the Governor General received instructions as to precedence from the Imperial authorities, I have no doubt whatever that representation on the subject from any colonial authority would be received with attention, and that any wise suggestions coming from the Dominion of Canada or any other colony for overcoming the difficulty, would receive due weight. There is no doubt, from the information given us and from what we know, that this is a difficult question to settle and a delicate one to handle, especially in a country like ours, where many large dissenting denominations see other religious bodies given precedence over them. How would it do, in a democratic country like ours, to do away with all precedence in connection with these functions—to give no church any precedence over another, and thus do away with all ground for complaint? That suggests itself to my mind as one way of overcoming the difficulty without doing injustice to anybody. The other suggestion made by the Rev. Mr. Shaw appears to have a good deal of merit in it, but there are objections to it which might be raised. I have no doubt that if it were known to the country that the government desired to consider this question, they would receive many suggestions from quarters from which they have not yet heard, and that after due consideration they would be able to evolve some scheme to meet the difficulty, which at present is a grievance, if not an offense, to some churches which are very numerous in certain sections of the country.

Mr. D. C. FRASER (Guysborough). So far as I am concerned, I am rather democratic on this subject. In the first place, I wish to say, in reply to what the premier has said, that the office of moderator of the Presbyterian Church is continuous, just as the office of premier is, though the man who holds the office may change. For example, the man who is moderator this year may give place to another man next year, but the office is eternal, and will be. For myself, if I had my own way, I would not have any precedence at all, either ecclesiastical or otherwise. There are of course certain persons, such as members of the government and members of parliament who represent the people, and if there is any distinction, and I do not ask for any, I can understand that it would only be right and just that places should be assigned to them, not as a matter of precedence, but simply to enable them to get their proper places. But in this democratic country I do not think we want much of that kind of thing. I think there are about thirty orders in the table of precedence. I have not looked over it lately, and do not intend to look at it again.

An hon. MEMBER. Twenty-six.

Mr. FRASER. Just imagine that in a democratic country—twenty-five personages or representatives of various communities who are ahead of you. I am not claiming the twenty-sixth place or the twenty-third, or any place; but I say it is absurd in a country like this. Personally I do not think the clergy need be recognized at all more than others. What I mean is this: I think they could be better employed in preparing men to be good citizens than in struggling for precedence over each other, and I think the democratic church to which I am attached is not making much of a cry about this matter. There is a way of settling the question which might not occur to the clergy, and that is the way they settled it in the British Columbia legislature the other day. But, seriously, I think the churches should not say much on this subject. I can understand those who have dignitaries in their churches—Roman Catholics and Episcopalians—being interested in it; but if I might make a suggestion, I would say let the clergy imitate the men they represent, the humble fishermen of Galilee, and say: 'We are not after it at all.' If they did that, they would show the greatest lesson of tolerance to the people of this country. My view is that we should become more democratic in this matter, and I would suggest to the premier that when the negotiations are on, he might strike off more than 33⅓ per cent. If that is done, in a very few years we shall hear very little more about precedence in this country. If I remember rightly, Dr. Shaw proposes that precedence be given according to population. That is all nonsense. There are small bodies of people in this country who have shown themselves to be just as good citizens and as high in the scale as are the best. If you divide people in that way, you simply make precedence a question of majorities, and you shut out real merit and degrade the smaller denominations. Then, you would find this difficulty, that in one province precedence would be given to a man belonging to one denomination, and in another province to a man belonging to another. My suggestion to the premier is to recognize in this country very few of these positions at state functions. Let us all go to pay our respects, as we did when the Prince of Wales was here, feeling that character, and character alone, entitles a man to be there. Let us not be so anxious to set a man up in a high position just because he belongs to a particular church. These are my democratic views. Before I sit down, let me say, that I think this motion should not pass. It says: 'the word "seniority" to be interpreted by "territorial" area, or in some other appropriate manner, and in other ways.' That would make it worse that it is at present.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Did I understand from the right hon. Prime Minister that the matter is now under the consideration of a sub-committee of the Privy Council?

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Perhaps my hon. friend would let the motion stand for the present, having the right to renew it at a future time.

The PRIME MINISTER. I have asked my hon. friend to withdraw his motion.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I wish only to remark that my hon. friend from Guysborough, in claiming for the members of this House a more exalted position than they possess at present, hardly exhibits that humble spirit of the Galilee fishermen which he commends to the clergy.

Mr. FRASER. I do not want a high position, but if I did, I think the twenty-fifth or twenty-sixth place for the leader of the opposition would not be according to his dignity.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am not going to raise that question, although I suppose I should be very much obliged to my hon. friend for raising it for me. I can well understand the difficulties that present themselves to the Committee of the Privy Council in dealing with this matter; and when the Prime Minister tells us that the government are dealing with it, I think it would perhaps be inadvisable for us to pass any motion in the House with regard to it at the present time. As the right hon. gentleman tells us that his government are dealing with it, it would be better not to pass any motion now on the subject. After the government have dealt with it, this House can, by means of an address or motion, express its opinion on the conclusions arrived at.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). In rising to withdraw this motion at the request of the Prime Minister, I may say that I am somewhat surprised that my hon. friend from Guysborough (Mr. Fraser)—a gentleman learned in the law as well as in the academies—should seem unable to understand the English language. If he will read the last phrase attentively, he will find that it does not refer to ecclesiastical precedence, but to the very point which he himself has brought up, namely, to the place occupied by members of parliament in the general table of precedence. I trust therefore that my hon. friend will brush up his English grammer, and he will then probably revise his conclusions. Of course one can readily understand why the hon. gentleman should wish the table of precedence abolished, for if there were no such table there would be no resisting his weight in the scramble for a front place. The right hon. the First Minister certainly misunderstood what I said if he thought I said the Governor General had anything to do with establishing the table of precedence. That table, as are all the sources of honour, is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Sovereign himself, and I merely mentioned the Governor General, in order to meet the argument advanced, that this is a matter entirely within his purview. He has nothing to do with any matter except as advised by the Prime Minister of this country. I understand that in the past a claim for jurisdiction in this matter has been made upon behalf of one of our Governor Generals, and I understand that within a very recent period, a Governor General claimed the right to appoint his aide de camp as a personal matter. This claim, however, was entirely unconstitutional, and in any case it has but a remote bearing on the subject before the House. I have no doubt that if the right hon. the Prime Minister will consult the parties interested, he will arrive at a solution of the difficulty and be able to establish a proper basis of precedence. It has been suggested by the hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) that this whole table of precedence should be done away with. But I am satisfied that neither the Prime Minister nor the British government would request the Imperial authorities to withdraw precedence from those who now enjoy it. One of the Australia colonies once petitioned the British government to abolish the precedence given the clergy, and Her Majesty's government replied that such precedence could not be taken away from those who already held it. All the bishops then in existence should retain their precedence although it might not be continued to those subsequently appointed. Acting on the request of the First Minister and in view of the fact that this motion is receiving the consideration of a special committee of the Privy Council, I have much pleasure, with the permission of the House, in withdrawing it.

Motion withdrawn.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask the right hon. gentleman to see that a meeting of the Public Accounts Committee is called at the earliest possible moment. We had a good deal of difficulty in obtaining regular meetings last session. There will be considerable work for this committee to do this session, and if it be desired that we shall not have a protracted session, it would be advisable to see that the chairman of that committee holds a regular meeting every week. It might be desirable to hold two or three meetings each week in order to expedite business. Last session we had some difficulty on account of the occasional absence of the chairman, and I would suggest that some gentleman should be selected to replace him when he is unavoidably absent.

Mr. FRASER. I was only absent one day.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend may be right. I recollect that there was once some difficulty, and I thought it occurred more than once. If he is likely to be absent again, he might arrange to have some one take his place for the time being.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee is here and will no doubt give effect to the suggestion of the hon. gentleman. As to whether the committee will meet once or twice a week, that is a matter for the committee itself to decide at its first meeting.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I was not suggesting that the House should deal with it, but was merely making suggestion to the chairman.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

Return showing the total number of officials and employees, temporary and permanent, of the Intercolonial Railway, and the total amount of salaries and wages payable to them on June 30th, 1886, and on December 31st, 1891.—Mr. Bell.

Return showing amount of the rebate paid on agricultural implements exported from Canada for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1901, specifying amount paid to each firm.—Mr. Roche (Marquette), by Mr. Henderson.

Return showing the amount of money voted each year, including the present fiscal year, for the contemplated improvements of St. Andrews Rapids, Manitoba ; the amount spent so far out of these votes, and what for in each year ; reports of government engineers as to work done, delays, if any, and cause of the same ; copy of correspondence between engineers and contractors, and of both with the Department of Public Works in reference to the work done or to be done ; and a copy of contract entered into with the contractor or contractors.—Mr. LaRivière.

On motion of the Prime Minister, House adjourned at 5.25 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, February 27, 1902.

The SPEAKER took the chair at Three o'clock.

OFFICIAL DEBATES OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. R. HOLMES (West Huron) presented the first report of the Select Committee appointed to supervise the official report of the Debates of the House. He moved that the report be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTIONS.

VALUATION FOR CUSTOMS.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette) asked :

What valuation has been placed on a McCormick binder on which duty is paid when imported into Canada ; by the single binder and by the car load ?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. Wm. Paterson). I beg to say to the hon. gentleman, Mr. Roche (Marquette), not with a desire to evade his question, that it is not usual to disclose the prices at which goods are admitted to customs entry, the valuation at which goods are entered at the customs-house being usually treated as confidential in its nature. This is the rule that prevails in the department necessarily. The hon. gentleman will understand the spirit in which I give him the answer.

AMERICAN TUGS IN CANADIAN WATERS.

Mr. BENNETT—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. Were any tugs of American register permitted to ply between Canadian ports during the season of navigation of 1901 ?
2. If so, what tugs were so employed, and who were the owners of the same ?
3. If such permission was so granted, is it intended to allow a similar indulgence to be exercised during the coming year ?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. Wm. Paterson). The answer furnished me by the department, Mr. Speaker, is as follows :—

The government is not aware that permission has been given to any tugs of American register to ply between Canadian ports during the season of navigation of 1901.

I may say that I think that answer is substantially correct, but lest there should be a misunderstanding of my utterance, I would say that I think special permission was given, not to a tug, but to a boat which had a pumping apparatus on board for loading gravel to take a load of gravel from a Canadian port to where a factory was being erected. Substantially the answer is correct.

BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. LEMIEUX asked :

Has the attention of the government been drawn to the following resolution, moved on the 21st February last, in the legislature of the province of Quebec :—

'Resolved, That in the opinion of this House, the revenues allowed the provinces by the British North America Act, are insufficient to enable them to meet the requirements of the public service, and at the same time to afford the necessary aid to colonization, to agriculture, the development of our industries and the amelioration of our educational system ;

'That the interpretation given to various clauses of the constitution has endangered the existence of our local institutions ; and

That the government of Canada and those of the other provinces, should be invited to unite with the government of the province of Quebec, to request the parliament of the United Kingdom to so modify the Federal Act as to change the basis on which the federal subsidy is calculated ; to secure to the provinces the exclusive control of their public properties and of the railways within their limits, and to permit them to impose exportation dues on the products of their forests and their mines, and to confer on the government of Great Britain the power of disallowing the provincial laws, now exercised by that of Canada.'

2. Does the government propose to co-operate with the provinces in the sense indicated by this resolution ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The government have no official information upon this subject. We are aware, as everybody else, that such a resolution has been introduced into the local legislature, but we do not know what has become of it.

SUPERIOR COURT, QUEBEC.

Mr. LEMIEUX asked :

1. How many writs have been issued, and how many judgments have been rendered in the Supreme Court, in the different judicial districts of the province of Quebec, during the years 1900 and 1901 ?
2. How many writs have been issued and judgments rendered in the judicial district of Montreal ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. C. Fitzpatrick). I will have to ask my hon. friend (Mr. Lemieux) to apply to the persons who are in control of the statistics he requires. They are not under the control of the federal government at all.

KEEPER OF RED HORSE SHOAL LIGHT.

Mr. TAYLOR asked :

1. Has Mr. William Jackson, lighthouse-keeper of Red Horse shoal light, just west of Gananoque, been superannuated ?
2. What salary was he paid as light-keeper ?
3. Was he also paid a salary for setting out, taking up and caring for a number of buoys ?
4. What salary was he paid for both services ?
5. How many years was he in the service ?
6. What superannuation does Mr. Jackson receive ?
7. Was his superannuation allowance as fixed based on the salary he received for both services ?
8. Was a letter received by the Department of Marine and Fisheries purporting to be signed by Mr. Jackson, asking to be superannuated ?
9. Was he notified that his services as light-keeper were dispensed with, and that a Mr. Robert Chadwick had been appointed lightkeeper in his place, and requesting him to deliver up the lights to Mr. Chadwick ?

10. Was Mr. Chadwick notified that he was appointed lighthouse-keeper and given instructions to call on Mr. Jackson and get the keys used and possession ?

11. Did Mr. Jackson refuse to give up the light and notify the Department of Marine and Fisheries that he had not written any letter asking to be superannuated ?

12. If so, what action did the government take to ascertain who forged the letter written to the department purporting to be signed by Mr. Jackson asking to be superannuated ?

13. Has a Mr. Landon since been appointed as lighthouse-keeper to said light ?

14. Was Mr. Chadwick notified that his appointment was cancelled ?

15. If so, what were the reasons given ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland) :

1. Yes, on June 3, 1901. He was 71.
2. $400 per year.
3. He was allowed $50 per year for boat, fuel and buoy service (4 buoys).
4. $450.
5. 21 years.
6. He receives a pension of $168 per year.
7. His allowance was based on his salary of $400 per year as light-keeper.
8. No such letter was received.
9. Yes, on June 8 last. Letter mis-carried and was returned to the department. Remailed to correct address June 28.
10. Yes, on June 8.
11. No. Mr. Jackson wrote acknowledging receipt of letter of June 8 and asking to be allowed to remain until August 15, in order to take care of a garden he had planted.
12. No forged letter was received.
13. Yes, appointed on November 27, 1901, and took charge January 1, 1902 ; Mr. Jackson was retained and paid up to December 31 last.
14. Yes, on December 5 last.
15. No reasons were given—he was simply notified.

ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE—BOARD OF VISITORS.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked :

1. Is the report of the Board of Visitors to the Royal Military College for the past year published ?

2. If so, will the government lay it upon the Table of the House ?

3. If not published, will the government have it published and distributed ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. F. W. Borden) :

1. and 2. No. It is not customary for the department to print this report.

3. There is no objection to lay a copy of it on the Table of the House if requested, after which it can be printed by order of the House, as has sometimes been done.

Mr. TAYLOR.

ORIENTAL IMMIGRATION—REPORT OF COMMISSION.

Mr. MORRISON asked :

1. Has the commission appointed last year to investigate matters touching Oriental immigration yet finished their labours and reported to the government ?

2. If so, when will their report be printed and distributed ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The first part of the report of the commissioners concerning Chinese immigration has been received, and I will now place it on the Table of the House. The second part has not been received.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY—PURCHASE OF TIES AND SLEEPERS.

Mr. BARKER asked :

1. How many railway ties or sleepers were purchased for the Intercolonial Railway in the autumn of 1900 and in the winter of 1901, between Metapedia and Moncton ?

2. What proportion of such ties or sleepers were spruce, fir and poplar, respectively ?

3. What prices were paid for each such description of tie or sleeper ?

4. Were such ties or sleepers required to be in accordance with any and what specifications as to size, quality or otherwise ?

5. Were tenders called for, if so, what notice by advertisement or otherwise was given to the public with respect thereto ?

6. What amount was paid out by Inspector McMannus or other persons on behalf of the government or of the Intercolonial Railway for railway ties or sleepers during the month preceding the 7th day of November, 1900 ?

7. (a.) Who were the contractors who supplied the railway ties or sleepers in the autumn of 1900 and the winter of 1901 between the points above mentioned ?

(b.) Did each of them have the privilege of delivering a percentage of spruce, fir and poplar, and if so, what percentage ? or was this privilege given to some only, and if so, to whom ?

(c.) If this privilege was given to some only, and was not general, why was it not granted to all contractors ?

8. (a.) Were such railway ties or sleepers paid for in cash or by cheque ?

(b.) What proportion was paid for by cheque and what proportion was paid for in cash ?

(c.) Is it the usual custom to pay for such supplies by cheque upon voucher, and if so, why was this custom departed from ?

9. (a.) What special privileges, if any, were given to Mr. F. Curren in connection with contracts for supplying railway ties and sleepers in 1900 and 1901 ?

(b.) Were the same privileges extended to all other persons tendering for the supplying of railway ties or sleepers ?

10. What amount of railway ties or sleepers purchased in 1900 and 1901, respectively, still remain on hand, and what proportion of each, respectively, have been used ?

11. Of the ties and sleepers so purchased in the autumn of 1900 and the winter of 1901, what proportion were fir, spruce and poplar, respectively, and what proportion of each have been used, and what proportion still remain on hand ?

12. Has the Department of Railways and Canals a report on the quality and durability or value of spruce, fir and poplar ties respectively; if so, by whom was such report made, and when was it made ?

13. Has any allegation or charge been made against Contractor McMannus in connection with the surveying of such ties or sleepers or any of them, and if so, has the same been investigated, and with what result ?

14. Has any reinspection or examination of the said railway ties or sleepers been made during the summer of 1901, or at any other time, and if so, by whom and with what result, and have any and what proportion of such ties and sleepers been found to be under-sized or other wise unsuitable ?

15. If any such reinspection has been made, when and by whom was it made, and at what cost has it been completed, and if it has not been completed, is it still in progress, and if it is not in progress, why has it been discontinued ?

16. If any of such ties or sleepers have been found to be below the required size or otherwise unsuitable, or not in accordance with the specification, if any, what steps have been taken to recover the value thereof from the contractor?

17. Has any track foreman between Newcastle and Moncton reported that railway ties or sleepers delivered to him for use on the Intercolonial Railway were under size or otherwise unsuitable, and has he sent any specimen thereof to the chief engineer at Moncton for inspection ?

18. What is the usual practice of the department with respect to the paying for ties or sleepers, and was this practice in any way departed from by payment in cash instead of by cheque or otherwise during the autumn of 1900 and the winter of 1901 ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). I think my hon. friend ought to move for a return in a matter of this kind. However, the information has been asked for, and as soon as it has been received from Moncton it will be given. Nevertheless it would be far better to move for a return. The question will be allowed to stand if the hon. gentleman wishes.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY LOCOMOTIVES.

Mr. BARKER asked :

1. Were the locomotives attached to trains 25, 26, 33 and 34, running between Halifax and Montreal, and mentioned in the official letter of the 14th January, 1902, from the manager to the superintendent of the Intercolonial Railway, of poor construction and poor steaming qualities, as there stated by the manager ?

2. How long have those locomotives been in service, from whom, where and when were they bought, and at what price ?

3. Were they constructed for the government ? If so, were the specifications prepared by the Railway Department ?

4. Were the locomotives bought ready-made ? If so, upon whose recommendation, and under what inspection ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). The same answer may be given to that as to the last question.

PAPERS IN THE HUTTON-HUGHES MATTER.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked :

1. Why was the Order of the House of last session for the production of certain named papers in the Hutton-Hughes matter not obeyed?

2. Will the government bring down the papers at an early date this session ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. F. W. Borden). The order of the House referred to seems to have never reached the Department of Militia and Defence. I have a letter here from the Deputy Minister of Militia, in which he states that the Secretary of State never sent the order forward and that he is informed by the Department of the Secretary of State that the order was never received there. Now that attention has been called to it, I will see that the order is carried out.

THE PETERS TARGET AND THE MORRIS TUBE.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked :

1. Has the government the report of a board of officers assembled at camp 'Carling's Heights,' London, Ontario, on the 24th day of June, 1901, by order of Lt.-Col. J. Peters, A.D.C., commanding second brigade, for the purpose of examining and reporting upon the working of the Peters' target ?

2. What is the cost of one of the Peters' target ?

3. How does the cost of the Peters' target compare with those used usually for the Morris tube ?

4. What is the comparative cost of marking for each system ?

5. How does the Peters' system compare for (a) rapidity of fire ; (b) absence of doubt re position of hits ; and (c) safety of markers, with the system for some time in use with the Morris tube ?

6. Is the new style of ammunition for practicing target shooting found to be satisfactory ? What is the cost ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. F. W. Borden) :

1. Yes.

2. Eight dollars.

3. The targets generally used for Morris tubes cost 25 cents a piece.

4. Under the Peters target system no markers are used, the whole target vanishing if hit and no record is kept of the shots that fail to strike the target. Under the ordinary system markers are employed to mark whether the shots go high or low or left or right, thus enabling the firer to correct his aim and adjust his sights. The protection for the markers is obtained by means of iron shields which cost about $20 a piece; they are of a permanent nature and give complete safety to the markers when used under proper supervision.

5. (a) The Peters' system is more rapid. (b) The Peters' system does not show the position of the hits, as the whole target disappears and stays down until released by a spring manipulated from the firing point, it is impossible to tell when using it whether a shot is high or low or left or right. The only way to obviate this would be by supplying a back ground with a marker to point out the hits. (c) Under proper supervision when the firing points are properly measured off there is no danger whatever.

6. The manufacture of the new ammunition has only been proceeded with in the last ten days. Preliminary experiments show that it is a much more satisfactory ammunition than the Morris tube with its ammunition. It is probable that minor defects may be discovered in it which will no doubt be remedied when discovered. The cost is about $1 per thousand.

MAIL CARRIER AT STE. HENEDINE.

Mr. MORIN asked :

1. Has Joseph Coté, mail carrier between the railway station of the Quebec central and the post office at Ste. Henedine, been replaced ?
2. If so, by whom ?
3. Were tenders called for before the renewal of the said contract ?
4. If so, how many tenders did the department receive, and what are their respective amounts ?
5. What sum does the new contractor receive ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Wm. Mulock). The present contractor for carrying the mails between the railway station of the Quebec Central and the post office at Ste. Henedine is Joseph Corriveau, at the sum of $55 per annum. This service was let by public tender in 1897 and the contract awarded to Mr. Côté at $55 per annum, he being the lowest tenderer. The contract expired on the 30th September, 1901. The amount thereof being $55 per year, the Postmaster General is authorized by the statute to let the contract without inviting tenders, and a new contract was entered into with Mr. Joseph Corriveau at the sum named, being the amount of the lowest tender for the preceding four years.

CANADIAN MAILS VIA UNITED STATES PORTS.

Mr. KEMP asked :

What proportion of Canadian transatlantic mails are received and sent via United States ports ?

What arrangements are there for receiving and transferring same through United States territory, and the cost of such service ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Wm. Mulock) :

1. Proportion sent : About seven times as much mail matter is sent via the United States to the United Kingdom as is sent via Canada. The number of pounds during the six months ending the 30th November, 1901, being : Via Canadian ports, 30,418; via United States, 209,659. Proportion received is not recorded in this department.

2. The arrangement for receiving and transferring Canadian mails through United States territory is in accordance with article 4 of the Universal Postal Union Convention signed at Washington, 15th June, 1897.

The cost of territorial conveyance is 2 francs per kilogram of letters and postcards, and 25 centimes per kilogram of other articles.

The Washington convention provides that transit charges should continue to be based on the statistics taken in May, 1896, and in accordance with this condition the following sums were paid for mails for the calendar year ending 31st December, 1900 :

—	Weight.	Territorial Transit Charges.	Maritime Transit Charges.
	Lbs.	$ cts.	$ cts.
To Great Britain ..	213,520	10,718 94	24,892 97
France.....	5,579	265 98	614 19

This department has no record of the weights or charges on matter despatched from transatlantic ports via the United States to Canada.

INVESTIGATION INTO RAILWAY FREIGHT RATES.

Mr. KEMP asked :

Is the report of Professor Maclean, who was engaged by the Department of Railways and Canals for the purpose of investigating the question of freight rates, &c., complete ? If so, when will it be placed on the Table of the House ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). Mr. Maclean has made his report, and it will be laid on the Table at an early date.

SUBSIDIES PAID TO RAILWAYS.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

1. What railway subsidies, if any, have been paid since 30th June, 1901 ?
2. To what railways have such subsidies, if any, been paid, and what amount has been paid to each such railway ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). The following railways have been paid subsidies since 30th June, 1901 :

1. $1,895,747.

2. Quebec Bridge Company, $167,430; Canadian Northern, $939,891 ; Atlantic and Lake Superior, $14,800; Montreal and Province Line, $58,560; York and Carleton, $18,336; Thousand Islands, $5,440; Canadian Pacific—Pipestone Branch, $67,200; Canadian Pacific—Crow's Nest Pass, $22,946; Inverness and Richmond, $36,000; Algoma Central, $240,624; Lake Erie and Detroit River, $137,120; Atlantic and North-west (annual subsidy), $186,600. Total, $1,895,747.

EMPLOYMENT OF MR. SHEWEN, ST. JOHN, N. B.

Mr. WILMOT asked :

1. Does Mr. Shewen, St. John, N.B., hold the position of resident engineer to the Department of Public Works ?
2. If so, has he held that position continuously up to date ?
3. If not, when was he displaced, and for what cause, and the date of his reappointment ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. Israel Tarte) :

1. Yes.
2. No.
3. Mr. Shewen's services were dispensed with on the 15th of October. He was reappointed at the beginning of this month. The reason his services were dispensed with and the reason he was appointed again was to promote and maintain efficiency in the public service.

THE GRIEVANCES OF FISH CANNERS.

Mr. BELAND asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been called to an article which appeared in the Victoria 'Colonist' on the 9th February, 1902, part of which reads as follows :—

'In speaking of the grievances of the canners, Professor Prince, Commissioner of Fisheries, said there were no doubt many grievances, many matters to set right, and if they had been set right long ago, it would have been better for the government ; but the government have not had a minister who could form a resolution and act on it since the days of Sir Hibbert Tupper.'

2. Is it the intention of the government to have an investigation as to whether Professor Prince expressed himself as above reported ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). I may say that copies of the paper referred to have been received at the department. If the hon. gentleman will allow the question to stand, I will have answers made.

BELLEVILLE BOARD OF HARBOUR COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. PORTER asked :

1. Have any resignations, dismissals, appointments, or reappointments been made during the two years prior to 1st February, 1902, in the Board of Harbour Commissioners for the city of Belleville ?
2. What person or persons have so resigned, been dismissed, appointed, or reappointed, with dates of such resignation, dismissal, appointment or reappointment ?
3. What reason or reasons existed for such resignations, dismissals, appointments or reappointments ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland) :

1. Yes.
2. Mr. Thomas Hanley resigned his position to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries on the 10th January, 1901, and the appointment of Mr. George Wallbridge was cancelled on the 19th April, 1901, by Order in Council.

Mr. E. G. Sills, of Belleville, was appointed a harbour commissioner for Belleville on the 19th April, 1901, and Mr. T. S. Carman was also appointed a commissioner for said harbour on the same date.

3. It was considered advisable in the interests of the harbour to cancel the appointment of Mr. Wallbridge and appoint another commissioner in his place, two commissioners having resigned, because they were dissatisfied with Mr. Wallbridge, and the difficulty there was in getting others to fill the vacancies while he remained commissioner.

Mr. T. S. Carman was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Hanley, and Mr. E. G. Sills was appointed in the room of Mr. Wallbridge.

INSPECTION OF GRAIN AT MONTREAL.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked :

1. Who inspects the grain arriving at Montreal ?
2. Why is not the certificate of the western inspector accepted ?
3. Is the government aware that dissatisfaction exists over the rulings, or rather overrulings, of other inspection by the Montreal Warehouse Company's inspector ?
4. Has the government control of the Montreal inspector ?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) :

1. The official grain inspector at Montreal is Hospice Labelle, who has several deputy inspectors under him. The official inspection is done by one or other of them. There is also a chief inspector, under the terms of the Act passed at last session, Mr. E. F. Craig, to whom matters can be referred in dispute, and whose decision is final under the terms of the Act.
2. The certificate of the western inspector is accepted, unless a reinspection is called for by the owner of the grain. European buyers sometimes insist upon seaboard inspection, and in such cases the owners usually ask for reinspection at Montreal.
3. The government has no knowledge of dissatisfaction with reference to inspection by the Montreal Warehouse Company's inspector. The Montreal Warehouse Company's inspector, if such inspector exists, is not a government inspector. That warehouse is a private institution and cannot and does not inspect grain under the terms of the Inspection Act.
4. Yes.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

First part of the report of the commission appointed to investigate the question of Chinese immigration.—Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

The report of the Secretary of State for the year 1901.—Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick.

INQUIRY FOR RETURNS.

Mr. WILSON. Before the Orders of the Day are called I wish to ask for some returns. One is the correspondence between Mr. Devlin and the Department of the Interior, and the other is with reference to immigration. These are two returns which I would like to have, and I do not think it would be difficult to prepare them.

CATTLE GUARDS ON RAILWAYS.

Mr. E. A. LANCASTER (Lincoln) moved second reading of Bill (No. 3) to amend the Railway Act. He said: I may say at the outset that this is neither a new question in the country nor does my amendment seek to create an entirely new state of the law. The history of the legislation in regard to cattle guards and fences on highway crossings is shortly this. Until the year 1888 the liability to erect and maintain cattle-guards and fences at highway crossings rested on the railway companies absolutely. In that year the Railway Act was consolidated, and this matter was dealt with in the consolidation, and dealt with in such a way that the liability was not only made not absolute, but was disposed of in such a way as to leave practically no liability at all. The enacting portion of the section of the Railway Act which was in force until 1888 was as follows:

> The company shall erect and maintain cattle-guards at all highway crossings suitable and sufficient to prevent cattle and other animals from getting on the railway.

Those who consider the question at all will know that these words constituted an absolute liability. In the consolidation of the Railway Act in 1888, this section was changed by adding the following subsection:

> Until such fences and cattle-guards are duly made and completed, and if after they are so made and completed they are duly maintained, the company shall be liable for all damages done by its trains and engines to cattle, horses and other animals, not wrongfully on the railway, and having got there in consequence of the omission to make, complete and maintain such fences and cattle-guards as aforesaid.

As soon as that was passed our courts began to decide that no company was liable because of the qualified liability expressed in that section, because any cattle that were wrongfully on the railway would be cattle that had no right to be on the highway—in other words, what are known as animals running at large. In the year 1890 the subsection which I have just read was struck out, and the following subsection substituted:

> If the company omits to erect and complete as aforesaid any fence or cattle-guard, or if, after it is completed, the company neglects to maintain the same as aforesaid, and if, in consequence of such omission or neglect, any animal gets upon the railway from an adjoining place where, under the circumstances, it might properly be, then the company shall be liable to the owner of every such animal for all damages in respect of it caused by any of the company's trains or engines; and no animal allowed by law to run at large shall be held to be improperly on a place adjoining the railway merely for the reason that the owner or occupant of such place has not permitted it to be there.

This provision has the same effect on the farmers or other inhabitants of the country as the amendment of 1888, and our courts have been obliged to decide that an animal is not in a place where it might properly be if it is running at large and therefore gets on the railway. It at once strikes anybody who gives any consideration to the matter that there is no need of a cattle-guard at all if the animal is not running at large, because if it is in the control of a human being it will not get on the railway, even if there is no cattle-guards there, unless there is contributory negligence on the part of the person in charge of the animal. The question is a very simple one. Why are cattle-guards required? Not to prevent human beings from driving their cattle or allowing their cattle to get on to a line of railway, but to prevent cattle, which are not within immediate control, from doing so. No cattle-guards would be required were the animals always under control. Until 1888 the law stood as I am trying to make it now. Until 1888 railway companies were obliged to provide and maintain these cattle-guards, and it is only since all the larger railway companies secured their charters, under the law as it stood in 1888, and as I seek to make it now, that they got this amendment passed, first in 1888 and then in 1890, taking away the rights our people enjoyed when the railways were built. We often hear the plea put forth, especially by railway companies, that we must not do anything to interfere with vested rights. Well, Mr. Speaker, this happens to be a case in which the farmer clearly has been deprived of a vested right. The condition of affairs which existed, when our farmers were compelled, sometimes against their will, to give up portions of their land, to allow their farms to be cut up and dangerous conditions established, for the benefit of railway companies, has since been changed, and changed without their consent, and it is only right that this old condition of things should be restored. All the petitions that are flooding this House this session, although the session is still very young, show clearly that the farmers never gave their consent to this protection being taken away from them which existed in 1888. Innumerable petitions have been laid on the Table asking us to amend the law and put it back where it was, as I am now seeking to do.

It is an essential principle of every law that it should be effective, that it should accomplish something which requires to be accomplished. Otherwise it is merely a travesty. I would like any hon. member to explain what common sense there is in an Act which provides that a railway company or anybody else must do a certain thing and then fails to provide a penalty for not doing it, except in the event of certain conditions which could not possibly apply.

The only reason that can be urged against the amendment I propose is that perhaps it is hard on the railway companies. I submit that there is nothing in that contention, but that I am simply putting things back as they were in 1888 when these railway companies constructed their lines.

Another argument used is that if this amendment were to pass, the farmers would allow their animals to run at large in order to get compensation, in case of accident, from the railway companies. But that is a very poor and a very unfounded opinion of the whole of our farming community. Our farmers do not want their animals to run at large, but in spite of every precaution they will sometimes get beyond control. A fence may be blown down by the wind or some stranger may leave a gate open or something else may be done, for which the farmer cannot be held responsible, and an animal get out on to the highway. On such a case it is only fair to oblige the railway companies to take the precautions against these cattle straying on to their lines, which they were obliged to do some twelve or thirteen years ago. Besides there is a section of the Railway Act which I am not touching, and which prevents a farmer recovering damages for the injury or destruction of any animal that occurs on the highway where it is crossed by a railway. If an animal is killed or injured at the point of intersection, its owner cannot recover any damages, and I submit that while we retain that section in our law, every farmer will be interested in seeing that his stock do not escape on to the highway, lest they might meet with an accident at these points of intersection.

The argument that to allow the owners of cattle to recover damages from the railway companies will be an inducement to our farmers to let their stock run loose, answers itself. If you pass the Bill which I now urge upon you, you prevent animals from meeting the train except at the point of intersection of the railway and the highway. For, the effect would be to make it necessary for the railway company to make proper cattle-guards. It may be said this is enacted in the present law. But there is no use in enacting that the railway shall do a given thing, if you do not punish them for not doing it. The only way to compel them to put cattle-guards at the highway crossing is to hold them liable in the case of injury to cattle that had strayed upon their track from the highway, no matter how they got across the cattle-guard. If this Act is passed and railways provide guards which the cattle cannot cross from the highway, the only place at which an animal could be upon the track would be at the point of intersection of the track with the highway. If you give effect to the argument of the railways that under such a law as I propose farmers may grow careless and allow their animals to run on a highway, thus causing the risk of the trains being thrown off the track, you must also allow for the fact that under this Bill, the only point at which a train would meet an animal would be at the point of intersection. On the contrary, as things are at present, the train is liable to meet that animal at any point of the road from terminus to terminus. Thus, the very argument advanced in behalf of the railways, if it be advanced in this House answers itself, and the fact is emphasized that the railways would be protected by this amendment in the very way they want to be protected. Now, the law of this country on this subject is very different from that of any other country where the circumstances are at all similar. All the states of the Union, so far as I have been able to ascertain—and I have learned about a majority of them—have laws, which, though worded more or less differently are, in effect, the same as our law was before 1888, and as I am now seeking to make it. Obviously, the reason is just what I have already said, that, if you do not make the liability absolute you cannot expect that cattle-guards will be provided that will afford proper protection. Now, to state a case—innumerable cases have occurred—let us suppose that an animal goes away without the consent of the owner and gets upon the highway. The law being what it is, we might assume that the railway company has not provided proper cattle-guards. Railway companies do not do anything they are not obliged to do unless there is some clear advantage to be gained, and I think it would be fair to assume that proper cattle-guards have not been made. But let us suppose that there are effective cattle-guards. The animal goes upon the highway until it reaches the railway. But, the cattle-guards being there, it will be discouraged from seeking to move along the track. It is in danger while it is at the point of intersection, but it is encouraged to continue on the highway where there is no danger. That is the only risk the owner of the animal ought to run. Of course, under municipal law, the owner is liable to have the animal impounded, and all the steps taken that are necessary for the protection of the inhabitants of the locality. But, so far as the railway is concerned, I submit that the only risk that the owner ought to run is, if the animal though encouraged to remain on the highway is injured while it is on the track. But if the proper cattle-guards are not provided, the animal is induced to turn upon the track, which, to the animal does not appear more dangerous than the highway. The owner ought not to be called upon to bear that risk. Therefore, I submit, that the Bill which I have proposed is one which ought to meet with the approval of the House. Now, it has been said in the country, during the discussion of this subject within the last year, that such a law as I propose might have the effect of reducing the rate of speed of trains, that, with cattle-guards constructed at the intersection of every highway the speed of trains could not be maintained. In the first place, I do not think that the fact that a train may be prevented from travelling as fast as it did five or six years ago ought, of itself, to be a reason why an injustice should be done to the inhabitants of the country who are obliged, in carrying on their affairs, to keep animals that may go upon the railway tracks if there are no cattle-guards. But, in the second place, from inquiries I have made, I find that this is after all, merely a question of expense. I understand that a cattle-guard can be made that will prevent cattle straying upon the railway and still will not interfere with the solidity of the track, if there is a little masonry about it. We know that the railways have to use a good deal of masonry in their works all over their lines, for culverts, bridges, and so on. If it be true that the railway must run its trains a little slower, or else put a little more expense in the construction of cattle-guards, I submit that that ought not to be regarded as an effective objection to the amendment I propose. The railways ought to bear that additional expense in order that the people of the country may be properly protected. I do not wish to trouble the House at greater length or to repeat in other forms what I have already said. I understand that several other gentlemen wish to speak on the Bill. But, in closing, I submit that in the true interests of the country this amendment ought to pass, and these provisions be restored to the place in the statute law which they had in 1888, in order that the people may have the protection which I have endeavoured in my humble way to explain, and to which they are entitled.

Mr. PHILIPPE DEMERS (St. John and Iberville). (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, let me congratulate the hon. member (Mr. Lancaster), who has just spoken, upon his initiative and perseverance. Although last year, the efforts of the hon. member were not rewarded with success, still this year, again, he comes forward with the same Bill. But happily for him, this question comes up before the House instead of before the Railway Committee. Owing to the several petitions that have been presented in support of the contemplated legislation, it will be no hard task for the House to take a decision. As remarked by the hon. gentleman, it is not the intention to impose new obligations upon railway companies, but merely to come back to the state of things that existed up to the year 1888, and was amended by the statute of 1890. The change brought about by the amendment of 1890 was quite radical ; for, up to that date, railway companies were held responsible by the courts, whenever cattle wandered and loitered on the highway, near the railway tracks, which were not then provided with cattle-guards. After that amendment had been passed, legislation changed very rapidly, in the several provinces of the Dominion ; but in the province of Quebec, notwithstanding this amendment of 1890, the Court of Appeal decided that railway companies were responsible for all damages to cattle wandering upon the railway tracks, through neglect of providing proper cattle guards. Later on though, in the case of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company vs. Cross, the Court of Appeal adopted the jurisprudence of the other provinces, so that at this moment, railway companies are perfectly free not to comply with the laws of the land. They are incurring no risks ; for, when, I ask, are those companies to be held responsible to the public, if not in cases where, through their neglect of providing proper cattle-guards, cattle will wander on the railway tracks, causing thereby damages ? It is the only case which might occur, and railway companies are not responsible.

So, that since 1890, we have a law on the matter, which serves no useful purpose. There is no question of saddling railway companies with new obligations, but merely of giving a fresh sanction to the law already existing. I do not believe that railway companies would suffer from this Bill.

In the constituency which I represent here, several farmers have suffered from accidents to their cattle, which were due to the absence of cattle-guards. When appealed to, the railway companies have haughtily declined remedying grievances. They would simply laugh at the petitions sent by several municipal councils, requesting them to erect cattle-guards.

Accidents will occur, so long as we shall not have placed a sanction upon the obligation which has always existed for railway companies to maintain cattle-guards at railway crossings. The House, I hope, will adopt the legislation proposed by the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster), and will thus give sanction to a law meant to protect the interests of farmers, which would be greatly imperilled were we to reject the Bill now before us.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). The Bill introduced by my hon. friend is a very important one, and interests a large section of the people of this country. At the same time we know from experience that the question is a complicated one, and requires a good deal of consideration before we venture on an amendment. I do not see any objection to allowing the second reading of this Bill and referring it to the committee, so that it may be carefully considered, and that we may hear the parties interested. You will admit, Mr. Speaker, and I am sure the House will agree with me, that one is scarcely able to form an opinion with regard to the different points involved in this matter from the speeches that are made on the floor of the House; one is much better able to form such an opinion when he hears the matter discussed before a committee, and has an opportunity of asking questions and getting information with regard to the various points that have been, I admit, very ably dealt with by the hon. gentleman who has spoken on the Bill to-day. So far as I am personally concerned I will agree to the second reading of the Bill, with the understanding that it be referred to the Railway Committee for consideration.

Mr. SPROULE. While the usual custom has been to refer railway and telegraph Bills to the Railway Committee, and no doubt the minister who has made that proposal is in harmony with that custom, still I do not see any strong grounds for referring this Bill to the Railway Committee. It is an ordinary public Bill, and as ordinary public Bills, after their second reading, are usually dealt with in this House by being referred to the Committee of the Whole House, and as this is only a commonplace Bill of one clause, therefore I think the best place to consider it is in Committee of this Whole House. There is one reason why I would object to refer it to the Railway Committee, and that is the history of what has taken place in that Railway Committee. I do not desire to reflect in any way on that committee, yet I cannot refrain from thinking over a large number of important Bills that go to that Railway Committee and are killed there, and never find their way back to this House, Bills that are usually in the public interest. It seems to be the graveyard of very many important Bills that are in the interest of the public.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Will my hon. friend allow me ? I think perhaps there is a good deal in the statement that many Bills are killed in the Railway Committee, but I do not think there are nearly so many as are killed in this House when they are considered in Committee of the Whole. I know that many amendments of great importance have been carried through the House after having been reported by the committee, but in my experience of twenty-two years in parliament I cannot remember any Bill having been introduced by a private member and become law without having been considered by a committee of the House.

Mr. SPROULE. I am speaking with reference to ordinary Bills.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am speaking of public Bills.

Mr. SPROULE. Bills promoted by private corporations come back from the committee all right, but public Bills relating to the rights of individuals as against railways——

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Public Bills I mean.

Mr. SPROULE. My experience has been that these Bills sent to the committee rarely if ever come back to this House reported from that committee. Therefore, I am opposed to the reference on that ground. Under the old law people knew what their rights were in the event of any accident occurring through defective cattle-guards, but under new law those rights were taken away. The history of railways in this country has been a constant infringement upon those rights. But as soon as the law was amended, new conditions were introduced, and now it is something that every person is not conversant with. If there were a great deal of intricate legislation about this Bill that it requires an expert to understand, there might be a strong reason for sending it to the Railway Committee. But I do not think there is any good reason for sending this Bill to the Railway Committee.

Now arguments have been suggested and facts presented to show that one reason why this amendment to the law was made was because the old cattle-guards were dangerous. When this Bill was being considered I asked the question : Will the hon. member who holds that contention give us any data of the number of accidents which have taken place on account of these excavations for cattle-guards, and no cases were given, and I believe it was never attempted to prove to the House or to the committee that any considerable number of accidents occurred on account of these excavations for the old kind of cattle-guards. Therefore, if that be so, and I believe it is, I do not think the argument should hold good or be of any value. It is a fact that every farmer in the country knows, that where there is a railway crossing his farm the cattle-guard is of no value whatever as regards keeping cattle off the railway track. They will walk over it winter or summer as unconcernedly as if there was no cattle-guard there at all. They are only pieces of bent iron put so closely together that cattle can walk over them almost as on a floor. Well, the railway companies do not care, because there is a law which prevents cattle running at large within half a mile of a railway, and if the farmer suffers loss from his cattle running on the public highways within half a mile, he is liable to be prosecuted by law for allowing them to do so. If his cattle get off on the railway and are killed, he has no redress whatever, and has to sustain all the loss. I do not think it was ever intended that should be so, and in my judgment it is very unfair. There was very little discussion when this amendment was made to the law.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Does this propose to remedy that defect, so that when cattle on a railway crossing are killed the owner shall have indemnity ?

Mr. SPROULE. I do not know what the hon. gentleman means by a railway crossing.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. Where the highway crosses a railway.

Mr. SPROULE. No, not at all, it is not intended that this is of any value to the farmer as enabling him to get compensation for cattle killed on the highway, that is his own lookout; but it is when cattle-guards are so defective as to allow cattle to travel over them and get on the railway ground or tracks. That is all the Bill is intended to do, that is what the old law did do, and that is what the farmers are deprived of to-day. When their cattle travel as they do right over the cattle-guards on to the railway grounds and are killed, they have no redress whatever, and have to sustain the entire loss. I was going on to say that when this law was amended there was very little discussion on it. In fact it was explained by an expert railway lawyer, I think very adroitly, and information was kept in the dark which, if that committee had possessed, they never would have allowed that amendment to pass. But they did not see the aim of it, and they innocently allowed the amendment to pass, believing that it was for some good purpose. But when they found out afterwards that the cattle-guards were of no value in keeping the cattle off the track, and that when the cattle went over these guards and got killed the owner had no redress, and when a case came to be decided in the courts, then they saw where the law was defective and very naturally a clamour arose for an amendment. Once or twice before an amendment was introduced to put the law back to where it was before, but through adverse influences the Bill did not become law, it was killed. It was sent first to the Railway Committee and then to a sub-committee of the Railway Committee, and through some accident or otherwise—I do not know what it was—it was killed. I, as one member of that sub-committee, know that a notice of the meeting of that sub-committee did not reach me until after the sub-committee had considered the Bill and reported it back to the main committee, reporting against the Bill. But whether that was the result of accident or design I am not prepared to say. At any rate, the Bill did not come back to the Railway Committee as having received its support, and consequently it was lost.

Now, we want to discuss it in this House for two reasons. The first reason is to let the country know what the representatives of the people are doing or what they are disposed to do to protect the innocent farmer whose property was expropriated from him in the first instance in addition to which the dangers were increased on his own property by virtue of the operations of the railway corporations, although they placed these cattle-guards on their line. If it were publicly known throughout the country that the representatives of the people are opposed to this, I think they would be reminded of it when they went back for re-election. Therefore, we want to discuss the measure as generally as possible. We want to ascertain the sentiment of the House on the question so as to see whether hon. gentlemen think that they are in duty bound to do what is right towards the farmers of the country, or whether they consider it to be their duty to look after the interests of the railway corporations.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). Would the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule), be good enough to explain the difference between the law as it now stands in relation to the farmer and the Bill as proposed ?

Mr. SPROULE. Under the old law, if the railway company did not keep up an efficient railway guard, sufficient to keep cattle from getting on the track, and cattle went on the track and were killed, the railway company were liable for damages. To-day, all they are obliged to do is to keep up cattle-guards, not necessarily efficient ones, not ones to prevent cattle from getting on the track, and if a farmer allows his cattle to run and they get on the track and are killed he has no redress because the railway company have maintained the cattle-guard, whether an efficient one or not. Under the proposed amendment to the law if the railway company maintain an inefficient guard they are not liable for damages and the farmer has to suffer. Under the old law if the cattle-guard was not an efficient one the railway company were liable. We desire to discuss this question as generally as possible and if there are any reasonable objections against the Bill we wish to know them so as we may consider them. As the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster) said, the farmer had the first rights in the country, his property was expropriated from him against his will, and if you expropriate property, as a principle, it is held that you must give compensation. Although you have given moderately fair compensation for the property, there are other rights which the farmer should enjoy. A corporation to which the country has given the right to invade the right of domain of the private individual should not be allowed to bring about other conditions which make it more onerous for the farmer to carry on his daily work, more expensive, or more dangerous or more likely to incur loss to him. Now, if a railway corporation expropriate property they should not be allowed to run their railway over a farm and allow it to remain in such a way that the farmer's stock can at any time get on the track and be destroyed and he have no redress from the railway company. Unless they take every reasonable precaution to prevent the destruction of stock as a result of getting on the track, a railway company ought to be held responsible for the damage and be obliged to pay it. Therefore, this Bill, in my judgment, ought to become law, and I am most strongly opposed to sending it to the Railway Committee. I want to say one word in regard to another amendment made to the law a few years ago. That was an amendment which made the farmer liable if he allowed his cattle to run at large on the highway within half a mile of a railway. I always thought that a very unfair provision of the law and a very unreasonable one, and I hold that opinion still. In many parts of the country the farmers find their very best grazing ground on the highway. A farmer should not be deprived of the advantage of grazing his cattle on the highway, where there is better pasture perhaps than in his own fields. In Vermont he has the right to the use of the highway to the centre of the highway. Our law is somewhat different here, but still, by common consent, farmers have been allowed to take advantage of the highways and to graze their cattle on them, but, if a farmer allows his cattle to graze on the highway within half a mile of a railway he is liable to have them impounded and to be mulcted in damages. I think this wrong and I hold that such a law should be amended.

Mr. A. T. THOMPSON (Haldimand and Monck). Mr. Speaker, I understood the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) to say that he would move that this Bill be referred to the Railway Committee of this Chamber, and when he does so I propose to support that motion. I feel it due to myself to give the House my reason for so-doing. I represent an almost purely agricultural riding, and there I practice my profession of the law, so that I think I am in some position to take an intelligent interest in the discussion now before the House. I wish to say that I have come to the conclusion that the farmers have in this matter a most substantial grievance and I believe that I voice the opinion of the majority of the members of this House when I say that before this session is over a substantial remedy they must have for that substantial grievance. Now, the point between the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster) and the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Sutherland) is as to where this matter shall be fought out. It would seem to me undoubtedly a better course to fight it out in the Railway Committee than to deal with it here. Now, Sir, my reason for saying that will be apparent to almost every hon. member of this House even before I state it. Our chief functions are undoubtedly legislative, but in order to enact good laws there should be thorough previous investigation, and we have in the committee a chance of examining witnesses, of hearing experts on both sides and of gaining the best information possible. It is for this reason that I would like to see the matter investigated in the Railway Committee. As I have said before I am heartily in sympathy with the farmers in this matter and should it go to the committee I shall use every endeavour in my power to see that this Bill does not have one more tombstone put up to it in that committee, which has been called the graveyard. It seems to me that the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) has, to use a common phrase, been playing somewhat to the gallery in this matter. He has talked so much about wanting to go on record on the floor of this House. The insinuation is patent that we want to sneak off to a committee where there is no 'Hansard' reporter in order that we may do there what we would be ashamed to do on the floor of this House. I resent any such insinuation as that. I believe that the average member of this House is an intelligent man and that he is equally willing to do his duty in the committee or in the House. The hon. gentleman said that we must discuss the Bill here so that we might put ourselves on record. We have to discuss it here when it is reported from the Railway Committee, so that it seems to me that we can put ourselves on record by referring the Bill just as well as we can now by discussing it.

Mr. SPROULE. It may never be reported from the Railway Committee. That is the trouble.

Mr. THOMPSON. The chances are this year that when this matter goes to the committee, owing to the sentiment in regard to it in the House, it will come back and we will have an opportunity of going on record. I know very well that 'trimmer' is a name that no man would like to have forced upon him, but in my honest opinion compromise is in many cases honourable, and in the best interests of this country. We have not only the farmers to consider but also the travelling public, and let me say to my hon. friend from East Grey that the farmers form a very large per cent of the travelling public. Let us go to the committee and find out what is best to be done and then as honourable men do it. In conclusion may I be allowed to quote a very apt French proverb: 'Il faut mettre de l'eau dans son vin.'

Mr. JOSEPH BRUNET (St. James, Montreal). (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, I think the amendment moved by the hon. member is in several respects, similar to the Railway Act in force in the province of Quebec. Should there be any amendments required, then I think it would be better to refer the Bill to the Railway Committee, for further consideration.

Mr. F. B. WADE (Annapolis). There are three parties interested in the subject matter of this Bill. One is the farmer, another the railway company, and the third is the travelling public.

Mr. COWAN. What about the cow?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. WADE. We will leave the cow with the hon. member. As between the farmer and the railway company my sympathy is entirely with the farmer, but we have to consider the interests of the travelling public as well as the interests of the other parties, and we should be very careful before we make any changes in the provisions of the law as it exists to-day. There is a mistaken idea in the minds of many hon. gentlemen here with regard to this law. I think it can be demonstrated beyond peradventure that the law as it exists to-day is really the law that has been in force in Canada since 1857. It is all very well to work up our sympathies in favour of the farmer—and of the cow as one hon. gentleman suggests—and I dare say that some hon. gentlemen may sympathize with the railway company, but we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that the welfare of the travelling public should have our sympathy also. The object of the present law has been—and it has been so declared by the decisions of our courts—to impose a mutual burden upon the railways and upon the farmers whose cattle must be kept off the track in order that no danger may arise to the passengers and employees on railway trains. That is the object of the law, and that principle we must keep in view when we are discussing this question. It is in my opinion a question which ought to go before the Railway Committee, and there be thoroughly discussed. The provisions of this Bill with regard to cattle-guards is one of very great importance. To-day, upon the continent of America, there are not two railways which are using the same kind of cattle-guard; in fact upon different divisions of the same railway in Canada, different kinds of guards are used. The old pit-guard has been put aside and every imaginable device has been tried by the different railways in order to protect their line. It is as much in the interest of the railway company as it is in the interest of the general public that the very best and most effective kind of cattle-guard should be adopted. It does seem to me that it would be highly proper that a commission should be appointed for the purpose of inquiring into and deciding upon what is the most effective cattle-guard, and having decided authoritatively on that, we should put the law in force and see that it is used on every railway. If that were done good would be accomplished, but I doubt if any good can be achieved by our saying that an effective cattle-guard should be used, in view of the fact that different kinds of guards, all supposed to be effective, are being used now throughout the Dominion. Some of these guards which are the most effectual for the purpose of keeping cattle off the railway are the guards which are most complained of by the farmers because they are liable to injure the cattle. I therefore think that it is most desirable that this whole question should be discussed before the Railway Committee, notwithstanding the remarks made against that body by the hon. gentleman for Grey (Mr. Sproule). If some valuable recommendation could be made to this House, I believe the government would be only too glad to adopt the suggestion and to take such steps as will enable them to decide which is the best kind of cattle-guard that should be used throughout Canada.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES (Victoria). There is another very important interest that has not been referred to in this case. We have heard of the interests of the lawyers, the farmers, the general public, the railway companies and the cattle, but nobody seems to have thought of mentioning the necessity for protecting the lives of the men engaged in operating the trains. I have been at the burial of too many of the engineers and firemen and brakesmen of the town in which I live, to let a Bill of this kind pass without seeing that the interests of this body are properly safeguarded. I have as much sympathy with the farmer as any man in this House, but I could give you instance after instance where train hands were killed on account of some careless people allowing their cattle to roam on the track at night.

An hon. MEMBER. Not farmers.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria). You rarely find a farmer's cow running at large. It is usually the cow of some poor loafer around the village which is let loose to get some pasture at night, and the next thing you know is that the fireman and the engineer are piled up in the debris and hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property destroyed. I am anxious that every railway company should be compelled to maintain the very best kind of cattle-guard, but I believe also that there should be safeguards provided for the men who are obliged to travel on the railways, and who are at the mercy of some careless fellow who turns his cow loose at night.

Mr. G. A. STEPHENS (Kent). In the interest of the farmer, in the interest of the travelling public and in the interest of all concerned, I believe that the pit-guard is the only proper guard to use. I believe that the pit-guard would be entirely used by the railway companies but for the expense that it entails upon them. It is certainly the safest guard for a train to pass over if it is properly built, and it is certainly the best guard for keeping cattle and other stock off the track. I also believe that the floor of this House is the proper place to argue this Bill out.

Mr. M. AVERY (Addington). I have had the honour to receive a petition from my riding praying that some legislation be passed by this House in reference to this question. We have three railways in the riding of Addington, and there is a universal demand in the district for improvement in the railway culverts. If it be in the interest of railways to make better guards I would like to know why the railway companies have not done so. In the district which I represent a great many cattle have been killed on the railways, and the farmers have had no redress. I will give you an instance. A drover was taking cattle to the railway station to be shipped, and in spite of his efforts the cattle got on the track because the cattle-guard was not sufficient to keep them back. A train came along and killed half of the cattle, but the poor man had no recourse in law against the company, because the law said that the cattle-guard was a safe one. It is neither just nor right to allow the railway companies to build such cattle-guards which are not safe for the farmers, and not safe for the people using the highway or travelling on the railroad. I was on a train myself one day when cattle got on the track and nearly the whole train was ditched, but fortunately no one was killed. I would point out to the House that what is protection for the travelling public is protection for the railway companies and also for the farmers. The sooner we pass a law here forcing the railways to build proper cattle guards, the better satisfied will be the people of the country. Canada has helped railroads enough to ask them to make this small return towards the protection of our people, and I trust that a measure calculated to safeguard the rights of the public in this regard will soon become law.

Hon. DAVID TISDALE (South Norfolk). I do not propose to discuss the principle of this Bill, but I wish to correct some statements which have been made in this House with reference to the Railway Committee. Some hon. gentlemen made remarks in reference to the Railway Committee which were both uncalled for and unjustified. I can remember all the changes in the Railway Act since it was consolidated in 1888. I remember that in 1888 when the Hon. Mr. Pope was Minister of Railways, some two or three weeks were given to a careful consideration of the Act in the Railway Committee, and afterwards a very thorough discussion on the Bill took place in this House. After that the only important railway Bills which I remember were the one introduced by the hon. member for Lincoln, and a drainage measure which indirectly affected the railways. With these two exceptions all the Bills relating to railways went to the Railway Committee and were considered by that committee. I wish to make this correction, because when an hon. gentleman assumes the responsibility of reflecting upon the Railway Committee, he should inform himself of the true action of that committee. This matter is one of importance to the farmers, and I also represent an agricultural constituency, and it is not fair to the other members of the Railway Committee that the hon. gentleman should speak of it as a dangerous place to which to send any important Bill. I say that the Railway Committee, irrespective of which party is in power, is a most competent, faithful, honest and wise tribunal. I have been a member of that committee for fifteen years. I have taken a great deal of pride in it, and I am glad to say that I know of no tribunal in the world which I would rather trust than that committee. It is not pleasant for me to have to say some of these things, but I do not propose to allow these reflections on the Railway Committee to go on the journals of this House without making my protest against them. I want to congratulate the acting Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) on having to-day pursued the policy which has always been pursued by the most illustrious leaders on both sides of the House. I want to congratulate him, because since his party has been in power, I have sometimes had to find fault with the minister. I have always contended that so long as we have a Railway Act, the responsible minister should always take charge of such matters and see that fair play is given to all parties; and the acting Minister of Railways to-day, in my opinion took the proper course, and ought to be supported in it. With regard to the grievance which has been mentioned, there is certainly a strong desire to agree upon some methods for meeting a very complicated case, where important and conflicting interests are concerned; and I am satisfied that it is desired on both sides of the House to deal with the matter in all seriousness. I do not approve of sending a Bill of this kind to a sub-committee. I opposed doing so last year although I sat on the special committee. I think we should send it to a committee that will give the time and patience necessary to understand the case, and then the House will accept its decision.

Mr. SPROULE. I would like to ask the hon. member what became of the Bills for the protection of railway employees that went to that committee and never came back, the Bill respecting ditches and water courses, which also went there and never came back, and the cattle-guard Bill ?

Hon. Mr. TISDALE. The Bill relating to railway employees is not of the same character as this, though not less important, and I have no doubt it received due consideration. I understand that the matter it dealt with was adjusted by some arrangement brought about by the government between the railway employees and the companies.

Mr. R. HOLMES (West Huron). Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the very discussion which has taken place, and which is only in its incipient stages, shows the wisdom of referring this Bill to the Railway Committee. There is apparently as much diversity of opinion on this question as there is on the question of prohibition. The Bill is important, affecting as it does several interests. There is a strong grievance on the side of the farmers, and there may be questions of rights on the side of the railways and the public. In legislation of this kind it has always seemed to me that the wise course to pursue is to refer it to the committee which is supposed to deal with such matters. Therefore, I think this Bill should go before the Railway Committee. While I agree with some of its provisions, there is something to be said on both sides, and it should be threshed out there.

Mr. JABEL ROBINSON (West Elgin). A Bill similar to the one now before the House was introduced by the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster) last session, and was sent to the Railway Committee. The Railway Committee referred it to a sub-committee, and, if I remember rightly, the hon. member for South Norfolk (Hon. Mr. Tisdale) was on that committee, but did not put in an appearance, or if he did he voted against the Bill.

Hon. Mr. TISDALE. I was at every meeting of that committee.

Mr. ROBINSON (West Elgin). Well, that sub-committee took no action in the matter, and the present Bill may be treated in the same way. This is a very important question. The farmers have rights, and we are bound to make the railways and all other classes respect those rights, and I think it is time that this very important question was decided upon. This House has been flooded with resolutions asking it to take action, and if you were to have all the committees you please, you would not be any better informed on the question than you are to-day. Every man in this House knows all about a cattle-guard. I do not think any more light can be thrown upon the question than we all have this evening; and, I for one, think the question should be brought before this House here and now.

Mr. HAUGHTON LENNOX (South Simcoe). I rise to say, in the first place, that I am opposed to the suggestion that this measure should be referred to any committee other than the Committee of the Whole House, the representatives of the people. I do not think we can get any better light upon it than can be shed by the experience and knowledge of the various members of this House. It is not a new question, nor is the amendment a new one. It was brought to the attention of the House last session, and I think I am right in assuming that every hon. member of this House has given it careful attention in the meantime. Now, I hardly anticipated that I should find the hon. member from Victoria (Mr. Hughes) and the hon. member for Annapolis (Mr. Wade) together on any question. I regret that the hon. member for Victoria is not in the good company we usually find him. The argument of these two hon. gentlemen is the same : The object of the law is the safety of the public and the safety of the railway employees. Why, Mr. Speaker, these hon. gentlemen cannot have been giving careful consideration to the amendment which has been proposed or the speeches which have been made this afternoon, or else they would know that it is for the greater safety of railway employees and the greater safety of the public as well as the protection of the farmer that the amendment of the hon. member for Lincoln is introduced.

The Bill does not propose to deal with the danger of a collision at the intersection of a highway and a railway, but we have the additional danger that along every mile of a railway, where proper cattle-guards do not exist, there is the probability that cattle may be encountered at any point, and it is that danger this Bill is intended to guard against. Can it be said that parliament has fairly and intelligently sought to protect the safety of the public, when during twelve or fourteen years, although there is a law on the statute-books requiring railways to provide cattle-guards and proper fences to keep cattle from going on their tracks, these companies have been allowed to systematically disregard that law, with the result that all over the country we have had disasters to cattle and the owners of the cattle have had to bear the loss ?

The hon. member for Haldimand (Mr. Thompson) has spoken out in a manner that does him credit. He spoke of the stand he was taking to have justice done our farming community, but judging from what passed last session I have not much hope for this measure should the course, which he recommends, be pursued this year. He says we can go to a special committee and get the evidence. But what better evidence can we get than that of our senses? What witnesses do we want to call? Is it not evident that if this is to be a short session and this Bill is referred to a committee, it will not get beyond that committee. Justice delayed, Mr. Speaker, is injustice, and surely justice has been long enough delayed in this matter. If I understand the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) aright, he made a suggestion in the same line. He said that all parties interested could be heard before the committee. Well, I submit that all the parties interested can be heard when we deliberate the question in this House. What are we but the representatives, not alone of the farmers and the railway companies, but of the entire people of Canada; and the representatives of the people on the floor of this House can just as well, as honesty, and as faithfully represent the various interests concerned as could any witnesses before a committee.

I think I am right in saying that although the two great parties in this Dominion have vied with each other in professing their readiness to protect the interests of the farmers, the discussion this afternoon has shown that some hon. members at least have not paid that attention to what is actually before the House in the agricultural interests which we would expect from their utterances on the public platform.

This point requires to be kept clearly in mind that the law which requires that cattle shall not be allowed to run at large within half a mile of the intersections of the railway track with the public highway, is not interfered with in any way by the proposed amendment of the hon. member for Lincoln. The courts have pointed out that the object of this provision was to make it in the interests of the farmers to keep their cattle at home. Under it if an animal is killed or injured, which has violated that section, the owner cannot recover damages, and hon. gentlemen may advance that as an argument against the amendment of the hon. member for Lincoln. I submit, however, that every argument which has been used by the legislature and the public to have the public interests safeguarded should be exerted in favour of this amendment. If we have truly the interests of the travelling public at heart, we should enact some measure similar to the one now before the House. Why so? Because if you take the point of intersection between a highway and a railway alone, you will find that there is no temptation for cattle to loiter at that spot, though of course it is not impossible that an animal might by chance stray to that point and get caught there. But if that is possible, it would only happen at very long intervals. But when the law provides that the railway companies shall put up cattle-guards and fences along their lines sufficient to keep cattle from straying on to the track and when we find this law completely disregarded—when we find a nice green sward along the railway lines offering tempting pastures to cattle—we have there not only a danger to the cattle but also a danger to the travelling public, which danger is vastly increased by practically allowing the railways to dispense with cattle-guards at the points of intersection, since they are not liable to any penalty for accidents to animals occurring at these points.

The hon. member's amendment does not deal with the difficult question as to what kind of cattle-guards there should be, because that would lead to endless litigation and difficulty, but seeks a straight declaration that where cattle stray on to a railway track from the highway, by reason of the omission or neglect of the company to maintain cattle-guards or fences at the highway crossing, the company shall be responsible. The courts have decided that if an animal strays from the highway to the railway track, although there may be no cattle-guard or no fence at the intersection between the highway and the railway, yet the owner of the animal must bear the loss, and we wish to make it the interest of the railway companies to guard against such accidents, which it is not their interest to do now. At present they insist on breaking the law by not putting up cattle-guards, simply because the courts have held that they are not responsible. Well, we can remedy that difficulty. We are all-powerful here. Do hon. gentlemen of the House of Commons think it fair that, because a farmer's cattle accidentally break out of their pasture during a wind storm, stray upon the highway and are thence tempted upon the railway and destroyed, it may be, a mile or a mile and half from the point of intersection, there shall be no compensation for the farmer? Is it fair that by being given freedom from responsibility the railway company shall be tempted to disregard its plain duty? If we say that the paramount consideration is the protection of railway passengers, I submit that it is in the interests of these very people that the proposition of the hon. member for Lincoln should pass. I submit also that it is not in the interests of the people that this Bill should go to a committee again, having regard to the experience we had last session.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER (Mr. Peter Macdonald, East Huron). A large number of farmers throughout the length and breadth of this country have suffered heavy losses through the defective condition of the cattle-guards on railways. The old pit-guard was much more effective in preventing cattle wandering upon the railway than those that are now in use in some parts of the country. In fact, if the railway cattle-guards in other sections are built as they are in my riding then, there are no cattle-guards but are absolutely useless. A number of my constituents have lost their valuable cattle and horses through there being, practically speaking no obstruction placed in the way of the animals wandering upon the track. The difficulty does not always arise, in fact it does not frequently arise, through cattle being driven along the highway and across the railway track. But, sometimes, as every hon. gentleman knows, cattle are pasturing in a field adjoining a side line. During a windy night the fence may blow down, or the cattle may find a panel which falls without much resistance, and thus they wander down the side line to the track. If it is in the middle of summer, and the feed is better on the railway than on the highway, as it often is, the cattle naturally wander along the railway and so are liable to be killed by passing trains. If there were efficient obstructions, the cattle would continue on the highway and would thus avoid danger. Let me quote one instance to show the absolute uselessness for the purpose intended of the cattle-guards. One evening a number of cattle, owned by one of my constitutents about four miles from the town in which I live, broke down some fences and wandered down to the side line till they came to the crossing. The feed being better on the railway, they wandered upon the track. The train passed, I think in the night, and killed four head of cattle. The carcasses were thrown from the track to the side of the road. The owner had to take them from where they lay to bury them in another place. He hitched up his horse to a wagon and actually drove over the cattle-guard with his horse and wagon to the place where the carcasses were, and then drove back, without difficulty, over the cattle-guard. This shows that there was no obstruction thrown in the way of the cattle wandering on the railway. In this way, large numbers of cattle and horses are killed. Two other constituents of mine lost valuable horses in the same way, and still another lost three or four head of cattle. When we consider the number of valuable animals killed in this way, we see that this is an exceedingly serious and important question. It is for us to consider the best means to be adopted to secure better protection for the owners of cattle. I do not say that this Bill will accomplish all that is necessary; nor do I say that the railways are guilty of neglect. But, if proper cattle-guards cannot be constructed now, some railway men ought to apply their wits to the inventing of a cattle-guard which will prevent animals wandering on the railway. The old pit-guards were the ones in use in our neighbourhood some years ago. But all these guards have been filled up solid to the top, and a few longitudinous strips, triangular in form, have been placed where the pit formerly was. But sheep and cattle can pass over them without any difficulty whatever. It is the duty of parliament to consider this question, not from a party standpoint—for there is no partyism in it—and do the best we can to secure safety for cattle and horses that wander on the highway through no fault of the owner. Whether it is considered in Committee of the Whole or in the Railway Committee matters not, if we do our duty. I rose merely to tell the House of the state of affairs in my own neighbourhood and to show the ineffectiveness of the cattle-guards in use there.

Mr. D. K. ERB (South Perth). I understand, that this Bill, if enacted, would make the railway corporations liable for loss through cattle being killed on the railway track, if those cattle stray upon the railway from the highway. That being the case, I am thoroughly in sympathy with the Bill. I believe, that, if such a Bill were enacted, the railway companies would soon devise some means by which the cattle would be prevented from straying on the track from the highway, yet which would not interfere with them running a train. Some years ago, a law was passed prohibiting cattle roaming at large within half a mile of the railway track. Was that law passed in the interests of the farmers? Was there any great demand on the part of the farmers for such a law? If cattle got out and got on the railway track and were killed, farmers had no compensation before that law was passed and they have had no compensation since. The argument used at that time was that the law was necessary for the protection of railways as cattle going upon the track might be the means of derailing trains and so causing expense to the railway company. If that is the object to be attained, I think the railway companies should have no objection whatever to the Bill now before us. If there is danger of trains being derailed at the highway crossings by cattle going upon the track, that danger must be greatly increased, if the cattle go, as they do now, on the property of the railway, and are free to wander upon the track where they will. It would be in the interest of the railway, as it would be in the interest of the railway employees and of the general travelling public, to pass such a law as is here proposed. If this law were passed, efficient cattle-guards would be provided, and danger of this kind would be restricted to the points where the railways and the highways cross.

Mr. A. B. INGRAM (East Elgin). I would not rise to discuss the merits of this Bill were it not that we may be called upon to vote as to whether the Bill should be sent to the Railway Committee or not. I am one of those who desire to weigh carefully the interests of the farmers as to how this Bill may affect them; but I am not blind to the fact that this country is an agricultural country, and that our railways may be more patronized by agriculturists than perhaps by any other class of the community. That being the case, while I recognize that the farmers located along the lines of railway may suffer to some extent through accidents caused by the railways. I also remember that the greater portion of the agriculturists of this country are not located on a railway, but are travellers over railways; and we have to consider whether we may not do an injustice to the greater number of farmers by legislating so as to make our roadbeds perhaps insecure or unsafe to the travelling public, and by that means perhaps causing a greater sacrifice of life on our railways than takes place at present. Now, I remember that on the old organized railways of this country, they had the kind of cattle-guard that was built when the railways were first constructed, known as the pit cattle-guard. The hon. gentleman who moved this Bill to-day, throughout his speech, spoke as if that was the kind of cattle-guard he suggested, and the only difference is that he requires it to be constructed of masonry instead of square timber, as it had been by the old organized railways.

Now what has been the history of the railway companies with respect to cattle-guards, wooden culverts and wooden bridges in this country? At first they were wooden culverts built across the railways; but the railway companies, finding they had to compete with those of the United States found it necessary to introduce engines of greater power and of greater speed in order to compete with American railways, and for that purpose they filled up the culverts, the cattle guards, and rebuilt their wooden bridges with iron. I remember distinctly, by practical experience, that the cattle-guards in those days did not prevent stock from passing on the railways, frequently stock was killed by passing over the cattle-guards on to the railways. When my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) says that the railway companies do not care when stock passes over the railway, it is idle rot to talk like that. The hon. gentleman regretted very much that cattle were not allowed to run on the highway. Then my hon. friend from South Simcoe (Mr. Lennox) who, according to the 'Farmer's Sun,' has paid a great deal of attention to this Bill, and who ought to be prepared, if any man in this House can be, to enlighten us on the subject of this legislation, makes an erroneous statement. He says that cattle do not linger around the intersection of a railway crossing. Well, I want to tell my hon. friend as a practical railway man that if there is one place more than another where stock running at large are likely to linger, it is at the intersection of a railway crossing. There is no question about it, and every practical railway man will tell you so. Then again it has been suggested by one hon. member in this House that the pit is a proper guard to have. The hon. gentleman has never had any experience; he does not know.

I am prepared to say, perhaps having had as much experience in the matter as any other hon. gentleman in this House, that I am not in a position to say to-day that this Bill should be referred to a Committee of the Whole House. I have not the information in my possession which would justify me in voting against the Bill, or which would justify me in voting for it. But I do not want to leave myself open to the charge by any man who chooses to come into my constituency and tell the farming community that simply because I voted against this Bill being considered in Committee of the Whole I am therefore opposed to legislation of this character. I do not want to put myself in such a position, and I believe many other hon. gentlemen in this House wish to avoid putting themselves in that position. I go further, and say that railway companies in this country are just as eager as any hon. gentleman in this House to prevent loss of life on the railways and to prevent loss of stock to the farmers on the railways. Until we have an opportunity of sending for witnesses and securing statistics which would justify us in amending this legislation, I say it becomes us to go slowly. Now when this Bill was before the House last session there were no petitions asking us to pass this legislation. Since then a strong agitation has sprung up throughout the country, and many petitions have been sent to this parliament. Hon. gentlemen are well aware that the public are alive to this question. That being the case, is it not our duty, in the interest of the public and in the interest of all parties, carefully to weigh this question? The only way we can do so is by securing statistics to ascertain whether more stock is killed in winter or more stock is killed in summer, and what are the causes of these accidents. My hon. friend from Huron said that stock may break out through fences. Why, Sir, will the hon. gentleman pretend to say that it is only when they break through fences that cattle get on railway crossings over the intersections with the highway? That is rarely the case. Frequently in the dry season of summer the fences are burnt by reason of sparks from the engine setting the grass on fire along the railway, and frequently this allows the stock to get out on the railway. Will any one pretend to say that you require a cattle-guard wherever cattle break out through the fences alongside the railway? Certainly not. No legislation we can pass in this House will prevent accidents occurring on railways by reason of broken fences caused in the way I have described.

