A Night of Terror at Morne Rouge.

All the newspaper correspondents now engaged in picturing in detail the scenes and incidents in and around St. Pierre unite in praise of the courage and zeal of Pere Marie, cure of the village of Morne Rouge.

The following passages are from the "New York Herald's" report of the incidents attending the second and most violent eruption of Mont Pelé:

"It was half-past 7 o'clock when we reached the place that used to be known as 'the Flower of Martique.' Instead of the eight thousands it formerly had we found only about two hundred persons there.

"We were directed to the house of the village cure as the only place where there was any probability of finding food either for horses or ourselves. Pere Marie took us in with tears in his eyes.

"You are the first who have come here since the day of Pelé's first eruption," he told us. "We have been without food enough to live on, and our plight is indeed pitiable."

"He gave us wine and had our tired horses cared for telling us meanwhile of the sufferings of those of his flock who had not fled with the others toward Fort de France.

"Supper had just been placed up on the table when Pelé again burst forth. In a moment the room had filled with men and women who had hurried there from the surrounding houses. They were in a state of frantic panic.

"O, mon Dieu, mon Dieu!" they cried. "Finis, j'ai finis; et il finit!"

"As we stood for an instant in the doorway Pere Marie turned to those gathered about him and to us. Collecting himself, he spoke in a brave, clear voice, speaking in English so that we, too, would understand—or perhaps it was because he had just been addressing us in our own tongue and his mind continued to act in the same channel.

"Be not afraid, my children," he said. "To the church, and we will pray for deliverance."

"With that he left the room, going in the direction of the church, half a hundred persons following him. But we resolved to carry out, if possible, the plan we had agreed on—to run in a direction contrary to the one the cloud seemed to be taking, in the hope that if it did not settle to the earth it might be outside the zone of danger."

One of the few living eye witnesses from an advantageous position of the awful holocaust of May 8 is Father Jean Alce Roge, pastor of the church on Morne Vert, a village some five kilometers above and southeast of St. Pierre, and about ten from the crater. Morne Vert is much nearer the crater than St. Pierre, but it was a little more out of the wind from the mountain, and was protected from its fiery output by several peaks and profound valleys.

Father Roge watched the mountain almost constantly from April 25, when its activity was first observed, to the second great eruption May 20. He tells not only of the world-startling explosion of May 8, but also of the earlier and lesser one of May 5.

"The Cross says: 'Educationalists talk about nature. They try to teach a love for nature in order to elevate the mind of the youth. He who made all nature is before all; and if we are not taught to have an abiding reverence for Him it is like building a house without a foundation to seek to teach reverence for His works. What man, but a common idiot, would bring the children to the woods and pull trees for Arbor Day, and plant them, without telling the youths that there is some Great Being above all? Who made all these beautiful things? Why teach that the sea is great and that the cliffs stand there, monuments of power, without telling of Power that is behind, and giving some notion of perfection that this Power must embrace? Why teach about the might there is in the awful roar of the sea—might that man has not been able to withstand—and, at the same time, strike from the school curriculum the name God?"

"The religious statistics of New South Wales, according to the census taken last year, have just been published," says the Australian.

"Catholics should regard them with satisfaction, the progress of the Church being at the most satisfactory rate. We find that in 1891 the general population of New South Wales was 1,123,954; in 1901 it was 1,354,846; an increase of 230,892, or about 20 per cent. During the same period the Catholics increased from 236,911 to 347,303, or at the rate of about 21 per cent., which is greater than the general increase in population."

"There are fifteen native priests in the Diocese of Jaffa, Ceylon. Their superior, Father Nicholas Xavier Sandrasagra, O. M. I. kept the silver jubilee of his ordination in April, 1902, and Bishop Joulan, with his priests and people took part. Father Sandrasagra, who belongs to a well-known Tamil family holding responsible offices under government, was ordained by Bishop Bonjean, Vicar Apostolic of Jaffa, afterwards Archbishop of Colombo.

Catholics and Protestants in Holland.

The political situation in Holland deserves consideration. For twenty-five years the Freethinkers and their kindred elements held sway in the Parliament of that country. This present year, however, saw their discomfiture, when Catholics and Protestants united and hurled them from power. Dr. Kruppens, the Protestant leader to whom is given the credit of planning the scheme, in explaining why he had endeavored to bring about such a reunion, declared:

"There are two systems engaged in mortal combat: Modernism, which seeks to fashion mankind according to naturalism, and on the other hand, those who bow down in veneration before Jesus Christ, acknowledging Him to be the Son of the living God. These seek to save their Christian heritage; therefore, it is well they should unite their forces against a common enemy."

There has been much criticism of this coalition of forces, seemingly so irreconcilable, and we have noticed Protestant papers on this side of the Atlantic proclaiming that it meant retrogression instead of advance.

In the same strain a Social and Member of the Parliament of Holland spoke the other day. The Catholic premier in reply said:

"It is greatly to the credit of the Christians of Holland that they can unite hand-in-hand against adversaries who advocate free love, suicide, public seizure of property without compensation, and the race-destroying doctrine of Malthus."

The Casket says: "Victor Hugo's mother, when entering her son at a Catholic college, expressly stipulated that he should not be required to attend Mass. When informed that it was the rule of the house that all Catholic students should attend Mass, she said that in that case he should be registered as a Protestant. She also wished that he should be allowed perfect liberty to read all kinds of books, as books never injured any one. We do not believe that any of our Catholic parents are so unkind for their duties as Madam Hugo showed herself in the first of these instances, but we know that there are some who agree with her views about indiscriminate reading. They must confidently expect that their children will grow up to resemble the great French author, not in talent, but in vice."

