VICTORY FOR RAILWAY WORKERS IS WON IN WASHINGTON HOUSE

Washington, Nov. 15-Railway workers scored a complete victory in the house yesterday through incorporation of their plan for voluntary conciliation of labor disputes in the Esch railroad bill. The house rejected a plan of compulsory arbitration, including an anti-strike provision, and also the plan written into the bill by the house interstate commerce committee, which was described as a "middle ground" between that adopted and compulsory arbitration.

PORK CHOPS AND SHOES
Considered in Their Price Relation to Hogs and Hides

"I see by the market page of this morning's paper that pork has dropped from $21 to $13.50," remarks Mr. Average Consumer, over his toast and coffee. "Why not let's have some pork chops tonight, dear? They ought to be with-in reach of our pocketbook by now."

"Fine!" agrees Mrs. Average Consumer. "I'll get a couple of pounds, and while we're on the subject, I think I'll invest in some shoes. I see that leather has dropped 20 per cent in price. That would make $10 shoes cost only $8."

This may not be a stenographic report of the conversation which took place in the last ten days, but it's a fairly close approximation of it. Newspapers throughout the country, having harped on every angle of the cost-of-living problem, did not fail to feature the reports from Chicago and St. Paul that the price of hogs had decreased from $21 to $13.50, and in some cases, even to $12.

But the publicity attained by this information was small compared to the report that J. F. McElwain, president of the Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association, had started at a dinner of the Middle States Shoe Wholesalers' Association that leather had dropped 20 per cent, and that a corresponding decrease in the price of shoes might be expected within a short time.

Unfortunately, Mr. McElwain's subsequent denial of this statement, coupled with the announcement that what he had said was that "hides had dropped 20 per cent" and that "there is no indication of a recession in the price of shoes in the near future," did not receive nearly as much publicity as the original despatch.

Therefore, when Mrs. A. Consumer sallied forth with the expectation of purchasing her pork chops at half price and her $10 shoes for $8, she returned with the firm impression that retailers in general, and butchers and shoe men in particular, are robbers, cheats, thieves and profiteers—not to mention being sharks, brigands, bandits, thugs, sand-baggers, burglars, swindlers and even stronger terms not ordinarily found in the vocabulary of the lady.

"Would you believe it?" she demanded that night. "Hides and shoes not only hadn't dropped their prices on shoes, but they'd raised them! And pork chops! They're too high even to talk about. The decrease in wholesale prices must be true—I saw it in the paper!"

"Hogs" vs. "Pork"
But, dear lady, did you see it in the paper? Before considering other, and more pertinent points, let's analyze what you read.

The meat report stated that "hogs" not "pork," had dropped in price. That means the hog "on the hoof"—the entire animal. The report didn't state anything about labor or transportation or overhead charges or handling costs or any of the other factors which play such important roles in delivering pork chops to the kitchen door. "Hogs are down," is understood by the layman—by the woman who does the buying—to mean that pork prices should instantly decrease, while in the same newspaper there is likely to appear an article stating that some labor organization has won in its strike for higher wages. The reader's reaction to both reports is the same: "Good! I'm glad to hear that!" Glad that food is going down and glad that wages are going up, entirely overlooking the fact that the latter more than offsets the former.

In the case of shoes, Mrs. Consumer read the first report of Mr. McElwain's statement and naturally took it for granted that he knew what he was talking about. Being "news" (which may be roughly denied as anything out of the ordinary), this statement was given a prominent position in the papers. The denial, which was not news, was printed at all.

What Mr. McElwain said was that hides had dropped, not leather, and certainly not shoes, as the uninformed reader might suppose. As a matter of fact, the recession in the price of hides could not logically be reflected in the retail shoe market for at least a year, even under normal conditions.

Where the Year Goes
"Hides" and "leather" are by no means synonymous. There is a little matter of from four to six months which separate them. Hides are the skins of animals, with the hair on. These skins must be so treated, chemically, that the hair is removed and the skin itself transformed to the tough pliable substance commercially known as leather. In the production of some grades of leather it is possible to complete these processes in four months, but the better grades of oak-tanned leather take at least six months before they are ready for use.

The leather is then sorted and put on the market through the tanner's sales-rooms. After reaching the shoe manufacturer it is again sorted and then shipped to the cutting room and thence to the fitting room. The fitted upper and the cut and fitted bottom stock go to what is known as the "assembly room," where both the upper and bottom materials wait for the convenience of the "last" department. Then come the various stages of lasting, heeling and finishing, followed by the cleaning, tracing, packing and shipping.

Right here enters the element of transportation, something over which neither the wholesaler, the jobber nor the retailer has the least control. Shipments to distant parts of the country are delayed. Consignments, even to comparatively nearby points, are held up—anywhere from two to eight weeks are added to the time which must elapse before the shoes reach the shelves of the retailer. Tabulated, therefore, the time consumed in the various processes may be divided in the following manner:

Tanning and treating 6 months
Manufacture 6 months
Transportation ????????

Time between "hides" and "shoes" at least one year.

Another point to be remembered in dealing with shoes is that "hides" means "leather" (eventually), not "kid," from which the majority of women's shoes are made. Kid leathers come virtually entirely from abroad—from South America, India and various sections of Europe. Russia supplies much of the coltskin, and the various other items which enter into the manufacture of shoes come from widely separated points—goatskin from China, gambler from Philadelphia, wood oil from Michigan, lamp black and turpentine from North Carolina, dammar from New Zealand, asphalt and couch-wood from South America, benzoin from Sumatra, benzine from Pennsylvania, mastic from Sicily and sandarac from Africa—to mention only a few of the necessary ingredients, all of which are headed upward in price, not down.