Now, farmers are interested in more ways than one in this question. They are interested as travellers and they are interested as owners of stock, and we ought to weigh these separate interests carefully. When my hon. friend, my colleague from West Elgin (Mr. Robinson), says that we are bound to consider the interest of the farmer, I say we are bound to consider his interests both as a traveller and as an owner of stock. I have just as much right to consider his interest as a traveller as I have to consider his interest as an owner of stock that may be killed through carelessness, or perhaps by accident. When this Bill comes up before the Railway Committee, if it ever does, I shall be glad to do my best to give it full consideration, and to procure information that will enable us to come to a right decision. I may add that if it comes to a question in this House as to whether we shall send this Bill to the Railway Committee, I have no hesitation in saying that I will support the Minister of Marine and Fisheries who has proposed to send it to that committee.

Mr. LEIGHTON McCARTHY (North Simcoe). I have just one word to say as to the aspect which this debate has taken. No matter how much we may be in favour of the Bill of the hon. member for Lincoln, it now seems to me that each member of the Railway Committee who sits in this House must consider whether he is prepared to vote want of confidence in himself. The discussion has been going on and arguments have been advanced to show that we ought to consider this Bill in Committee of the Whole House because the Railway Committee would not treat it fairly. The man who takes that view must be prepared to support a resolution which says that the Railway Committee does not do its duty. Are we, members of this House who are members of that committee, going to stigmatize ourselves by voting that this Bill should be considered now because we will not give it proper consideration when it is sent before us in the Railway Committee in the ordinary course. That is the first proposition that presented itself to me, but these hon. gentlemen who think that it should be considered now as a safeguard to the farming community seem to forget, while perhaps they will be earning a certain amount of eclat before the public by making it appear that they are protecting the interests of the public, that in future a fashion may be created which I am sure every hon. gentleman will condemn. If it is to be said that a Bill may be more easily put through in this way, shall we not have every day persons representing different interests in the community coming here and saying : This is a very important Bill; it will not receive proper consideration before the Railway Committee and therefore we want it considered now. I have always thought, and I think the members of this House will agree with me, that the more important a Bill is the more important it is that it should be sent to the Railway Committee in order that all the matters connected with it may be discussed and all views heard. Therefore, I am prepared to support the resolution of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland), sending it to the Railway Committee, in order that we may have a full and free discussion there by the representatives of all parties, and further than that, I am not prepared to vote a want of confidence in myself as a member of that committee.

Mr. ROBERT JOHNSTON (Cardwell). Mr. Speaker, it appears to me that there is no better place in which to thresh out this measure than right here in Committee of the Whole. This Bill has been before the Railway Committee on several former occasions. I remember that for four or five years back there is not a county in our section of the country that has not petitioned this government regarding cattle-guards. This is not a new thing, and I am of the opinion that every hon. member here, representing a county, is a good judge as to whether the county which he represents desires a change in the law relating to cattle-guards or not. It is not for us as members of the House of Commons to dictate to the railway companies as to what kind of cattle-guards they should adopt. I do not think they would pay any attention to us if we did dictate to them on this point. It seems to me that a cattle-guard should be sufficient to keep stock off the tracks. It is for the railway companies, in my opinion, to settle for themselves as to what sort of cattle-guards they should build, and not for us to dictate to them, provided that they adopt a safe cattle-guard. I was surprised at the speech of the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. Hughes). He tried to make it appear that there was more danger to the travelling public by having a good cattle-guard to prevent cattle from getting on the track than by having a poor cattle-guard that would permit cattle to get on the track. That is his argument. There are four rods of the highway clear between the fences where cattle may get upon the railway track, but if there is an insufficient cattle-guard cattle might occupy the track for the two or three miles that intervenes between the two guards. I can only say that I have had the honour of being a member of the county council for some years and that every year they have petitioned this government asking for more protection in the shape of better cattle-guards.

Mr. LANCASTER. Mr. Speaker, before this question is put, I desire to say a few more words in regard to this matter.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster) cannot speak a second time. He has already exhausted his time.

Mr. LANCASTER. This is my motion.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. He might speak in a discussion but not on the Orders of the Day.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland) moved that the Bill be referred to the Select Standing Committee on Railways and Canals and Telegraph Lines.

Mr. LANCASTER. Mr. Speaker, before that motion is put, I desire to say a few words, and with all due respect to the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Sutherland), to contend in this House that we are not doing the right thing by sending this Bill to any committee other than the Committee of the Whole House. I have listened very earnestly and very carefully to all that has been said as to the reasons of hon. gentlemen for desiring this Bill to go to the Railway Committee, and I have been struck most forcibly by one thing. The hon. gentlemen who want this Bill to go to the Railway Committee, not always for the same reason, but for some reason or other, seem to have doubts as to whether the Bill is a proper one to pass—not putting it any stronger than that, not contending that the amendment which I have been seeking to bring into force is a bad one or one that should not be passed, and paying that compliment to those hon. gentlemen who have spoken in favour of the Bill, and who are not prepared to say that it is not a good measure, but at the same time there may be reasons which may come out in the Railway Committee. I have asked hon. gentlemen in this House to tell me whether the Railway Committee of this House is the body that is entrusted with the enactment of public laws or whether the whole House is the body that is so trusted by the people. I would ask hon. gentlemen like the hon. member from East Elgin (Mr. Ingram), who says that he does not want to be placed in the position of voting against this Bill or voting for it in the House, to ask himself whether he did not put himself in that position when he accepted the nomination and was elected to serve the people in parliament.

Mr. INGRAM. May I be permitted to answer the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lancaster) ? If this Bill is referred to the Railway Committee, the Railway Committee deals with it, and if this House is dissatisfied with the report of the Railway Committee, this House has the power to change it.

Mr. LANCASTER. Then, I say, still speaking of the hon. member for East Elgin, that he is deputing to the Railway Committee the duty which was placed upon him and not upon the Railway Committee when he accepted a position of trust as a member of parliament. The members of the Railway Committee do not constitute all the members of the House of Commons. It is the duty of every member of the House of Commons to pass upon the general laws of the country and if they are going to pass upon the general laws they cannot properly pass upon them unless they have an opportunity of discussing them. Why should we exclude any member of the House of Commons from the discussion of a Bill relating to the general public laws of the Dominion ? The position that these hon. gentlemen place themselves in seems to me to be nothing else than that they are willing to have a committee of perhaps half the House of Commons—not exactly but perhaps not more than half—to pass upon a general matter that is to be discussed, upon all the details and then the members of the House of Commons who are not members of the Railway Committee are to come in upon the third reading of the Bill and ask themselves whether the judgment of the Railway Committee was right or wrong. How can they reasonably do so if they are not members of the Railway Committee ? Therefore, the members of the whole House of Commons must pass upon the Bill themselves and judge whether it is a right and proper law to pass. In regard to what was also said about the kind of cattle-guards, I have found out—perhaps every hon. member of the House has not—but they can easily find out that the people's railway, the railway the people undertake to operate, provides proper cattle-guards.

When we find on the Peoples' Railway, the Intercolonial Railway and the Prince Edward Island Railway—that proper cattle-guards are constructed, the other railway companies have a very poor case when they come to parliament to ask for any less liability to be placed upon them. During my trip through the maritime provinces last summer—which I do not pretend to say I took solely for the purpose of investigating cattle-guards—I did not forget my duties to my constituency nor to the whole of Canada, so far as I have a duty to the whole of Canada, and I made particular inquiries as to the kind of cattle-guards on the Peoples' Railway and as to the effect of them. I was told by the trainmen on the Intercolonial Railway that they did not know of a case where a cow had been on that railway between the highway crossings. That I think disposes of the matter pretty effectively. These crossings where the highway and the railway intersect will have more or less cattle collected about them ; but the hon. member for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram) has forgotten that the amendment I am seeking to incorporate in the law will prevent these cattle from being killed anywhere else but on the highway crossings, and will not permit of them getting anywhere else than on the part of the line which is both a railway and a highway. I shall not detain the House longer, but I do say to the minister (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) that I regret exceedingly that I am not able to agree to refer this matter again to the Railway Committee. We had our experience last year of the Railway Committee, and at last we could only get together twelve members to consider this Bill. Reference has been made to-day by some members to this Bill getting a full discussion last year. Why, the committee was only half an hour in session, and the reason was that the House and other committees were meeting at the same time and the members had to attend to other duties. No special committee that this House can appoint, nor could the Railway Committee itself give one-quarter the attention to this Bill that the House has given to it to-day. We have to-day discussed it pro and con, and having considered what is right and what is wrong, we will not be able to accomplish anything more in the interests of justice than we are able to accomplish at this very time and in this House. Having a sincere desire to do nothing but what is just; having no idea of trying to prevent railways from getting justice, but having a strong idea that the farmers should be protected against injustice, I feel it my duty, with all respect to the minister (Hon. Mr. Sutherland), to ask the House to vote down the suggestion that it should go to a committee and to say that the Bill shall be disposed of in the House. I really believe that if the Bill is referred to a committee it will never again come back to the House this session, and we shall have to begin all over again next session.

Mr. L. P. DEMERS (St. John and Iberville) (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, The question now before us is not so complicated as has been contended by many of the hon. gentlemen who have taken part in the debate. What we have to decide is, whether we are going, by an amendment to allow the courts to alter their decisions. We are asked to give by an amendment to the law, our sanction to a provision which is already on our statute book. Under these statutes railway companies have to erect cattle guards at railway crossings; but through an amendment introduced in 1890, the law was changed and railway companies are no longer responsible before the courts when cattle are permitted to be at large upon any highway.

The question before us, is whether we are going to amend the law, and whether we are to allow the courts to condemn railway companies which do not comply with the law. That is the whole question in a nutshell. The question is not whether cattle guards are to be built in such or such a way; but whether a company which does not construct any such cattle guards or does build them in a defective way—which comes to the same thing—will be held liable for damages. Is it a question which requires to be submitted to the consideration of the railway committee? By no means. It is a most simple question. I would have voted this year for the motion of the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Sutherland) as I did last year, had I not been since educated upon all the quibbles and technicalities of parliamentary procedure. Last year this question was referred to a railway committee and no more was heard about it. I wish to wash my hands of the whole affair, and I decline to assume any responsibility in connection with any change that the Act may have to undergo this year.

House divided on the motion (Hon. Mr. Sutherland):

YEAS:

Messieurs

Angers,	Lavergne,
Baker,	LeBlanc,
Beith,	Lemieux,
Béland,	Lewis,
Brock,	Logan,
Brunet,	Macdonald,
Calvert,	Mackie,
Carbonneau,	McCarthy,
Champagne,	McColl,
Christie,	McCool,
Copp,	McCreary,
Costigan,	McEwen,
Cowan,	McGugan,
Delisle,	McIsaac,
Demers (Lévis),	McLennan,
Dugas,	Madore,
Dyment,	Malouin,
Earle,	Marcil (Bagot),
Erb,	Marcil (Bonaventure),
Fielding,	Matheson,
Fitzpatrick,	Maxwell,
Flint,	Morrison,
Fortier,	Mulock,
Fraser,	Oliver,
Galliher,	Osler,
Gauvreau,	Paterson,
Geoffrion,	Proulx,
German,	Reid (Restigouche),
Gibson,	Riley,
Gilmour,	Rosamond,
Girard,	Ross (Ontario),
Gould	Ross (Victoria, N.S.),
Guthrie,	Rousseau,
Haggart,	Russell,
Harwood,	Schell,
Heyd,	Sutherland (Essex),
Holmes,	Sutherland (Oxford),
Horsey,	Talbot,
Hughes(King's,P.E.I.),	Tarte,
Hyman,	Thompson,
Ingram,	Tisdale,
Johnston (Lambton),	Tolmie,
Kendall,	Wade,
Lang,	Wilmot,
Laurier (Sir Wilfrid),	Wright.—90.

NAYS:

Messieurs

Alcorn,	Lennox,
Avery,	Léonard,
Bell,	McCormick,
Blain,	McGowan,
Borden (Halifax),	McIntosh,
Boyd,	McLeod,
Broder,	Monk,
Bruce,	Morin,

Calvin,	Porter,
Carscallen,	Puttee,
Clancy,	Richardson,
Clare,	Robinson (Elgin),
Cochrane,	Roche (Marquette),
Culbert,	Ross (Rimouski),
Demers (St. John),	Sherritt,
Ganong,	Simmons,
Hackett,	Smith (Wentworth),
Halliday,	Sproule,
Henderson,	Stephens,
Johnston (Cardwell),	Taylor,
Kendrey,	Tolton,
Kidd,	Turgeon,
Lancaster,	Vrooman,
Lavell,	Ward,
Legris,	Wilson.—50.

Motion agreed to.

MONTREAL TURNPIKE COMMISSION.

Mr. J. E. LEONARD (Laval). (Translation) moves for an Order of the House for a statement showing in detail :—

1. The total amount of revenue received by the Montreal Turnpike Commissioners during the year 1901.
2. The total amount of the expenditure of said Commissioners during the same year.
3. The amount spent by said Commissioners for the maintenance of the toll-gates during the same year.
4. The amount paid to each Commissioner, under any heading whatsoever, during the same year.
5. The amount of each contract and the name of each contractor during the same year.
6. If each one of the said contracts was awarded by public tender, and in what newspapers and in what manner was such publicity secured.
7. The exact amount, in capital as well as in interest, actually due, on debentures, to the government, as well as the amounts paid out by the said Commissioners of 1896.
8. A detailed statement of the assets of said Commission.

My first object, Mr. Speaker, in asking for a return of the detailed accounts of the Montreal Turnpike Trust is to call the attention of the government to the very bad state of the roads under the control of that commission. Within the last few years, that is to say since the coming into power of the Liberal party, the majority of the members of this commission have been appointed by the government. The commissioners did not hesitate for a moment to raise the tolls which farmers residing in the vicinity of Montreal have to pay. Those farmers have to go to the market twice a week. On account of the little space afforded them on the Bonsecours market, they are obliged, in order to get a good place to pay under the new tariff a toll of ten cents in the evening and ten cents when they come back next day. When the Turnpike Trust thus raised the tolls, we hoped that they would at least take the means to improve the roads in the vicinity of the commercial metropolis of Canada, Montreal. On the contrary, the Turnpike Trust did nothing of the kind, as is well known by all those who live in the vicinity of Montreal and use these roads. I, for one, know something about it, as every day in the year, I have occasion to judge how these roads are kept, and I am able to state that they are in a state that defies description, so much so that newspapers took the matter in hand. For instance 'La Presse' on the 22nd February instant, published the following lines :

> The toll roads on the island of Montreal are under the control of three companies : The Turnpike Commission, the St. Michel Roads Company, and the Dorval Roads Company.
>
> The roads of the two last named companies are in a fairly good state ; those of the Turnpike Trust, in which the people of Montreal are more directly interested, are in a deplorable state, summer and winter.
>
> At present these roads are impassable, they are dangerous ; accidents are numerous, and a cabman is never sure to get out of these roads safely and with his rig intact. Those of our readers who have not seen these roads will be able to form an estimate of them by the cut we publish on page 13 of our paper.

'La Presse' had in fact, a very comical picture of those roads.

> And yet, the tolls are high enough to ensure the maintenance of these roads, and the authorities should force the Turnpike Trust to fulfil their obligations towards the people.
>
> Its members are appointed by the government, and the public hold the government responsible for all the vexations and losses caused by the fact that these roads are the worst of all the district.

The above is from 'La Presse,' and every one knows that this paper has no desire to create trouble for the Liberal government.

On the other hand 'La Patrie' published last Monday an article showing that these roads are impassable. Here is the article of 'La Patrie.'

> We draw the attention of Mr. Galibert to the bad state of the road, particularly between Montreal and La Longue Pointe.
>
> The Turnpike Trust must not only collect tolls ; they are obliged also to keep in good condition the roads under their control. They have an inspector who must have forgotten to make his tour of inspection, and it is high time his attention were called to the complaints that are heard from the public. Now, the road between Montreal and La Longue Pointe is only a single track road and it is in an awful state. The public have a right, however, to insist upon a double track road and one that is properly maintained. We are sure Mr. Galibert will give stringent orders to the inspector of the Turnpike Trust.

As I said a little while ago, the government who appoints the members of that commision and to whom there is due a very high amount on which no interest has been paid for many many years back, the government, I say, has a right to inquire thoroughly into the management of the affairs of the Turnpike Trust. Not only the government, but the public, who are paying the piper, have the right to know what is going on in this trust. Let me tell you that presently no one has the right or if that right exists, we are prevented from exercising it, and no one, as I have said, is allowed to see what is going on.

My object, in moving for the return, is to give publicity to the affairs of that trust, to call the attention of the government to their management, and after that to ask the ministers if they could not see their way clear to lighten the heavy burden under which the farming community is being crushed. The farmers in the counties of Terrebonne, L'Assomption, Two Mountains, Jacques Cartier and Laval, which latter county I have the honour to represent in this House, are obliged to pass twice a week through these toll-gates, where they have to pay a very high toll and also upon the bridges in the vicinity of Montreal. If a farmer crosses the toll-gate at half-past eleven at night he has to pay ten cents and he comes back after midnight, say forty minutes later, he is obliged to pay another ten cents. I was told by a farmer that he had paid $75 in tolls upon the bridges, and passing through the toll-gates.

The farmers in the vicinity of Montreal sell all their products on the markets of that city. They are not exporters and they also have the right—whether they sent here Conservative members or Liberal members—to ask the government to look into the management of the affairs of that trust composed of parties appointed by the Dominion and Provincial governments.

In concluding these remarks, Mr. Speaker, I hope that this government at the hands of whom the farmers of Canada have already received so much protection, will not be less generous to those residing around Montreal in the counties of Jacques Cartier, Laval, L'Assomption and Terrebonne, and that they will come to their assistance.

I move this motion, seconded by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk).

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier). Are we going to get no statement from the government in regard to this matter ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). I thought my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) was going to address the House or otherwise I would have risen to say that so far as the motion is concerned there can be no objection to it. Any papers in the hands of the government or which can be reasonably obtained will be brought down. I think there is some misapprehension as to the position of the government in this matter. It will be readily understood that under ordinary circumstances it is not the business of the Dominion government to maintain roads in any part of the country. That is a municipal or provincial matter as the case may be. The only interest the government of Canada has in this is as the holders of certain bonds. If my hon. friend (Mr. Leonard) is under the impression that the government is getting revenue from these bonds and thus oppressing the people, I am able to assure him that he is mistaken. We hold these bonds in consequence of transactions of older times. Under an arrangement made some years ago, this debt was reduced and a basis of adjustment was reached which the government of the day were led to believe would enable the Turnpike trust to pay interest on the reduced sum. For a year or so some interest was paid but later on no interest was paid. Whether or not this is the fault of the commissioners is a proper subject for inquiry, and if any representations on that question are made it will be our duty to look into the matter very carefully. All I can at present say is, that the government are receiving no revenue. We have a large amount of Dominion money invested, and though a reduction was made some years ago in the hope of receiving some satisfactory settlement, we are not now receiving any interest. If that arises from the fault of the commissioners of course it is a matter for which the government should be called to account, but if it arises because the traffic is not large enough to maintain the road and pay the interest, I suppose it is like a good many bad debts and we shall have to make the best of it under the circumstances.

Mr. MONK. It is very easy to see that the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Fielding) took no very active interest in the recent by-election which was held in the county so ably represented by my hon. friend from Laval (Mr. Leonard). But it is a little discouraging to us to see that the right hon. leader of the House, who came into the county, who knows what a deep interest we have in this question, who I think referred to it on nomination day—does not, now that the election is over, see fit to give us some assurance as to the things which his friends throughout the county during the election, pledged the government to accomplish. They were very sanguine during the election and they strongly urged the electors to vote for the opponent of my hon. friend (Mr. Leonard) because he was the only one that could get from the government the action which was necessary to relieve the people of Laval and the adjoining counties. But the day of the election is over. We have the spectacle of my right hon. friend the Prime Minister, not uttering a single word on this, to us, most important question, and we have the Minister of Finance informing us that the government derives no revenue from these bonds. I can tell my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Fielding) not only that the government derives no revenue from these bonds, but that they will never receive a cent of the capital. He ought to be aware of that fact, and not being aware of that fact, it is the duty of the government to come to the relief of the farmers of the counties mentioned by my hon. friend (Mr. Leonard) and to do something to put a stop to the abuses which exist there, and which are the fault of these gentlemen opposite to so large an extent. Let me briefly explain to this House——

At six o'clock the House took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at Eight o'clock.

Mr. MONK. Mr. Speaker, although the question of the Montreal Turnpike Trust was much discussed during the last election, and although the right hon. prime minister referred to it at the meeting on nomination day eight days before the election, yet the government could not give us any satisfactory assurance that some redress would be granted for the grievances which formed the subject of continual debate during the election. Let me acquaint the members of this House as briefly as possible with the nature of those grievances, and the remedy which it is in the power of the Dominion government to provide for them.

The Montreal Turnpike Trust, which controls all the great avenues into the city of Montreal from the surrounding municipalities is an old corporation, an administrative body, organized at the beginning of the last century, and replete with those faults which characterized every administrative body in this country before the great municipal reforms took place which have brought about the changes which you see to-day in every other corporate body. Thus, to give you an example, although it is an administrative body, charged with the administration of the public roads around the city of Montreal, and consequently a body whose work and deliberations interest every citizen of Montreal and every farmer who has access to Montreal from the surrounding parishes, still the law declares that no outsider has a right to attend the deliberations of this body. Our municipal councils are open to the public, and every other public body holds its sessions in public. Here in this parliament modern progress has required that the public shall be admitted to our deliberations. But the Montreal Turnpike Trust is the only exception to that general rule that I know of in this country. In that sense and in every other sense it is a close corporation.

Another short-coming of that corporation, in regard to which the people of Laval and the people of my own constituency complain very bitterly, is that its work is not done in the way in which public works are now done throughout the country, that is, by tender and contract. The Montreal Turnpike Trust has yearly deficits. The roads around the city of Montreal, as is well known to all who have occasion to pass along them, are in a deplorable condition both summer and winter. My hon. friend from Laval has cited some of the utterances of the press of the city of Montreal in regard to those roads, and from year to year, since 1896, for some reason or other, these roads have been kept in worse and worse order every succeeding season, until this winter it has been a subject of comment, not only in the newspapers of Montreal, but in the whole surrounding country, that our winter roads under the administration of this Turnpike Trust are in a disgraceful condition. The work not being done by tender and contract, we do not get the worth of our money. The contracts are given to friends, to men who have agreeable relations with the members of the Trust, very often to incompetent men who sublet the work ; and the result is that for the large amount of money that is expended yearly on these roads we have not an adequate return. In that respect, again, the law requires to be altered, so that the trustees shall be required to solicit public tenders for all works of importance, and to give the contract to the lowest responsible tenderer.

Under the charter which governs that corporation it is impossible for those who are interested in the proper administration of the Trust to see how the money has been expended. Here, in Ottawa, the expenditures of the government are subject to strict scrutiny. We have a yearly audit, and we are fully acquainted with what is done with the money which goes into the public treasury. The same thing obtains in the different provinces, as well as in all the municipalities in our province, and I have no doubt everywhere else. The banks themselves, which in a certain sense are private corporations, give a yearly account of what is done with their funds. But there is no such law applicable to this corporation, and as a consequence one is obliged every year to move, here or in the provincial legislature, in order to obtain some idea of what has been done with the very considerable revenue which this corporation derives from the taxpayers and from those who use the roads. That, again, was a point frequently adverted to in the last election, and candidates on both sides and their friends pledged themselves that they would insist, with this government as well as with the provincial government, that that great defect in the law should be cured, and that we should have yearly returns from this corporation in order that we might know how our funds are administered.

The consequence of the present system is that we have bad roads. This corporation controls all the great avenues into the city of Montreal, and their control goes so far that it prevents the proper development of the great suburban municipalities which surround the city. If any municipality or any private individual opens a road in order to facilitate access to the city for the public, and that road happens to intersect one of the great avenues which are under the control of this body, what do they do ? They place a toll gate at the intersection, and the man who is merely crossing their road for the purpose of following some new municipal highway or some road which has been opened by a private individual who wishes to sell lots and thus increase the development of the city of Montreal, he has to pay toll to the Montreal Turnpike Trust. The result is that it checks the opening up of new roads which are rendered necessary by the subdivision into lots of farms surrounding the city and the building on those lots, and absolutely paralyses the development of the city of Montreal. If on that point the law were altered, and it were declared that the mere intersecting of one of the turnpike roads by some municipal or private road would not necessitate the payment of tolls, that would be some remedy for what is to-day a crying grievance. The Montreal Turnpike Trust, owing to this frequent intersecting of their roads, have been obliged to add very considerably to the number of their toll bars.

We have arrived at this result, that on a revenue of $60,000 or $65,000 a year from these toll gates, they are obliged to expend at present over $18,000 a year merely for the maintenance of these gates which, in the proper course of things and which with judicious legislation, could no doubt be made to disappear, as they have disappeared in the neighbourhood of every large city upon the continent of America.

The hon. the Minister of Finance has stated that this corporation was the creation of the provincial legislature, and that the government of the Dominion derived no revenue from the $200,000 of bonds which it held in this corporation and were powerless to interfere. Let me point out why it is considered in the counties of Jacques Cartier, Laval and the others surrounding Montreal, that the key of the situation is in the hands of the Dominion government. Under the law, this government, being a creditor of that corporation to the extent of over $200,000, is entitled to representation on the board of directors. There are, if I mistake not, three representatives of this government on that board, and they are the majority. The other two commissioners are appointed by the provincial government.

Mr. LEMIEUX. There are seven, if the hon. gentleman will allow me to correct him, and the provincial government has a majority.

Mr. MONK. My hon. friend is mistaken. There are five trustees in all—two named by the provincial government—which has created this body and to a certain extent controls it, which has the right to legislate with regard to it—and three named by the Dominion government, which is the only creditor of the Montreal Turnpike Trust. The control is therefore in the hands of the Domionion government, and any legislation which the trustees named by the provincial government might wish to obtain in the Quebec legislature may be vetoed by the three trustees who represent the Dominion. And as a matter of fact, a year or two ago, when a member of the provincial legislature sought to obtain by positive enactment a remedy to one of the numerous grievances which we complain of, he failed to succeed because the Dominion government, through the Minister of Finance, interfered to oppose that legislation and obtained its rejection upon the ground that the legislation proposed might have the effect of diminishing the revenues of this Dominion, although I may say the interest on the bonds have not been paid since 1896, We claim therefore that the Dominion government, by its yearly election of these three commissioners, has the control of the Montreal Turnpike Trust and is the power behind the throne which can control legislation and obtain for us the reforms that are absolutely needed.

Let me tell you, Sir, what this question was which was agitated in the Quebec legislature. As my hon. friend from Gaspe (Mr. Lemieux) knows—and I am glad to see he is taking an interest in this question and very sorry to see that the other members from the counties around the city of Montreal, who have an equal interest with myself in this important question, are not here to defend their rights—as my hon. friend from Gaspe knows, we have in the city of Montreal absolutely inadequate accommodation for our public markets. The farmers from the counties of Terrebonne, Two Mountains, Laval and from Chambly, Laprairie and Jacques Cartier are, in consequence of that want of accommodation, obliged to leave their farms generally at eight or ten o'clock in the evening in order to secure some kind of a place upon the Bonsecour Market, the following day. Leaving their homes early in the evening, they pass the toll bars before midnight, and as they cannot return on the same day, midnight intervening, they are obliged to pay toll again on their return the following day. Under the Conservative rule that injustice was recognized, and the keeper of the toll-gate was authorized to issue tickets to the farmers, good for forty-eight hours. But no sooner had the trustees of my hon. friend the Minister of Finance entered upon the board than that permission was revoked, and the member of my own constituency, who represents me in the local legislature, endeavoured to obtain the passage of a law obliging the Montreal Turnpike Trust to give to farmers tickets good for forty-eight hours. Thanks to the interference of the Dominion government that measure was blocked, and our farmers to-day, on account of the failure of the city of Montreal to give them adequate accommodation upon the central market, have been since 1896 obliged to pay double toll. It would be very easy to remedy that state of things. It could be done either by the passage of a law or by the Montreal Turnpike commissioners passing an ordinance or a by-law to make the toll five cents going and five cents returning. But this government appears to be so completely oblivious of the interests of the farmers and so forgetful of the pledges made by its partisans during the last election, that nothing whatever is done to remedy this injustice. What we want has been indicated by the hon. member from Laval. And it is in the power of this government very easily to obtain for the people what they want and give them satisfaction. We want public sessions of the Turnpike Commissioners. The body has not a representative character, but it should have that character. The mayors of the parishes in the counties interested ought to have the right, not by claiming permission, but the right by law, to go to the sessions of the Montreal Turnpike Trust, to witness what takes place there and to make necessary suggestions. It is for this government to determine whether it will use its influence in order to obtain them that right. The fact is that the body is not constituted as it should be. A body that is entrusted with the administration of such important interests as the proper keeping of the roads in the vicinity of Montreal, should have a representative character. The men who administer the great avenues approaching the city of Montreal should be elected. That is our contention; and a system could easily be devised, if these hon. gentlemen would only show us a little good will, by which, if not the whole body, at least a part of it, would be elected. The people would then feel that they have on that board somebody chosen by themselves to look after their interests in regard to these roads, which are so very important to them. Farmers generally come in three or four times a week from their homes to the city of Montreal, bringing heavy loads of their produce; and it is positively disgraceful to see the way in which the roads by which they must travel are now kept. Not only should we have representatives of the people in these bodies, but the sessions of the body should be made public. And we should have yearly returns of the financial operations of the Montreal Turnpike Trust, in order that we may see exactly what is done with our money. We should have the power which is demanded by everybody upon the Island of Montreal—the power to intersect these great public highways with our municipal roads, our private roads—all roads opened in order to facilitate the development of that great city without being witnesses of such atrocious abuses as we see at present, the Montreal Turnpike Trust placing a toll-gate at the intersection of these roads and charging every one full toll for simply crossing their road. That is a crying injustice, and it can be removed by legislation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend (Mr. Monk) does not mean that we have the power to legislate on the matter in this parliament ?

Mr. MONK. The Dominion government, in making its yearly election of three trustees, can impose upon these trustees—who control the body—any conditions it chooses. If, when that election takes place, and it takes place every year, the trustees named by my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Fielding), for it is he himself who names them by sending down, I think, the Deputy Minister of Finance, to cast the annual vote, though it is to be cast in favour of these trustees—can give them any instructions necessary. He can instruct them that these reforms must be brought about by legislation. And, Mr. Speaker, we should have the forty-eight-hour ticket restored to us. My hon. friend from Laval knows how that question, small as it may appear to my colleagues here, was discussed during the last election. He pledged himself that, the first time he opened his lips in parliament, it would be to demand from the government the redress of these grievances. He has carried out his pledge; and now it is for members of the government and their friends who gave similar pledges during the election, to show similar sincerity by advocating—and seeing to it that what they advocate is carried out—a complete reform of the system. What is preventing progress is that the Dominion government is a creditor to that trust to the enormous sum of, I think, about $200,000. I have told the House before, and the hon. Minister of Finance admitted it last session, that the existence of that great claim obliged him to oppose the passage of salutary legislation in the provincial legislature. What I suggested last year to the Minister of Finance, and what I suggest again, is this : There is no doubt whatever that not one cent of that indebtedness will ever be discharged. My hon. friend from Gaspé (Mr. Lemieux) knows perfectly well that, with the increasing wants of the trustees in order to maintain the roads in good order, with the yearly increase of the charge to maintain toll-gates multiplying them every year, it is impossible to conceive any circumstances under which any part of that capital will be repaid. The House knows that, since 1896, not one cent of the interest has been paid. And the hon. Minister of Finance, if he takes the trouble to inquire, will receive ample assurance that the trust will never be able to pay one single copper of the interest. Under these circumstances, I suggested last year, and I suggest again to the government, that it should intimate to the local legislature, which has the power to legislate, and also to the trustees, the majority of whom are the nominees of this very government, that, as soon as the grievances of which the counties that I have already named complain, and complain with justice, shall have been removed by legislation, the government will be ready to forego its claim of $200,000—that claim being, as I have said, absolutely irrecoverable. And I venture to say here, without fear of contradiction from anybody who is acquainted with the subject, that on the day that that assurance has been given, and given in such a way as to insure the promise being carried out, the legislature of Quebec will have no more pressing matter before it than the reform of these abuses and the placing of the Montreal Turnpike Trust upon a reasonable basis, so that the rights of those who pay may be respected, as they ought to be. Let the government announce that as its policy. Let the government say to the trust that the remission of the debt is assured, if legislation approved of by this government is passed by the local authorities, and within a year of this date that vexed question—which, so long as it remains a question, will be agitated in every single election in the county—will be satisfactorily settled.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). This debate, so far as it has gone, will serve to illustrate once more the wisdom of the rule which requires that, when a demand is made for papers, the speech in support of the motion ought to be limited to merely describing what is required, and the debate on the main question ought to be deferred until such time as the House is placed in possession of the documents. Now, what are we called upon to deal with here? We are called upon to deal with the affairs of a corporation which is under the exclusive jurisdiction of the local legislature of Quebec. After having listened to my hon. friend, Mr. Speaker, you would naturally be under the impression that this is a very substantial grievance that he has made known to the House to-night.

Now listen to the other side of this case. I have to admit that I am going to speak with imperfect information at my disposal, because this is not a matter that one looks after in advance of the production of the documents. My hon. friend says that in the county of Laval, the county of Jacques Cartier, and other counties in the vicinity of Montreal, they have very bad roads, and that because they have very bad roads this government ought to be brought to task for it. Now, Mr. Speaker, in the vicinity of every great city in this country all the rural municipalities should have roads, they are a necessary adjunct of our civilization, you cannot get on without them. But how are these roads created? How are they maintained? These roads are created by the municipalities for the uses of which they are intended, and they are maintained by these municipalities.

What did my hon. friend tell you? He says these roads we now speak of were created by the expenditure of the public money of Canada, of the old provinces of Canada. They never cost the inhabitants one farthing, and still we don't maintain them after having created them. That is their grievance.

Mr. MONK. We pay for their maintenance.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Let me describe how they pay for them. These roads cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. At the present time the balance of capital, with the reduction that has been made in connection with the advances made on that portion which belongs to the Dominion of Canada, they still owe us. They cannot pay any interest even, there is $25,000 of accumulated interest on that indebtedness. Now if the ordinary business rule were applied by a government to a corporation indebted in the amount that I have described, they would first take care to see that the interest was paid.

Mr. COCHRANE. What are they doing with the toll money for the roads? Are the roads so bad they are not paying any interest on their bonds?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The toll money does not produce enough to maintain the roads and pay interest on the bonds. But the ordinance under which the money was expended provides that the riparian proprietor, the man whose property fronts on that road, should contribute his share to the construction of that road, and they have never done it.

Mr. MONK. I beg my hon. friend's pardon. I do not think he can cite that.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I have not prepared a special brief for this case to-night, but as my hon. friend has done so, I refer him to the ordinance, I think 4th Victoria, that created the trust, and he will find in that ordinance the ordinary common sense rule that the riparian proprietor, the man whose property fronts on this road, should contribute to its maintenance.

Mr. MONK. That is not what the section says.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Please allow me. I have not prepared a brief, but I have had some experience in legislation in this country.

Mr. MONK. But I think it is only fair that I should deny it.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The hon. gentleman has a perfect right to make a denial. As I said, I am speaking from recollection, and my hon. friend has a prepared brief, and on a prepared brief he takes the responsibility of making the denial, and he should accept that responsibility.

Mr. MONK. My hon. friend will allow me. We have no rights whatever in these roads, the roads themselves belong to the Montreal Turnpike commissioners, and the riparian proprietor is not, under the law as it stands to-day, obliged to do any work on the roads.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. He is not obliged to maintain the road at all. But here is what the law of the province of Quebec, says that the riparian proprietor is primarily responsible for the maintenance of the road that passes across his property. That is the general rule, and when this ordinance 4th Victoria was passed it was the rule then, and in order to meet that case and to provide that the riparian proprietor should not be relieved of his common law obligation to maintain his front, it is provided that the commissioners shall have the right to ask from the man whose property fronts on the road to commute his obligation to maintain the road, and to pay a sum equivalent to that obligation to the trustees.

Mr. MONK. That is what I said. That is a very different thing. Has that been done ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. That has not been done. My hon. friend had better remember that others have read the statutes besides himself. That is a statement I make, and he agrees with it. That has not been done, and if he wants these roads maintained let the riparian proprietors fulfil their legal obligation and they can easily maintain them.

Mr. MONK. I am glad to get that declaration from the government.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. My hon. friend must bear in mind that in this case there are two parties to the dispute, there is the party of the proprietors in this part of the country that do not want to maintain their roads; there is the other side of the case, the ratepayers of the Dominion of Canada. The Dominion of Canada are creditors of these individuals, and we come to them and say : If you cannot pay us the capital at least pay us our interest.

Mr. COCHRANE. But they do not.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Exactly, and my hon. friend not only does not want them to continue paying the interest, but he wants improvements, additional burdens thrown upon us to maintain the roads, and to lose our interest besides. That is what we are asked to do. And not only does he ask us to do that, but he asks us to remit the balance of the capital. Now there is the grievance. It does not appear to me to be a very substantial grievance so far as these farmers are concerned, but it does seem to be a grievance on the part of the Dominion of Canada that they, as creditors of this corporation, should be asked to forego their claim for their capital and to forego their claim for their interest, and in addition to assume the further burden of continuing to maintain the roads at the expense of the people of Canada. That is what we are asked to do.

Now, my hon. friend said a moment ago, imagining probably that he was still continuing the contest in Laval, that under the Conservative administration a rule had been passed under which a man was allowed forty-eight hours to evade the law, he was allowed to go through the toll paying once provided he returned within the forty-eight hours. That may have been a convenient thing for my hon. friend to do, it may have been convenient for them to do, but they did not realize that the Dominion of Canada was paying for this little luxury that was being given to these gentlemen in Laval.

Mr. COCHRANE. But you did get something from them.

Mr. MONK. We got the interest, and we never got anything since. They paid the toll, but we didn't get any money.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. My hon. friend says they got interest at the time. I think if my hon. friend were to do as I asked him to do a minute ago, wait until the papers are brought down before expressing an opinion on this matter and he would find that the interest was not paid in those days, he would find that it was necessary that the capital should remain as it was, and the interest had accumulated to such an extent, and the burden had grown so large, that it was obligatory upon the government to reduce their claim even in those days, cut it practically in two, as the Minister of Finance tells me ; and notwithstanding that the claim has been cut in two, we are still asked to wipe out the balance of it. Now it does seem to me that we cannot very well afford to be so generous at the expense of the people of Canada. Besides, if we are going to do it for these people why not do it for my county ? Why not do it for all the rural municipalities represented here to-night ? Why should there be any distinction between them ? It seems to me that when in other parts of this country the ratepayers maintain their own roads, create and maintain them, these gentlemen should do likewise.

Mr. TAYLOR. You did not give them a chance to take off the tolls.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Take off the tolls and give them the roads. Take off the tolls, and what is going to become of our capital and interest ?

Mr. COCHRANE. What good is it now ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. If my hon. friend had ever gone through those municipalities he would have found out what it is good for. If he had ever seen the roads which have been created by which these gentlemen have benefited all these years, he would realize that the ratepayers in those municipalities are as well able and better able to pay than the ratepayers of nine-tenths of the municipalities in the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. McCREARY. How did it come about that the Dominion of Canada built roads in that particular portion of Canada ? It cannot be done in any other province.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Under the ordinance 4th Victoria, so far as my memory serves me—that was about 1840—two trusts were created, one in the vicinity of Quebec and the other in the vicinity of Montreal. These two trusts were created for the purpose of building roads in the neighbourhood of these cities. The trusts were unable to get the money necessary by the sale of debentures for the building of these roads. The debentures were offered to the public and the public lost what they put into the roads. The government took the balance. At the time of confederation these debentures that were held by the old province of Canada formed part of the assets of the Dominion and were distributed, one portion to what are now Ontario and Quebec, while another portion was assigned to the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. LEMIEUX. And the government guaranteed the interest.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes, the government guaranteed the interest and paid interest, but that was not on these debentures. The issue now is as to whether the persons who benefited by the construction of these roads, that is to say, the riparian owners, are under an obligation to pay for the construction of these roads, which they have not done. My statement is that under the statute there is what they call a commutation clause ; that is, that the riparian proprietor commutes his obligation to maintain his front into a money payment and that money payment has not been made.

Mr. MONK. I understand the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) to say that there is an obligation on the part of the riparian proprietor to maintain the road ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. There is an obligation made expressly by law upon him to pay his commutation money, and he ought to be made to pay it.

Mr. COCHRANE. He had that to pay besides the tolls on the road.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes. The thing is very simple; a man, or a farmer, for instance, might not have occasion to cross the toll bar; yet he has the use of the road and does not pay for it. Is that fair play, or justice, or common sense ?

Mr. GILMOUR. Who is at fault for not collecting this commutation money ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I consider the fault is on those who have allowed the commissioners all these years to go on without collecting it.

Mr. GILMOUR. Were they the municipalities, or who were they ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No, the commissioners themselves. They ought to be made to pay it.

Mr. SPROULE. It is the government not the commissioners.

Mr. LEMIEUX. Mr. Speaker, this question of the Turnpike Trust is nothing but an election cry, so much so that when the Tory government was in power the Liberals, in the county of Laval, agitated the question. In 1888, Mr. Justice Fortin, the ex-member of the county of Laval, was a candidate for the local legislature. The main plank of his platform was this very question of the abolition of the Turnpike Trust. In 1890 he was again a candidate in that county. He was then opposed by the Hon. Mr. Leblanc, one of the friends of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk), one of the most prominent Conservatives in Quebec, who stood by the Turnpike Trust, and who, speaking in Laval, to my recollection, said that the Federal government would never consent to remit the amount of $200,000 that was due. Now things have changed. We are on this side and my hon. friend is on the other side. He is asking this government to remit to the trust the sum of $195,000, because this is the amount due to the Federal government. I may say at once that the government has already been very generous, because some years ago the debt amounted to $400,000, and the then government remitted $200,000.

Mr. MONK. We will be satisfied if you do the same thing now.

Mr. LEMIEUX. It was then agreed that this amount was remitted in order to give the Turnpike Trust a chance to at least pay the interest on the balance; that is to say, on the sum of $200,000. They paid the interest for a few months, or a year or so, but later on we learned that the interest had been taken out of the capital. To-day the arrears of interest amount to $28,000. Now, I am very glad that this question has been brought up before the House by the hon. member for Jacques Cartier, because, during the last campaign in Laval, where, fortunately for himself, he was successful where he placed a feather in his cap, my learned friend discussed that question on every hustings, but he has not given the government the benefit of his wisdom, he has not told the government what was the remedy for the situation created by the Turnpike Trust in the surroundings of Montreal. He now prays the government to remit $195,000. But what will happen after that ? There are some other interested parties. The local government of Quebec is also a creditor, and there are some private individuals who are creditors. Shall they remit the amount or shall only the Federal government remit $195,000, and will the Turnpike trust do better than it has done in the past ?

Mr. MONK. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Lemieux) allow me to ask him, what the indebtedness of the local government is ?

Mr. LEMIEUX. I am not positive as to that, but I know the local government is also a creditor, because the local government has had two representatives, or two trustees, on the commission. Suppose the Federal government remits that amount of $195,000, what will happen ? Will the roads be kept in a better state, because, I understand, that this is the main issue this evening ? My learned friend bases his complaint on the deplorable condition of the roads in the surroundings of Montreal. What will happen if the government remits this amount ? Will the other interested parties do likewise and will the roads be repaired and maintained by the municipalities ? Will the municipalities of the county of Jacques Cartier and the county of Laval, represented by my two hon. friends, take upon themselves to maintain these roads ? I would be very glad to have a declaration from my learned friend because if he would return to his electors at the next election with this result, I do not think he would get their votes as he got them last time. If this amount were remitted by the local government and by the other interested parties and by the Federal government, the roads would have to be maintained by the municipalities. Therefore, I contend that this is not the place to discuss this question. It belongs to the local government, or the local legislature of Quebec, and it falls within the purview of the Municipal Code.

Mr. E. B. OSLER (West Toronto). Mr. Speaker, I suppose that I live far enough away from the turnpike road to enable me to say that I am not interested in the tolls. What strikes me in this discussion is that the government of the day are acting, not as private individuals would act. There is a debt owed by a certain trust. If the trust is able to pay, it is the duty of the government to enforce it, not to enforce it perhaps with all the severity of the penalties that a private individual would enforce a debt, but if the people are able to pay they should pay. We must not go back to ancient histor and say that because the Conservative government in the past did not collect this money when it might have collected it, this government should not collect it. What has struck me in this discussion is that the question of this turnpike road and the remission or collection of the debt due has been used by the government as a political lever in every election. Surely this is a wrong thing on general principles for a government to enter into. I gather from the discussion that the right hon. Prime Minister of this country was one of those who took part in this election. I gather the question of the remission or collection of this debt was the subject of discussion between the different candidates. The supporters of the government candidate, among them the Prime Minister, let it be understood that if the electors should return their man the government would favourably consider the remission of this tax. That argument was used against the Conservative candidate. Well, fortunately for the county, Mr. Leonard, the Conservative candidate, was elected, and now evidently the government is going to do nothing. The Minister of Finance led the House to believe very squarely that this was one of the bad debts of the Dominion.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I did not say that.

Mr. OSLER. Not directly, but I think you led us to infer it. You said that this would be probably like many others of bad debts and that it might be wiped out.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I said that under certain conditions it might be a bad debt.

Mr. OSLER. I inferred from what you said that you looked upon this as one of the bad debts of the Dominion and from the discussion which I have heard up to that time, I agreed with you. But it would appear now that probably this debt is collectable, and if it is collectable it is the duty of the government to collect it. If it is not collectable it is the duty of the government to make as fair an arrangement as possible and wipe it off and get rid of it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Do we always wipe off a debt because we cannot at once collect it ?

Mr. OSLER. You do not, but some gentlemen say that the proprietors can pay it and then the government should force them to pay it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend (Mr. Monk) would not like that.

Mr. OSLER. Do not let us have all this discussion about a debt that is owed by a municipality to this government and do not let us have it as a sore point for years and years, and made a factor in every election that may take place. If it is a bad debt, wipe it off ; if it is a collectable debt, collect it.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. In reply to some of the remarks made, I refer the House to 3 Vic., chap. 31, paragraph 15, which provides :

And be it further ordained and enacted by the authority aforesaid, that from and after the passing of this ordinance, each and every person and persons, body or bodies politic or corporate, who may be bound by any law of this province, or any procès verbal duly homologated, (and all such laws and procès verbaux, shall remain in full force, except in so far as they are hereby expressly derogated from) to repair or keep up, or to perform any service or labour, on or with regard to any portion of any road hereby placed under the control of the said trustees, shall and are hereby required to commute all such obligations with the said trustees for such sum of money as may be agreed upon by such parties respectively, and the said trustees, and such commutation money shall be payable annually, on the first day of March in each year.

And they have never paid a farthing.

Motion agreed to.

JUDGMENT OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL RE ROY VS. THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

Mr. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX (Gaspé). (Translation) moves for :

An address to His Excellency the Governor General for a copy of the report from the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, dated December 8, 1901, in the matter of an appeal from the Court of King's Bench for the province of Quebec (appeal side) between the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, appellant, and Adrien Roy, respondent.

It is not my intention to go at any great length into a review of the facts relating to the motion I have just put before the House. Let me say, at the very outset, that I am happy to see the hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Fitzpatrick) in his seat, at a moment when I wish to call his attention to the disastrous consequences to the province of Quebec resulting from the recent decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council of England.

The hon. minister will, no doubt, realise the importance attaching to my motion, the more so as, more than any one else, he is able to represent here and voice the feeling of the province of Quebec, in so far as her laws are concerned. It is hardly necessary for me to remark that the hon. gentleman not only occupies a high standing among the members of the Bar of Quebec, but that his high legal reputation is acknowledged even beyond this wide Dominion of ours. As I remarked before, the hon. minister, I am sure, will realize the importance of the issue I am now bringing before the House.

The judgment of the Privy Council just referred to has caused a painful sensation throughout the province of Quebec. Let me briefly sketch out the controversy in question. In 1899, a settler, by the name of Adrien Roy, living in one of the townships to the north of Montreal, being the owner of a small timber limit, was the victim of a fire communicated to his property from the sparks of a locomotive belonging to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

Grounding his claim upon the law of our province and the jurisprudence sanctioned by our tribunals, he brought an action against the company, to recover the indemnity to which he was entitled. The case was heard before the Superior Court, presided over by one of our most eminent judges, Mr. Justice Langelier. After protracted pleadings, the company was sentenced, on December 5th, 1899, to pay to the defendant, as compensation, the sum of $300. Powerful as the Canadian Pacific Railway Company is, it appealed from that judgment to the Court of King's Bench, presided over by five judges. The pleadings before that court were as protracted and as exhaustive as those that took place before the Superior Court. The Court of Appeal, without a dissentient voice, confirmed the judgment of the lower court.

As I said a little while ago, the amount of the litigation was but three hundred dollars, and under the Quebec Code of Civil Procedure, there could be no appeal to a higher tribunal. Let the House here allow me to call its attention to what in my view, is a most vicious practice, adopted by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Under the provisions of the code of civil procedure, the right of appeal is determined by the amount in litigation, or by contingent future rights. The code provides that there can be no appeal to the Privy Council of England, in cases where the amount at stake is under $2,000. But, in virtue of what may be called an 'appeal of grace,' the Privy Council sometimes allows litigants to be heard, even when the amount in litigation is below that sum. Such was the case in this instance, notwithstanding the formal prohibition enacted by the code. Therefore, the company, after ruining a poor settler, was condemned by our tribunals, but taking advantage of the privilege granted by the Lords of the Privy Council, they lodged a new appeal and succeeded in getting the unfortunate judgment I have just referred to, which reversed the whole jurisprudence sanctioned by a long series of decisions rendered by all the courts of the province of Quebec.

The Privy Council declared that, from the moment that a company was authorized by an Act of Parliament to run a railway, it could not be held liable for damages caused, when acting within the rights conferred by its charter.

The hon. gentleman will perhaps hear with surprise that such a doctrine was propounded by the Privy Council ; but, to clear up all doubts, let me quote from the 'dictum'—for there are no grounds whatever to be found in the judgment—of the Lord Chancellor of the Judicial Committee :—

But the ground upon which the immunity of a railway company for injury caused by the normal use of their line is based is that the legislature, which is supreme, has authorized the particular thing so done in the place and by the means contemplated by the legislature, and that cannot constitute an actionable wrong in England any more than it can constitute a fault by the Quebec code.

And further on :

And the whole case turns not upon what was the common law of either country, but what is the true construction of plain words authorizing the doing of the very thing complained of. The legislature is supreme, and if it has enacted that a thing is lawful, such a thing cannot be a fault or an actionable wrong.

As I said, a railway company, which is empowered under a charter granted by the Dominion Parliament, to operate a railway, cannot be held responsible for damages caused, when acting within the rights conferred by its charter ; because, as they say, the legislature is supreme, which did confer such exorbitant rights.

This doctrine, astounding as it is, may be conformable to English law ; but though it may prevail in the old country, let it be remarked that, after this judgment had been rendered, the London 'Times,' the most important organ of public opinion in the empire, denounced the very next day that doctrine, and suggested that it should be given up, as contrary to equity. Let me further say this, that quite recently, Mr. Jeffries, member for Basingstoke, brought down a Bill for making railway companies liable for fires caused by sparks from their locomotives. The Bill has reached its second reading; the principle of it has been approved of by a large majority of the House of Commons; and if it has not yet reached its third reading, it is owing to the fact that parliament was prorogued. The Bill will come up again at the next session of parliament.

But supposing such doctrine prevailed in England, could the Lords of the Privy Council plead ignorance of the fact that in the province of Quebec, corporate bodies are assimilated by law to individuals. Article 1053 of the Civil Code reads as follows :

Every person capable of discerning right from wrong is responsible for the damage caused by his fault to another, whether by positive act, imprudence, neglect or want of skill.

Article 356 enacts, among other things :

Civil corporations constituting, by the fact of their incorporation, ideal or artificial persons, are as such governed by the laws affecting individuals ; saving the privileges they enjoy and the disabilities they are subjected to.

So positive, so clear a text has never yet given rise to ambiguity before our tribunals. Moreover, our jurisprudence on that point has received the sanction even of the Supreme Court of Canada, the decisions of which, as a rule, are far from evincing any sympathy with our province.

In the case of Gareau vs. The Montreal Street Railway Company, Hon. Judge Girouard, of the Supreme Court, has given an opinion which tallies with the opinion of the Court of Appeal.

With your leave, Mr. Speaker, I shall quote from the judgment of the Court of Appeal, passing under silence the views expressed by Sir Alexander Lacoste, and by Judges Bossé and Blanchet, who are of French extraction. But what did Judge Hall say ? I experience all the more pleasure in quoting his opinion, as he is, as shown by his name, of British origin. But it is a well known fact that he is a warm admirer of the French laws of our province. Listen to what the honourable judge says :

The courts of this province have by a long series of decisions maintained the principle of responsibility for damage to a neighbour's property. Independently of the question of fault or negligence in the ordinary use of those words as well in cases of damage from fires set for clearing lands, as by sparks from chimneys of industrial establishments.

The hon. judge then goes on quoting a long list of judgments, and says :

Whatever our personal opinion might have been upon the question we would certainly have felt controlled by the well set jurisprudence of our provincial courts, but we may add that we entirely concur in the wisdom and equity of the rule which our courts have established. It is plain too, that in countries where a contrary rule is in force, many judges protest against its correctness and evade its effects where an opportunity presents. For instance, in Powell vs. Fall, in the Queen's Bench in England, the owner of a traction engine in use upon a highway, under the authority of the English locomotive Act, and constructed in strict compliance with the terms of that Act, were held liable for damage caused by sparks setting fire to an adjacent stack, and Justice Branswell, in delivering the judgment of the court, remarked that the arguments of appellant council had been ingenious, but that he need only say in reply, that they had hardened his conviction that Rex vs. Pease and Vaughan vs. Taff Vale Company were wrongly decided.

Such was, in the eyes of Mr. Justice Hall, the jurisprudence established by our own tribunals and such was also the jurisprudence which even in England will before long prevail. Therefore, corporations, in the matter of liability for damages, are governed by the provisions of the Civil Code, and not as the Lords of the Privy Council unhesitatingly declared, by English common law. Such a construction constitutes, to our mind, a violation of the spirit and letter of our law. A jurisprudence, so well set for many years, they have ignored. No wonder, then, that such a deplorable decision should have come as a shock to us. For, let it be well understood, patient as we have been in the past of encroachments by the Dominion Government, we, from the province of Quebec, strong partisans as we are of provincial autonomy, shall not allow the Imperial authorities to infringe upon our rights, without loudly protesting. Of all things which we hold dear and sacred, and which we wish to bequeath unimpaired to our posterity, we prize above all our civil laws and the French law, the existence of which was guaranteed to us by the constitution. So, scarcely had the judgment of the Privy Council been published, when it was most severely criticised and commented upon by the most eminent jurisconsults of our province. On January 7th, there appeared in the Montreal 'Gazette,' an article on the question, signed by 'Lex.' If I am rightly informed, 'Lex' is no other personage than an English speaking judge, who is very well known in Montreal. Let me quote from that correspondence a few lines which need no comment :

To us, it appears that our law (as held by our courts) takes the only sensible logical position. Because the legislature grants a liberty to build and run a railway, it does not follow that the latter may set fire to my property and cause me damage without compensation. The law allows the road to run—so I, a proprietor on the line, cannot stop the running ; cannot obtain an injunction, although I may have well grounded fears of danger from fire. On the other hand the company can protect itself by adopting all the appliances which ingenuity can supply ; and by insuring against any loss which may occur.

'I say that our law so holds, rather it did so hold before the decision of the Privy Council above adverted to. In consequence of this decision, we shall now require the same legislation as they are asking for in England. They to get rid of their law as held by the courts, we, to get back to our law as our courts have held it to be.'

Another correspondent, who is one of the most eminent English speaking members of the Montreal Bar, writes as follows, to the 'Gazette,' in its issue of January 6th :

The judgment in Roy's case just rendered by the Privy Council strikes at the security, not only of every man's property, in this province within reach of fire from railway, but of every man's property that may be injured or burned by the operations of bodies carrying on any business authorized by their charters.

If railway companies, as their lordships hold, may with immunity burn people's properties along their lines, if they only use the latest fire screens, all other corporate bodies doing what they are authorized by their charters to do, are equally exempt from liability for their acts in destroying neighbouring properties.

It would be surprising if an effort is not made without delay, to place our law beyond question on this important subject, by legislation conformable to what our laws has always been as administered by our courts, and which every one feels is displaced by the Roy judgment in favour of a technical and inequitable rule of English law.'

If that judgment was severely commented upon by our English-speaking fellow-countrymen, I hesitate not to say that, among the French-speaking element, public opinion was thoroughly aroused. Hear what the 'Presse' has to say in an article which clearly betrays its trade-mark :

We have, so far, refrained from making any comment upon the judgment of the Privy Council re Roy vs. the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, before having before us the text itself, but now that our doubts are cleared up, it is our duty to speak our mind, and to tell the public the unvarnished truth. We had until now, deluded ourselves into the belief that the craze for imperialism would at least show due respect to that last bulwark of political justice and equity, our courts of justice ; but we were mistaken.

That the Privy Council Lords have undertaken to make jurisprudence uniform as to a point wherein colonial jurisprudence is at variance with English law, cannot be questioned. The noble Lords who have rendered this decision can hardly realise to what an extent they have injured their cause. They have just created a prejudice against an institution the real tendencies of which none ever dreamed to suspect, that it will take years and years to eradicate from the public mind. We had, so far, cheerfully accepted the decisions of the Privy Council, from a conviction that those judgments were rendered for Canada only and from the standpoint of our legislation ; but, now that the Privy Council seems to be prompted by a different feeling ; now that their judgments are framed in the light of a different legislation, it is quite another matter ; and an agitation is being, at this very moment, started into life, with a view to bringing about a change in the old procedure and for restricting those appeals, and, if need be, doing away with them altogether. Our legislatures have before them a heavy task.

I have said enough, Mr. Speaker, to show that this judgment of the Privy Council clearly inflicts a crying wrong upon the citizens of the province of Quebec who live under the authority of the Civil Code. That decision is a direct violation of our law, which nothing can atone for.

I make this motion in the hope that the hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Fitzpatrick) will see to it that the laws of this country are judiciously enforced.

The hon. Minister of Justice, now that he knows this decision, has a noble task before him. Let him amend, if need be, the Railway Act, and in drafting its clauses, let him use so clear a phraseology, that in the future, the Lords of the Privy Council may not be tempted into forgetting in this matter of responsibility and liability for damages, in fact that those great corporations are subject to the civil laws of the province of Quebec.

We are happy to belong to the empire ; but any imperialistic scheme tending to interfere with our rights and customs will find in us most irreconcilable opponents.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The report to which my hon. friend draws our attention is not one which is under the control of this House. It is a judgment rendered in a case between two private parties by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and is of course absolutely beyond our jurisdiction. No doubt my hon. friend knew this and made his motion simply for the purpose of criticising this judgment, and I am not here under any obligation to justify it at all.

Mr. LEMIEUX. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I have no right to do it. I think it would be extremely unseemly on my part to justify or approve of a judgment rendered by their lordships of the Judicial Committee. However, I must say that, in all fairness, we should present that judgment as it really was rendered. It is possible so far as the province of Quebec is concerned, that previous to this judgment our impression was that our law differed somewhat from what their lordships have found it to be. What did their lordships decide ? They decided that the law in the province of Quebec, as we have it in our Civil Code, had been wrongly interpreted up to that time by our courts. Their lordships' finding may be good or bad, but they are the highest court in the land and we have to take the law as they construe it. The Courts of Appeal are for the purpose, of interpreting the law, and this, the highest court of appeal, has contrued the law to be as I have said, namely, that in the province of Quebec the law applicable to cases, such as the one in question, is the same as it is in England and in the English provinces. What was the case ? It was one between an individual and a corporation, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, created by the federal parliament, authorized by the federal parliament to carry on its operations throughout the whole of Canada, and running its railway through a portion of the province of Quebec. Under the sanction of the Dominion parliament this corporation operates that railway and in all respects conforms to the requirements of the statute which brought it into existence. Having in all respects complied with the law, an accident happened and fire was communicated from the railway to a barn in its vicinity. The Privy Council held that there was no fault on the part of the company because it had complied with all the requirements of its charter. It was generally understood that that was the law of the whole Dominion except with respect to the province of Quebec, as it is the undoubted law in England ; but their lordships decided that that is also the civil law under the Quebec Civil Code just as it is the law in the other parts of the country. They do not say : We are going to apply to the province of Quebec a law that is in violation of the Quebec Civil Code. On the contrary they say : We construe the law laid down in the Quebec Civil Code to be the same as rules elsewhere. Their lordships may have misconstrued our code, but they have not sought in any way to interfere with our privileges. Without attempting in any way to justify their lordships' judgment, let me put this case to the House. If this is not the law, if this corporation, acting within the rights conferred upon it by its character, is to be liable for tort in the province of Quebec, according to the local law of that province, what becomes of the supremacy of this parliament ? It is a necessary incident of the supremacy of this parliament that it should have the right to confer upon the corporation it creates the right to operate throughout the whole Dominion, and that that right should not be made subject to the action of any local legislature. Otherwise this parliament ceases to be supreme. That seems to me self evident. There is the case and there is nothing more in it, and it seems to me, when we come to consider it, a great tempest in a teapot. I know that in our province we have special privileges. We have an old axiom : Chaque plaideur a quarante-huit heures pour maudire son juge. Every man who goes before the courts and loses has forty eight hours within which to curse his judge. That is our privilege and we use it, but we ought not to extend that privilege beyond the traditional forty-eight hours.

Motion agreed to.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Ocean and river service—maintenance and repairs to government steamers, $200,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I notice there is an increase here of $40,000. How is that accounted for ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). There is an apparent increase of $40,000. But I find that last year there was a supplementary estimate of $36,000, and the total expenditure on this service was $202,289. Increased expenditure was caused by the winter mail service to Prince Edward Island, two steamers, the 'Stanley' and the 'Minto' being engaged in this service. The effect of the present vote is merely to put into the main estimates a total which was divided last year between the main estimates and the supplementary estimates. I may say also that looking over this matter with the officials of the department I find that, since the two boats were in use for the winter service to Prince Edward Island, this is the least amount for which this service of maintenance and repairs of government steamers can possibly be carried on.

Mr. SPROULE. I understand that this ought to contain all that was in the main estimates and in the supplementary estimates last year.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, I agree with my hon. friend. I brought the matter to the attention of the department.

Mr. SPROULE. What repairs are contemplated, and on what vessels ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The repairs, of course, are an uncertain quantity, the only certain thing being that some repairs will be necessary every season. The principal expense, of course, is in the maintenance. There are eight of these Dominion steamers, the 'Minto' and the 'Stanley' are engaged in the service between Prince Edward Island and the mainland. The 'Lansdowne' has been used on the New Brunswick coast and the Bay of Fundy. The 'Aberdeen' is in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The 'Quadra' is in British Columbia, and the 'Brant,' a small steamer, is in the Prince Edward Island agency. The two boats chartered in place of the 'Druid' and 'Newfield,' are, one in the Quebec agency and one in Nova Scotia. These are to be replaced next season with two new boats purchased in the old country.

Mr. SPROULE. What has become of the 'Druid'?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. She was condemned and I think sold for $3,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Was there not a boat chartered to take the place of the 'Newfield' last season?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. OSLER. The other evening, when the estimates of the Minister of Agriculture were under discussion, the question came up as to whether the supplementary estimates of last year were included in the column of figures showing the estimates of last year for comparison with the present, and we were told they were so included. Now, in this item, we have an increase of $40,000, and the minister tells us that the estimates given for last year do not include the supplementary estimates.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There are always the later supplementaries in the following session, which are not included. Except for that the hon. gentleman is correct.

Mr. OSLER. But it is absolutely misleading if we have one minister saying that this includes supplementary estimates and the other saying that in the case of so large an item of $40,000, the supplementary estimates is not included. We want to know whether the figures we have of 1901-2 are correct figures as compared with the estimates of 1902-3, or whether they are incorrect, whether these are correct or whether there are some supplementaries that we do not know about?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The items at the left hand of the vote we have under consideration ought to represent the main estimates for the current year, and also the supplementary estimates, and if they do not in this case it is an error, and I must look into it. But that is what it is intended they should represent. Why they have not done so in this case, I cannot explain, but I will look into it.

Hon. Mr. SUTHERLAND (Oxford).

Mr. OSLER. Then do I understand that these estimates of 1901-2 may in every case not include the supplementary estimates?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They ought to include what I may call the main estimates and the first supplementary estimates for that year, all the votes of last session. My hon. friend knows that there is always a final winding up estimate brought down in the following session. It cannot include that, but it should include the others.

Mr. SPROULE. Would the minister tell us now how he purchases these supplies? Is it by tender, or just giving an order to merchants in the different ports?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. My information is that prices are asked for by tender for the staple supplies from different parties, and when the prices are ascertained then the goods are ordered. Circulars are sent out to different houses, and prices are asked for in that way for all the staples used on the boats.

Mr. TAYLOR. If my hon. friend will turn up the Auditor General's Report, page 15, he will find the commencement of expenditures for Dominion steamers. The first item I draw to his attention is supplies for steamer 'Lansdowne,' 68 pounds of butter at 35 cents a pound, bought from one of the friends of the government. They purchased $408 worth of supplies, and that is a fair sample of the charges made. It must have been gilt-edged butter. So it is all through, there is no purchase of supplies by tender. This government, which purchases so vast an amount of supplies, ought to have a warehouse of their own, and draw from that warehouse all they require for the different departments, and buy the goods at wholesale prices. Last night I drew the attention of the House to the Department of the Minister of Agriculture, where we found 168 pounds of putty charged at 8 cents a pound. Turn to the Kingston Penitentiary accounts where everything is bought by tender, and you find putty is bought at $2.25 per 100 pounds. Here you are paying nearly 400 per cent more to one of the government's friends. The late minister, Sir Louis Davies, promised that he would have this matter investigated and have a new state of affairs brought about. But we find the same system continuing, the same men, the same prices charged for supplies all the way through on these steamers. If my hon. friend will turn to the last estimate brought in by the late government in 1895-6, he will find this service was then performed just as effectively as it is now for $166,000, as compared with $243,000 now, an increase of nearly $90,000 in this one item. That shows how the expenditure is creeping up from $37,000,000 to about $57,000,000.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In reply to my hon. friend I may say that the cost of this service is comparatively about the same as under the previous government. Two boats have been added since the figures that I have spoken of, and no change has been adopted in the system by the present government. Nor am I prepared to admit that one can buy any cheaper, or as cheap probably, in spending a lot of money in advertising for articles wanted on these boats as by asking prices from various well known houses in the different cities where the goods are wanted. I would remind my hon. friend, however, that in making a comparison there are two boats more, last season we had two boats on the route between Prince Edward Island and the mainland. I want also to mention to the committee that during the short time at my disposal I find in looking into this matter that the cost of maintenance on these boats has averaged 22 cents per day per man. I hardly think my hon. friend from Leeds (Mr. Taylor) will say that 22 cents per day is an extravagant price for maintenance of officers as well as men employed on the boats. However, in view of the criticisms, I will be pleased, in asking for supplies for the coming year, to look into the matter and see whether or not any saving can be made under the system adopted.

Mr. BROCK. May I ask the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries a question? In looking at the item in the Auditor General's Report, I see that the vote last year was $196,000, and the expenditure $195,000. That is for Dominion steamers. I am not familiar yet with the way in which accounts are kept, but I suppose these Dominion steamers earn a certain amount of revenue. Where do we find the revenue earned, or is this expenditure over and above any receipts they have in the way of revenue?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The revenue for the year 1900-1901 was $19,421.68. If my hon. friend (Mr. Brock) will turn to page 4 of the Marine and Fisheries Report, he will find the full account of the revenue.

Mr. BROCK. If you earned $19,421.68 you expended $196,000.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, that is no comparison at all. There is only one of these boats in the service that has any revenue at all, and I was very much pleased, in looking into the returns, to see that the revenue was as large as it is on the 'Minto,' which has been engaged in the trade between Prince Edward Island and the mainland, It shows that there is a very good production of commodities on the island and that there is a considerable passenger service. The other boats have no revenue. They are used altogether for maintaining lights and buoys and other aids to navigation. I do not know that this is the place to discuss the question, but after looking into the matter, I think the hon. gentleman will agree with me that, considering the importance of the transportation question and the lessening of insurance rates, which makes freight charges so high on the St. Lawrence route, it is desirable that more attention should be paid to the subject and that it will be of great advantage to the country that we should improve the aids to navigation, even if it should cost the country a small amount more. My hon. friend will see that the revenue from one boat plying between Prince Edward Island and the mainland was fairly satisfactory.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria, N.S.) Mr. Chairman, there is one service for which these steamers are employed which has been overlooked altogether, and that is the prevention of American fishermen from coming within the limits of Dominion waters. These steamers are used around the coast of Prince Edward Island, Cape Breton and Nova Scotia in the spring and fall of the year to prevent American seiners from coming within the three-mile limit. This is one of the most important services that these steamers perform. They have also been used during the last season for repairing and laying down telegraph cables where they were out of order and where new ones were extended, so that to my own knowledge these steamers are kept pretty busy from the opening to the closing of navigation.

Mr. HACKETT. Mr. Chairman, I would like to say in connection with this question, that I think the amount asked for is not excessive. I am pretty well assured that the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries will economize in every way to save the people's money. I know that two of these steamers are plying at present between Prince Edward Island and the mainland for the purpose of keeping up communication, for the conveyance of mails, passengers and freight, in accordance with the terms of confederation entered into when Prince Edward Island became a part of the Dominion of Canada. Now, speaking of this increase, we know, as the hon. gentleman has said, that since 1896 the 'Minto' was constructed in England, brought out here and placed on the service. That boat cost a large amount of money. We have in addition to her the 'Brant,' another boat which is engaged supplying the lighthouses around Prince Edward Island and looking after the lobster fishery. These boats are expensive to maintain each year and we must have an increase in the expenditure. The government surely will not be bound down to a small sum of money, some $40,000 or $50,000 a year, if the service in the maritime provinces is to be fully kept up and maintained. My hon. friend from Leeds (Mr. Taylor) has gone into particulars in regard to supplies. I have been very exact in that respect and I have taken the precaution to look through the Auditor General's Report. I want to tell the hon. gentleman that supplies purchased for these steamers, in so far as Prince Edward Island is concerned, are procured at as low a rate as you could buy the goods in any part of Canada. Whether you get them by tender, or whether you buy them through the captain, or through the agent, you get these supplies, so far as Prince Edward Island is concerned, as low as you can obtain similar goods for in any part of this country. I am pleased that the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries has placed the steamer 'Stanley' on the western route between Summerside and Cape Tormentine. That boat is doing good service and this is a very important matter to the people of Prince Edward Island. The mail service has been fairly satisfactory this year, so far as I know, and I think there is no doubt that this service if properly managed will be successful. The hon. gentleman has been kind enough, when we represented the matter to him a few days ago, to send down the nautical adviser of the department, Capt. McElhinney to Cape Tormentine and Summerside for the purpose of seeing that the work was being properly carried out. While we have had Ministers of Marine and Fisheries from the island, while we have had the late Hon. J. C. Pope, who has gone to his reward, and while we have had Sir. Louis Davies, who has been promoted to the Supreme Court bench, I have not in my experience of twenty-five years found a gentleman more willing to carry out the requests of the people of Prince Edward Island than the hon. minister who is now in charge of the department.

Mr. SPROULE. As a general principle we have not been contending that the vote in the main is too large. That has not been our contention, but we have been asking for information to ascertain how this money has been spent. There are two ways of spending money and it is a well known fact that one way is usually considered preferable to the other in the event of requiring to spend a large amount of money; one is by purchasing by public tender and the other is by purchasing by private price lists. The hon. member for Prince Edward Island (Mr. Hackett) felt sure that the goods which were bought were bought as cheaply in Prince Edward Island as in any part of Canada. I will not dispute that, because it seems to me on looking over the purchases that there have not been in the main unreasonable prices paid. But, I will give one instance. I will take the village of Westport, not far from Ottawa, where butter was purchased at 35 cents a pound. At what time in the present season has butter been sold, even gilt edged butter, in the city of Montreal for 35 cents a pound ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) will find that Westport is a small port down near Yarmouth.

Mr. MATHESON. I may tell the hon. gentleman that there was any amount of butter sold in Cape Breton for 35 cents a pound last year.

Mr. SPROULE. If these prices prevail down there, all I can say is, that they are much higher than we get for butter in Montreal or Ontario. I speak from knowledge, because I am connected with a butter factory and I know that it was sold from the factory as low as 17½ cents or 18 cents, and that was gilt edge butter. However I did not rise to refer to that particularly. I wish to speak with regard to the system. We had considerable discussion last year and the minister told us that when there were any reasonable purchases to be made they would be made by tender and advertisement, if there was time to do so. I do not say that the bulk of these could be purchased by tender but undoubtedly a fair portion of them could be, and it is the best way to spend the public money. Some of these prices appear to be reasonable enough but some are certainly not. It may be said that when we come to advertise it causes expense. It does if you want to give patronage to the government papers all over the country. But if you pursue a businesslike course the expense of advertising will be comparatively small, and it is the safest thing to do in the public interest.