The Cross says: "Educationalists talk about nature. They try to teach a love for nature in order to elevate the mind of the youth. He who made all nature is before all; and if we are not taught to have an abiding reverence for Him it is like building a house without a foundation to seek to teach reverence for His works. Homes for Waifs.

At the meeting of the National Charities Association held in Detroit last week, attention was called to the fact that the greater number of children are adopted by families before they are influenced by the institutions to whose care they have been committed. The number of children who are left in charitable institutions until they reach the ages of 10 or 12 is rapidly becoming smaller. Almost every day letters are received by the managers of asylums and the like asking for children who may be adopted. This must be considered a hopeful sign by those interested in the question of 'how to care for our waifs.' It is a most gratifying fact that in all Catholic institutions it is true the children are well taken care of; they are well fed and clothed, and, young as they are, they are trained to habits of neatness and thrift. But there is one drawback common to all institutions and unavoidable because they are institutions. The mechanical routine tends to bring up a child more as a human machine than as a human being. Individuality is liable to be crushed out by the necessity of sameness of rule, of method and of care. But in a private home it is different. The child has greater room for individual development, because it must, in a measure, rely more on itself. It would be well, therefore, if homes could now be obtained for the children now in asylums and other institutions. The child was not created to live and grow and develop in an institution. A home is what it craves for and what it needs; and it is to be hoped that the recent disposition on the part of many good people to secure such homes for the little friendless children will become stronger and will find many imitators.

From the New World.

The Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster in a letter to his clergy has ordered that a "Te Deum" be said or solemnly sung in all the churches on the occasion of the coronation. This, he says, may be either on the day of the coronation itself, or on the Sunday following, after the principal Mass, or in the evening—whichever may be thought most convenient. His eminence adds:

"In a circular addressed by order of the Holy Office to the Bishops of India it is clearly laid down that Catholics may never join in religious services because communication by Catholics in non-Catholic forms of worship is condemned by the principle of the Catholic religion. At the same time the circular points out that the faithful are not to be scandalized at a permission granted to Catholics to be present during the coronation service in the Abbey Church of Westminster because they are there, not as participating in divinity, but simply as paying an act of civil honor to the sovereign personally present, in a great state function." The Holy Father, having dispensed Catholics throughout the British Empire from the law of abstinence on the two days following the coronation, as well as that of fasting on the feast of St. Peter and Paul, has desired that they who avail themselves of this dispensation should say certain prayers, which he has authorized Cardinal Vaughan to prescribe. These prayers the Cardinal has prescribed are to be either one of the Hymns to the Holy Ghost, with the acts of Faith, Hope, Charity and Contrition, or five "Paters," "Aves" and "Glorias" on each of the two days, viz., June 27 and 28.

There is much speculation, says the "Milwaukee Catholic Citizen," among the clergy at present regarding the visit of Archbishop Ratzinger to Rome. Rumor has it that the Archbishop is seeking the appointment of an auxiliary Bishop to assist him in performing his rapidly increasing diocesan work. Among the names talked of among the clergy is likely to get the appointment, if made, are those of Rev. H. Gulek, pastor of St. Hyacinth's Church, and Rev. P. M. Abelen, spiritual director of the School of the Sisters of Notre Dame. Both of these clergymen accompanied Archbishop Keizer to Rome. Father Gulek's name is mostly mentioned. Recently there has been a strong movement among the Polish people to secure a Polish Bishop in this country and Father Gulek's appointment would be in alignment with the movement.

Among the names talked of among the clergy is likely to get the appointment, if made, are those of Rev. H. Gulek, pastor of St. Hyacinth's Church, and Rev. P. M. Abelen, spiritual director of the School of the Sisters of Notre Dame. Both of these clergymen accompanied Archbishop Keizer to Rome. Father Gulek's name is mostly mentioned. Recently there has been a strong movement among the Polish people to secure a Polish Bishop in this country and Father Gulek's appointment would be in alignment with the movement.

There is much speculation, says the "Milwaukee Catholic Citizen," among the clergy at present regarding the visit of Archbishop Ratzinger to Rome. Rumor has it that the Archbishop is seeking the appointment of an auxiliary Bishop to assist him in performing his rapidly increasing diocesan work. Among the names talked of among the clergy is likely to get the appointment, if made, are those of Rev. H. Gulek, pastor of St. Hyacinth's Church, and Rev. P. M. Abelen, spiritual director of the School of the Sisters of Notre Dame. Both of these clergymen accompanied Archbishop Keizer to Rome. Father Gulek's name is mostly mentioned. THE KING ILL
Coronation Postponed.

The intelligence elsewhere published, of the serious illness of His Majesty, King Edward VII. will be received with feelings of the deepest regret, not only throughout the British Empire, but in every portion of the civilized world, and in no quarter of the Imperial Dominions, we feel sure, will this regret be more deeply felt than among the loyal people of this Province. The illness comes at a most inopportune time and will be the occasion of the greatest possible disappointment, in view of the near approach and extensive preparations for the Coronation ceremonies. But such is life; the most powerful king has no greater guarantee of life and health than the humblest of his subjects. His Majesty's illness seems to date from Saturday, the 14th inst, when he suffered a chill in consequence of long exposure to disagreeable weather. Since that time varied accounts of his condition of health had been sent out; but certainly the news of his attack of appendicitis and his submission to a surgical operation came as a shock. The latest intelligence indicates that his condition continues favorable. The Coronation ceremonies are indefinitely postponed.