But the principal price-factor is labor. And it's hardly necessary to state what is happening there. It will therefore be seen that—in addition to allowing at least one year before the cheaper hides can reach the public, it will also be necessary to discount some of the 20 per cent saving to make up for the advance in other departments—points which the consumer almost invariably fails to take into consideration.

Demand Keeps Pork Up.
So much for shoes.

In the matter of pork chops, or fresh pork in general, there is not so great a difference in the time between the raw material and the finished product as between the hides and the shoes, but even here it is figured in weeks, rather than days.

After the hog is killed, the parts from which hams, bacon and shoulders are usually made are put into the pickling vat, where they remain from two to four months. Then follows the curing, smoking and dressing—a matter of approximately a week, after which they are delivered to the trade. One week must also be allowed for shipping from the western plant to the eastern market.

A decline in the wholesale price of hogs' cannot, therefore, be reflected in the retail stores for at least three months.

tween the purchase of the hog and the appearance of the chops upon the butcher's counter is hardly comparable to the time consumed in the preparation of cured meats, it takes fully ten days to make the trip, so that even here a drop in the wholesale market at the beginning of November could not be felt in the retail trade until the middle of the month, if the demand for the choice cuts did not operate to maintain the price.

The next time that Mr. and Mrs. Average Consumer states with an air of omniscience that the wholesale price of some product has slumped, and that therefore the finished article ought to be selling at a lower figure at 9 o'clock the following morning, make certain that they understand the facts in the case. It will make for good will and save a lot of unpleasantness.

He was looking for a good canine companion, and had answered an advertisement in the newspaper. The following conversation ensued:
"You advertise a sensible dog for sale?"
"Yep."
"What do you mean by a sensible dog?"
"This pup has never had a ribbon around his neck and has never ridden in a limousine since the day he was born. He's a happy-hearted, bone-burying, cat-chasing, 100 per cent dog."

HALIFAX MAN IS A
MAYOR IN ENGLAND

Dr. Lewis Hunt, Chief Magistrate of Richmond, Host at Interesting Luncheon

The Richmond, Eng., Herald, of Oct. 25th contains a three column report of a luncheon given by the Mayor of Richmond, Lewis Hunt, M. D., J. P., to the town councillors, board of guardians and other local bodies. There was a large attendance. Mayor Hunt is a brother of Judge J. J. Hunt, of the Juvenile Court, and has many friends in Halifax.

Rev. J. F. Kendall proposed Mayor Hunt's health and said his worship had not had an easy year but his conduct in the chair had been splendidly fair and he would go out of office with the good will, not only of his colleagues, but of the burghesses generally. In the course of his reply the mayor said that if he had been successful in office, it had to a large extent been due to the fine co-operation of the members of the council. There was in the country at present a considerable amount of social disturbance but he hoped the success won at war would be repeated at home.

Overland
The Road—As It Is and As It Seems
In Overland 4 on Three-Point Suspension Springs
UNTIL the advent of Overland 4 bad roads rode just as they looked. Until the introduction of the Overland 4 Spring-base, a road full of bumps meant jolts for the passengers and vibration that racked the car and reduced its life.
Overland 4 does not change the road, but it does change the manner in which you can ride on it. It gives you comfort instead of discomfort. It gives you a smooth, sailing sensation instead of bouncing and swaying.
This comfort achievement, the greatest since the introduction of pneumatic tires, is made possible by the wonderful cushioning ability of Three-Point Suspension Springs—exclusive with Overland.
The Diagonal attachment of the Three-Point Suspension Springs at the ends of a 130-inch frame gives the road steadiness achieved by a car of long wheelbase.
Yet Overland 4 retains all the advantages—lightness, economy, and ease of handling, of 100-inch wheelbase.
Rough roads present no difficulties for Overland 4. Cushioned by its new system of suspension, which has been tested over 250,000 miles, it swings with buoyancy over good roads and bad. Shock, sway and rebound are absorbed.
Besides an altogether new standard of riding comfort this means a noteworthy reduction in the wear and tear which lessen the efficiency of the car. It gives longer life to every part and thus minimizes upkeep and replacement costs.
Tires wear longer because cushioned against hammering blows. Light weight means marked economy in gas, oil and running expense.
Overland 4's equipment is no less admirable than its construction. The list is complete from Auto-Lite Starting and Lighting to Demountable Rims.

Too Much "Dignity" Hinders Bank's Growth.