Mr. TAYLOR. As my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Sutherland), is fresh in the department, I do not intend to criticise this system as severely as I would if his predecessor were here. I draw his attention to one item at P—42, Auditor General's Report, where Mr. Pelletier, of Quebec, was paid for supplying ginger beer, and ginger ale, and English soda water, and Appolinaris to quite a considerable extent, to one of the steamers. I do not notice any brandy or other strong drink among the items and therefore I do not severely criticise the vote if the stuff was used for a good purpose.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That was a special case during the visit of the Governor General and his suite. I think they were very moderate in keeping to ginger ale and that sort of thing.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. SPROULE. Where were these two steamers purchased ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. We advertised in the newspapers, both in Canada and Great Britain, and gave the contract to the lowest tenderer.

Mr. SPROULE. What was the cost of these steamers and from whom were they purchased ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. They were purchased from Fleming & Ferguson, of Paisley, Scotland, one for $184,983 and the other is to cost $207,684. The tenders were received through Robert Reford & Co., agents. A large amount was voted last year for these steamers and there will be a supplementary vote asked to pay the balance.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it true that one of these steamers will require extensive repairs to fit it for its work ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Neither of these steamers has been delivered. It is expected they will arrive in Canada during the month of July next. The hon. gentleman is perhaps thinking of a steamer that was bought in Quebec, but she is for a different service.

Mr. SPROULE. From whom was the steamer hired to replace the 'Newfield' ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. She was chartered for the season from Geo. E. Boak & Co., Halifax, at $1,500 per month.

Mr. SPROULE. Was that steamer properly equipped for that service ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. She has been used on the service just as she was hired. There might be the ordinary repairs but nothing of any consequence.

Mr. SPROULE. I notice from the report that because the steamer was not properly equipped she was unable to do the work intended for her, and some loss was sustained in consequence, I suppose.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not know that there was any loss, but I am told by the officials that they were considerably handicapped by not having a boat well equipped. However it was the best steamer they could get at the time to supply the lighthouses and take care of the buoys.

Examination masters and mates, $5,000.

Mr. CLARKE. I would like to ascertain from the hon. minister if he has received a petition from the National Association of Marine Engineers asking for certain changes in the Steamboat Inspection Act. I have received some communications from the secretary of that organization, and in one of them he incloses a form of petition which I understand has been forwarded to the minister. I would like to know if the petition has been received, and if the minister has agreed to meet a deputation from that organization who are desirous to state the reasons why they wish certain changes in the law.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I met a deputation from the Marine Engineers last night and they presented their petition. I went through the petition clause by clause with them and heard their side of the case as to why they wanted changes in the regulations. Some of them struck me as very reasonable, and with others of their requests I was not very well acquainted and so I made an appointment for the members of the deputation with the inspector at the head of the department, and they had an interview with him this morning. They explained what they had to say with regard to the matter and I made another engagement with the deputation to see them afterwards.

Mr. CLARKE. I am much obliged to the hon. minister for the information he has given me. I would not have troubled him at this particular stage of the estimates, had I not two communications from the association, and I was not aware that a deputation had already visited him. I understand now that he and his officers have been in communication with the deputation and have taken into consideration the representations they made.

Mr. ALCORN. I understand that the examiners of candidates for certificates as masters and mates generally hold other permanent positions in the service at various points throughout Canada, and the applicants pay their own expenses and somewhat high fees. How is it then that this large sum is payable to the examiners ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This vote does not cost the country anything, as the revenue last year was over $4,800. With regard to the other point my hon. friend brought up, if he would name any particular place or person I would be glad to see whether any abuse has taken place. The names of the examiners are : Gilpin, Bloomfield Douglas, D. Hunter, Morgan, at Sydney, N.S.; Murphy, at Yarmouth; Wolfe, at Lunenburg; Seaton, at Quebec; McIlwaine, at St. Catharines ; McCuaig, at Ottawa. Most of these men received a fee of $4 a day while attending the examinations. If the hon. gentleman has any name to give me, I will make inquiry.

Rewards for saving life including life saving stations, $10,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the hon. gentleman explain this reduction of $1,000 ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In making up the expenditure last year, we found that it was a little under $9,000, and we thought probably $10,000 would do for the coming year.

Mr. SPROULE. I notice an item for life saving in connection with one of the vessels on the upper lakes. Has the hon. gentleman any information as to the parties to whom awards were paid for life-saving ? I put this question because sometimes deserving cases are overlooked.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The following is the list, and it will be found on page 156 of the report :

Names and Designations of Persons.	Nature of Services rendered.	Date of Service rendered.	Description of Reward.
M. G. Nickerson, manager; J. E. Brown, captain; John Ernest, engineer; Joseph Brown, mate; Isaac Banks, cook; Isaac Hunt, deck-hand; S.G. Newell, purser; Everett Cleaveland, fireman; seamen of ss. Gertrude M., of Clark's Harbour, N.S.	Services rendered in saving the lives of certain fishermen caught in the ice off Bon Portage.	Feb. 9, 1901.	To owner, $35; to captain and engineer, $2 each; mate, $2; cook, deck-hand, purser and fireman, $1.75 each.
Captain Albert E. Isserwood, of Port Francis, Ont.	Saving the lives of two men at Rainy River.	Mar. 23, 1900.	A life-saving medal.
Fred. C. Lahey, Robert Murray, William Scott, Edward Lahey, Richard Cline, Alfred Bennet, Robert Nicoll and Ed. Kelly, volunteer crew of the Life-boat at St. John, N.B.	Rescuing the master and crew of the American schooner Hazel Dell, wrecked near Government Pier, St. John, N.B.	Dec. 2, 1899.	A gold life-saving medal to each of the men by the President of the United States.
Robert Armstrong, resident of Lower Barney's River, Pictou Co., N.S.	Saving a person from drowning off the seashore at Barney's River, N.S.	Aug. 20, 1900.	A silver watch.
John Lawlor, Outer Basin, Quebec	Saving the fireman of ss. Manchester City from drowning, at Outer Basin, Quebec.	June 13, 1900.	A bronze medal.
Walter C. Hare, Henry Howler, Frederick C. Block, and Charles J. Peer, of Port Credit.	Bravery in the rescue of the crew of the schooner Augusta, near Port Credit, Ont.	Nov. 25, 1900.	A silver life-saving medal to each man.
John C. Webber, seaman, late of the ss. Parklands, of Hartlepool.	Saving the lives of three of the crew of the barque Adu Barton, of St. John, N.B.	Feb. 16, 1884.	$14.60 being the equivalent of £3 sterling, the amount of the award.
Capt. D. Doxrud, master; John Daddow, chief officer; E. Peterson, boatswain; H. Loronsen, quartermaster; Rudolph Kittleson, M. O'Keefe, seamen of Belgian steamer Rhinland.	Rescuing the crew of the brigantine Ida Maud, of Liverpool, N.S.	Oct. 6, 1899.	A binocular glass to master, a gold watch to chief officer, a silver watch to each: boatswain and quarter master, and $10 each to Messrs. Kettleson and O'Keefe.
A. E. Tweddel, P. Lafranc, L. Chouinard, and W. Soucy, of St. Octave de Métis, Quebec.	Rescued wrecked mariners at Pointe aux Senells.	Sept. 12, 1900.	A binocular glass to Mr. Tweddel, $10 to each of the others.

Mr. BLAIN. Were the silver medals presented to the men who saved life at Fort Credit, Ontario ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am informed that they were.

Mr. BLAIN. I have a letter saying they were not.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have no personal knowledge of the matter, but if the hon. gentleman will give me a memo. I will make inquiries.

Tidal service, including salary of assistant clerk beyond $400, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $7,500.

Mr. SPROULE. Where is this service carried on ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Principally down in the Gulf and Bay of Fundy. At headquarters here Robert Angus attends to the reports; the observer at St. John, N.B., is D. L. Hutchison; at Father Point, Que., J. McWilliams at Point Lévis, W. McDougall; at Yarmouth, N.S., J. E. Murphy.

Winter mail service, $8,500.

Mr. HACKETT. This refers, I suppose, to the old ice-boat service between Prince Edward Island and the mainland ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I hope we shall not have to use any of this money. Having two steamers, I hope we shall be able to maintain navigation.

Mr. HACKETT. But you hold the ice-boats in reserve ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Marine Biological Station, $2,000.

Mr. HACKETT. How far has this work proceeded ? Where were the gentlemen engaged in this service working last summer ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I may give the statement

furnished me by Professor Prince, under whose particular supervision this work is done. The station was towed from St. Andrews, N.B., to Canso, N.S. The research tables were fully occupied by the staff of scientific workers, which included Professor Ramsay Wright, Professor A. P. Knight, Professor A. B. Macallum, Professor Fowler, Dr. Joseph Stafford, Mr. C. McLean Fraser, Mr. George A. Cornish, and Dr. Linville, of New York.

Mr. HACKETT. This is the same staff with which you started ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. HACKETT. A year ago I brought this matter up in the House. Sir Louis Davies, who was then Minister of Marine and Fisheries, said that this biological survey, would come around to the coasts of Prince Edward Island into the Straits of Northumberland, to make researches into fish life in those waters. Now that the station is at Canso, at the point of coming into the vicinity of Prince Edward Island, is it the intention to bring it into the waters around the island next year ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The committee is aware that this is a new service. As we receive the reports, we shall be able to judge better of their importance and of the value of the work. But it is the intention, if the survey is continued, to go to these different points. I have no report as to whether it is intended to go to Prince Edward Island this summer or not. But that is one place where scientific work in this line could be done to advantage.

Mr. GANONG. I understand that the report of the work done at St. Andrews is about ready to be issued.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. We have not received the report in shape to be printed yet.

Ocean and river service—salaries and expenses of cattle inspection, $2,800.

Mr. SPROULE. Would not this more properly come under quarantine ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This relates to the shipment of cattle. The main duties of these officials are to see that when the cattle are shipped, the boat is provided with proper accommodation for the cattle, to see that the ship is properly ventilated, that she is not overloaded, and so on. There are three officers, and their salaries take up this whole vote, except for small incidental expenses.

Lighthouse and coast service—salaries and allowances of lightkeepers, $228,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I see by the report of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that the department has it in contemplation to provide many more lights between Montreal and Quebec and lower down the St. Lawrence. Last year we were told by Sir Louis Davies that about everything was done that could be done. But now considerable extensions are spoken of. Are these new services included in this vote ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, the increase is not included in this vote. Considerable improvement has been made in the lighting of this route, but from what I have been able to learn from those interested in the route, I must say that I am inclined to think that there is a good deal yet to be done. Perhaps the lighting between Montreal and Quebec could be considerably improved. That, perhaps, is not so pressing as improvements further down in the gulf. I had the advantage of listening, a few days ago, to what appeared to me a very intelligent and well informed representative of the British Marine Insurance Company and Lloyds. He impressed upon me the great importance of making some changes at various points. I also had the advantage of a long interview this forenoon, with representatives of the shipping interest, headed by Mr. H. Allan, and including the representative of the Refords, who, I understand, represent several lines. In consultation with the deputy and the engineer of the department, we took this matter up in detail. I am not prepared to make a recommendation at the moment either to my colleagues or to the House. But I am so impressed with the importance of the work and the great advantage it would be to this country if we can satisfy the marine insurance companies, that the matter shall certainly not be lost sight of. Fuller investigation will be made, and I hope to receive reports from those I think we can place confidence in, starting at one end and going over the whole route. I hope to learn what is really necessary to put these aids to navigation in first class state, so that they will be accepted by Lloyds and the best insurance companies. The route, I hope, will be made so free from danger to shipping, that we shall have the same rates of insurance that are now given on the American route. By so doing we will reduce the rate of freight especially on the produce of the country to such an extent that we will reap a reward for any reasonable amount of money that may be so expended. That is a matter that I will endeavour to consider within a week or two and come to some conclusion on it and make a report. If the scheme is agreed to, I will ask the House for the necessary grant of money. I do not find that the amount of money required to make the improvements even that are suggested by the captains of the various steamship lines that are continually using this route, would be so very great. I think that after some decided improvements made to the power of the lights, and perhaps placing sirens instead of the ordinary fog whistles that we have now, no fault can be found by the insurance companies. But for a reasonable expenditure permanent improvement can be made at one or two points, I have almost come to the conclusion that I will be perfectly safe in making a report, and in asking this House to undertake the work that will be recommended by the officers of the department. I feel that there is a good deal of prejudice, a good deal of misunderstanding, as to what has been done and what is required, and if possible I would be inclined to ask a small vote for the next season, and ask the co-operation of the British Board of Trade, the representatives of the marine insurance companies and the parties most interested, to accompany the officers of the department to take a trip over that route and make a report. I think a report made by men, disinterested in one sense, but whose main interest would be to see that the aids to navigation were perfect, so that the companies could afford to reduce the rate of insurance, would create confidence and give great satisfaction to all parties, and would be of great benefit to Canada.

Mr. OSLER. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries, in expressing himself as he has done, shows that he appreciates the importance of this service. I cannot speak as an expert, but from what I hear I believe that our lighthouse service is absolutely bad, is absolutely faulty ; that it is absolutely insufficient, I know. If you take a map of Lake Superior, of the Georgian Bay and our inland waters that are now becoming as important as the St. Lawrence, and if you look at the lighthouse service we have there, and compare it with the American lighthouse service, and when you consider that we are doing all we can to build up an inland marine, and see what risks our ships run in our channels, you must come to the conclusion that this service has been neglected very much by our government in the past. I think this is one of the most important questions this parliament has to deal with. Our shipping is increasing very rapidly on our northern lakes, and our trade is all being carried now by Canadian boats. I think it is due to the enterprise that is putting on new boats on these waters that the government should give us better lighting service on our coast, equal at least to the lighting that is done on the American coast. I hope the new Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who comes from an inland quarter, and can have no prejudice for the sea, or the lakes, will devote himself particularly to improving this particular branch of the service, which I think is all important if we are to increase our inland navigation as well as the navigation of the St. Lawrence.

Mr. GANONG. I feel myself that transportation is the greatest problem that we have before us, and the greatest factor in that problem is to make it possible for ships safely to carry our products after they have been put on board the vessel. I am not going to advertise any stock company in which I have any interest, but I desire to call the attention of the minister and of the committee to a new means that has been devised for protection of coastal waters. I had an opportunity the other day when in Boston, of examining a recently patented device, and I think that our deputy minister and our chief engineer also had the privilege of looking into this matter to some extent a year ago. However, it has been perfected very much since then. The United States government have felt so interested in it that they have placed at the disposal of the inventor one of their own vessels in order to test the matter in and around Boston harbour. It is not a Bell telephone, but it is a telephone from a bell. The system generally is that of submerging a bell which will be rung automatically. They have already tested this system 12 miles off the coast and succeeded in getting an absolute service from it. I think at the time when the deputy and our engineer were there, some portions did seem to be very cumbersome and difficult to handle, but since then the receiver, which was quite a large piece of machinery, has been reduced in size so that its disc is scarcely larger than an American dollar. It certainly seems to be admirably adapted not only for coastal service but perhaps for the waters of a river. I feel that we should have this matter looked into, as it is likely to be of the greatest possible benefit in warning vessels, either in entering or leaving our harbours. I hope that the minister will find it possible to make a thorough examination of this system which is now being worked out. I may say that on the day I came from Boston the United States navy had representatives there looking into the matter themselves.

Mr. LEFURGEY. Under this item I would like to make a few remarks to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries about the steamer 'Stanley.' I understand the steamer now is some 12 years old, and is engaged in a very important service during the winter, plying between Summerside and Cape Tormentine. I have information that this boat is not in a condition to perform satisfactorily the service, and that many of her plates are in such a condition, bent in contact with the ice, as to render her efforts to a great extent inoperative. I also understand that the steamer now requires new boilers and engines. In order to make a complete success of the winter service between Summerside and Cape Tormentine and also to make the boat suitable for the service of the fisheries during the summer season I would like to call the attention of the hon. minister to the fact that there will require to be extensive repairs made both to the hull and to the engines, and I would like to see, in the supplementary estimates, a sufficient sum to put this boat in condition to secure a proper service during next winter between the island and the mainland.

Mr. CLARKE. I want to emphasize the remarks which have been made by my colleague from Toronto (Mr. Osler) in regard to allegations which are made as to the inadequacy of the lighthouse, range light, and target service on the upper lakes. I was up there during the past autumn and I had conversations with more than one mariner engaged in the service on those upper lakes. I heard a great many complaints made as to the insufficiency of the service on the Georgian Bay and on Lake Superior. I am very glad to hear the statement made by the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries as to the steps he purposes taking during the coming recess to improve the navigation of the waters to the east of us. I have been credibly informed that representations have been made to the department from time to time as to the insufficiency of the service on the upper lakes and I hope the hon. minister will take steps during the coming summer to make an investigation into these complaints to ascertain whether they are well founded or not, and to ascertain whether it is a fact that the lighthouses, targets and range lights which were promised years ago have not yet been undertaken or completed. I can say to the hon. gentleman that I have heard comparisons not at all favourable to Canada made respecting the efficient service given on the American coast as compared with what is claimed to be the inadequate service on our own coast. I shall content myself with drawing the attention of the minister to the complaints I have heard made and ask him to give the question of the improvement of lighting on the upper lakes more attention than it has received for some years past.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In reply to the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Clarke) and his colleague (Mr. Osler) I may say that there was a meeting of the lake carriers some time ago and that they furnished the department with a good deal of information together with their views on what was required in connection with this particular service on the upper lakes. I can say that provision is being made now for the establishment of four or five new lights, and I think that the hydrographic survey that we are going to undertake this summer of Lake Superior will be of very great advantage to those sailing on the upper lakes. One new boat will go up there. The matter which my hon. friend from Prince Edward Island (Mr. Lefurgey) has brought up will receive consideration. I am desirous and hopeful that this service should be a success, but I think he will agree with me that the businesslike and sensible way to deal with this matter is to find out what is best to be done, to prove the practicability of the route and then to make proper provision by furnishing a boat to perform the service. I am sure that the committee will sustain me when I say that the most necessary thing now to be done is to demonstrate the practicability of the route. The matter is somewhat new to me, as I suppose it is to the majority of the hon. members of the House, except in a general way, and I have no desire to ask for a large expenditure of money until we have more information upon the subject. On the contrary I believe true economy is getting good value for the money expended and doing what is necessary. My utmost effort will be, before bringing down a report or asking for anything from parliament, to get the best possible information of the latest improvements in all directions. My hon. friend from Charlotte (Mr. Ganong) has referred to one, of course, there is not one of these improvements that is not referred to the department. It will be the desire of the officers of the department and myself to do everything within our means to improve the route and I am of the opinion that there is nothing too good in the way of lights, sirens and whistles for the improvement of this service. I shall to the best of my ability get the best information there is to be had, and I hope that I may be able to start out upon some systematic plan. Of course, we cannot do all this in a few months, or perhaps one or two years, but we desire to adopt a plan that will receive the approval of those who know most about it and which will have the confidence of every one interested in making the route better.

Mr. MONK. I would like to ask the hon. minister if it is his intention to bring down supplementary estimates in which provision will be made to carry out some of the urgent reforms that were asked for last year by the shipping interests ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I might say to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) that we expect, out of some of the estimates passed, to make a considerable improvement in the direction of the representations made to us by the shipping interests. Further, I cannot say positively at the present moment what recommendation I will bring down. Probably, if I am satisfied, that these recommendations are the best and the most practicable, I will, in the supplementary estimates, ask for some amount to carry out more of the work than is provided for here.

Mr. MONK. I asked the question because last year the underwriters and shippers represented to the government that the St. Lawrence route was defective from the gulf up to Montreal. The lights were bad, the lighthouses themselves were condemned, the system of signals, the sirens, were pronounced defective and the lighting of the river between Quebec and Montreal was pronounced to be very defective. It was urged that it was possible to come up from Quebec to Montreal at night by the expenditure of a reasonable amount of money for the lighting of the route. The high rates of insurance that discriminate so greatly against the St. Lawrence route were ascribed to these obstacles and also to the defects in the pilotage system. When this matter was discussed in the House last year the predecessor of my hon. friend denied that there was such a need. I remember distinctly that he stated that he had on the occasion of two crossings of the Atlantic called the captains of the steamers into his room and asked them if there were any improvements to suggest along the St. Lawrence route and they had said that they really could suggest nothing. The underwriters ascribed the high rates to the causes that I have just indicated to the committee and shippers ascribed the high rates of freights to these causes also. I am sure that both sides of the House would willingly vote any amount that might be required to remove those objections to the route that were so forcibly put before us last year. The shippers held an expensive inquiry, in which the government did not take part, and we had the whole of the evidence, and a resume of the evidence, put before us. This is why I think it is very important that the question should be considered by my hon. friend and that these objections which militate so strongly against the St. Lawrence route should be removed as soon as possible.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. If my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) had been in the House when I referred to this matter he would have heard me say that I had spent several hours to-day with representatives of the shipping interests and had gone over the items of the whole route, and that they are coming on another day next week to complete the consideration of the subject. There are differences of opinion on this question, I find, among the engineers and those interested, but, by meeting together and having a good business talk, I find that they generally arrive at some practical solution in regard to the various points. We are putting in three sirens in place of fog whistles. We are putting a new light on Belle Isle, and a new siren at Fame Point, and in addition to that we are asking for tenders for a new permanent lighthouse at the Traverse which will be a very important work.

Mr. SPROULE. I introduced this subject because of the specific assurance of the minister (Sir Louis Davies) last session that everything was perfection as regards the lights and buoys. As to the number of casualties that took place on the St. Lawrence last year, it will be desirable to know how many of these were due to preventable causes such as defective lights or buoys or want of sufficient water. The country will be glad to hear that the new Minister of Marine intends to adopt some intelligent plan to carry out this work, after consultation with the shippers, and we suppose we may have hopes for the future. It would seem from the departmental report that there has been some carelessness in the departement because the buoys above Three Rivers were frozen in last year, and as the report says, they will have to be replaced at considerable expense. I find that the following reference is made in the departmental report to the chartered steamer which took the place of the 'Newfield':—

> During the season of 1900, the steamer 'Newfield' was wrecked, and consequently the department found it necessary to charter a steamer for lighthouse and buoy service in Nova Scotia, but owing to lack of equipment necessary for lifting and placing buoys on board of the chartered steamer, the service was not as satisfactorily done as by the 'Newfield.'

In other words, I presume there was a good deal of loss because the steamer was not properly equipped. The sooner the minister and the vessel owners of Canada get together and adopt the best possible system of lighting and buoying the St. Lawrence so as to reduce the danger of accidents and thereby reduce insurance, the better it will be for the people of the whole country. The route is getting into disrepute because of some defects, and the sooner they are remedied the better it will be.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am afraid I will have to plead guilty to some extent for the damage done to the buoys, but I left them out at the request of the shipping interests, and perhaps I went too far to try and please them.

Mr. CALVIN. You did not. You did the right thing. It was the right thing for you to do under the circumstances.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. We did the best we could, but the frost set in two weeks earlier than usual. I hope the loss will not be very great.

Mr. FRASER. There are certain places in which there is some certainty as to leaving out the buoys each year, and there are other places where there is great uncertainty. It will always be necessary for the department to give some discretion to those in charge as to how long the buoys will be left out. In the county I represent there is a regulation that the buoys shall be taken in at a certain time, but it is wise in some seasons to leave them out longer. There is no human means of judging of the weather conditions during any particular year. It is easier to deal with this matter in Nova Scotia than it is in the St. Lawrence, but even in Nova Scotia the seasons vary. I congratulate the department and the minister on what has been done to aid navigation in the lower provinces. During the last five or six years more has been done to recognize the wants of the fishing and shipping interests than was ever done before. To-day, take the coast of Nova Scotia from Canso to Yarmouth, and particularly from Canso to Halifax, and there never was a time when better facilities were provided for those engaged in the shipping trade. I would again point out that no definite rule can be made as to when these buoys should be taken in and that the best man to judge of that is the officer in charge in the locality. One season you have to remove them in November, and another season you may leave them out till January. The rule of the department used to be elastic in this respect.

Mr. SPROULE. That is left entirely to the discretion of the minister and he can give whatever orders he likes. In so far as the buoys were left out for the purpose of testing winter navigation no complaint can be found, but these buoys which were lost were above Three Rivers, and it was not intended to test winter navigation there.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There were several belated vessels and the owners pressed very hard to have the buoys left out.

Mr. TALBOT. In the province of Quebec winter set in this year a month earlier than usual. We had winter on the 18th of October this year and we generally do not have it until the middle of November. These buoys between Quebec and Montreal were caught in the ice and that was due to the extremely cold weather which came a month earlier than any one could have anticipated.

Mr. CALVIN. There seems to be no doubt that the minister (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) did the correct thing in allowing these buoys to remain out last fall. They were left out for the benefit of the shipping, and at the urgent request of those interested in steamers sailing from the port of Montreal. I do not know how many steamers were enabled to pass down the river because those buoys were left out so late, but even if only two or three steamers were benefited thereby, the expense caused by the loss of the buoys was a mere trifle compared with the great advantage which the shipping derived from the action of the minister. It must be a great relief to this House, as I am sure it will be to the producers and shippers of this country, to know that we have a Minister of Marine whose intentions are good, who intends to be progressive, and that we are to be no longer confronted, as we were last session, with a dead stonewall. It is satisfactory to know that we will not be met with the invariable reply : Oh, this department is all right; it does nothing wrong; it cannot possibly be improved. We have a minister now who intends to improve it, and whether he will be able to do so or not remains to be seen. But it must be a matter of satisfaction to the hon. gentleman himself to know that he is at the head of a department which can do the greatest good for the transportation interests of this country. In his hands are the lighthouses and other aids to navigation throughout our great waterway, and as one who uses that great waterway in its western part, I shall welcome every help that can be given it by means of new lights and buoys. As a citizen of this country, and as one who is in the transportation business, I am quite convinced that the greatest barrier in the way of transportation along the St. Lawrence is the insurance rates to and from Montreal and Quebec, and more especially from Quebec to the sea. By whatever route our products may reach our seaboard, whether by rail or water, does not matter, they must all go outwards from Quebec to the gulf, and inwards, too, our trade must use that same waterway, and the hon. minister's attention must be specially directed to the improvements from Quebec to the sea, so that that part shall be made so perfectly safe that the insurance rates will fall to a minimum. It is nonsense for us to say that these insurance men charge too much. Let us make that part of the river perfectly safe and then the rates will come down.

Mr. McLENNAN (Inverness). I wish to make a suggestion to the hon. minister in connection with the lighting of Port Hood Harbour. The instructions last fall were that the light should be kept at the entrance of that harbour up to the 1st January. So long as that port was merely used for local business this was all right, but now its business has greatly extended. A very vigorous coal company have taken the coal mines into their hands and they are rapidly developing that property. Last January the shipping was at a considerable disadvantage owing to the fact that the lights at the entrance of the harbour were not kept in operation after the first of the month. I now throw out the suggestion to the hon. minister that sufficient supplies should be furnished the lighthouse keeper at Port Hood to keep the lights going throughout the whole season of navigation.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is a reasonable request and will be attended to.

Maintenance and repairs to lighthouses including the maintenance and pay of crew of lighthouse steamer 'Brant,' $250,000.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In making improvements to navigation, after the first expense has been incurred with the buoys and lighthouses, the only increase, of course, is in the two items of salaries and allowance of the keepers and maintenance and repairs. If parliament endorses the expenditure we would not be going into something blindly, because we can estimate pretty closely what the annual expenditure on these two items will amount to. This is the same amount as last year. Although the expenditure last year was a little larger than the estimate, on going over the items we thought we could get through on the $250,000.

Mr. BELL. Is there to be anything done about building another lighthouse in the Traverse ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The plans and specifications are now prepared, and I am now considering whether I should invite tenders or take the figures from the engineer and give the work to some competent responsible contractor. It is a very important work, one that will require to be done by men of experience and responsibility.

Mr. SPROULE. We were informed last session that the government intended to make an effort to test the navigability of the St. Lawrence during the winter to Quebec.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. We had no boat at the disposal of the department which could do that work, but I am informed that either of the new boats we will have next season will be available.

Scientific institutions and hydrographic surveys, Magnetic Observatory, $2,700.

Mr. SPROULE. Is this the magnetic observatory that is to be built in Ottawa ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, it is in Toronto.

Mr. SPROULE. It was intended to build one here, was it not ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I believe the Department of Interior has an item for that.

Mr. SPROULE. Why have two different votes ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I cannot answer that. It will come up in the Public Works estimate, and no doubt the information will be given.

Meteorological service, $81,953.

Mr. SPROULE. There is an increase of $4,360 here.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I think I am right in saying that there are one or two agencies established in the west. The cost of these together with increases of $50 each to several of the officers recommended by Mr. Stupart, who is at the head of this service, made up the increase.

Hon. Mr. SUTHERLAND (Oxford).

Hydrographic surveys, including survey of Lake Winnipeg, $26,000.

Mr. SPROULE. You have been operating on the east side of Lake Huron. Has that work been finished ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I understand it has been completed, and the officers who were engaged in it are finishing their reports.

Mr. SPROULE. Where is it intended to work this summer ? I understood that Lake Superior was to be surveyed. I suppose that when the reports concerning Lake Huron are needed, maps will be completed.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Certainly.

Mr. SPROULE. What part of Lake Superior is the work to begin at ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The head ot the hydrographic survey tells me that they will begin at the east end of Lake Superior; he is preparing his plans now.

Mr. SPROULE. I take it you will use but one boat ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes. We have a splendid steamboat.

Mr. SPROULE. Can the minister tell us when the maps of Lake Huron will be ready and how much they will cost. Inquiries are being made of us concerning these points.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I understand that when they are prepared by our officers they are submitted to the hydrographic office of Great Britain. As soon as they return they will be printed.

Mr. SPROULE. That is very indefinite.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I will make a note of the point and bring the information for the hon. gentleman.

Mr. MONK. I think we have voted about a million for my hon. friend. The committee is very thin to-night, and I do not think it should be asked to sit much longer.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am well satisfied with the progress that has been made. But there are only two small items remaining in the Marine votes and I feel sure they will not be controversial, as they are the usual votes and there are no increases.

Some resolutions reported.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

Return showing :—1. Whether the government or any member thereof, by letter or otherwise, gave any public or private assurance that in the selection of officers for the Canadian South Africa constabulary which left for South Africa last year, preference would be given to those Canadian officers who have served in South Africa and to other officers of the Canadian militia.

2. What persons, officers or others, applied for commissions in said constabulary ? What is the military record of each, either in Canada, South Africa or elsewhere ?

3. (a) What officers were selected and appointed ; (b) What is the military record of each ?

4. Who of those selected as officers had never before been officers ?

5. Whether there were enough applications from officers of the Canadian militia to officer the constabulary, and the reason for their being passed over, and men without qualifications, if there were any such, selected ?

6. How many commissioned officers of the Canadian militia were enlisted in the first and second contingents, in the Royal Canadian regiment, the Canadian mounted infantry, the Royal Canadian dragoons, and the Canadian artillery. as (a) non-commissioned officers, and (b) as men ?

7. How many non-commissioned officers and men of the permanent corps were enlisted in the corps named in question. How many of these were non-commissioned officers in South Africa. (c) Why were the commissioned officers enlisted in the corps as privates, not given the non-commissions.—Mr. Monk—by Mr. Sproule.

Copies of all letters, telegrams and other correspondence between the Department of Labour and the Canadian Pacific railway, Mr. John Wilson, and other parties, in respect of alleged violations of the Alien Labour Law, between June 1st, and September 1st, 1901. Also, between officers of the Immigration Department and the Canadian Pacific Railway.—Mr. Puttee.

Return of all items of expenditure during the year ended June 30, 1901, in connection with the Intercolonial and Prince Edward Island Railways respectively, charged to revenue and subsequently transferred to capital account, with a statement of the reasons for such transfer.—Mr. Barker.

Copies of all accounts, vouchers, reports, contracts, minutes, and other documents relating to the items of expenditure charged to revenue account, and afterwards transferred to capital account in connection with the Intercolonial and Prince Edward Island Railway, respectivey, during the year ending 30th June, 1901.—Mr. Barker.

On motion of the Minister of Finance, House adjourned at 11.25 p,m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, February 28, 1902

The SPEAKER took the chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 12) respecting the Edmonton and Slave Lake Railway Company.—Hon. Mr. Costigan.

Bill (No. 13) respecting the Canada and Michigan Bridge and Tunnel Company.—Mr. Cowan.

Bill (No. 14) to incorporate the Indian River Railway Company.—Mr. Béland.

Bill (No. 15) respecting the River St. Clair Railway Bridge and Tunnel Company.—Mr. Ingram.

Bill (No. 16) respecting the Manitoba and North-western Railway Company of Canada.—Mr. Douglas.

Bill (No. 17) to incorporate the Lake Bennett Railway Company.—Mr. Morrison.

Bill (No. 18) to incorporate the Velvet (Rossland) Mine Railway Company.—Mr. Galliher.

Bill (No. 19) relating to the Regina Law Library.—Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick.

MARCONI'S WIRELESS TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

On the Order being called for :

First reading of Bill entitled : 'An Act to confirm an agreement between the Government of Canada and Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company, Limited.'

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). I wish, Mr. Speaker, that this Order should be dropped as the matter will be dealt with in another way.

Order dropped.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Department of Trade and Commerce, including J. P. Nutting, at $2,000, and J. Byrnes at $1,450, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $12,690.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright). I might explain to my hon. friends opposite that, owing to the inspectorship having been added to this department, they will find an increase here of one officer in the item of first-class clerks, who has been transferred from Inland Revenue to our office. With respect to the other matters of increases they will observe they are all of the $50 order with the exception of one, a chief clerk, Mr. J. Byrnes. Mr. Nutting, who is to receive $100, is an officer of long standing in the service and has now a pretty high rank, in fact, virtually acting deputy.

Mr. SPROULE. Is his place filled in the Inland Revenue branch by another man, or is the expenses of the Inland Revenue decreased by that amount ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. It is decreased.

Mr. SPROULE. In connection with the work done by the inspectors, there has been considerable adverse criticism of the system. Would the minister inform us how the system has worked ?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. My experience is not quite sufficient to enable me to answer that fully. I would just mention to my hon. friend that an item will come up under the head of grain inspection, when I shall probably be able to give the fullest explanation. Somewhere at the very close he will find that that item will come up. One complaint which was made to me, and I think it was made before I took over this branch, was that very large fees had been paid, I think amounting to as high as $10,000 or $12,000, to these inspectors ; and it was thought better to put them on salary and to have the fees paid into the general treasury, than to allow these gentlemen to go on collecting these very large amounts. That is the chief thing. Of course if there are any points in which the trade has occasion to complain, we should be glad to look into the matter and rectify it to the best of our ability. Then a complaint has been made, and is now being investigated, so far as I remember, that there is an unnecessary number of inspections, and that some of them might well be done away with. We are investigating that matter to see if it can be remedied. Of course it is our object to see that the trade is harassed as little as possible ; at the same time if the inspection is to go on at all the grain has to pass through the hands of an inspector. But later on that will be taken up. On page 87, item 276, my hon. friend will see that the whole matter will come up, and then it will be fully discussed.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I observe that on this page there are, I think, 24 items altogether and with respect to 13 of them the Civil Service Act is repealed pro tanto. Does the hon. gentleman think that is a desirable style of legislation—to have an Act which is repealed with regard to any particular item whenever it is found convenient to repeal it ? The estimates are sent up to the other House under a condition that they must either accept the whole appropriation Bill or reject the whole of it. I have brought the matter to the attention of the House on other occasions, and I cannot allow this to pass without putting in my protest against this practical repeal of the Civil Service Act. The Act should be amended if it cannot be observed. It does not seem to me to be a good system, and I do not think my hon. friend will say it is a good system to pursue with reference to this Act.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. There is a great deal in what my hon. friend says. But at the same time he will see that often great inequalities have crept into the payments of many of these officers. In the case of Mr. Nutting, for a considerable number of years he received no increase at all, and this is virtually giving him the statutory increases which in the ordinary course he would have been receiving. In the other case it is only a statutory increase of $50. But this gentleman had been, as I understand, at the head of the second service class for a considerable time, and when he was put into my department and given charge of a rather important branch, it was thought the least we could do would be to give him $50 as well as the rank of first-class clerk. While I candidly admit that both legally and otherwise the hon. gentleman is right and we ought not to have so many of these cases, still these are very small sins, as he will observe.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). These are the pin-pricks which make our life intolerable on this side of the House. I want to say to my hon. friend that I am not finding any fault with these gentlemen, or criticising the increases to them in any way, for I have no doubt they are capable gentlemen and deserving of the increases granted. My remarks are applicable to the system. It seems to me a bad system, and that we would do better to amend the Act so as to confer some greater discretion, if necessary, on the different departments, than to repeal it from time to time in a way which prevents the Upper House from dealing with it. I am not sure that the Senate would not be perfectly justified in throwing out the whole appropriation Bill on this account. They are not supposed to amend that Bill at all, but must either reject or accept it in its entirety. The result is that an Act which they have passed is being repealed by this House in such a way that they have not one word as to the wisdom or unwisdom of the proposed repeal. That is not a satisfactory way of conducting legislation, and I am glad that, so far as the principle is concerned, the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce agrees in the view I have stated.

Department of Trade and Commerce—Clerical and other assistance notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $2,500 ; printing and stationery, $1,700 ; sundries, $2,800 ; total, $7,000.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. This increase is caused exclusively by the addition of grain inspectors to my department.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the mode adopted for the selecting and appointing of grain inspectors ?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. That will come up more particularly under item 276, on page 83, which is a special vote taken for these inspectors, under the General Inspection Act.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the hon. gentleman bring down a list of the inspectors, their salaries, stations, and so on ?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. Certainly.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Where is the printing done ?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. It is all done at the Printing Bureau, I am informed.

Salaries and disbursements of fishery inspectors, overseers and guardians, $85,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would like to have one item in connection with the Marine and Fisheries Department reserved for any remarks in connection with the department by gentlemen not present.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There will be items in the supplementary estimates, both for the current and coming year, on which any information may be asked.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Before considering the item before the committee, I would like to take this opportunity of answering one or two questions put by the hon. member for Grey with regard to a hydrographic survey. In connection with the hydrographic survey on the lakes, Mr. Stewart, the officer in charge, states that all the work on Lake Huron has been completed. The Americans having finished their work, the whole lake is therefore surveyed. The charts are about completed and will be forwarded to the hydrographic office in London, for engraving and publication. The expenses attending the printing, publication and issuing is made by the hydrographic office. As to the charts that have been issued, all, except this last season have been completed, accepted by the hydrographic office and will be on sale by the opening of navigation. The proof of the last one issued was received yesterday. As to the next year's operation, Mr. Stewart will leave with his staff on board of the 'Lord Stanley' for the eastern end of Lake Superior, working from Point Aux Pins westward. Although the whole work has been completed on the American side, there is only the demarcation of the shore line on the Canadian side, and Mr. Stewart thinks that this work will probably occupy several years. With regard to the question put by the hon. member for North Grey, as to whether any award has been made to Captain McDougall, who had saved a number of lives from an American barge or steamer, and who had been given a very handsome testimonial for his conduct by the United States, I beg to say that I have looked up the records in the department and cannot find record of any application for an award to Captain McDougall. Otherwise his case would have received every attention.

Mr. SPROULE. Where can these hydrographic charts be got. Will they be on sale.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. They can be got at the Printing Bureau and also at Montreal, Quebec and Toronto. My deputy will have a circular sent to the hon. gentleman stating the places where these charts may be obtained.

In answer to the hon. member for Peel, with a regard to the silver medals promised to the men who saved life at Port Credit, Ontario, I may tell the hon. gentleman that I made inquiries by telegram and was informed that they were arranging to present these medals at an early date and I will see that this is carried out at once, and I thank him for drawing my attention to this matter. My hon. friend from Inverness (Mr. McLennan) wanted information about the light at Port Hood. I have looked into the matter and have directed that the Port Hood light be kept in operation during the season of navigation.

Mr. CLARKE. I would like to put the hon. minister a further question respecting a matter to which I drew his attention last night. I asked him whether he had received a petition from the National Association of Marine Engineers with regard to amendments they desired to the Steamboat Inspection Act. I understood him to say that he had received a petition and also had met a deputation from that body. Has the hon. minister anything further to communicate to us regarding the result of his meeting with that deputation ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I said further that after I had heard the deputation, the chairman of the Board of Examiners for the steamship engineers had made out a report on the various matters which came up before us. I also had an interview with the president of the association this morning, at which the chief officer of the department was present. The president of the association and the chairman of steamboat inspection of the department came to an agreement with regard to several matters, and after I have had an opportunity of studying the report following that interview, I intend to give the president of the association another meeting with regard to a few matters still left unsettled.

Mr. SPROULE. I was about to ask whether there had been anything done to define our rights in the fisheries, under the decision of the Privy Council. A few years ago the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council decided that the fisheries belonged to the provinces with the exception of some ocean fisheries, and we naturally expected that there would be a reduction in the cost of looking after them. Last year, however, there was an increase in the item of salaries and disbursements of fishery inspectors, overseers, and guardians amounting to $15,000, instead of a decrease, and I notice that this year the item is $85,000, the same as last. Has the government reached any agreement with the provinces as to the rights we have or the duties we are required to perform? And would it not be possible to reduce the expenditure on this item in view of the fact that the fisheries have been declared to be the property of the provinces? There ought to be some understanding between the Dominion and the several provinces on this matter.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There really has been no progress made since last session with regard to this matter. The decision of the Privy Council is difficult to understand. So far as I have been able to inform myself, after looking into the communications between the different provinces and the department, the parties seem to be further away from an agreement as to the meaning of this matter than when they started. It appears to me, not being a lawyer, that this matter will have to be settled by one or other of two courses. So far as the present condition of affairs, it is certainly very unsatisfactory. Either the points in dispute must be referred to some tribunal for settlement, and both the Dominion and the provinces must abide by that decision, or there must be a conference and an agreement reached satisfactory to both parties. Before coming directly to the estimates, I may say that we all recognize the great importance of the fisheries of the Dominion and the necessity of having proper regulations to govern them. This one point is not in dispute—that the power to regulate the fisheries remains within the jurisdiction of the Dominion. That being the case, I think all will agree that, until some arrangement is made, it is the duty of the Dominion to see that the regulations are enforced and the fisheries protected. With regard to the item to which my hon. friend referred, that of $85,000, I find that at the time the judgment was given, the minister reduced the item, for some reason or other, by $25,000 or $30,000. It so remained, I think, for two years. But the expenditure remained the same as it had been and the result was a deficit, which, I believe, was made up by a supplementary vote last session. After careful investigation it is found that nothing less than $85,000 would do for this item. Previously, I think, it was $90,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think it is very desirable indeed that any difficulties with regard to the relative position of the Dominion and the provinces, if there are any such, should be settled at once. I have not recently examined the judgment of the Privy Council and am not sure now how far it goes. But I think that the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries, during last session of parliament, told us that negotiations were to be had, or a further case submitted to the courts for the purpose of determining certain further questions. I may point out to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. James Sutherland) that the matter is of some immediate importance, because, as I understand, the provinces are about making a claim upon the government of Canada in respect of the fisheries award. I believe that the Attorney General of the province of New Brunswick has recently announced to the people of that province in an election manifesto that he proposed to make, or has made, a formal claim on this government for a portion of that award. If, while we are subject to a claim of that kind, we continue to pay for services, which, perhaps, legitimately belong to the different provinces, we are, certainly, not pursuing a very wise course. If these difficulties and uncertainties exist I would suggest to the hon. minister that he should lose no time in putting himself in communication with the Department of Justice and having a matter so serious dealt with at once.

Mr. WADE. In the decision of the Privy Council on this question and others that were submitted by the Dominion and the provinces, there are specific findings that it is well to understand. It was contended on the part of the Dominion that the Dominion had the proprietary right in certain of the fisheries. That was settled adversely to the Dominion, it being held that proprietary right of the fisheries were vested in the provinces or in the individuals who possessed the same at the time of the British North America Act. But it was also held that the Dominion has absolute control, so far as the regulating is concerned, and that in regulating, they can interfere to any extent with the proprietary rights, except to the extent of granting an absolute right of fishery to other parties. It is also decided that the Dominion, under subsections 3 and 12, has the right to raise a revenue by taxation on the fisheries by way of license, and that the provinces have a similar right. The whole question is reduced by that judgment, as I understand it, to this—that the Dominion government has the sole right to regulate the fisheries and the provinces cannot interfere with that in the slightest degree. Thus, the Department of Marine and Fisheries is left in the same position as before in this matter and must make the same expenditure as before, in order to enforce the law, because this parliament is the only parliament that has power to make regulations about the fisheries. Back of this, there is a question that may arise in the future, and that is whether the Dominion has or has not, in days past, undertaken to give an exclusive right of fishery when they granted licenses for the use of traps and other engines for the capture of fish. If they did so, the question arises whether the parties who paid these license fees supposing that they were receiving exclusive rights of fishery would have a claim upon the Dominion for the refund of that money. But this does not question in any way the obligation upon the department to make and enforce fishery regulations, for, in that respect, the provinces are absolutely powerless.

Mr. SPROULE. I take it that a great part of what the hon. gentleman (Mr. Wade) has told us was generally known. What I wished to know was whether any effort was being made to have a conference with the provinces with a view to a determination of the powers of either side.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There have been a great many negotiations in this direction. I may explain that, by agreement, we still receive all the revenues, except from the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, pending final arrangements. Negotiations have gone so far that we have in the department now a memorandum from the province of Quebec of a case that they would like us to join in submitting to the courts. The province of Quebec also has recently sent a very formidable statement of claim with regard to the province's rights in the matter. I agree with the leader of the opposition that, as soon as possible, some conclusion must be come to with regard to these difficulties. It will probably be slow work at the best, but it is my intention, as far as I can, with the assistance of the Department of Justice, to put the matter in shape and have it settled.

Mr. SPROULE. Who issues the licenses, the Dominion or the provinces ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The province, in the case of Ontario and Quebec ; but, in the other provinces, the Dominion.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood the hon. member for Annapolis (Mr. Wade) to say that it was clearly decided by the Privy Council that both the province and the Dominion have the right to raise revenue from the fisheries. In what way does the Dominion propose to raise a revenue to recoup us for looking after the fisheries and controling them ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is one of the matters that parliament has to decide after these other matters are settled. We have not taken action to make up the loss of revenue. If the hon. gentleman had understood me he would have understood that we have receipts as formerly, except from Ontario and Quebec. Last year these receipts were about $45,000.

Mr. EMMERSON. Although under the decision, territorial rights or powers are held by the provinces it does not in any way relieve the Dominion from the obligation it is under to protect the fisheries. The Dominion has all the powers to regulate and even to restrain the fishery rights and carrying with it those powers certainly it carries with it the onus of protection. Now, in the province of New Brunswick they have enacted legislation giving power to the government to enter into negotiations and to lease the territorial rights to the Dominion. It would seem to me to be in the best interests of the provinces generally and indeed of the Dominion that the Dominion should control and should have all the fishery rights, even to the territorial rights. From the standpoint of the Dominion and from the standpoint of our trade and navigation all interests combine and unite in pointing to the Dominion as the proper authority. Under these circumstances it would seem to me that it would be wise on the part of the Department of Marine and Fisheries to conclude negotiations at as early a date as convenient and where possible with the several provinces with a view of acquiring the rights of the provinces.

Mr. SPROULE. I want to say in connection with this matter that I understand that we have the right to regulate and protect the fisheries ; that is to say the size of the mesh of the net, to regulate the close season and to prescribe the kind of fish traps to be used. But, the question is : If we get no revenue from it, is it worth our while to protect the fisheries all over the country ? If we have the right over and above the provinces to raise a revenue upon the sale of fishing licenses or from some other source had we not better avail ourselves of it, because otherwise the Dominion will be paying out money for doing the work of the provinces ? As this decision has been given some time ago, it would seem to be desirable for the government to endeavour at the earliest possible moment to reach some conclusion with the provinces in regard to the rights we have, the duties we must perform and where the revenue will come from to pay the expenses incurred in protecting the fisheries.

Mr. WADE. I would like to draw the hon. gentleman's attention to the fact that the Dominion has been collecting a revenue from these fisheries for years by selling licenses to parties to fish with seines and fish traps. All along the coast of Nova Scotia these licenses have been sold by the Dominion authorities and the revenue derived from them has come to the Dominion.

Mr. SPROULE. The question is whether the Dominion shall be permitted to retain that revenue.

Mr. FRASER. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) must understand the difficulty in the distribution of powers. It is not an easy matter with a question over which the local legislature may have a partial authority and in which the Dominion may have rights to decide it as quickly as the hon. gentleman thinks. But, what I rose to say was that I dissent entirely from the proposition he makes: It is no difference if the Dominion has only such power to look after our fisheries, it must not do it unless it gets a revenue out of it. That is a proposition, I think, which must not be entertained for a moment. If the Dominion alone can do certain things it makes no difference whether we get a revenue or not. The Dominion must do it in the interests of the fisheries and the people of Canada. You cannot decide a question by saying that it simply costs so much and we must get so much for performing this duty or we will not do anything at all.

Mr. SPROULE. I did not pretend to advocate any such doctrine. What I suggested was that if the provinces get all the revenue and all the advantages from the fisheries, would it not be desirable to have a conference with the provinces and to decide who shall assume the full responsibility of protecting the fisheries.

Mr. FRASER. The government can only do what they have power to do. The argument, if I understand it, meant, that while the power might be inherent in one parliament to do a certain thing, unless it paid, parliament should not do it.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman must not forget that the decision explicitly said that we had joint powers with the provinces.

Mr. FRASER. Very able lawyers differ about what it means.

Mr. COCHRANE. They always do.

Mr. EMMERSON. There is this anomaly, that while the territorial right is in the provinces, the Dominion may adopt regulations making entirely valueless these territorial rights; in other words, the Dominion, under its powers, can, by regulation, absolutely prohibit and restrain the use of a river in respect to its fisheries, and yet the territorial right is in the provinces.

Mr. SPROULE. A stronger reason for coming to an amicable understanding.

Mr. EMMERSON. I quite agree with what the hon. gentleman says with respect to the desirability of coming to an arrangement, but pending such the Dominion must expend the money in order to protect the fisheries and carry out the regulations, it alone having the power. The provinces have no power in that direction at all.

Mr. GANONG. Would the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) kindly tell us at what time that legislation was passed in New Brunswick to which he referred?

Mr. EMMERSON. In 1900.

Mr. GANONG. I am really pleased to hear the hon. gentleman saying this. That is not the tune we got in Charlotte when he was running his last election. The tune there which was sung to the poor fishermen was this: These are the fellows that will have you by the throat if you do not vote for the local government. To-day he has changed his tune, and it is a very different story to that which we heard in the election.

Mr. HACKETT. In connection with this question, I desire to offer an observation or two. We had a very interesting decision by the Supreme Court of Prince Edward Island in regard to this question a few days ago. The farmers of Prince Edward Island have for the last twenty or thirty years been digging mussel mud in the beds of the rivers for the purpose of fertilizing their farms. A regulation was passed by the department that no farmer should use his mud machine within 200 yards of a live oyster bed. They submitted to that, but now we find the department has placed an arbitrary line across certain rivers restricting the farmers from using this mussel mud for the purpose of fertilizing their farms. While the oyster fishery in Prince Edward Island is a very important fishery, the farming industry is also equally important, and if you restrict the farmer from taking his mussel mud within 200 yards of the live oyster bed, you will give full protection to the oyster fishery. The decision in the Supreme Court was this: Up the North river, I remember very well, an oyster fishery, or a bed for the protection of the oyster, was set aside by the government of Canada some years ago. A farmer in the prosecution of his industry came along and placed his mud digger within the limits as laid down by the government of Canada. Now, we wish to protect this oyster fishery, but you will see that you have an oyster bed of so many hundred yards square. You have a live oyster bed that must be protected by the government, but can you prevent the farmer from coming along and prosecuting his industry in the vicinity of that oyster bed? It is true the Supreme Court of Prince Edward Island decided that the government of Canada had the right to pass these rules and regulations, but if they were to be enforced, every farmer would be debarred from getting this valuable fertilizer in the vicinity of these oyster beds. I asked the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries a question a few days ago in connection with the lines drawn across the rivers in Prince Edward Island. Is it the intention on the Trout river and the Biddeford river in Prince county that no farmer shall be allowed to take mussel mud except within the lines he has defined?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In reply to the hon. gentleman, I would say that when he brought the matter to my attention the other day and when another application was made to the department, I looked into it and came to the conclusion that a good deal of discretion might be used in enforcing these regulations. I gave instructions to the principal officer of the department in charge on the island that he was not to enforce the regulations strictly unless it was really necessary to protect the oyster beds. I think we will all agree that it is necessary to protect the oyster beds, but otherwise I think a great deal of discretion can be left to the officers as to whether this practice will really destroy valuable beds or not. I have issued instructions to that effect.

Mr. EMMERSON. There is very little connection between the subject now under discussion in this committee and the elections which were held in New Brunswick in 1899.

Mr. GANONG. Not just now, but there was then.

Mr. EMMERSON. I fear that the hon. gentleman's memory fails him in respect to the attitude of the local government of that day. I can only say that the opinions which I have expressed here to-day were the opinions expressed by me, not merely in other counties in New Brunswick, but in the county of Charlotte. I know that my hon. friend (Mr. Ganong) feels a little sore with respect to that election, because he failed to carry out the pledge which he gave to the celebrated Moncton convention to send four Conservatives to the New Brunswick Legislature. That probably is a sore spot with him.

Mr. GANONG. I have to say that while the hon. gentleman (Mr. Emmerson) does not mean to misrepresent me, his statement is absolutely untrue. I do not place the responsibility at the doors of my hon. friend, because I do not believe he would make the statement if he knew it to be untrue. Whether the hon. gentleman (Mr. Emmerson) made the statement or not, these men who followed him and did his work certainly said so, for I was at their meeting when they did say it.

Mr. EMMERSON. I spoke there at three different places.

Mr. GANONG. Perhaps the hon. gentleman (Mr. Emmerson) was like the ex-Minister of Marine ; instead of talking to fishermen he went to talk to the farmers. That was usually the way down there.

Mr. EMMERSON. I talked with pretty good effect in the county of Charlotte.

Mr. SPROULE. Do I understand that Ontario and Quebec issue licenses and refuse to pay the revenue over to the Dominion Treasury while the other provinces do pay us the revenue.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) is practically correct if not technically so. So far as the other provinces are concerned we go on collecting the revenue by arrangement just as in the past. This vote amounts to some $300,000, and even if all the provinces collected the revenue, the House might come to the conclusion that it was desirable to vote money for the protection of the fisheries, the management of fish breeding establishments and so on. The hon. gentleman is quite correct in saying that Ontario and Quebec now collect the license fees, which formerly brought in a revenue of some $40,000 or $45,000 per annum to the Dominion, and we do not now receive any revenue from that source in these two provinces.

Mr. INGRAM. This appropriation is for the purpose of protecting the fisheries, and I wish to draw the attention of the Minister to what is now being done on Lake Erie. Before the province of Ontario took hold of the fishing rights the Dominion government limited the number of licenses ; but I am informed that the Ontario government proposes now to increase the number of licenses by some sixty or seventy along the Lake Erie front. If that is done it will be only a matter of a year or two when the valuable fishing grounds there are depleted. If the Dominion government had any control over the matter I could understand that we should vote money for the protection of the fisheries whose duty it would or ought to be to protect the fisheries and that can be done largely by limiting the number of licenses.

Mr. HACKETT. I want to say that this question of the protection of the oyster fishery, and allowing the farmers of Prince Edward Island to take mussel mud in the rivers is a very important question with us. The minister said that in connection with these two lines drawn across the Trout river and the Biddeford river, that the enforcement of that arrangement will be left entirely to the discretion of the local officers. You have quite a sufficient quantity of mussel mud for the use of farmers irrespective and clear altogether of the oyster beds. The first duty of this government is to protect the oyster fisheries and at the same time they can allow the farmer to prosecute his industry by getting this valuable fertilizer from the beds of our rivers. If you allow this matter to rest altogether in the hands of the local officers you may have partisanship. You may have one man digging mussel mud and taking it to his farm, while another man of a different political stripe will be prohibited from doing so. The government should not allow this matter to remain altogether in the hands of the local officers.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The authority of the inspector in Prince Edward Island to exercise his discretion in this matter is subject to the approval of the department. I do not think there can be any partisanship because the officer once he decides that they can take mussel mud out of a certain place, cannot interfere with any one from taking it there.

Mr. PORTER. This vote includes the salary of a certain official residing in the county of Hastings, who had the honour of representing East Hastings for one parliament, who at the last general elections was defeated by the electors, and who shortly after that was appointed to the position of Inspector of Fisheries. I refer to Mr. Hurley, the ex-member for East Hastings. I understand that the principle is laid down by the government, that officials of the government should not take an active part in elections, and certain officers have been dismissed because it was alleged they did take an active part in politics. I wish to state that this official to whom I have referred, during the late by-election in the adjoining riding of West Hastings, was found to be active during the whole of that election. I am happy to say that his efforts to defeat the Conservative candidate were not successful. I am, however, unhappy to say that a petition has been lodged protesting the result of that election, and this officer whom I have mentioned, was, I am informed, upon authority on which I can safely rely, the very gentleman who solicited the petitioner to sign the petition against the return of the present member for West Hastings (Mr. Porter). I wish now to ask from the hon. minister (Hon. Mr. Sutherland). I know much of this vote is intended to pay the inspector of fisheries for his duties as inspector, and what proportion of it is intended to remunerate him for the part he took in the late election.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There is no part of this vote intended to pay him for work in the elections. It is contrary to the rules of the department that its officers should take an active part in elections. From what I know of my friend and late colleague here (Mr. Hurley) and from what I have seen of him since I have been at the head of the department, I would be surprised to hear that he took any active part in politics. I met Mr. Hurley in Ottawa one day when he was on business with the department, and forgetting for the moment I made some reference to politics to him, and Mr. Hurley at once replied : I do not talk any politics now. It will be seen that he was very guarded in his political utterances even when speaking to me.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Mr. Hurley when a member of this House won the respect of every one who knew him, and I do not think it can be possible that he would be indiscreet enough to take a prominent part in the election. My hon. friend (Mr. Porter) ought to be pleased to have such a large majority, and probably if he knew the truth this officer of my department may have voted for him.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Mr. INGRAM. Has the department any control over the number of licenses granted by the Ontario government ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No. That opens up the whole question of jurisdiction. I suppose that if we thought the province was issuing too great a number of licenses, or were depleting or injuring these valuable fisheries by any action they took, we might by a regulation indirectly interfere with them. Directly, we would have nothing to say about the number of licenses they could issue.

Mr. INGRAM. I have the best authority for making the statement that it is the intention of the Ontario government to increase the number of licenses by sixty or seventy , and if they do that they will certainly deplete the fisheries along the frontier of Lake Erie. Is it not the duty of the department to communicate with the Ontario government to find out if this report is true, and if so to take action to prevent them issuing these licenses ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is a matter which would come under the notice of the inspectors, and we have had no report from any inspector with regard to it. We might by arrangement as the hon. gentleman suggests, extend the close season or we might allow them to fish one week out of three or something of that kind.

Mr. BLAIN. I suppose the hon. minister would have no objection to allowing the correspondence respecting the presenting of those medals, to which I referred last night, to be placed at the disposal of the committee ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. None at all. I found on inquiry there had been some delay—not purposely but through carelessness—and I at once telegraphed and got a reply saying that the matter would be attended to at once.

Mr. BLAIN. I must say that the hon. minister was prompt in the answer he gave, but I explained last night that the department had decided to give to the captain of that life-saving crew a silver watch and to each member of the crew five dollars, and that the watch and the money were sent up to Port Credit. But for some unexplained reason the presentation was never made. On whose recommedation was the change made by which each member of their crew, instead of getting five dollars, is to get a medal ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not remember the hon. gentleman making any reference to that last night, and did not look into that phase of the matter, but will do so and give him what information I can obtain.

Mr. SPROULE. It may be all very well for the hon. and amiable Minister of Marine and Fisheries to dismiss the subject introduced by my hon. friend from West Hastings with a good-natured smile, but when we find a flagrant violation of the principle which the hon. gentleman admits, namely, that officials of the government should not take part in elections, we cannot allow the hon. gentleman to get rid of the matter in that off-hand way. When Conservatives are guilty of the same offence they are summarily dismissed. Is the hon. gentleman not going to apply the same treatment to his own political friends ? Are they to be allowed to interfere in a political campaign without incurring any penalty ? The hon. member for West Hastings has told this House that he was informed on authority which he believed to be absolutely correct, that this man had got up an election petition and solicited signatures, and possibly may have committed other improper acts, in view of the official position he holds, and all the minister has to say in reply is to pass it off with a wave of the hand and a good-natured smile. But the country will insist on something more, because otherwise we will have friends of the government in office doing with perfect immunity the very thing for doing which Conservative office-holders have been over and over again dismissed and dismissed without trial.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think it was during either the second or the first session that I had the honour of a seat in parliament that the principle was laid down by the leader of the hon. minister, that if any civil servant undertook to devote his attention to politics and interfere in elections, he would be given full liberty to devote his whole time to that purpose. That is a very good principle, if carried out impartially, but not if it be used merely for the purpose of dismissing office holders whose political convictions are opposed to those of the party in power. That doctrine laid down by the leader of the government has been frequently applied in my own constituency. A postmaster in the county of Halifax was very recently dismissed from office solely on the ground that he had taken part in the last election and was dismissed without any trial, although he was prepared to prove that the charge was without foundation. Unless this declaration of the leader of the government was intended merely to humbug the public, the statement of my hon. friend from West Hastings is deserving of investigation at the hands of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. I do not ask that this official should be dismissed on the mere statement of the hon. member for Hastings that he had interfered in the elections, although that is the kind of justice that has been meted out to many Conservative office-holders—and one of them I might name in my constituency, who was dismissed from office during the past year—but we are certainly entitled to demand that an investigation he held.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I understood my hon. friend from West Hastings to have brought this matter up in a good-natured way, and did not understand him to have accused the inspector of taking part in an election, but simply of having spoken as he should not have done to some person in connection with the petition filed. I agreed with the hon. gentleman that that was a very injudicious and improper thing for this official to do, and it is my intention to call his attention to the statement and ask for an explanation. I agree with my hon. friend that men holding positions in the public service cannot be too careful. I have always insisted upon their being careful. But I cannot agree with the hon. gentleman in his sweeping statement regarding dismissals of Conservatives from office, and I think that on reflection he will admit that a very small proportion indeed have been dismissed on account of politics. And those who have been, he will find have been more injudicious than the gentleman referred to, and have taken more active part in the different campaigns. For my part I am inclined to take a broad view with regard to this matter, because after all in many cases it is simply gossip started by somebody who may want the job himself. However, I agree in the principle laid down, and, so far as I am concerned, will see that this matter is investigated and the officer punished if guilty.

Mr. GANONG. Has the hon. minister decided upon any action with regard to the number of licenses for fish weirs issued in the county of Charlotte ? Last year we had trouble. Many fishermen made their application as usual, having received no notice, and they were only notified that they would not be allowed to build weirs after they had provided themselves with the necessary material. The matter was then brought to the notice of the minister, and he decided to allow the weirs to be built. Some applications this year, I understand, have been refused, although the parties are distant the required distance, 1,000 feet or more, from the weirs owned by their neighbours. What I wish to call attention to is the fact that while the department has issued 300 or 400 linceses, these weirs are not all built, but the issue of these licenses prevents others building. Would it not be better to issue 25 per cent of these licenses—that being the proportion not built—to people who will build. We have lost in population simply because the fisheries have not been as well looked after as they should have been, and I am not attributing the blame to the Liberal government alone. I think our people should be allowed to take advantage of all the catch within their reach. We hear a good deal about the depletion of the fisheries, but if any one had been in Charlotte county this year and seen the thousands of hogsheads of fish taken out of the sea there, he would not have concluded there was much chance of depletion in the sardine fisheries. There were probably more fish in the inshore waters this year than has been known in the history of the sardine business.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This is a matter upon which the Minister would hardly come to a decision without consulting the officers of the department. Every hon. gentleman who has taken any interest in these matters knows that there are great differences of opinion upon these subjects and knows also that the quantity of fish varies greatly with the different seasons. It may be that the regulation in this case is too strict. I will take the matter up with the officer in charge of this branch and will let the hon. gentleman know the decision of the government.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). Who is the present inspector of fisheries for Manitoba? Has Mr. Colcleugh, who was inspector, been dismissed, or has he resigned ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Mr. W. S. Young is the present inspector.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). What is his salary ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Twelve hundred dollars.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). What was his previous business ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I understand he was a hardware merchant.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). He had no previous training, then, in this particular line ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am not aware that any expert knowledge is required of the occupant of this position. I should suppose that any sensible man could discharge the duties of the office.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). Was Mr. Colcleugh forced to resign or was he dismissed ? If he was dismissed, will the minister say that it was because everything was not in good shape in connection with the fisheries ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. My information is that he resigned voluntarily.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). Can the minister tell us whether everything was found in good shape or not ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have not the report, but I will look it up.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). Has a separate officer been appointed for the hatchery or is the management of the hatchery part of the duty of the inspector of fisheries ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The inspector is looking after the hatchery. An expert was sent up there to see about it.

Mr. ROCHE (Marquette). Is it the intention of the government to appoint a separate officer as manager of the hatchery ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Not at present.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Before the item passes, I would like to ascertain the views of the Minister of Justice with regard to the necessity of having questions as to the respective rights of the Dominion and the provinces in the fisheries again submitted to the courts. I understood the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries to tell us last year that it was, in his opinion, necessary, or, at least, desirable, that some other question should be submitted. I think, also, he expressed his intention of having that course adopted at an early day. From the views that have been put forward by my hon. friend from Annapolis (Mr. Wade) and my hon. friend from Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson), apparently the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries was not correct in the views he then expressed. I would like to know the views of the Minister of Justice with regard to that, and whether he considers it necessary to adopt such a course.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. The judgment of the Privy Council, is in my opinion, extremely confused and indistinct. In fact, were I not speaking of a decision of the highest court of the empire, I would be tempted to say that it is self-contradictory in its terms. However, I think we can safely say that there are two points which are firmly and clearly established. One is that the provinces have all the territorial powers as regards fisheries, and the other—but I had better read from the text so as to have it absolutely correct :—

> That the enactment of fishery regulations and restrictions is within the exclusive competence of the Dominion legislature and is not within the powers of the provincial legislatures.

Therefore, we have this condition of things, it seems to me, that the territorial rights as regards the fisheries are vested in the provinces and that the regulating of the fisheries is under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Dominion parliament. Now, in my view, speaking without very much preparation on the subject, I would be inclined to consider that the federal government can, irrespective of locality, declare that no one shall fish generally without paying a fishing fee or tax to the department; that they can also determine the close season, regulate the size of boats, license the boats—they can do all those things that have reference to the general regulation of the fisheries. Coming to the special question which the leader of the opposition has put, I would be disposed to say that the Dominion and the provinces might get together and, through their representatives, come to an agreement as to how this judgment is to be construed. If they are not prepared to do that, then, because of the vague and indistinct terms in which the judgment is couched it will be necessary to submit further questions to the court for the purpose of construing the judgment of the Privy Council.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Does my hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) understand that the duty of protection would follow the territorial rights or the power of regulation?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I think that would follow the power of regulation. In fact, I think there are very much larger powers vested in the Dominion than is at the present time generally admitted. I think the provinces are under an entirely erroneous impression with regard to this judgment. They are told virtually, if I may interpret the judgment: You are the proprietors of this property, but you have no control over it. I think the sooner we define and settle these questions the better for all concerned. The present Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. James Sutherland) has begun discussing the matter with the department; and, if I may say so, I am ready to take the matter up and have it disposed of almost immediately. It may be anomalous to ask a court to construe its own judgment, but if we are forced to that conclusion, the fault is not entirely ours.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There is one other matter I would like to say a word about, and to this I would ask the attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. It is a matter I brought to the attention of the late minister. In a great many cases we find very small salaries paid to fishery inspectors accompanied by very large travelling expenses. At page P—109, of the Auditor General's Report, we find a salary of $218.75 accompanied with a charge of $746 for travelling expenses; another salary of $187.50 with travelling expenses of $507.05. On the following page we find 'salary, $175; travel, $562.73.' And on the same page a salary of $187.50 is accompanied by travelling expenses of $603.01. The explanation made by the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries last year was that the travelling expenses were really a part of the salary; that the inspector went out with his own horse and buggy, and sent in vouchers as if he had spent so much money in travelling, though, in fact, he had spent no money, but had used his own conveyance. I think it would be better to put these things on a proper basis. If this is part of the salary let it be paid as part of the salary and not entered as fictitious travelling expenses.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It is quite true, as the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden, Halifax) says that comparatively small salaries are accompanied by comparatively large charges for travelling expenses. I am assured by the officers of the department that these matters are very closely scrutinized, and that in no case that may be investigated will it be found that these are paid as part of a salary. The districts, in some cases, are very large, and the inspectors have to travel by hiring horses and rigs. They are allowed a fixed rate of ten cents per mile of travel, twenty-five cents for each meal, twenty-five cents for horse-feed, and twenty-five cents for a bed. These accounts are sent in and sworn to by the parties, and are carefully investigated by the department. Whether any other system can be adopted that will be better while securing equal efficiency, I could not say. I will look into the matter.

Mr. CLANCY. Will the hon. minister say who is the inspector of fisheries at the town of Wallaceburgh, Ont., and what is his salary?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not find in the list any officer at Wallaceburgh.

Mr. CLANCY. I think if the hon. minister will make inquiries he will find that there is a gentleman acting in that capacity there.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am assured by the officers of the department that we have no officer there.

Building and maintenance of fish breeding establishments and lobster hatcheries, $60,000.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There is an increase of $10,000 owing to four new hatcheries having been established during the year, one at Margaree, in Nova Scotia, a combined salmon and lobster hatchery, one at Gaspé, and two salmon hatcheries in British Columbia, one at Bedford Creek and the other at Skeena River.

Mr. SPROULE. How many hatcheries have we now altogether, and what are they for?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There are fourteen now. One at Newcastle, Ont., for salmon; one at Sandwich, Ont., whitefish; Ottawa, salmon and trout; Quebec, salmon; Magog, salmon and trout; Gaspé Basin, salmon and lobsters; Campbelltown, N.B., salmon; South River, N.B., salmon; Grand Falls, N.B., salmon; Bedford, N.B., salmon and trout; Bay View, N.S., lobsters; Margaree, N.S., salmon; Selkirk, Man., whitefish; New Westminster, B.C., salmon; Battle Creek, B.C., salmon.

Mr. SPROULE. Last year I drew the attention of the minister to the fact that there were splendid opportunities for establishing fish hatcheries on the Georgian Bay. The place where they collect fish fry for their hatcheries is about 300 miles distant from here. It seems to me it would be a better plan to establish a hatchery in close proximity to where the fish fry is collected, because it would sustain less injury in transportation. There are several streams entering into the Georgian Bay that I believe would be very suitable places for fish hatcheries. One especially at the Beaver River, which enters into Georgian Bay at Thornbury—I do not think there could be a better place found in Canada for a fish hatchery for salmon, trout and whitefish. Salmon, trout and whitefish fry are collected there and also at Meaford. There is only one other hatchery on these waters, that at Sarnia, none on the Georgian Bay whatever. The minister last year promised to give it some attention, and I inferred he would consider the matter favourably during the summer. But although three new hatcheries have been established since then, or are in process of being established, I see he has overlooked my request entirely. As the present minister is an Ontario man and knows the locality well, I merely direct his attention to it. There is very little distribution of public money in these constituencies up there. I think the business could be carried on more economically there than down here, where fish fry have to be brought some hundreds of miles before they are deposited in the hatchery.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In accordance with the promise made by the minister last year, the officers of the department inform me that an investigation has been made regarding this matter, and probably a vote will be put into the supplementaries this year to carry out the project the hon. gentleman refers to.

Mr. GANONG. I am glad to see the additional amount here, because I think there is nothing we can do that adds more to our national wealth than the development of fishing industries. I had hoped that a portion of this money would be spent in the Bay of Fundy or in the county of Charlotte. I would like to have seen one Liberal promise carried out. The late Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the Minister of Railways and Canals, when they were down there certainly promised that a fish hatchery should be one of their first considerations. In a business point of view there is no location in the country in which a hatchery would add so much to the national wealth as it would in the county of Charlotte. The fish hatcheries, some of them at least, such as the lobster hatcheries on the Nova Scotia coast, I think at Bay View, are providing lobsters chiefly for canning. The hatchery on the Bay of Fundy, as the hon. member for St. John will admit, would furnish a class of lobsters that bring 18 or 20 cents alive. The fact that we are so close to the American market certainly makes that location one of the best in the lower provinces for such a hatchery. I hope the present Minister of Marine and Fisheries will, at his earliest convenience, take this matter into consideration. Those waters in years past have been teeming with lobsters, and so far as a feeding ground is concerned, no doubt the biological report will show there are no waters in the country better fitted for propagating lobsters than the waters of Charlotte county.

Mr. EMMERSON. I would like to ask my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries if he makes provision for any lobster hatcheries in New Brunswick ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, but representations have been made, the matter is being investigated, and probably we will deal with it later on in the session.

Mr. EMMERSON. I call my hon. friend's attention to the fact that the hatchery at Pictou has been doing very excellent work indeed. I am informed that the officers of the department have had under consideration a very favourable report on the necessity of establishing a hatchery somewhere on the Straits of Northumberland, at or near Shemogue, of which place we have heard; and also in the county of Gloucester, at Shippegan. I am sure the necessity must be apparent if one takes into consideration the decrease in the fishery returns in respect to lobsters. I need only invite the attention of my hon. friend to the importance of establishing such hatcheries in New Brunswick.