Ottawa Weekly Letter.

IN MINISTERIAL DREAMLAND.

On June 16th, 1897, Hon. A. G. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals, speaking in the Commons, on the extension of the Intercolonial Railway to Montreal, said: "People have pointed to the annual deficit recurring from time to time, and have drawn the inference that there was something wrong in the system of owning and operating government railways. The idea has gone abroad and has sunk deeply in the people's minds, that because the Intercolonial Railway has not been a paying property—or, in other words, has scarcely in all its history been able to show a balance on the right side of its accounts—there was something inherently vicious in the government ownership of railways, and that the less a government had to do with them the better. But I think, I am able to show this committee that if there is one thing more than another that led to this state of affairs, it is that the Intercolonial Railway has been cribbed, cabined and confined. I will give this committee before I get through, good reasons for believing that after this extension shall be concluded and after it shall have an opportunity of getting into successful competition, the days of deficits will be over, and we shall be able—I do not say to pay interest on the capital invested, but by the business arrangements which we shall be in a position to make, and by the facilities which will be secured to us in Montreal, to show a balance on the right side of the account, and to reverse the record which has been exhibited in the running operations of this railway in times past."

Time, the Daniel in this case, has interpreted the dream of the Minister in this certain way; deficits on Intercolonial Railway from 1897 to 1901, $901,424; expended, charged to capital account and added to the debt of the country during the same period $8,773,773. Mr. Blair's dream was only about $10,000,000 short of being prophetic.

SOME CENSUS POINTERS.

One of the government institutions that is still flourishing at Ottawa, months after its work should have been completed, is the census bureau. It is interesting to watch the small army of employees who enter and leave the building twice each day, knowing that their services cost the country $10,000 per month. And in addition to this the building in which they are housed is owned by a party friend, Mr. Seybold, who draws a yearly rental of $6,500 and had $10,000 spent by the government in improving it. Now it is suggested, that the census bureau should be made a permanent institution, for the good reason, no doubt, that it will be some years yet before the Minister of Agriculture is able to complete a work which was done by the Conservative government in one year, and at a cost of $500,000, whereas the census now in course of completion has already cost $1,152,000. The advantages of a permanent bureau are many, from the government's standpoint, and from the viewpoint of the taxpayers. If permanence is added to the bungling that has characterized the management of the taking of Canada's population, Mr. Seybold will continue to draw $6,500 for a building (assessed for $40,000) and the army of clerks under Mr. Blue's direction, will be made a "standing force" at a cost of $120,000 per annum. The taxpayer will meet the bills, but that is an incident of the "growing time."

MUTUAL PREFERENCE IS EXPECTED.

The Toronto Globe is "making mad" to show that this country does not require or look for a preference in the British market. The leading Liberal organ is heroically endeavoring to anticipate the flood of criticism which will be showered on the Government, if the coronation conference does not result in some material gain for Canada, in return for the concessions we have already granted to British goods. On the other hand the British press is warming towards the idea of a mutual preference between the motherland and the colonies. The current of public opinion has not only turned but is running rapidly in the direction of an inter-empire trade agreement. Here in Canada, too, despite the efforts of the Liberal press, citizens are asking for a quid pro quo. The Laurier utterance of 1897, in which Canada was represented as not requiring any return for her preference, has long ceased to be taken seriously. The sooner the government and its subsidized press awaken to this fact, the better. It is time for both to realize that their duty is that of gaining support for and not animosity towards a mutual preference.

OFF NO A PICNIC.

The annual ministerial European picnic is already under way. This year it will be on a scale in keeping with the coronation ceremony. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. W. S. Fielding, Hon. Wm Mulock, Hon. Wm Paterson, Hon. F. W. Borden and Hon. Mr. Carroll will form the advance guard. Later in the season Hon. J. I. Tarte, Hon. A. G. Blair, and Chas Fitzpatrick will cross the pond. The first ministerial contingent is going to cost $20,000, but there will probably be a large supplementary vote required for that purpose. The Premier is travelling in befitting luxury and his party's passage alone will cost the country in the vicinity of $1,500. Then the other members of the cabinet, whose sight (previous to 1897) was so offended by private cars and free trips, will do their best to spend the thousands at their disposal. The sending of a second contingent is not to facilitate the business to come before the Coronation Convention, because that will have been concluded ere they reach the motherland. And besides, Sir Wilfrid has left the Canadian representatives little to discuss. On the whole the movement leads one to believe that the ministers are in for a really good time at the expense of the overburdened taxpayer, who will in due time be called upon to pay, what Sir Wilfrid considered, (previous to 1897,) the Ottawa high-waymen.

HOW NORTH GREY WAS STOLEN.