The advertisements of a bank must sell the service which the bank has to offer, just as a progressive merchant must sell his goods through advertising. This was the distinctly radical statement recently made by W. A. Schulte, advertising manager of the Cleveland Trust Company, in discussing the success of the campaign which his institution has run for some time past. "I have no quarrel with the phrase 'dignity in advertising,'" declared Mr. Schulte. "Personally, I am in favor of a reasonable degree of dignity in any kind of advertising. My objection is to the statements referring to 'dignity in bank advertising.' I believe that the widespread acceptance of the terms 'bank advertising' and 'financial advertising' has been a retarding influence against the logical and consistent expansion of advertising as a power in the banking field. "These terms have set up various prohibitions of one sort or another—have implied the creation of something that isn't, or can ever be, a definitely specialized sort of advertising. You don't hear of 'show advertising' or 'food advertising' as specialized forms. All of these are just plain, every-day, honest-to-goodness advertising—with its common-sense application to any line of merchandising. "But there's the rub—merchandising. Until a bank realizes that it has a merchandising proposition on its hands, that it has commodities to sell—even though they consist of intangible services—until it realizes that it has to sell its goods to the public through advertising mediums of the same general character and with the same sort of live, human, interesting appeal to which the public has already been educated, until such a time will the advertising policies of that bank be afflicted with dry rot and its growth accordingly retarded. "A 'University' Department Store. The habits of the university student are not the habits of the average man or the average customer—facts which the Guilford stores in Philadelphia have taken into account in stocking their new 'university department store' across the street from the University of Pennsylvania. In their downtown stores, the Guilford organization confines itself to the sale of men's furnishings exclusively, but the university shop is a combination haberdashery, tailoring establishment, drug store, pool room, tobacconist's, confectioner and stationery shop, with a club room added for good measure. The "club," incidentally, is placed at the rear of the store, so that the student has to run the gauntlet of scores of tempting displays in order to reach the billiard tables, reading room and writing desks maintained for his use. When it is remembered that the University of Pennsylvania enrollment includes several thousand names and that most of the men have rather liberal allowances, it is not difficult to see how Guilford's will profit from this innovation in retailing. Grocery Store Now Rolls to Your Door. The woman who telephones for her groceries is not only extravagant—she is out of date. The housewife who is really modern has the store roll right up to her door, goes out to the curb, selects what she wants and has it brought in without a moment's delay. At least that's the way they are doing it in Canton, Ohio. The A. B. Flory Grocery and Baking Company started the idea, with a fleet of attractive, high-power trucks which are, in reality, nothing more than stores on wheels—stores that travel right up to your home and sell you anything from a cake of yeast to a side of beef. When you come right down to it, the Flory "auto groceries" are nothing more than glorified huckster's wagons—but they bear about the same relation to the itinerant driver with his carelessly selected stock as Wannamaker's does to the neighborhood store at the cross roads. The autos are specially constructed and so made that the customer can actually enter the "store" through the front door—located on the right side of the truck—make her purchases at the counter and go out without feeling the least cramped for space or selection. Of course, it is not possible to carry a complete stock of goods in so small a space, but the driver-clerks have instructions to take orders for anything which they do not happen to have on hand and these are delivered the next time that the "store" makes its rounds. Each store is sixteen feet long by six and one-half feet wide and is fully equipped with shelves, glass cases, bins, refrigerators, scales, cash register and counter. Windows and a skylight provide plenty of light, and the success of the venture is apparent from the fact that the number of trucks already in operation is to be tripled as soon as the manufacturers can make deliveries. "Women," says A. B. Flory, the proprietor of thirty "stationary stores," in addition to the auto-groceries, "like to have the advantage of the cash-and-carry system, but they naturally object to having to go to the stores for their purchases and lug them all the way home. Hence this system of bringing the store to the customer, a plan which is working out exceptionally well for all concerned." Flory, incidentally, started in business ten years ago in a single room thirteen feet square. Now he operates thirty stores in Canton, Massillon and Alliance and is doing a business of $2,000,000 a year.

Garver's System Keeps Clerks on Their Toes.
Albert Garver of Garver Brothers, Strasburg, O., who operate the largest country store in America, has a system of stimulating his sales force that accounts largely for his continuous success and his record for "beating his own record" steadily ever since he started in business. This stimulator consists of a bulletin sheet 9 1/2 by 17 inches in size, on which he works out a complete statement of sales for the year up to date of issue by the day, by departments and by individual salespeople. It is not an estimate even extends outside to the friends of different salesgirls who often make purchases to help them roll up a big record. There is no bonus or reward other than the "honor" of winning. It is a very astute appeal to the sporting instinct, and it works. It should be said, incidentally, however, that Garver has supplemented this with a profit-sharing plan people and by the public. Naturally this method causes intense rivalry between departments and within departments, and even extends outside to the friends of different salesgirls who often make purchases to help them roll up a big record. There is no bonus or reward other than the "honor" of winning. It is a very astute appeal to the sporting instinct, and it works. It should be said, incidentally, however, that Garver has supplemented this with a profit-sharing plan by which a cash commission on increase sales will be paid to salespeople, a bonus to all employees on the total increased sales for the month and a share of the net profits at the end of the year.

Wonderful Example of the Value of OXO

Interesting letter from Captain Sir J. Alcock, K.B.E., D.S.C.
"You will be interested to learn that OXO was a great help to us during our Trans-Atlantic Flight; it sustained us wonderfully during our 16 hours' journey."
"We had found out what a good thing it is when flying in France, and so decided to carry it with us on this occasion, and we can assure you that hot OXO is most acceptable under such cold and arduous conditions. "OXO was the only article of its kind which we carried."
J. ALCOCK, Capt., D.S.C.

OXO steadies the nerves—keeps the brain alert—gives extra warmth to resist cold and exposure—extra strength to fortify against fatigue, and yields an abundance of energy out of all proportion to the amount taken.