Fisheries protection service, including maintenance of new vessels in British Columbia, $120,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What headway has the hon. gentleman made with the new vessel they were building last year in British Columbia ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It will very soon be ready for service.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would like to ask the minister to reserve one item in these estimates so that the higher estimates could be discussed later on, and those relative to the fisheries generally.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I made that proposition yesterday, and I am glad to agree to it. Being new in the department, I am anxious to hear criticisms from both sides, and I am also anxious to get all the information I can on these subjects.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). My hon. friend from Pictou (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) I expect will be here next week. He has taken a good deal of interest in matters relative to the fishery protective service, and has made, I think, some suggestions with respect to permanently employing the crews instead of dismissing them in the fall. I do not want to discuss the matter now, but merely ask to have the matter stand.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The greatest latitude will be given to the discussion on that or any other matter. In a very few days the supplementary estimates will be presented, when another occasion will be afforded for discussing the matter.

Canadian fisheries exhibit, $2,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is that for ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is for caretaking and incidental expenses incurred at the exhibit on O'Connor street.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is it for use for the purpose of improving and increasing the exhibit from time to time, or for maintenance ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It is to be used in a practical way. There is a hatchery in operation. I would ask my hon. friend to go down and see the important work that is going on.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I saw it a few years ago and I wanted to know whether it is just the same as it was then or whether it is improving.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It is improving.

To pay persons employed in the Department of Marine and Fisheries, for services in connection with the distribution of the fishing bounty, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, $5,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the explanation of this vote ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. My hon. friend, perhaps, is aware of the fact that there is a large amount of this bounty to be paid out and a large number of temporary employees, altogether young ladies, are engaged about the first of the year getting out the bounty cheques. This has been the practice ever since this bounty has been paid.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). This work is performed here in Ottawa?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. GANONG. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries if the commanders of the cruisers receive any additional pay for the distribution of the bounty cheques ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am informed they are not distributed by the captains of the cruisers at all but by the fishery overseers.

Mr. GANONG. That may be true in some instances, but I had some communication with the department some time ago in connection with Captain Pratt, who should have paid the bounty to the fishermen several weeks sooner but did not do so, simply because he happened at the time to be away on the coast of Nova Scotia. I made the suggestion that the cheques be sent to the collector of customs at Grand Manan.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He is an inspector of fisheries as well.

Mr. GANONG. I think that some better means of distribution should be arranged. The captain may be at North Head one day and the fishermen may be 14 or 15 miles away, unable to make communication with him, only having their boats. Unless the tides serve well, it is impossible for them to get up in time. If these cheques were left with the collector of customs, who is a very honourable and trustworthy man, and a good Liberal, at North Head, he would be able to distribute them much more conveniently. I think that at some time in the future the hon. minister might consider another thing to which I shall draw his attention, and it is that I believe that the inspector's position in these coastal waters would be much better served by having available a steam launch of sufficient size to perform the service in these waters alone. This steam launch would be available for service in the event of any wrecks such as have occurred along the coast of Grand Manan. I think the hon. gentlemen all know of the reefs off that island and of the disastrous wrecks that have occurred there. While we have a life-saving station at Seal Cove we have not the advantage of steam communication. If these two services were combined it would make them very much more efficient, and I believe that the navigation of these waters would be made very much safer.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am pleased to have the statement of the hon. member for Charlotte (Mr. Ganong) who lives in the vicinity, and

I shall certainly ask a report from the officers of my department upon the suggestions he has made.

Mr. SPROULE. How much money is distributed in fishing bounties every year ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. $160,000.

Mr. SPROULE. Distributed amongst how many—boats, I suppose it is ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, it is individuals—in round numbers 25,000 cheques.

Mr. SPROULE. And it takes $5,000 to make out 25,000 cheques ?

Oyster culture, $7,000.

Mr. WADE. I would like to ask the hon. minister if out of this vote ground is to be prepared at Goat Island in the Annapolis Basin ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am unable to give the information, but I will make a note of the question and bring the information later.

Mr. BELL. I would like to ask the hon. minister what work is proposed to be done under that estimate in the lower provinces—Nova Scotia for instance, this year.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It is proposed to provide oyster beds in Nova Scotia, at Minas Basin, Annapolis Basin, Malagawatch, Mira River and East Bay, south side of Bras d'Or Lakes. There are five places where beds are being prepared.

Mr. HACKETT. How many of these beds have been prepared in Prince Edward Island ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Beds have been prepared at Murray Harbour, North River, Grand River, and Richmond Bay.

Mr. HACKETT. In what part of Richmond Bay is this bed placed ? Richmond Bay is a natural oyster bed.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am sorry that I am not able to give the information, but I will send the hon. gentleman a sketch of the point where this bed has been placed.

Mr. HACKETT. What has been done on the North River ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am informed that beds are being prepared there. The planting will be done during the coming session.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Would the hon. gentleman tell us what the practice of the department is in regard to the issue of oyster licenses ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. When the application is made for an oyster license, a lease is made out and the location is defined by the inspector, or fishery overseer of the district.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). For what period of time are they usually granted and what is the fee ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. One year. In some cases I am informed they have been given for three years. The accountant does not remember just what the fee is that is charged. It seems to me the fees vary according to the size of the ground granted by the overseers.

To assist in the establishment, maintenance and inspection of cold storage for deep sea fishermen under conditions to be fixed by the Department of Marine and Fisheries, $25,000.

Mr. KENDALL. Before this item is carried, I would like to bring to the attention of the committee the fact that the results which have attended so far the initiation of the cold storage system in Nova Scotia have been more gratifying than we could have anticipated. I wish to point out to the government that if we are going to deal with this great question of bait supply for what is perhaps the greatest industry we have in the maritime provinces, an industry which would represent $15,000,000 annually, we cannot stop at the point we have now reached. The bait freezers at present in operation are principally to serve the wants of the shore fisheries while no provision has been made for the bank fisheries. Of course, the stores in these small freezers can be drawn upon by the bank fishermen, but when we take into consideration the enormous loss entailed every year by the bank fishermen it will be seen that something more will have to be done. I would throw out by way of suggestion that in my humble opinion it would be a paying thing for the country and for the government to establish one freezer at a cost of about $35,000 or $40,000 at some important point along the Atlantic coast where bait could be most easily procured, in order that five or six hundred vessels, some large and some small, would be enabled to obtain a sufficient supply of bait. I think there is no doubt that our losses would average at least anywhere from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 yearly from the want of this accommodation. I wish to point out also to the government that the adjoining colony of Newfoundland is now arranging for the installation of a bait plant there. If we are to compete with the Newfoundland fisheries, we must be thoroughly supplied with bait as are the Newfoundland fishermen. I would point out that our competitors from Gloucester, New York, and Boston have also constant supplies of frozen bait on hand. It is a matter of prime importance that perhaps the largest industry, except agriculture, in the maritime provinces, should be accommodated with all necessary adjuncts for its successful operation. There is another matter to which I wish to call the attention of the House. I wish to point out that the freight receipts from the growing fresh fish trade from the maritime provinces to the west are increasing and increasing rapidly. I will give you one instance. Four years ago one firm, probably the largest of the fish firms, paid $10,000 in railway freights from the Straits of Canso; next year it paid $12,000; next year $14,000, and last year it paid, I think, $20,000. Let me say also that the facilities at the railway terminals in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick are not what they should be. Before we can meet the requirements of the fresh fish trade we must have a few small refrigerators costing anywhere from $1,500 to $2,500 at the principal railway terminals in the maritime provinces.

Mr. GANONG. Do you refer to mechanical cold storage ?

Mr. KENDALL. No. As far as I can understand the mechanical cold storage is more economical when you freeze over 800 tons, but under that, the idea seems to prevail that ice and salt is more economical. I repeat what I said last year, that on the Intercolonial Railway, the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway the cold storage cars provided are not what they should be. Numbers of these cars are defective in construction. At some other time I shall draw attention to this matter, but I may state now in passing, that a great number of the cold storage cars on Canadian railways are not in a sanitary condition. It is also true that many of the refrigerators in Canada are not in a sanitary condition and very frequently meat and fish transported arrive in a semi-putrid condition. I am nevertheless of the opinion that the results from our system of cold storage have been very gratifying up to the present time, and I beg to urge upon the government that they should grapple with this larger question which is certainly one of very great concern to a large proportion of the population of the maritime provinces —a population which seems inclined to remain by the fishing industry, and which I regret to say is very much inclined indeed to move to the United States.

Mr. HACKETT. I corroborate the statement made by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Kendall). Some few years ago, that hon. gentleman (Mr. Kendall) came to Prince Edward Island for the purpose of establishing these bait freezers and the undertaking has proved a complete success. If there was nothing else done by the government during their period of office to assist the fishermen of the maritime provinces, the establishment of these bait freezers has been a great boon to them. On the coasts of our maritime provinces, we have fishermen who must go out to sea in their small boats, and if they have not proper bait they cannot succeed in their calling. Gentlemen from the other provinces may not think much of the bait freezing experiment, but it has undoubtedly proved a great boon to the fishermen of the provinces by the sea. I would like to call the attention of the government to the fact, that after a shore fisherman catches the fish he must have some appliances whereby he can cure his fish properly for the West Indian and other markets. I believe that the government should do something in the way of providing patent driers to assist the fishermen in carrying out their industry. If you have these driers you will have the fish cured in proper condition, so that it can fairly compete with other fish in the markets of the world. That is especially true of the province of Prince Edward Island where, because of the sandy and loamy soil, and damp weather causing evaporation, the fish becomes dark when sun dried, and do not take the position on the markets which they should take. I trust that in addition to the bait freezers, the government will see its way clear to assist the fishermen in getting these patent driers.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am pleased to hear the remarks of my hon. friend from Cape Breton (Mr. Kendall) and also to hear an endorsement of the benefits which these bait freezers have conferred. I think the proposition of my hon. friend is a practical one, and while I promised probably to do a good deal, I certainly feel that the subject he has brought before the House, and the suggestion he has made is a very important one, and it will have early consideration.

Mr. GANONG. Perhaps I may be in a better position to speak on this vote than some of the other members of the House, because I have invested some $15,000 in mechanical cold storage for precisely the purpose that is referred to by my hon. friend (Mr. Kendall). There is no question but that this scheme can be carried out, and I think the amount the hon. gentleman suggests probably would be sufficient. I believe a cold storage plant that would cost $35,000 would probably freeze and care for, from two millions to three millions pounds of fish. You may wonder why I did not continue in the business, but I may say that the fish were running erratically for a year or two, and other matters demanded my attention. I may say, however, that the establishment built at White Head, Grand Manan, is still there and I have an engineer to look after it every year so that it will probably be running again. One year I successfully froze 750,000 pounds of fish. It was the year of the Spanish-American war and this fish was sold to American fisherman. They sent boats to Grand Manan and bought the fish from the freezers, and carried them away in American bottoms. It occurred just about the time of the declaration of war, and the Gloucester fishermen were advised to throw their fish overboard and come home, which they did, fearing that some Spanish cruiser might tramp along the coast. I very much favour the proposition made by my hon. friend (Mr. Kendall) as it is one of the most important things which the government can possibly take up. There is a great deal of expense in connection with it. While there is a great difference between the initial cost of the fish and the price for which we can sell them, yet you have constantly to maintain your power and appliances, and with other attendant expenses the scheme gets too costly almost for a private corporation to take hold of. Up to the present time there is certainly some element of experiment in it.

Mr. KENDALL. I wish to recognize on behalf of the maritime provinces, the benefits we have derived during the initiation of these plants, from the services of Mr. J. F. Fraser, one of the engineers of the department. Mr. Fraser has given a degree of satisfaction that has made him the friend of every fisherman on these shores where he has visited. I also wish to observe that while we have had success in connection with a number of these freezers, we have not had success with regard to all. We have found it very difficult indeed to get the fishermen to co-operate. We started out with an ideal plan of putting the refrigerators in the hands of the fishermen themselves, but I am afraid that in some cases at least we will have to recede from that position and endeavour to enlist the sympathies of some business men.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would like to ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. Kendall) what railways he is referring to when he speaks of the refrigerator cars being in an unsanitary condition. Does he include the refrigerator cars on the Intercolonial Railway, or are there any such ?

Mr. KENDALL. There are some refrigerator cars on the Intercolonial Railway, and while I do not say that they are in an unsanitary condition, yet the construction of some of them is defective. I have seen cars arriving in Sydney and Glace Bay loaded with meat from large Ontario concerns and when the meat arrived, it certainly was not fit for food.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). As far as many railways are concerned, we have no particular control over them, but in the case of the Intercolonial Railway we have something to say. If the hon. gentleman has anything to complain of with regard to the construction of the cars or the accommodation on the Intercolonial Railway, we should know it, so that we may bring that matter to the attention of the railway department.

Mr. KENDREY. It has been brought to the attention of that department.

Ottawa-Astronomical Observatory, $15,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Before this passes, I would like to remind the Minister of Public Works that last year he promised the Committee on Public Accounts that Mr. Charleson and Mr. Rochester and any other necessary witness would be present before that committee this year with all necessary vouchers. I would like to know whether or not he will be in a position to redeem that promise.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Charleson and Mr. Rochester are both in town and available as soon as the committee on Public Accounts meets. Mr. Boyer, one of the officers sent to the Yukon, will also be here a short time, and Mr. Taché.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How much has been expended and what will be the total expenditure on this item ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have not made much progress. The plans have been prepared and a site chosen on the experimental farm. But the plans prepared were too expensive, and new ones are being made for a building, the cost of which is not to exceed $40,000.

Ottawa—Branch of Royal Mint, $50,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief architect visited England, France and Belgium in order to obtain data for the preparation of plans. He has come back and prepared plans which have been sent to England and have not yet been returned. We are ready to begin the work now and are awaiting the return of the plans. The site chosen is on Nepean Point. The cost will be about $300,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I suppose the plans have to be approved by the Imperial authority ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, it is a branch of the Royal Mint.

Mr. PUTTEE. Has the Minister decided whether this building is to be constructed on the day labour principle.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In every work we have undertaken, we have always submitted our rates to the Labour Department, although perhaps at times that has caused us a lot of work and trouble. Still we have acted in good faith with the House.

Parliament buildings—addition to building over engine-house and improvements in main vestibule, including two electric elevators, $15,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I move that the words 'including two electric elevators' be struck out as these elevators are paid out of another appropriation. The $15,000 I am asking for is destined to provide further accommodation in the attic. I think the work carried on has been successful. We intend taking as many rooms as possible in the attic for members of parliament and replacing the old flooring by mosaic pavement.

Mr. SPROULE. Does this include the new building put up here ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, this is new work altogether not yet undertaken. If my hon. friend will go up stairs he will find that we will be able to give more accommodation by building rooms in the attic and continuing the work we have begun.

Mr. SPROULE. I suppose this is intended to induce us to live on another year on promises.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am afraid my hon. friend lives too much in the past.

Mr. SPROULE. Last year we were promised a considerable number of rooms for the use of members, but this year we find very few more than last, although considerable extensions have been made. The opposition have hardly been given their just rights and would like the Minister to do something more.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What I have done for the Opposition this year is not as much as I would like to have done, but I propose to do more later on. I have consulted Mr. Speaker, and we have given a large room to the leader of the opposition for the province of Quebec (Mr. Monk) and another room to my hon. friend the leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden). That makes two additional rooms for the opposition, and when we have built more rooms in the attic I think we will be able to gratify the wishes of our friends opposite. Our friends on this side complain just as bitterly and perhaps more so than my hon. friends opposite. We cannot give more than we have. We have built a very fine committee room. The debates reporters have been given nice quarters and their old room has been given to the Minister of Finance, who requires a large room as he receives large deputations.

Mr. SPROULE. As regards the distribution of the rooms, I think there might have been a better distribution without doing great injustice to any person. While on my feet, let me say that last year I understood that one of the objects of building this extension was to give a much larger committee room to the Railway Committee and allow the Railway Committee room to be used by some other committee. I asked that the Agricultural Committee should be allowed to use the old Railway Committee room because it is the next largest committee to that of railways and because the room in which it has been the custom to meet is altogether too small. In fact it is impossible for its members to get seats when there is an average attendance. I suggested, at the last meeting of that committee, that we should use the old Railway Committee room, but was told that we could not be allowed the use of it for the present. There was no particular reason why we should not use it, and I would like to ask the hon. Minister whether it was not the intention, when providing this increased accommodation, to furnish larger rooms for the use of some of the larger committees.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Speaker has the right of distributing the rooms and I do not object to his doing so at all. I am prepared to give up all my privileges in that connection because they really give more trouble than pleasure. I am in the hands of the House. If the House prefers to deal with Mr. Speaker, I shall be delighted to give up all my rights immediately. If I am to distribute the rooms, I am prepared to be responsible, or I am quite ready to act jointly with Mr. Speaker. After the observations made, I do not see why the old committee room should not be used by the Committee on Agriculture, which is a very important committee. We have a large committee room up stairs, large enough to accommodate a considerable assembly of people. So, I do not see why the old committee room should not be used in the way pointed out.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It would hardly be convenient to have this room assigned exclusively to the Committee on Agriculture. There are other important committees, and they do not all meet on the same day. I should think that several committees could use this room, with a little adjustment. I would like it understood that such committees as that on Banking and Commerce, Public Accounts, and others, have equal rights.

Mr. SPROULE. I had no intention of suggesting that the Committee on Agriculture should have sole use of the room. The Committee on Public Accounts and possibly others might also use it, as they do not meet on the same days as the Committee on Agriculture. This room might accommodate two or three committees. As soon as the Minister of Public Works and Mr. Speaker come to a decision as to who has authority, we shall be able to discuss matters. It is easier to deal with one of these gentlemen than both. Both are very able, and I do not know with which of them I would prefer to deal. Heretofore we have always considered that Mr. Speaker has authority in these subjects.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no objection.

Mr. SPROULE. When we find who has the authority, we will deal with him.

Mr. COCHRANE. Did I understand the Minister of Public Works to say that when he got the plans for the Royal Mint he was going to construct that building by day labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WO[illegible] No, it will be by tender—most decidedly.

Mr. CLARKE. How many additional rooms does the hon. minister hope to be able to provide in the attic of this building by the expenditure of this vote ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief architect thought he would be able to provide four large rooms.

Mr. CLARKE. Will there be any further accommodation for hon. gentlemen on this side ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think we may speak of that when the rooms are ready. I will do the fair thing next year, as I have done this year.

Mr. CLARKE. There is another matter to which I wish to direct attention, and I am sure that I have only to mention it to have hon. gentlemen opposite agree with me. My hon. friend the leader of the opposition has a room about twenty feet long by ten feet wide. An hon. gentleman beside me suggests that it is six feet wide, and probably it is nearer six than ten. In the discharge of his important duties, the leader of the opposition, as hon. gentlemen opposite know, must receive a great many persons who desire to call upon him. He requires also the services of a stenographer. And, when I point out to the minister that when a gentleman calls upon the leader of the opposition on business, he must send his stenographer out to stand about in the lobby until the interview is over, I think I say all that is necessary to convince him that better accommodation is required for the leader of the opposition. The suggestion has been made—I do not know enough about the internal arrangement of the House to form an opinion as to whether it is practicable or not—that if the room between No. 6 and that occupied by the hon. leader of the opposition were vacated by the present occupant and added to the room which the leader of the opposition occupies, it might be used by his stenographer and also by some other members who have large correspondence and require some better accommodation to enable them to handle it. At any rate, I feel I can appeal to the hon. Minister of Public Works on behalf of the leader of the opposition to ask that better accommodation be provided.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I know very well that the hon. leader of the opposition is not accommodated as he ought to be. It is true that all leaders of the opposition for the last twenty years have occupied the same room, but that does not make the case any better.

Mr. CLARKE. It is time for a change.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In some respects—yes. So far as the point referred to is concerned, I fully agree with the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) that it is time for a change. The room allotted to the hon. leader of the opposition is so small that no ordinary business man would locate even a subordinate employee in it. His secretary must be in the same room and right at his side. When the new rooms are built upstairs, if my authority in the matter is admitted, I think I may find it possible, not by a general change, but by a pretty general change, to accommodate my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, Halifax) as he has a right to be, and as the country has a right to expect that he will be accommodated.

Mr. BELL. Do I understand that that part of the vote relating to two electric elevators is struck out ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the elevators are built and are being paid for out of another appropriation.

Item, as amended, agreed to.

Public Works—chargeable to capital—public buildings—Ottawa-Victoria Memorial Museum, $50,000.

Mr. CLARKE. We would like some information about this.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry to say we have not done much yet. The chief architect has been away in connection with the Royal Mint, and we had so much on hand in the way of public buildings that we have not been able to proceed very fast. Moreover, there are difficulties in the way. The first difficulty is as to site. It was suggested last year that we might choose Major's Hill Park. I am free to admit that I have not made up my mind about the matter yet. This is a very important question. We claim to be a nation, and we are getting big very fast. We are not building for to-day only, but must think of the future. I have, therefore, hesitated to make definite choice of a site. Moreover, I would not like to spend too much money on this museum. At the same time, I feel the responsibility which rests upon this government as it has rested upon previous governments, in that we have a valuable national collection which is exposed to destruction any day. I would not like, however, to spend over half a million for this building. I have no doubt that when I come before the House next year a definite step will have been taken. So far, at least, no money has been spent.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I notice that the minister (Hon. Mr. Tarte) seems to be very much worried over the expenditure of money. I have observed the same thing ever since I have come into the House. I hope his anxiety concerning this expenditure or any other is not affecting his health seriously. As to myself and the accommodation which has been afforded me, I am glad to say that, so far as the room can be made suitable, I certainly am indebted to the hon. minister for doing everything in his power to provide for me.

Public Works—chargeable to capital—Harbours and rivers, River St. Lawrence Ship Channel, $500,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the hon. minister going to do with this money ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is for the work that is in progress between Quebec and Montreal. We have six elevator dredges, and one large suction dredge lately built at the Polson Iron Works in Toronto. These six dredges work night and day at a cost of $30,000 each. We expect that the large suction dredge to which I have alluded will cost for operation $70,000 a year—and by a year, I mean 185 days. That dredge was tested last fall. Should it, in actual work, respond to our expectations—which are very high, I wish to say—she will work at a very cheap rate. She has a capacity of 2,000 yards an hour; in other words, if she works well, she will dredge nearly nine millions of cubic yards in 185 days. I do not rely on such large results; but, even if you take off 20 per cent you will see that the dredge will carry on our work very fast and at a very cheap rate. In fact, if it worked to its full capacity the cost of dredging will be only eight-tenths of a cent per yard, that is, if it worked twenty-four hours a day at its full capacity. But I do not expect that result. But even if it only does half that, you will have the dredging done at a cent and a half a yard. We expect that that dredge will do work for one cent a yard. Other modern dredges we have built during the last three or four years are doing work for 3, 3½ and 4 cents, while the old dredges did work at a cost of 25 to 30 cents a yard. Now, of this $500,000, $250,000 will be employed for dredges on the St. Lawrence river. The balance of the money will be employed, among other things, to build a new twin screw tug to replace an old one, which will cost in the neighbourhood of $25,000; for the construction of two large dump scows for dredging, $26,000; completion of one scow, $4,000; construction of one flat scow with boiler, $7,000 ; construction of one saw-mill, $15,000 ; construction and equipment of a marine railway, workshops and shipyard, $20,000 ; refitting shipyard, $5,000 ; rebuilding wharf, $3,000. We have $30,000 left for unforeseen expenses.

I will add for the information of the House that we have now in Sorel a shipyard in first-class condition. We are building not only for the St. Lawrence channel, but for the whole country. For instance, we are building at this moment a large dredge for the maritime provinces. We are building it with Canadian labour, we are building it on Canadian soil, we are training Canadian skilled men, we are doing the work as cheaply as it can be done on this side of the ocean. I hope and trust that in the future the government will never be obliged to go elsewhere for our ships or anything else that we can build here. I have endeavoured, as far as my department is concerned, to carry out a policy of building on Canadian soil, either at Sorel or elsewhere, all the plant that was necessary to do our work.

The capacity of the dredge that we are building in the maritime provinces will be 1,800 yards an hour. I may say that I hope it will be the best dredge in the world. It is a very complicated piece of machinery indeed. That is saying a good deal, but I think I am within the truth in stating that the dredge that we have built in Toronto is the most modern dredge that has been built. The dredge for the maritime provinces will be a suction dredge and an elevator dredge at the same time; in other words, when the dredge is called upon to work in soft material we will use the suction machinery, and when it works in harder material we will use the elevator machinery. Now this suction dredge has discharging pipes, and at the same time it will be a hopper dredge. In other words, it will carry away its own material when the weather is stormy, or when the dredge works in some exposed place. I think that dredge will cost in the neighbourhood of $300,000. The Toronto dredge costs $250,000 with the whole equipment. The capacity of the Toronto dredge is 2,000 yards an hour. My opinion is that that dredge will do work for less than a cent a yard.

Hon. Mr. ROSS (Victoria). I am delighted to hear from the Minister of Public Works that we are going to have in Nova Scotia the benefit of the best dredge in the world. I think that will be very satisfactory to the people of Nova Scotia. Being a suction dredge, I hope it will be successful in sucking up some of the shoals we have in the harbours already built. There is a harbour in my own county that cost $80,000 or $82,000, on which no work or any improvement has been made for the last twenty-eight or twenty-nine years. It now needs to be dredged, and I hope before the season is over to see this great dredge doing service in several places in Nova Scotia.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I listened with a good deal of pleasure to the remarks of the hon. the Minister of Public Works, and was glad to learn that he had adopted the plan of building dredges which I recommended to him three or four years ago. I made a statement in the House some time ago that material in the city of Liverpool for deepening the Mersey had been excavated and removed a certain distance for a sum so small as to seem incredible. I think it was in the neighbourhood of 3 or 3½ cents per cubic yard. I stated also there were improvements likely to be made in the port of New York, and that dredges of the kind they used in Liverpool were going to be adopted in New York. My remarks fell upon appreciative ears, and I find that the Minister of Public Works has built dredges after the Liverpool plan and the New York plan. The hon. gentleman says that material can be moved for eight-tenths of a cent per cubic yard on the St. Lawrence. Possibly that may be so, under the system he tells us he has adopted, of using a hopper dredge having pipes carrying away the material to a certain distance and depositing it on either shore. If he succeeds, he will reduce the cost which has been in the past as high as 28 or 29 cents per cubic yard. Even if he reduces it to 4 or 5 cents, he will accomplish a great deal, and the dredge will well repay the expenditure of money used in building it. These dredges are necessary. The minister has not stated the number of cubic yards that require to be removed on the St. Lawrence and the probable cost of doing that work, or when it is likely to be completed. It is only a year or two since all the requisite improvements upon the St. Lawrence river between Montreal and Quebec have been completed. I remember when I was a minister of the Crown that we determined upon selling off those useless dredges which were encamped down at Sorel or in the neighbourhood. There were fifteen or twenty, for which there was no use at all after the improvements on the St. Lawrence river in the way of deepening had been nearly completed. The minister it appears has decided upon having a further depth at the port of Montreal, and I think he is correct. He is extending the depth from twenty-six or twenty-eight feet to thirty feet. I think that is the least we can do if we are going to make Montreal a terminal port for the purpose of transportation, so that a vessel of thirty feet draught will be able to come up to Montreal. As it is nearly six o'clock, I would like the minister to state the amount of material which is required to be excavated for the purpose of accomplishing his object, and the time it will require to do it. It is to be hoped that we may have soon an end of this enormous expenditure we have made in the past for improving navigation between Quebec and Montreal.

Mr. TAYLOR. As I will not be here after eight o'clock and as this item may be passed in the meantime, I would like to ask the hon. minister a question or two. He may answer it after eight o'clock, and if I am not here, I will read his answer in the 'Hansard' on Monday. I have no objection to a very large amount being voted for the purpose of improving the ship channel between Montreal and Quebec. I will go as far as the hon. minister, or any person in this House in that direction, but when that money is voted I want to know that it is applied to the purpose for which it is voted. I notice by looking at the Auditor General's Report, V—43, a long list of items charged against the money which is voted for this purpose and which have nothing whatever to do with the deepening of a ship channel. I do not suppose these goods are bought by tender because of the very large amounts which, I find, have been paid for them. At V—43 of the Auditor General's Report I find that Robillard & Co., of Montreal, received $1,271.45 out of the money voted for the improvement of the ship channel, as follows :

Wilton carpet, made and laid, 179·42 yards at $2.75, $493.41.

Two dollars and seventy-five cents for Wilton carpet ! I had my hon. friend (Mr. Birkett) telephone down to one of the large carpet houses in Ottawa and find out the price of the best Wilton carpet. He found out that Wilton carpet is worth from $1.50 to $2.35 a yard. For this same carpet the hon. gentleman has paid $2.75 a yard.

Wilton stair carpet, ¾, 7 yards at $2.75, 1, 6½ yards at $3.25 ; paper, 100 yards at 10c., Brussels carpet, 20 yards at $1, $69.83.

Linoleum, 38 yards at $1.50, 202 yards at 65c., 100 yards at 60c., $248.30.

Livonea, 64½ yards at $1.50 ; table oil cloth, 18¾ yards, $7.80, $104.55.

Edging, 180 yards at 50c.; bazier, 24 yards at $1.85 ; velvet rugs, 5 at $4, $154.40.

Silk lining, 60¼ yards at $1.25 ; special loops, 32 at $2; 1 sweeper, $4, $143.31.

This is one of those carpet sweepers that you can buy at any carpet store for $2.25.

Table cloths, 1 at $20, 1 at $5; tassel hooks, 32 pairs at 35c.; 2 mats, $7.50 ; sundry, $13,95, $57.65.

Making altogether a grand total of $1,271.45, taken out of the money that we voted last year for the improvement and deepening of this ship channel, and for what purpose ? Fitting up, I presume, some tug boat down there, because the hon. gentleman has nothing but dredges and tugs. It may have been for the fitting up of the steamer 'Eureka' or some other tug. Is that a proper way to spend the money that we have voted for a specific purpose, for the ship channel between Montreal and Quebec ? I turn over to the next page V—44, and I find that Messrs J. & R. Weir, Montreal, were paid $4,125 for a marine, D., flue boiler for tug boat tested to 200 lbs.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. After a tender this time.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then the tenders must have been very limited, because I am asking for tenders for a boiler of practically the same capacity and I have a tender which I will bring on Monday for a boiler of 150 h.p. placed in our factory for $1,000.

Mr. COWAN. It is second hand.

Mr. TAYLOR. No, it is not second hand; it is made by the best makers. It is practically a marine boiler and just as good a boiler as there is in any tug boat, and it is made by Messrs Goldie & McCulloch. My hon. friend talks about the price of a tug boat, but if he pays $4,000 for a boiler he will have nothing left for the rest of the equipment. I find in the report of the Auditor General large sums of money, which we have voted, expended in the purchase of goods, bought without tenders and for which two or three prices have been paid to the political friends of the hon. gentleman.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Prince and Princess of Wales were to visit this country. I thought it was only fair to have a boat equipped on which they might be entertained on the lakes. We were building a boat at Sorel, and I plead guilty to the charge of having equipped her in a way in which I would not have thought of equipping a boat under ordinary circumstances. I quite admit that my officers have spent perhaps $2,000 or $3,000 and perhaps more, but they have done it in providing a boat in a fitting way for an event that was expected to take place.

Mr. TAYLOR. For the Minister of Public Works.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Minister of Public Works has been only twice on board of that boat. I am not a man who travels for pleasure. I have not done it so far. I hope I will be able in my older days to do so, but so far I have not found time to do it. I would like to have that pleasure. This boat was equipped with a certain degree of luxury. Those of my hon. friends who have been ministers of the Crown will freely admit that it is not a bad thing when strangers of distinction come here that we may be enabled to place at their disposal, cars and boats that will not be a disgrace to us. However, I state the case as it is. I quite grant that we have spent a little too much money for ordinary purposes, but there was no boat on the lakes suitable for the expected occasion.

Mr. TAYLOR. How about the prices that I have quoted ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not bought carpets myself. If my officers have paid too much, I would be very sorry, but my hon. friend has proved on several occasions that he falls into exaggeration. There are carpets and carpets, as there are men and men. There are some carpets that cost more than other carpets do. I am very glad that my hon. friend has asked the question, because if it had not been explained it would not have looked very well for an ordinary tug boat to be equipped in such a way as that.

Mr. KEMP. I would like to ask the hon. minister if the Prince and Princess of Wales were entertained upon that boat ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, because the Prince made up his mind not to travel on the lakes. The programme which was placed in our hands at the time provided for a trip on the lakes. We had no boat ready, and I think it was not a crime for me to do what I have done.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this the boat into which the new boiler was put ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, the new boiler that my hon. friend speaks of is in the right place. My hon. friend speaks of political friends. Will he allow me to state that Mr. Weir, of Montreal, is not a political friend of mine. The order has been given to Mr. Weir after tender in competition with several firms and it was given to a man, who, as I have said, is not a political friend of mine.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Is this the boat from which that magnificent display of fireworks was made ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I must say that it is the same boat.

At six o'clock the committee took recess.

After Recess.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

SECOND READINGS.

Bill (No. 7) respecting the Canada Southern Railway Company.—Mr. Ingram.

Bill (No. 10) respecting the Orford Mountain Railway Company.—Mr. Parmelee.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

River St. Lawrence Ship Channel, $500,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I was asked by the ex-Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Haggart) to state the amount of dredging required to be done between Quebec and Montreal to give a channel 30 feet deep. I have much pleasure in being able to give the information. There are 24,000,000 cubic yards to be dredged to accomplish that work. This is made up of 2,000,000 cubic yards for the Longue Pointe section which is between Longue Pointe and Cap St. Michel. It is estimated that three dredges will do that work in 200 days. The second section is the Contrecœur section and the quantity to be dredged is estimated at 3,000,000 cubic yards. Three dredges will do that work in 200 days. There is Lake St. Peter, 18 miles long, and there will be about 19,000,000 cubic yards to be dredged, if we dredge 500 feet wide; but if we dredge it 450 feet wide there will be between 16,000,000 or 17,000,000 cubic yards of dredging. In the balance of the work between Lake St. Peter and Batiscan, there are 2,800,000 cubic yards. I have no doubt whatever that that work will be completed within the next two years. We have now the equipment to do the work. The ex-minister (Hon. Mr. Haggart) has very truly said that a few years ago we had only very old dredges. In point of fact when the care of the St. Lawrence between Quebec and Montreal was handed over to the government by the Montreal Harbour Commission in 1888, we had five dredges which were between fourteen and fifteen years old. They had wooden hulls and were altogether out of shape and out of date. You can imagine the condition in which these dredges were when I took office. There was at the time practically only one dredge which was fit for work. That was the dredge 'Laval' that was built by my predecessor, the Hon. Mr. Ouimet. Since then, thanks to the generosity of parliament, thanks to the attention that has been given by both sides of the House to the transportation question, I have been able to get enough money to build a magnificent fleet of dredges, of stone elevators and tugs. With the dredges we have on hand now we will complete that great national work of dredging the St. Lawrence river 30 feet deep and 450 feet wide between Quebec and Montreal during the next two years, or about that time. As I have said, in Lake St. Peter there are between 16,000,000 and 17,000,000 cubic yards of dredging if we dredge the channel 450 feet wide. With the big suction dredge that was tested last fall in Toronto I am confident that work will be completed in two years or about that. There were 50 miles to dredge between Quebec and Montreal to make the channel 30 feet deep, but during the last two years we have dredged 19 miles. Therefore, to-day we have 19 miles, 30 feet deep and 450 feet wide, and still wider in the curves. There remains 18 miles in round numbers to be dredged in Lake St. Peter. That work will be done by the big dredge constructed for that special purpose.

Mr. WILSON. How deep is the water in that part?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was supposed that we have 27½ feet, but I am sorry to say that in reality we have not that depth of water. We are to-day dredging to 30 feet deep, which is to say 4 feet deeper than the lowest water in 1897.

Mr. KEMP. Does this channel fill in?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The channel does not fill in.

Mr. KEMP. The ice does not move the boulders into the channel.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. I have a statement here from Mr. Cosky, the engineer in charge of the work on the St. Lawrence, to the effect that during the last ten or twelve years we have not spent $20,000 to dredge any parts of the channel where there may have been some filling. In point of fact there is no filling. In two years or about that, we will have between Quebec and Montreal a channel 30 feet deep, 450 feet wide in the straight parts and from 500 to 800 feet wide in the curves. My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Haggart) has asked me how much it will cost to complete that work. It is an easy calculation to make. I am asking $500,000 this year. Out of that amount $250,000 will be for the working of the fleet of dredges. We do not expect to spend more next year for that purpose. This year, as last year, I expect that I will ask parliament for large sums of money to build dredges. It is practically our last year of building. Our fleet will then be completed as far as I can see. We will have some little work to do, but the main work of dredge building will be completed. Our expenditure will be then confined to the working of our fleet. There is some work to be done below Quebec. At low tide there will be, I suppose, about one mile to dredge where there is now only 22 or 23 feet of water at low tide. Of course we have betwen 16 feet and 18 feet of tide there. In the calculation I have submitted to the House I did not take into account the Cap la Roche and Richelieu channels, because there we are helped by the tide. I do not say that it will not be found necessary later on to increase the width and depth of that channel, although there is a difficult problem to solve there.

Mr. KEMP. Below Quebec?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If my hon. friend (Mr. Kemp) will kindly have a look at the map he will find that Cap la Roche is situated above Quebec. We have a tide there. When the trade develops later on, the country will see whether it will be necessary or not to do any work there. For the time being we do not find that it is necessary.

Mr. ROBINSON (West Elgin). What is the nature of the dredging to be done there?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In Lake St. Peter it is sand and clay.

Mr. ROBINSON (West Elgin). Where do you deposit it?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In Lake St. Peter we have a big suction dredge with a discharging pipe. The material is dredged out and at the same time deposits it 1,000 feet or even 2,000 feet away from the dredge. We will not have any trouble there. Elsewhere we are obliged to use scows and tugs to deposit the material wherever it is most convenient to do so.

Mr. SPROULE. Did I understand the minister to say that the dredging done by this new suction dredge will cost only about one cent a cubic yard ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, we expect it will not cost more than that.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the estimated cost of all the work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This year we will spend a quarter of a million; next year there is no reason why we should spend more; the year after we will spend about the same. In round numbers, I do not think, by what I can see, that it will cost more than a quarter of a million dollars each year for working the dredges we have in hand now. In two years I hope we will have about completed the work, but let us say that it takes at the outside three years to do it. I do not expect all the work to be done below Quebec in that time, although there is not much expenditure there.

Mr. SPROULE. There are only about 24,000,000 yards to be dredged between Montreal and Quebec and if the hon. gentleman can do that at less than a cent a yard, that would be $240,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I said I expected that the dredging in Lake St. Peter would not cost more than a cent a yard, but I did not say that the dredging in the other parts of the channel could be done for that price, because the material is harder. If my hon. friend wants to know what the dredging costs to-day, he will find it in my report at page 186. During last year the dredging done by the dredge 'Lady Aberdeen' cost three and a quarter cents per yard in some parts and in others two and half. The dredging done by the 'Lady Minto' cost in some parts two cents and in others twenty-two cents and in others four and a half and four and three quarters. The 'Lady Laurier' did the work at three and a half cents. The dredging by the dredge 'Laval' cost six cents in some parts. The cost varies according to the material to be dredged. The new dredges are doing the work at three cents and three cents and a half on an average. We have an old dredge, number 11—an old remnant of the past—which cannot do the work at the same prices at all.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the name of the new suction dredge built at Toronto ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have had the weakness to call it after myself, and I know it will do just as good work.

Mr. WILSON. I did not quite catch what the hon. minister said about the cost of the dredging.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We expect to spend about a quarter of a million dollars each year for three years.

Mr. KEMP. I understood the hon. minister to say that the channel would be thirty feet deep, and I understand that St. Peter's channel originally averaged nine feet deep. Does the hon. minister say that the walls of this channel through lake St. Peter, which is to be thirty feet deep, although of clay and sand, will stand as though they were masonry and that no filling in will take place.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. When I said it was clay and sand, I should have added that in the channel itself it is only clay. The channel has been dredged for many years and there has been practically no falling in except in one part. We have the experience of the past to go by, and that experience shows us that the walls keep very well because they are of clay. There is sand on the bank, but the channel itself is of clay, and according to our experience that will stand.

Mr. KEMP. I understood the hon. gentleman to say that these dredges were specially built for this work and that this work would be completed in three years. What use will there be then for these dredges ? Can they be used in other places? Can they be taken through the canals and used in Lake Ontario, dredging out the harbours there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There will be no difficulty at all in taking all these dredges to the lakes. Their heaviest draught is between nine and ten feet when light. As to the use that will be made of them, I have not much anxiety. There is any amount of dredging to be done, and there will be no difficulty finding use for them. Of course it will be always necessary to keep some dredges on hand, but if the country should decide to dispose of those dredges, there will be no trouble doing so because they are very fine dredges indeed. Of course I do not know what the future of this country will be. It depends on the men at the helm, it depends on public opinion, but my hon. friends will agree with me that the transportation question is taking hold of public opinion more and more every day, and I am glad to see so many demands made on me for maps. It proves that public opinion is on the right track at last. On the lakes, I do not hesitate in saying, we are not in it. We are only beginning. All our harbours have to be dredged and equipped, and we are doing that work now. There is that French river scheme of mine, which my hon. friends opposite are afraid of. All I ask of them is the careful attention which public men are bound to give any new question. That is not asking too much. And since I am on this subject I may be allowed to ask my hon. friends on both sides how they intend to dispose of the crops of this country in the future. This year we have a crop of 100,000,000 bushels of grain in Manitoba. Now to carry 25,000,000 bushels of grain through the Canadian system of canals would in the fall require a fleet of over fifty Canadian boats, because an American boat cannot navigate between Canadian points, and each boat cannot carry more than 80,000 bushels through our system of canals. Well, we have not the boats, we have not the equipment ready, and it will take some time before we have that equipment. And when we have disposed of those 25,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat, we have not touched at all the American crop. Duluth, Chicago, Milwaukee—all the great American centres are tributaries to the St. Lawrence. There is only one St. Lawrence river, and thank God it flows through Canadian channels. Taking those figures, I ask you not to be frightened when I speak of the French river channel, because you cannot dispose through Canadian channels of your Canadian crop and you cannot touch at all the American crop. We have spent, and we are spending, large amounts to complete the equipment of our harbours. I want to know why we should not spend a good deal more to complete our channels. Is it not better that Canadian and American crops should be carried through the Welland Canal and French river than be carried through American channels. You have to choose between the two. There is no alternative. Some of my Ontario friends say there are some other routes. I do not hesitate in saying once more that if I had a free hand, if I were an absolute ruler such as the Czar of Russia, I would spend a large amount of money to build up all the avenues of trade that lead to the St. Lawrence. I would not hesitate to recommend a careful study of that air line which my hon. friends from Toronto speak of. The Canadian people do not realize the immense possibilities before them.

Mr. KEMP. I do not wish to discuss the subject which the hon. minister has raised, but simply to ask him a question. He has told us the amount of Canadian grain we have to transport to the seaboard. What is the capacity per annum in bushels of the St. Lawrence Canal system, the Grand Trunk Railway, the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canada Atlantic at present, and what capacity may they be expected to develop in the course of the next five years ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is a question my hon. friend is just as competent as I am to answer. This year Mr. Booth's system has carried twenty million bushels of grain—not all by the St. Lawrence route, but to American ports also. The Grand Trunk Railway has carried a pretty large quantity. I know that the Canadian Pacific Railway carried twelve millions of bushels of wheat to Port William by the close of navigation. Of this quantity seven millions went out by Canadian ports, and five millions by American ports. If the Grand Trunk Railway would make up their mind to double their track between Midland and Montreal, if they would make up their mind to give up Portland and carry by the St. Lawrence route—and I hope they will—great things might be expected. As to the Canadian Pacific Railway, they have not in the past carried a great deal of grain by rail. I am glad to say that this year they are doing better than in the past. They have taken grain direct to the winter port. They are not doing it to very great advantage, perhaps, but they are doing it. When the improvement of the French river is carried out, when you have made it possible for the great lake carriers to take grain to Lake Nipissing, which is 360 miles from Montreal, you will necessarily see a vast accumulation of trade—not only grain, but other trade—at that point. From Lake Nipissing, the Canadian Pacific Railway, during the winter months, will convey the freight to our winter ports. When I speak of the St. Lawrence route, I do not speak only of Montreal, Three Rivers and Quebec, but of the St. Lawrence as a whole—of our winter ports just as much as any others. I believe the Canadian people are realizing more and more that, if we are to be a nation, we must make ourselves independent of our neighbours, not only industrially and commercially, but also in respect of transportation. I have never felt so strongly as I do now that Canadian people should be their own masters. Our American neighbours are, perhaps, friendly to us, but I think we had better be our own friends and consider the ways and means by which we may remain masters of our own destiny. And it is because I have given some attention to this transportation question that I ask hon. members on both sides of this House to study it—I will not say as much as I have done, because I do not boast of having studied more than others—but to give this question the attention that, in my opinion, it deserves.

Mr. FRASER. This question is the most important one before the country. I may differ in opinion from many members of this House, but my opinion is that, while, perhaps, these expenditures are necessary they will not be operative in the end. I believe, that, situated as we are, with the climate that we have, ultimately we must come to it that the exportation of the great volume of products of this country must be carried on from ports that during summer and winter are alike. It might be worthy of consideration by this parliament whether the sums of money that are being voted could not be set aside to help the railways to make the freight rates as small as possible, so that all the year around the freight could go to the lower provinces to be exported. Of course, for a certain length of time in the year after the crop is gathered, there can be a good deal of exportation by waterway. But that is only for a short time at best, and we cannot look forward to any change in that respect. Might it not be worth our while to look at the larger question ? Is it of sufficient importance that all this grain raised in Canada shall be exported from a Canadian port ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Hear, hear.

Mr. FRASER. Then, if it is, we must see to it that we have methods of transportation in Canada and exportation from Canada that can be used all the year round. I have faith in Canada. I believe that not only shall we increase as we have been increasing, but that every increase now will help to make greater our ratio of increase for the future. The more people we get, the more grain we raise, the more we do, the more we produce, the more rapid will be our increase in the future. I believe in the St. Lawrence route. I believe it is necessary, even if they should fail in their immediate purposes, to make these expenditures. A nation often has to spend money to demonstrate a truth, it has often to spend money to find out what is the real value of an idea strongly held by many of its people. But I am firmly convinced that we must come to it that the lower provinces, with their ports open all the year round, must be the points at which we export as well as import. Nova Scotia is the vestibule of this Dominion. Geography is in our favour; and I believe that as we grow—and we shall grow—it will be seen that it is in this way that all our products must go and come. As I say, it may be necessary now to expend our money in the way proposed. In any case, it will do no harm to have an alternate way of carrying, subsidiary to the great system by which freight can be carried and exported all the year round. It is like the money spent on our canals, which was thought to make them all that was required, but which had to be supplemented with more money to deepen them—and I believe that, if those canals are to be really effective, we must deepen them again. We are only making these tentative steps in our history. I believe, however, that the country will yet come to the conclusion that the really useful expenditure is that which will make it possible for the producer in Canada to ship his products over a Canadian route and by a Canadian port, and that rather than spend our money continuously in other ways, we should devote our resources to the carrying out of this idea. So strong am I in this position, that, while I am in full sympathy with the expenditures made, if they are necessary, I believe, looking at it in the broader light of geography and climate, we must ship from ports where neither frost nor tide will interfere with work whatever the season may be.

Mr. KEMP. I have before me a map which bears the name of the hon. Minister of Public Works. I am trying to get at the hon. minister's point of view. May I inquire whether he has ever considered the idea of having a barbour on the north shore of Georgian Bay near the mouth of the French river, for the purpose of allowing the Canadian Pacific Railway to tap it at that point and transfer grain ? Then, I would like to ask how much sooner in the autumn the French river is closed in the winter by ice than is the Welland Canal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am very glad to be in a position to give a definite answer to my hon. friend (Mr. Kemp). I was asked a few days ago what the distance was between the Soo line and a port on Georgian Bay, and I was not able to give the exact distance at the moment. The distance between the Soo line and the nearest point on Georgian Bay is 90 miles. There are great engineering difficulties——

Mr. CLARKE. What is the greatest distance ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The distance from the Soo line to the Georgian Bay is ninety miles. That is the distance that would have to be covered if a branch line were built. Now my hon. friend (Mr. Kemp) has a map in his hand. I hope my hon. friend from Guysborough (Mr. Fraser), has one also. Let them look at the different centres of trade. Let them look at Fort William, which is a point from which our Canadian grain is carried. Now let them look at Duluth, Milwaukee, Chicago. From Fort William to North Bay the distance is 473 miles; from North Bay to Montreal, 317 miles, I speak of nautical miles. That makes altogether 890 miles. From Fort William to New York there are 1,182 miles, making 292 miles of difference in favour of the Canadian route. Now from New York to Liverpool there are 3,105 miles; from Montreal to Liverpool there are 2,773 miles, a difference of 332 miles. This is for the French river route. From Fort William to Port Colborne there are 737 miles; from Port Colborne to Montreal there are 321 miles, in all 1,058 miles. From Fort William to Buffalo there are 750 miles; from Buffalo to New York by the Erie Canal, 500 miles, or 1,250 miles in all, making 200 miles difference in favour of the Canadian route. But if my hon. friends will look at the figures published on the map they will find that, taking Fort William, Duluth, Milwaukee and Chicago as shipping points to Montreal or New York, there is a difference in round numbers of 300 miles in favour of our Canadian route. Now adding the difference there is between Montreal and Liverpool and that between New York and Liverpool, you will find in round numbers a difference of 600 miles in favour of our Canadian route. Now I want to know why we should not divert a vast quantity of trade from all these centres through the Canadian route.

Mr. CLARKE. But you are now pointing out the disadvantages of the Canadian route.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not at all. How so ?

Mr. CLARKE. You are speaking of all water Canadian routes. There are half a dozen routes partly rail and partly water that are 600 miles shorter than the all Canadian route.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not admit that. When I speak of the French river route, I speak of an all water route, not of a railway route, because Buffalo is our objective opponent, if I may so speak. Let us take Buffalo, and let us see what is the difference between Buffalo and North Bay, for instance. Between Montreal and North Bay—I do not now speak of nautical miles—there are 364 railway miles; between Buffalo and New York there are 445 railway miles. Between North Bay and Montreal, the Canadian Pacific Railway is running on the down grade, and can haul just as many cars as the New York Central does, and the Canadian Pacific Railway would have nearly 100 miles less. I want to know why we cannot acquire a vast quantity of trade at North Bay on Lake Nipissing and carry it in the winter months to the port of St. John ?

Mr. CLARKE. Would not that argument apply to other points on the Georgian Bay ? Why could not other railways accumulate freight in the fall at other ports on the Georgian Bay ? I am only making these suggestions to the minister to ascertain how deeply he has looked into the qualifications of these other ports on the Georgian Bay. He has given the figures correctly. The distance from North Bay to Montreal is 364 miles. What is the distance between Parry Harbour, a port that not a dollar need be spent on now—what is the distance between Parry Harbour and Montreal by rail ? What is the distance between Midland and Montreal by rail ? These are two splendid harbours already provided on Georgian Bay. What is the distance from Collingwood to Montreal by rail ? What is the distance from Owen Sound to Montreal by rail ? We want the minister to give us all the information so that we may study it out carefully; and when he comes down this session or the next session, and asks parliament for an appropriation which will eventually aggregate $5,000,000 to make this French river navigable from Georgian Bay to the North Bay, we, having all the facts before us, may be able to discuss it intelligently with him. When he completes the work of making the French river and Lake Nipissing navigable to North Bay he will find that North Bay is five miles further away from the Sault than Parry Harbour, and ten miles further away than Midland. These two harbours already provided on Georgian Bay are nearer to the Soo, the common point from which all the vessels must start after they come through Lake Superior. Both these ports are nearer to the Soo than North Bay will be after this enormous expenditure has been made upon it.

Now, I am not saying that this expenditure ought not to be made, but surely we all, on both sides of the House, have a right to the fullest possible information as to these distances. And let me tell the hon. gentleman that this table of sailing distances which is printed on the lower right hand corner of this map may be misleading. I do not of course think it was put in there at all for that purpose. I think, too, that if he is going to ask us to consider this French river route the information contained on this map should be implemented. We should have the distances from Fort William to Collingwood and from Collingwood to Montreal, and from Toronto to Montreal or Quebec by water. We should have some data, some information as to the relative cost of carriage by water as compared with carriage by rail. The hon. gentleman who addressed us a few minutes ago said, what I believe to be substantially correct, that in the future a very large proportion of the grain grown in the west will find its way to the east almost altogether by rail or very largely by rail. We must not overlook the fact that at present we are engaged in a very large expenditure to complete our all water Canadian route. We are engaged in the work of making a harbour at Port Colborne, the Lake Erie entrance to the Welland Canal, and before that work is completed a very large sum will have to be expended. That route is unfortunately handicapped by being 600 miles, on the round trip, longer than these routes that are being spoken of, North Bay, Depot Harbour, Midland and Collingwood, but it has the advantage of being an all water route.

Now, if we want to get the best possible results for the producers of this country we must not tie ourselves up completely to railways. We must give our farmers the advantage, and our shippers the advantage of more than one avenue for conveying the produce of this country to the seaboard. We have in the North Bay route, when it is completed, a line that obliges a land haul of between 300 and 400 miles to Montreal. We have as against that our present all water route, handicapped, as I have pointed out, by being, for the round trip 600 miles, in round figures, longer than these other routes, but with the advantage of an all water carriage. We can have another route by making a portage railway from Meaford, or from Collingwood, or from some point on the Georgian Bay, to Lake Ontario, which will give us a very much shorter water route, and which will give us just as short a route from Sault Ste. Marie to Montreal as any of these other routes, and with only seventy miles or eighty miles at most of land carriage. I think in fairness to the members of this House all the facts in connection with all these propositions—and the minister says he has considered this proposition of a portage railway from Georgian Bay down to Toronto—I think all the facts should be laid before us so that we may be able to bring the best possible intelligence to bear before we are asked to come to a conclusion. I want to assure the hon. gentleman that there is nothing sectional, nothing narrow, in the opposition, if he can call it opposition, that we are offering to this French river proposition. We are not necessarily opposing that scheme because it means an expenditure of $5,000,000 away up in the north. But we want to be perfectly satisfied before we vote for that expenditure that it is the best possible way of expending the money, and will produce the best possible results in the years that are to come for those people who are going out west in such large numbers to make themselves homes. The hon. minister must not overlook this fact, that, as he has pointed out, there is a down grade from North Bay to Montreal, so that consequently, there must be an up grade going back. If he desires to see the Canadian inland marine prospering, if he desires to see large additions made to the tonnage of that marine he must give vessels all possible facilities to go up to the head of Lake Ontario and it is only policy carefully to consider at what point on Lake Ontario these vessels will be likely to get the largest and greatest number of return cargoes. My idea is that the making of a national port at Montreal will not completely solve this transportation problem.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Hear, hear.

Mr. CLARKE. Of course it is only my own opinion, but I believe that the old port of Quebec will eventually become the national port of this Dominion.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Hear, hear; one of them.

Mr. CLARKE. I am perfectly well satisfied that before a complete solution of this transportation problem has been reached it will be necessary to equip our harbours on Lake Ontario and to build a portage railway from the head of Lake Ontario to a port on the Georgian Bay, so that we may have vessels running from the head of Lake Ontario, not only to Montreal but to Quebec, and if proper lines of vessels are established on that route I am perfectly satisfied they will get substantial freights to bring back with them and exercise a salutary check on the excessive freight rates charged by the railway companies. We have spent a large amount of money in the digging and deepening of our canals. As the hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) pointed out that work is undoubtedly, to a certain extent, experimental. However, it was work that was necessary. We have spent a large sum in deepening these canals to fourteen feet. We ought not to abandon the St. Lawrence route entirely. We ought to utilize it to act as a check against the extortionate freight rates being now charged on the railways, and it is only reasonable that we should have information upon every single proposition before the country as to the advantages and disadvantages of these propositions before we are asked to seriously consider the proposition the hon. minister makes, to expend $5,000,000 of money on another harbour on the Georgian Bay, which when completed, will be no nearer the point of production than the splendid present harbours which exist on those waters. I ask from the hon. minister consideration of these other routes and that he will lay before the House elaborate maps of these other routes before he asks us to commit ourselves to this expenditure on the French river.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Mr. Chairman, I am not asking the committee to commit itself to the French river improvement. I am calling attention to it in connection with the work that is going on on the St. Lawrence, and I am very thankful to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) for having spoken as he has done. My hon. friend should not speak of abandoning our Canadian system of canals.

Mr. CLARKE. Certainly not.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Nobody thinks of it, but he has given us figures that are eloquent. He has stated that the Canadian system of canals; that is to say, the all-water route, is 600 miles longer than the route from North Bay, or Midland, or Depot Harbour.

Mr. CLARKE. On the round trip.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, of course, and, moreover, it is a water route; that is to say it is a route that is closed for six months in the year in round numbers. Look at the map. What is the use of talking as the hon. member for Guysborough has talked ? What is the use of saying that we can transport grain by rail the whole year round ? It cannot be done. The route is on the great lakes; Fort William is on the great lakes, Milwaukee and Chicago are on the great lakes, our American friends can command to-day 96 per cent of the tonnage on the great lakes. We command only 4 per cent. Why ? Because we have not equipped our waterways, because we have not to-day any Canadian harbour on the lakes. Again look at the map. Here is Buffalo at the right hand of Lake Erie; at the left is Port Colborne, 20 miles distant—Buffalo, with its fifty-five elevators which are being improved day after day. Last year they built four magnificent new and modern elevators at Buffalo, and they have miles and miles of breakwaters and basins. At Port Colborne there is not the shadow of a harbour. How can we expect the trade, I want to know ?

Mr. CLARKE. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is a magnificent route, but it is only open six months in the year.

Mr. CLARKE. It is open as long as the French river is open.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will come to that. Depot Harbour has no western connection except by water.

Mr. CLARKE. Neither will North Bay have.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Midland is in the very same position—no western connection except by water; that is to say, that for six months in the year, these harbours are practically closed.

Mr. COCHRANE. So is Buffalo.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) says that North Bay is in the same position. I say no. North Bay is on the Canadian Pacific Railway line. the Canadian Pacific Railway, which has cost this country $100,000,000 in land and money, has a western connection. Where does our export trade come from to-day ? With what materials are the bottoms that are lying in St. John loaded ? Not with grain only. Grain is only a small incident in the very great traffic carried on there. The Canadian Pacific Railway have chosen St. John as their winter port because they carry to it a large amount of package traffic from the west, and from the American west especially. They are carrying to-day twenty-five cars a week of meat and so on from American points. I ask the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Clarke) where is the other railway in this country which is in the same position. There is not one. The Grand Trunk Railway have chosen Portland as their winter port. We cannot expect any export trade from the Grand Trunk Railway, we cannot expect any export trade from the Canada Atlantic Railway during the winter months. The Canada Atlantic Railway is closed. Then, the Canadian Pacific Railway is the only road which has a western connection and which can give export freights to our winter ports. The reason I am speaking of the improvement of the French river, is that during the months of the fall when the grain is accumulated at Fort William, Duluth, Milwaukee and Chicago, it is seeking the best and easiest route, and the best and easiest route is undoubtedly the French river route.

Mr. CLARKE. How does the hon. minister make that out ? Will he give us the facts ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, I will give the facts. The distance is the same between North Bay and Midland and Depot Harbour. Let us say that. But, will those railways carry exclusively grain during the winter months ? Not one. The Canadian Pacific Railway, having this western connection, will simply take the grain accumulated during the fall and carry it to the winter port. The Canadian Pacific Railway is the only railway which will take grain to the winter port.

Mr. CLARKE. What has become of the Intercolonial Railway ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend must not try to trifle with the question.

Mr. CLARKE. Well, what is the matter with the Intercolonial Railway ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman knows that the Intercolonial Railway cannot compete with the Grand Trunk Railway.

Mr. KEMP. What was the elevator at St. John built for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is a very small and incidental question. Let us not get into details. We are dealing with large questions.

Mr. CLARK. We want to get the details.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not despair of seeing the elevator at St. John filled with grain. If the Intercolonial Railway cannot fill it, the Canadian Pacific Railway can fill it. There is no reason why it will not do it. Let not my hon. friends run away from the main question. The main question is : Which is the best route ? I say that all the routes are good, and I say let the hon. member for Toronto not lose sight of this point that the Canadian Pacific Railway, as things are to-day, is the only railway which can give us an export trade. We are talking of a fast line are we not ? How can we have a fast line if we have no trade from the west to export by that line ?

Mr. CLARKE. The hon. gentleman in the course of this discussion informed us that the Canada Atlantic Railway had carried from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels of grain from Depot Harbour to the seaboard or towards the seaboard. Is that right ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About that much.

Mr. BOYD. When ?

Mr. CLARKE. During the season of navigation last year. I appeal to the minister, that if facilities for storing the grain in the shape of elevators and warehouses were provided at Depot Harbour ; is it not a fact that the quantity of grain that could be carried to the seaboard from Depot Harbour during the winter months when the French river and Midland and Parry Harbour would be sealed up, would be only limited by the capacity of the railroad to carry it ? If the French river route were completed—I am not offering any particular objection to the French river route if the minister can persuade the House that it is the best route—but, if the French river route were completed to-morrow, when that river and lake Nipissing are frozen up there can surely come no grain in by the French river route to augment the quantity that may be stored at North Bay. The Canada Atlantic Railway has no western connection during five or six months of the year, and yet it carried 20,000,000 bushels of grain during the season of navigation, according to the statement of the minister himself. Could not that quantity be duplicated by the construction of elevators at Midland, that splendid port now in existence on the Georgian Bay ? Of what advantage will it be to the Canadian public to have this French river route completed to North Bay, further than that during the period which elapses between the taking off of the crop and the close of navigation, great quantities of grain may be brought by water, and stored at North Bay to give the Canadian Pacific Railway traffic during the winter months ? Will not the same conditions apply so far as the Canada Atlantic Railway at Depot Harbour and the Grand Trunk Railway at Midland are concerned ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) has proven a strong case against himself.

Mr. CLARKE. I am very glad if it will assist the minister.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the hon. gentleman is a Canadian as he is, he must make up his mind that we must have Canadian winter ports.

Mr. CLARKE. You will not have a winter port at French river.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Will the hon. gentleman allow me to speak. My hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) is a Canadian.

Mr. CLARKE. I am a Canadian and an Irish Canadian.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Any one would know that by looking at you.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) is a good Canadian and I ask him to tell me where the grain that would be accommodated at Midland would be carried in the winter months by the Grand Trunk Railway if not to Portland.

Mr. CLARKE. Then I would ask the Minister of Public Works if the Intercolonial Railway is of no use to the public whatever ? After all the statements we have heard from gentlemen opposite as to the advantages obtained for this country by the extension of the Intercolonial Railway to Montreal, are we to be told now that these advantages amount to nothing ? Is it not the case that a proper national policy in connection with the administration of the Intercolonial Railway would give us competition from Montreal eastward, when the country is practically tied up to the Canadian Pacific Railway for its export business in the winter months ? Are we to be told now by the minister (Hon. Mr. Tarte) that notwithstanding the fact that during these five years past we have spent $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 on capital account, on the Intercolonial Railway, that it is practically useless as an instrument to assist in carrying out the products of Canada from Montreal to the seaboard during the close of navigation ? Is that the situation ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) is making party politics now.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Nonsense.

Mr. COCHRANE. What are you doing ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not believe that I am making party politics out of this question, but the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) is.

Some hon. MEMBERS. No.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Two and two make four, and not five. Surely my hon. friend did not mean to say that the Intercolonial Railway would be working in connection with the Grand Trunk Railway for the carriage of grain conveyed by the Grand Trunk Railway. It is a preposterous idea. Why should the Grand Trunk Railway give to the Intercolonial Railway any of its trade ? Where is the railway that would do that ? That is not a business proposition. The Grand Trunk Railway runs from Midland to Portland, their own winter port, and the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) suggests that the Grand Trunk Railway should hand over its business to the Intercolonial Railway at Montreal for transport to a Canadian port.

The hon. gentleman will not say that again. If he does I will let him say it, and I am sure that no other gentlemen in the House would make that statement. The position is exactly the same so far as the Canada Atlantic Railway is concerned. The Canada Atlantic Railway has its terminus in the United States. It has no terminus in Montreal. My hon. friend knows that the Canada Atlantic Railway does not reach Montreal on its own rails. So much is that the case that Mr. Booth has been obliged to establish a line of barges between Coteau and Montreal to carry grain during the summer months. The grain that Mr. Booth's railway system would carry in the winter months would simply be carried to American ports. During the summer months a good deal of the Canada Atlantic Railway grain is carried to Montreal, but the greatest part of it is carried to American ports. We are talking now of a winter port. In the winter months the Canadian Pacific Railway, as things are to-day, is the only railway that can carry export trade to our Canadian winter ports. The Canadian Pacific Railway has been built long ago. We had our eyes open when we built it. We have built it to make it what it is—a Canadian railway carrying trade through Canadian channels to and from all parts ; from Japan, China, the United States and Canadian points. My hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) says that we must not be at the mercy of the Canadian Pacific Railway. I grant that. In the summer months there will be no danger of being at their mercy, but if perchance later on the French river scheme were carried out, and there should be trouble with the Canadian Pacific Railway should they try to exact unfair tolls, well, there are only 360 miles to be built after all.

Mr. CLARKE. Where ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. From Montreal to that point.

Mr. CLARKE. To what point ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. To North Bay. But, when there are so many railways in competition, there is no danger that one railway will exact more than is necessary. Let the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clarke) not forget one thing. I know he is in good faith, but let him not forget that Buffalo is our rival. So far our trade has gone via Buffalo. We have very little of our own trade and very little of the American trade passing through Canada and so there must be something wrong. The Grand Trunk Railway was located at Midland long ago ; the Canada Atlantic Railway was located at Depot Harbour several years ago, but still our trade is going to American ports.

Mr. CLARKE. Has not high insurance and high freight rates something to do with that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I grant you that we were not equipped for the trade. The St. Lawrence was not deepened, or buoyed, or lighted, as it should have been. All that is true. But now, if we want to be independent of the American ports we must have a winter port or winter ports of our own. We must have our winter ports as well as our summer ports. Let my hon. friend, let any member of parliament rise in his seat and tell me where is the other railway to-day that can give us export trade for a Canadian port like the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Canadian Pacific Railway is the only one. I am always sorry—if I may express my regret—when I hear men of the standing of my hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) speaking of the Canadian Pacific Railway as a monopoly.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is not fair to the country. I do not care about the Canadian Pacific Railway per se. I am just as independent of the Canadian Pacific Railway as my hon. friend is, but I cannot forget that I was a newspaper man here when Sir John A. Macdonald —who was just as big a man as the gentleman who is laughing over there—initiated the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway in this House. The whole Conservative party was behind him and many Liberals were in their souls with him too. Those of the Liberals who then fought the Canadian Pacific Railway, perhaps have changed their minds a little to-day, as my hon. friends opposite will change their minds in reference to the speeches they are making now. The Canadian Pacific Railway is not a monopoly. It is a great transcontinental railway carrying trade from Japan and China and all parts, on Canadian soil as against competition from five or six American railways. We must not be ashamed of such a monopoly. I am not ashamed of such a monopoly. The Canadian Pacific Railway is only a factor in this question. Our waterways are a great factor; and the equipment of our harbours is a factor, and in point of fact we have an entire system to complete on land and on water. Perhaps I have wandered a little far from the estimate of $500,000, but still I feel that we have not wasted our time. I feel that we are dealing with a broad question, and I feel that all these questions are bound together. When we have completed the deepening and widening of the St. Lawrence channel, when the ports of Quebec, Three Rivers and Montreal are equipped, we will have that part of the St. Lawrence route in good shape. I share the views of hon. gentlemen who have spoken so far as Quebec is concerned. Montreal will not be able to handle half of the trade that is in store for the St. Lawrence route. There was a good deal of money spent in Quebec in days past, and I feel that the time is coming when it is necessary to equip the port of Quebec. There are large ships that will never be able to come to Montreal. I will say more than that : The port of Quebec will be opened and is open for five or six weeks both during the fall and the spring, longer than the port of Montreal and that amounts to a great deal.

Quebec has direct connection with the west by the Great Northern. I hope that route will be put in good shape in a short time. Quebec, Three Rivers and Montreal will have their hands full. When the lake ports are equipped with proper harbours, they will be great reservoirs of trade. But that does not alter the position, so far as the improvement of the French river is concerned. You will not be able, by the canals alone, to handle the trade you have in store, not only Canadian but American trade. Of course, if you make up your minds that you do not want that trade, the system of canals will be sufficient. But those who think the matter over carefully—and I am sure my hon. friend (Mr. Clarke) will do so—will admit that all these harbours on the great lakes will have to be attended to. We are attending to them. Port Colborne is being equipped, Midland is being equipped, Depot Harbour is fairly equipped. Of course, if an American syndicate buys up the connection with one of these harbours, we must look carefully, before spending our money, to see where the Americans are carrying our trade. I, for one, will not be very enthusiastic about giving money to improve Depot Harbour if the American syndicate does not make up its mind to stand by our Canadian ports. When you have the Canadian Pacific Railway on Canadian soil, you are sure of one thing—that Canadian trade will go through Canadian channels. I say again, and I appeal to my hon. friends from the maritime provinces, that you cannot have a winter port, you cannot have a fast line, you cannot have trade in the winter months, if you do not have an export trade; and where are you going to get it if the Canadian Pacific Railway does not take it to you ? You cannot have it otherwise. There is not enough trade on Canadian soil to feed our winter ports. As I have said, the port of St. John, and, to a certain extent the port of Halifax, are being kept by American trade as well as Canadian.

Mr. CLARKE. I hope the hon. minister did not desire to misinterpret what I said respecting the Canadian Pacific Railway. I rather think I did not make myself clear enough to be understood by the hon. minister. I certainly repudiate any suggestion that I desire to exhibit hostility to the Canadian Pacific Railway. On the contrary, I desire to see that institution promoted and sustained by the Canadian people. With the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Tarte), and most of the hon. members of this House, I believe that the Canadian Pacific Railway has done more to cement together the different portions of this Dominion, and to solidify the country, than all the other agencies put together. Consequently, I should have no desire to advocate any policy that would militate against the interests of the Canadian Pacific Railway, so long as those interests do not run diametrically counter to the interests of the Canadian people. I suggested—and I think it was only just to the hon. members on both sides—that before we were committed to this scheme of improving the French river and Lake Nipissing and making a harbour for deep draught vessels at North Bay, we should have full information as to the other propositions presented to the hon. minister within the last four or five years. If the scheme has the merits that the hon. minister says it has, it is only just to the Canadian Pacific Railway, which will be one of the chief beneficiaries of this improvement, that the facts should be laid before parliament and the people, so that they may be as much convinced as the hon. minister evidently is that the French river route is a practical work and one of national importance. I have said that it seemed to me that, if the scheme were carried out, the only benefit would be the laying up of large stores of grain, from the time the crop reached the head of Lake Superior at Duluth and Fort William, in an elevator at North Bay to furnish the Canadian Pacific Railway with freight during the winter months, and that would practically tie up a very large quantity of grain and leave it at the mercy of the Canadian Pacific Railway winter rates. I pointed out to the minister that if he desired to give employment to roads running from Georgian Bay eastward the same results could be accomplished by building grain warehouses at Parry Harbour, Midland, Collingwood, Owen Sound and other ports on Georgian Bay that are already fairly well equipped. I am glad we have had so much explanation from the Minister of Public Works, and all I can do is to ask him to go further and give us maps and plans showing these other propositions as clearly as he has shown this French river plan ; and I think, he can depend upon the patriotism of the Canadian parliament to promote Canadian interests.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the hon. gentleman will consult the map he will see that there is information with regard to all routes——

Mr. CLARKE. Oh, no. If the hon. minister will allow me I will give him a sample. Here, for instance, is a table of 'sailing distances.' Now, that is a very simple expression and we all know what it means. The distance from Depot Harbour to Montreal—the sailing distance—is given as 797 miles, from North Bay to Montreal 850 miles. This table shows the distances a vessel would have to navigate from Parry Harbour, or Midland, or North Bay or these other ports, if they went around by way of Georgian Bay, Lake Huron, Detroit river, Lake St. Clair, Lake Erie, the Welland Canal, Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence to Montreal. Surely it is not unfair to say that a table framed in that way is not as fair as it might have been. The sailing distance, it is true, is as stated on the map, because you must go around four or five hundred miles to get to the St. Lawrence river.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend says that grain accumulated at North Bay would be at the mercy of the Canadian Pacific Railway. What do we see to-day ? The rate between Buffalo and New York is ten cents per hundred pounds. Canadian wheat that was carried to Buffalo during the last of the fall is paying that rate to the New York Central from Buffalo to New York. If the Canadian Pacific Railway accumulated twenty-five or thirty millions of bushels of grain at North Bay, I make bold to say, that the rates would not be the same—far from it. The hon. gentleman speaks of competition, but, to-day, the Canadian grain is practically in the hands of American routes.

Mr. CLARKE. Would it be better to have more accommodation by establishing elevators at Midland, Depot Harbour and other places so as to give us a chance against Buffalo ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Elevators are already provided. But my hon. friend must not forget that Midland is tributary to the Grand Trunk and American ports. That is the point I want to make the House understand. What I want is to give our Canadian ports the traffic of the west.

Mr. SUTHERLAND (Essex). I would like to ask the hon. minister if it is not the fact that the Welland Canal is left unlighted at night ? I think one of the very pressing questions in connection with our lake traffic is the lighting of the Welland Canal. I am informed that captains are constantly complaining of the great delay arising from that cause. A small expenditure would enable the government to light the canal at night. The canal itself would furnish the power, making the service a cheap one.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have many things to do to-day on the lakes and canals. I do not know whether the Welland Canal is lighted at night or not. But when a ship laden with grain reaches Port Colborne to-day she has to lighter into the Grand Trunk elevator there. And do you know what the Grand Trunk charges are for the twenty-seven miles of their road to Port Dalhousie ? They charge two cents per bushel. They charge two cents per bushel, and how in the name of Heaven can you expect trade to flourish under such an exorbitant charge ?

Mr. CLARKE. Will not that situation continue until you either deepen the Welland Canal to a greater depth or build a line from Port Colborne to Port Dalhousie ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend is very much afraid lest we should commit ourselves to any further expenditure, and yet he wants us to undertake this enterprise. Does he know how much it would cost to deepen the canal ?