Link by link the chain of evidence connecting the Liberal "machine" with the crimes of North Grey and the temporary defeat of the Conservative candidate Mr. Boyd is being forged. Mr. Boyd has discovered in polling place number 9-St Vincent, thirty men of sterling character who have all made affidavits that they voted for him, yet only twenty-nine votes were recorded for the Conservatives. The deputy returning officer in charge of the poll, together with the Conservative and Liberal scrutineers have sworn that there was only one spoiled ballot rejected. This was placed in an envelope and sealed, while all the other ballots were placed loose in the box. When the ballot box was taken before Judge Morrison for recount, it was found that five ballots were spoiled and four of these were put in an envelope after the night of the election. The presiding officer admits that the ballot box was out of his possession for four days, previous to its delivery to the returning officer and this explains the plot to place a Liberal in Mr. Boyd's seat. The "machine" is losing its head in its reckless effort to save its life, but the courts will see to it, that in future, stealing votes will be an unprofitable calling.

What is the use of men worrying over the fear of dying in poverty? It is living in poverty that bothers us most.

It is said that a great many of the members of our Legislature look upon a morning today as a constitutional amendment.

General DeWitt said that the day peace was proclaimed was the happiest since he left school. Wonder does he mean that he had a lot of fun the day he left.

The story is truthful and old. For ages has man mourned his lot. When it isn't too hot to be too good. When it isn't too cold it's too hot.

Some of our Island dentists ought to try their skill removing the decayed stumps which adorn the side of the railway track at places between here and Summerside.

The Halifax Chronicle man has been doing a lot of whining on account of the British press terms. He probably hasn't been feeling well. If he keeps it up they better change the spelling of the heading over the editorial column and call it "The Halifax Chronicle III."

All the patent medicines advertised nowadays claim to be able to cure eruptions. If they want to get up a good ad, to prove it they might try some on Monte Pelles and Souffriere. Just dump a lot of it down into the crater and if it doesn't do any good, it will do no other poor "craters" any harm.

Twelve New Yorkers recently learned that it is not always well to spring a job on a Supreme Court justice. They formed a jury to try a damage suit and returned a sealed verdict which was found to be a disagreement. The jurors took this as an excellent joke and smiled broadly when the judge opened the envelope. The smiles ceased, however, when the judge imposed fines of $32 apiece and told them to produce the money or go to jail. The money was forthcoming and the gloom was so thick in the Supreme Court during the day that it could be cut with a knife.

An unsophisticated young minister in rural Pennsylvania, recently ordained, not long ago wrote to a theological professor in Philadelphia as follows: "I am a poor speaker, and find it hard to utter any thoughts clearly and forcibly. I have decided therefore to take a course of instruction in speaking, and, learning from the papers that there are a great many speak-easies in your city, I would be obliged if you would recommend me to one."

The professor broke the news to him as emphatically as possible that a "speak-easy" is merely an unlicensed drinking place.

The weather for the past several days has been very noisy indeed. The weather bulletin man is having a tough time of it. Somebody has dedicated the following lines to him in hope that if not already washed away he may read and profit by them:—

I wouldn't be the weather man for Morgan's golden pile; I couldn't stand the cuss words that fall on him each day.

For from all quarters of the land where skies are black or smoky They're a-swearin' awful at him—and it ain't right, I say.

"Will it never grow more cold? "Will it never grow more hot?" "Will the bloomers' skies stop leakin'?" "Will the hot sun never sink?"

These are questions they are firin' at the poor cuss who has got A grip upon the weather vane—but it ain't right, by jink!

Bot, weather man a question. Why the dickens don't you stop A-pourin' down the water on our backs both night and day?

Do you think that we are cresses or a bloomin' cabbage crop? Why man you'll surely drown us if you don't let up, I say.

Why the blankety blanks don't you turn off your hose, Or take it to some desert where the red sand meets with heat?

Why not pour your surplus water where 'twell fall in swiftness and then dry our socks and feet?

No, I wouldn't be the weather man for anybody's gold. I couldn't stand the swear-words that bombard him every day—

They're a-fallin' like the rain drops and that's a few, I'm told—

They're a-swearin' at him awful—and it ain't right, I say.

CORONATION POSTPONED

On Account of King's Illness, Undergoes an Operation.

LONDON, June 24.—The coronation is postponed indefinitely on account of the illness of King Edward. At 1.06 p. m., today an operation on the King was performed. At 2 p. m. it was privately admitted that His Majesty's condition was more serious than represented by the medical bulletins. At 12.46 Sir Francis Knollys, the King's private secretary, issued an official medical announcement as follows: The King is suffering from priapitis, (appendicitis). His condition on Saturday was so satisfactory that it was hoped with care His Majesty would be able to go through the Coronation ceremony. On Monday evening a recrudescence became manifest, rendering a surgical operation necessary today.

The news that the King's illness was so serious as to cause the postponement of the Coronation festivities first came from the House of Commons and the news spread over London like wildfire, causing consternation everywhere. The King's condition had been progressing so satisfactorily that his physicians believed him to be able to go through the Coronation ceremonies or at least the most important ones, but he took an unfavorable turn, and an operation became necessary. Dr. Fieve, assisted by Drs. Lister Smith, Taving and Barlow at 2 o'clock made an incision, finding a large abscess which was evacuated. The King bore the operation well and at 6 o'clock was fully recovered from the chloroform. The doctors pronounced his condition satisfactory.

The abscess in the tissues around the vermiform appendix and with favorable conditions the King will recover in three or four weeks, but the Coronation cannot go on till some time after that, as he must get strong.

The King on regaining consciousness, asked for the Prince of Wales. His Majesty has ordered that the dinner to the poor of London shall go on as arranged.