ALSO FAVOR GRANITE BLOCKS

With regard to a statement that residents of City road were agitating for the paving of that street with granite blocks, Commissioner Fisher said this morning that he was glad that public sentiment was turning in this direction; that he advocated this material for City road, but had suggested bituminous concrete as he had received the impression that public opinion was against the initial cost of laying the granite surface. Although the supply of granite blocks a short time ago was not sufficient for all the work that might be accomplished, he was of the opinion that they could be obtained.

RE-VALUING REAL ESTATE OF CITY

Will Require About Another Year For Completion—Likely a Considerable Increase

At a meeting of the mayor and commissioners yesterday the question with respect to taxes the question of the assessors' valuation of lands was discussed. Commissioner Fisher said that the report from the assessment commission in 1916 made reference to real estate, and especially lands, being unevenly assessed and often undervalued, and he asked what had been done since the date of that report to re-value real estate and to correct inequalities.

The chairman of the assessors replied that the assessors have been working on a re-valuation of the real estate of the city and that at the end of this year more than half of the whole area will have been covered. One result will be a considerable increase in the sum total of land values.

The chairman also said that a set of land maps, which had been more than once recommended, was urgently needed and would take about a year and a half to prepare. The estimated cost is about $5,000. The provision of these maps will now probably be ordered by the council and at the same time the work of re-valuing the real estate proceeded with as rapidly as possible.

The chairman of the assessors afterwards said that he estimated that the work of re-valuation might be completed in about another year, and that any citizen, by applying at the assessors' office, could obtain information as to the assessed value of any piece of real estate. Land and improvements will continue to be valued separately.

REMINISCENT ODDFELLOWS

Some of The Things Talked of at Last Night's Banquet at the Clifton

It was stated at the fiftieth anniversary banquet of Pioneer Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, at the Clifton last night, that the lodges in this city are gaining rapidly in membership, and the fact that the great majority of those present were young men proved the vitality of the order.

But there were also veterans, such as J. L. Stewart of Chatham, and Messrs. Sampson of Fredericton and Dolg and Murdoch of St. John. Mr. Stewart joined Pioneer Lodge in December, 1870, and has therefore been an Oddfellow for almost forty-nine years. Such men as the late Senator Ellis, Gen. C. N. Skinner and others prominent in the city's life were members of this lodge, and among its present members is Lieut.-Governor Pugsley.

Mr. Stewart many years ago wrote a history of the lodge, which is incorporated in its minute book. He talked very interestingly last night of the old days and humorously observed that his absence from Grand Lodge last year was due to his visit to France, where his experiment as an airman did not quite warrant him in making a transatlantic flight to the meeting place. He recalled the fact that he had organized a lodge in Chatham and said there are now three lodges in the Miramichi. Mr. Stewart was given a great reception.

Mr. Sampson of Fredericton, another of the veterans of the order, introduced a touch of humor in his formal complaint to the mayor that on the occasion of his visit to St. John to see the Prince his pocket was picked. One speaker chided him later for thus publicly telling what happened to a man who came from wet Fredericton to dry St. John. The mayor warned him that the city had a solicitor who invariably advised that those who sought to get at the city treasury for damages had no case; and another speaker explained that no doubt Mr. Sampson was mistaken for a taxpayer, and not entitled to have anything in his pocket.

Joseph Murdoch entertained the diners by giving a list of the notable discoveries and inventions which had changed the world since Pioneer Lodge was organized, and intimated that they began as soon as this lodge was fairly launched. His song, "Will Ye No Come Back Again," was taken up by the company with great enthusiasm.

J. Starbuck, responding for the ladies, frankly admitted that they are going to have their own way, and predicted that following their enfranchisement there will be many new laws more just to women and beneficial to society upon the statute books of the country.

Mayor Hayes was very optimistic in speaking of the future of St. John. He gave significance to the interest of Sir Frederick Lewis and the Furness-Withy people in this port and saw good reason to be very hopeful about the future of St. John.

The banquet did not end until midnight, and before it closed a toast to the Clifton and Oddfellow Thomas Reynolds was heartily drunk. This was the first banquet in the bright new dining room of the Clifton, and the arrangement of tables, the food and the service were admirable.

PLEA AGAINST WAR AND FOR A WIDER CHRISTIANITY

To the Editor of The Times.— Sir.—My foremost desire in writing you at present is to make an earnest appeal to prevent war from being allowed to place a starvation blockade around Ireland. This may seem ridiculous when peace is just being celebrated, but war often comes like a thief in the night and conscience is caught while napping.

During the early part of that jubilee of devastation which began in 1914 we were told that all the Russians were a part of God's army and a very angelic lot. But when about eighty million Russians slipped from war's control there was a different story and a starvation blockade was put into operation and hundreds of thousands, if not millions of those once highly praised people were forced to die of starvation because they did not have the privilege to abandon their new found liberty for a ration of black bread. If war could so suddenly change its policy by dividing Bolsheviks from Russians it surely has the opportunity to do the same by dividing Sinn Feiners from Irishmen.