Mr. CLARKE. The hon. minister seems to have a streak of Irish in him, for he is answering my question by asking another. He complains of the extortionate rate charged by the Grand Trunk Railway for hauling grain from Port Colborne to Port Dalhousie. I ask him whether, after he has completed the improvements at Port Colborne, which will cost $500,000 to $1,000,000, the situation will be improved, so far as the carriage of grain by land is concerned.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, what will happen is this : We have not got a harbour at Port Colborne. The great carriers of grain, which are going to Buffalo to-day, could not go to Port Colborne. My hon. friend knows that on Lake Erie the waves are as big as on the Atlantic ocean, and the big lake carriers cannot get to Port Colborne.

Mr. CLARKE. How will they get through the canals ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend is a most impatient Irishman.

Mr. COCHRANE. If the hon. minister would answer the questions put to him instead of making speeches which tax the patience of the House, he would not have to complain of any impatience.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that two Irishmen are too many for me. My hon. friend, I am sure, is looking ahead. We must have Canadian bottoms on the lakes. The large lake carriers cannot go to Port Colborne because we have no accommodation there. There is neither wharf nor elevator nor anchorage facilities. We therefore have to be content with the ordinary carriers which can navigate our Canadian system of canals. But when Port Colborne is equipped, as it will be next season, those large freight carriers will be able to go there safely. Then from Port Colborne to the St. Lawrence you will have another fleet of steamers which, I hope, we are going to build.

Mr. CLARKE. How will you get from Port Colborne down the St. Lawrence ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We will simply have boats that will draw fourteen feet of water.

Mr. CLARKE. They will not get through the canals.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, they will. The problem will be solved, and I hope my hon. friends on both sides will not lose sight of the vital importance of having Canadian bottoms on the lakes. If you have not Canadian bottoms on the lakes within two or three years, you will not be much better off than you are now, because American bottoms cannot navigate between Canadian ports. But if you have, then the problem of the carrying trade between Port Colborne and Montreal and Quebec will be solved.

Mr. LANCASTER. Will not these new steel steamers which the hon. gentleman speaks of from Port Colborne to the St. Lawrence have to lighten just as the present boats ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. LANCASTER. Is the hon. gentleman going to deepen the Welland Canal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. LANCASTER. How then will he carry any more in these steamers than in the present ones.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. To-day we command only about four per cent of the tonnage on the lakes. We have in round numbers between fifteen and seventeen Canadian bottoms carrying grain. There are ten boats to-day being constructed. I anticipate that we will have more Canadian bottoms built for that very navigation between Port Colborne and the St. Lawrence, now that the St. Lawrence is equipped. Those boats could not find any trade for the excellent reason that the large carriers could not unload at Port Colborne, but now that Port Colborne is equipped the large carriers will carry the freight there, and then we will have a fleet of smaller craft carrying freight between Port Colborne and the St. Lawrence. I hope that the day is not far distant when our boats that will carry grain and other produce from the west will take back Nova Scotia coal to the west. I hope that when we have equipped our rivers and harbours completely, when we have the St. Lawrence a cheap route, our Canadian bottoms will be in the same position as the Americans. An American bottom goes to Buffalo loaded with grain or ore and returns loaded with coal, and there is no reason why Canadian bottoms should not carry Nova Scotia coal to the west. I am quite of the opinion that the Welland and all the other Canadian canals should be equipped thoroughly, lighted night and day, and made as cheap and safe as money can make them.

Mr. LANCASTER. Is not the Welland Canal thoroughly equipped now for its depth of fourteen feet ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is well equipped but we are just completing our work on that canal.

Mr. KEMP. May I ask the hon. minister one question with reference to this map ? What purpose was it intended to serve, in connection with this table of sailing distances, to say that Depot Harbour is 797 miles from Montreal.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We simply wanted to give all the figures and information possible. On the other side of the map the hon. gentleman will find the railway distances.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think it is a pity that the Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) was not present to hear the Minister of Public Works describe as party politics the arguments we heard from the Minister of Railways and Canals three years ago. The Minister of Public Works is just as responsible for the statements made at the time when the contract between the government and the Grand Trunk Railway was brought before this House as was the Minister of Railways and Canals, and we were told then that the Intercolonial was extended to Montreal for the purpose of getting a large portion of the western trade and bringing it over the Intercolonial Railway to St. John and Halifax. When the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Clarke) to-night made a reference to that statement, the Minister of Public Works said he was introducing party politics. If it was party politics now, I suppose it was party politics then, and the Minister of Public Works is responsible for what was said then just as much as if he had made the statement himself. He talks as if an expenditure of $300,000 or $400,000 for an elevator were a trifle not worthy a moment's consideration. An elevator was built in St. John with the idea of bringing western freight over the Intercolonial Railway which we were assured could and would be done. I pointed out to the Minister of Railways then that it would be far better to attempt to bring the freight to Halifax and save thereby 250 miles of the ocean distance. I also pointed out that the Canadian Pacific Railway should not be ignored, and that instead of spending all the millions which were spent in extending the Intercolonial Railway to Montreal, we should get running powers over the Canadian Pacific Railway from Quebec to Montreal, which would be available as soon as the bridge across the St. Lawrence at Quebec was constructed, and in return should give the Canadian Pacific Railway running rights to Halifax, and thus confer upon the people of Nova Scotia the right to use the Canadian Pacific Railway, which they do not possess at present. The Intercolonial Railway—for the management of which my hon. friend is responsible as a member of this government—has not permitted the Canadian Pacific Railway to be available to the people of Nova Scotia during the past two years at all, as far as freight is concerned. The Intercolonial Railway has refused to accept freight for St. John to be delivered there to the Canadian Pacific Railway for transmission to Montreal. I do not know whether the Intercolonial Railway does so now, but for a considerable period, during the past two years, it refused to accept freight for transmission over that railway. Does the hon. gentleman think that that is dealing with the Canadian Pacific Railway as a national railway and in the spirit in which it should be dealt with, and in which the people of Nova Scotia should be dealt with. These people have paid their share of the construction of that railway and are entitled to the use of it as well as the rest of the Dominion. If there is any change of mind on this matter, it is not on the part of my hon. friend from Toronto, but on the part of the Minister of Public Works himself, because he supported the Minister of Railways and Canals in that contract by his vote, if not by his voice, and that contract went through for reasons which the Minister of Public Works now says are absolutely unworthy of consideration and which should not have the slightest weight for one moment. My hon. friend the Minister of Public Works knows well enough that that elevator was not built at St. John to be used in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway. He surely does not pretend that the idea was ever advanced by any member of the government of which he is a member.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I did not say it was.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Then why does the Minister of Public Works suggest that it can be used for that purpose ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It might.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It might, but that was not the reason on account of which the hon. gentleman voted to expend $300,000 or $400,000, that was not the reason on account of which he supported his colleague when he brought down that scheme. My hon. friend knows that the elevator has not been put to very much practical use since, though I quite agree—the same idea passed through my own mind in visiting St. John the other day when I saw these steamers lying on the western side of the harbour and wharf, and the elevator on the eastern side not used at all—I agree possibly that although this elevator could never be used for the purpose for which it was intended, it might at some future time be used in connection with the operations of the Canadian Pacific Railway. But it is hardly worth while for the hon. gentleman to cast a reflection upon an absent colleague, which he did to-night, by using the language he did use; and because the Minister of Railways and Canals is not here to defend himself I am rising in his absence to defend him from aspersions. I trust that any suggestions of this kind that have to be made to this House will in future be made when the Minister of Railways and Canals is here to defend himself.

Now, we are pretty far afield from the particular item under discussion. But there is one practical question to which I would like an answer, as this subject has been gone into. What does the minister say is the relative cost of water borne freight on, this great waterway which he eventually proposes to construct, so far as I can gather, the Georgian Bay waterway; what is the cost of water borne freight on that waterway as compared with the probable cost during the next five years, or ten years, of freight borne by railways ? If we are going to discuss this question at all that is one of the first things that we have to ascertain, because we cannot come to any proper conclusion on the subject until we get the relative cost of these two modes of conveying freight. The hon. gentleman in answering that question will have to take into consideration all the modern improvements which have been made in railways, the great reductions which have been made in conveying freight on the American railways, and the probable advances towards further reduction of that cost which will be made in the near future. This is a practical matter which I think he might present to the House, and possibly it would be of as much importance for us to know that as to know a great many other matters with which the hon. gentleman has favoured us to-night.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am very sorry the Minister of Railways and Canals is not within the sound of the voice of the leader of the opposition because he would doubtless convey to him his thanks just now. I feel, however, that my hon. friend the Minister of Railways and Canals would not take objection to what I have said if he were here.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I must ask the committee to come back to the item immediately under discussion.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Please allow me to say only one word more. When it was decided to extend the Intercolonial Railway to the city of Montreal the main object was to connect the town of St. John with that great centre of trade. The income of the railway proves that the extension has been good policy, trade has increased very largely indeed.

Mr. BLAIN. I would ask the hon. Minister of Public Works if he has got any experts engaged in looking into the transportation question at the present moment ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have conversed with a great many men in different parts of the country, and asked advice of competent commercial men of different political opinions. I have been in communication with dozens of such men all over the country who take a deep interest in that important question. I do not know what my hon. friend means by an expert.

Mr. BLAIN. What I mean is this, has the hon. gentleman employed any person outside of his own department to look into this great question ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, we have not.

Mr. BLAIN. Just simply within your own department ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My own officers, and business men.

Mr. TUCKER. In connection with these canals, I would like to say one word for what I may term the winter port of Canada, I refer to the port of St. John. Before I left home I procured some statistics which give the quantity of exports from that port. I find that the exports of this year exceeded those of last year, between the 27th of November, and the 25th of January, by $1,050,000. Now in regard to foreign goods shipped from the port of St. John between the 27th of December and the 25th of January, I have also statistics to show that from across the line, from the neighbourhood of places on the established railways of the United States, we had during that period shipped $1,400,958 worth of foreign goods. If we can do that in the present condition of our harbour we can do a great deal better after it has been improved. If these goods can be shipped from St. John in the present state of our harbour and the present state of the American railways, and we can compete favourably with them to the extent that I have indicated, there can be no risk in making that port the future winter port for the business of Canada.

Mr. INGRAM. I desire to say a word concerning this St. Lawrence ship channel for which there was voted last year the sum of $669,000, and for which we are asked to vote this year $500,000 more. The minister says it is his intention to deepen the water to some thirty feet and make the channel 430 feet wide between Montreal and Quebec. The hon. gentleman has told us that he has a magnificent fleet of dredges. I have not been able to glean from his remarks how much each dredge cost, the capacity of each dredge, and the number of dredges that are employed in doing that work. But I notice in the Auditor General's Report that the following dredges have been engaged on this work. The 'Laurier,' the 'Lady Minto,' the 'Lady Aberdeen,' the 'Labelle,' No. 8, No. 11 and 'Spoon Dredge' No. 6. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman if he intends to employ any more dredges than I have named on the work for which he proposes to spend $500,000. I would also like to know when these dredges were built, where they were built, who built them, what is the cost of each dredge, and the capacity of each dredge.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am employing this year a new dredge that started work last autumn it is called 'Sir Louis Hypolite Lafontaine,' which will take the place of No. 11. That will make one dredge additional. All these other dredges, except the 'Laval,' have been built since we took office—since 1896-7. There is a big dredge, the last one I have had built, in Toronto, which will be used also and which will bear my own name. That will be twelve dredges that will be employed. I have said that the suction dredge has cost $250,000 and that the other dredges have cost in the neighbourhood of $125,000. They have all been built at Sorel, except the one built at Toronto in the government shipyard with Canadian labour entirely.

Mr. INGRAM. The hon. gentleman has not stated the capacity of each dredge.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The capacity of the dredges depends very largely on the material on which they work, but the capacity of these dredges night and day is between 6,000 and 8,000 yards per day. It depends very much on the character of the material and whether they strike a rock or other obstruction.

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth). The hon. Minister of Public Works referred to the dredges that entailed an expense of 25, 10, 6 and 4 cents, and so on, for dredging. What does the hon. minister intend to do with these old dredges ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is not one on the St. Lawrence now. They are all gone. I am sorry to say that we have some left on the lakes, but I am now building two new dredges. When I come to that vote, I will give a more detailed explanation. I am building dredges for the lakes also. All of these old dredges are now gone from the St. Lawrence. They cost more than they are worth to operate.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) is away to-night and possibly he may want to make some observations in regard to the matters discussed under this item. I am not asking it to stand, but I would like it to be understood that it may be discussed at a future time if my hon. friend desires to offer any observations upon it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There will be full opportunity. I may say to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden) that the hon. member for Jacques Cartier came to my seat and said that the only question he wanted to say a word upon was the post office in Montreal.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Last year $669,000 was voted. That has all been expended, I suppose?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, there is $170,000 which is not spent yet, but it will be expended by the first of July in building further additions to our fleet, equipping our shipyards in Sorel, and in doing other things in regard to which I will be glad to make a statement.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The result of the expenditure, so far as it has been made, is shown in the report of the hon. gentleman's department.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is all shown?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. All shown.

Port Arthur extension of breakwater and dredging, $35,000. River Kaministiquia, $10,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this all the expenditure that is to be made in connection with the harbours and rivers of Ontario ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, no, there is a lot of money for Ontario, but this is all for this special work which is chargeable to capital.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this all the expenditure that is to be made on the harbours and rivers of Ontario ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot answer for the supplementary estimates but in the main estimates this is all.

Mr. CLARKE. Is there nothing to be done to Toronto harbour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Toronto harbour has never been charged to capital account.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). We perhaps might have some information from the hon. minister as to both of these items, in respect to the present condition of the work and the probable cost when completed.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think that we will spend much at Port Arthur in addition to the amount we are asking for now. As my hon. friend knows the Canadian Northern have now reached that point and it is in view of giving them more depth of water and better accommodation that dredging is going on now. We spent in the neighbourhood of $10,000 last fall. We expect to expend $35,000 this year to complete the dredging necessary. As to the Kaministiquia, I do not know that we will complete the work with that amount, as we are having a great deal of trouble with it. As hon. gentlemen know, this is the terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway and every year we have to do a large amount of dredging there.

Mr. CLARKE. Has the attention of the hon. minister been directed to the question of the Canadian channel in the St. Mary's river ? I was rather surprised, going up and down that river last fall, to learn that we were dependent on the Americans to enable vessels, drawing more than 15 feet of water, to get from the Soo Canal to Lake Huron. I was sorry to learn that vessels drawing 15 feet of water or over had to utilize the new channel at Hay Island constructed by the American government, and which has a depth of 20 or 21 feet of water. Is it the intention of the government to give us a Canadian waterway, or is it intended that we shall remain dependent on the courtesy of our American friends to enable us to get from our Canadian Canal at the Soo to Lake Huron ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Permission was given to the American govenment, I believe, some 25 years ago to dredge in Canadian waters. That permission has been continued ever since. Not only have they been allowed to dredge in our waters, but they have been allowed to place lights and other aids to navigation. Whether this is a right or wrong policy is a matter for the House to decide, but 25 years ago, and perhaps more, permission was given to the American government to do these things. So far no trouble has taken place and I hope we will not have to regret it later on.

Mr. CLARKE. I do not understand that we are in our own waters when we are in the channel alongside Hay Island. I understand the channel is in American waters. I would like to ask the hon. minister whether I am rightly informed. There is no use in talking about having an independent Canadian waterway from the head of Lake Superior to the St. Lawrence if, at a critical point after leaving Lake Superior, we are beholden to the good offices of the American government to enable us to get from the Soo Canal to Lake Huron. Have we a channel 15 or 16 feet in depth from the Soo Canal to Lake Huron ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot say.

Mr. CLARKE. I understand that we are dependent on the American government to enable vessels drawing more than 15 feet of water to get down to Lake Huron.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Department of Public Works has not done any work of that kind on the lakes. I am not prepared to answer the question my hon. friend has asked. The Department of Railways and Canals is dredging in the lakes. Because there were canals at both ends of the lakes, the Department of Railways and Canals has always gone on dredging the lakes. Last year or the year before that, we undertake a survey between Kingston and Prescott in view of ascertaining whether we could not have a Canadian channel of our own, in the way that my hon. friend is pointing out. The survey will be completed in a month and then we will be in a position to know in an accurate way, in what position we are ? Again I say that the Public Works Department have done no work in the past in these lakes.

Mr. CLARKE. We are asked here for an appropriation for harbours and rivers for Ontario and I thought this was the place to endeavour to elicit information. It is surely reasonable to expect that before making this appropriation the hon. minister will be able to make a statement to the committee, whether it is a fact that we have not got any Canadian water channel that will enable Canadian vessels drawing 15 feet of water or over to get down from the Soo Canal to Lake Huron, and that we are dependent on the amity and good will of the American authorities to allow our Canadian vessels to go down. I do not know whether that is a fact or not, but I am asking for information.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I believe that we have not such a channel now. Some parts of the channel were in Canadian waters but these parts have been dredged by the Americans. That does not make our waters American. We have simply allowed them to dredge in Canadian waters.

Mr. CLARKE. But this is American water as I understand.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think so. I will be in a position in a day or two to give a definite answer as to that.

Mr. CLARKE. I submit that this is a matter of sufficient importance to be taken into consideration when we are discussing what is called the national transportation scheme. We have been flattering ourselves that we were independent of our American friends; that we had a perfect water transportation system from the head of Lake Superior to the St. Lawrence, a system of inland navigation that had not a peer anywhere else in the world. We have been speaking about the desirability of keeping pace with the times by getting freight vessels of a capacity of 250,000 bushels, to enable us to bring in Canadian bottoms to Canadian ports on the Georgian Bay, the steadily increasing products of the Northwest that are available for export. Surely, if we have a comprehensive grasp of this transportation question it is of some importance that we should not be barred at any time, or under any circumstance from the right to navigate the St. Mary river and that we should have in Canadian waters absolutely, a channel of sufficient depth to enable these large freighters (which are the only profitable vessels on the upper lakes) to get from Sault Ste. Marie to Lake Huron and the Georgian Bay ports. I must confess that I shall be very much surprised to find out that the information that I obtained last fall is correct, but it is a matter of sufficient importance to justify me in taking up the time of the committee to make inquiry from the minister. If he is not advised at the present time, I hope he will make inquiries and take the House into his confidence in the near future. It is a matter we ought to know all about.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not believe that I am wrong in saying that we have a complete channel. I made a mistake in saying that some part of the channel was in American waters. I know that at Kingston——

Mr. CLARKE. I am not speaking of Kingston; I am speaking of the other end of the St. Mary river.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have no doubt that at the other end the channel is in Canadian waters, but the Americans have been allowed to dredge it. However, the next time I come before the House I will have the whole information on that point.

Mr. CLARKE. I may say to the minister that American despatch boats manned by American sailors are to be found along the route of that new channel, with the object of compelling vessels to observe regulations made by the United States authorities as to the maximum rate of speed at which vessels are allowed to travel through this channel.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would like to know exactly to what point the hon. gentleman refers ?

Mr. CLARKE. The point I allude to is, that I am advised it is an American channel in American waters.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Where ?

Mr. CLARKE. In the St. Mary river; the river that connects Lake Superior with Lake Huron; twelve or fifteen miles east of Sault Ste. Marie. I have been told that this channel is in American waters absolutely, and that our vessels of large draught which take iron ore from Michipicoten, and the vessels that go to Port Arthur, Fort William, and Duluth, to bring down grain, are compelled to use the American channel east of Sault Ste. Marie, because there is not sufficient depth of water in the Canadian channel. I wish for information on that point.

Mr. SUTHERLAND (Essex). The hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Clarke) need not be more surprised that Canadians use the American channel in the St. Mary river, than that in the Detroit river the Americans are using the Canadian channel and are spending thousands of dollars each year in deepening that channel. It is not more surprising that we should be using their channel than that they should be using our channel in the Detroit river.

Mr. CLARKE. That does not help the situation any. We all thought that we had a sufficient Canadian channel of our own.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will bring down the information.

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth). I wish to call the attention of the minister to the fact that in going up the Sault channel on the Canadian Pacific Railway boat, the passengers can only be landed on the American side. I was humiliated last summer to find that to get to the Canadian Sault I had to go on the American side and take a ferry boat across the river. On making inquiries as to the reason, I found there was no pier with deep enough water on the Canadian side, and consequently that all Canadians who go to the Canadian Soo by boat must be landed on the American side.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Smith, Wentworth) is perfectly right, but if he looks at the estimates, he will find I have placed in them a sum of money to have the channel deepened. When the Canadian Sault Ste. Marie channel was built there should have been further dredging done and a proper pier constructed. We are doing that now. Both the Minister of Railways (Hon. Mr. Blair) and myself are working at it now. I share the view of my hon. friend (Mr. Smith) that it is humiliating to see Canadian ships obliged to cross to the American side to take coal and unload there. I paid a visit there, and when I found that state of affairs I asked my colleagues to allow me to place in the estimates a sufficient sum of money to put an end to that condition.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. INGRAM. Is it a fact that the Canadian government never expended any money on the Lime Kiln crossing in the Detroit river, referred to by the hon. gentleman ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot answer that question, because, as I have said, my department has not interfered in the past with that part of the country. I am looking into the matter more carefully now.

Mr. CLARKE.

Mr. INGRAM. Will the minister ascertain if that is the fact ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. With pleasure.

Harbours and rivers, Manitoba, St. Andrews Rapids, $125,000.

Mr. PUTTEE. Last year the appropriation for this work was $175,000, and $125,000 is to be revoted this year, making the expenditure last year $50,000 only. I believe the contract for this work is nearly two years old with only a life-time of three years, and at the present rate of progress it will take us twenty years to get the job finished. It seems to me that if there is any use at all in having these locks constructed, the work should be done within a reasonable time. I wonder whether the minister has got any explanation of the delay, or whether there is any hope that there will be better progress made in the future.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am indeed sorry to have to admit that the work there is not proceeding very fast. The lowest tenderer was accepted in this case. I knew very well when the tender was put before me that it was a very low tender. All my officers told me that it was a very low tender. The contractors deposited the money and I gave them the contract. Since then my officers and myself have been pushing them as hard as possible, but they have not done much work. They have not much plant on the spot. What am I going to do ? Am I going to take the contract from them ? I have notified them on two or three occasions during the last two or three months that unless they make more progress I will be obliged to take the contract from them and call for new tenders. There is no doubt there was ice on the river, and they have thrown the dredging material on the ice, so that it may be carried away when the ice melts, but that is not a satisfactory way of carrying on that work and unless within the next few weeks they show better progress I will be obliged to report to my colleagues and ask them to allow me to take the contract from the present contractors.

Mr. PUTTEE. I believe now as I believed before that contract was let, that the department would be more capable of doing the work itself. I believe that such work as that should be done under the day labour system. I asked a question this afternoon with the idea of trying to get the minister to express his opinion and his experience on the operation of the day labour system. As to the unsatisfactory way the work is being done, of course that would not occur if the department had done the work itself. The department then would only have in view the object of completing the work properly and in good time, and that is what we want up there. Does the minister expect that the $125,000 now asked for will be all the work that he will be able to get done this year ?

Mr. McCREARY. I think the $175,000 as shown on the second column will lapse on the first of July next, and consequently unless there is some portion of it paid out between now and then there will be only $125,000 left for the following year. I must admit that the contractors have delayed considerably the progress of that work, but the hon. member for Winnipeg (Mr. Puttee) is mistaken when he says that two years of the time given them has elapsed. As a matter of fact, the two years will not elapse until next October. There is some excuse for the delay. It happened that last year, Kelley Brothers, who are certainly one of the best contracting firms of the west, undertook to construct a bridge across the Red river at Winnipeg for the Canadian Northern Railway and also another stone bridge across the same river for the Canadian Pacific Railway. Each of these was a large contract, and as it was difficult to obtain labour in the west and wages were high not much progress was made with their contract with this government.

The plant required for the present work has been moved on the ground lately, and from fifty to a hundred men are employed on it now. This year the contractors intend to do work to the extent of $250,000 to $300,000 on this contract, so that the hon. minister is not providing sufficient in the estimates to pay them, and I would suggest that he should put an extra sum into the supplementary estimates.

I would ask the hon. gentleman if he has considered the petition sent in to have the cement work changed to stone. I might point out to him that this work is being done within a very few hundred yards of where there are large stone quarries from which the stone could be brought to the ground at a very small cost.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. By using cement we save $200,000.

Mr. McCREARY. The hon. gentleman cannot get in Canada the quality of cement required by the specifications. He will have to get either St. Louis or Portland cement. In Winnipeg we have never yet been able to get Canadian cement to meet the specifications required by our architects for public buildings, and even some of the American brands of cement, such as was used in the Osborne Street Bridge, were condemned by our architects. If this work could be changed from cement to stone—and I believe that could be done at a very small extra cost—the change should be made and all the work done in this country.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am putting in the estimates as much money as is necessary. My hon. friend will see that we are re-voting $125,000. The $50,000 on last years vote we will be able to pay up to the 1st of July, and then we have a re-vote of $125,000. I will be very glad if they will do more work than that, but they have not done anything to prove that they will do more. If they do parliament will meet early next year, and we will vote a supplementary sum. As to the change from concrete to stone, my hon. friend is unfair to Canadian cement. I am using large quantities of Canadian cement, and my experience is that the Owen Sound and Deseronto cement are just as good as any American brands under the sun. The change suggested would cost about $200,000 to this country. There is no good stone available near by as the quarry there is soft stone which could not be used in such work. Cement being as good as stone and on many occasions better, there is no reason why we should make such a change. Canadian cement may be procured as cheaply, if not cheaper than American, and I say that it is better.

In answer to my hon. friend from Winnipeg (Mr. Puttee), who suggests that if the Department of Public Works had done the work by day's labour more progress would have been made, I believe he is right. But parliament has such strong objections to day labour work, that every time I ask for even a small expenditure on any public work, hon. members insist that I should give it out by tender. I remember saying some five years ago, when I first took office, that when you can find a good foreman and a good engineer—and both are procurable—the day labour system is as a whole the best. I have nothing to gain by this system. It gives the minister a great deal more trouble to carry out the work by day labour, but it has this advantage to the labouring community that the government do not expect to make any profit out of the men or out of the purchase of the material. There is no reason why a government should not carry on work by day labour just as well as any contractor does. But public opinion has to be educated. I have not been able yet to educate it up to that point that I would ask the House to permit me to carry on a work of such importance as this by day labour. But if my hon. friend, who is an educator of public opinion, will help me in that matter, I shall be very glad to have his assistance.

Mr. PUTTEE. Is the contractor bound to use Canadian cement ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I do not believe he is. I have found out in another contract that the contractors were using American cement, and since then I have instructed my officers to specify Canadian cement.

Mr. PUTTEE. In that case the minister should urge on the contractor to use Canadian cement. The petition circulated very extensively throughout Winnipeg and Selkirk during this winter asked the Department of Public Works to consider whether a change could not be made from cement to the native limestone. I am loyal to my province first, but quite a good enough Canadian to say that I would not ask the government to spend $200,000 just for the sake of pleasing us in the west, if the work is not to be benefited to any extent by the change. That is a matter which must be left with the engineers who must be held responsible. If they are found to be right, I am prepared to support the minister in the position he has taken, but I think he should insist that Canadian cement be used. There is a large quantity of cement to be put into the work, and if our cement is as good and as cheap the contractors should be made to use it and that of course will dispense with the objection that we are encouraging a foreign producer.

Mr. McCREARY. I am certainly surprised that such good cement can be found in Canada. That has not been our experience in the west. The contractors of our great corporations use nearly entirely St. Louis and Portland cement.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The Canadian Pacific Railway are using Owen Sound cement.

Mr. McCREARY. It must then be very lately. The city engineer at Winnipeg condemns it. With reference to the hon. minister's statement that the stone quarry is not suitable, my information is that the Tindall stone quarry, nine miles from the works, has as good limestone as can be found on the American continent. That stone is used in the Canadian Pacific Railway bridges and the Canadian Northern, and nearly all the bridges in our province are built of it, and it is found most satisfactory. Portions of the stone are to be seen in the industrial exhibition grounds, thirty feet long and two and a half feet square in one piece, which is pretty good size stone. Mr. Carson, formerly of St. Catharines, an old stone quarry man of large experience, is in charge of the quarry, and he tells me that it is one of the best he ever saw. Even if stone cost a little more than the cement it is due to the people of the west that it should be used. Of course should it transpire that the hon. minister can change the specifications, so that the cement may be bought in Canada of equally good quality, the argument that the money is being sent out of the country will not apply, but if the stone were used, that would enable the people of the west to develop those quarries. I would ask the hon. minister to make further inquiries for his engineer cannot be aware of the fact or he would not have given the information he has. The stone is perfectly suitable and I have no doubt just as cheap as the cement. I have no doubt that some of these stone quarry men would undertake to furnish it at the same price.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot make any promise to my hon. friend. I have reports in my department from competent officers—not alone my engineers in the west, but competent officers of the department here—showing that the stone out there is not fit for such a work. It may be good for bridge work, but cannot be used in work such as this. It is not strong enough. My hon. friend (Mr. McCreary) will not lay down the doctrine that, because there is a local quarry, even if the use of that stone would cost $100,000 more and would not do the work so well, we must use the stone. Such a doctrine could not be defended in parliament. I compliment the hon. gentleman, however, on defending the interest of his province. But the work has been designed for concrete and the concrete is better. Canadian cement can be procured cheaper than American. Messrs. Kelly have not bought any cement yet, but if I can use any influence with them, that influence shall be exerted to have them use Canadian cement.

Public Works—chargeable to capital—Transportation facilities—Montreal Harbour (lower division), improvements below Ste. Marie's Current, $300,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is under contract and is proceeding rapidly. The time limit fixed for completion is the 25th December, and I have no doubt it will be completed by that time. The contractors are a first-class firm and are proceeding with the work with rapidity and skill.

Mr. LANCASTER. Who are the contractors ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Malone & Poupore.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the nature of these improvements ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A jetty 1,000 feet long is being built in the eastern portion of the harbour. The harbour commissioners built two wharfs there some time ago. They are low-level wharfs, but the wharf we are building is a high-level wharf. As we have learned from the newspapers, the Canadian Pacific Railway are going on with very extensive works in that part of the city. Already, a very large trade is going there—the bulky trade seems to be locating in that part of the harbour. It is for the accommodation of this trade that the work has been undertaken. I think I may make bold to say that it will be one of the finest works on this continent. All the work above the water line will be concrete work.

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth). This item speaks of the lower division. What about the upper division ? Is that being completed ? And when will the harbour be finished ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The only work being carried on by my department is the one under discussion. All the other works are under the direction of the harbour commissioners. Things are not going quite so quickly, perhaps, as I would like, but still we are making a great deal of progress. If my hon. friend knows the harbour of Montreal, he will understand that a great longitudinal wharf is being constructed, and three large piers. The longitudinal wharf is very much advanced, and two of the piers are built. The third will be completed during the season. After that, the equipment of the harbour will have to be undertaken—we must lay down tracks, put up sheds and build elevators. I suppose that it is too late to-night to discuss the question at greater length, but, on another occasion, I shall be glad if questions are put to me on these subjects. The country takes a great interest in the port of Montreal. That port does not belong to the city of Montreal alone, but is essentially a part of our national system, and we all take a great interest in it. I anticipate that in a couple of years we shall have a port well enough equipped to handle the vast trade in store for us.

Public Works—chargeable to capital—Transportation facilities—Port Colborne—Harbour improvements, $220,000.

Mr. LANCASTER. How much has been spent on Port Colborne harbour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The amount paid to the contractors so far is $75,000. Of their first contract of 1,300 feet of breakwater, they have completed 900 feet. I was there a few weeks ago, and I am glad to say that the work has stood the test of the storms, though the plan was a little weakened while I was on the other side of the ocean. Before I left we had specified a breakwater 25 feet wide, with a buttress inside. Only the breakwater has been built. Though it has stood the test very well, we have been obliged to put heavy rip-rap on the outer side. My hon. friend (Mr. Lancaster) knows Lake Erie better than I do, and he knows that when there is a large storm there the waves are as high as on the Atlantic Ocean. In spite of that, and in spite of the fact that we had this winter two big storms, the breakwater has not budged more than a couple of inches. Still, on examining the work I thought it better to authorize the rip-rap to be used. To build the work to the shore, we shall require an additional length of not quite 4,000 feet of breakwater and 800 feet of stone approach. The whole length of the breakwater and stone approach will be about 5,700 feet. When this is completed you will have an area of twelve acres for a harbour there. The Department of Railways and Canals are building wharfs at the entrance to the canal. The breakwater is intended to protect the grain trade coming into the canal.

Mr. LANCASTER. How much more is it going to cost before we are through with it?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The whole contract all expenses included, amounts to $435,000.

Mr. LANCASTER. Does that include the extra work that the hon. minister found it necessary to do on account of the storms ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That was a very small amount, only about $10,000 or $12,000.

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth). That is exclusive of elevators ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am reminded that the contract itself is for $395,000.

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth). That is exclusive of any elevators ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think we had better not take up the next item. I would suggest that perhaps the hon. minister is too tired to go on with anything further to-night.

Some resolutions reported.

On motion of the Minister of Public Works, House adjourned at 10.45 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, March 3, 1902.

The SPEAKER took the chair at Three o'clock.

MEMBER INTRODUCED.

Hon. Henry G. Carroll, member for the electoral district of Kamouraska, introduced by the Prime Minister (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier) and the Minister of Justice (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick).

CONTROVERTED ELECTION.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have the honour to inform the House that I have received from the Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada, a certified copy of the judgment of the said court in the election appeal for the electoral district of Beauharnois ; by which the appeal was dismissed and the decision of the lower court, declaring the election void, was confirmed.

In conformity with chapter 9, section 46, of the Revised Statutes, I have issued my warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make out a new writ of election for the said electoral district.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 20) to incorporate the Battleford and Lake Lenore Railway Company.—Mr. Calvert.

Bill (No. 21) respecting the Port Dover, Brantford, Berlin and Goderich Railway Company, to change its name to 'The Grand Valley Traction Company.'—Mr. Heyd.

CHIEF JUSTICESHIP OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER (Pictou). I would like to ask the right hon. the first minister whether the rumours in the press are correct with regard to an appointment having been made to the judiciary of British Columbia. The judicial work in the courts there has been at a standstill awaiting this appointment, and I hold a telegram in my hand stating that the press despatches announce the appointment of Mr. Hunter to the Chief Justiceship. The bar are very anxious to know whether this is accurate.

The PRIME MINISTER. The appointment has been made.

SECOND READING.

Bill (No. 9) respecting the United Gold Fields of British Columbia, Limited.—Mr. Galliher.

PROCEDURE RE BILLS.

Mr. SPEAKER called: 'Questions to be put by members.'

Hon. JOHN COSTIGAN (Victoria, N.B.) There is great inconvenience in passing over all these private bills simply because the letter 'E' does not appear after their notice in the order paper. Of course I know that objection can be taken to our proceeding with the next item, because it is not represented in the order paper as having been printed, but I hold the printed Bill in my hand. There are no doubt good reasons for pursuing this course, but it will be found very inconvenient this session, because we expect it to be short and because there is a large amount of private legislation before parliament which should be facilitated.

Mr. SPEAKER. We are guided to a large extent by the Orders of the Day. I see, by the Orders of the Day, that these Bills have not been printed; and I am informed also that, in many instances the reason why Bills have not been printed is that the promoters have not brought them in at the time prescribed by the rules of the House. I do not think that blame should attach to officers of the House.

Hon. Mr. COSTIGAN. Mr. Speaker, if I may be allowed to speak again—I did not intend to impute blame to any person. I think the rule is that the Order paper for Monday is printed on Saturday morning. That is necessary, I presume, for the convenience of Council, for that is a busy day for Council, and they have to consider matters coming up on Monday. But if this Order paper had been printed this morning, this Bill would have been marked as printed. I have no objection to the rule, but I would call the attention of the government to the fact that it is going to be inconvenient in regard to private legislation.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). In the case to which my hon. friend refers, which, I understand, is the second order, the Bill respecting the Edmonton and Slave Lake Railway Company, I understand, from the statement that has just been made by my hon. friend (Mr. Costigan), that this Bill has actually been printed. It was not printed when the Order paper was printed, but it is now, I understand, in the hands of members. Under such circumstances, I think the House might well take up the Bill. If it is the intention of my hon. friend to have the Bill read the second time, before it is printed I think the House should not agree to that proposition. But, when the Bill is printed, as a matter of fact, I think the order might be proceeded with.

EDMONTON AND SLAVE LAKE RAILWAY COMPANY.

Hon. Mr. COSTIGAN moved the second reading of Bill (No. 12) respecting the Edmonton and Slave Lake Railway Company.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

QUESTIONS.

THE CENSUS—EXPENDITURE TO DATE.

Mr. CLARKE asked:

What sums have been paid out to date in connection with the taking of the recent census of the Dominion?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon. Sydney Fisher). The total amount to date is $948,410.55.

GOVERNMENT ELEVATORS, ST. JOHN AND HALIFAX.

Mr. GANONG—by Mr. Blain—asked:

1. What quantity of grain or other produce has been handled by the government elevators at the cities of St. John and Halifax, respectively, between January 1st, 1901, and January 1st, 1902?

2. What revenues, if any, have been received from these elevators, and what has been the total cost of running and caring for these elevators, respectively?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland).

1. There has been handled by the government elevator at St. John in the year ended 31st December, 1901, 146,087 bushels of wheat. No grain or other produce was handled by the government elevator at Halifax between 1st January, 1901, and 1st January, 1902.

2. There are no direct revenues from the elevators; the elevator charges are included in the through rates for carrying the grain. The cost of running and caring for the St. John elevator was $4,989.93, and the Halifax elevator $2,016.50, up to January 31st, 1902.

DISMISSAL OF POSTMASTER DAVID CLINTON, WELLINGTON, ONTARIO.

Mr. ALCORN—by Mr. Lennox—asked :

For what reason was David Clinton dismissed from the office of postmaster at Wellington, Ontario ?

If for alleged offensive partisanship, of what overt act or acts was such partisanship alleged to consist ?

Were any, and what, specific charges preferred against him, and by whom ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. William Mulock). It was shown that the postmaster at Wellington was in the habit at parliamentary elections of allowing the post office to be used practically as a committee room by his political friends, and also of permitting political posters of a partisan character to be hung up on the walls of the post office during elections, to the great annoyance of those patrons of the office not in political sympathy with him, and that he proved himself an energetic and offensive political partisan; and that his health was so poor as to not allow him to give proper personal attention to the affairs of the office. Under these circumstances he was relieved of the office. The information reached the Postmaster General from a source that is considered, beyond any question, reliable.

THE CANNERS AND THE COMMISSIONER OF FISHERIES.

Mr. BELAND asked :

Has the attention of the government been called to an article which appeared in the Victoria 'Colonist' on the 9th February, 1902, part of which reads as follows :—

'In speaking of the grievances of the canners, Professor Prince, commissioner of fisheries, said there were no doubt many grievances, many matters to set right, and if they had been set right long ago, it would have been better for the government; but the government have not had a minister who could form a resolution and act on it since the days of Sir Hibbert Tupper.'

2. Is it the intention of the government to have an investigation as to whether Professor Prince expressed himself as above reported ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland). In answering this question, I think I cannot do better than read a letter received from Professor Prince. It is as follows :

Department of Marine and Fisheries,
Ottawa, 3rd March, 1902

Dear Mr. Sutherland,—Respecting the question of Mr. Béland, M.P., as to a statement which it has been alleged I made in an interview on the 8th February last, I beg to say that the statement is absolutely untrue and without foundation. I made no such statement to any representative of the press or to any other person.

Yours faithfully,
EDWARD E. PRINCE,
Dominion Commissioner of Fisheries.

The Hon.
James Sutherland, M.P.,
Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

I may also add that Professor Prince informs me that no such interview took place, and that the paragraph quoted in the question is part of a long series of statements published in the newspaper referred to, which Professor Prince shows not only misrepresent his views on British Columbia questions, but are exactly opposite in every particular to the opinions held by him.

THE SALARY OF THE GENERAL OFFICER COMMANDING.

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria)—by Mr. Clarke—asked :

Has the government under consideration, or has it decided on, an increase in the salary and allowances of the General Officer Commanding in Canada, so as to make the income nearly equivalent to that of a major-general on service in the Imperial service ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. F. W. Borden). The government has not had under consideration any proposal to increase the salary and allowances of the general officer commanding.

DUTY ON BLEACHED AND UNBLEACHED COTTON.

Mr. MADORE—by Mr. Lavergne—asked :

What is the present rate of duty on bleached and unbleached cottons ; and what was the rate on the same under the Mackenzie tariff ?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Hon. Wm. Paterson). The present customs duty on cotton fabrics, white or gray, bleached or unbleached, is 25 per cent ad valorem, subject to a rebate of one-third the duty, making the net rate 16⅔ per cent, when made in and imported direct from a country admitted to the benefits of the British Preferential Tariff of Canada. The customs duty on the same fabrics under the Customs Tariff of 1877, was 17½ per cent ad valorem.

GOVERNMENT RAILWAY SHOPS, MONCTON AND CHARLOTTETOWN.

Mr. PUTTEE asked :

1. How many men are employed in the government railway shops at Moncton, New Brunswick, and Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island ?

2. How many hours constitute a day's work in these shops ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland) :

1. There are 755 men employed in the government railway shops at Moncton, New Brunswick, and 79 men in the government railway shops at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

2. Ten hours constitute a day's work in these shops.

PRINCE OF WALES VISIT—ILLUMINATION OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. To whom was given the contract for the illumination of public buildings in Ottawa during the visit of the Prince of Wales last year ?

2. What was the amount paid for such illumination ?

3. How much was charged per lamp ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). In the absence of the hon. Minister of Public Works, I am requested to give the following answers to the hon. gentleman's questions :

1. Ahearn & Soper.

2. Amount paid $5,000, but cost was : Parliament Building, at $5,000; East and West Blocks, at $4,000 each; equals $13,000 as per plan by tender. Langevin Block, bridges, Wellington Street, post office and festoons, $4,150 as per tender for buildings, &c. ; total, $17,150.

3. The contracts were given for designs, lamps to be placed at given distances or groups. No account was kept of the number used.

PAYMENTS TO NEWSPAPERS.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. What is the total amount paid by the government to the Montreal 'Herald' since the 30th June last ?

2. What is the total amount paid by the government to the Toronto 'Globe' since the 30th June last ?

3. What is the total amount paid by the government to the Halifax 'Chronicle' since the 30th June last ?

4. What is the total amount paid by the government to 'Le Soleil,' of Quebec, and 'La Patrie,' of Montreal, since the 30th June last ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). This information cannot, at present, be obtained. I think it would be more convenient if the hon. gentleman would move for a return, as the information he desires relates to various departments, and not to any one particular department.

CIRCULATION OF DOMINION NOTES.

Mr. SPROULE asked :

1. How many one dollar bank notes were issued in each year from 1892 to 1901, both dates inclusive ?

2. How many two dollar bank notes were issued in each year from 1892 to 1901, both dates inclusive ?

3. How many four dollar bank notes were issued in each year from 1892 to 1901, both dates inclusive ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). The hon. gentleman's question is intended to refer, I presume, to Dominion notes, not to bank notes, notes of the denominations mentioned are not issued by the banks. The following is a statement of the Dominion of Canada $1, $2 and $4 notes issued by the Comptroller of Dominion Currency at Ottawa to the several assistant Receivers General in Canada for each year from 1892 to 1901, inclusive.

1891..	1,452,000	816,000	304,000
1892..	1,536,000	832,000	320,000
1893..	1,680,000	872,000	304,000
1894..	1,636,000	896,000	288,000
1895..	1,788,000	1,024,000	208,000
1896..	1,784,000	1,008,000	176,000
1897..	1,816,000	1,000,000	208,000
1898..	2,344,000	1,280,000	352,000
1899..	2,596,000	1,480,000	264,000
1900..	2,272,000	1,544,000	40,000
1901..	2,760,000	1,616,000	816,000
	$21,664,000	$12,368,000	$3,280,000

LIEUT.-COL. VANWAGNER'S REMOVAL.

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth) asked :

1. Has the matter referred to in the following letter, addressed by C. D. Pinault, Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence, to Lieut.-Col. VanWagner, on November 25th, 1899, been investigated :—

'Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 8th inst., addressed to the Right Honourable the Earl of Minto, and transferred to this department, I have the honour to inform you that the matter concerning your removal will be investigated.'

2. If so, by whom ?

3. What is the finding ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. F. W. Borden). After the date of the letter of the deputy minister quoted in the question, I looked into the matter, and came to the conclusion that there was nothing requiring investigation.

STEAMSHIPS WITH COOLING PLANTS OR FANS.

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth) asked :

1. What steamers have been fitted up with cooling plants to cool the compartments containing perishable products in conformity with agreement with the government of Canada ?

2. What other steamships than those named in the House by the Minister of Agriculture last year have been fitted with fans to produce a circulation of fresh air in the compartments in which perishable products are carried, if any ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon. Sydney Fisher). Part of the information called for in this question is now in the hands of the department, but another part has yet to be obtained. I will allow the question to stand until I can get the whole.

BUSINESS OF 'SAMPLE POST.'

Mr. BROCK—by Mr. Clarke—asked :

1. What quantity of samples by 'sample post' is brought into Canada ?
2. Does the postage thereon pay the cost of carriage and handling ?
3. If not, what amount is lost to the country ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Hon. Wm. Mulock) :

1. No record is kept by this department of the quantity of samples brought into Canada from foreign countries.
2. The postage on such matter is paid in and retained by the country of origin, and in accordance with the provisions of the Universal Postal Convention there is no charge by Canada except in the case of deficient postage.
3. It is impossible to form an estimate of the cost of transmission of such matter.

THE GERMAN TARIFF.

Mr. KEMP—by Mr. Clarke—asked :

1. To what nations or dependencies does Germany apply her minimum and maximum tariff respectively ?
2. What is the date of the last Anglo-German Treaty ?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright) :

1. The latest list of countries enjoying 'Most Favoured Nation Treatment' is that published in July, 1898, and is in virtue of a decision of the Bundesrath, dated 26th May, 1898, and is as per attach.

All other nations are supposed to be subject to the maximum tariff.

It does not follow in all cases that because certain countries are on the list as enjoying 'Most Favoured Nation Treatment' that they have the full benefit of the minimum tariff, as in some instances they are under special treaty covering only certain specified articles.

2. The date of the last Anglo-German treaty was May 30th, 1865, with some subsequent supplements, which treaty has been denounced, so that there exists at present no regular commercial treaty between the two countries, but pending negotiations Great Britain and her colonies, with the exception of Canada and Barbadoes, are given the benefit of the 'Most Favoured Nation Treatment.'

Bulletin International des Douanes.
The International Customs Journal.
Germany.
16th Supplement to No. 25.
(July 1898.)

In virtue of a decision of the Bundesrath, dated May 26, 1898 (1), the list of countries enjoying the most-favoured nation treatment(2) is modified as follows :

Argentine Republic, Belgium, Chile, Denmark, Ecuador, Egypt, France including Colonies, transmarine Possessions and the Principality of Monaco, Greece, Great Britain including Colonies and transmarine Possessions (3), Guatemala, Hawaiian Islands, Honduras, Italy including the Republic of Saint Marin, Colombia, Republic of Liberia, Madagascar, Morocco, Mexico, Nicaragua, Netherlands including Colonies and transmarine Possessions, Austria-Hungary including the territories of Bosnia and Herzegovina belonging to the customs circumscription as well as the Principality of Lichtenstein, Orange Free State, Paraguay, Persia, Roumania, Russia, Salvador, Sweden and Norway, Switzerland, South African Republic (Transvaal), Turkey (with Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia), Tunis, United States of America, Zanzibar, German territories excluded from the customs circumscription, German Colonies and Protectorates.

(1) 'Centralblatt f. d. Deutsche Reich' No. 22, of 1898.

(2) See No. 25, page 3.

(3) According to the law of May 11, 1898 ('Reichsgesetzblatt,' No. 19, of 1898), the Bundesrath is authorized to grant the most-favoured nation treatment to Great Britain, her Colonies and transmarine possessions until June 30, 1899.

ADVERTISEMENTS OF BINDER TWINE.

Mr. BLAIN asked :

1. In what newspapers was the advertisement for the sale of binder twine inserted, and how many insertions in each paper ?
2. To whom was the circular asking for tenders sent ?
3. What quantity of each kind of twine was purchased by Henderson Black ?
4. From whom were tenders received ?
5. Was the highest tender in each case accepted ?
6. Has any binder twine been sold since June 30, 1901, without tender ?
7. Where does Henderson Black reside ?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Hon. H. G. Carroll) :

1. Toronto 'Globe,' Hamilton 'Times,' London 'Advertiser,' Montreal 'Herald,' Montreal 'La Patrie,' Winnipeg 'Free Press,' London 'Record,' Brandon 'Sun,' Windsor 'Record.' Two insertions in each paper.
2. Two dealers to whom prison twine had previously been sold as well as to other twine dealers known to the prison officials.
3. Five hundred and eighty-six thousand seven hundred and ninety-three pounds of mixed grades, and 60,000 pounds of sisal.
4. Tenders were received from Henderson Black, Hobbs Hardware Company, Ontario Binder Twine Company, and S. S. Dickinson.
5. The highest tender in each case was accepted.
6. Twine when available has been sold to farmers since July, 1901, in the same manner as previous to that date.
7. At. St. John's, Quebec.

PARTISANSHIP IN ELECTIONS.

Mr. LEONARD—by Mr. Monk—asked :

1. What measures does the government purpose adopting in regard to such public employees as take an active and open part in a Federal election ?
2. Has the Honourable the Prime Minister ever, in the course of a speech in the House of Commons, given expression to an opinion on the subject of such employees ?

3. If so, what was that opinion ?

4. If not, does he hold one, and what is it ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The same measures will be taken in the future as have been taken in the past with regard to public employees who are accused of offensive partisanship. When the charges are brought to the attention of the government they will be investigated, and the case will be dealt with according to the evidence.

SESSIONAL CLERKS.

Mr. SPROULE—by Mr. Maclean—asked :

Are there any of the sessional clerks employed in any other capacity in the civil service and drawing pay for it, except their duties here ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The government have no knowledge that sessional clerks are employed in the way suggested by the question.

NOTES ISSUED SINCE 1892.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. How many sheets of $1 notes have been issued since 1892 per annum ?

2. How many sheets of $4 notes have been issued per annum since 1892 ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). Number of sheets of $1 and $4 notes issued by the comptroller of Dominion currency since 1892, per annum :

Year.	$1 Notes Sheets.	$4 Notes. Sheets.
1893	420,000	19,000
1894	409,000	18,000
1895	447,000	13,000
1896	446,000	11,000
1897	454,000	13,000
1898	586,000	22,000
1899	649,000	16,500
1900	568,000	2,500
1901	690,000	51,000

MR. C. R. DEVLIN, IMMIGRATION AGENT.

Mr. WILSON—by Mr. Gilmour—asked :

1. Has the attention of the government been called to an interview alleged to have been given by Mr. C. R. Devlin, ex-M.P., Canadian Immigration Agent in Ireland, to the Montreal 'Witness' of the 17th January, 1902, as follows:—

'Mr. C. R. Devlin, Dominion Immigrant Agent, is a follower of John Redmond. Believes that Ireland should have a separate parliament. Why Canada does not get the Irish immigrant in large numbers.

'Mr. Charles R. Devlin, the Dominion Immigrant Agent at Dublin, Ireland, has often, upon the floor of the House of Commons, and the public platforms of the country, eloquently pleaded the cause of Home Rule for Ireland. An Irish-Canadian, he was always candid in his sympathy for those who were fighting for a separate parliament for the Irish people.

'A residence in Ireland itself has but served to deepen his love for the cause. Mr. Devlin is an official of the Dominion Government, but he is an enthusiastic follower of John Redmond, who is now preaching a no-rent crusade in Ireland which threatens to have far-reaching consequences. But, Mr. Devlin, while fulfilling his duties, also subscribes to the Land League, and is heart and soul with those who desire to have separation with Great Britain.

'Mr. Devlin is at present in the city stopping at the Windsor Hotel. He was asked this forenoon to say a word as to the condition of Ireland at the present, more especially in regard to the acute form which the Irish agitation had recently taken—the form of an overwhelming organization, whose chief doctrine was that the people should not pay rent.

'Mr. Devlin replied by saying that it must be remembered that he was not a politician, but an official of the government, who was subject to criticism, and who must be careful of the answers which he gave. At the same time, he had never concealed his opinions when in parliament, and had not changed when he went to live in Ireland. He was a follower of John Redmond and a subscriber to the funds of the Land League. He was an Irish-Canadian, but blood was thicker than water, and he did not forget that England oppressed Ireland because the Irish were Catholics.

'You are not a believer in physical force, are you, Mr. Devlin ?

'No, I have no sympathy for physical force at all. I am for effecting the purpose by constitutional means. There is no necessity for physical force in the premises.

'Do you approve of the agitation of which the object is to prevent the tenant farmers of Ireland from paying rent in any shape or form ?

'I am in sympathy with the programme mapped out by John Redmond. Here is the stand I take, and I do not care who knows it :—

'I am in full sympathy with the National movement, and as an Irish-Canadian and a Roman Catholic, I see no reason why Ireland should not receive the same measure of responsible government as is enjoyed in Canada. To put the whole case in one word—before going to Ireland, I was a Nationalist, and since that I am now such in a more pronounced degree.

'The whole question is this, said Mr. Devlin, shall Ireland have a separate parliament ? I think she should. Others take a different view. They are entitled to their opinion. Indeed, we have frequent discussions over the matter in my office. There are those in Ireland who say that there should be no legislative separation ; on the other hand, the great bulk of the people are in favour of a separate parliament, and I am with them in this. I have nothing to conceal as far as my personal views are concerned, but, of course, I have no desire to talk politics.

'Do you believe, Mr. Devlin, that the establishment of industries in the south and west of Ireland would go far towards the creation of better conditions ?

'No doubt this would be a feature in the case.

'Is the country prosperous ?

'Well, there was a good crop.

'Have the farmers money in the bank ?

'I have not studied the economic question.

'How are the county councils working ?

'Very well, indeed.

'Do the people take much interest in the local questions which come up at the meetings ?

'Well, as much as they do in this country.

'Mr. Devlin was asked how it was that Canada got so few Irish immigrants, the bulk of whom went to the United States.

'First of all, according to Mr. Devlin, there is the question of the flag, which plays an important part with the Irishman. He does not particularly like the British flag. He does not want to go to another country where he will be under it. He goes to the United States in preference. He had no doubt that the action of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in appearing at Mr. Redmond's meeting would do much to remove the prejudice which was felt against the Dominion, while, at the same time, the Dominion was in no wise hurt by the action of the Premier.

'In the second place, Mr. Devlin continued, effort should have been made thirty years ago. That effort was only made yesterday, so to say. Ninety per cent of the persons who left Ireland for the United States did so on prepaid tickets—tickets which had been purchased by friends who had gone to the United States thirty, twenty, ten years ago. Had the Dominion made an effort thirty years ago, such passages would have been paid to Canada. In the third place, it must be remembered that Ireland had none of the aids to immigration which were so evident in England. She had only three agencies in the whole country. On the other hand, in England there was the work of the Dominion Government, the work of the Provincial Governments, the work of the Canadian Pacific Railway. At the same time, he could say there had been a considerable improvement, and the Dominion was beginning to get a fair share of Irish immigration. There had been fourteen hundred immigrants from Ireland to the Dominion in eleven months last year. This showed a decided increase over previous records.

'It has been said, Mr. Devlin, there is lack of zeal on the part of the government agents, who do their work perfunctorily, and who do not stir up the interest of the people in the advantages which Canada can offer.

'As I said, effort should have commenced thirty years ago in Ireland. All is done that can be done under the circumstances.

'One of the planks in the new programme of Mr. Redmond is that the people should be taught to remain in the country. As you are a subscriber to the funds of the league, is your position as an immigrant agent not rather incongruous? You sympathize with the desire of the league to retain the people on the soil, and yet you must urge immigration.

'But I don't urge it.

'No? Then the office and the work are in the nature of a superfluity?

'Come, come, said Mr. Devlin, laughingly, you are a desperate interviewer, but I will define my position.

'I do not urge immigration from Ireland, and I never will. I agree that Ireland should be the home of the Irishman, and I will be glad when the day comes when no Irishman will have to leave Ireland; I will then gladly come back to work in my own country. But we have to notice the fact that there is a large immigration from Ireland, and my aim is to secure for Canada the largest possible proportion.

'Asked if the establishment of a fast Atlantic service would have a beneficial effect on immigration, Mr. Devlin said he would prefer not to answer that question.

'In regard to his present mission, Mr. Devlin said:—I am here on important matters in connection with my office, and as soon as I can get them settled, I will go back. I am particularly anxious to have the Canadian exhibit at the Cork show made as good and as effective as possible. I hope to return in two weeks.

2. Did the government or any of its officers communicate with Mr. Devlin respecting such interview?

3. If so, what reply, if any, has been received from Mr. Devlin?

4. Has Mr. Devlin sent any communication to the department or to any officer of the government respecting the above interview? And, if so, what is the nature of the reply?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding):

1. The government, through the press and through the proceedings of the Agricultural and Colonization Committee, has had its attention called to the alleged interview.

2. No.

3. See 2.

4. Mr. Devlin does not admit the accuracy of the newspaper report.

JAMAICA AND COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS.

Mr. KEMP—by Mr. Clarke—Asked:

1. Did the commercial agent of the Dominion make representations to the government of Jamaica in reference to the repeal of the law imposing a tax on commercial travellers from Canada; and has such tax been abolished?

2. What steps, if any, have the government taken to cancel or render ineffective certain legislation of the government of Prince Edward Island 'in restraint of the freedom of trade' popularly known as a 'tax on commercial travellers' from other provinces in the Dominion?

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright).

1. The Department of Trade and Commerce received a communication from the commercial agent at Kingston, Jamaica, dated 9th October last, in which he stated that he had an inquiry some time previous from a Canadian firm asking whether if they sent a representative there to show samples of their manufactures he would be liable to pay a tax under existing law; and that he had raised the question with the government of Jamaica and hastened to communicate the fact, for the information of the Canadian government, that it is the intention of the government of Jamaica to introduce a Bill at the next session of the legislative council to repeal the law imposing a tax on commercial travellers.

2. No further information has been received on the subject.

INDEMNITY TO JOSEPH LAROSE.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier) moved for:

Copy of all correspondence upon the subject of an indemnity to Joseph Larose, of St. Laurent, P.Q., wounded in connection with the Cote St. Luc rifle ranges; and copy of the judgments of the Exchequer and Supreme Courts upon the petition of right of said Joseph Larose.

He said : In moving for this correspondence with regard to the claim made by Mr. Joseph Larose, of St. Laurent, I merely wish to call the attention of the Minister of Militia and Defence (Hon. Mr. Borden) to the circumstances regarding it. The Minister of Militia and Defence and the members of this House will probably remember that three or four years ago Joseph Larose was very severly wounded by a bullet, which, as I think is admitted on all hands was established at the time he urged his claim against the government, came from the government rifle ranges at Cote St. Luc. An investigation was held by the department, and after taking evidence, the government came to the conclusion that Joseph Larose was entitled to an indemnity. This was a short time after the injury had been inflicted. The amount of $1,000 was placed in the estimates. But in the meantime the condition of Mr. Larose having become no better but worse, he consulted counsel in Montreal, retaining the services of one of our lawyers there, and after consulting others, his lawyer came to the conclusion that this sum of $1,000 was not sufficient to indemnify Mr. Larose for the injury he had received, the injury in the meantime having become of a permanent nature, as it is to-day. He therefore proceeded to obtain a fiat from the government in order to make a claim before the Exchequer Court. He proceeded by petition of right, and his petition was dismissed—I have not seen the judgment—but I think upon some technical ground. Speaking from memory, it was upon the ground that he had been wounded when he was not upon public works, but was off the area where those public works were being executed, and this barred his claim. That is what I was told ; I have not seen the judgment. This motion calls for a copy of the judgment of the Exchequer Court, and the judgment of the Supreme Court as well. He appealed his case to the Supreme Court and the appeal was dismissed. To-day the claimant is exactly in the same condition as he was after the wound had been inflicted. He is no better and no worse ; he is disabled for life, and is unable to execute any agricultural work whatever upon his farm. He is not a man of large means, he is obliged to employ a paid servant to do the work which otherwise he would be able to do himself. Under these circumstances, I think it is proper that the equity of his claim should be once more brought to the attention of the government, and I would ask the Minister of Militia and Defence to investigate anew his claim, after communicating with the lawyer who represented him in these two courts, and if possible, to grant him, if not the indemnity which was voted previously by this House, at any rate some indemnity to which I think he is absolutely entitled. Possibly, in view of the incapacity in which he finds himself to-day to do any agricultural work, the government might find some employment for him. But under the circumstances, he having been unfortunate in his attempt to recover before the courts, having been defeated, so far as I understand, upon a mere technical point, I think his claim should commend itself to the minister of the department.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. F. W. Borden). Mr. Speaker, the circumstances as stated by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) are practically the facts. I am not thoroughly familiar with the judgment, but I know the result of the judgment is what the hon. gentleman has stated. In addition to that, however, I am aware that the judge, in delivering that judgment, expressed the hope—I think it was a hope—that the government might look further into the case, that although he had not been able to go into the case on account of some technicalities, he still thought it was a case that the government might fairly investigate further. I may say to the hon. gentleman that I have had it under consideration recently and that I felt that parliament would consent that the sum of $1,000 which was voted two years ago, I think, and not then accepted, should be again offered to Mr. Larose. In view, however, of the statement made by the hon. gentleman I am quite willing that a further examination of Mr. Larose should be made by a competent surgeon. I was not aware that his condition of health was serious. I was under the impression that he was able to do a certain amount of work, but if he is entirely unfitted for doing work perhaps it would be desirable that a further examination of the case should be made, and I shall be very glad indeed to have that done if necessary.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick). If I indicate to my hon. friend (Mr. Monk) where he will find the judgments, perhaps he will be good enough to withdraw his motion as it would then be unnecessary for us to get the judgments of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts. My hon. friend will find the Exchequer judgment at 6 Exchequer Court Reports, page 425, and the Supreme Court Judgment at 31 Supreme Court Reports, page 206. I may just add that when the accident happened and an investigation was made by the Militia Department, it was decided to place $1,000 in the estimates to provide for the remuneration of Mr. Larose to some extent for the accident, although, of course, no liability was admitted. Mr. Larose was not satisfied with the amount then offered and took proceedings in the Exchequer Court by which proceedings he claimed $10,000 damages. It was found in the Exchequer Court that there was no jurisdiction in the court to deal with the case, because the accident, if accident there was, did not happen on what is known as a public work, it being held that the rifle range at Cote St. Luc was not a public work within the meaning of the Exchequer Court Act. The judge said that he thought the amount then put in the estimates to make provision for the damages would still remain available to him. The amount did remain available. Notwithstanding that Larose took an appeal to the Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court held, first, that there was no claim because the accident did not occur upon a public work, the man being a mile distant from the Cote St. Luc rifle ranges from which the bullet was supposed to have been fired, and it held further that as a matter of fact there was no evidence that the rifle ball had been fired from a rifle in the hands of a servant of the Dominion government or even of a militiaman, because the rifle ranges at Montreal are frequented, not only by militiamen, but by those who desire to indulge in target practise. However, so far as the courts are concerned, it has been decided that this matter is out of court. I am very glad to hear the Minister of Militia and Defence (Hon. Mr. Borden) say that the amount originally intended to be paid might still be available, and I think this is fairly generous treatment under the circumstances, because the Crown has been put to a fairly large amount of costs in defending these suits.

Mr. MONK. I was not aware that the court had decided exactly to the extent which the hon. Minister of Justice just referred, and I am not aware that the rifle ranges, being used with the consent of the government even by a man who is not a militiaman, would shield the government from responsibility. However, in view of the explanations which have been just given, I see no object in pressing the motion, and I would therefore ask permission to withdraw it.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I will read from the judgment of the Supreme Court the following extract:

> I would say, apart from the reason that this rifle range was not a public work in the sense of the Act, that there is no evidence here that the suppliant's wounding resulted from the negligence of any officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment, or that he suffered any injury on any public work. Moreover, it is not proved who fired the shot that wounded the suppliant. It may have been fired by one of the amateurs, or volunteers not on duty, who were there practising on that day with the men having what is called in the case, government practise.

Motion withdrawn.

TELEPHONES AND TELEPHONE COMPANIES BILL.

On the Order for:

Second reading of Bill (No. 2) respecting telephone companies—Mr. Maclean.

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Mr. Speaker, I would ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. Maclean) to allow this item to be postponed as the government is going to introduce a measure to the same purpose.

Mr. MACLEAN. May I ask the right hon. gentleman when the government are likely to introduce the measure?

The PRIME MINISTER. I think on Wednesday.

Mr. MACLEAN. All right.

DRAINAGE ON AND ACROSS RAILWAY PROPERTY.

Mr. M. K. COWAN (South Essex) moved second reading of Bill (No. 4) respecting drainage on and across the property of railway companies. He said: Mr. Speaker, this subject of drainage on and across the property of railway companies is one that is not new to this House. It was some years ago introduced by the then hon. member for West Elgin (Mr. Casey). In 1900, some amendments were made to the Railway Act. The object and the purport of the Bill at that time was to amend the procedure by which municipalites and landowners could drain across the property of railway companies. In 1900, the Act was amended enabling landowners to come before the Railway Committee of the Privy Council. Prior to that time they could only reach it through the municipalities and if it were a drain under the Ditches and Watercourses Act of Ontario, not being a municipal drain, within the true sense of a municipal drain, they could not get before the Railway Committee of the Privy Council. In 1900, the Railway Act was amended enabling a land owner to come before the Railway Committee of the Privy Council if he desired to drain across the land of a railway company. My object in introducing this Bill is to adopt the provincial laws in force in the various provinces enabling the landowners to use the provincial machinery to drain across the lands of the railway companies under the same procedure as they could drain across the land of any other landowner—with the exception, that wherever the procedure does not enable or provide for notice to be served upon the railway company, a notice shall be served upon them; giving the railway company an opportunity of agreeing with the engineer of the municipality or landowner as to the point at which the railway shall be crossed, and also as to the cost and other details in connection with it. In the event of these two parties, after a conference, failing to agree, the Bill then provides that the county court judge, or the judge having jurisdiction in the district, should settle the matter—the question of costs being determined by the judge. In order to safeguard the interest of the travelling public I have inserted a clause to the effect that the railway companies shall have the right to do the work upon their own lands. I quite realize that it would be inadvisable to permit every person to invade the railway lands and construct a drain or tunnel under the road-bed. I have, therefore, in the interest of the railway companies, made that provision.

The necessity for drainage across railways was decided on in this House when the Railway Act was amended in 1900. I think the Prime Minister then admitted that there was a necessity for the simplification of the existing machinery. I contend that the Railway Committee of the Privy Council is not the proper tribunal before which a private landowner should be compelled to go in order to enable him to construct a drain costing practically only a few dollars. There are very few farmers who will invoke the machinery at present in force and go to the Railway Committee of the Privy Council. The name in itself 'Railway Committee of the Privy Council' scares the average landowner from coming before that body, and the fact that an ordinary farmer may have to travel hundreds of miles to Ottawa is an absolute barrier. The farmers are not acquainted with the machinery of that tribunal, and I venture to say that there are not 50 per cent of the members of this House; yes, not 50 per cent possibly of the lawyers of this House who are acquainted with the different steps to be taken in order to bring a case before the Railway Committee of the Privy Council.

The portions of the province of Ontario which I think stand most in need of this legislation are the western counties. Take the counties of Essex, Kent, Elgin and Lambton and I am within the mark when I say that there is not a thousand acres in any of these counties but has been either directly or indirectly assessed and taxed for the construction of drainage work. In those flat sections of the country it is necessary to construct large artificial drains extending for miles, and portions of these counties present the appearance of being ditched like a checker board. So far as the county of Essex is concerned, the fall is to the north into Lake St. Clair. Along the northern border of that county, the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Michigan Central, three large trunk lines have constructed their road-beds. In order that the farmer could successfully prosecute an action under the Ontario law against a railway corporation for the damming up or damming back of water, it must have been a natural stream or a natural watercourse. There are but few natural watercourses in that county, because the water flows gently over the surface of the land with a fall probably of from four feet to nine feet per mile. The result is that there is not sufficient current, and no hill to precipitate the water at a rapid rate so as to form cuts in the earth, and so there are miles and miles in that county where the water flows gently over the surface of the soil leaving no track behind it that could within the meaning of the law be called a natural watercourse. The result is that when the water flows down to the railway track and the railway company construct their road-bed closing up the point across which that water originally flowed, no action will lie against the railway corporation, because they have not stopped up what is called a natural stream, or a natural watercourse within the meaning of the Ontario decisions.

If a farmer desires to cross that track with his drain he is compelled to come before the Railway Committee of the Privy Council. As we know, railway corporations are slow to grant anything that they are not obliged to grant. I venture to say that there are few instances in which any railway corporation has ever permitted a culvert to be constructed under its road-bed, until it was compelled to do so by the highest legal authority. Suppose the matter is in dispute and a farmer in the county of Essex finds it necessary to construct a drain, then you ask him to come 500 miles to the Railway Committee of the Privy Council at Ottawa, to bring his witnesses and his engineers, and to retain counsel. I say there is not one farmer out of a hundred who will do that. I am within the mark in saying, that in these low lying sections of the country every four or five years some farmer loses the entire crop of the soil, because he is unable to make proper drainage across these railways. The land in that section of the country being largely clay and not porous as in sandy sections, it holds the water on the surface and therefore drainage is absolutely necessary. There is scarcely a township in the county of Essex that has not spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in the construction of drains to drain the land. It is a direct tax. These drains are filled up with silt, they cave in and so forth until it becomes necessary to renew them about every ten years on an average. The tax for the construction of large drains in the county of Essex through the flat section, runs from 75 cents to $3 per acre and it is a recurring tax. The railway corporations, I am bound to say, wherever the opportunity was afforded them to prevent the farmer or municipality draining across their lines, have not hesitated to take advantage of the opportunity. One corporation draining through a natural creek found it necessary to cross a railway in the construction of a drain costing between $30,000 and $40,000, and the railway company refused to let the dredge pass under the railway bridge until arrangements were made for the payment what they said—according to the statement of the contractor—was the actual cost. They made an arrangement that they should pass under the bridge on a Sunday afternoon when there was little traffic. It took twelve men four hours to raise the girders, and before the railway company permitted the dredge to pass, they compelled them to deposit $1,500, as according to the statement of the contractor—I do not know how true—it was on the understanding that the sum was to cover the expense and that he was to receive back anything in excess of the actual expense. When he wanted to get the dredge out again he was compelled to deposit $1,500 more. It took twelve men four hours, or forty-eight hours labour of one man, to do it. I complained to the Department of Railways and Canals of what I thought was a deliberate steal, and the reply I got from the department was that they had submitted my complaint to the railway company, and the railway company said there was a contract, and consequently the department could not interfere in a matter governed by a contract between the two parties. The corporation still has that $3,000 for ninety-six hours work. In other words, the railway corporation charged at the rate of $31 per hour for what cost it 12½ cents per hour. There is no question of tariff or transportation, which is as important to the western counties as this matter respecting drainage. We do not want anything but what is fair, but we do want to be in a position to prevent a railway corporation from holding water back along its ditches for miles and flooding, in the county of Essex, the most fertile belt in the province of Ontario. Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of this Bill.

Hon. JOHN HAGGART (South Lanark). I would like to ask the hon. gentleman if he intends that the laws of the different provinces regarding drainage across the property of railway companies shall apply, not only as they are at present, but also as they may be from time to time amended by the different provinces.

Mr. COWAN. Section 3 of the Bill provides that subject to the provisions of this Act municipalities and landowners shall have the right of drainage on and across the property of any railway company to the same extent and by the same proceeding as they have by law on and across the property of any other landholders. This is subject to the provision that the railway company shall have the option of itself constructing a portion of the drains crossing its own land. In this I think we would be adopting the laws of the provinces, as they are now, and as they may subsequently be amended. Such is the intention at all events.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. I have no objection to the Bill going to the Railway Committee and there being fully discussed. But I would like to draw the attention of the Minister of Justice to the question whether we have the power to delegate to the different provinces an exclusive jurisdiction which we possess ourselves. By the provisions of this Bill, we are going to apply not merely the laws and procedure of the different provinces at present in force, but as they may be amended from time to time by the provincial legislature. Of course I may be told that we are simply applying the same principle as applies in the Franchise Act, but I do not think that we have the right to delegate to the different provinces the power to legislate, as they may see fit, from time to time, regarding a matter over which we have exclusive jurisdiction. If we have the right to delegate this power to the provinces why not delegate it to the different municipalities or to the different townships, which are more directly interested and have a better knowledge of the subject than this parliament can possess ?

Mr. COWAN. For the simple reason that no municipality in the county of Essex has any right to make a law which would enable any landowner to drain across the property of another municipality or another landowner.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. If we have the right to delegate to a province could we not also delegate to a municipality ? I object to this Bill on the constitutional ground.

The hon. member has another ground on which he urges the acceptance of his measure. He says it will furnish a more expeditious and less costly means of dealing with the matter—that it is better to have it decided by a county court judge than by the Railway Committee of the Privy Council. Well, I have this much confidence in the Railway Committee of the Privy Council, even as at present constituted, to believe that that committee will deal with this matter better than any county court judge or arbitrators or any other judge the hon. gentleman may select in the county of Essex or elsewhere, both from the point of view of equity and cheapness. There is no cheaper tribunal to be had than the Railway Committee of the Privy Council. The party need not bring his witnesses, his counsel need not attend, the Privy Council will still hear the case, and may send, at the expense of the Dominion, an officer of the department for the purpose of looking into and reporting upon it. It is the cheapest and fairest possible tribunal that I know of. It is very popular to say that a party may get his witnesses near at home, and his counsel, and the court, and that that is a much cheaper and better system ; but until a commission is appointed, I believe that the cheapest and most equitable tribunal is the Railway Committee of the Privy Council.

But what I particularly object to is the delegation by the Dominion of its powers to the provinces, and I think that if the question ever comes before the courts, they will decide that we have no power to make the delegation proposed either to the provinces or to the municipalities.