The foreign dignitaries are all shocked at the terrible news. It is believed they will return home as soon as conditions show the King's progress satisfactory. Enormous crowds await the bulletins issued from hour to hour. In the house of Lords, Salisbury announced that the surgeons entertained a most satisfactory view of the progress of the distinguished patient, but most definite language was impossible.

LONDON, June 24, 11 p.m.—A bulletin issued at 11 says: "The King's condition was so good as could be expected, after so serious an operation. It will be some days before it will be possible to say that he is out of danger."

A despatch received early this (Wednesday) morning says the King rested easy last night.

LOCAL AND OTHER ITEMS.

FOLLOWING is the order of tea parties and picnics thus far announced: July 1st, Head St. Peter's Bay; July 3rd, St. Ann's, Hope River; July 5th, Morell; July 10th (picnic), St. Andrew's; July 16th, Souris; July 21, Fort Augustus; July 22, St. Margaret's, at Bear River Station.

The new Catholic Church at Lot 85 was dedicated to divine worship on Sunday last by his Lordship Bishop McDonald. In the celebration of Solemn Pontifical Mass, his Lordship, the Bishop, was assisted by Rev. D. B. Reid as arch-priest, Rev. Dr. Morrison and Rev. J. J. McDonald as deacons of honor, Rev. James A. MacDonald as deacon of office, and Rev. T. Campbell as sub-deacon. The sermon of the occasion was preached by Rev. Dr. Morrison. A collection taken up during the service amounted to $155.

In this issue will be found the advertisement of the tea party and fancy fair, in aid of St. Joseph's church, Morell, to be held at Morell Station on Tuesday July 8th. It is intimated that this may be the last tea party to be held under the same auspices, for some time to come. This, of itself would be a strong reason why you are going should be every respect equal or surpass its predecessors, so proverbially successful. But the charming locality in which the gathering is to be held scarcely fails to draw together an immense gathering on July 8th. The Morell River is far famed as the home of the speckled beauty and the Meocs of the anglers and fish attend this tea party will be offered an opportunity of indulging, if they feel inclined, in the exciting amusement of tempting to lure the silvery trout from his lurking place. A rare day's enjoyment is in store for all who attend this gathering.

The Prices.

DIED

At Charlottetown on the 30th, inst., Mrs. Catherine Hughes in the 89th year of her age, relict of the late Edward Hughes. May her soul rest in peace.

Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court at Summerside closed Thursday evening. The trespass case of John Hickey vs. Allen McLeod and John McLeod was concluded at the morning session. Judgment reserved. J. E. Wyatt applied for a rule nisi to quash a conviction of Frank Perry for violation of the C. T. A. and the Judge requested that Mr. Wyatt send his ground of application to him at Charlottetown and he would consider the matter and deliver judgment at the next term of the Supreme Court at Charlottetown, to be held next week. An appeal case, Frank McKenzie & Co. against H. A. Compton, was the last case disposed of. The matter was argued and judgment reserved. In the afternoon the criminals were sentenced. Claid Gallant and Bus Perry found guilty of housebreaking with intent to steal. The prisoners in this case were both under 14 years of age. His Lordship gave them some strong advice pointing out the gravity of their crime and what it would lead to if they did not reform. He considered that a separation from their evil companions and surroundings would be beneficial to them, and sentenced them to two years in Dorchester Penitentiary. Richard Elliott, guilty of housebreaking and larceny was sentenced to three years at Dorchester, and Harry Richards for the same offence was given three years and six months in the institution. Richards had already served a term at Dorchester but had not profited by it. The Judge hoped it would teach him a lesson this time. George Gillian for manslaughter. The prisoner on being asked if he had anything to say, replied that as far as he himself was concerned he had nothing to say, but in as much as the jury had seen fit to recommend mercy, he would ask that mercy for his family. His Lordship in passing sentence upon him spoke feelingly and eloquently. During his term of office he had never felt more keenly for a prisoner. The jury had recommended mercy and their recommendation had been duly considered. It was a fortunate thing for him he had not been tried on a more serious charge. He (the judge) had spoken to the jury on the sacredness of human life. The court had heard of the condition in which Graves was when by the prisoner's hand he had been, in a moment, sent into the presence of his God. Whether he (Graves) may have been had a human life and a human soul. The jury had considered the prisoner's reputable life, the thirty years in which he had done his duty as an officer of the law. He (the prisoner) was now 55 years of age. It was sad that this cloud should fall upon him, that the shame and the suffering should fall upon his children. He (the judge) had since the verdict was given thought much about the motherless children and the little girl upon whom the weight of the verdict should fall, and whose lives now lay between the mother's grave and the father's living tomb. He (the prisoner) was the cause of it all; he owed the reparation which he had demanded. The sentence of the court was that he would be imprisoned in Dorchester penitentiary for seven years.

GRAND Coronation Tea!

The first and greatest Tea Party of the season will be the Coronation Tea, to be held at Head St. Peter's Bay, ON DOMINION DAY, Tuesday, July 1st.

On no portion of this Province have the beauties of nature been more lavishly bestowed than on St. Peter's, nor is there any other place on the Island so inviting for a day's outing. The beautiful waters of the Bay sweep inland nine miles from the harbor's mouth, winding between gently rising banks on either side, where well-tilled farms slope down to the water's edge. On the first of July these fields will be amply clothed in a mantle of rich verdure, meadows and grain fields vying with one another in the richness of their colors. Near the long bridge that spans the junction of the bay and river, close the beautiful Catholic Church, which is situated on the crest of the rising ground on the north side of the Bay, a little west of the village, and its massive tower and lofty cross-crowned spire are visible from afar. It stands out in bold relief as if sentinelling all around. The scene here presented, at this season of the year, when nature is at its best, is such an artist would love to reproduce.