On Good Teeth depend Health and Beauty. MENNEN'S CREAM DENTIFRICE does more than clean your teeth. It keeps your teeth bright and strong—and is also most beneficial to the gums and mouth cavities. In the morning—and after every meal—use MENNEN'S CREAM DENTIFRICE.

why I should make an appeal for Ireland in these "peaceful" days. The blockade has left lasting results upon the future as well as the present. Seeds may be scattered and great may be the harvest, but such cannot restore the health of millions of Europeans or prevent rickets, tuberculosis and many other diseases from being inherited by their descendants. Generation after generation of weaklings shall be born and civilization will forever mourn its irreparable loss in the health and strength of Europe.

abroad it is surely worth practicing at home and I believe that the greater value would be found in making friends of our own people before searching the wilds of Africa and other places for material to make angels. Preaching may be easier than practicing, but striving to follow one lone commandment and ignoring so many others is neither serving God nor man. The New Testament says preach the gospel to every creature, but it also says a lot of other things. There is many a text that should be framed in the mind and hung in the heart. Seeds scattered in the wilderness will not yield the necessities required from our own gardens. Good-will must be nourished and cultivated and that which prevents its growth weeded out and destroyed if our people are to be turned from their course of suicidal madness. A far-reaching get-together policy is one of the present requirements and not the kind that is centred in the village church social. Most of the hatred now existing was created by force and not by natural tendency. Many of the old dividing factors have become more customary than anything else. Multitudes of those divided would become united if they truly knew why they are divided.

If I were marking the red days on the calendar I would fit in a Forgiving Day with Thanksgiving Day so that the day could be also utilized for bringing about better understanding where estrangement exists and putting more meaning in the saying of the Lord's prayer. I believe that such a day would help much in a get-together movement and who can imagine what would happen if the Catholics and protestants were to abandon all their "orange" orders and unite to destroy all malice against the living for the crimes of the dead? But I must confess that a review of the past relations of Catholics and protestants and of protestants and protestants makes all hopes for the breaking down of barriers between Catholics and protestants very shaky. For if there is any brotherly love in Catholicism or Protestantism it surely resembles that of Cain and Abel more than the kind which Christ advocated. But nevertheless every effort should be made for better understanding between these two groups and for Christian principles for all. Traditions should be valued for their worth and not for their age. The old policy of selfishness has greatly weakened the only foundation on which Christianity can exist and if that policy continues to govern Christians the future may be forced to witness such a deplorable spectacle as St. Peter's church at Rome sharing such a fate as that which befell St. Sophia's church at Constantinople. "A house divided against itself shall not stand." There must be good Christians instead of real protestants and real Catholics. Christianity must not dwell in the head alone but in the heart also. At present there is an epidemic of radical ideas, but it is to be hoped that nothing will decrease the use of the English language in Ireland. Already there is far too much inconvenience through there being so many different languages and all the English-speaking world with its great bulk of Irish descent wants to talk with Ireland and do not want the inconvenience of Gaelic. The most serviceable should be the most national. Convenience is the path of progress. Concluding and earnestly hoping that Ireland will be blessed with peace and prosperity and that in the future there will be less hypocrites saying "Give us this day our daily bread."

MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL TRADES

Animal Trainer Risks Life Itself in His Occupation.

Biologists should add wild-beast training to the list of "dangerous trades" which they have compiled to send them in arriving at occupations concerning the risks of the working man and woman says a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

No railroad man or mechanic works harder than the bespangled person who must smile at the audience as he or she enters the cage of lions, and statistics of the show business indicate many fatalities. Every time a man or woman trainer enters the narrow confines of the cage or the arena with one of the jungle dwellers, be it tiger, lion, leopard or elephant, he or she risks life itself, and the mere fact of years of docility and obedience on the part of the animal is by no means a guarantee of safety.

A back turned, a sudden move or an unusual blow and the master may find himself under the slave, bitten and torn or kneaded into a lifeless pulp.

Some leaves from the experiences of Caleb Powers, a man whose varied life was spent with great animal shows or in breaking a variety of beasts, throw illumination on many of the mysteries of the cage. He told of an accident that happened years ago at the Omaha Exposition. One of the features of an animal show there was a spectacular event, a man wrestling with a lion. The man, whose name was Hays, was of great physical powers, and the lion employed was a fine male specimen, of long experience in the arena. Hays' performance consisted in a rough-and-tumble with the animal, in which he was sometimes thrown and sometimes sent his leonine adversary sprawling.

After this had lasted a few minutes the man was accustomed to open the lion's jaws and put his head into the gaping mouth. This he had accomplished many times, but one night an attendant standing beside the stage, turned carelessly, and in doing so dropped an iron rod. It struck the boards with a clang; the lion, startled, snapped his great jaws at and Hays was decapitated.

Securing Publicity.

A strange thing happened in Indianapolis in May, 1899. A show was being given that did not "go" very well. It was decided that publicity was needed. There was an old lion with the show and it was thought that matters could be so arranged that he could escape and be caught without much trouble. So the show authorities were not too careful about the door of a small cage into which they were having him transferred. A space was left which he did not take long to discover. That he made the quickest exit ever seen. The show was held in a tent, and he was out of the tent quicker than one could say Jack Robinson. On the corner near the tent was a butcher's shop, and the lion went through the window thereof at top speed. Smelling the meat, he jumped to the back of the shop, and tore down a quarter of beef.

By this time the show people were after him in great haste. He had shown more "ginger" than they had calculated and they were pretty startled when they saw that in that shop with the lion was a drunken man. One of the performers who was with the pursuing party was Bronco Bossasco, a man who had roped a lion in a lively stable in New York State years before. He decided to do

And we are now the first to adopt a new package for the better protection of these fine quality teas.