Mr. HAUGHTON LENNOX (South Simcoe). May I ask the hon. member for Essex a question ? I understood him to say that the work may be executed by the railway companies, with the object, of course, of securing public safety. Is there any provision in the Bill for determining the amount of expense ?

Mr. COWAN. Under the law the cost of the drain must be determined by the engineer in laying it out. There is an express provision in the Bill that the two engineers —the one named by the landowner and the company's engineer—shall meet to consider the proportion of cost to be borne by the company, and in the event of their failure to agree, the matter will be referred to a county court judge. I do not say that the Bill is perfect in its form, but if there are any little discrepancies they can be removed in committee.

Mr. McGOWAN. Does the hon. gentleman propose to apply this Bill to the ditches and watercourses of municipalities as well as private parties ?

Mr. COWAN. It applies to all the municipal drainage of the province, both of the private individual and the municipality.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. In reply to my hon. friend from Lanark (Hon. Mr. Haggart) I may say that I have examined the Bill myself and have submitted it to the officers of my department, and we have come to the conclusion that there is absolutely nothing in it which is not quite within the powers of this parliament.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

MOTIONS AGREED TO WITHOUT DISCUSSION.

Return showing :

1. All contracts awarded by the Department of Railways and Canals during the year ending 30th June, 1901, in which the 'Current Wages' clause was incorporated, and the amount of such contracts.

2. The number of such contracts in which the schedule of wages was prepared by the fair wages officers.

3. The number of such contracts in which the schedule of wages was prepared by the contractors and accepted by the department.

4. The number of such contracts which were unaccompanied by schedule of wages.

5. The number of contracts awarded by the Department of Railways and Canals which did not contain either the 'Current Wages' clause or a schedule of wages.—Mr. Puttee.

Copies of all applications for water powers and other similar rights on or connected with the Soulanges canal, and all correspondence with respect thereto, and all reports, letters, and communications of or from engineers or other experts respecting the same. Also, all leases granted to any person, firm or corporation of water powers or other similar rights on or connected with the above named canal.—Mr. Bennett by Mr. Clarke.

Return for copies of all contracts made during two years past between the government of Canada and all steamship companies with whom it is agreed that a subsidy, bonus or grant of any kind shall be given by the government of Canada for services to be rendered in connection with Transatlantic, Transpacific or West Indian business.—Mr. Smith (Wentworth).

On motion of the Prime Minister, House adjourned at 4.30 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, March 4, 1902.

The SPEAKER took the chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 22) to incorporate the Board of the Presbyterian College, Halifax.—Mr. Fraser.

Bill (No. 23) respecting the Ontario, Hudson's Bay and Western Railway Company.—Mr. Dyment.

Bill (No. 24) respecting the Windsor and Detroit Union Bridge Company.—Mr. Cowan.

RAILWAY ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. HUGH GUTHRIE (South Wellington) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 25) in further amendment of the Railway Act.

He said : As the matter dealt with in this proposed amendment is somewhat involved, this may be as suitable a time as any to offer a few words in explanation of the scope of the Bill. The object of the Bill is, if not to prohibit, at least very greatly to limit the power of a railway company operating under a Dominion charter to contract itself out of its common-law or statutory liabilities to its employees in the case of injury resulting from the negligence of the company or its servants. The whole trend of modern legislation upon this point, as regards employers and employees, is strongly in the direction of safeguarding the right of the workman, and to prevent any contract or agreement from proving a bar or hindrance to the recovery of compensation by the workman. While the Bill which I have asked leave to introduce is wide in its terms, and will, if passed, affect all railway companies operating under Dominion charter, yet, as a matter of fact, the only company really concerned at the present time is the Grand Trunk Railway Company. This arises from the fact that the Grand Trunk Railway has, in years past, obtained certain special legislation from the parliament of Canada, and I have not been able to ascertain that any other railway company enjoys similar privileges.

The difficulty which it is sought to remedy had its origin as far back as 1874, when the Grand Trunk Railway Company obtained the passage of an Act to enable them to set aside a fund, and to form a superannuation and provident society for its workmen. They were entitled, under this Act of 1874, to formulate a scheme, to formulate rules for the transaction of the business of the society, and for the government of the members of the society. In 1878, they obtained further legislation authorizing them, in addition to their superannuation fund and provident fund, to establish an accident and life insurance fund, and to conduct the business of life insurance and accident insurance, with regard to their workmen, and in connection with their superannuation society.

Then in 1880, the Great Western Railway Company obtained similar legislation. In 1884, after amalgamation of the two roads, this superannuation and insurance society was applied to the whole system of the Grand Trunk Railway. This was again confirmed by an Act of 1888. Now the difficulty which presents itself is this: Under authority of these various special Acts the Grand Trunk Railway Company has formed a society known as the Grand Trunk Railway Insurance and Provident Society. They have passed rules, regulations and by-laws for the government of the society and the members of the society. Rule number 5 provides that every workman, the moment he enters into the employment of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, becomes a member of that society, and is bound by its laws. Rule 66 provides that all rules and regulations of the society shall be submitted to the Grand Trunk Railway Company and approved by them. But the most objectionable rule, or by-law, of the society is by-law 15, and it is under that by-law that the difficulty arises. By-law number 15 provides:

> In consideration of the subscription of the Grand Trunk Railway Company to this society, no member thereof or his representatives shall have any claim against the company for compensation on account of injury or death from accident.

Under these various Acts the railway is empowered to grant certain money to this fund. I have heard it stated in open court that they do grant annually $12,500, and as they have approximately 25,000 workmen, they pay 50 cents for each man into that fund, and as a result they claim they have absolute protection from all common law or statutory liability towards there workmen. Now they do provide some insurance, but they charge the workmen for the insurance at the rate of 40 or 50 cents a month; for the vast majority of their 25,000 men the rate is 50 cents per month, or $6 per year. For this they provide, in case of sickness, an indemnity of $3 per week for 26 weeks in the case of permanent disability, a sum of $100; and in the case of death, a sum of $250. They do not give as much as can be obtained by workmen doing similar work, from any one of the score of friendly or benevolent societies doing business in Canada to-day.

Now this matter has lain dormant for many years. I think it is only within the last eighteen months that the question has really arisen. During that period it has been decided by a trial judge in the province of Quebec, by a trial judge in the province of Ontario, and I think likewise by a trial judge in the province of British Columbia, that under that by-law 15 the workman is absolutely precluded from recovering against the railway company, even in case of the negligence of the company or of its servants. If I were to venture my own opinion in the matter, I would have no hesitation myself in saying that by-law 15 is not authorized by any enabling of the Acts; but it has been decided otherwise by trial judges. The difficulty of the situation is this, that where you have as plaintiff a disabled or injured railway man, or the widow of a deceased railway man, they are not in a position to carry this matter further and get the decision of a higher court upon it. As long as the matter is involved in doubt, or as long as the present decision stands, these 25,000 workmen in that company are absolutely debarred from recovering damages against the company in cases of injury resulting from negligence. The Bill which I have brought in is framed largely on the lines of clause 10 of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act and a similar clause is to be found in the English Act, the Employers Liability Act, and no doubt in other provincial Acts with which I am not familiar. It does not preclude agreements between the employers and their employees, but it simply provides that no agreement shall be allowed to prevail as a defense unless, in the first place, there is consideration on the part of the workman for entering into such an agreement other than the mere fact of his being taken into the employment; and unless the agreement is reasonable, just and adequate in the opinion of the judge who tries the case; and unless, in the opinion of the judge who tries the case, it is not improvident on the part of the workman. The onus of establishing the reasonableness and the adequacy of the consideration is thrown upon the railway company. That, Mr. Speaker, is in brief the Bill which I ask leave to introduce this afternoon.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

INQUIRY FOR RETURNS.

Mr. WILSON. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I desire to say that I made some inquiry a few days ago about some matters moved for in the House, and so far as I know they have not been brought down yet. I am particularly anxious to get the correspondence between the department and Mr. Devlin relative to what he said about members of this House, also about the number of immigrants that were brought to this country for the last ten years, also about a report with reference to the work of the Experimental Farm, also with reference to the Belleville post office and the dismissals that took place there.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I presume the hon. gentleman refers to Orders of the House which have already passed ?

Mr. WILSON. Yes.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As the Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Sifton) is not here to answer, I will see that the officers of his department are communicated with at once on the subject.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I may say that the information the House ordered in regard to the Experimental Farm has been already sent to the House through the ordinary channels.

SUPPLY.

House in Committee of Supply.

Public buildings in Nova Scotia—Arichat—reconstruction of public building, $1,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the position there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. I. Tarte). There is a building there over fifteen years old, which is in bad shape to-day. It will take about $400.

Halifax—new public building, $50,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have bought a site for the building. The plans are prepared, tenders are now being called for, and in a few weeks they will be in.

Mr. CLARKE. Is it for an elevator ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We want elevators elsewhere.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Hon. W. S. Fielding). The building is a customs-house, and will probably be used for other purposes as well.

Mr. WILSON. Would the Minister of Finance please tell us for what other purposes besides a customs-house ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. While the main purpose is to transfer the custom-house from the present building to the new one, other public purposes of the city of Halifax will of course be served by it. If there should be any spare rooms, some other branches of the service may be placed there. While it is called a custom-house building the department would not want to confine it absolutely to customs purposes if any other branch could be accommodated within the same building.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the estimated cost of this building ?

Mr. WILSON.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We expect that the cost of the building will reach $300,000, with the site, furniture, heating system and so on.

Mr. CLARKE. What will the site cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $24,000.

Mr. CLARKE. And the building $275,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We expect the building will cost about $250,000. There is in addition the expenditure entailed in supplying the heating system, fitting up, fencing, wiring for electrical purposes and so on.

Mr. CLARKE. Wire pulling ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There has been none. Both sides have agreed that this building must be erected.

Mr. BELL. Who was the land purchased from ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. From Mr. Frederick D. Corbett, merchant of the city of Halifax. It is on the site of the old city market building, right opposite the existing Dominion building.

Mr. CLARKE. Is it intended to have the work done by day labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, tenders are called for.

New Brunswick—Marysville public building, $9,500.

Mr. CLARKE. What is this building for?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This work is under contract now, the contractors being the Messrs. Simmons, and the contract price is $6,842. Besides that we have paid $1,000 for the site, and there is the fitting up and so on.

Mr. CLANCY. Is that the total cost of the building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the whole cost of the building.

Mr. CLANCY. What is the population of Marysville ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Marysville is a thriving town in New Brunswick. The population, which is increasing every day——

Mr. GIBSON. The population is about 2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. And increasing rapidly.

Mr. GIBSON. And increasing rapidly. A lot of people are coming from outside towns to work there. About 600 people work in the cotton factory there who live a mile or two away. We have supplied the government with a building for post office purposes for the last 35 years, and I think we are entitled to a post office.

Mr. CLANCY. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Public Works whether the hon. gentleman or the government has some fixed policy in expending money without taking into consideration only the population and the general prospects of the place. It is a very easy matter now for any hon. gentleman to state that he has a thriving village or town; in fact, if my memory serves me, the hon. Minister of Public Works always has a thriving town where he is putting up a building. Perhaps it would be convenient for the hon. gentleman to state whether he has any policy upon the question of putting up any public buildings in all the small towns and villages in Canada. If that gate is opened I am sure there are many hon. members on both sides of the House will be able to supply a similar reason; if it is not open, the hon. gentleman should explain why he has given this reason.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In former years there was in this parliament a gentleman who was the Minister of Finance in a Conservative administration. That gentleman was called the Hon. George E. Foster. He was representing the riding of York, New Brunswick, and when he was the member for that riding he placed in the estimates an amount of money for the erection of a public building at Marysville. I have simply inherited the obligation of expending that sum of money. I am spending it. I hope that I will spend less than Mr. Foster would have done, because he was known to be a very expensive man. In other words, joking apart, I found in the estimates when we took office a sum of money for the erection of a building at Marysville. Now, I am simply carrying out the pledge that was given under the late administration, and the wisdom of which I fully recognize.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman's memory appears to be very clear about one part of it, but there is another part of it which the hon. gentleman has forgotten. Does the hon. minister not know from the same source that he obtained the information in regard to an estimate being put in for that public building at Marysville when Mr. Foster was Minister of Finance and represented the riding of York, that the people of Marysville were to contribute half the cost of the building? It was explained to this House on a former occasion that the people of this town or village, whichever it may be, were to contribute a portion towards the erection of a public building there. Now, the hon. gentleman states that he has undertaken the whole cost, so that he will find no reason for the explanation he has given in the promise that was made in the past, as the circumstances are different. He should now offer some explanation of his policy.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is no trace in my department of any promise or engagement whatever by which the town of Marysville undertook to pay half the cost of the building.

Mr. GIBSON. I have never heard of any promise being made such as the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clancy) has referred to, to contribute half of the cost of a public building at Marysville. I think if there is any place in the Dominion of Canada that deserves a public building, it is Marysville. We have a large cotton mill which gives employment to 750 hands and we pay out in wages $45,000 a month. This is not a village; it is the town of Marysville of which I have the honour to be mayor.

Mr. LENNOX. I understand the hon. Minister of Public Works to give as a reason for this estimate that the Hon. George E. Foster had made an appropriation while he was in office. I do not understand the hon. minister to give us any other reason for placing this amount in the estimates. The information I understand this committee to desire from the hon. minister is the ground upon which he can justify the expenditure of this money.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think that my hon. friends are a little too exacting in asking for reasons now, for erecting a building which was approved by their friends in office when a vote is placed in the estimates. While I do not hesitate to say that it is a good thing to have public buildings in thriving towns and villages provided they are not too expensive, yet we must not spend too much. It shows that we are progressing and it gives confidence to the country. I believe it is a good argument to say that when the faith of the country has been pledged by the late administration, as far as it could, we should recognize that pledge when we think it was wise to give it.

Mr. CLANCY. It is very extraordinary that the minister will not answer the question put to him. The minister cannot say that since he has presided over the Department of Public Works he has carried out all the grants that were put in the estimates by the former government. Therefore, his argument on that score does not amount to much. If the hon. gentleman says that he is making a special exception in this case that might be an answer to the question put to him; but if he is not making a special exception in this instance, then we desire to know if it is the policy of the government to erect public buildings in all towns similar to this. The hon. gentleman knows that this policy will lead to a very great expenditure. There is no hon. gentleman on either side of the House who would not think it very nice to have a public building in the principle town of his riding; but, if the Minister of Public Works commences to pick up places here and there we will have a just cause to complain. If the hon. gentleman carries out that policy then I can present to him a couple of places where the reasons for the erection of a public building are quite as strong as they are in Marysville.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Each case should be judged on its own merits. I do not think there is a general rule which can be applied. It depends on many things.

Mr. INGRAM. Politics.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, no. My hon. friend (Mr. Ingram) must not forget that when his party were in power there was a lot of politics done.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, no.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes ; I did a lot of it with them.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, no.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. And when they are on this side of the House again they will do just the same thing ; in fact they will do worse than we do. The principles then will be the same that govern us to-day, and each case will have to be judged by itself. This is a most meritorious case. The Hon. Geo. E. Foster is a witness to that, and I cannot call a better witness to my aid. I am willing to say that we must not erect too many public buildings. But my friends do not forget that a great many public buildings were erected in the past, and we have some members on this side of the House that have their two eyes open to the magnificent public buildings that were erected in the Conservative days. They have placed their claims before me and if I were not an energetic man I would have to ask for a great deal more money than I ask now. But I face the music manfully, and I only decide to give money to meritorious cases like this one.

Mr. INGRAM. When I mentioned the word 'politics' I had in mind the arguments used by the supporters of the government when they were in opposition and which were very similar to the arguments used by my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) to-day. The Liberals when in opposition charged the Conservatives with allowing party politics to have more to do with the investment of money in public buildings than the circumstances would warrant. The principle pursued by the Conservative government is being pursued to-day by the present government. If it was wrong then it is wrong now, and if it was right then it is right now.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was right then.

Mr. INGRAM. Oh, very well.

Mr. CLARKE. Has the site been purchased for this building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. CLANCY.

Mr. CLARKE. It was not given by the municipality ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. CLARKE. What was the cost of the site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. One thousand dollars, which has been paid.

Mr. CLARKE. From whom was it purchased ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. From the Gibson Company who are the sole owners of the whole town.

Some hon. MEMBERS. The whole town ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Nobody can buy a piece of land outside of them.

Mr. CLANCY. This is a donation to the Gibson Company, and if they owned the whole town they will necessarily own the post office.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was not a donation.

Mr. CLANCY. The minister has practically said so.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is a donation to public opinion.

Mr. CLANCY. It was hardly worth while to go to the form of conveying the land to the Crown. You might just as well have built the post office and donated it to the Gibsons.

Mr. BLAIN. What is the population of that town ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The population is 2,000 souls now.

Mr. TAYLOR. What is the postal revenue of the town of Marysville ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In 1890—it will be more now because we have made a great deal of progress during those two years—the postal revenue was $1,398.92.

Mr. TAYLOR. Was that the gross revenue ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. FOWLER. With reference to this building in Mr. Gibson's county, I would like to ask if there has been any conveyance of the site upon which it stands ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, the sight has been conveyed to us.

Mr. FOWLER. I understand that it was against Mr. Gibson's policy to sell any land.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, but I declined to do anything before I got the deeds.

Richibucto public building, $5,000.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this as meritorious as the other case ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Well, I should think so. The site has been bought for $805 and we intend to erect a commodious and cheap building costing about $6,000.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the population of Richibucto ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. 3,986 souls. It is a large town.

Mr. CLARKE. Then, apparently the larger the town the smaller the appropriation.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a good deal of French population in Richibucto and they are very modest indeed. They do not ask for more than that.

St. John's Dominion Public Buildings—Improvements and alterations, $3,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What public buildings is this vote for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS The customs-house, the post office and savings bank.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the total cost of the improvements ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The amount which is voted in the estimates.

St. John immigrant building, $10,000.

Mr. CLARKE. What is this building for?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. For immigration purposes. During the present winter, although the building is not completed, we have had several thousand immigrants in it. My hon. friend does not forget, I am sure, that St. John is a terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway, it is our winter port, and the building is a most useful one.

Mr. CLARKE. How much has been spent on that building altogether ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. About $33,000 all completed.

Mr. CLARKE. Including the site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, yes.

Mr. CLARKE. What has the site cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has been given to us by the city.

Mr. FOWLER. Is the building being built under contract, and if so, what is the name of the contractor ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, by J. H. Pullen, of St. John.

Mr. CLARKE. Is there an immigrant building in Halifax ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, yes.

Mr. CLARKE. What did it cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I cannot give the exact cost of it to-day. If my hon. friend wants the information, I will take a note of it, and give it to him later.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). May I ask what the exact purpose of the building is ? Do you keep the immigrants there for a short time after their arrival, or is it for shelter ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes. Some ships which have arrived there during the past winter have carried a thousand immigrants.

Mr. CLARKE. Were they for the United States or for Canada ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Some for Canada and some for the United States.

Mr. CLARKE. In return for the accommodation afforded to immigrants going through to the United States does the government require the steamship companies carrying them to pay part of the cost of the maintenance of this building; or is it the policy of the government to pay all the cost, both of erecting the building and of maintaining it for the accommodation of these people ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In the past the transportation companies have not been called upon to pay any share of the maintenance of the building. I admit that the immigrant trade, if I may call it so, is a good one for our transportation companies and for our towns and cities. It is a trade, just as much as any other trade; and thus far the government have not asked the transportation companies to contribute anything towards the erection of these sheds. St. John being a winter port, the government thought it was a good thing to equip it with all the implements of civilization.

Maritime provinces generally—Dominion public buildings—renewals, improvements, repairs, etc., $12,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How much was expended last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $11,163.

Quebec—Dominion public buildings, renewals, improvements, repairs, etc., $12,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the same vote as before.

Mr. MONK. How is that divided ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This vote is spread all over the country, in various small sums of $300 or $500, for repairs which are not of such importance as to call for a special vote in the estimates.

Mr. MONK. Would the minister state how much was expended in Montreal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. On the Montreal custom-house $59.25; on the post office, $396.50. We had a special vote for Montreal.

Mr. MONK. Are we supposed to spend that sum every year—$12,000—neither more nor less ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, and generally we are short.

Mr. MONK. I know that apart from this you vote special sums for repairs in Montreal, Quebec and other places.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, other votes cover large expenditures. This vote is to cover expenditures for small repairs wherever they may be required.

Drummondville public building, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Under contract to complete.

Mr. MONK. What will the total cost of this building be when completed ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $15,000.

Mr. MONK. I think there is a great deal to support the contention of my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) that we ought to be informed what is the policy of the government in regard to these public buildings. I have no objection to the erection of a public building in Drummondville; but there are many other places in the province of Quebec which could rightly claim a public building. What are the conditions to which they have to conform ? Elect Reform candidates ? That seems to be the rule in our province. I think we are entitled to a statement from the government as to what their policy is in this regard, and what are the conditions to which parties must conform in order to obtain the erection of a public building. I heard the case of Marysville discussed a few moments ago. The hon. minister will remember that last year I called his attention very particularly to the town of St. Laurent in the county of Jacques Cartier—a large place, whose population is increasing more rapidly than that of Marysville, and where the necessity of a public building has been felt for a long time. It has very large educational institutions, is a distributing centre for postal matter and is a place which in every respect would warrant the government in erecting a public building there. My hon. friend did not fail to recognize that last year and promised to look into the matter, and I called his attention to the fact that there was a public building there, which had cost a great deal, and was available to the government at a low figure. I have no objection to a building in Drummondsville or Granby, but when there are other places equally as well if not better entitled to consideration, we ought to know the policy of the government. Must the localities furnish the site or any of the money and what should be the population and conditions of trade ? We should have a fixed rule, and the localities which conform to that rule should be able to obtain a hearing from the government. Otherwise it becomes simply a question, as the hon. minister said a moment ago, of deciding each case on a different principle, and the locality with the strongest pull is the one that will get the public building. That is a very bad policy.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We are all of the same opinion with regard to fixed rules, and that is that they are no good. There is no business man who will say that he has always acted on fixed rules.

Mr. MONK. Then general principles.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The general principle I endeavour to follow faithfully is to listen to every representation made to me and then make up my judgment without too much bias. My hon. friend is right in what he says about St. Laurent. Only we have so many things to do that we cannot do them all at once. St. Laurent is a fine village, and I have no doubt the time will come when it will have a magnificent public building. But that does not take anything from the merits of Drummondville. The merits of St. Laurent are one thing and of Drummondville another. When the building at Drummondville is completed, let us hope that within a short period we will have the pleasure of going to St. Laurent and seeing a public building there.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the population of Drummondville ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Over 2,000.

Mr. CLARKE. What will the building cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $15,000 all told. Drummondville is a town which is coming to the front very fast indeed. There is a prosperous wave in that locality, several manufactories have been started, there is a good water power in operation, and the government of Quebec is doing a great deal to make the place progress.

Mr. OSLER. What is the revenue of the post office ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The postal revenue in 1899 and 1900 was $2,322. There were money orders issued for over $15,000, and this year instead of $15,000, $22,000 of money orders are issued.

Granby, public building, Quebec, $11,000.

Mr. MONK. What is to be the total cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $14,987.

Grosse Isle quarantine station, $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is required for some extensive improvements. There were no water works or bath or electric lighting and we are equipping the station with these, as it ought to be. This sum will complete the work, and this station will be not only the best in this country but on the continent. I am informed that during the last five years we spent about $60,000, and a much larger amount was spent the preceding five years.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How many immigrants in the course of a year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Only those who are sick are quarantined there.

Mr. CLARKE. How many were quarantined there last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We are not now on the question of quarantine, and I am only the contractor for the improvements.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I could not say off hand, how many people were quarantined, but every year a certain number must be quarantined. I have not got the data here, but will have all the information when the quarantine item comes up for discussion. In the course of a year the average is 40 or 50, but there must be accommodation for a great many more because sometimes we will have to land a shipload of immigrants, 1,200 or 1,300, at a time.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. During last season one ship was quarantined which had on board over 2,000 souls.

Mr. MONK. We have spent about $60,000 for the purpose of accommodating between 40 and 50 immigrants.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That is an unfair representation of the facts because although we may not have on an average more than I have stated in a year, yet at any one time we are liable to have more than one shipload of immigrants in quarantine. On one occasion there were 2,100 people in Grosse Isle.

Mr. MONK. On the ship ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They had to be landed on shore and were kept in quarantine for over a month.

Mr. MONK. What ship ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I cannot remember. It was a year and a half ago. The same thing occurred at Halifax on another occasion. The two ships came in one after the other and probably over 1,500 had to be accommodated at one time or another. Generally we have nobody there but are liable any moment to have this large number coming in on us, and we must supply the accommodation.

Mr. MONK. I would like to know which of these hon. gentlemen is correct. The hon. Minister of Public Works told us that the place cost about $60,000. We asked the hon. Minister of Agriculture how many people there were retained there last year, and he did not know, but said that there were forty or fifty the year before.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. What I intended to say, and what I think I did say, was that there was an average of about forty or fifty a year.

Mr. MONK. Then, what was there incorrect in what we stated ? If we paid $60,000 and also the amount necessary to maintain the station, that being under the direction of the Minister of Agriculture, I do not think we misrepresented the facts when we said that we were paying dear for the immigration we get.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is not a question of immigration. I am sure that when he thinks over the matter, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) will not insist upon the position he has taken. Would he wish to have small-pox brought into the country ?

Mr. MONK. We do not want immigration to cost so dear as this.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If we have a quarantine, that quarantine must be equipped. Suppose that a ship comes with one or two thousand or even three thousand souls on board, you must have an equipment capable of handling that number. I have personal knowledge of cases when a thousand immigrants were located there. What would the country say and what would parliament say if a ship loaded with people, including some smitten with dangerous diseases, should come to our shores and no proper system of quarantine were provided ? In every part of the world there are quarantines. And I make bold to say that, under the late administration, there has been half a million dollars spent there. There are quarantines at St. John, at Halifax—there must be at every great port in the world.

Mr. COCHRANE. What has that to do with the question under discussion ? We are talking about this quarantine station and about this proposed expense, not about what has been done elsewhere or in years gone by. The hon. minister finds it very convenient, when he gets into a hole, to say : You did the same. That is no argument. There is only one question to be considered, and that is whether this is not an enormous sum to spend, considering the public benefit derived. What information is it to me for the hon. gentleman to say that a great deal of money has been spent at Halifax and at other places ? Do we need to spend this amount of money at this particular station ?—that is the question. If it can be shown that the money can be spent in this way to the public advantage, we have nothing to say.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We require to equip our quarantines better than before, because we have a larger immigration than before. This is necessary to protect the health of the country. I think my hon. friends will admit on thinking it over, that their objections are not well taken.

Mr. MONK. Are these immigrants assisted immigrants ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That has nothing to do with the vote of $10,000 for quarantine. I do not know whether these immigrants are assisted or not. The Minister of the Interior (Hon. Mr. Sifton), who will be in his place in a few days, will be able to answer as to that.

Mr. MONK. I think we are entitled to an answer to that point either from the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Tarte) or from the minister in charge of immigration. Another thing we are entitled to know is whether any means are taken on the other side, whence these assisted immigrants come—immigrants who cost us so dear—to inspect them before they leave port.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Surely the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) will see that it is not competent for me to answer his question. The quarantine for which I am asking money is the only one on the St. Lawrence route during the summer months, and that quarantine I am equipping. When the immigration vote comes up, the hon. Minister of the Interior will be able to answer the hon. gentleman.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). But, in order to know whether this is a proper amount to vote or not, we should have the information which the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) asks for. How are we to know whether such a large sum of money ought to be spent at this station unless we know under what precautions assisted immigrants as well as others are taken on shipboard for Canada. If it is only for immigrants that this is desired——

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, not only for immigrants.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is mainly used for immigrants, I understand.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, not principally.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think the hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Tarte) must be mistaken.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A good deal of the expenditure is necessary on account of immigrants, of course.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is used, as I am informed—and I say it with all deference to the hon. minister—mainly for immigrants.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Quarantine work has no reference to immigrants or any other particular class of passengers arriving there. All passengers whether immigrants, or those travelling first-class, are quarantined exactly alike. As a matter of fact, I suppose, a larger number of those arriving by vessel arrive in the steerage than first or second-class. In that sense, it may be said that we are dealing principally with immigrants. But, if a thousand first-class passengers should arrive, this accommodation would be required just the same as for a thousand immigrants. The accommodation is required to be more extensive than is commonly used, because we must provide for contingencies. This was done by our predecessors, just as it is done by us. As to this vote and the votes of the last year or two for equipping our quarantine stations, I may say that our requirements have increased. We have been recommended by our medical authorities to provide more bathing accommodation for the people who are retained there. It is due to this that not only at Grosse Isle, but at other quarantine stations, the expenditure for equipment is greater than it used to be.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In cases of this kind I am only a builder. The Department of Agriculture sends me a statement of the work to be done ; that is discussed with my chief architect and other officers, and I simply carry out the work for the Department of Agriculture. I trust my hon. friends will not persist in their objections. The season is about to open and this work has been begun. The quarantine must be equipped. It costs money, no doubt, but that is unavoidable. This vote is to complete the equipment of this important station, which is necessary to protect the health of the country.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. If I remember rightly, the expenditure on this station in the past has been enormous. It must represent a total of about $600,000 or $700,000. If I remember rightly, it is only a few years ago that nearly $120,000 was expended for fumigating purposes. There was a demand from the Department of Agriculture also for a wharf at Grosse Isle to accommodate vessels drawing twenty-eight or twenty-nine feet of water.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That has not been built.

Hon. Mr. HAGGART. So I understand. But a demand upon the government for such a wharf was made by the Department of Agriculture. The construction of that wharf would involve an expenditure of about $120,000. This question arose with the government at that day, and I suppose it has been considered by the Minister of Public Works since, whether it would not have been better to abandon the station altogether and to take up another station which has been recommended as nearly as good, and where the expenditure would not be nearly as large. This seems to me an enormous sum of money for the small number of immigrants and passengers coming to this country who need to be accommodated there. It is not only on the buildings, but it is on the staff required at that particular place. I know that the duty of the Minister of Public Works is only ministerial, and that he has to carry out the request of the Minister of Agriculture, who states that his officers have demanded this large expenditure there for the safety of the country and the prevention of epidemics. The expenditures have been very large in the past, and it behooves this House and the Minister of Public Works to look very carefully to see that no useless expenditure is made.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think this will be the last expenditure we shall ask for. I may add that the expenditure we are incurring now has been decided on only after complete discussion between Dr. Montizambert, who is a very experienced officer, and my chief architect, and a good deal has been struck off the sum originally proposed.

Mr. CLARKE. What do the improvements consist of ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There were no waterworks, and no sewerage. Indeed the quarantine station was in a very bad condition. The ventilation was bad, there were no water closets in the building. It was in an awful state when I was there myself two years ago.

Mr. CLARKE. Is it advisable to land immigrants at a place like that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say that the quarantine at Grosse Isle as well as that at St. John, when I saw them, were both in a very bad condition. It is because the buildings were in a dilapidated condition, and because we thought the quarantine station in such a condition constituted a danger to the country, that we felt obliged to ask for this large expenditure.

Mr. MONK. The Minister of Public Works excuses this very large expenditure by saying that he is only the builder. I think that is a very good excuse, and that the blame rests entirely on the Minister of Agriculture. The Minister of Agriculture told us a few minutes ago that in order to complete arrangements there it was necessary to provide bathing accommodation for these immigrants. Well, surely, a lesser sum than $10,000 would be amply sufficient to provide bathing accommodation for these gentlemen, unless their bathing is much more expensive than that which we resort to ourselves. I would like to know from the Minister of Public Works, upon whom such large demands are made by the Minister of Agriculture in favour of these immigrants, what is the work that remains to be done. Last year we had a discussion on a similar item and we had the same explanation—there were no waterworks, the buildings were in a dilapidated condition. We have the statement of the Minister of Agriculture that we must provide baths for the immigrants, and it is going to cost $10,000. I think $5,000 would be amply sufficient, unless the Minister of Public Works gives us details now showing that it is not sufficient. I would like to know whether that work has been let by contract after tenders called for in the newspapers; if not, I am disposed to move for a reduction of that item.

Mr. TALBOT. The hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) overlooks the fact that this quarantine station is not only for immigrants but it is also designed to protect the whole country from disease coming in on the crews of ships. Last year a steamer was detained there forty days with over 300 immigrants on board. I believe the negro stoker on board the steamer had small-pox, and as a consequence 400 people were detained there over forty days. Several cases of that kind happen in the course of a year.

Mr. MONK. We do not refuse money that is necessary, but we want to know what it is used for.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The member for Jacques Cartier who spoke a moment ago ought to know better than to speak like that. What is the use of a man who is one of the leaders of the House saying that immigrants should not take expensive baths ? We know that. Our baths are not quarantine baths. But we all know what a quarantine is, the hon. gentleman knows what a quarantine is, and what is the use of his trying to throw dust in the eyes of the public by speeches such as that.

Mr. MONK. I do not think, Mr. Chairman, that is in order. I do not think it is in order to say that I am throwing dust in the eyes of the public.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Well, if the hon. gentleman had not done so, I certainly would not have referred to it. But I won't do it again. But we all know that a quarantine station does not provide bathing for gentlemen, there is a vast difference. The expenditure last year was divided up among the following items: We have arranged for the installation of an electric light plant which is to cost $11,868. The grounds are very extensive grounds as my hon. friend knows. This is an island on which there are twenty-five buildings. We have built a new dwelling for employees, costing $8,000; water service, $2,260; repairs of building for police, painting, &c., $1,299; sidewalks, $1,275; dynamo building, $1,664; repairs to building for medical officers, $934; general repairs to buildings, $5,740. These are the largest items.

Mr. CLARKE. I should judge from the figures just presented by the minister that the sanitary condition could not have been as bad as he pointed out a few minutes ago. If I caught his figures correctly, he only spent $2,000 for waterworks. There could not have been a very urgent case for sanitary improvement when only $2,000 or thereabouts were spent for waterworks. I did not notice in the figures the minister read any expenditure for drainage purposes. Now, first-class sanitary arrangements would require a first-class water supply and first-class sewerage. If the sanitary condition was as bad as the minister says, a very small sum has been expended so far to improve that condition. We were discussing this matter a few nights ago, and if I may be permitted to refer to it, we were told then, under the immigration estimates, when we wanted to get some information, that we should wait until we discussed quarantine; while to-day when quarantine is up for discussion we are told that we cannot discuss immigration matters. I would like to ask the hon. minister, if it is in order to ask it now: Would it not be a better plan to have a more rigid inspection of immigrants before they leave Liverpool, or the point at which they embark to come to Canada? I would also like some specific information from the hon. Minister of Public Works as to the amount that has been expended during the last two years for drainage purposes and also on account of a proper waterworks system.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I would like to say, about the inspection of immigrants before they leave the point of departure, that even if that were undertaken, it would not relieve the department of the responsibility at the quarantine stations to any appreciable extent. Immigrants and other passengers would still have to be inspected at the quarantine port of debarkation and in case of disease occurring between one port or the other, immigrants or any other passengers would still have to be examined and would still have to have all this accommodation to receive them at the quarantine station, whether they had been inspected before leaving the ports in the old country or not. I would like to point out to the hon. gentleman and to the committee that the proposition, while a fair question of debate, in regard to immigrants, as far as quarantine is concerned, would not relieve the quarantine station of any responsibility, and I do not think of any expense. In regard to the demand for this vote, while I have not the details of the matter in the way that the hon. Minister of Public Works has, I would say that all these propositions were laid before the director general of public health, Dr. Montizambert, who has been for thirty-three years at the head of that service, practically, ever since the service was inaugurated and who has made far greater demands on my department and on the Public Works Department than have been complied with. There has been the demand which the late Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Haggart) spoke of in regard to a wharf. There has been a demand for a much larger wharf at Grosse Isle, for one which would cost $75,000 or $100,000, but we have preferred to go on and try to do the work without that expenditure. The work is done just as effectively but not quite so conveniently as it would be with the wharf. But, we believe that it can be done effectively without that expenditure, and the hon. Minister of Public Works has so far refrained from asking the House for that and some other expenditure of the same kind. In the case of an expenditure which involves the safety of the public health we would not have felt ourselves justified in refusing to take such precautions as the director general of public health deemed necessary for the safety of the public health.

Mr. CLARKE. May I ask the hon. Minister of Public Works if he would give some more extended information as to the necessity of this building on which $8,000 was expended to provide accommodation for the employees on the island. Is there a larger number employed by the government now than formerly? How were they housed previously to the erection of this building which has cost $8,000? I would like also to ask the hon. Minister of Agriculture if the demands made by Dr. Montizambert for the improvement of the sanitary conditions at the station have been complied with? We have pointed out to the hon. Minister of Public Works that in the estimates only $2,500 or $3,000 has been expended for the purposes of drainage and the improvement of the water system.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, it is not that at all.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The items of this expenditure were before me while in consultation with the director general of public health some months ago, and they were then sent over to the Department of Public Works. I cannot carry the details of them in my mind, but there is no doubt that they are in the department.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have just put my finger on the detail of the expenditure that was incurred last year. During the fiscal year of 1901 a system of waterworks and drainage was installed in the sick division.

Mr. CLARKE. What was the cost?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not the amount of the cost. I am simply giving a summary of the work that has been done.

Mr. CLARKE. You gave us some figures a few moments ago.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Two tanks were housed, and a new pump building was erected in connection with this work.

Mr. CLARKE. What did that cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Last year we had a vote of $30,000, out of which we have spent $21,000. There is no minister who can carry in his mind all the details of these expenditures.

Mr. CLARKE. You gave an expenditure $20,000, $8,000 for the building and $12,000 for other things.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Baths, basins, sinks and water closets were put into the hospitals and officers' dwellings. A new forge was built. The large hospital and the small-pox hospital were reshingled; the first class detention building painted. Repairs were made to the telemeter, disinfection building and to the fire pot of the boiler for pump. Repairs were made to the wood, paint, plaster and other works of the different buildings. Some carpets and furniture were supplied. The steamer 'Challenger' was overhauled and painted. Plans and specifications prepared by this department. The waterworks and drainage superintended by Mr. John Cowan, an old employee of the department, and the remainder of the work was supervised by Mr. Beland, the contractor for waterworks and drainage were Messrs. O. Picard & Sons. We have spent on these works up to the first of February $28,000 out of the $30,000 that were placed in the estimates. We are asking for $10,000 additional to complete these works.

Mr. MONK. I do not think the hon. Minister of Agriculture has been quite fair to this committee, and I think the hon. Minister of Public Works has been placed in an unfortunate position by the statement made by the hon. Minister of Agriculture that this money was required to fulfil the requirements of the health authorities in respect to baths. We spent last year over $20,000 and in that expenditure, which is found detailed at page V—68 of the Auditor General's Report, we find that everything that is required under the head mentioned by the hon. Minister of Agriculture was furnished during last year, and that is why I think this committee is entitled to know what the $10,000 additional is wanted for. I can understand that every detail of the expenditure cannot be kept in mind by the head of the department, but it seems to me that such an item as $20,000 for the instalment of waterworks should remain in the memory of the ordinary man for at least a few months. We had, last year, such expenditures as these: two Brussels rugs at $27, two Axminster rugs at $38, one mattrass, $18, one chamber set, $55, and in connection with the water accommodation we had sinks at $23 each and bath tubs, 4 at $45 apiece, which seems a very large price to pay. Of course, I suppose, that the better class of immigrants, or perhaps the employees, or the minister himself when he goes down to pay his annual visit required needle and shower baths, two of which were purchased at $145 ; flusher closets, 2 at $32 apiece and lavatory basins, 7 at $168. If we look over the expenditure we find that there is no ground whatever, as far as we can see, for granting an expenditure of $10,000 for the reason which has been given by the hon. Minister of Agriculture. I am ready to admit with the hon. Minister of Public Works that we must have a properly equipped quarantine station, but, when we see these extravagant expenditures, and are asked to vote $10,000, and are merely asking the head of the department to tell us what it is for, the department should have some information upon the subject.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend (Mr. Monk) should know that these shower baths are used by the immigrants. They cost more than the ordinary shower baths. It seems to me that in this case the House will not lose sight of the fact that we are dealing with a large quarantine station and not with an ordinary private house. I have already explained that out of the $30,000 voted last year we have spent $28,048.57 for water works, for drainage for baths, for new pumps for basins and sinks and water closets in the hospital and officers quarters. The large small-pox hospital has been re-shingled. I made a mistake in giving the details. What I read from my notes was work that was to be done and not work that had been done. We made a contract for electric lighting amounting to $11,868, and we have paid to the contractors $5,500, leaving a balance due of $6,363. That will be taken out of the vote of $10,000. In addition to that there is $1,000 for electric light fittings not included in the contract. There is for water service $2,160 and for repairs $1,299. What I read first was a list of works which had been asked for and practically granted but for which we had no money.

Mr. CLARKE. I understood from the minister that the quarantine station was in a very unsanitary condition and that there was not sufficient drainage. The minister states that there is $2,160 for water service and for electric light $12,868. What I want to know is how much will be spent in drainage to put the buildings in a sanitary condition

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I understand that about $4,000 has been spent for drainage, and that we are doing work now that will cost $3,160.

Mr. CLARKE. Where are the figures for that ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The chief architect has given this information to me. These sums have been paid out of the vote of $30,000 of last year.

Mr. CLARKE. How much did the director general ask for these sanitary improvements ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know how much he asked for.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The director general asks that certain sanitary improvements should be made, and it is left to the Public Works Department to say what they will cost.

Mr. CLARKE. And the sanitary improvements asked for by the director general have been made ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Most of them have been made but there is a certain amount still necessary to finish the whole plan of improvement. The amount which is now asked for is to pay for the work which was asked by the director general of public health. The vote taken last year did not quite meet the requirements, and we have to have a supplementary vote this year to cover the balance. That work is not absolutely finished although it is very nearly finished, and when it is finished I believe the station will be in a thoroughly good sanitary state.

Mr. CLARKE. Had the minister no idea of the cost that would be entailed on the public by carrying out the demands made by the director general of public health ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. These estimates were made by the Public Works Department.

Mr. CLARKE. Was there no estimate made by the Department of Agriculture ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We do not undertake to make estimates.

Mr. CLARKE. And the Department of Agriculture had no idea of what expenditure would be entailed by the improvements asked for ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We discuss that with the Public Works Department and we leave it to that department to make the estimates.

Mr. CLARKE. We have not yet been able to get the information that we have asked for.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think I gave all the information that was asked for, but I will give all that is in my possession. We spent $28,048.57 up to the first of February out of the $30,000 which was voted last year.

Mr. CLARKE. How much for drainage ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. $4,000. We owe to the contractor for electric light, $6,668 ; we require electric light fittings to the amount of $1,000 ; to complete our water service we require, $2,360; and for repairs, painting, drains, &c., we require $1,190. Other demands have been made upon us, but for these I am not asking for money. I made a mistake is saying that part of this $10,000 was to erect an $8,000 building. The $10,000 is to be employed for the objects which I have mentioned.

L'Assomption public building, $5,000.

Mr. MONK. Has the site been chosen for this building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have bought a site, for which we have paid $1,150.

Mr. MONK. Who from ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. From a gentleman of the name of Vital Racette. I do not propose to ask for an expensive building. I do not expect to expend more than $5,000, including fittings and all. L'Assomption parish contains a large population, and I may say that I have some love for the place.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the population ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Two thousand six hundred.

Mr. MONK. Is the work given out ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, the plans are not yet made. We have simply bought the site.

Mr. MONK. I suppose the work will be done by tender publicly called ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, certainly.

Mr. MONK. I have no objection to a public building being erected at L'Assomption, but I reiterate what was first mentioned here by the hon. member for Bothwell, that I think we should know what are the general principles—the minister objects to the term fixed rule—which govern the government in the distribution of public buildings throughout our province. I am glad to see a public building proposed for L'Assomption, which is an important place; but there are other places which I think have equal claims. I could mention a place in my own constituency. Take Côte St. Paul, which has a large manufacturing population, which is situated on the Lachine canal, and which is just as important as this place. Then, there are very important factories situated in the neighbourhood of Verdun, which is a growing locality. I believe there is a public building at Laprairie, but there is none at Longueuil, nor at Chambly, both of which are important places. I think we are entitled to know what are the conditions we should fulfil in order to lay our claim before the minister.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think the plea which the hon. gentleman has made for St. Laurent might well guide me in this case. St. Laurent is an important place; it has a college. L'Assomption also has a college, one of the largest in the province of Quebec; it has eighty stores, six hotels, a telegraph office and two convents, and it is a shire town. I cannot give public buildings to all the towns which should perhaps have them; but the expediency of not spending too much money cannot be lost sight of. L'Assomption is an old village, it has not received anything in the past, and we thought we might vote a small sum for a public building there. I would like very much indeed to give public buildings to other towns as deserving, but their time will come.

Mr. BLAIN. What was the revenue from that place last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The total revenue from the post office was $916. The money orders issued were $4,881.

Mr. BLAIN. Would it not be very much cheaper for the government to rent a building which is already constructed, instead of putting a large amount of money in a new building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are many places where we rent buildings; but I may say that there are not merely dozens, but hundreds of demands for public buildings in my department. When I hear speeches in the House against public buildings, I would like some of my friends to persuade their own people not to ask for buildings. It is very well to preach economy here, but our pigeon holes are full of petitions asking for public buildings; and when I have plans prepared, I would like to see around me economical people, such as I see here, advising me not to have expensive buildings. The life is almost taken out of me sometimes because I decline to erect expensive buildings. I have to face a good deal of pressure on account of the numerous demands made upon me, and because people want fine buildings. They say, we are erecting fine houses for ourselves and fine stores, and you want to pursue a cheese-paring policy in regard to public buildings.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Perhaps some of the hon. gentleman's difficulty arises from a circular which the hon. gentleman's colleague the Postmaster General (Hon. Mr. Mulock) sent out in the spring of 1900, calling on his friends to make suggestions for the construction of public buildings ; and I have no doubt that the hon. minister has reprimanded his colleague for taking that step in his absence, because at that time the hon. gentleman was in Paris. Of course, if he had been here it would not have been done. That may to some extent account for the difficulty which the hon. gentleman has in denying the demands so frequently made upon him now.

Mr. MONK. I think it is a pity that the Minister of Public Works puts an improper construction on what I said. I am not opposed to public buildings, but I want to know what is the proper path by which we can reach the heart of the Minister of Public Works when we want a public building. This circular, which my hon. friend the leader of the opposition has alluded to, never reached me. I never got one, although two or three public buildings are required in my constituency. If the Minister of Public Works would only tell us that there are absolutely necessary conditions precedent, without which he cannot entertain a demand for a public building, we will know where we are. But as a man of business, he will admit we ought to know what are the principles that guide him.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I frankly admit that if I had been here I would not have felt under any necessity to advertise that I wanted applications for public buildings. My hon. colleague, as a prudent man, wanted to know the needs of the country, but if he had been a little longer in the Department of Public Works and had read as much of the correspondence as I have, he would have known the needs of the country quite well enough not to require any more knowledge. I can assure my hon. friend that I have not a bad heart, and if he will approach me in one of his good moments, and when I am not in a bad humour, we might agree.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman takes the case of Marysville as the standard by which he intends going on granting public buildings. If that be the case, I think he had better make some further inquiries, and he will find that he is not living up to that standard. Take my own county, which is perhaps a fair average of the counties of this Dominion. It has four towns, and I will give the hon. gentleman the gross postal revenue in each, which ought to be a fair indication of the business done and the necessity for a public building. In the town of Marysville the hon. gentleman tells us that the gross postal revenue, according to the last returns, is $1,398. Compare that with the four towns in my own county. The town of Wallaceburg, with a population of 2,700, has a gross revenue of $3,207, as against $1,398 in the town of Marysville. The town of Dresden, with a population of 1,600, has a gross revenue of $1,948. And the town of Thamesville, with some 900 of population, has a gross revenue of $1,680. Then take the little town of Bothwell, with about 800 inhabitants, its gross revenue is $1,678, as against $1,398 in Marysville. And I venture to say the hon. gentleman would not dream of erecting a public building in any one of these three places.

Let me go a little further and take the money orders issued and see how Marysville compares with the towns I have mentioned. In Marysville the number of money orders issued was 56, and the gross sum involved only $748. But in Wallaceburg, which has been asking for a post office since many years, the number of money orders issued is 1,204, and the gross sum involved $14,523. Take Dresden, there were 852 money orders issued as against 56 in Marysville, and the gross sum involved was $13,411. Then in Thamesville, 376 money orders were issued and the sum involved $5,876; and finally in Bothwell, which has only 800 inhabitants, there were 1,250 post office orders issued, and the gross sum involved was $14,909.

Now, let us take the number of orders paid. In Marysville the number was only 64 as against 653 in Wallaceburg, 552 in Dresden, 286 in Thamesville, and 352 in Bothwell. Take the gross sum involved in each:

Marysville..	$ 555
Wallaceburg,..	9,431
Dresden,....	7,256
Thamesville,..	3,816
Bothwell....	4,444

If these returns indicate anything they certainly indicate that the hon. gentleman has chosen one of the least deserving places in this Dominion in which to erect a public building. I know of no more vicious case than this one to show the utter want of regard for the public needs and the public weal which dictates the hon. gentleman's policy. The sole principle which guides him is party necessity. Wherever there is an election to be gained, wherever it suits the purposes of the government, he is quite ready to put up a public building, regardless entirely of the needs of the public or the requirements of the locality.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are certain ridings which are unlucky, and the riding represented by my hon. friend is one of them. He has explained that in his riding there are four towns which ought to have had public buildings long ago. Well, that riding was represented in parliament by a Liberal, the Hon. David Mills, for many years, and no public buildings were then allotted to it. The chances of war have given us my hon. friend, but he is on the wrong side.

Mr. CLANCY. I am sure the hon. gentleman does not want to misrepresent me. I was not saying whether there should be public buildings there or not, but I was pointing out that there should be some broader ground of public policy in determining what places were entitled to public buildings than what the hon. gentleman has given us.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend gave us the names of four towns, each of which, in his opinion, is better entitled to a public building than the town of Marysville. Well, I was simply reminding him that the riding of Bothwell was for many years represented with great ability by one of our friends, the Hon. David Mills. During those years my hon. friends opposite were on these government benches, and yet it never occurred to them that any one of these four towns was worthy of a public building. I do not see, therefore, how they can find fault with us. We have given ridings represented by opponents public buildings. I do not say—because I am not in the habit of saying what I do not believe to be true—that the representative of a riding has no influence at all; that would be a foolish thing to say. Now that hon. gentlemen on the other side have supplied all their ridings with public buildings, they must not be surprised, if we, on coming into power, pay some attention to ours. That is the position I take without hesitation. Let us be fair to our hon. friends on the other side, but—we should be great fools if we did not think of ourselves. If hon. gentlemen opposite were on this side, they would say exactly what I say now. Of course, we must not squander public money on useless buildings—we all agree to that. I do not object to being criticised; I do not object to the brake of the opposition being put upon any minister—far from it. But there is reason in all things. The Liberal party has been long in opposition, and ridings that have been for so long neglected by the government have rights that I, for one, will endeavour not to forget. As to the item of Marysville, I would remind my hon. friends opposite that their reproaches come not merely with little grace, but with no grace whatever. I found a vote for this work in the estimates when I took office, a vote put there by the late Minister of Finance—and I have simply carried it out.

Mr. BLAIN. I understood that the policy of the late government was to distribute these expenditures for public buildings upon a principle based upon the revenue and population of the town.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Not much.

Mr. BLAIN. Perhaps I could give these hon. gentlemen quotations from their own speeches on that point. Here is the policy as it was explained by the present Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland). This is from the debate on the Richmond post office.

An hon. MEMBER. What year was it?

Mr. BLAIN. Of course, hon. gentlemen opposite will understand that they do not occupy the same position now as they did then. This was the year 1894. The hon. gentleman (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) said:

I know that the hon. ministers and members on that side—that is the conservative side——

Voted that public money should be expended upon these buildings on some principle based on the revenue at the points where these buildings are being constructed and the population to be served.

Then another distinguished gentleman on that side (Mr. Charlton) said :

In a little place like Richmond, with a moderate revenue it strikes me the economical plan would be to rent quarters. And the accommodation might be had at a cost of $200 a year.

The policy of the Conservative party as described by the present Minister of Marine and Fisheries is in marked contrast to the policy of the present administration, who say that it depends upon what the county does in sending a representative to support the government, how it shall be considered in the distribution of money in the construction of public buildings.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. Unfortunately, in that, as in a good many other cases, the practice was vastly different from the precept avowed. I have the honour to represent one of the richest, oldest and most populous constituencies in Ontario, and my hon. friend, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) represents another. Ingersoll and Woodstock, the chief places of these two very large and wealthy constituencies, remained for very nearly forty years without a public building of any kind, sort or description, while, almost within sight of us, was the village of Cayuga, with 150 families, which was thought worthy of a public building. That was a very fair sample of the way government favours were distributed during the period which the Conservatives were in office.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The argument of the hon. Minister of Public Works, which was hailed with such delight by the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright), the Postmaster General (Hon. Mr. Mulock), and the Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson), amounts simply to this—and it is well that we should understand it—the constituency represented by my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Clancy), we will say, was not treated fairly by the late Conservative government because it was represented by an opponent of theirs, Hon. David Mills, and so went without public buildings in places that were much more deserving than is Marysville ; and now, because that constituency happens to be represented by a gentleman who is opposed to the present government, that injustice must be continued.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. No.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). That is what the hon. gentleman's argument amounts to. He says that the Conservative party treated that constituency unfairly in the past, because it was represented by an opponent of theirs. Then the Minister of Public Works very frankly tells us in this House—what has been said by himself and his colleagues on many a public platform—that the representation of a constituency is not without its effect in the distribution of public moneys. The public moneys, under this administration, are not to be distributed according to the public requirements, but according to the political complexion of the gentlemen who represent the constituencies —at least, that is to be taken into consideration. Now, if there is one principle which is more unworthy of the government than another, or more unworthy of the Minister of Public Works, it is that which he defends to-day, and which the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce has defended.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. I simply called attention to the discrepancy between Conservative practice and Conservative precedent.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright), in my humble opinion, would have done better to have stood up and told his colleagues that when this party of purity came into power public moneys were to be distributed according to the needs of the country and not according to the political complexion of the representatives of the constituencies. From the record in the past of the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce we might expect some repudiation of the views expressed by his colleagues to-day. But, instead, he merely throws a taunt at this side of the House with regard to what was done by Conservative administrations in the past. The conduct of Conservative administrations is not the question here. The question is, what is right and best to do to-day ; and, if the Minister of Trade and Commerce has no better ground for defending the present administration than to say that some such thing was done unjustly in the past, it seems to me, with all deference to the hon. gentleman, that it would be better for his own reputation for him to keep his seat. I say again that the argument of the Minister of Public Works is a most vicious argument. Let us concede even, for the purpose of this argument, that the Conservative government did wrong in the past. What has that to do with the question of what is right and best at the present time. Because previous governments did wrong, does that fact of itself justify the present government in following their example ? I venture to say that, whatever has been done in the past with regard to the distribution of public money, the standard in the future should be that the money expended in this country for public works should be expended on some broad and systematic policy according to the needs of the constituency, and absolutely apart from the question as to whether a constituency happens to be represented by a supporter of the government or by a gentleman on this side of the House.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. I will say this to the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Borden, Halifax) that, for a period of nearly thirty years, the Liberal party was treated, systematically and deliberately, by the predecessors of the hon. gentleman with the grossest injustice. And one of the first duties that fell upon us when we assumed office was to see that justice was done to our supporters and to those constituencies which had been deprived of their rights for a great many years. When I gave the illustration of the counties of South Oxford and North Oxford, I gave those because they were extremely notable illustrations of the systematic injustice that had been dealt out to Liberal constituencies for no worse crime than returning Liberal supporters. Now I am glad to see the hon. gentleman's education is beginning. I daresay after they have spent eighteen years in opposition, as they are very likely to do, they will come to something like a glimmering understanding of the principles on which governments ought, in an ideal fashion, to be conducted. I do not disapprove of the statement he makes that it is desirable that regard should be had in all these cases to the amount of the population, to the amount of the revenue, and to various other things which we have often pointed out as having necessarily and properly a large influence on such questions as the erection of public buildings. But I have to tell the hon. gentleman that, as I have said just now, it is the duty of a party which has been long in opposition, when they get into office, to rectify the injustices which were deliberately inflicted by the party in power.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not know that the hon. gentleman has improved very much upon his predecessors. According to him, the first duty of a party coming to power, after being out of power for eighteen years, is, not to conduct the government in the best interests of the country——

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. I did not say that.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). But he said it by implication—but to look after the interests of the party that had been in opposition. Now this is the gentleman, if I mistake not, who preached political purity and high standards of government for eighteen years. Now we understand that his ideal is this, that when his party gets into power the first thing to be looked after is, not these high standards about which he told us so much during eighteen years, but the interests of the Liberal party. Well, he has looked after them pretty well in some respects, I believe. But still possibly principles of that kind, even if they are professed by hon. gentlemen on the other side, had better not, for the credit of the country, be too loudly proclaimed in this House. I think it would be better to put on some semblance of political decency with regard to this matter, and not to say in this House that because a constituency has been represented by a Liberal in the past and therefore has not received justice, it shall, because it happens to be represented by a Conservative now, receive, not the justice which it should receive, but the continued injustice which it has received in the past, and that for no better reason than that it happens to be represented by a gentleman on this side of the House. That is the argument of the Minister of Trade and Commerce.

The MINISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE. It is not.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am glad I have been able to provoke so vigorous a disclaimer from that hon. gentleman, and I trust that when he thinks the matter over a little more calmly he will come to the conclusion that it is not wise in this House to lay down the doctrine of party spoils in so open and flagrant a manner as he has just presented it to the House to-day.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Politics are indeed a very fine game.

An hon. MEMBER. It is a bluff game.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, we have a proof of it just now. For over twenty-five years I have seen the game from the press gallery of this House, and history repeats itself. When the Conservative party was on this side of the House the Liberals said a great many things that the Conservative opposition are saying now. Now, if my hon. friends opposite will excuse me for saying it, they do not always feel very comfortable at the present time. They are afraid of the war, and after the speeches that my hon. friends opposite are delivering to-day, they will not feel any more comfortable in the event of their resuming office in the future. As I say, politics is a fine game, it is an amusing game. My hon. friend has taught me a lesson, he has invited me to decency. Well, I have a good deal of respect for him, but I have always tried to have some respect for myself; and I am quite sure that in what I have already stated to the House, and which will be read by the country, I have not been transgressing decency. I have said this much, and I say it again, that the representatives of the party in power have naturally more influence with the government than the representatives of the party opposed to the government. That is very clear, and what is the use of denying it? I do not make any personal allusion, but what is the use of resorting to hypocrisy? People do not take any stock in that now, it is too late in the day. The government in power is very largely guided by the advice of its own political friends, because those political friends represent public opinion for the time being. But that does not mean that the public interest must be ignored because that interest happens to be located in a riding represented by a member of the opposition. Nobody has intimated anything of the kind. There are to-day very large public works going on in ridings represented by supporters of my hon. friend the leader of the opposition. We have not been hard towards members of the opposition. In point of fact we have been reproached many times by our political friends with being too kind to Conservatives. Several times I have been accused myself of being an old Tory because I did not do what some of my Liberal friends wished me to do, because I did not give them enough. Responsible government is the government of the people by the representatives of the people, by the majority of the people. Our friends opposite must not be offended if we invite them in the most kindly way to take their medicine patiently. They are in opposition, they are doing a useful duty in criticising us, they are doing it well; but they must not forget that the party which is in office to-day represents a majority of the people in the country, and that part of the country represented by the majority has to be attended to.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). There is just one interesting observation of the hon. gentleman which I would like you, Mr. Chairman, to note. He states that criticisms of this kind were very frequently heard some years ago on this side of the House from gentlemen who now sit on the government side of the House; and then he tells us in the same breath that he does not like hypocrisy. I do not know what the hon. gentleman had in his own mind when he made that statement to the House. We are not putting forward these criticisms without meaning them—if that is what the hon. gentleman desires to suggest. We are putting forward in all earnestness the principle that the public money of this country should be distributed according to the public needs of the country. I do not know whether my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works agrees with that; apparently he qualifies it by saying that the principle must be modified by the question as to whether the member representing the particular constituency supports the government or not. With regard to that principle we entirely disagree. I will not say anything further about it except to state that so far as I am concerned I do not believe that is good policy for the country. It is a policy which was not supported by hon. gentlemen in opposition, but it does apparently have some weight with them now since they have acquired the responsibility of power.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I think we are indebted to the Minister of Public Works for several confessions. Not long ago he took the public into his confidence, in Montreal, I think it was, when he told them that the cabinet was largely engaged in fighting each other like blazes. To-day he announces that the supporters of this government, and this government themselves, adhere to the doctrine that to the victors belong the spoils. I suppose most of their time is taken up, since they have no legislation for us to consider at this session, in fighting among themselves for a share of the spoils.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have only one thing to say, I shall never make any more after dinner speeches.

Mr. OSLER. So far as I can see there is absolutely no public interest to be served in this vote. If there ever was a vote purely and simply meant to serve a local interest, a political interest, it is such a vote as this, and such votes as we have had on several of these items this afternoon. What public interest is there to be served by an expenditure of $5,000, $10,000, $15,000, or $20,000 of public money in a village on a post office where the whole revenue is under $1,000 ? Can it be justified in any way except as a pure and simple expenditure of public money for party purposes ? There cannot be any more glaring deviation of public money from the right channel than in such a vote as this. It was rather refreshing to have from the various members of the government, as they one after another got up to justify this vote, the admission that when they were in opposition and objected to such votes, they were ideal statesmen. They never thought for a moment of putting into practice their ideals when they came into power. I do not think, in the whole list of estimates, there are better subjects for criticism than these items of expenditure of large sums of money in small places where they are not required and where they can only be made because of some local political influence being brought to bear.

Mr. INGRAM. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Public Works if the department is in the habit of preparing plans and specifications for public buildings when they are undertaken ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We generally prepare the plans, but on some occasions when we are busy we employ outside help.

Mr. INGRAM. There is another important matter in connection with the construction of public buildings that has not been discussed to-day. While I do not differ with the government as to their satisfying their friends by erecting public buildings, it seems to me that when the department prepares plans and specifications, it should also arrive at some conclusion as to the time it should take to construct a public building.

We have a large number of public buildings constructed in this country from time to time, and there is no stated rate of pay for the architects or clerks of works employed by the Department of Public Works, because I find in the Auditor General's Report and referring to Vancouver, that the architect and clerk of works get $120 per month. I find that in Woodstock the architect receives $100 a month; I find that in Nelson the pay is $7 a day, and I find that in Toronto as high as 7½ per cent, 7 per cent, 3½ per cent, 1 per cent, and large lump sums are paid to an architect for superintending public works. If the government does not pay some attention as to the time that it requires to erect a public building, it will be paying all over the country, in every town, city and village, in which it constructs a public building, large sums of money to these architects for a useless waste of time in superintending these public works. Therefore it is not in the public interest that these men should be continued for these long periods. Take the Auditor General's Report to-day, and you will find, under the heading of 'Public Buildings,' from the 1st of July to the 30th of June in the following year, twelve months' pay for an architect for superintending a public building that ought to be constructed in at least six months' time. These items, taken altogether, are very important, if the hon. gentleman desires to satisfy his friends by erecting public buildings. For instance, in Wallaceburg, for a building that may cost $8,000 or $10,000, an architect is paid $2,000 for superintending it. Perhaps this practice has been abused under the Conservative regime and if it has it is certainly being abused under the present administration, because it is not a proper thing to do.

Lévis cattle quarantine station—renewals, improvements, repairs, etc., $3,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). How much was expended last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Five thousand dollars last year.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is it for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No special work, but just for general repairs.

Mr. CLARKE. Are these expenditures being made on the advice of somebody ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, always on the advice of the Department of Agriculture. In this case, as in all other cases, I am simply the builder. Demands are made upon me.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood the hon. minister to say that he spent $5,000 last year.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. And that he proposes to spend $5,000 this year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, $3,000 this year.

Mr. SPROULE. That would buy all the buildings on the place.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. These buildings were erected twenty years ago and they require a good deal of repairing.

Mr. SPROULE. Why do you require $8,000 to repair buildings not worth $2,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They were built a long time ago, and they are always requiring repairs.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What are they for—cattle ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). To what extent do we import cattle ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The list that has been sent to us of the work that is to be done this year includes two new stables, $1,250; rebuilding fences, $1,793; repairing roads, $1,000; superintendent's office, $308; other employees' residence, repairs, $275; repairing old stable, $60; sidewalks, $287; small repairs, $266. The whole amount that we were asked for was $5,500, but we have cut it down to the amount I have just asked for now.

Mr. LENNOX. What are the roads on which it is proposed to spend $1,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. They are roads communicating between the different buildings. I have been there often. There are at least ten or twelve acres of property.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). It is for thoroughbred stock that is imported ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. As a matter of fact, there is very little stock imported except thoroughbred stock, but all stock arriving has to be quarantined for ninety days, and the accommodation is required for this stock. There has to be a yard for each particular lot of cattle with a space between, so that the animals in one yard cannot come in contact with, or even within easy reach of the animals in the adjoining yard. This fencing has been in very bad order, and last year a report came that it was necessary to replace it. The buildings which were erected twenty years ago have had very little done on them for many years, and were in such a very bad state that the importers were complaining.

Mr. MONK. What quantity of stock was imported last year ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Speaking from memory, about 1,500 or 1,600 head of cattle, sheep and swine.

Mr. MONK. Were they all imported from Great Britain ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. One lot I think came from France, but all the rest came from Great Britain.

Mr. SPROULE. This appears to be an enormous sum to replace fencing on ten or twelve acres of ground.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will bring over the details to the hon. gentleman and he can see for himself what the cost is.

Mr. LENNOX. I do not see how you can spend all that money for fencing a plot of twelve acres.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Speaking from memory there are forty acres in the lot, so that it is erroneous to say that it contains only twelve acres. The buildings have to be placed at some distance apart and have all to be fenced around. It is a rough piece of ground and we have to grade roads so that provender can be carried to the cattle. For a long time there were no roads and the inconvenience was found to be such that the importers requested that we should make these improvements.

Mr. SPROULE. You would appear, by these estimates, to intend to build sidewalks on the streets of the town.

Th MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is not on the streets of the town. There is some planking necessary around the grounds to enable the attendants to go dry shod from one building to another, and that is called a side walk.

Lévis public building, $5,000.

Mr. MONK. Is this work under contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. No site has been purchased and nothing has been done.

Mr. MONK. Why are we asked to vote the money then ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Because I expect to go along now.

Mr. MONK. Has the minister made choice of any site ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No. There are some changes to be made by the Railway Department and I was in expectation of being able to secure the old freight shed for a site. No choice has been made yet, and I do not know whether I will be able to get the freight shed site as I have not been able to confer lately with my colleague who has been away practically for the last three months.

Mr. MONK. Of course the contract will be given by public tender when the building comes to be erected.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Certainly.

Montreal examining warehouse, $15,000.

Mr. MONK. What is this for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That building will have to be changed altogether inside, and we are adding another story to it. It is too dark and cannot accommodate the trade which is increasing every day. I went there a month ago with one of the architects and Mr. Miles, the President of the Montreal Board of Trade. My officers believe they can carry out the work for $30,000. The estimate is as follows :—Addition to building, $6,000 ; altering main building inside, $12,000 ; fittings, $4,000 ; light, $500 ; furniture, $1,000 ; heating, $1,000 ; contingencies, $500. Although I am not an architect I am about sure that the addition will cost a little more than $6,000.

Mr. MONK. I would like to have the assurance of the minister that these repairs, if absolutely necessary, will be carried on by contract.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The work cannot be carried on that way.

Mr. MONK. Why not ? There is very keen competition in Montreal among builders and I really think we are not getting the worth of our money in the repairs we have been executing on public buildings in Montreal during the last four or five years. I feel convinced that if the minister will make specifications of what repairs are necessary, and will invite tenders fairly and publicly he will effect a considerable economy. Why should not the government do that ? Private individuals and companies do that. We have architects in Montreal—and the minister has some of them at his disposal in his department—who are continually making repairs under such a system as that. We will vote the money at once if the minister gives us the assurance that there will be specifications deposited where contractors can see them and tenders invited fairly and publicly.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WOKS. In the case of work like this no railway company, or no other company would think for one moment of calling for public tenders. Neither would a private person do it. My hon. friend (Mr. Monk) himself owns houses and when he has repairs to make he does not call for tenders. When you start out on work like this you never know what you will have to do. There is not a man in this House who owns property who will call for tenders for such repairs. I have tried that system in repairing wharfs and breakwaters, and I have always found myself in deep water because it is impossible to know before hand the extent of the repairs.

Mr. MONK. You are adding a story to that building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. That is only a small part of the work. The Canadian Pacific Railway is improving their station in Montreal and there was no tender asked for.

Mr. MONK. I beg your pardon, it was done by tender and contract.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. MONK. Yes, I know the contractors.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The material may be obtained by contract, but the work is done by day's labour. In this case I believe that I will spend less money if I do the work by day's labour. I cannot understand the argument that has been made often in this department that the government cannot carry on work by day's labour, just the same as contractors can. I decline to admit that because experience has proven that it is not true. I say more: It does not give him any pleasure to carry out works by day's labour; it gives him trouble. But I say that the system of the public tenders as carried out in this country is a bad system. If tenders were asked from a picked list of contractors as is done in Germany and in France it would be well and good; but when everybody who can find a deposit is allowed to send in a tender as is the case here, that is the worst possible system. I say, after five years of experience in the department, that the poorer the contractor is the lower tender will he send in. He does not know his business; he will try to buy his material on credit. Several important works are to-day delayed because they are in the hands of men who should not have been allowed to tender. What is the position of the minister when an incapable or unworthy contractor does not carry on the work properly? If I take the work from him, I have to ask for new tenders, which means two or three months of delay. The system of public tenders which we have is a bad one, and every time we have repairs to be made, I do not hesitate to say to the House on my responsibility that it should be done by day's labour. Of course, large works, like the Halifax public building, for instance, I would not wish to do by day's labour.

Mr. CLARKE. If the principle is a sound one, why not?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not see why not. I have to educate the public and parliament first—that is the whole trouble. I do not hesitate to say that the work which we are carrying on at Sorel, building cars and dredges, is better carried out than it would be if it were done by contract. The government has no interest except to do the work well. The contractor expects to realize a profit of 20 per cent, because he has to buy his plant, &c., but when a government has the plant, it can put into the work the profits which any contractor would wish to make.

Mr. MONK. I am very sorry to hear the hon. Minister of Public Works enunciate that doctrine, because I believe that in the city of Montreal repairs amounting to $15,000, and consisting principally of putting an additional story on the examining warehouse, ought to be given out by public tender. The law requires it, and in the city of Montreal no institution nor individual would think of carrying on such works without inviting public tenders. The hon. gentleman has mentioned the Canadian Pacific Railway. It is well known that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have accredited contractors who sometimes undertake alterations without submitting the price; but they are really clerks of works, and they usually exact contracts from those under them. The hon. gentleman has referred to the extension of the Windsor Station in Montreal. I repeat that in that case there were large contracts for plumbing and heating, given to Lessard & Harris by tender.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do the same thing. While carrying out the work by day's labour, I ask for tenders for plumbing or steam fitting.

Mr. MONK. If the hon. gentleman will make specifications for these repairs and invite public tenders, he will find that he can get the work done by able and responsible contractors for half the cost at which it will be done by day's labour or by calling on two or three friends of the government for prices. Now, we spend about $30,000 a year on repairs in Montreal, and I venture to say that there is no city in the Dominion of Canada where the service of the government are so badly accommodated as in Montreal. If we spend so large an amount annually on repairs and improvements in Montreal, we ought surely to be able to get something better than we have at present. If I had the time, I could show, by reference to the public accounts of last year, that money could have been saved if the minister had followed the plan which is followed by everybody else in Montreal, of asking for public tenders. I regret that the minister evidently intends dealing with these repairs, for which he asks $15,000, without the condition of calling for public tenders. If he would attach that condition to the vote, I would be ready to concede it at once, because I know that the improvements are necessary.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am dealing with the repairs in Montreal in the same way as my predecessors have done, and they are under the charge of the same officers. Mr. Desjardins is an old officer whom I left in office, although not a political friend of mine. He was appointed by my predecessor Mr. Ouimet, but I left him in office, because I believed he was an honest man, and I believe so still.

Mr. MONK. You are not to be bound by everything that was done by the previous government.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am fully responsible for what I am doing; but I say that the repairs are being carried out on the same system that prevailed in the past, and it is the only system on which they can be carried out. We have in Montreal the examining warehouse, the custom-house, the inland revenue office and the post office. Now, how could you possibly ask for tenders for every small work costing $50 or less—for a little painting or to repair something that has got out of order ? It is practically impossible to find out in advance all the repairs that may become necessary. We are nearly all owners of houses, and there is not a man here who does not spend a large amount of money on his houses. Can he tell to-day how much money he will have to spend during the coming year ? He cannot. My hon. friend is altogether unfair to the officers in charge of the work in Montreal. I follow them closely, and I say without hesitation that they carry out the work cheaply and well. I think my hon. friend is right when he says that the post office is not in good shape. The reason is, if I may say so, that there has been, in the past, a division of power. The Postmaster General's Department has done part of the cleaning and my department has done the rest. That has caused a very bad state of affairs—I grant that. We have arranged to put a stop to that. I have provided for a lodging upstairs, for a caretaker for the building. In future, I think we shall have better results, while expending less money.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the hon. minister please say what is the result, usually, of carrying out these public works by day labour ? Does he find that the estimates are exceeded or is the work done within the estimates made by his officers ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. At times, the estimates are exceeded. That is the case, for instance, in the addition made to this building. Any one who knows anything about repairs knows how that may easily be. When you start, you think the structure is good, but may find you are mistaken. In this case the architect was obliged to go to a depth of fifteen feet for his foundation. He could not have foreseen that—nobody could. In cases like that, it is impossible to carry out the system of tender and contract. As a rule, the estimates are found to be all right.