The Tea Party will be held near the beautiful Church Grounds, from which such a magnificent view can be had on all sides. Who can resist the invitation to this charming spot, extended to the public by the parishioners of St. Peter's for Dominion Day? Everything possible will be done to minister to the comfort and pleasure of all who come to the Tea Party. Dinner and Tea tables abundantly supplied with the choicest edibles will be set out in the most inviting style. Refreshment Saloons, with all the delicacies of the season will be provided, and games and amusements galore will be supplied. Dancing booths with the best of music will be a feature of the day. In order to convince yourself that you can have a rare day's pleasure at small cost read the Special Reduced Fares and Train Arrangements as follows:

GRAND Tea Social, —AT— ST. ANN'S, HOPE RIVER —ON— THURSDAY, JULY 3rd.

The new parochial residence at St. Ann's, Hope River, one of the finest in the Province, is almost completed. The plumbers are putting the finishing strokes on the hydraulics for the introduction of water to the house and outbuildings. The parishioners are preparing a grand Tea Social to be held near the church grounds on Thursday, July 3rd. In addition to the pie store of the tea party, the occasion will afford an opportunity for all to visit the magnificent new house and to inspect the operations of the hydraulic ram which draws the water half a mile from one of the purest sources in the Province. This apparatus has power sufficient to throw water four hundred feet up into the air. This is the first apparatus of its kind installed in the Island, and is certainly worthy of inspection. Doubtless many more will follow once the practicability of this pioneer scheme is generally known. This little should attract a large attendance on July 3rd. But this is not all. A cordial invitation is extended to ladies and gentlemen to come and enjoy a pleasant day's recreation. The ladies of this parish enjoy a reputation unexcelled in the preparation of tea tables and catering to the tastes of all. Strawberries and cream, and every other choice refreshment will be lavishly supplied. All amusements and games usual at such gatherings will be provided.

The drawing of the Grand Lottery in aid of the building fund of the new house will take place on the day of the tea. Consequently all lottery books, sold and unsold, should be returned by July 1st. It is most important that this request should be attended to.

Come, come, come, and enjoy a rare day's outing while assisting a good cause.

THOMAS MURPHY,
Secretary.

Booksellers & Stationers,

One of the great attractions at the party at St. Ann's, Hope River, on Thursday, July 3rd, will be the hydraulic ram. This ram will not cause or hurt anyone, as his powers of locomotion are limited. It is a mechanical ram, an ingenious and powerful contrivance used for the purpose of drawing water from a distance and raising it to a great height for domestic or other purposes. Its operations are a novelty in this Province, and a rare opportunity to view the operations will be afforded on the day of the tea social. This in connection with all the good things provided for the tables and the amusements to be supplied should draw a large crowd to St. Ann's on July 3rd. The drawing of the lottery will take place on the same day. Those who hold books in this connection should return them by July 1st. Read the advertisement in another column.

We Make It Plain

To everybody who wants to understand that the Clothing we sell is superior in cloth, in make and in trimmings to what any other store in the city sells.

One big reason is because we buy so much that the biggest and best makers are satisfied to sell us and us alone.

Another big reason is that we pay spot cash for every dollar's worth of clothing we buy.

Another reason is because when we give a very large order to one firm, their expense in selling the order is very light, and they give us a special discount for that. These are all little reasons, but taken altogether they form a very big reason why we should get your trade. Don't forget that every dollar we save in discount, means that dollar and the profit on that dollar to you. Now count up and see how much even an extra 10 per cent. discount will amount to on your year's clothing.

When you have it figured out, come in and we'll prove your answer correct.

Discussing any point becomes an easy matter when your arguments are backed up by indisputable facts. In this instance our argument is made doubly easy in being backed up by facts and figures. First, it is an established fact that a woman prefers to buy Dress Goods where they keep the largest stock. Second, where they keep the newest and most up-to-date materials. Third, where you are sure the prices are lowest. These are the reasons why we sell a lot of Dress Goods here. THE WONDERFUL FLOWER OF WOXINDON.

An Historical Romance of the Times of Queen Elizabeth.

BY REV. JOSEPH SPILLMAN, S. J.

PUBLISHED BY PERMISSION OF B. HERDER, ST. LOUIS, MO.

(Reproduced from the Montreal True Witness.)

And while the royal barge moved on its stately course down the Thames, amid the peal of bells from the church steeples, and a salute from the Tower guns, we too turned and rowed rapidly home-wards, after Frih and Anne had waved a farewell greeting to their uncle.

Now that the gentle reader has become acquainted with St. Barbe, or as we now call him, Brother Aselm, we will let him take up the narrative, and relate in his own words the events of his life, and speak of his connection with his uncle, Secretary Walsingham, and with Lord Burghley's fair daughter Judith.

CHAPTER XI.

I am now about to relate my history, such as it is, or rather the record of God's mercies towards me, unworthy as I am of His grace. I do this, not only because our Rev. Father Guardian has enjoined it upon me in virtue of holy obedience, but for my own humiliation on the one hand, and on the other for the praise and honor of the true God: "unto the praise of the glory of His grace" (Eph. 1, 6) to quote the words of St. Paul, who himself persecuted the people of God, until he was converted by the light from on high.