The lead package has served its purpose well for generations, but it was easily broken or torn, allowing not only a loss of tea from the package but exposing the tea to the air, odors and dust that it was so necessary to protect the tea against.

Our new package—the waxed board carton—is stronger, more secure and more completely air tight; altogether the best container for tea that has yet been devised.

The Weather Doesn't Count
When You Equip Your Ford with a Ustus Limousette

Whether it rains or snows, you can sit in your Ford car in solid comfort. No changes in the standard Ford equipment are necessary. The Limousette is simply a new practical addition which is vastly superior, in every way, to side curtains.

Easily and Quickly Installed

The initial installation is easily made in an hour's time. In attaching the Limousette there is no altering or mutilating of your present top necessary.

Ease of Access and Exit

Everyone knows what a nuisance the ordinary side curtain is when one wishes to enter or leave the car. Either the curtain must be unbuttoned and afterwards rebuttoned, or else the individual tries to crawl in under it, losing his hat and his temper in the effort, and possibly damaging curtain or fasteners in the mix-up. Contrast with this the Limousette way of merely rolling the side pieces up at a touch, out of sight, and returning them to the closed position as quickly. If an open car is desired it can be had instantly by raising the four side pieces which slide up out of sight and danger. Again contrast with this the old way of stopping, taking off curtains, folding them up and putting them away, possibly to be needed an hour later when the reverse operation is necessary.

After attachment it becomes a permanent part of the car and adjustments for weather conditions, ventilation or exit are accomplished by the side pieces being raised or lowered on spring rollers. This can be done very quickly and, when raised, makes the car entirely open and easy to enter or leave. These rolling side members can be operated readily either from the inside or outside of the car.

If, for any reason, it is desired to detach the Limousette, it can be readily removed, folded and placed under the seat. It folds into a bundle 31 1/2 inches over all. It weighs only 30 pounds.

If your dealer can't supply you, write or call on our nearest house for literature and prices.

the trick again. He accomplished it finally, but his arms and thighs were badly torn. But the drunken man was never touched.

Ida Temmine was only four years old, but she made a hit with her little troupe of trained poodles, which, with the precocity characteristic of show children, she was able to put through some very simple tricks. One day, in Lafayette, Indiana, when the show was being held in a big tent, the poodles became frisky just before show time, and one of them strayed away from his small trainer. She began to search about the tent, and accidentally brushed against a temporary cage in which a leopard, called Car-touche, was housed. There was a flash of a yellow paw through the too-wide space below the cage bars, a shrill scream, and the little girl was torn to pieces before a hand could be raised in her defence. Soon after this horror another of the show children was bitten badly by a lion, a mere cub, which was tethered before the side-show tent when the company was in Chillicothe, Ohio. Probably the animal was more than half in play, but the lion play is pretty serious.

Little things are most important to anyone who has to do with captive animals. Sometimes as small a thing as a difference between No. 5 and No. 6 means a life. This proved true in December, 1909, at a show in Cincinnati.

Behind all the cages, and the only means of communication between them and the arena, was a runway such as is always maintained where animals are kept. It is always a source of danger and a place of tragic possibilities. Now, with the show in question was a boy known as Curly, who had no very "lofty" position, but who was liked by everyone for his good disposition and fund of mischief.

One morning Curly had been playing with the lion cubs, which were in cage 5, and which were as gentle as kittens. He stepped out from the cage into the runway, and down toward the arena, where another boy was standing. There was a chance for fun here, and Curly promptly accepted it. He threw the broom he was carrying at the other boy's head and leaped back along the runway, swung open the door of what he thought was cage 5, and jumping in, banged it behind him. There were no cubs there! He had entered cage 6, the abode of Rajah, a giant tiger. Like an avalanche of yellow and black, Rajah sprang upon the boy, and could not be beaten off until he had torn his victim to shreds.

Accidents are almost weekly occurrences with the people who handle the big cats, but they are not always so serious as those just related. A scratch or a bite is all in the trainer's day's work, and he gets to think of either as a trifle, usually doctoring himself, crudely but effectively. But the work fascinates these men, and they do not seem able to leave it even after being severely hurt over and over again. An instance of this afforded by the case of a trainer who at one time handled twenty-seven lions together in the arena. He always worked on the principle of kindness, and made constant companions of his pets. He has been hurt many times and has lost an arm, but still trains lions. So far back as 1903 he figured in a big lion fight, which, however, he managed to quell.

The doors of the arena had opened to troop in, singly and in twos and threes, until there were eighteen of them in the huge cage. As was his custom the trainer did not appear for a few moments, and the animals began to play, as much at their ease as so many tabby cats. Suddenly there was a snarl and a cuff that was too rough even for lion play, and in less time than it takes to tell it the gentle tabbies had been converted to fighting demons. The cage was a mass of tawny bodies whirling through the air, whirling and roaring in a great mound in the centre, and making prodigious leaps in every direction. Women were screaming and fainting, men were running for the street and attendants were striving to stop both the fight and the panic, when with a rush, the trainer came through the arena door and leaped, shouting among the fighting lions. The blank cartridges from his revolver singed hide after hide, and the whip which he carried, sang through the air. For a moment the result hung in the balance. Then the master conquered, and the subdued beasts were forced to do their usual stage tricks.

300,000 Maxwell Owners Will O.K. This Car

FOR this Post-War Maxwell contains all those fine traits of its 300,000 predecessors.