Mr. CLARKE. In the specific case of the post office at Montreal, I understand that there was a division of authority and that the results were not good—which is quite likely. But, in that case, what was the difficulty ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There was no difficulty. I understood my hon. friend to complain that the Montreal post office was not kept clean. That was true. I explained how that was and that I had provided lodging for a caretaker who would have responsibility for the whole building.

Mr. BENNETT. The expenditure of $10,000 or $15,000 in the Montreal post office without the formality of calling for tenders is a very trifling matter compared with the startling announcement that the minister has made within the last few minutes. Practically he has told us that, from this out, he intends to confine himself to the principle of getting tenders from his friends without the formality of public competition. The Department of Marine and Fisheries introduced that method under the late minister to a certain extent, and perhaps it is to be the rule now in the other departments of the government. Last session, I called the attention of the House to the fact that the Minister of Public Works was spending vast sums of money at Sorel without calling for tenders. I am not going to say that the work done at Sorel costs more or costs less than it would have cost under public tender and contract. But I am surprised that some hon. gentleman on the other side has not stood up and told the hon. minister that he must call a halt on this line of procedure. What is the minister doing at Sorel according to the last Auditor General's Report ? It will be news to some hon. members of the House, and perhaps to some hon. members of the government, that, at this place, the Minister of Public Works employs an army of men, the expenditure for whose work runs not merely into the thousands but into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Have we come to this pass, that the Minister of Public Works can employ hordes of men, building and repairing boats as he pleases—for there is no explanation up to this time as to what has actually been done ? According to the last Auditor General's Report the minister spent about $125,000 in this way. Last year I brought to the attention of the House the case of the construction of a tug at a cost of about twice what was really necessary. The machinery was on the upper lakes, having been taken out of the old hull. A new hull was built at Sorel and was then towed around to the upper lakes. The cost would have been fifty per cent less if the hull had been built at Midland and the machinery placed in it there. Here at page V—19 of the Auditor General's Report, we have some account of the expenditure at Sorel, amounting to this enormous sum of about $125,000—and it is an enormous sum to be expended at the sweet will of the Minister of Public Works. What is the procedure at Sorel ? I will be bound to say that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bruneau) who represents Richelieu, in which riding I understand Sorel to be, simply turns on his party friends in season and out of season. To do what ? To work at whatever work can be provided. The principle of competition is set at defiance. Yet, not an hon. gentleman on the other side rises to call the minister to account. That hon. gentleman, this afternoon, has made the startling announcement that he does not intend to be held to the system of tender and contract in a matter involving the expenditure of $15,000 or $20,000. Then what is the hon. minister going to do with the case of the French River canal ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It will be all open.

At six o'clock, the committee took recess.

After Recess.

Committee resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. BENNETT. We heard before recess from the Minister of Public Works, who is nothing if not candid, the frank and exultant avowal that he had initiated a new system of dispensing with calling for tenders for government contracts, and had thus secured control of an amount of patronage undreamed of by his predecessors. From his point of view the hon. minister is rather to be congratulated on the success of his experiment. During the past four or five years in which he has been at the head of the Public Works Department he has taken the bull by the horns, and certainly can have no cause of complaint of the result. We on this side probably have not as much occasion to quarrel with the hon. minister on that score as some of his colleagues. Those who were in this House in the last parliament will remember how the House was startled when the Drummond County deal was taken in hand by the hon. minister. On that occasion there was question of the adoption of a line of policy involving a large expenditure, and coming naturally under the control of the Minister of Railways and Canals, but that unfortunate minister seemed to have been pushed to one side and in his place the Minister of Public Works conducted the negotiations and brought the deal to a successful issue. True the scheme met with rather a mishap when first presented, but on the second occasion, thanks to the vigilant care and attention of the Minister of Public Works, it went through. The hon. gentleman who, I am glad to see to-day enjoying such good health, had occasion to absent himself one session, and his place was taken by the Postmaster General (Hon. Mr. Mulock). I am sorry that some of the ministers from Ontario are not in their places to-night, because I should like them to hear what I have to say, even at the risk of offending them, regarding the invidious distinction that the Minister of Public Works enjoys to-day in the province of Ontario. In the riding I have the honour to represent, we tendered a banquet last year to that hon. gentleman, in which all joined irrespective of politics, and I think he was well pleased and so were we. But I have not heard of any banquets having been tendered any of the ministers from the province of Ontario. Were the Minister of Public Works to pass down any street in our town, he would be recognized at once by every one, but I cannot say the same of his colleagues from the province of Ontario, with the exception of the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright), whose doleful countenance, by reason of his picture having been before the public for the past twenty years, is rather familiar to our public. But were the other ministers from the province of Ontario to pass down the street of that town or any other towns on the shores of Georgian Bay, I doubt whether they would be recognized any more than any ordinary stranger. If there is a town in the whole country that has done honour to the Minister of Public Works in the shape of banquets, it is Owen Sound. Go to Collingwood, and you will find the same treatment accorded the Minister of Public Works there. Even if you go to that centre of Conservatives in Ontario, Toronto, you will find that the Minister of Public Works is really the only man in the public eye there to-day. The chief reason is that he is the power behind the throne, and both political men and the people recognize the fact that without his assistance we cannot hope to get anything in that great province. It is true that the ministers from Ontario have not much patronage at their disposal. There is first the Secretary of State (Senator Scott), who dispenses out the tape and the sealing wax, and whose countenance would be perfectly unknown, except by very few, were he to pass down King street, Toronto. He has no patronage at his disposal at all. Then we come to the Minister of Trade and Commerce, who wanted to let the House know that he was still alive this afternoon, and broke for a few moments into verse. Perhaps he wants to spend the last of his days in this House because last session he and the late Minister of Justice were consigned to oblivion even by the back-bench members opposite. It was said last year that the Minister of Justice was soon to disappear from the scene, and now it is on the cards that the Minister of Trade and Commerce is about to be shelved into the lieutenant governorship of Ontario.

So that the great province of Ontario, which pays the bulk of the taxes of this country, is practically without representation in the cabinet, at least in the matter of patronage. Take the two great toll gatherers, the Postmaster General (Hon. Mr. Mulock), and the Minister of Customs (Hon. Mr. Paterson), whose daily duty it is to see where and how they can best exact taxes from the people—neither of these two has at his disposition any patronage at all. The Postmaster General is deserving of our special sympathy. Here is the Minister of Public Works taking the stand that it is within his power to give out contracts by days labour, as he does in Sorel to the tune of $125,000 per year, and yet the Postmaster General is helpless to give even a penny increase to a mail carrier. He has appeals from the letter carriers in all the great cities of the province, and he cannot move hand or foot. Yet the Minister of Public Works can deal out patronage by the hundred thousand dollars, aggregating in the year to millions of dollars, without any vestige of tender, and not a question is asked by hon. gentlemen opposite as to whether or not there is to be public competition for these loaves and fishes. Occasionally an hon. gentleman opposite will make a protest, and sometimes the kick results to their benefit. Why, I recollect that last session the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Britton), in a moment of audacity, dared to remonstrate with the Minister of Public Works with regard to one of his expenditures. What was the result? With a good deal of finesse, the Minister of Public Works managed to get him out of the way by having him appointed to a judgeship.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. He was not treated very badly.

Mr. BENNETT. That is what I am pointing out. There are some gentlemen behind the Minister of Public Works to whom this example may be an incentive to go and do likewise. If they will only rebel against some of these expenditures they too may be slated for positions. I saw the other day that the junior member for Hants (Mr. Russell) is soon to be translated to a judgeship. It might be wise for him to make a spasmodic kick against the principle just laid down by the Minister of Public Works and obtain his reward all the sooner. Then, if the newspaper rumours are correct, the hon. member for Essex (Mr. Sutherland) is to be given a judgeship at an early day in order to smooth away some political troubles in his riding, and in view of the fact that the Minister of Justice promised the other day that there was to be a house-cleaning in the Ontario judiciary, and that a number of county court judges were to be retired, there is a vista open for the gentlemen of the legal profession on the other side of county court judgeships if not of Superior Court judgeships, and it would be well for them to take time by the forelock.

I congratulate the Minister of Public Works on the stand he has taken. In the first place, he has usurped the prerogative and rights of the Department of Railways and Canals. He went into the arena and tilted against his colleague the Minister of Railways and Canals, and dispossessed him of what was most valuable in the Railway Department. And this summer the hon. gentleman made an incursion into the Department of Canals. The newspapers were filled with the accounts of the trips taken by the Minister of Public Works up French river with the view of bringing about the construction of a large public work there. The hon. gentleman really seems to bear a charmed life. He can do whatever he pleases. When the fight gets a little warm he simply smiles serenely, and the First Minister comes to his assistance. A few years ago, in Montreal, when a great political club, the Club Letellier, demanded that the head of the Minister of Public Works should be placed on a salver——

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It was not.

Mr. BENNETT. Certainly not. The minister sits there and smiles and knows that neither the premier nor any one else can put him out of his position. The papers have lately been discussing the separation of a pair of twins, which operation was performed in Paris, with the disastrous result that one of the twins died. The right hon. the First Minister will no doubt bear that in mind whenever there is any suggestion of his severing himself from the Minister of Public Works. In that event the consequences, I am afraid, would be even more serious, for, I believe instead of one they both would die.

But the Minister of Public Works was not content. Knowing the weakness of the Ontario ministers, he went to Ontario and ousted them from their own ground. When the party suffered such a defeat in the province of Ontario in the last election, when it came back with so many empty saddles, the Minister of Public Works decided that he himself would look after any future elections. He went up to North Bruce, but I did not hear of his being in West Durham at the last election. Perhaps it was because of the North Bruce defeat.

There is not a single matter that the Minister of Public Works brings before this House in open defiance of this cabinet that he does not put through. And he has proved that in the past. What happened in relation to what was known as the Kettle River Bill? Here was the Grand Trunk Railway Company, in connection with an American company, which was pressing down to the border on the southern side of British Columbia. Day after day that question was debated in the Railway Committee. It was a question of policy on the part of this government whether lines should be constructed from the American side into Canadian territory. A day was fixed when the Minister of Railways and Canals was to make a statement, and he stated at the time that the policy of the government was that the line should be constructed. That was directly adverse to the wishes of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Hon. gentlemen who were in the House at that time, will remember that memorable scene. The House voted, the yeas were called for on the Bill, one after another minister stood up on that side of the House and voted that the Kettle River Bill should be granted. But when it came to the Minister of Public Works he voted against it; and when the back benches were looked at, behold, to the humiliation of the premier, the Minister of Public Works had actually stolen from the premier himself his best and strongest supporters. Hon. gentlemen here remember that night when the Canadian Pacific Railway magnates were sitting in the gallery, and the Minister of Public Works kissed the tips of his fingers to them as much as to say, I am the whole government. There is not a doubt he was the whole government on that occasion.

Now there is great jealousy in the province of Ontario of the Minister of Public Works, and when by chance, owing to the illness of the Minister of Public Works and his absence in the old country, the Postmaster General was assigned to discharge his duties, what did the Postmaster General do on that occasion? He caused to be sent out all over the province a famous circular asking what they required in their different ridings. Well, I think there can be no doubt that a great many answers were given to the Postmaster General. Whether the Postmaster General's information was acted upon afterwards I know not, but I do know that the Minister of Public Works was not at all pleased with the action of the Postmaster General on that occasion. For what did we see? Why, we saw the Minister of Public Works threatening to do, what? When the Postmaster General said it was the policy of any country, at least in modern times, to combine the postal and telegraph departments together, what did the Toronto 'Globe' say? Why, it said that that was right, and that the Postmaster General should have charge of the telegraph department. I would like to ask the minister of telegraph lines, I would like to ask the Minister of Public Works, if there is any prospect of the Postmaster General getting control of that department. Why, everybody knows that the Minister of Public Works has this matter right under his thumb, and that he has the whole control of this department. Yet, Sir, there is not a minister from the province of Ontario who will dare to stand up in his place and condemn this principle, the principle that, while they were in opposition, they demanded should be carried out in its entirety. The Minister of Public Works snaps his fingers at them, and he expends, as he does at Sorel, $125,000 in day labour, and here is $15,000 at another point.

Now take the question of dredging, and that is rather a tender point with some gentlemen on the other side of the House; because, while none of them are owners of dredges—because if any gentleman on that side of the House owned a dredge he would be contravening the Independence of Parliament Act were he to engage in the work of dredging—the result is that some of them are owned by very near relatives of members of parliament. It may be avoiding the Act; but the general public don't think conduct of that kind is altogether free from reprehension. Now, what does the Minister of Public Works do on the question of dredging? This dredging work is not let out by public tender at so much a day, these dredges are hired for a time, and the work is given in that way. I am not going to say the work is not properly done, because I am not in the possession of information to justify me in making that statement. But I do say the whole principle is wrong, there should be public competition in all these matters, even when it is a question of this paltry $15,000. But it is the broader and greater principle that the minister has taken up this afternoon, that he for the future intends in his department—and I assume it is to spread in other departments—to act on his own will and pleasure, and is going to let out the public works he likes at public competition and open tender, but such as he does not like, he proposes to let out in the other way.

I quite agree with the statement of the Minister of Public Works, made, I think, in the city of Montreal, about the cabinet fighting like blazes. I think they should. I think when a Minister of Public Works infringes as he does on the departments of these other ministers, when he, in open day, red-handed, comes in and takes up the work of their departments, it is high time for these gentlemen to make a protest, as the Postmaster General made a protest, and as the Minister of Railways and Canals has made a protest too. In all this fighting, in all this tearing of hair, so to speak, that is going on, there comes up one feeble voice, and that is the voice of the Minister of Railways and Canals. Now, the Minister of Railways and Canals has caused to be published in the papers within the last day or two a statement that he is not going to retire from the cabinet. Well, it may be he is not going to retire of his own free will, but it must need be that the Minister of Railways and Canals believes that he is standing on slippery ground, or he would not pay so much attention as he does to the rumors that are sent around the country to the effect that he is to be deprived of his position.

I am surprised that some gentleman on that side of the House don't enter a feeble protest. The other day, they had taken a minister away from the province of Prince Edward Island, there was a gentleman who came here who had held the rank of premier in Prince Edward Island. Yet despite the fact that the bulk of the representatives from that province are in accord with this government, in the most brutal way, this portfolio is taken away from that province. Then there is the great province of New Brunswick. The hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Emmerson) came in here only last session with a great flourish of trumpets. He was to occupy a seat in the cabinet, but instead of his having the seat, the only gentleman who does occupy a seat in that cabinet is being assailed from behind, and he finds it necessary to rush into print in order to define his position while he is out of the House.

Now I hope that the Minister of Public Works, for the good of the country, will retract, or at least soften a little the statement he made this afternoon. I hope the Minister of Public Works will not alarm the public, because this statement will alarm the public. If the people of the whole Dominion are to be told that the Minister of Public Works is about to bring down large sums of money to be voted away, and that he is not going to ask parliament to harness these grants with the condition that open tenders shall be asked upon them, then I say it is going to be a matter of much comment and of great surprise to the people of the country. But how much greater will be the surprise when, from the great province of Ontario, with five ministers, there is not a single word of protest made by any one of them; and how much greater still the surprise that, with the array of talent from that province, there is not a single gentleman on the other side of the House who will stand up and protest against that principle. I have recalled the case of the late member of Kingston having made a remonstrance, and from the fact of his remonstrance having been beneficial, it may perhaps prompt some other gentleman on that side of the House to do the same. It is the principle that is being followed to which we object. I see my hon. friend from West Northumberland (Mr. McColl) who came into this House on a narrow majority, and if what I am informed is correct, his presence in this House was due greatly to the fact that a large public institution in the town of Cobourg just at the time of the general elections was being constructed by day's labour. This pernicious principle, this principle that hon. gentlemen have contended against in the past, is a principle that I hope, and still hope, some gentleman opposite will rise and condemn in its entirety.

Mr. McCOLL. I understand the subject under discussion is as to whether public works should be done by public tender or whether, in certain cases, they should be done by day labour. It was said by an hon. gentleman this afternoon that in the city of Montreal there is very keen competition among contractors and that from that fact no doubt public work could be done with a large saving of expense by putting it up to public tender rather than by doing it by day labour. If that be true and if there is any saving by doing this work by public tender, you will often find that the saving in that way is at the expense of the labouring man and that is something that I do not think any hon. member of this House would wish to see. Now, independently of the question as to whether absolutely new works should be done by public tender or not, I submit that in the case of repairs to old buildings and the like of that it is far better to do it by day labour. Any one who has had experience in the matter knows how very difficult it is when you undertake to remodel or improve a building or to make additions to get plans and specifications with sufficient detail to provide for all the work that has to be done. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Bennett) who has just spoken, referred to the work which the provincial government has within the last two years been carrying on in Cobourg. It was known by many hon. members that some years ago the provincial government bought the old Victoria College building and that within the last two years they have been refitting that building for the purposes of an asylum. The way the work was done was this: the provincial architect made plans and specifications so far as he could of the changes that were necessary. An efficient man was put in charge of the work. The work was done by day labour, and while that work was going on I had an opportunity of visiting the place from time to time and what did I see? I noticed that in many cases changes had been made even after the work had been commenced. A door would be changed to another location from the place it had been originally designed to occupy, showing clearly that it was impossible in a case like that to keep to the plans and specifications though they were prepared in the best manner possible. The architect would come down every two weeks, or every month, look over the work and suggest any changes that he considered necessary and proper. I have yet to hear any complaint, even among Conservatives, to say nothing of Liberals in that riding, as to the way in which that work has been carried on. The principle of tender was to a certain extent carried out. When materials were wanted, where it was practicable to put them up to tender, that was done, and the materials in that way were purchased at the lowest price. I believe that on account of this work being done by day labour it has been far better done and at no greater expense than if it had been done by tender.

An hon. MEMBER. And you were elected.

Mr. McCOLL. It has been said by one hon. gentleman that I was elected by a narrow majority. But I see the hon.member for East Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) in his seat, who lives in the adjoining riding, and he will know that my majority did not depend on Cobourg. True, I succeeded in getting a majority in Cobourg, but my total majority was 135, showing clearly that I was not elected on account of my majority in the town. Perhaps that will be considered a very narrow majority in a close riding such as this is, but we think it is a very good majority because my opponent had been elected in the riding, the same gentleman, since 1881 and during that time he had a number of by-elections and in every instance his majority was under one hundred, in the majority of cases ranging from 30 to 50.

Mr. SPROULE. If there was any argument needed to strengthen the conclusion that the system of doing work by day labour is wrong, the hon. gentleman (Mr. McColl), who has just taken his seat, has furnished it in his closing remarks that his riding has been represented since 1881 by his opponent and that this is the first time in the history of the constituency that it was carried by a Liberal, associated with the fact that at this particular time there was this work being done by day labour by the hon. gentleman's own friends and the admission that he makes himself that he frequently visited the work. Put these things together and he comes here as the result of it. Alluding to the admission that the system is a good one, it certainly is a good system for the purpose of manufacturing votes and sending the hon. gentleman down here. I think the hon. gentleman, when he reflects, will wish that he had not spoken, because, instead of doing his cause any good, he has done it very much injury. I was surprised at the announcement made by the Minister of Public Works (Hon. Mr. Tarte). I have always given him credit for being a very clear-headed man, and I have no very strong grounds to change that favourable opinion of him ; yet, when he announced that the system of constructing public works by tender was objectionable, and could not safely be carried out, I could not agree with him and I think the country will hardly agree with him. He said that if work were done, as it is done in England, or in France, it would be all right. Is he not here to adopt the English or the French system, if they are better than ours, of doing work by public tender. Surely, if he discovered that there were objectionable features about our system he might have eradicated those features and improve the system of letting contracts by tender. If he found it serviceable and that it resulted in an economy of public funds he should have done it. But, he does not attempt to adopt this system. On the other hand, he has come to the conclusion that the letting of contracts by public tender is all wrong and that it is preferable to do work by the day labour system. The hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) places in my hand the Auditor General's Report and he gives me an opportunity of presenting to the House and the country an example of the benefits of the day labour system which the hon. Minister of Public Works has adopted. I have here the exependitures that were made down at the shops at Sorel. That is a place where the hon. minister spent last year over $125,000 by day labour. It was not as the hon. member for West Northumberland (Mr. McColl) recently said to patch up an old building at all. There may be some excuse if you are repairing an old building for not letting the work by tender, but this was not the patching up of an old building. It was building dredges and doing other work in connection with the shipyards at Sorel. Many of these works could easily have been let by tender because plans and specifications for them could have been got up beforehand and any one who understood the business might have been given an opportunity of tendering, with a reasonable hope of doing the work and knowing what he was doing. I find that there is no less than six hundred day labourers employed at Sorel. Imagine for a moment that there is a contest going on to elect a member, the same as there was in the riding of the hon. member for West Northumberland, where there was a public work going on which was so useful to him, imagine 600 men in a riding employed under a government foreman, and what chance has the opposition candidate to be elected ? The Minister of Public Works has great ingenuity and great resources, and much stratagem while he is engaged in an election campaign, and no man better than he can use 600 voters under such circumstances to support the government candidate. Every one of these men are paid agents—I do not mean that they are paid in a wrongful way by being bought—but they earn their daily bread because of the employment afforded by the Minister of Public Works, and they are, to a certain extent, at his mercy, and we know that they have to vote as he wishes. Therefore, in such a constituency the opposition candidate has to start with a vote of 600 against him, not to speak of the relatives and friends of the workmen who may vote with them. The Minister of Public Works tells us to-day that the carrying on of public works by day's labour is the better system, and that the contract system has been a failure, but if he finished the sentence with the words which no doubt come to his tongue he would have added that the contract system was a failure—when he wanted to carry an election. Those men are employed on the work at a good round wage, and their work may not be very hard, but there are always a large number of applicants for any vacancy, and so the whole thing is engineered in order that every man who is working as well as every man who desires employment must be friendly to the government. The Minister of Public Works has spent $125,000 of the people's money in one year by the day's labour system, and let any ratepayer in the Dominion look over the pay sheets, and he will see the condition of things. The minister tells us that that money was economically and properly spent, but in my judgment the very reverse is the case. The announcement of the minister (Hon. Mr. Tarte) that the tender and contract system has been a failure will be startling news for the country. When these gentlemen now on the treasury benches sat in opposition, the principle to which they most pinned their faith was that all public money, no matter how small, must be expended under the tender and contract system. They told us that was the only guarantee that the public expenditure would be safeguarded, and that those who were not friends of the government would have a chance of sharing in any public works. But the Minister of Public Works has changed his view on this point since he got into office. I believe that the people of the country will not endorse the Minister of Public Works in the views he has expressed to-day on this matter. I believe that the people of the country will say that the tender and contract system is the best means that has yet been devised to safeguard the expenditure of public money. I believe further, that a very large percentage of the ratepayers of Canada will differ from the minister on his day's labour theory. We have had unfortunate experience of the day's labour system all over the country. Look at that vote for building fences around the Lévis quarantine station. I went all over that ground at Lévis and I saw these fences, and I believe that any practical farmer will tell you that these fences, for which a vote of $1,000 is asked, could be put in proper order for $200. Last year we spent $5,000 on this quarantine station, the year before we spent $5,000, and we are going on increasing our expenditure year after year. Under what system is that money expended ? It is expended on the day's labour system, that beautiful system that the minister has declared to the world to be the most economical and to give the best results. We are entitled to know how many rods of that fencing is to be done, of what material the fences is to be made, and what are the specifications. The minister handed me over his book, but the chairman was so anxious to call out that the item was carried that I did not wish to cause delay. I am now sorry that I did not read out the information in that book to the House and thus do what the minister himself ought to have done. I remember very well that some years ago, when there was a vote for a post office in Renfrew or in the adjoining county, and when the Liberals were in opposition they took the whole night and a part of the day censuring the government for building a fence and a piece of a sidewalk. They wanted to know whether the fencing was hardwood or pine, what was the height, how much the lumber cost, and whether it was done by day's labour or by contract. They spent a whole night on that, and now it comes about that the Liberal government is spending five times as much in building sidewalks and fences around a piece of land twelve acres in extent, and they cannot or will not tell us what kind of fencing this is. As I said, I went over the ground at Lévis last year, and I believe if they asked between $50 and $100 for this work, instead of $1,000, they would have plenty of money to repair the fences. But I rose specially to call attention to the fact that the minister of the great spending Department of Public Works, has declared that the tender and contract system is a failure, and he gave us to understand by implication, although he did not say it in so many words, that he intends in the future to spend the public money by day's labour as much as possible. Well that is what he is doing at Sorel. If he carries out his intention he will have an army of his own friends engaged on public buildings in many of the constituencies throughout the country. If there is a by-election he will be sure to manipulate all that patronage for his own benefit. The government always manages that business very nicely. It was so in West Durham, it was so in Quebec, it was so in North Grey when they were trying to carry an election.

Some hon. MEMBERS. In West York.

Mr. SPROULE. I have no doubt from what I heard that the government were preparing for that kind of work in West York. The hon. member (Mr. Campbell) told the people that he was going to get them a post office and do numbers of other things if he only was elected. The reason he gave was that the Minister of Public Works and he were on friendly terms, and that his opponent did not enjoy that distinction. It was something like what Mr. Hardy said at Owen Sound when he promised to get the people hot justice rather than cold justice. The election in West York was carried by such plausible promises as well as by other means, and it certainly was not carried by prayers, because the minister (Hon. Mr. Tarte) tells us that elections are not carried by prayers.

We want to know now, is the Minister of Public Works going to carry out the promises made by the member for West York (Mr. Campbell) during his election. The people of the country are getting a little sceptical of the promises made by the government and its supporters and they are anxious to see the goods delivered.

Mr. COWAN. You did not stay very long in West York.

Mr. SPROULE. I did not notice my hon. friend (Mr. Cowan) there at all. I was told that if he ventured to come there it might be too hot for him. I was in hopes of meeting my genial friend there, but I have no doubt he found it more convenient to stay outside the limits of the county. I repeat, Mr. Chairman, that I am still in favour of letting contracts by public tender. I believe it to be the best system if it is properly carried out. The hon. member for East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) has referred to a matter which is of considerable importance. In looking over the various portfolios held by the ministers, coming as I do from the province of Ontario, it is deplorable to find what little say the ministers from that province have in the management of the country, and in the expenditure of public money.

Look at the different departments. The fisheries were declared by the Privy Council to belong to the provinces; therefore the Department of Marine and Fisheries is comparatively speaking only an artificial department to-day with very little money to spend and very little patronage; and the hon. member for North Oxford (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) has that department. Then, the Department of Trade and Commerce is held by the hon, member for South Oxford (Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright). That also is one of the artificial departments, which the hon. minister himself a few years ago declared to be practically worthless, and to be retained only in order to provide a place for a friend of the government, though he manages to occupy the place very nicely and to draw the salary attached thereto; but there is no money spent and no patronage in that department. Then, there is the Department of Customs. It is true, the Minister of Customs has some patronage, but he spends very little money. The Postmaster General has a very valuable department, but he spends very little money, except in the way of giving contracts for carrying the mails. The Department of the Secretary of State is another artificial department. On the other hand, look at the great wealth of the province of Ontario, which is very properly called the first province in the confederation.

Mr. JOHNSTON (Cape Breton). Next to Prince Edward Island.

Mr. SPROULE. Well, out of deference to my hon. friend, we will except Prince Edward Island. But the people of the province of Ontario furnish a great portion of the money that is spent by the government—that great province which is numerically so strong, and also so strong in its enterprise and ambition; and yet Ontario is not represented in this cabinet by a single minister who has control of the spending of any considerable amount of money. Where has it gone ? To the other provinces. Let the people of Ontario consider this. Why, the ministers from the great province of Ontario are relegated to about the lowest positions in the cabinet, where they have no money to spend, while the spending is left to the ministers from the other provinces, principally to my genial friend the Minister of Public Works, from the province of Quebec—and he loves to spend money. If there is one thing more than another that seems to be prominent in his nature, it is his disposition to spend.

An hon. MEMBER. Except electioneering.

Mr. SPROULE. That is the next best thing he likes. I will, by way of parenthesis, say one thing in his favour, that I believe he makes a great deal of his expenditure where money ought to be spent—I give him credit for that.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. SPROULE. Hon. gentlemen opposite, travelling over the great desert of their political lives, are ready to jump at the slightest scintilla of anything that is redeemable in his character; for they cheer before a sentence is half out. I was about to say that he has made a great deal of expenditure in the province of Ontario that meets with the approval of many people, because it has done a great deal of good there, and we do not object to his doing that, and we desire to give him credit for it; but we object to the way he spends the money, for we think the same amount of money could be made to go a great deal further. He sometimes maps out schemes which we think a little wild; but he has his strong convictions and he imagines he is correct; but the great difficulty is that the bulk of the people do not agree with him. But I want to draw the attention of the people of Ontario to the humiliating position their province occupies in this cabinet to-day, in the fact that there is not a minister of the Crown from the province of Ontario who is at the head of a department where there is much patronage or the power to spend much money. The Minister of Railways is from one of the smaller provinces down by the sea—a very important one in its way, and I am saying nothing against it. Look at the Minister of Public Works from the province of Quebec; look at the Minister of Agriculture, also from the province of Quebec; while the ministers from the great province of Ontario are relegated to the meanest positions in the cabinet. I want the people of Ontario to take note of this, and at the proper time to send in their remonstrance against a state of things which I believe they will agree with me is unsound and unjust to that great province.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER. I would ask the hon. members to confine themselves as nearly as possible to the resolution before the committee.

Mr. PUTTEE. For my part, I entirely dissent from the oft-repeated statement made this afternoon that the day labour principle is a wrong one or a bad one. It is easily conceivable that the administration of a principle may be wrong, and if the gentlemen wish to put it in that way, that would be a fair question for discussion; but to say that the principle is bad is not borne out by the facts. Evidence has been fast accumulating in the last few years endorsing the position that has been taken by the hon. Minister of Public Works when he stated that he believes he could do work better and cheaper by the system of day labour, or the direct employment of labour, than he could by the contract system. Since the city of London about twelve years ago went wholly into this method of doing its work, most municipalities in the old country and the progressive municipalities in this country have taken hold of it, and it has been successful almost without any exception. Hon. gentlemen speak as if there were no drawbacks to the contract system—as if it were all perfectly satisfactory. I will venture the opinion that at least half the contracts which have been carried on under this government, whichever party is in power, have been unsatisfactory, resulting in more trouble and expense than you could imagine under any other system. The Minister of Public Works this afternoon, in speaking of the additions that have been made to this building, stated that they had been done by the day labour system, and that their cost had exceeded the estimates. He also said that circumstances had arisen which they could not see beforehand. If that work had been done by contract, what would have become of those matters which were unforeseen ? Would the contractor have attended to them for nothing ? He would either have been paid extra for them or the work would have been slighted. In the doing of work by contract, the contractor has to make money, and he has either to make it out of the labour, or out of the material, or out of the government. I do not by any means believe the statement that the people of this country are opposed to the direct employment system. Every trades council of this country—and there is one in nearly every city—is on record many times in favour of this system; the Dominion Trades Congress, which represents them all, is also on record in favour of it ; and these are the men who do the work —not the men who farm it out, but the men who actually do it, and these are the men who feel the pinch when the contractor has to make his profit. I want to tell the Minister of Public Works that if he puts this system into more active operation throughout this country, he will have the support of the people. The question of the direct employment of labour is very closely allied to that of public ownership, and I believe the public ownership idea is taking a strong hold of the minds of the people of this country. When some of these remarks were made this afternoon, I took from the mail an official communication from the city of Winnipeg, in which it is proved by figures that in the last few years that city has been performing one large public service which it took over, at 60 per cent less than it cost before, and another important service at 45 per cent less than it cost before; and all who have been in the city of Winnipeg know that these services are better carried out and the public are better served than ever was the case under the contract system. I firmly believe the people of the country are willing, even if the members of this House are not, to support the Minister of Public Works or any other minister who puts this prinicple into more general use.

Mr. SMITH (Vancouver). I listened last session with a great deal of interest to what certain hon. gentlemen opposite had to say on the system of doing government works by day labour, and have followed their remarks this session with no less interest. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) gave two reasons why he objects to the principle of day labour. The first was that the men employed by the government got bigger wages and had a better time, and the second was that that method was cheaper and brought greater political benefit to the minister in charge. Well, I believe in the principle of day labour, and I desire to say that the Minister of Public Works, in carrying out this principle to the extent he does, is doing what the trade unions and labour organizations all over the country have been asking him to do for many years. What hon. members opposite have to prove, it seems to me, is not whether the government are deriving political benefit from the system, but whether or not the country is being deprived of any benefit and is suffering any injury by it. What does it matter to me if the government gain votes by conducting public works on the day labour principle ?

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. SMITH (Vancouver). Hon gentlemen are laughing rather to early in the day. What does it matter to the country if the government does gain votes, provided the work is well done and economically done. The Minister of Public Works has repeatedly told us that the work is better done, that it is in every way more satisfactory, and we must accept his statement until his critics prove the contrary. As a matter of principle, I believe that so far as practicable the day labour method ought to be adopted, and let me tell the hon. minister that in adopting this method he is carrying out the views of organized labour in this country. When he sees that the labouring men are paid good wages, under the supervision of competent men, who will see that they give value for the money, he is doing what the people will support him in doing. I quite understand that it is not possible to carry out all the operations on government works by the day labour system, but there is a large percentage of that work which can be done on that system with great advantage to the country, and the greatest possible advantage to the people. So far as the views of organized labour are concerned, I can assure the Minister of Public Works that in the methods he has adopted he has the support of the people of this country.

Mr. SCHELL. During the discussion this afternoon, it was frequently stated that no evidence has been brought by the Minister of Public Works or by any one supporting his policy to show that the day labour system is cheaper and better than the contract system. Let me cite to the House some facts which will show that the position taken by the minister is in the interests of the country. I take my particulars from Vol. 2nd of the Auditor General's report, page V—212. Up to the present, the question has been one of sentiment rather than of fact, and the opinion which has prevailed in the country has been that the day labour system was not as cheap or as satisfactory as the contract system. Well, every one judges by his own experience and personal knowledge, and I have some sympathy for hon. gentlemen opposite who speak from the knowledge they acquired when they were in office. It was they who built the Curran bridge, and they bulit it by day labour, and no wonder that system should appear to them very expensive when they look back to the history of that work. But I propose to cite two cases which will illustrate the difference between the cost of a public work done by day labour, when there was something to be made out of it for the boy, and one done by this government, when there was no question of anything of the kind. I refer to the building of two wharfs in the county of Glengarry—one at Summerstown by the late government and the other at Lancaster by the present government. The wharf at Summerstown was 85 feet long. The approach to the wharf was built of clay, shovelled up from either side, and simply dumping into the water 22 feet from the end of that dump, the cribwork was bridged over by timber on to the main pier, making actually not more than 63 feet and 22 feet of bridge work, or 85 feet altogether. The head of that pier was 22 feet wide and 120 feet long and the depth of water was 7 feet 6 inches.

At Lancaster, two years ago, there was another wharf built, 269 feet was the length. It was built entirely of stone. The stone was drawn from two to four miles, and there was not one load of earth in the entire approach. The depth of water was 8 feet 6 inches. The area of the landing head was about three times that of Summerstown wharf, the area of the approach was more than three times as long, and the cost of the wharf at Summerstown was $15,417, while that of the work at Lancaster was only $5,013. I submit to this House that here is a case that will stand comparison with any case which the opposition can bring forward. Here was the case of one wharf of less than one-third the size and built with a great deal cheaper material constructed by the old government, and it cost three times as much as this one constructed by day's labour under the direction of the present Minister of Public Works. There is no disputing these facts. It is not necessary that we should spend the whole afternoon talking about an abstract principle, when we have evidence to show what is being actually done. Because one administration did not, could not or would not, conduct public works cheaply that does not prove that this cannot be done by any administration. On the contrary, the fact is that these works are being done cheaply to-day, and the figures that I have given are proof of it. I venture to say that there is not a contractor who could see five cents of profit in that wharf at Lancaster, and the contractor wants to see a profit in every job he undertakes. If public works are conducted properly—and that is the kernel of the whole matter and I know that in my own county they are conducted properly—the principle at which we should aim is being carried out. If you have a foreman and an engineer to look after the work, this method of day's labour will give good results. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) complained that $125,000 was being spent for day's labour at Sorel. According to the figures I have given, the same work under the previous government would have cost $750,000.

Mr. BROCK. You had better make it more than that.

Mr. SCHELL. No, I will not go a cent more. The hon. member for East Grey assumes that this work is done improperly. I have as much right to assume that the figures I have given are a fair comparison of the two administrations.

Mr. BROCK. Will the hon. member (Mr. Schell) please explain how a work costing $125,000 under this government would have cost $750,000 under the old system ?

Mr. SCHELL. Because under the old system it would cost six times as much. I have given the figures——

Mr. BROCK. Give us the facts.

Mr. SCHELL. I have given the facts also, and I defy any hon. gentleman to controvert anything I have said. If the former government had done things at Sorel on the same basis as they did them in the county of Glengarry, this work which now costs us $125,000 would have cost us $750,000. Merely because this amount spent at Sorel $125,000 is a large sum, these hon. gentlemen hold up their hands in horror. But they have not shown that any of this expenditure was extravagant or wrong.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have listened to a very interesting discussion. The item under debate is $15,000 for the Montreal Examining Warehouse—addition to and alterations, including fitting, furniture, &c. The item seems very simple and clear, but the discussion has gone far beyond it. My hon. friend from East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) has gone all over creation. I do not intend to follow him. I hope the province of Ontario will not be alarmed by what he says. The poor, down trodden province of Ontario, represented by such feeble men as Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. Mulock, Mr. Paterson and others—men of such inferior calibre—and with only five representatives in the cabinet. Hon. gentlemen who have spoken have said that Ontario was ahead in everything. If they will look at the figures, they will see that Ontario is ahead in expenditure also. My hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) complained that last year I spent $125,000 for day's labour. The hon. gentleman has made a mistake. I spent about four times that amount. I would ask the attention of the House to what we have done at Sorel, and what we are doing there. I did not invent the shipyard at Sorel—it was there when we took office. The government is spending upon the channel between Quebec and Montreal, about $75,000 to $90,000 a year. When the ship channel was handed over to the government in 1888, there was handed over also an inferior fleet of dredges, stone lifters and other craft. With this outfit, the work on the channel was conducted at a great disadvantage. The trade of the country was expanding and the people insisted that we should develop the country's waterway. What was I to do? Was I to import dredges? Hon. gentlemen oposite are daily reproaching the Minister of Railways and Canals (Hon. Mr. Blair) because, having no equipment to build cars and locomotives, he has been obliged to import cars and locomotives from the United States. Was I to do the same? Not by any means. I did not take that course, nor do I intend to do so. Whether I am here for a long time or a short time, while I am here, every piece of work for my department that can be done in this country shall be done here. That is the policy I carried out in Sorel. We have built a magnificent fleet of dredges there. Ought I to have imported dredges as my predecessors did. There are three dredges in the maritime provinces, the 'St. Lawrence,' the 'Canada' and the 'George Mackenzie,' which were imported from England. These dredges cost in round numbers $120,000 each, and their capacity is not more than 1,000 yards a day. We have built at Sorel dredges with a capacity of 7,000 or 8,000 yards a day each and with less cost, built them by Canadian labour and of Canadian material as far as possible. If I am wrong, I am prepared to stand by the wrong I have done. The great work of deepening, widening and otherwise improving the channel between Montreal, Quebec and the gulf could not possibly be carried on without a shipyard. Anybody who has had experience in work of that kind knows that if you have dredges, stone lifters and tugs, accidents and breakages occur every day, and you must have a shipyard, just as every well equipped railway company must have a workshop for the repair of its locomotives and cars. I have done that, and my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) would have done the same thing. And where is the wrong of doing these works on Canadian soil, with Canadian hands? What wrong, I ask again, have I committed? I have done right, and my hon. friends opposite are mistaken in their criticism. We are carrying out a great public work. My hon. friend says we are employing in Sorel 600 hands. We are not employing quite as many; on an average we employ about 400 hands, sometimes less but never more, in building dredges, tugs, and in works of all kinds. Now these are Canadians, and as I say, the work is done on Canadian soil. Now if there is any other way in which that work could be done I would like to know it. I would like to know how the St. Lawrence can be deepened and widened except by having a shipyard in which to make the repairs that are necessary.

If my hon. friends will allow me to say so, they are altogether mistaken in saying that it is in the interest of a government to carry out works by contract. A minister who was not entirely honourable would make a lot of money out of contracts, and by giving extras. That could be done. He cannot make a dollar in giving out a work by day labour. He has no chance to do anything. The labour is paid every day, and the minister has nothing to do with it. Why, I ask again, should the labouring men of this country be deprived of their honest earnings in order that the contractor might earn millions? Politically there is nothing to be gained from day labour. But, on the other hand, the contract system gives a lot of trouble. When a contract is given a minister always has a great deal of trouble. I say again, backed up by an experience of five years and a half, that on many occasions public works are better carried out by day labour than by contract. I do not lay down the rule that the system of tenders must be put aside. I never said that, I do not say it now. But I say that if I were able to find everywhere competent foremen I would not hesitate to carry out the largest work by day labour.

My hon. friends have forgotten past history. Doubtless the new members of this House are surprised to hear this debate. But this is not the first time a similar debate has taken place, we hear it every year. My hon. friends opposite forget their own past when they scarify me because I am asking $15,000 for some repairs in Montreal. The ex-Minister of Finance in the Conservative government carried out, in the city of St. John, works of repair and rebuilding a custom-house to the tune of $200,000, by day labour, and he did not lose the confidence of my hon. friends opposite. I gave to the House a day or two ago a complete list of all the works that had been carried out by day labour. I do not mean by any means to shield myself behind the example of my predecessor. I say again that on many occasions a public work can be better done by day labour than by tender and contract. My hon. friend asked me why I did not change the system since I did not find it good. I am not strong enough to do so; and my hon. friends opposite would not sustain me if I attempted to make the change, and if I attempted to make the system of tender perfectly safe.

Mr. SPROULE. I will if the hon. gentleman will convince me.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There are days when my hon. friend is pretty hard to convince. Suppose I were to prepare a list of the contractors whom I would invite to tender for public works. What would be the result in this House? I never could get five cents of estimates through. I would be told that I had picked out a list of partisans. No, Sir, I am not strong enough to do that. In England, France and Germany the system has been established, and it works well. Now, Sir, compare the two systems of day labour and of contract. Where are the scandals in connection with day labour that we have seen in connection with contracts? There may be some mistakes, I do not say there are not. But if you look at what has been done in connection with large contracts you will find some pretty hard things.

I do not think that the time taken in this discussion has been wasted. My hon. friend said that I was extravagant in the expenditure of money. Permit me to say that he is wrong. I am not afraid of a wise expenditure of money. I am rather sanguine of the future of this country, and when I am convinced that an expenditure of money will promote the progress and prosperity of Canada, I do not hesitate a moment. One thing that this discussion will promote is progressive ideas. This century is a century of progress. When I happen to be Minister of Public Works, and have around me men of great ability, I do not like to be told that any contractor in Ottawa or Toronto is more able than I am to direct a great public undertaking. I do not like it. I do not like to be told that the Canadian artisan is not quite as able to do work by day labour under my direction as he would be under the direction of a foreign contractor. So I say time has not been wasted in this debate. The country will listen to this debate. That large and important class of workingmen will not lose sight of what has been said to-night on both sides of the House.

Mr. ROBINSON (Elgin). This question has been discussed nearly all the afternoon, and I do not think I can throw much light upon it. But I am certain of one thing, and that is that all the work this government requires to be done cannot possibly be let by contract. There must be some work done by days' work. The messengers in this House, the pages, and all classes of employees around this building, must be hired by the day. So it is with a great deal of work which the Minister of Public Works requires to be done. I think a similar discussion took place last year, and I said then that I believed that work could be done cheaper and better by day labour in many cases than by contract. There is one trouble in day labour, and I think that is what hon. gentlemen on this side of the House complain of most. I understand that when the present members of the government sat on this side of the House they complained bitterly against the very thing that they are doing now.

Now, if that be true, they are not consistent, but the question is: Are they right? I think under the circumstances they are right, and I think that it would have been better for this country to have work done by the day, but they must see that they have good foremen, not political hacks, not men that are working for themselves and their job, but men that would see that the country is well served and when a man does not discharge his duty, no matter how good a politician he may be, he should be discharged. One trouble arises as the result of the government doing all this work by day's labour because the government have a strong pull on every man that they hire by the day, just the same as the manufacturers control their workmen, as we all know. There is another point to be remembered. We all know that the contractors are the most liberal subscribers to party funds, and the government will be deprived of this assistance if the work is done by day's work. Now, I think this discussion has gone far enough.

Mr. SPROULE. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say a few words in reference to the illustration which was given us by the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. Schell) and referred to by the hon. Minister of Public Works as an example of what might be done by day's labour. That was the Curran bridge, which was cited as a justification for doing work by day's labour. Why, that whole job was done by day's labour and the contention of hon. gentlemen who sat on this side of the House at the time the inquiry took place was, that the cost of the work was three or four times as much as it would have been had it been let by contract. The whole argument against the government was that they did not let it by contract.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The labour was given out by contract.

Mr. SPROULE. On the Curran bridge ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Not at all.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, St. Louis had the contract for the whole of the labour.

Mr. SPROULE. He was given a schedule of prices that would be acceptable to hire men at, and he made as much out of it as he liked, but the whole contention in that case and the whole force of the argument against the government was based on the fact that they had not done the work by public tender. Now, this is cited to-night as an example of what might be accomplished by day's labour. The hon. gentleman who just took his seat says that we cannot do all public work by contract. There is no person who ever contended that we could. The argument of hon. gentlemen now supporting the government, when on this side of the House was, that when the government departed from the principle of doing work by public contract they departed from a salutary and correct principle, and that just in so far as the government departed from that principle they did wrong. To-day, they are converts to another theory, the same as they are in many other lines, since they occupied the treasury benches. The hon. Minister of Public Works shakes his head. I never heard him advocating the adoption of the day-labour system before he became a minister of the Crown. But now, the hon. minister says that he has built dredges at Sorel and he asks if he had not a right to do it. So far as he could employ Canadian labour, put in Canadian materials and do the work at the proper price, I have no objection in the world, but I ask him, if that be correct, why he gave a contract to Mr. Bertram, of Toronto, for the building of a dredge, and will he tell us what that work cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The shipyard in Sorel was not well enough equipped then for the building of a big dredge like that, because our hands were full. We had too much work on hand.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the hon. gentleman tell us that he could have done that work cheaper than he had it done by tender ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I could not say that I could have done it cheaper, but certainly as cheap.

Mr. SPROULE. The other feature of the argument which he presented was that he was employing Canadian labour. What did Mr. Bertram employ—American labour ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, Canadian labour.

Mr. SPROULE. What material did he put in ? Did he not employ Canadian labour and put in Canadian material just the same as the hon. minister did at Sorel ? Therefore, that argument amounts to nothing, because, although the contract was let by tender to a man in Toronto, he employed Canadian labour and put in Canadian material. I think if we were to endeavour to convince the country that the contract cost more than it should have cost, the hon. Minister of Public Works would be the first to defend his action and to say that it was the cheapest contract ever carried out in Canada. I am quite sure it was. He says that he never brings in American dredges. I do not like to bring to his attention an instance of where he did, but I think he brought one into Collingwood.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I did not say that I never brought in American dredges at all.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood the hon. gentleman to say that he did so. However, I am not going to make an argument out of that, because I think he did right there. It was needed, he had none of his own, he got a dredge where he could and he employed it. If there ever was an attempt made to educate the people of this country up to the belief that the proper principle of doing work was by tender and contract, it was made by the hon. Minister of Public Works and his friends, who are going back on that principle to-day. I only want to draw attention to the inconsistency of these hon. gentlemen in this particular, as in many others. I have a few words to say to the hon. member for Nanaimo (Mr. Smith). He presented to us the most astounding principle. What does it matter, he says, if the electors are bought up when you employ them by day's labour. What does it matter if the members of this House are all elected by corruption ?

Mr. SMITH (Vancouver). I would like the hon. member (Mr. Sproule) to complete the sentence.

Mr. SPROULE. I took down the hon. gentleman's words. He said: What does it matter to the country if the government make votes by spending money in this way? What are they doing if they are making votes but corruptly buying them? What does it matter if this House is purchased and put here? What does it matter to the people of the country? We have too many evidences of corruption during the last few years. We are getting rapidly from bad to worse, and it is a question which may be very properly asked how much of the present system of spending public money is chargeable for the corruption we have in the country to-day? When the hon. member for Nanaimo advances that most astounding doctrine that it does not matter, I can tell him that the great moral sentiment of the country will not agree with him, that the great moral sentiment of the country is against that principle, because this country desires to be represented in an honest parliament, not a purchased one, not a venal one, not one bought with public money by day's labour. It does matter, it is a matter of very great importance not only to this House, but to the country, and we all hope the day is far distant when any other man will be found who will stand up in the House and defend a measure for buying up the electorate by spending public money in this way.

Mr. McCREARY. Before this discussion closes I would like to say a few words as I have had considerable to do in carrying out the principle of day labour. It was my experience in a western city, the city of Winnipeg, for five or six years, being in the city council, to know how this system has worked out. Most of our work during the years from 1880 to 1895 had been done by contract. It was found that most of the sewers were defective in construction and material; it was found that large sums were claimed for extras, and expensive law suits resulted from this contract system. The people asked themselves: Is there a better system to be adopted, and consequently the day's labour system was started at first on a small scale. It was found that it worked well. It was then inserted in all contracts given by the city that the minimum wage paid should be 17½ cents per hour. Some of the contractors tried to evade that clause, but finally they were compelled to carry it out, and so the work went on. Many of our wealthy merchants who at first objected to the day's labour system are now the strongest advocates of that system, and the consequence is that wherever work is done now in the city of Winnipeg it is done by day's labour. We were told that the asphalting of the streets could not be done by day's labour, but we said: Surely if the contractors can bring experts from St. Louis or Detroit, we can hire them just as well. To-day we have our own asphalt plant, we have our own experts, and all that work is done by our own men. We were told that we could not get the stone in proper shape, but we bought our own quarry, we built our own railway to the quarry, we got our own engines and cars, and at the present time we are laying streets in the city of Winnipeg as cheaply as anywhere in the United States or in England, (considering the cost of living), and in addition to that we are laying better streets. Then again, another good result followed. It was found that after the day's labour system was adopted we had no more defective sewers. There is no complaint to-day that sewers are caving in. I say, all honour to the Minister of Public Works if in this progressive age he is trying to carry out the principle adopted in the many progressive cities of the United States and of Great Britain—the principle of doing public works by day labour rather than by contract labour. There is another feature of this question that has not been alluded to. I refer to the charge made by the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule). I do not think he represents the Conservative party in that charge, because if he does it is one of the most disgraceful reflections on the workingmen of Canada that has ever been uttered in parliament. He said that the moment you employ a man and pay him $1.75 a day you buy him up politically body and soul for ever. Well, we have 1,500 men almost constantly on the pay roll of the city of Winnipeg, and we expend nearly $1,000,000 a year, and there is not a citizen of Winnipeg who will say that those men are bought in municipal or national politics, because they get a minimum wage of 17½ cents an hour. If you can corrupt workingmen by paying them $1.75 or $2 per day, how much more could you corrupt the contractor who would be at the head of these men if he got that contract. If it is buying up and corrupting men to pay them a fair living wage under the day labour system, then it would be buying them up and corrupting them wholesale under the contract system. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) cast a reflection on the workingmen of Canada that they will resent at the proper time, when he made the statement that workingmen employed by day's labour were bought up body and soul.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. member for East Grey did not make that statement. The member for East Grey did not say anything of the kind.

Mr. McCREARY. Here are your words. You said that when the opposition candidate goes to a riding where 600 men are employed on government works by day's labour he starts out with a majority of 600 votes against him.

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, and I repeat it.

Mr. MONK. The discussion arose this afternoon on an item of $15,000 for adding a new story to the examining warehouse in the city of Montreal. It is on behalf of the builders and contractors of that city and of the labourers themselves that I appealed to the Minister of Public Works to adopt what is the right course, and to let this work out by contract after calling for tenders in a proper manner. That would give to every man in the city of Montreal who is a builder, and to every workingman of the city of Montreal a chance of taking part in that work. I have heard nothing in the discussion to change my mind on this subject. Since this government has been in power—I do not know, nor am I responsible for what occurred before—it is a well known fact in the city of Montreal where there is such keen competition among the builders and where there are such able workmen; it is a well known fact that only a certain clique of builders can get any work from the government. That is what we object to. It is a well known fact that these contractors, or those who have charge of work for the government are often obliged to employ men who are not first-class workmen. That is the abuse I protest against. There is not a corporation, there is not a business man in Montreal, or in Toronto, or in any of the large centres, who, if he had a story to add to a large building, would not call for tenders publicly and give the work to a contractor. I venture to say that the large amount of money spent by this government for advertisements, when it chooses to advertise for public tenders, might very properly be kept for other purposes, because I believe that if government works were properly advertised in the 'Canadian Official Gazette' every necessary opportunity would be given to contractors to tender, and these works would be executed for half what they cost under the present system. That stands to reason. Who is best qualified to erect an additional story to the examining warehouse in Montreal? Is it not the man who is accustomed to that work, who under proper conditions would be obliged to put his prices as low as possible in competition with other builders, and who would be obliged to do work of the first quality; or, is it the official sent down by the government who will start out on this work employing men who are half the time political friends of the government and half the time unfit for the work which they are set to perform? It stands to reason that when the work is given by tender under proper conditions, it will be better done, more expeditiously done and more cheaply done. I have heard a great deal from the Minister of Public Works in reference to the works he has executed at Sorel. I do not know that any member on this side criticised the establishment of the works at Sorel. It is very proper for this government which has so culpably neglected the navigation of the St. Lawrence notwithstanding the continuous demands made by the shipping interests and underwriters of Montreal; it is very proper that one of the members of this government who has had some energy should claim some merit for having established the works at Sorel. Nobody objects to that. Nor does any one object to the payment of the employees there fair wages no more than we would object to the payment of fair wages to those who are employed in Ottawa. But the principle which we condemn is that principle which leads the Minister of Public Works to purchase all the wood required in this ship-building yard without calling for tenders, and by reason for which we have to pay exorbitant prices for the supplies. It is undeniable that the minister could get wood of better quality probably, and certainly at a lower price if he advertised for tenders for the supplies required at Sorel. What we find fault with, and what we condemn also is, the purchasing of the hardware supplies without public tender. We condemn the system of placing these orders at exorbitant prices with favourites of the government and with men who are not even hardware merchants but who purchase the hardware required on commission. That is what we object to. In England and the United States when such supplies are required a list is sent to all those engaged in the trade, and each article has a fixed price opposite which the government will pay. Is not that a progressive system? Is it not a better system than which the Minister of Public Works has adopted of giving orders to political friends, without giving others engaged in the trade a chance to tender. We have many excellent hardware establishments in Montreal and why is not the same favour extended to all? As to dishonesty, I believe there is no question but that every opportunity is given to a dishonest minister or to a dishonest government to derive indirect profit from the expenditure of public funds under this system. The workingmen of Montreal are interested in seeing that public money is expended wisely and economically because they are contributors to the public treasury just as much as we are. The workingmen have to protect them the clause which insures that they shall be paid a fair wages, and does the hon. member from Nanaimo (Mr. Smith) believe for a single instant, that when work is given out in the slovenly way in which it is given now, the workingmen will be surer to receive fair wages than if it was given out by contract to the lowest tenderer under a contract which includes the fair-wage clause. The hon. gentleman from Vancouver (Mr. Smith) and the hon. gentleman from Selkirk (Mr. McCreary) have stated that all these public works should be done by day's labour, but if they think that now, why did they not take the same position at the recent meeting of the Trades and Labour Congress. My hon. friend from Vancouver (Mr. Smith) made a report to that congress and among the many things which he considered necessary for the welfare of the workingmen he made no reference to the disappearance of the contract system. I find his name as president of that congress signed at the foot of a report, which purports to mention the grievances complained of by the workingmen of Canada. There is not one single word in that report in support of the theory which the hon. gentleman is contending for to-day, that public works should be done not by contract, but by day labour. On the contrary, if the members of this committee will take the trouble to read that report, they will find that in it my hon. friend practically approves of the contract system, provided the fair-wage clause is inserted in the contract and observed.

Mr. SMITH (Vancouver). Will the hon. member read the statement ?

Mr. MONK. There is at page 17, clause 8, a statement under the heading, 'current or fair wages on government contracts.' I will with pleasure read the whole clause, but I do not think I would be justified in taking up the time of the committee in doing so. The gist of the report upon that particular point is that the government system of giving out public works by contract has been satisfactory where the fair wage clause has been not only inserted but observed ; and the report goes on to say that in cases where that clause has not been observed, the matter has been brought to the attention of the government, and the claims of the labouring men have been recognized and paid by the government. The labourers under the day labour system will not be paid higher wages than the fair wage clause provides for, and if the work is done by contract and the fair wage clause is observed, the workmen lose nothing. But my hon. friend had other grievances against the government. He signed a report which stated that the alien labour law, which this side of the House strove last year to have amended, had not been properly observed. There is also a complaint against Chinese immigration in British Columbia. But there is not a single word on the question which my hon. friend this evening seemed to regard as essential. I believe, as the hon. Minister of Public Works says, that this discussion has not been useless ; and if it is a consecrated principle of this government that public works ought not to be done by public tender and contract——

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No one has said that.

Mr. MONK.

Mr. MONK. The Minister of Public Works stated this afternoon that he believed as a general rule that works were better executed by day work than by public contract. I believe there are some works which cannot be executed by contract ; but the item to which I called attention this afternoon is just one of those cases in which, if he has prepared his specifications and the officers of his department estimate it at $15,000, I will find in the city of Montreal contractors who will do the work for a much lower figure.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What is the use of making so much noise over such a little affair ? My hon. friend has tried to prove that I should do by contract certain works in Montreal. What is the size of these works ? Building alterations and additions costing $6,000. On hearing him, the House would have concluded that it would have been more like a work costing a quarter of a million.

Mr. MONK. It is the principle.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Now, the chief architect of the Department of Public Works is one of the most practical men that any minister could have at his disposal. Mr. Ewart started life as a mason; he has worked in the ordinary way that workingmen do ; he has learned his trade, and he has climbed the hill by his labour, his ability and his honesty. Now, he has prepared all the specifications of these works, and that small work cannot be carried out for less than $6,000. It is composed largely of alterations inside the building—taking down walls and improving the lighting of the examining warehouse which is now too dark. That work cannot be done by contract, because no man who has any knowledge of building and repairing work could say exactly what it should cost. Then, there is $4,000 for furniture and fittings. These cannot be bought by contract. Surely the Department of Public Works can buy furniture and fittings to that extent. My hon. friend says that he does not object to the Department of Public Works having workshops at Sorel ; but he insists that all purchases should be made in an honest way. I share his view ; but I say that there are a sufficient number of traders and merchants in any party to afford competition. But I would say more than that. On many occasions at Sorel we have bought goods from firms who are not friends of this government. Of course, when my officers are able, all things being equal, to buy from friends of the government, they do so. That is not only their right but their duty. But when we cannot buy all things with equal advantage from friends, we go elsewhere. For instance, Fotheringham & Workman are not the friends of the government, but they are a reliable firm, and we have purchased goods from them. But I say that where I am able to buy from political friends I do so, after having asked for tenders—not public tenders, but tenders such as all first-class firms ask for. Now, I am surprised that my hon friend, who lives in Montreal, does not remember what takes place there. I am not the only man who carries out large works by day's labour. The shipyards of Sorel are after all nothing compared with the large works which the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway have in Montreal, and which they are carrying on by day's labour.

Mr. MONK. Does the hon. minister think that they purchase wood or any other material without calling for tenders ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will come to that point. But my hon. friend cannot deny that the Grand Trunk Railway Company are building locomotives and cars in Montreal by day's labour. The Canadian Pacific Railway and Grand Trunk Railway do not advertise publicly for their goods. I challenge my hon. friend to produce one instance in which the Canadian Pacific Railway and Grand Trunk Railway advertise for their supplies. They have a purchasing agent just as I have, who goes from firm to firm and asks for prices. I am doing what all the large firms do and what any sound business man would do.

Mr. INGRAM. Judging by some of the speeches made on the opposite side, we are charged with being opposed to a system of day labour. I want to remind the Minister of Public Works that some years ago the very position he now takes was taken by the Conservative government, and on that occasion he opposed the policy which he now advocates. I remember distinctly then making the statement, which I repeat now as a member of this opposition, that I was not opposed to day labour on certain works, because, in my judgment, you cannot on such works call for tenders and let them by contract. But on all new works, I take the ground to-night as I did then, that it is in the interests of the people to call for tenders and give the work out by contract. And in that contract there should be a stipulation compelling the contractor to pay the rates of wages ruling in the districts where the work is done. That was the stand I took then and which I take now.

Some hon. gentlemen have argued that the contract system is a very bad one, and that the day labour system has everything in its favour. But the minister himself says that the contract system has some advantage to the ministers and that the day labour system has none. From that statement I presume there must be some profit derived from the contractor who gets the contract, and I have yet to meet the contractor in this country who is willing to put his hand into his pocket and pay out his money for nothing. Unless there should be a minister whom he can approach in that way, in order to secure a very profitable contract, there would be no profit to the minister in giving a contract to any contractor who did not pay something in order to secure it.

With regard to the day labour system, let me cite an instance to show how it sometimes worked. Some years ago a fire occurred in the western block and there was an election in Pontiac county. Well, on the building injured by the fire there were workingmen as thick as flies in summer on a sugar mound, and the main object in putting them on that work was to secure their votes at that election. And I remember making in this House the statement with respect to that very block, that a certain supporter of the government had been passing with me and observed the workmen lifting a stone and taking nearly an hour to lift it, and that he remarked that he did not at all approve of that style of doing work. The Minister of Public Works challenged my statement. I said if he wanted one of his followers behind him to be a witness against him I was quite willing to state who the gentleman was. But the Minister of Public Works did not insist. It was a very strong supporter of the government who had found fault on that occasion with the way the work was being done.

Let me give another instance. Every hon. gentleman in this House has seen that little summer house in the square outside. Well, no less than eight painters were employed on that little building, and no less than $600 spent repairing it, which practical men in the House said ought not to cost $100.

With respect to the platform of the Trade and Labour Council, I am one of those who are not particular about the good opinion of that council. Let me tell you why. There are men in that Trade and Labour Congress in whom I have not much confidence as there are others in whom I have considerable faith. I am somewhat of the opinion of a delegate, who was sent as a representative from Toronto last year, and who in Toronto declared on his election card as his chief plank that he was opposed to government ownership of that congress. The manner in which that congress is usually conducted is not unknown to the public. It is well known that the congress is manipulated by government employees, who are there to protect the interests of the government in order to get the support of the workingmen of Canada. And these gentlemen entertain so high a regard for me that when an election is on in my constituency, they take the stump against me. Yet notwithstanding their efforts I have managed to retain so far the confidence of those I represent.

I do not think that my hon. friend from Winnipeg (Mr. Puttee) and my hon. friend from Vancouver (Mr. Smith), who profess to be the leaders among the labouring men, entirely express the views of the workingmen when they say they are completely in favour of the day labour system on all public contracts. Notwithstanding the plank in the platform of the Trades and Labour Congress, I maintain that there is a large number of workingmen who contribute their share of the taxes, and in whose interest it is that the public expenditure of the country shall be as little as possible. They are men who never expect to get employment on public works, and it is as much in their interest that these contracts should be let to the lowest tenderer, subject to a fair provision regarding wages, as it is in the interests of any other class of the community.

But how does that day labour system work ? In my constituency there is a public work being erected, but on that work not one Conservative workingman can find employment. I refer to the work at Port Stanley. That is not what the workingmen of this country want to be done. They do not want any distinction drawn between men of different politics. They do not want to see the employment exclusively given to Liberals and refused to Conservatives. For that reason, if for no other, I would oppose the day labour system entirely. I am in favour of doing by day labour work which cannot be given out to contract, but in the case of all new work I believe in the contract system.

My hon. friend speaks of the public works at Sorel, but there is a great distinction between those works and a public building, say in the county of Bothwell. Suppose there was a post office being erected at Wallaceburg, will any man pretend that you can put that on the same basis as the works at Sorel ? In the one case I should approve of doing the work by contract, in the other case, I should approve of doing it by day's labour. That is my position.

Mr. SMITH (Vancouver). I do not want to take up the time of the House—I am not in the habit of doing so. But after what has been said, I think it is necessary for me to make some little explanation. This is not the first time that the hon. member for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram) has attempted to depreciate officials of the Trades and Labour Congress who are not in a position to reply to him.

Mr. INGRAM. I have made no attack on them.

Mr. SMITH (Vancouver). Last session, when similar matters to this were under discussion, the hon. member made special reference to men who were employed by this government as being representatives to that congress, and there is not an Ontario man in this House who did not know whom the hon. gentleman meant. Why should not an employee of this government be a representative to the Trades Congress ? Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Ingram) support the idea that, because a man labours for the government he ought not to belong to a labour association ?

Mr. INGRAM.

Mr. INGRAM. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Smith, Vancouver) wish me to answer ? I can tell him that if he would not support the government's interest he would not be the government's representative.

Mr. SMITH (Vancouver). I have said before, and I say again, that it is something to say for this government and for the independent men who work for it that those men are at perfect liberty to be members of that congress and to take part in the discussions which are intended to result in good to the workingmen of this country. Now, I desire to say a word, in explanation, to the hon. gentleman for East Grey (Mr. Sproule). That hon. gentleman preached me a little sermon about the moral standards of this government. I would support that hon. gentleman or any other man in keeping up those standards. But I confess that I do not think much of the moral standards of an hon. member who will criticise the statement of a fellow member and will give the House the impression that he sets forth that statement when, as a matter of fact, he reads only one-half the sentence in which it is set forth. When the hon. gentleman read half the sentence and passed judgment on the proposition, he did as unfair a thing as any hon. gentleman could do.

Mr. SPROULE. I took down the sentence at the time and read every word of it.

Mr. SMITH (Vancouver). I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon. I had to rise and request him to read the sentence, and it was not until I did so that he read it. I will read the sentence myself, as I want it to be put down. What I said was this : 'What does it matter if the government do get votes, if they get them as a consequence of money well spent and of good service to the country ?' Why, does not the hon. gentleman know that this is the principle that makes all votes ? The people of this country are voting all the time for a government that will give them good service and do good work. That was exactly what I meant. I repeat that the hon. Minister of Public Works has proven that the day's wages system renders to the people of this country good service, and, as a result, the people are sure to support the government. What objection would any one have to that ? I hope the hon. minister will maintain his principle, that he will take advantage of every opportunity to use it where it can be used with economy and with good service to the country. And I repeat again that the organized labourers of this country will support the government that supports that principle.

Public Works—chargeable to income—public buildings—Quebec—Montreal public buildings—improvements, alterations, repairs, &c., $8,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What repairs are these ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The general repairs to these other buildings, not the examining warehouse.

Mr. MONK. I desire to call the attention of the Minister of Public Works to the state of affairs in Montreal as regards public buildings. The hon. minister will remember that during the last parliament I showed the large amount that we spent every year for repairs to the public buildings in Montreal, and also the large amount in rentals for offices of Dominion government officials. This is not only expensive, but it means that the officials are separated, instead of all being in the same building. My hon. friend (Hon. Mr. Tarte) when he comes to Montreal, and the other members of the government when in Montreal, are obliged to use a room in the post office building. I believe that all this could be cured and money saved if the government would listen to the complaint that is made in Montreal as to the insufficient size of the post office. I really think that, as Montreal contributes such a large amount to public revenue, the government should seriously consider whether it would not be rendering justice to the people by listening to these complaints. If the government would build a new post office or enlarge the present one, I believe it could provide better accommodation for its officials, and at the same time save money and give satisfaction all round.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am obliged to confess that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) is about right. The Montreal post office is too small. My hon. friend and colleague the Postmaster General has under consideration a system of sub-post offices which he hopes to bring into effect in Toronto and Montreal. In Toronto, the post office is even worse than that of Montreal. That is not my fault—I have not been in office very long. One trouble about carrying out the project of the Postmaster General is that land in Montreal is so dear. I tried a few days ago to get an option on certain property. I acted with all the secrecy possible, and I find that the prices asked are very high. I think the system the hon. gentleman suggests would not be a success.

Quebec Immigrant building on Louise Embankment and Breakwater, and King's Wharf Building, $2,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The foundations of the building are giving away, and we have to renew them.

Quebec Military buildings—new iron foundry, inclusive of electric light plant and sundry machinery ordered, $7,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In this matter I suppose I am doing right, because we are asking for tenders for this work and the one last mentioned.

Mr. SPROULE. How do you need a foundry there ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is for the cartridge factory. In this case I am building on plans approved and prepared by the Department of Militia and Defence. Military matters are calling for a good deal of attention of late years, and the Department of Militia and Defence require these works to be done. The money was voted last year, but we did not spend any.

Mr. CLARKE. Is this the only establishment for the manufacture of military material in Canada ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I think so.

St. Hyacinthe drill hall $5,000.

Mr. MONK. Has a site been chosen for this drill hall ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, nothing has been done so far.

Mr. MONK. A part of this sum was voted last year, has nothing been spent ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, we expect to spend up to the 1st of July $5,000.

Mr. MONK. My hon. friend is aware that the question of this site is causing a good deal of discussion in St. Hyacinthe. I am not acquainted with the details, but my hon. friend probably is. Is the city going to contribute a site for the drill hall ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. MONK. Does my hon. friend know where it is proposed to build ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have not yet made up our minds.

Mr. MONK. I think before voting such a large amount—and we will probably have to vote considerably more before the drill hall is finished—we are entitled to know where it is going to be. My hon. friend must be aware that there is a considerable difference of opinion in St. Hyacinthe as to where the drill hall should be located. If he is not able to give us some information to-night, and as he expects to find out in a day or two, I would ask him to let the item stand.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would ask the hon. gentleman not to insist upon that, because such an objection is never taken. We will take the money, and parliament has enough confidence in us, generally speaking, to let us choose the site after getting the money. I cannot accept that principle at all, because sometimes it takes considerable time to make choice of a site. I will consult with the military authorities, and I may have to go there myself. On several occasions I have gone and examined sites before making a choice.

Mr. MONK. I am not prepared to accede to the principle that we should be asked to vote an amount for a drill hall in a case where the site is in dispute, without knowing where that drill hall is going to be placed.

Mr. CAMPBELL. How can you select a site without getting the money ?

Mr. MONK. That can be very easily done. My hon. friend says that the Minister of Inland Revenue knows something about it, as I know he does. Perhaps the Minister of Inland Revenue will explain to us the position of affairs as regards these two conflicting opinions in St. Hyacinthe.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend the Minister of Inland Revenue will certainly give me the benefit of his local knowledge of the facts, and it will be my duty and my pleasure to ask his advice. Before making up my mind, the matter will be thoroughly looked into. But my hon. friend must not forget that in questions of this kind I am not the master, I cannot buy a site without going before council, who will discuss the whole matter. I could not undertake to say that I will make choice of a certain site, that I would recommend this site or that site, because my colleagues might not agree with me. Master of the administration as I am, it may happen that my colleagues do not agree with me.

Mr. SPROULE. The usual course is to state what the building is going to cost. I think the minister is departing from a custom which prevailed during the time of his predecessors, of asking the town where an important building was to be put up, to furnish the site, or at least to pay a good share of the expense. That has been done in several towns in Ontario.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What towns ?

Mr. SPROULE. It seems to me it was done in London, I think it was done in Gananoque, and I think an offer was made by Brockville. But I know the previous Minister of Public Works made it a practice, when he intended to put up a public building in any city or town, to say to them : What are you going to do ? It will benefit your place, will you provide a site free, or pay a portion of the cost ? I think that might well be done. I think the minister is bound to give us the information in his estimates of what this building is going to cost, so that we may know to what we are committing ourselves.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As to the site, I cannot possibly say where it will be. I quite grant that I may be asked to say how much we will spend. I think that we will not spend more than $20,000 or $25,000 on that drill hall. We have not many drill halls. St. Hyacinthe is an important district. There is a good military spirit now and I think it is only fair to give them a chance in developing it. That is the reason why a drill hall will be very well located there. I intend having plans prepared for a building costing about $20,000 or $25,000, a good deal less than some of the Ontario armouries cost. Perhaps we are spending a good deal there, but I do not think we should be reproached for that expenditure at all.

Mr. SPROULE. Then, I understand the hon. minister has not obtained his information from his architect, but that this is the amount that is in his mind.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes, we will spend that much and no more than $25,000.

Mr. SPROULE. That is based on the hon. gentleman's own judgment ?

Mr. MONK. I think we are entitled to some information from the hon. Minister of Public Works, or the Minister of Inland Revenue (Hon. Mr. Bernier) on this question. Here is a question that has agitated the public mind in St. Hyacinthe for over two years. They are entitled to a drill hall and they know they would have had it some time ago had there not been a bitter discussion as to the site, and we are asked to-night to begin a work that will not cost less than $60,000 while leaving parliament and the people of St. Hyacinthe in the dark as to where that drill hall is to be located. If the hon. Minister of Public Works will allow me, I will read from the Liberal organ a short reference to that question, 'L'Union' of St. Hyacinthe of the 11th April, 1901. It says this :

(Translation.) The 'Courier de St. Hyacinthe' in its issue of the 8th instant published a short article which we reproduce here, for the information of our readers, who are anxious to be acquainted with all matters of interest to our city :

'From what has lately transpired, we have very good reason to believe that a sum of $60,000 is to be placed in the estimates for the erection of a drill hall on which work will be started this year in ward No. 5, and this with all due deference to Mr. Morison and other gentlemen who are opposed to it. It is further rumored that the sum of $20,000 will, within a few days, be voted, to begin the work. The Dominion military authorities understand better the pressing needs of this city than some self-seeking gentlemen do, who rather than seeing the only ward of the city that is likely to make any substantial progress benefited by this improvement, would wantonly deprive the city of this boon.

Mr. TALBOT—(Translation). Shame !

Mr. MONK. What is my hon. friend (Mr. Talbot) saying ?

Mr. TALBOT—I said shame.

Mr. MONK. The hon. gentleman does not know what he is talking about.