It will be well, more in explanation than in excuse of after events, to begin by saying a few words about my youth, which was by no means a happy one.

I was born in the year of grace, 1559, the second year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, on St. John Baptist's day; on the very day, observe, fixed by Parliament for the obrogation of the Mass, "the idolatrous" mass, as it was termed, throughout England; the adoption of the new liturgy or divine service as appointed by the Queen, being then made compulsory. I need not say whether that day was to be considered fortunate or unfortunate, "dies fastus" or "nefastus!" My unhappy parents, on whose souls may God have mercy, had been schismatics under Henry VIII., reformed under Edward VI., Catholics under Mary; consequently under Elizabeth they conformed to the new regulations. In this respect they acted like the majority of the English nobles, and it is to be hoped that they did not fully know what they were doing. I was baptized according to the new ritual for the pastor of my native place in Kent had chosen to conform, in order to escape the heavy fines of imprisonment which were the penalty of disobedience, and the name of Francis was given me. I rejoice to think that our Holy Father of Assisi took me under his protection, although I was not named after him, but after my uncle, Sir Francis Walsingham, who had been a fellow student with my father at King's College, Cambridge, and married his sister, my aunt. My father had also married Walsingham's only sister, so the connection was twofold.

When I was about four years old, my parents were both carried off, within a few days of one another, by an epidemic that visited our home in Kent. It was a great consolation to me to know that a faithful servant fetched one of the old priests to tend on their death bed, for I have every reason to hope that they made their peace with God before quitting this life. My education was confided by my Uncle Walsingham, who was also my guardian, to a stern Calvinist, who early infused into my youthful mind a profound hatred of the Pope and of the Catholic Church. I heard the Holy Father designated as Antichrist, the Cardinals and Bishops as a brood of devils; while priests were called ministers of Basil, and the Church of Rome herself was denominated the barlot of Babylon. I too, in my ignorance, took these names upon my lips, for which may God forgive me! My teacher did not scruple to apply these and other yet more opprobrious epithets to Dr. Martin Luther, to Zwingli, to the Anglican bishops, to every one, in fact, whose tenets were not precisely those of the Genevan Apostle. But his fiercest invectives were reserved for the late Queen Mary, whom he called by the foulest names. During her reign some of his relatives or friends had perished at the stake on account of their obstinate adherence to the Calvinistic heresy. Thus he continued to fill my youthful imagination with darksome images, and my heart with antipathy and detestation towards everything Catholic, until I began to think the Christian religion was a religion not of love but of hatred. Another object of his special aversion was the Queen of Scots, on account of the stand she had made against John Knox and the Scottish Reformers; he rejoiced when she fell into Elizabeth's hands, and was by her placed in captivity.

That was in the summer of 1568; I yet remember the day when the tidings reached us in Kent, for the honor of the joyous event I had a whole holiday given me, a most unheard-of privilege.

After I had left this tutor, whose name charity forbids me to mention, and in whose heart I pray the seed of grace may be sown in return for the evil he implanted in mine, I was sent to King's College, Cambridge, where my father and uncle had been. Whilst there I did not hear the same vehement abuse of the Catholic Church, though I heard little said in her favor. The ideas, however, which my tutor had led me to form of the Anglican Establishment and bishops appointed by Elizabeth, were greatly modified and altered. I considered it to be a Christian and true church, although for myself I still cling to what appeared to me a purer and better creed than that of the Puritans, who had been so called because they had purged away all the terrors of Popery. I passed through the usual course of classical study without distinguishing myself in any way, and was then placed by my uncle with a berrister in the Temple to study civil law. Somewhat later I was sent to Paris, more perhaps with a view of learning the French language, than for the sake of attending the lectures on jurisprudence at the University. Whilst I was there my uncle obtained for me the post of secretary to the English ambassador, one which he himself had formerly filled, and I began to tread the smooth and slippery paths of diplomacy.

I cannot say that my residence in Paris tended to give me the better opinion of the Catholic Church. Henry III., who was then upon the throne, was a slave to his passions; his mother, the famous Catherine de Medici, did not do her religion much good, and the Court imitated the royal example only too faithfully. To this was added the fierce hatred against the Huguenots, which was intensified by the war and by the massacre of St. Bartholemew. I used to attend a Calvinistic conventicle, where the forcible language employed by the preachers recalled the utterances of my tutor in early days. We had orders from Elizabeth through Lord Burghley, to foment by every means in our power the religious strife in France, as well as the insurrection in the Netherlands, since England had nothing to fear, while they lasted, from the two great Catholic powers of which she stood in dread. I was then initiated into not a few intrigues and underhand practices. Only on the day when all secrets are revealed, will it be made known to what expedients the politician will resort for the purpose of attaining the end he has in view. And yet the very persons who acted in this manner, reproached the Jesuits with taking it as their principle, that the end justifies the means!

When the Duke d'Alencon, one of the King's brothers, was in treaty for Elizabeth's hand, and travelled to London with a grand retinue. I was chosen to accompany him. The Duke was twenty four years old, the Queen twice his age; and I confess I blushed for my Sovereign when I saw her behaving like a young maiden towards her youthful suitor. But my uncle Walsingham explained to me that the marriage of the Queen to a French Prince was expedient as the only means of countervailing the power of Spain, which was increased by an alliance with Portugal. I was present at the banquet which the Lord Treasurer gave at Burghley House on the 30th of April, 1571, in honor of the distinguished guest.