And in addition the great developments in engine, axle and chassis which the war brought.

But these 300,000 will vouch for its ability, for they have seen their own cars pile up endless mileage, outrun a guarantee on a tire, shy at the repair shop, and go where most other cars wouldn't follow.

They know, too, how thrifty it will prove on gas, how it will please both Son and Grandma in performance and comfort.

To say that they will O.K. this car is wasting words, for it is of the very same chassis model as the 300,000 others.

It's worth an hour of any man's time to look over the Post-War features, note what fine engineering has accomplished, and observe what big improvements have been made in appearance.

The price, however, is but $1395. The extra values are yours.

WORLD'S GREATEST OCEAN CURRENT

Hour's Flow at Straits of Florida is Ninety Billion Tons.

Special interest in the effects of the Gulf Stream on the climate of the east coast of North America having been aroused by stories connecting the mild weather of the past season with the excellent temperature of this great ocean current noted of late by seamen, the National Geographic Society has issued the following bulletin, based on a report from Rear Admiral John E. Pillsbury, U. S. N.:

"The Gulf Stream is probably the greatest and most mighty of any terrestrial phenomena. Its waters are characterized by a deep indigo blue color of great clearness and high temperature. It can be penetrated by the eye to considerable depth, and generally its meeting with the less saline polar waters can be at once distinguished.

"It is difficult for the mind to grasp the immensity of this great ocean river. The Straits of Florida at its narrowest point is about forty miles wide. A calculation of the average volume of water passing in one hour gives the enormous sum of ninety billion tons. If this one single hour's flow of water could be evaporated the remaining salts would require many times more than all the ships in the world to carry it.

"The theories as to the cause of ocean currents have been many.

"Franklin's theory, which has many advocates at the present day, was that the winds produce the current by the air moving over the surface of the water, and he illustrated this theory by the following: 'It is known that a large piece of water, ten miles broad and generally only three feet deep, has by a strong wind had its water driven to one side, and sustained so as to become six feet deep, while the windward side was laid dry.' As will be seen later, this is a well-taken example of the force of the wind in causing the Gulf Stream, but it does not quite show the whole of the truth.

"In the tropical regions there is a steady movement of the air from east to west, known as the trade winds. South of a certain line situated near the equator these winds flow from a south-westerly direction, while north of the equator they come from a more north-easterly direction, but they do not vary much, and then only for brief periods.

"Winds blowing over the surface of the water induce a current in the latter due to friction. At first it is only the nearest skinn that moves, but gradually the motion is communicated from layer to layer until at last, if the wind is long continued, as in the trade wind region, the movement extends to lower depths, 300 or 400 feet, or perhaps more.

"These trade wind currents meet finally the partial barrier of the islands forming the eastern part of the Caribbean, and a portion of the flow escapes through the passages between them. From here it continues its course across that sea until it reaches the obstruction of the Honduras and Yucatan coasts, from which it escapes by the easiest route, which is into the Gulf of Mexico.

"It has been found, however, that the water entering the Caribbean by this means is not more than one-half of the amount which flows through the Straits of Florida from the Gulf of Mexico, and the other half is supplied from a source which does not come under the head of a measurable current. The other source is the wave caused by the wind. Every ripple carries a certain amount of water in the direction toward which it is flowing, irrespective of the current caused by its friction, and when the waves become large, tons of water are hurled from the crest into the trough every time the wave breaks.

"When one is on board a vessel, floating upon its waters, one is not as much impressed at the power and grandeur of this wonder of nature as he is when he stands before a towering mountain, an immense iceberg, or a fall of water such as Niagara, but when one remembers that the mighty torrent, speeding on hour by hour and day by day, in a volume equal to all the largest rivers in the world combined, is carrying its beneficent heat to temper the climate of continents, one begins to realize that of all the forces of the physical world none can equal this one river of the ocean.

"Ponce de Leon, while on his famous search for the Fountain of Youth, made the discovery of this great stream. After his failure to find, on the coast of upper Florida, the means of cheating death, he turned to the southward and skirted the shore for hundreds of miles, thus stemming the current.

"The name of 'Gulf Stream' was first suggested by Benjamin Franklin because it is only a part of the grand scheme of ocean circulation, and the Gulf of Mexico is in reality only a stopping place, as it were, for its waters, this name is generally applied to the current now as it was given by Franklin—that is, the current coming from the Gulf of Mexico and spreading abroad over the North Atlantic.

"In a large area like the Caribbean, having a comparatively constant wind blowing over its whole surface, this ac-respect to quantity, quality, and accessibility for mining purposes, Canada possesses coal deposits which compare favorably with those of the greatest mining countries of the world. He estimated that we have reserves of nearly 1,000,000,000 tons of semi-anthracite, 15,000,000,000 tons of bituminous, 6,000,000,000 tons of sub-bituminous coal and lignite, and urged that these should be developed in order to provide against the annually recurring shortage of fuel. Hitherto our coal in the extreme East and extreme West has not been able to compete in central Canada with coal from the United States, but should the present strike of American miners continue there might be no competition, and yet we are not prepared to supply our own people with fuel from our own reserves. It would be necessary not only to develop our reserves, but to make arrangements for transportation and for storage at strategic points. Transportation could be provided for easily, because the government owns or will own half of the railway mileage of the country, and storage facilities are necessary for economical distribution.