(Translation). We congratulate our contemporary upon this authentic piece of news which was, no doubt, drawn from the copious fountain of official news for the district of St. Hyacinthe ; and we, particularly congratulate him upon his promotion to the important position of official organ of the Dominion government. We have on former occasions pointed out the tendencies of this conservative organ.

With the 'Courrier' we rejoice in the fact that the government have at last made up their minds to spend public money in St. Hyacinthe.

As we could never bring ourselves to believe that there were to be found in this city self-seeking men who had an interest in seeing the city deprived of the important improvement which the 'Courrier' promises us on behalf of the Dominion government, we cannot endorse the following portion of the short paragraph published by our contemporary : 'We know that the only thing which did come under discussion was the purchase of a site by the city ; the intention being to give the municipal council the right of having their say in the choice of a site, the more so as the ratepayers of the city were being called upon to defray the cost of it. And to our mind, it was but fair and just that they should have done so.'

It seems to me that the subject of erecting a drill hall at St. Hyacinthe, which is entitled to that improvement, and there is no objection to it whatever, is one on which we should have clear and definite information. We are ready to vote the amount required and there will be no making mistakes. It is a large amount that will be required to complete the building. We are entitled to know on behalf of that important section of the population who require a drill hall where it is going to be built before we vote this amount.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman has just read an article from a Conservative paper. I do not intend to be guided by the advice it contains.

Mr. MONK. Which paper ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. 'Le Courrier'.

Mr. MONK. I have read from 'L'Union'.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. 'L'Union' has simply reproduced an article published in 'Le Courrier'.

Mr. MONK. And confirmed it.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Very well ; 'L'Union', which is not very well pleased with some of us now, has thought fit to reproduce an article from a Conservative paper. I do not intend to be guided by newspaper articles in the choice of a site for a military armoury. I intend to be guided by the ordinary rules of business. I hope my hon. friend does not object to whichever site it may be built on. Has he a choice to offer me ?

Mr. MONK. Are not the government brave enough to come and tell us in parliament where they are going to build it ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Bravery has not much to do with this case ; bravery is not in it at all. It is not a question of bravery ; it is a question of business. I will choose that site on the ordinary rules of business. I may have to go down there after the session is over. In the meantime I will ask parliament to have enough confidence in us to place this vote at our disposal. It is the first time since I have been in office that I remember of the opposition declining to vote money because a site was not chosen. The hon. member for Jacques Cartier belongs to the province of Quebec ; he should not ask us to deviate from the ordinary rules. The choice of a site is never made beforehand. I must get the money before choosing the site. I ask my hon. friend to think twice before placing any obstacle in the way of this vote. Suppose I were to go to council and to tell them that I had decided on a site. If council did not agree with me, I would be obliged to go elsewhere. Therefore, I am not in a position to state where the site will be.

Mr. MONK. I can understand the position of the hon. minister, but the government is not ruled altogether by the hon. Minister of Public Works, though I am prepared to admit that his views have very large importance. But, we have the hon. Minister of Inland Revenue who is from St. Hyacinthe, and who knows that this controversy has been going on for the past two or three years. I think we are entitled to know from him what his views are upon the site of the drill hall at St. Hyacinthe. It seems only fair. Why should he remain utterly silent ?

Mr. BROCK. May I ask the hon. Minister of Public Works why he treats this matter, which is a Quebec matter, differently from the way in which he treats a Toronto matter when it comes up. When a vote is asked for dredging in Toronto harbour, the Minister of Public Works, and I think very justly, wants to know what Toronto is going to do. Toronto must have its money to do its share before he will do anything. When a drill hall had to be built the people of Toronto were obliged to plank down $100,000, or, at all events, to provide a site, and this matter was arranged before the Minister of Public Works condescended to put in an appropriation for the building of that drill hall. I will ask him why he makes this difference between the two provinces ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am not making any difference. It is the hon. member for Jacques Cartier who is himself making that difference. If my hon. friend (Mr. Brock) will be good enough to refer to the next page he will find several items for public buildings in Ontario, Clinton, Cobourg, Deseronto, Fort William, London, Sault Ste. Marie, Sarnia and Toronto Junction. In all of these cases the money is voted before the site is chosen. It is just as in this case. It is always done as I am doing it now. If my hon. friend who is a sound business man will kindly remember what I am saying, my position is this. My recommendation does not always carry. Suppose I recommend one site in St. Hyacinthe and my colleagues say no, I would be obliged to go elsewhere. It is always done just as I am now doing it.

Mr. LANCASTER. While the hon. Minister of Public Works is speaking of proposed improvements in the province of Ontario perhaps he will not find fault with me if I mention the St. Catharines drill hall. In 1900 a contract was made and an amount placed in the estimates, which, however, was dropped on account of some such dispute as seemed to have occurred in St. Hyacinthe as to the location of the building. In that case St. Catharines bought the site and St. Catharines is paying for it. They are waiting for an appropriation in the estimates in order to take the deed. The city of St. Catharines is ready to hand over a cheque for $5,500 for the drill hall site, in order that the work may be carried out as contemplated by the item in the estimates for the year 1900. St. Catharines is in a border county, and is about the same size as St. Hyacinthe, and I am not unduly pressing the minister when I ask, why St. Catharines has not been treated as St. Hyacinthe has been. I think the drill hall site met with the approval of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Hon. Mr. Sutherland) when he visited St. Catharines this last fall. He came there I believe on behalf of the Minister of Militia and Defence to inspect the site. Can the Minister of Public Works tell me if there will be a vote for the St. Catharines drill hall in the supplementary estimates ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As to the supplementary estimates I am in the hands of my colleagues. It is a question of money and in questions of money the Minister of Public Works has a good deal of trouble at times. I cannot say anything as to the supplementary estimates. They have not been discussed with my colleagues, not one word.

Mr. SPROULE. What was pointed out to the Minister of Public Works was that St. Catharines, Toronto, and Gananoque, have provided the sites whereas St. Hyacinthe has not done so. Why is one place treated differently from the other ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the hon. gentleman will look at the list of public buildings in Ontario he will find that not one town of twenty furnished the site.

Mr. SPROULE. I have already cited three instances where towns supplied the site, and I am quite sure that I could find more if I went through the list. However, the principle is the same In one case the town is willing to provide the site and in the other case you do not even ask the town to do so.

Hon. Mr. TARTE.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It depends. Generally when the town gives the site the government is asked to give more money and it does not save us anything. I know all about it. When the town is very anxious to get a public building the people come and say : Now, Mr. Minister, if you are good enough, we will give you a chance to put up a fine public building and we will supply the site. You may rest assured that I am speaking gospel truth now. When they want an expensive building they make a pretense that they will give the site, and then it is not always the best site in the town. We save nothing by it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In reply to my hon. friend from Lincoln (Mr. Lancaster) I may say that I did not visit St. Catharines officially. I am one of the hon. gentleman's electors, and while in the city one day some members of the council asked me to look at the various sites. I quite agree with those who opposed the old site as chosen by the council and which was also declined by the minister. After looking at several sites which the council had in view, I certainly personally—if I can speak personally—approved very much of one or two of the sites shown me. I think they would make splendid sites for that building. I may say, as one of the hon. member's electors and knowing the importance of the city, that I would be very pleased indeed if the Minister of Public Works could see his way clear to give us a new drill hall. It is something that is needed in that city and district. I believe that the site which has been chosen by the council will be very suitable indeed, and that when a good building is placed upon it, it will be very creditable to the city.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth). An armoury was built at Dundas, and just before the last election we were led to believe that a drill hall would be erected. I believe a start was made then, but after the election the matter dropped and nothing has been heard since. I would like to know if there will be a vote for that in the supplementary estimates ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a general vote of $37,000 out of which the amount necessary to complete the Dundas armoury will be taken.

Thetford Mines—public building, $4,000.

Mr. MONK. Has the site been purchased?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Unfortunately I have been unable to secure a site. As in Marysville, the whole of the property is in the hands of the lumbermen and they have declined to sell me a site. They want me to take a lease for ninety years or something like that, but unless I can buy a site I shall not erect a building.

Mr. MORIN. Will that building be occupied only for a post office ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I intend there as elsewhere, to have a room set apart for an armoury. That is not a bad idea I think. There is a customs officer there and the building will be used by him.

Mr. MORIN. What will the building cost to complete ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I intend erecting a cheap building to cost not more than $5,000.

Mr. MORIN. What is the population of Thetford Mines ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Four thousand I think. I have the figures here.

Mr. MORIN. You may have the figures, but not the people on the place. The minister is a little extravagant in putting such a building in Thetford Mines.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The population is 5,000, if the census is not wrong.

Mr. MORIN. You may find them there ten years from now if the place keeps growing. At present you will find them scarce.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In 1891 the population was 3,314. Surely the French Canadian boys have progressed to 5,000 now.

Mr. MORIN. The population was more in 1891 than it was in 1892-3-4-5-6. The price of the mineral has been decreasing, and the people went away, but since 1898 they came back again.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is all right, then.

Mr. MORIN. It is all right, but they are not there.

Valleyfield public building, $10,000.

Mr. MONK. Has a site been chosen in this case ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, it has not.

Mr. MONK. Is it the intention of the government to purchase for this building a property belonging to Mr. Loy, the late member of this House ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Surely the hon. member will not ask me to choose the site to-night. I may once more have to go to Valleyfield in a few days. But, joking aside, no choice of a site has been made as yet. Valleyfield is a thriving town, having to-day a population of 12,000. It is one of the most progressive towns in the province of Quebec, owing to the large industry which is so successfully carried on there.

Mr. MONK. Has the government received any offers of sites ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I have not received any definite offer.

Mr. MONK. Any offer at all ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Several suggestions have been made to me.

Mr. MONK. Has the property I refer to been suggested to the minister ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know that Mr. Loy owns any property there. One site has been suggested across the river near the mills, and a couple of sites have been suggested to me on this side of the canal. I have not yet made any choice whatever. My mind is altogether free and unbiased.

Mr. MONK. Has the site I refer to been offered or suggested to the minister ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has not been offered to me.

Mr. MONK. Is the minister able to say whether it has been suggested to him ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will not swear.

Mr. SPROULE. How much will this building cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Between $20,000 and $25,000. Valleyfield in a short time will be a city, and we must give it a proper building—not large, but decent.

Mr. SPROULE. I would suggest to the minister that he follow the salutary custom of his predecessor, and induce some of these towns to contribute part of the cost or at least to furnish a site. I think a large town like Valleyfield should do so.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. My hon. friend should not say it has been the custom or the policy of my predecessor. It may have been done on some occasions, but that has been the exception.

Mr. SPROULE. I was not speaking of the present government ; but I do know that the hon. gentleman's predecessor, Sir Hector Langevin, as a rule—there may have been some exceptions—when an application was made from any town or village for a public building, almost invariably asked, 'what are you prepared to do ? furnish a site or contribute part of the cost,' and he generally got them to do something.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is a statement in the department showing the number of public buildings in the country, and I make bold to say that when my hon. friend looks over that statement he will find that in not more than one case out of twenty have the towns contributed a dollar towards the cost of public buildings.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the hon. gentleman bring down that information ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. With pleasure.

Mr. CLARKE. Is there no public building in Valleyfield, with a population of 10,000 or 12,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, not one.

Mr. CLARKE. There seems to be more necessity for a public building in Valleyfield than in some of the other places which we have been discussing.

Public buildings, Ontario—Clinton public building, $5,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What is this for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A post office and custom-house. The population is 3,000, and Clinton is a thriving town.

Mr. BENNETT. According to the census, the population is 2,547, against a population of 2,635 in 1891. It seems to be one of the Ontario towns that are going backward. What is the building going to cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We have bought the site there from a good opponent of ours, Mr. A. W. Wilkie. We will spend more than $8,000 on the building.

Mr. SPROULE. This vote is additional to what was voted last year ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think it will be in the recollection of the Minister of Public Works that he told the committee a year ago that this building was to be erected on a new plan. It was to be not only a post office, but a residence for the postmaster, and the plan of erecting cheap public buildings was to be started at Clinton. He certainly did not give the committee to understand that he was going to ask an additional $5,000 to what was voted last year, when it was believed that a site could be purchased for $1,000 and a building of sufficient importance, a substantial brick building, could be erected at a cost of about $5,000. I do not desire to quarrel with the minister about the style or cost of this particular building. But as the minister had decided that this building should be erected on a new plan, so as to be a model of what we could do in the way of cheap buildings, we certainly looked forward to seeing how this plan would work. We were all interested in the success of this experiment, as many counties in Ontario and the other provinces hoped to secure public buildings at the maximum cost of $5,000 or $6,000. But I am afraid the minister has forgotten his good intentions.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am obliged to my hon. friend for he has just reminded me of what I forgot to mention. In this, as in the case of all public buildings we are erecting now, we intend having the postmaster reside in the building, which will be a great saving indeed. As to the exact cost of the building, it is difficult to say in advance. Last year I said it would not cost more than $5,000 or $6,000, but it may cost a couple of thousand more. The site cost more than we contemplated.

Mr. SPROULE. Is the postmaster to take charge instead of having a caretaker ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the hon. gentleman make any saving in the salary of the postmaster by having him reside in the building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We make a great saving by not having a caretaker. A caretaker costs generally $300 or $400 a year. When the postmaster acts as caretaker, we generally give him a small remuneration.

Mr. SPROULE. Do you propose to make him allowances for wood and light ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth). What process has a town to go through in order to secure a post office ? I find that we have voted $8,000 for a post office at Marysville. Also large sums for other towns, many of which have small populations as compared to Dundas, which has never had a post office yet. The postal revenue of Dundas amounts to $4,345, while that of Marysville is only $1,398. At Dundas the money orders issued amount to $11,064 and at Marysville they are only $748. In Dundas the post office orders paid amount to $9,395 and in Marysville they are only $555. Yet Marysville is getting a post office and Dundas is not. It seems to me the objections urged from this side tonight are very pertinent. Something more ought to be required of a town to entitle it to a public building than that it should send a representative to support the government. There ought to be some policy, based on population or revenue, which should be followed out, and not compel a locality to send a representative down to support the government if it expects to be given a public building.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We are not so exacting as that. My hon. friend, who shows a good deal of ability in debate, will have to find stronger reasons to convince the House that it is necessary to have a public building in Dundas. But is there not a public building there already?

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth). Dundas has no post office.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It has an armoury, on which we have spent a good deal of public money in the past. There ought to be some fairness even in public life. My hon. friend has already a public building, which has cost the country a large amount of money, and he now wants another.

Mr. CLARKE. Why not erect a post office attached to the drill hall, and have the two in the one building ?

Mr. SMITH (Wentworth). The armoury was just started a few weeks before the election. A few bricks have been laid and nothing else done.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It will no doubt be completed yet.

Cobourg towards construction of armoury, $10,000.

Mr. SPROULE. What about that building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am trying to find a site, but so far have not been able. Not having the site, I have not spent any money, which must be pleasant to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. SPROULE. I think that the system of voting money every year without using it, is entirely wrong. Unless it is clearly shown to the minister that it is absolutely necessary a public building should be erected in the near future, the vote should not be taken. You keep that vote standing from year to year and do nothing with it. If by the accidents of life, that constituency should become vacant, you can use this vote to carry the elections and it thus has a corrupting influence.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is impossible for any minister to spend all the money in the estimates. To do so would require an immense staff to prepare plans and no minister would undertake the work. Moreover we must not forget that we are only in the month of March, and the money was only voted last year. I have not had time to spend all the money which was put at my disposal.

Mr. COCHRANE. Is this for the erection of a new building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not know. If I can get an old building which would suit our purpose, I would not build a new one.

Mr. COCHRANE. The minister ought to know whether he is going to put up a new building or purchase an old one. Has he entered into any negotiations with reference to the purchase of an old building in the town of Cobourg ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have not negotiated with anybody but suggestions have been made and an old building has been talked of. I have not negotiated either for the price or the purchase.

Mr. SPROULE. What was it offered for?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I could not say. I have not paid much attention to that work.

Mr. CLARKE. Then the site has not yet been selected ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Carried.

Mr. SPROULE. No, not yet. I want to say here that I think the Minister of Public Works ought to be prepared with more definite information before he asks us to vote money. He evidently has come to no conclusion beyond the fact that he wants a building. Whether he will purchase an old one or build a new one, and, if the latter, what the site is to be, he does not know. If the hon. gentleman were in opposition he would be loud in his demands for more specific information before the money was voted. It has been usual to give this information, and to fail to give it now is to depart from a very salutary principle.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think the hon. gentleman has put the case as fairly as he generally does. Suppose a gentleman living in Ottawa were to make up his mind to remove to Toronto. He might decide to own a house there, and, for that purpose, to spend, let us say, $15,000. If he could find a suitable house at a fair price, he would buy, but if not he would purchase a site and put up a building of his own. The Minister of Public Works is in the same position. An armoury is wanted by the military authorities. If I can buy a property already in existence, suitable and in good condition and the price fair, why should I not buy it ? If I cannot find a suitable building at a fair price, I will have to find a site and erect a building. It is not fair to ask a minister in advance what he will do in a case of this kind, because he does not know. I have not been there and do not know much about the matter. When there is any difficulty I generally go to the place, try to understand the case and settle it.

Mr. COCHRANE. I must confess that the minister is adopting a very strange course. I have been in this House a good many years, and have seen the Minister of Public Works in years gone by come here with plans and specifications and estimates, when he wished to get money for a new building. That system is being departed from and we are asked to vote large sums of money on the mere statement of the minister that he will decide afterwards what he will do with it. Why should not all these questions be settled before he asks us to vote these large sums of money ? It looks to me as if there was a job in connection with it. I think we could turn to the files of the newspapers and show that the fact that there is a contemplated job is recognized by the editors of the papers in Coburg.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why should the hon. gentleman say, 'No' so emphatically, when he tells us that he does not know what he is going to do? I am afraid that some building will be unloaded on the country by political friends of the hon. gentleman. Why should the volunteers be put off with an old building? It is impossible that an old building can be as suitable for the purpose as a new one. No matter what friends the hon. gentleman may have who happen to have an old building on their hands, that does not alter the fact that the volunteers there are entitled to a new building that will give them proper accommodation. I think the hon. minister should furnish us with more definite information before he asks us to vote $10,000, with the probability that he will go up there and have an old building pawned off on him in exchange for the country's money.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I venture to tell the hon. gentleman that it has never been the custom of the department to bring plans here when asking for votes of money. So, my hon. friend (Mr. Cochrane) is wrong in saying that this was the custom in the past. That point settled, let me say to the hon. gentleman also that I would not be a part to a job. I do not think the House can reproach me with knowingly having been a party to any dishonesty since I took office. I have tried to keep my hands clean, and I shall continue to do so in the future. I am sure that my hon. friend does not wish to import into the House party differences and difficulties and troubles? I have received clippings of newspapers warning me of a job in this matter. There will be no job. There may be an old building there that is thought too little for this purpose. I have not seen it. If it is no good I will not purchase it. There are two parties in this business, the Department of Militia and Defence—and I would not think of buying a building for their use without their consent—and my own department, each department with its own architect and its own minister. There is no fear that there will be a job.

Mr. WARD. Will the hon. minister say whether it is intended to provide an armoury alone or an armoury and drill hall combined?

Mr. COCHRANE (reading).

On Monday evening the estimates were brought down, and amongst the items we notice the sum of $10,000 for an armoury in Cobourg. This of course is a revote, as no expenditure has so far been made. This will of course bring up the question of a site, and also make the Tammany politicians more active in working off the old Sutherland building on the government at an exorbitant price. All sensible persons will agree that the south-east corner of the market property is the best place for the new building, which will require to be well equipped and up-to-date. This site—

Now, here is a very important point——

This site has we believe been offered by the town, is acceptable to the government, and will no doubt be the site, unless the speculating, grabbing politicians, who have been trying to work the Sutherland building deal, interfere, and fill their pockets with the public money, which was wisely intended for the benefit of the militia of this country in giving them a home and store-room for their arms.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that site offered by the town free?

Mr. COCHRANE. I understand so.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I read a day or two ago the extract the hon. gentleman has quoted. It was sent to me. I am very thankful to those who take so much interest in me. The extract is from a Conservative paper. I understand that there are people there who would like to see an expenditure of $30,000 or $40,000 for the armoury and drill hall combined. Before asking parliament for such a large amount of money I shall pause. I am asking for the modest sum of $10,000 for an armoury, which the military authorities here in Ottawa would have to approve.

Mr. COCHRANE. The people are not so much interested in the hon. Minister of Public Works, perhaps, as in the proper expenditure of the public money for the purpose for which it is voted. I fail to see that he must bring himself so prominently before the public on every occasion, and complain that we are critising him. He is a servant of the people, and is there to spend their money for the people's interest. As far as I am concerned, I care but little where the money is spent, whether in a town in Quebec or in any other portion of this Dominion, if it is properly spent. I object to the people's money being spent for an old building belonging to any political heeler of this or any other government.

Mr. SPROULE. The minister is asking for $10,000, but he does not tell us what this building is going to cost including the site.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I shall not spend more than $15,000 for an armoury in Cobourg.

Mr. SPROULE. Of course he has no knowledge yet whether that will be used to purchase an old building or to build a new one.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will decide the case on its merits after I have carefully investigated it.

Mr. SPROULE. Then I think before we vote this money the government should investigate the question on its merits, and give us the information, otherwise we are not justified in voting public money on his statement. I say again that no opposition is justified in allowing a vote of public money to pass unless we have some specific information of what the cost is going to be. Supposing we vote that money to-day, and the site should cost $10,000. The minister can give us no information now as to what it is going to cost. If my understanding is correct, the statement I saw in that paper was to the effect that the site is offered free, but he is not prepared to accept it. But he wants so much money put at his disposal, and then he will use his own judgment.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am asking the House to vote this money on the ordinary rule we have always followed. My hon. friends are trying to make political capital out of this, they are reading to the House articles from Conservative newspapers. It is their right, I do not complain. But it is our right and duty to stand by the ordinary rules of parliamentary procedure. The money has always been voted on the same principle to my predecessors in the Department of Public Works. I shall not tie my hands. Indeed my colleagues would not allow me to make any definite statement here, because it rests with them as much as with me. Before buying a site, before accepting even a tender, I have to report to my colleagues, and an Order in Council has to be passed. I am binding myself to a definite statement when I say that I shall not spend more than $15,000. I say again that I am asking parliament to vote this money on the ordinary principle of getting the money first and then deciding on the site, on my responsibility to the House.

Mr. SPROULE. The minister says some Conservative papers are complaining about it. Does he pretend to say that overtures were not made to him with regard to it? He admitted a few minutes ago that suggestions were made. If a site is offered free, will he not tell us whether he will or not accept it, provided it is a good site and suitable for the purpose?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. There is an old Latin axiom which says: Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes. I fear there is some foreign influence at work in this case. I am suspicious of presents offered to me from the other side of the House. I want to look at them carefully.

Mr. McCOLL. The government have at the present time in the town of Cobourg a site on which was erected a drill hall many years ago, and which was burnt down some twenty years ago or more. The militia authorities say that it is not a suitable site now upon which to erect a new armoury from the fact that the ground is low and cannot be drained, and that consequently the dampness would injure the arms that would be stored there. Two years ago when this question first came up some persons in the town assumed that the town would have to give a site. The town now owns a piece of property near the market square. They said if that were a suitable site they would be willing to give it. But it is open to the same objection as the site the government now owns, because the militia authorities say that the new guns they expect to get would be injured if stored on that site. The government will have this present site to sell for what it is worth, and can apply the money on the purchase of a new one. This site the government now owns was given to them by the town of Cobourg many years ago, and at the same time the town gave a grant of money to erect a drill hall, the one that was burnt down. But the government that had charge of it did not keep it insured, and when it burnt down it was a total loss. The town has lost the use of an armoury and drill shed during all these years, besides the money they contributed towards it twenty-five or thirty years ago. They have been agitating several years for this armoury, which is admitted on all hands to be an absolute necessity. I remember that during the session of 1896, before the Conservative government went out of power, a deputation from the town of Cobourg came down and interviewed the then Minister of Militia about this armoury. I think the hon. member for East Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) was present at the time; and I myself was a member of the deputation. We then received a promise form the Minister of Militia that an appropriation for an armoury would be given, and it was reported by my opponent in the election that in the supplementary estimates of that session an appropriation was made for the purchase of a site. Whether that was true or not, I am unable to say, because, as hon. gentlemen will remember, the supplementary estimates that were prepared by the government at that time were never presented to parliament, owing to the fact that the House dissolved before they had an opportunity of bringing them down. So I say that the preceding government was committed to the purchase of a site for this armoury and admitted that the old site was not a proper one. I may say that some of the arms that were stored in the old drill hall had to be moved before the place burned down because they were rusting on account of the dampness of the location. Now, with regard to these newspaper articles, I may tell the House what they mean. There is one local militia man who said to me: 'Don't have an old building under any circumstances, get a new one.' He said he had been told by officers of the department: 'You get the government started, and they will put you up a $30,000 building.' That is what they have in their mind, and if the old building that is now suggested were purchased, then the total cost including repairs and equipment would come within the estimate, $12,000 or $13,000 at the outside.

Now, as far as I am concerned, I want no $30,000 spent for an armoury in my riding. I would not ask for it because I know the sentiment of the people would be against such an expenditure. I would consider it unnecessary. Ten thousand dollars for a building is what I would ask for and that with $2,000 for a site would be considered fairly sufficient. I realize that under present conditions it costs more to build than it did a few years ago. The Militia Department prepared a rough sketch some two years ago. It was handed over to the Public Works Department and it showed the accommodation they required in this armoury. If that is all the accommodation required, this old building that is referred to would give much more accommodation than the accommodation which they have pretented they require and it would not cost more than $10,000 or $12,000. The idea is a $30,000 building, but I do not think it is necessary to have any such expenditure.

Mr. COCHRANE. What has the old building been used for ?

Mr. McCOLL. In the first place, before we had the post office at Cobourg, part of it was used for a custom-house. It has been used since that time as storehouse.

Mr. BENNETT. For ice ?

Mr. McCOLL. No, for grain. An American firm came over a few years ago and started growing what are known as fancy peas and it has been used as a storehouse for that purpose. At the present time people are living in it and one large portion is used as a ballroom. It has an excellent floor. In regard to the question of a site for a public building of that kind in our town the number of desirable sites is very limited. We can get plenty of sites which all the military men object to because they are too far out of town. I had a man in my office on Saturday who had heard of this proposal and who said that he had a site for the building. It is a good and desirable site if it suits the military men, but these sites are too far out for them. They want something on one of the principal streets near the centre of the town and in order to procure a site of that kind the department would be obliged to buy up a dwelling or a store or other business place which would make it very expensive. The Militia Department sent up two officers to look after the available sites but they have not yet reported. Col. Montizambert, the district officer commanding from Kingston, and Col. Greer, of the 40th Regiment were the officers.

Deseronto public building, $16,000.

Mr. WILSON. How much money has been spent on this building and how much will it cost to complete ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contract was awarded for $25,687. The probable cost of the building with the site, furniture, heating system, &c., will be $38,000.

Mr. WILSON. The whole building finished will cost $38,000 ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. WILSON. And it is all under contract ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The fittings are not under contract.

Mr. WILSON. Is the whole contract given to one contractor ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, I have just said that the contract for the erection of the building has been given for $25,687. There is nothing else given out by contract yet, because the building is not completed.

Mr. WILSON. Is the remainder of the work to be given out by contract, or will it be done by day's work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The heating will be given by contract.

Mr. WILSON. Who is the contractor for the building ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The contractor is Mr. Richard Sheehy, of Peterborough. The contract was given on the 25th June, 1901, to the lowest tenderer.

Dominion public buildings, renewals, improvements, repairs, etc., $10,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is the general vote for all public buildings in Ontario.

Mr. INGRAM. Does that include furniture and all that sort of thing ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Fort William public building, $5,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. A site has been given to us but we have not been able so far to go on with the work.

Mr. SPROULE. What is this for ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Post office, custom-house, &c.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the estimated cost ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I may say frankly that I have declined to go on with the work because the people of that town who are enterprising have asked me to put up a pretty expensive building. I have waited to see how the cat would jump. They are very aggressive.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Aggressive is a mild word. A site has been given. Every time that they approach me they say: We have given you a site; you must put up a large, fine building. I would rather not have a free site at times and have a little more freedom.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not think because a town gives a site that should trammel the minister. I think he should have perfect freedom to exercise his judgment as to the needs of the place and keep it within that no matter whether the site be given or not.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do. I had supposed that a building that would cost $15,000 would be sufficient for Fort William unless the country goes ahead very quickly. There are large works going on, I may say, at that point. At this very moment the two railway companies that are centering there are contemplating large additions to their elevating power which will necessarily bring in population. I supposed that a $15,000 building would suffice.

Kingston Royal Military College—additional buildings, namely: gymnasium and hospital $6,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is under contract and going on now.

Mr. SPROULE. I thought they had a gymnasium years ago.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. This is to complete the work.

London drill hall and armoury, $10,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What is the explanation of that?

Mr. INGRAM. I would like to draw the attention of the hon. Minister of Public Works to the question of the payment of architects fees. I notice the architect is paid 2½ per cent on the work. There is a difference all through in the amounts paid for architects and clerks of works.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. What place?

Mr. INGRAM. This is in the case of the London armoury. I was trying to get at the arrangements made for paying architects and clerks of works in different places. In London the architect is allowed 2½ per cent on the cost of the armoury. He receives much less perhaps for his work in that case than another architect would receive for a work that would not cost half the amount that this one will cost.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. In what other places?

Mr. INGRAM. The architect for the London drill hall receives 2½ per cent on the estimated cost of $60,000, while the man in Nelson is paid $7 per day. It would be to that man's advantage to have the contractor employ few men in order to stretch the time for construction, because he is receiving $7 a day.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry to say that in British Columbia, public works cost a fearful amount of money, nearly twice as much as in other provinces. It is the fact that the work in British Columbia is nearly 100 per cent dearer than in any other province, and it is not fair to make that comparison.

Mr. INGRAM. Well, take Vancouver, or Victoria, or Nelson, and in none of these places do you pay the same wages for the same services. In Kingston you pay a clerk of works $2.50 a day; in Sarnia $3 and in St. Thomas $3. On what principle do you make that distinction. The only proper way is to act on the percentage system, and pay a lump sum. In my own town the architect goes down in the morning and examines the building, and sees that the work is going on. He receives $3 a day and he does not complain that few men are employed because the longer the work is going on the more he will receive. He was also the architect of the city hall for which he got a percentage of the estimated cost, and he went to the contractors and said: You must put more men on the building, and he put them to the inconvenience of crowding the building with men in order that he might get his percentage quicker. The department is not taking the proper course here. They should first find out how long it should take to construct the building and give the contractors reasonable time.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. We do so.

Mr. INGRAM. No one will pretend that in the city of St. Thomas it takes a year to construct an armoury worth $29,000.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It takes a year to construct a building like that.

Mr. INGRAM. Why, we have buildings there that cost a great deal more and they did not take half the time to erect, but the architect got a percentage on the estimated cost. These items that I have mentioned will amount to a very large sum all over Canada but other incidental expenses are incurred through a building not being put up within a reasonable length of time.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I do not think that the hon. gentleman has convinced the House that when an architect is paid $3, he is paid too much.

Mr. INGRAM. What I am trying to impress on the minister is that the principle is wrong. I say that the architect should be paid a percentage on the estimated cost, and that you should not have one rule in one place and another rule in another.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I have had architects asking 4 and 5 per cent in some cases, and we are trying to make the best possible bargain we can in every case. The scale of wages prepared by the Department of Labour for the building at Nelson is $6 a day for foremen, and we are simply paying $1 more to the architect. It is not our fault that wages are high there.

Mr. INGRAM. You pay $7 to an architect in Nelson and $120 a month to an architect in Vancouver. I suppose the living expenses are about the same in both places.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman must not forget that Rossland and Nelson are in a new part of the country, whereas Vancouver is a large city, and the conditions are more settled there. The contractors are bound to complete the work within a specified time and the chief architect who knows his business will not grant them any more time than is necessary.

Mr. INGRAM. These architects who are paid $7 a day or $3 a day do not give their whole time to the work. The minister must not forget that. In my own city the architect goes to the building in the morning and he attends to his private business just the same as if he had not that work at all.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. The hon. gentleman is always finding fault with the way we do work in his city.

Mr. INGRAM. I am objecting to the principle the minister follows, and I do not care whether it is in my own city or in any other place if I believe the system is wrong. I am not accusing the minister of doing something that has not been done in the past. I believe the policy has been pursued by both parties, and I am objecting to it on principle. It is not a personal matter with me.

Sault Ste. Marie public building, $10,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. I observe the hon. member for Algoma (Mr. Dyment) is not in his place, and I regret it very much, when this vote is being considered. The minister must know the circumstances of this case very well, and I think he will admit that the town of Sault Ste. Marie has very great reason to complain that this public building has not been erected. I use language none too strong when I say, that the accommodation provided in Sault Ste. Marie for the post office is a disgrace to that enterprising town. I would not go so far as to say that it is a disgace to the government, but I do say that it reflects very much on the government of the day that they have not provided better accommodation there. I do not know what the reason can be. They have the money because it was voted last year, and why has it not been spent? Why has the money not been spent? Why has nothing been done? Why has a site not been secured? Surely there must be some reason, and the people of Sault Ste. Marie are wondering why they are neglected when other places are being accommodated with public buildings, especially as the parliament of Canada has voted money for the purpose.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I altogether share the view which has been stated to the House by my hon. friend, that Sault Ste. Marie has a right to a public building. To all the 'whys' which he has asked, my answer is that we have moved on. The site has been bought, plans are prepared, and tenders will be asked for within a month. I am glad on this occasion to be backed by my hon. friend, who has the same confidence that I have in that thriving town.

Mr. HENDERSON. I do not think that the citizens of Sault Ste. Marie are aware that a site has been purchased. It is not known by the public men there, and I confess it is a matter of surprise to me to hear it. May I ask what the cost of the site will be?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not will be, but has been. It has already been bought and paid for. The site has been bought by an order in council of the 10th of January, 1902, for the sum of $9,600, from Messrs. J. Dawson and W. H. Plummer. It is situated at the corner of Queen and East streets. Its selection has been approved by all the business men whom I met when I was in the town about two months ago to see it, and it certainly is the best that could be secured.

Mr. HENDERSON. I understand the present vote of $10,000 is practically a re-vote; and if the site is costing in that neighbourhood, where is the money to come from for erecting the superstructure. It seems to me that the minister is simply putting the matter off again, and that the people of Sault Ste. Marie will find themselves twelve months hence in just about the same position they are in at present. If I am wrong in that, I would be very glad if the minister would put me right.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. When these estimates were prepared, the site was not purchased, and that is the reason we have only a re-vote, but in the supplementary estimates we shall have to provide for an additional sum of money.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am sure that the people of Sault Ste. Marie will be sincerely thankful.

Toronto Dominion public buildings—improvements, renewals, repairs, &c., $7,500.

Mr. KEMP. I would like to inquire of the Minister of Public Works what the policy of the government is in regard to the Toronto post office. It is well known that the facilities are altogether inadequate for the business done. It is the largest post office in revenue in the Dominion, and the building is not a credit to the country or to the government.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I fully recognize that the post office of Toronto is not what it should be. I was there a short time ago, and was not pleased with the state of affairs. The building is in a bad condition and should have been changed long ago. The Postmaster General, who is my 'boss' in matters of this kind, has under consideration a plan for sub-stations. He has already one in King street, and he intends building another in the western part of the city. If his plans succeed, and I think they will, it may not be necessary to enlarge very much the main building. Of course, we shall have to put it in better shape, and I will certainly ask my colleagues to place a sum in the supplementary estimates for that purpose. The sub-stations will be main post offices to which mail matter will be directed, and from which it will be distributed. The same system, I suppose, will be adopted in Montreal. When the supplementary estimates come down, we shall be in a position to make a definite statement as to the policy of the government in this respect in Toronto and elsewhere.

Mr. KEMP. There will be an item then, in the supplementary estimates for the Toronto post office ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I suppose so, unless my colleagues turn me down.

Mr. KEMP. Then, we will be able to discuss this question again ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Will letters be addressed to these sub-stations ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I suppose each one will form a postal district; but on that point I shall have to ask the House to wait until the Postmaster General is in his place. I know that he wants to adopt the system of dividing the cities into districts.

Toronto Junction public building, $5,000.

Mr. HENDERSON. This, I understand, is also a revote ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Yes.

Mr. HENDERSON. Is it intended to expend that money ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Oh, yes.

Mr. HENDERSON. Is the work to be done by day's work ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. No, by contract, I think, although day's work would suit me.

Mr. HENDERSON. If the work is to be done by contract, how is the government going to implement the promise made in the West York election that certain men would have jobs on this building. If they are going to change their policy and go back to the contract system, how are they going to bind the contractor to employ certain men to do the brick work on this building, according to the terms set forth in the recent by-election ? I think the minister should allow a litttle more latitude, so as to enable the hon. gentleman to carry out his election promises. I believe that election promises should be carried out to the fullest extent, and if a man got a promise that he would have a certain job on a government building, I think the government should see that he gets that job. Why deprive him of the wage he earned by casting his vote in a certain way ? I think the minister should let the contract for this building in such a way that the man would get his job.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. If the hon. gentleman insists on the work being done by day labour, I will carry out his wishes.

Mr. SPROULE. Has the hon. gentleman selected the site yet ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Not yet. I am going to send one of my best officers in a day or two to look for a site, and after he is back I will make a definite statement on the supplementary estimates as to the cost of the building.

Mr. SPROULE. Is it intended to be a combined building or only a post office ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Post office and custom-house—an ordinary public building.

Some resolutions reported.

On motion of the Minister of Finance, House adjourned at 12.00 a.m., Wednesday

---

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, March 5, 1902.

The SPEAKER took the chair at Three o'clock.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 26) respecting the Quebec and Lake Huron Railway Company.—Mr. Malouin.

Bill (No. 27) to amend the Dominion Elections Act, 1900.—Mr. Clancy.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE COMPANIES.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE (Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 28) respecting Telegraph and Telephone Companies. He said: As appears by the title of this Bill, it is applicable to telegraph and telephone companies. So far as telegraph companies are concerned, it is a mere consolidation of the law now in force with reference to these companies; and the only change with respect to telegraph companies is a provision for the control of the rates of telegraph companies by the Privy Council. This is a new feature in this Bill. The Bill, I may say, was prepared several months ago by my predecessor, and the intention was to introduce it in the early days of this session, but because of changes that took place, it was necessary for me to have some consultation in order finally to fix the terms in which the Bill is now introduced. In a word, the Bill makes applicable several of the provisions of the Railway Act to telephone and telegraph companies, and it also makes applicable to telephone companies certain provisions of the existing Telegraph Bill. The new features of the Bill are controlled by the Railway Committee of the Privy Council, of the operations of the company and by the Governor General in Council, of the rates to be charged both by telegraph and telephone companies; and also, regulations for the exchange of business between the different companies. In order to make the Bill one of general application it was necessary to make special reference to existing telephone companies; that is to say, as the law now stands there is but one telephone company in Canada that is at the present time under the legislative jurisdiction of the Federal parliament, that is the Bell Telephone Company. My desire, as I said a moment ago, is to make this law one of general application, applicable as far as possible to all telephone companies in Canada, and provision has been made in the Bill for that purpose.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman stated that the Bell Telephone Company is the only one that is subject to the jurisdiction of this parliament. I desire to point out to him that the Nova Scotia Telephone Company is also subject to the jurisdiction of this parliament inasmuch as it has a charter, not only from the Nova Scotia legislature, but from the parliament of Canada.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I am obliged to my hon. friend for the correction. My information is gathered from the official in the department who was charged with the preparation of this Bill and who gave me the legislation in reference to it and the only company that we are aware the Dominion parliament has granted a charter to is the Bell Telephone Company.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am not quite sure. I may be altogether in error. It may be from the legislature of New Brunswick that this company also has a charter.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I speak subject to correction, but I think the hon. gentleman will find that I am fairly correct, because my information comes from a very reliable source. The attempt which I have made to have the provisions of this Bill applicable to all the telephone companies in this country, is one that will necessarily deserve very serious consideration on the part of the House. Therefore, it is my intention, when we reach the second reading of the Bill, to ask that the Bill be referred to the Railway Committee of the House, because it is apparent that there are interests involved which clearly ought to be heard and it will be desirable, so far as we are all concerned, to have all the information possible so as to be satisfied that we are legislating in the general interest without injuring any special interest.

Mr. CLARKE. Why not refer it to a special committee of the House?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. This is a matter for the consideration of the Railway Committee in view of the fact that we are adapting several provisions of the Railway Act to telephone companies. The Railway Committee therefore may be the best committee for this purpose.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the Bill be retroactive in its provisions as far as regards the regulation of rates?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. No; the Bill provides that a company shall, within a certain time, prepare a rate of tolls to be charged. Then, these tolls are to be submitted to the Railway Committee of the Privy Council and are to be determined within a certain other time. Then these rates are applicable throughout the whole Dominion.

Mr. SPROULE. Will the Bill apply to companies doing business now?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes.

Mr. MACLEAN. The public will be in a position at any time to bring the rates before the Railway Committee of the Privy Council. I would like to say, and I do not intend to take up any great length of time, that I must congratulate the government on bringing forward this Bill.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. I made a mistake in regard to the tolls. Of course, the tolls are not subject to the Railway Committee of the Privy Council but subject to the Governor General in Council.

Mr. MACLEAN. I must congratulate the government upon bringing forward this Bill and also upon the statement that they have had it under contemplation for quite a number of months, although there was no statement of it in the Speech from the Throne. The Bill is a good Bill. It is very much on the lines of one that I gave notice of and introduced myself. But, the government might have gone further. I think that when the government were taking up a measure of this kind they might have investigated the subject more fully, and had they investigated it more fully on the lines of legislation in England, they would have made themselves familiar with the state of affairs as it is in England in regard to telephones. In 1898 there was a special committee of the English House of Commons in regard to telephones and the question submitted to it was this :

The reference to your committee is as follows:

To inquire and report whether the telephone service is, or is calculated to become, of such general benefit as to justify its being undertaken by municipal and other local authorities, regard being had to local finance; and, if so, whether such local authorities should have power to undertake such service in the districts of other local authorities outside the area of their own jurisdiction, but comprised wholly or partially in the same telephone area, and what powers, duties, and obligations ought to be conferred or imposed upon such local authorities.

The finding of that committee was as follows. I shall read two or three of the clauses of the report :

From the point of view of local finance, your committee are of opinion that a telephone service would be as successful as has been the supply of gas, water, tramways, and electric light by local authorities. Much of course depends in this case as in those upon the cost of constructing the service, and in all cases the local authority is perhaps the best judge of what is likely to be successful or not. It seems clear to your committee that a local authority should be able to construct a system at a price below that which from various causes the company have spent upon theirs, and this opinion is confirmed by the fact that the probable cost of such a service in the hands of the Glasgow corporation is based not upon estimates alone but on tenders actually received.

* * * * * *

On reviewing the whole of the evidence, your committee is strongly of opinion that general, immediate, and effective competition by either the post office or the local authority is necessary, and consider that a really efficient post office service affords the best means for securing such competition. We further consider that when in an existing area in which there is an exchange, the local authority demands a competing service, the post office ought either to start an efficient telephone system itself, or grant a license to the local authority to do so.

* * * * * *

With regard to areas in which there is no exchange, and districts which are not areas, we think some provision should be made beyond what is now offered by the National Telephone Company for giving a service when there is a reasonable local demand. In such cases the post office should either start a service of its own, or should grant licenses to the local authorities to do so, subject to proper regulations.

* * * * * *

Your committee in thus recommending a post office service assume that it will constitute a real and active competition, and that concessions to the company not required by the agreement will cease. Such a competition should, in their opinion, be carried on by a distinct and separate branch of the department, and in future be conducted under strictly businesslike conditions, and by a staff specially qualified for such a duty.

That was the conclusion arrived at by the committee of the Imperial House of Commons appointed specially to deal with this question of telephones. They recommended legislation on the lines of a public owned system of telephones, either managed in connection with the post office, or owned by municipalities. That conclusion was arrived at in England some years ago and they are carrying it out now. The finest telephone service in the world to-day is the public owned one in the city of Glasgow which is operated, as far as the exchange service with outside places is concerned, in connection with the post office system of the United Kingdom. While the Minister of Justice (Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick) has brought forward his Bill proposing to place the jurisdiction over these telephone questions in the Railway Committee of the Privy Council, in England they have placed it in the Postmaster General. Because they have placed it there they have made it in a measure harmonize with the telegraph service which, like the telephone service ought to be owned and controlled by the state. I would like to see the telegraph system of Canada under the control of the post office and I would also propose that the jurisdiction in connection with the telephone service should be placed in the Postmaster General rather than in the hands of the Railway Committee of the Privy Council. I may say that within the past year there was a good deal of talk about taking over the telegraph lines owned by the government and placing them in the hands of the Postmaster General. I would like to see that carried out also and I throw out this suggestion now to the Minister of Justice that he should place the jurisdiction and control of the telephone companies under the Postmaster General rather than in the hands of the Railway Committee with the expectation that at an early date Canada intends to take over the telegraph lines and telephone systems of the country. The system adopted in England is this : When municipalities, or local companies, control local exchanges for the exchange of business with outlying places this exchange takes place over the trunk lines owned by the government and controlled by the post office. On the line of progressive reform and of public ownership I bring forward the suggestion to-day that this Bill ought to make provision, and that without delay, for the state taking over the telephone and telegraph lines and vesting the jurisdiction over them in the Post Office Department. If this is done in a short time we will have a system in this country on the same lines as that which they now have in England. Public ownership is in the air. More than that it is in practical effect in a great many places in the world to-day.

The public telephones in Norway and Sweden are the cheapest in the world and the service is the best. The best telephone system in Great Britain is the public owned system of the various cities in the United Kingdom. If ever we are to make a departure in this country in the direction of public ownership, here the opportunity presents itself. I would have thought that with the experience the government has had, and in view of the information they have collected during the last few years, they would have come forward with a proposal of public ownership of the telegraph and telephone systems of Canada. It will take very little money to do it; it will pay from the start and the public will get the best service. Public ownership is the best way whereby such public utilities as the telephone and telegraph can be distributed amongst the greatest number of people at the smallest possible cost. Another reason why I urge public ownership in connection with telephones and telegraphs is, that I want to see it come about in connection with the public ownership of the railways of this country. If there was nothing else to justify public ownership there would be sufficient justification in the fact that patriotism goes with public ownership.

Mr. CLARKE. Patronage you mean.

Mr. MACLEAN. Perhaps the hon. gentleman thinks that both go with public ownership, and may be they do, but public ownership tends to exalt patriotism as nothing else does, and railways, telegraphs, and telephones run by the state are run in the interest of the state, whereas under private ownership they are run in the interest of the corporations that own them.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I find I was right in the suggestion I made to the Minister of Justice. The Act to which I refer will be found in the Statutes for 1888, page 263. It is not granting to the company a charter, but confirming a provincial charter and granting to the company certain powers which could be exercised anywhere in the Dominion of Canada.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. They are not incorporated here.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Incorporated in Nova Scotia, and has its provincial charter confirmed by this legislature which granted to it certain powers by the Statute to which I refer.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. What chapter ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The chapter is not given in the index. The page is 263.

Mr. CLARKE. Would the Minister of Justice have an additional quantity of this Bill printed so that we may get some extra copies ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes.

Mr. MACLEAN. Do I understand the minister to say that the Bill will be referred to the Committee on Railways, Canals and Telegraphs ?

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Yes, so that the parties interested can be heard.

Mr. MACLEAN. The municipalities all over the country are interested, and there is an issue as to where the telephone companies cross the jurisdiction of the local legislature and the municipalities. They wish to be heard on that very point.

The MINISTER OF JUSTICE. Certainly.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read a first time.

QUESTIONS.

CANADIAN MILITIA—COURTS MARTIAL,

Mr. HUGHES (Victoria) asked :

How many courts-martial have taken place in the Canadian militia since June 1st, 1901, up to January 1st, 1902 ?

What were the offences ?

What were the punishments ?

What is the total permanent force in Canada, classified by departments ?

What is the number of minor punishments recorded in the permanent corps for the period above named ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Hon. F. W. Borden) :

1. Eighty-five.

2 and 3. 1.—Drunkenness on duty, reduced to ranks. 2.—(1) breaking into barracks, (2) having in possession stolen goods, (3) conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, forty-two days imprisonment with hard labour. 3.—(1) breaking into barracks, (2) having in possession stolen goods, (3) conduct to the prejudice, &c., forty-two days imprisonment with hard labour. 4. Absent without leave, reduced to ranks. 5. Absent without leave, fourteen days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages, $2.87. 6. Absent without leave, fourteen days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages, $2.88. 7. Attempting to desert, fourteen days imprisonment with hard labour. 8.—(1) absenting himself without leave, (2) disobeying a lawful command, (3) drunkenness on duty, (4) offering violence to superior officer, six months imprisonment with hard labour. 9.—(1) deserting His Majesty's service. (2) losing by neglect, &c., fifty-six days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages, $38.06. 10.—(1) deserting His Majesty's service, (2) losing by neglect, &c., fifty-six days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages, $2.75. 11.—(1) deserting His Majesty's service, (2) losing by neglect, fifty-six days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages, $1.20. 12.—(1) deserting His Majesty's service, (2) losing by neglect, &c., thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages, $3.15. 13.—Receiving stolen goods, forty-two days imprisonment with hard labour. 14.—Receiving stolen goods, forty-two days imprisonment with hard labour. 15.—Absent without leave, reduced to ranks. 16.—Desertion and loss of kit, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour. 17.—Desertion and loss of kit, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour. 18.—Desertion and loss of kit, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour. 19.—Desertion and loss of kit, ninety days imprisonment with hard labour. 20.—Drunkenness, reduced to ranks. 21.—Insubordination, forty-two days imprisonment (fourteen days remitted). 22.—Striking a soldier, reduced to ranks. 23.—Absent without leave, reduced to ranks. 24.—Drunkenness on duty, reduced to bombardier from corporal. 25.—(1) absence, (2) drunkenness, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour. 26.—Offering violence to superior officer, twenty-one days imprisonment with hard labour. 27.—Absent without leave, reduced to ranks. 28.—Drunkenness, acquitted. 29.—Drunkenness, thirty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour and fined, $4.86 (twenty-eight days and $2.43 remitted). 30.—Deserting His Majesty's service, twenty-one days imprisonment with hard labour and reduced to ranks. 31.—Deserting His Majesty's service, eighty-four days imprisonment with hard labour and discharged with ignominy from His Majesty's service. 32.—Wilfully allowing a prisoner committed to his charge to escape, fifty-six days imprisonment with hard labour. 33.—Deserting His Majesty's service, one hundred and thirteen days imprisonment with hard labour. 34.—Deserting His Majesty's service, fifty-six days imprisonment with hard labour. 35.—Theft, one hundred and twelve days imprisonment with hard labour. 36.—Deserting His Majesty's service and losing by neglect regimental clothing and necessaries, forty-two days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 37.—Deserting His Majesty's service and losing by neglect, &c., twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 38.—Deserting His Majesty's service and losing by neglect, &c., forty-two days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 39.—Deserting His Majesty's service and losing by neglect, &c., fifty-six days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 40.—(1) Wilfully allowing a prisoner committed to his charge to escape, (2) Conduct to the prejudice, &c., fourteen days imprisonment and hard labour. 41.—(1) Breaking out of barracks, (2) Drunkenness, sixty days imprisonment with hard labour and discharged with ignominy from His Majesty's service. 42.—(1) Striking superior officer. (2) Using threatening language, sixty days imprisonment with hard labour. 43.—Conduct to the prejudice of, &c., twenty-one days imprisonment with hard labour. 44.—(1) Deserting His Majesty's service, (2) Losing by neglect, &c., fourteen days imprisonment with hard labour. 45.—(1) Drunk on duty, (2) Sleeping on his post, twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour (seven days remitted). 46.—Theft, one hundred and twenty-six days imprisonment with hard labour. 47.—(1) Drunk in barracks, (2) Insolence to a non-commissioned officer, twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour. 48.—(1) Neglect to the prejudice, &c. (2) Allowing a prisoner to escape, acquitted. 49.—(1) Absent from tattoo roll call, (2) Breaking out of barracks, (3) Drunk, (4) Losing by neglect, equipment, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour, and fined $2.44 and stoppages, (seven days remitted). 50.—(1) Absent from parade, (2) Absent from defaulters' parade, (3) Striking a comrade, (4) Resisting the escort, twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour. 51.—(1) Attempting escape while a prisoner, twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour. 52.—(1) Drunk on fire engine party parade at tattoo, (2) Disobedience of orders, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour. 53.—(1) Theft, (2) Receiving stolen goods, acquitted. (54) Drunk on guard, twenty-one days imprisonment with hard labour. 55.—Refusing to obey order, (2) Losing by neglect, clothing, &c., thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 56.—(1) Deserting His Majesty's service, (2) Losing by neglect, equipment, &c., thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 57.—Absent from tattoo, twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour. 58.—Absent from tattoo, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour, (ten days remitted). 59.—(1) Feigning disease, (2) Disobedience of orders, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour. 60.—(1) Attempting to desert, (2) When a prisoner, attempting to escape, (3) Losing by neglect, clothing, &c., one hundred and twenty-six days imprisonment with hard labour. 61.—(1) Breaking out of barracks, (2) Absence, (3) Losing by neglect, arms, &c., forty-two days imprisonment with hard labour. 62.—(1) Deserting His Majesty's service, (2) Losing by neglect, clothing, &c., sixty-three days imprisonment with hard labour. 63.—Deserting His Majesty's service, twenty-one days imprisonment with hard labour. 64.—(1) Drunkenness, (2) Conduct to the prejudice, &c., fourteen days imprisonment with hard labour, and fined $4.87. 65.—Disobedience of orders, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour. 66.—Conduct to the prejudice, &c., fourteen days imprisonment with hard labour. 67.—(1) Drunkenness, (2) Conduct to the prejudice, &c., eighteen days imprisonment with hard labour and fined $1.83. 68.—Allowing a prisoner to escape, reduced to corporal from sergeant. 69.—(1) Deserting His Majesty's service, (2) Losing by neglect, equipment, &c., thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 70.—(1) Stealing the property of a comrade, (2) Having the property of a comrade in his possession, twenty-one days imprisonment with hard labour, (seven days remitted). 71.—(1) Deserting His Majesty's service, (2) Losing by neglect, equipment, &c., thirty days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 72.—(1) Deserting His Majesty's service, (2) Losing by neglect, equipment, &c., (3) While prisoner under escort, attempting to escape, fifty-six days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 73.—(1) Leaving post as sentry, (2) Drunkenness on duty, twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour. 74.—Direct disobedience of orders, twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour. 75.—(1) Drunkenness, (2) Conduct to the prejudice, &c., thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour. 76.—(1) Deserting His Majesty's service, (2) Losing by neglect, equipment, &c., thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 77.—(1) Drunkenness, (2) When prisoner under escort, attempting to escape, twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour and fined $2.44. 78.—(1) Absent without leave, (2) Losing by neglect, regimental necessaries, reverted to the rank of private, deprived of six days pay, fourteen days imprisonment with hard labour, and stoppages (seven days imprisonment remitted). 79.—(1) Absenting himself without leave, (2) Losing by neglect, regimental necessaries, deprived of six days pay, fourteen days imprisonment with hard labour. 80.—(1) Deserting His Majesty's service, (2) Losing by neglect, equipment, &c., twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour. 81.—Drunkenness on duty, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour and fined $4.87. 82.—(1) Theft, fifty-six days imprisonment with hard labour (seven days remitted). 83.—Drunkenness on duty, thirty-five days imprisonment with hard labour and fined $1.22, (seven days remitted). 84.—(1) Deserting His Majesty's service, (2) Losing by neglect, equipment, &c., twenty-eight days imprisonment with hard labour and stoppages. 85.—Drunkenness on duty, reverted to permanent grade, twenty-one days imprisonment with hard labour, (seven days remitted).

4. Total permanent force is as follows :

——	Officers.	Staff Sergts. and Sergts.	Rank and File.	Total.
Cavalry ..	10	19	80	109
C.M.R.....	6	12	42	60
R.C.F.A.....	12	33	201	246
R.C.G.A.....	11	25	173	209
Infantry..... ..	25	63	309	397
	64	152	805	1,021

5. 1,146.

Hon. Mr. BORDEN (King's).

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY—REPAIRS AT STE. MONIQUE STATION.

Mr. LEGRIS asked :

1. Is the government aware that the quite considerable repairs which the Department of Railways had caused to be done last summer at the Ste. Monique station, on the Intercolonial branch from St. Leonard to Nicolet, have not yet been paid for ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair) :

1. Considerable repairs were made to Ste. Monique Station, and they have not yet been paid for.

2. The accounts with accompanying receipts were sent in about June last, and the chief engineer of the Intercolonial Railway wrote Mr. Charles Milot that the charges appeared to be excessive.

3. The question of payment is in a state of adjustment between Mr. Milot and the chief engineer of the Intercolonial Railway. The chief engineer has not yet been able to determine whether the total of Mr. Milot's charges should be paid.

FRAUDULENT SALE ACT.

Mr. SCHELL asked :

1. Is there any inspection under the Act respecting the Fraudulent Sale or Marking of the commercial commodities, white lead, or white lead in oil, with the view to ascertain if these goods offered in public sale to the people of Canada are pure or adulterated ?

2. If so, by whom is the inspection made ?

3. What is the result of such inspection ?

4. In case of adulteration of such manufactures offered for sale to the public in contravention of said Act, what penalties are provided to meet such cases ?

5. Are such penalties enforced, and, if not, why not ?

6. What methods are employed to prevent white lead manufacturers placing upon the market adulterated goods to the detriment of the general public ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Hon. M. E. Bernier) :

1. Yes, samples were collected in February and March, 1901.

2. Samples are collected by food inspectors and analysis thereof made by district analysts and at the laboratory at Ottawa.

3. Out of ninety-nine samples collected and analysed, fifty-six were found genuine, nineteen adulterated and twenty-five sold as pure, but found to be adulterated.

4. The penalties provided by the Adulteration Act are the payment of the cost of procuring and analyzing the sample ($9) and if the vendor refuses to pay, proceedings are instituted through the Department of Justice for the collection of a penalty not exceeding $100.

5. Yes, penalties are enforced.

6. The collection and examination of samples as pointed out herein and the publication of a bulletin wherein the public is informed of the result of said examinations.

WELLAND CANAL WATER PRIVILEGES.

Mr. HOLMES asked :

1. What is the nature and extent of the water privileges on the Welland Canal enjoyed by the Riordon Paper Company ? What rental does it pay therefor ? Has it any privileges granted by a former government for which it is not paying the usual rate ? If so, how long has it had the same, and for what length of time is it yet to run ?

2. Has William Chaplin any water privileges on the Welland Canal for which he is not paying the customary fees ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair) :

1. The Riordon Paper Mills, Limited, has the use of water privileges and mill sites at locks 16, 17, 18, 19 and 21 on the old Welland canal at Merritton.

At lock No.17, in addition to certain lands the company has all the surplus water not required for navigation.

At locks 16, 18, 19 and 21 in addition to certain lands the company has water powers not exceeding 1,500 horse-power.

The rental at lock 17 for the lands and water-power is $200.

The rental at locks 16, 18, 19 and 21 for the lands and 700 horse-power is $240, with $2 per horse-power for balance of horse-powers used up to 1,500 horse-power.

Both of these privileges are held at the usual rates, which vary considerably on this canal.

At lock 17 the privilege has been held since the 21st February, 1870; at locks 16, 18, 19 and 21 the privileges have been held to a greater or less extent since October 1st, 1879; a lease granted on the latter date being superceded, on account of the indefiniteness of its term, by the lease of 28th May, 1896.

The privileges granted by the lease of 21st February, 1870, run in perpetuity without alteration of terms. The privileges granted by the lease of 28th May, 1896, run for four periods of twenty-one years from its date and thereafter, in perpetuity in periods of ten years, the rental being adjustable at the expiration of any period of renewal.

2. No, William Chaplin is paying $4 per horse-power.

THE YUKON—ABSENCE OF SHERIFF.

Mr. WARD asked :

1. From what date in 1901 was leave of absence granted to R. J. Eilbeck, Sheriff of the Yukon ?

2. For what purpose was such leave granted ?

3. When does such leave of absence expire ?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Hon. H. G. Carroll) :

1. From October 1, 1901.

2. Leave was granted upon his representations that after spending two winters in the Yukon, his health required the change, and that he wished to see his father, whose health was failing.

3. March 1, 1902.

OYSTER CULTURE.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax) asked :

1. What amount has been expended by the government up to the 1st July, 1900, in connection with the development of oyster culture in the harbour of Shediac ?

2. Were any oyster beds planted by the government in that harbour, and what amount was expended for the purpose, up to the date aforesaid ?

3. During the year 1900 who had charge of the oyster beds in the harbour of Shediac for the government ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Hon. James Sutherland) :

1. Six thousand nine hundred dollars and fifty-eight cents.

2. Yes. No division of expenditure is shown between actual planting and general development. I might possibly get this information from the local parties if the hon. gentleman is anxious for it, but we have nothing in the department to show it.

3. William Beal.

STEEL RAILS FOR GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS.

Mr. GANONG asked :

1. How many tons of steel rails have been delivered under the contract entered into with F. H. Clergue, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, and at what price or prices ?

2. Where were they delivered, on what dates, and in what quantities ?

3. Where were the rails, so delivered, manufactured ?

4. Has delivery been made of all rails contracted for ? If not, how many tons are still to be delivered, at what points are deliveries to be made, and at what price or prices ?

5. Are all future deliveries to be of Canadian manufacture ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Hon. A. G. Blair). No steel rails have been delivered by Mr. F. H. Clergue. No arrangements have been made beyond those announced last session.

CANNED BEEF FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

Mr. BOYD asked :

1. What quantity of canned beef was sent from Canada to South Africa for the Imperial Government during the past year ?

2. Was any quantity of the said material returned to Canada by order of the Canadian government, and why was such an order issued ?

3. Was said material inspected after being returned to Canada, and what was the report upon said inspection ?

4. What firm or firms of canners prepared and furnished said material so returned ? And which firm's goods was found to be good, and which bad, if any, of the said material inspected ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon. Sydney Fisher). This being a matter of business of the War Office, I do not feel at liberty to answer the hon. gentleman's question.

INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTS OF CANADA.

Mr. BELL—by Mr. Taylor—asked :

1. What was the aggregate amount of the manufactures of Canada during the year 1900 ?
2. What was the aggregate amount of the agricultural products of Canada, including animals and their products, during the same year ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Hon. Sydney Fisher.) The returns of the manufacturing schedules of the census have not yet been made out.

COLLINGWOOD, MEAFORD, OWEN SOUND AND WIARTON HARBOURS.

Mr. TOLTON asked :

1. How much money has been voted for improvements on Collingwood, Meaford, Owen Sound, and Wiarton harbours ?
2. How much of such several votes has been spent on each of said harbours ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Hon. J. Israel Tarte) :

1. For the year ending 30th June, 1902 :

	Voted.	Expended
Collingwood	$25,900 00	$25,161 39
Meaford	41,000 00	18,380 48
Owen Sound	28,500 00	28,456 28
Wiarton	14,500 00	13,516 20

2. Up to the 30th June, 1091, the amounts expended are :

	Harbour works.	Dredging.	Total.
Collingwood .	$280,203 61	$138,280 74	$418,484 45
Meaford	97,499 11	6,602 13	104,101 24
Owen Sound ..	262,693 00	39,104 35	301,797 35
Wiarton.	71,578 91	.....	71,578 91

PUBLIC HOLIDAY ON CORNATION DAY.

Mr. CLARKE asked :

Is it the intention of the government to provide that the day which has been fixed for the Coronation of His Most Gracious Majesty King Edward the Seventh, shall be proclaimed as a public holiday throughout the Dominion of Canada ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier). This is under consideration.

BULWER-CLAYTON TREATY AND ALASKAN BOUNDARY.

Mr. F. D. MONK (Jacques Cartier) moved for :

Copy of all correspondence, papers, documents, memoranda and despatches exchanged between the British government and the Canadian authorities in reference to the Bulwer-Clayton treaty and the abrogation thereof, as well as in reference to the Alaskan boundary since the last adjournment of the Joint High Commission, appointed in connection with said boundary.

He said : It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that this is a very opportune time for parliament to become possessed of all the correspondence between our government and the home authorities, which preceded the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and equally opportune for the production of the correspondence which may have passed between them concerning the Alaskan boundary since the international Joint High Commission has ceased to sit. It is, I believe, a principle of constitutional law that parliament should be fully informed of all correspondence on subjects such as those to which my motion relates. In that opinion I am fortified by the words which fell from my hon. friend from Labelle (Mr. Bourassa) at the time he saw fit to bring a similar motion to the notice of the House, but which motion he afterwards withdrew.

I shall be as brief as possible. In the first place, I would like to refer to the rule which prevails in England and that which holds here. On referring to the English rule practice, I find that unquestionably all correspondence of a diplomatic character must be produced in parliament, except in some very extraordinary cases, the principal one of which is when negotiations are still pending. This rule I find very well expressed in Todd's work on parliamentary government in England. At page 439 of that work, Mr. Todd says :

It is imperative that parliament shall be duly informed in every thing that may be necessary to explain the policy and proceedings of the government in any part of the empire ; and the fullest information is communicated by the government to both Houses, from time to time, upon all matters of public concern. For it is in parliament that authoritative statements are made, or information given by ministers, upon public questions ; and no action in parliament should be based upon declarations of policy made elsewhere.

Sometime a statement, by the minister who is specially responsible, is made in one House and not repeated in the other, the ordinary channels of information, i.e., the newspapers, being relied upon to give it general publicity. But such a course is inconvenient and objectionable. Much inconvenience having been occasioned by motions for papers having been agreed to in one House, and opposed by government in the other chamber, it is now understood that when papers are presented to one House they shall also be laid on the Table of the other.

Considerations of public policy, and a due regard to the interests of the state, occasionally demand, however, that information sought for by members of the legislature should be withheld, at the discretion and upon the general responsibility of ministers. This principle is systematically recognized in all parliamentary transactions : were it otherwise, it would be impossible to carry on the government with safety and honour. Whenever it is declared, by the responsible servants of the Crown, that any information sought for in parliament could not be supplied without inconvenience to the public service, or for other sufficient reasons, the House refrains from insisting upon its production.

And if the government object to produce any documents on the ground that they are of a private and confidential description, it is not usual to insist upon their being furnished, except under peculiar and imperative circumstances.

Referring to the case of negotiations pending, Mr. Todd thus lays down the rule at page 355 :

It is a necessary rule that the substance of all personal communications between the representatives of the British Crown and the ministers of any foreign country, upon matters of public concern, should be committed to writing, in order that a fair and complete record of the transaction between Great Britain and other states may be preserved in the foreign office, and, in due course, submitted to parliament. The English constitutional system requires that parliament should be informed, from time to time, of everything which is necessary to explain the conduct and policy of the government, whether at home or abroad, in order that it may interpose with advice, assistance, or remonstrance, as the interests of the nation may appear to demand.

In 1810 the House of Commons passed a resolution of censure upon the Earl of Chatham (the Master-General of the Ordinance and a cabinet minister), who had commanded a military expedition to the Scheldt, on account of his having presented to the King a secret report of the expedition, without communicating the same to his colleagues, or causing it to be considered a public document. It was justly contended, that if such a proceeding were permitted, it would strike at root of ministerial responsibility.

It is unquestionably of immense advantage to the country, that the diplomatic transactions and proceedings of government abroad should be freely communicated to parliament, for thereby the foreign policy of the Crown ordinarily receives the approbation of parliament, and is sustained by the strength of an enlightened public opinion. This in itself confers an additional weight to our policy and opinions abroad. On the other hand, it is notorious that the English system of giving publicity to information obtained by government, in regard to occurrences in foreign countries, is viewed with great disfavour on the continent. A knowledge of the fact that all information procured by our foreign agents is liable to make public militate somewhat against their usefulness, and tends to place them occasionally in an embarrassing position. It induces towards them, moreover, a feeling of reserve on the part of the representatives of other governments ; and necessitates that our ministers should resort, more than they would otherwise do, to the practice of private correspondence.

After giving several cases in which motions for the productions of papers were negatived, Mr. Todd goes on to state cases in which papers have been laid before parliament while negotiations were still pending :

Thus, it is generally inexpedient and highly impolitic to communicate to parliament, papers concerning diplomatic negotiations which are still pending ; and nothing is more prejudicial to the action and efficiency of the diplomatic service than the perpetual motions for the production of papers, which are made by a certain class of politicians, who insist upon the fullest information on questions of foreign policy at unreasonable times.

It would appear from this enunciation of the doctrine as it exists in England—which enunciation, I find, is confirmed by all the other authors I have had occasion to consult on this subject—that the doctrine is that all correspondence with foreign powers ought to be subject to parliament, that parliament is the legitimate critic of the conduct of the ministers in their foreign policies, and it is only by the means afforded to parliament of having correspondence of the government before it that that assembly is in a position to justly and fairly appreciate the action of the ministers abroad. There is, in the short passage I have just read to the House, an explanation of the methods which render impossible, under certain exceptional circumstances, the production before parliament of the correspondence of ministers in order that parliament should be able to form an opinion. That is the difficulty that exists in carrying on the negotiations with a foreign power, and not only the difficult position in which the executive finds itself under these circumstances, but the courtesy, the rules of honour, if I may use that expression, which the home government is obliged to observe with regard to that foreign power. The rules of confidence which exist between individuals and exist, I may say to even a stronger degreee between independent powers negotiating with one another. And there is also the motive given where the object in view has not been obtained. Where, in other words, negotiations are pending, where the correspondence is expected to lead up to some definite result, it would be impolitic—not to communicate to parliament, if we were ruled by the olden usages which made the deliberations of parliament secret and private—but to communicate to the public at large the pending negotiation, and, in that manner, interfere, perhaps, with the success, the favourable issue of those negotiations. That is the rule which prevails in England, and, if I emphasize it, it is because I believe that if, to any degree, that rule can obtain here in Canada, it must only be applied with very serious modifications and restrictions. Why ? Because the correspondence asked for here is not an interchange of diplomatic notes between two independent powers, it is not a case of negotiations which must be covered by the principles and rules of propriety which I enunciated a moment ago and as explained by the authority whom I quoted ; but the correspondence we want is a domestic matter. It is a correspondence between the home government, a branch, if I may use that expression of the government, of the empire, and one of the dependencies. That is, strictly speaking, a domestic affair. What we wish to have, and what we are entitled to have at this stage—at this late stage—is the correspondence between the Canadian government, which is a branch of the government of the empire, and the home government in regard to the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. What we want to know is what inquiries were made of our government at the time of the negotiations leading up to the abrogation of that treaty, and what answers were given by the executive of this country. This is not, as I repeat, a question where it is absolutely necessary, in order to protect the rights of one nation against the other, to observe strictly the proprieties as pointed out by the authority I quoted as governing the relations between two independent powers. But we want to know what representations were made from this part of the empire before the home government—before the two powers concerned—arrived at the conclusion that the abrogation of that treaty was in the interest of both the contracting parties. Let me, for a moment, take up the time of the House to show, what, to my mind, is the rule which obtains here as to the interchange of communications between the home government and our own government. I believe that it can be laid down as a governing principle, such as obtains in England, that all correspondence passing between the Imperial government and the government of Canada should be submitted to the parliament of this country, except such strictly secret or confidential letters as are required by the Secretary of State in the Imperial administration, to be kept absolutely from the public gaze. And, even in the case of communications considered absolutely private by the Imperial Secretary of State, the government of the day in this country, in refusing to produce that correspondence must take upon itself all responsibility. In other words, since we have here a ministry responsible for every act, of every nature whatsoever, of the head of the executive, if the head of the executive in this country, under the instructions he receives from the Imperial government, judges fit to withhold from this parliament any part of that correspondence, he can do so. But he does it through his responsible ministers, and they assume the responsibility of that refusal. I find, Sir, that, under instructions which are made to accompany the letters patent establishing the function of the Governor General—under the Royal instructions which always accompany the issue of such an important document—dating back thirty years, to the 6th July, 1871, this is what has been laid down :

> The communication of the despatches passing between the home government and the government of this country are divided into three classes : Numbered despatches, secret despatches and confidential despatches.

Mr. Todd says in his book on parliamentary government in the British colonies, at page 126 :

> By Royal instructions, governors are forbidden to give to any person copies of despatches they may receive from the Secretary of State—or to allow copies to be taken of them—unless under a general or special authority from that officer. But where responsible government is established, the governor is considered to be at liberty to communicate to his advisers all despatches not marked 'confidential.' And by a circular dated July 10th, 1871, despatches are reclassified as follows : (1) Numbered despatches, which a governor may publish, unless directed not to do so; (2) Secret, which he may, if he thinks fit, communicate, under the obligation of secrecy, to his ministers, and may even make public, if he thinks it necessary. (3) Confidential, which are addressed to a governor personally, and which he is forbidden to make known, without express authority from the Secretary of State.
>
> In laying despatches and other papers before the legislature, the governor of a colony is bound by constitutional practice. In general, the governor in colonies with responsible ministries, takes no personal action, in this matter, in the case of 'numbered' despatches and ordinary papers, and is rarely even consulted. The ministers lay before the legislature any such documents, on their own discretion and responsibility. But it is generally a reasonable rule of the public service that despatches and other documents forwarded to the Imperial government should not be published until they shall have been received and acknowledged by the Secretary of State ; and that no confidential memorandums passing between the ministers and the governor should be laid before the colonial parliament, except on the advice of the ministers concerned.
>
> When advised to do so by his ministers, the governor should lay any numbered and not confidential despatch addressed by him to or received by him from the Secretary of State before the local parliament, unless there be some strong reason to the contrary, such as a pending reference to the Secretary of State.
>
> But the governor must first be advised by his ministers before taking such a step, and they must be prepared to defend his action if it be impugned.
>
> Ministers cannot relieve themselves from the responsibility of advising as executive councillors: nor is a governor free to act without or against ministerial advice, in cases not involving the rights or prerogatives of the Crown or Imperial interests.