The present system of distribution of coal, and especially of anthracite, from the United States works to the advantage of the well-to-do consumer, who can afford to pay for all of his year's fuel at one time and is able to lay in his supply during the summer when the price is comparatively low. But it is all to the disadvantage of the workingmen, clerks, and others of moderate incomes, who are obliged to buy in small lots at increasing prices during the winter, and who may find themselves this winter unable to buy fuel at any price. There is already a great deal of unrest in the country, and it will not be lessened if there is any trouble over fuel. But even if, as Sir George Foster thinks, we may be able to obtain our usual supply from the United States this year it is necessary to look to the future. The foreign demands upon the supply in the United States are likely to increase heavily, and our annual shortage is likely to become greater. The problem of utilizing our own vast reserves is a big one, but it ought to receive the immediate attention of the government.

tion is practically a simultaneous movement of its surface waters to the westward and a continual escape of the water heaped up at the obstruction offered by the land into the Gulf of Mexico, through the Straits of Florida, and into the Atlantic.

"The Gulf Stream would be little felt on the coast of Europe did it not receive a great addition to its volume of heat when en route. This is by means of a gentle flow from the northeast trade wind current that passes outside the Caribbean Islands and the Bahamas. The surface temperature of this outside current is about the same in its passage along the West Indies Islands as the Gulf Stream in the Straits of Florida, but it is less violent in its movements, and there is less intermingling of its upper and lower waters, so that it arrives off Cape Hatteras, with a much higher temperature than that of the more turbulent Gulf Stream."

Use Our Own Coal.
 (Toronto Globe.)

The statement of Sir George Foster, acting premier, that the United States will supply Canada with coal as in other years, and that there will be no discrimination against us while there is any coal available there, is satisfactory as far as it goes, and is a testimony to the friendliness of that country. But if the strike of the bituminous coal miners continues for even a short period the U. S. may not have enough coal for its own purposes. Moreover arrangements have been made already to supply coal to European countries which have little or none of their own available because of the war, while Canada has enormous deposits which have never been worked. The whole situation of dependence upon the United States for so large a portion of our fuel is not complimentary to Canada as a nation.

In an address before the Canadian Gas Association Mr. Arthur V. White, Consulting Engineer of the Commission of Conservation, pointed out that, in

Sidelights On Sport

That St. John is eager to enter the New England league is evinced from the interest manifested by fans throughout the city. Baseball is one of the chief topics of conversation and on all sides the question is being asked, "Will we succeed in getting a franchise?" Never before have local fans taken such an interest at this time of year and it success crowns the efforts of Joe Page and those behind the movement they can rest assured that the league games will be a banner attraction here next year. That St. John is one of the greatest minor league baseball cities in America is beyond a doubt, and if a franchise is secured it should be the leading city in the New England League.

While baseball is and will be one of the leading sports in this city there are many who are clamoring for a place to enjoy a skate and incidentally witness a hockey match. There is a chance for St. John to get into the New Brunswick League if a rink can be procured. There is no reason why a structure could not be erected on a central site where games could be played, in addition to skating, carnivals, etc. It would undoubtedly be a good paying proposition.

Along with the revival of sport comes wrestling. This is an interesting and clean sport when conducted by competent men. A wrestling match holds close interest and when two men in perfect condition meet to struggle for supremacy it is an exhibition well worth seeing. The first step in this revival is a match between George Brooks of this city, a young, clean and aggressive mat artist, and Bridson Green. The former went for an hour and a half against Nelson, one of the classic wrestlers in Upper Canada, and was defeated only after he had dislocated his wrist. He also has a win to his credit over Joe Laraboo, who claimed a championship of Maine. Green has been wrestling professionally for two years and has won eighty-three bouts. Prior to that he won four amateur championships.

Joe McNamara, popular physical instructor of the Y. M. C. I., is arranging another big field day for his boys' class. He recently held a meet on Moosepath Park and it was one most successful. The interest manifested by the boys has convinced him that the only thing left is to give them another chance for honours. He is securing valuable prizes to be awarded to the winners. He is also endeavoring to have a movie man take pictures of the boys in action. Meets of this kind should receive the hearty support of all citizens for they tend to develop the future manhood of the city. A boy interested in sport will keep in the best of condition and thus develop his mind and body.

Montreal Bouts.

Montreal, Nov. 15—As Eugene Brosseau will be unable to fulfill his engagement with Battling Levinsky on Monday night the management have secured Clay Turner, a western fighter, to meet Levinsky. Turner has been fighting the best of the light heavyweights around New York.

Frankie Fleming has posted a forfeit of $100 to meet Michaels in a ten-round bout on Wednesday night. Michaels is the best, with the exception of Kilbane, that Fleming has ever battled with in a local ring. Several veteran fight enthusiasts fancy him to beat Fleming.

Otto Reisel of Chicago won the other game from Charles Otis of Brooklyn, 50 to 31.

THREE TRUE BILLS: TWO AGAINST WOMEN

Winnipeg, Nov. 15—Three true bills and one no-bill, were returned by the grand jury when they reported on the strike cases to Justice McEneaney. The true bills were as follows: Mrs. Helen Armstrong, prominent among the Woman's Labor League, intimidation; John Iron, intimidation; and Matilda Russell, intimidation. The grand jury found no bill against Tauranski, charged with intimidation.