That day was a memorable one for me, because I then for the first time saw Judith Cecil, Lord Burghley's daughter, who later on, in the Providence of God was to exercise a most beneficial influence over me. My uncle directed my attention to this rich heiress. My fortune, he told me, was not equal to my birth, and he would not have much to bequeath to me, as he had not amassed wealth in the service of his sovereign. His colleague, Burghley, on the contrary, had been enriched by the acquisition of large estates on the confiscation of the church property. Of course, the number of aspirants for the hand of his daughter was not small, but that must not deter me from attempting to win the prize, as he saw no reason why I should not be successful. In fact, my grave and sedate manner might perchance prove an attraction to the girl, whose own demeanor was quiet and reserved. Nothing moreover would give him greater satisfaction than the match.

Walsingham's wish was tantamount to a command for me. But when once I had seen the lovely maiden, I needed no urging on his part to induce me to approach her. During my presence in London I often had occasion to go to Lord Burghley's house on official business, and thus the opportunity was afforded me of seeing his daughter at a time when she was not surrounded with a crowd of admirers. Our conversation generally turned upon serious topics, often questions of a religious and philosophical nature were discussed by us. Her clear intelligence detected the inconsistency involved in Calvin's terrible doctrine of predestination; she was the first to point it out to me. In vain did I seek to find a flaw in her reasoning; the doctrine of free will, which she expounded to me, appeared far more just and right; but how astonished I was, when, at a subsequent period, I discovered that the arguments she used were in accordance with the teachings of the Catholic Church which I held in such horror! It was after my return to Paris that I found this out, and I immediately wrote to Judith Cecil, informing her that her views on the subject of predestination were those held by the Papists, and warning her lest she should be ensnared by them to her eternal destruction. This was not the only theological love letter I addressed to her, and her answers to them were such as would have taxed a cleverer hand than mine to refute.

In the meantime we were not idle at the embassy. Through the reports of spies it had become known to us that the Duke of Guise was planning an invasion of England, in view of liberating Mary Stuart, to whom he was related, placing her upon the throne of England, which belonged to her by right, and reestablishing the Catholic religion by force of arms. In imagination I saw the fires of Smithfield kindled, of which I had been told in my childhood, and I knew that the victims would be taken from those whom I counted my best friends. We therefore made every exertion to avert the catastrophe. I was despatched in all haste to London. In consequence of the information I gave, Francis Throgmorton's house was searched, and in it the whole plan of the invasion was discovered. After that the Queen received me very graciously, and Lord Burghley distinguished me with so many marks of his favor that I was generally regarded as his future son-in-law, and more so, because his daughter made no secret of her liking for me. This, together with the conviction that I had been the means of unmasking traitors to their country, prevented me from grieving, as I should otherwise have done, over the bloodshed that followed the discovery of the plot. Unfortunately, a considerable number of innocent priests were sacrificed on that occasion, whose blood may God not lay to my charge.

The Spanish ambassador, Don Bernardino de Mendoza was also implicated in the plot; he was compelled to leave London at once. The King of Spain appointed him to the post of ambassador in Paris, and it was natural to suppose that he would lose no opportunity of revenging himself on Elizabeth and Burghley for his abrupt and ignominious dismissal. My uncle gave me instructions to watch Mendoza narrowly, and sent over some of his most experienced spies to work under my orders. Before long we got wind of a new design, of which, as it appeared, the King of Spain was the originator. This was hardly to be wondered at for Elizabeth had sent forces under the command of Leicester to aid the insurgents in the Netherlands, and the English fleet under Sir Francis Drake was laying waste the coast of Galicia and the Spanish colonies in the West Indies. But we were unable to learn anything further about this design, until the wretched apostate Gifford came to our help. About this man a few words must now be said, which will lead up to the subject of Babington's conspiracy.

LIFE.

The poet's exclamation: "O Life! I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong; to rise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns.

Especially true of babies. Minard's Liniment cures Burns, etc.

The King's Ballad.

Hark! a strain of music throbbing thro' the roar of London town;

O the golden music glancing thro' the streets of London town: 'Tis a frolic summer tune, 'Tis a madrigal of June,—

Hark, the turning wheels are humming And the iron hooves are drumming:

Merry men! the King is coming, coming, coming for his crown!

After war and winter sadness, gentle peace and greenlet gladness: Merry men, your King is coming, coming, coming for his crown,—

Down the leafy paths of spring, Cometh Summer and the King; Happy Isle, don gray apparel and make ready for your King,—

Weaving festal threads of glory thro' the web of England's story: Let thy heart be glad and sing! Let thy merry joy-bells swing! Let thine orchards toss their blossoms and thy mossy greenwoods ring,—

For the Spring brings in the Summer, and the Summer brings the King.

To the dear green shores of England beats the golden summer sea;—

O the many scattered Englands, bosomed on th' eternal sea! And the ships sail out for home Thro' the rustling fields of foam, While the four great winds run climbing

To our azure heavens, chiming From afar across the oceans, English voices with our glee;—

Voice of Himalayan eyry, scorching plain and snow-swept prairie, Voice of bivouac, ranch and shanty chiming sweetly with our glee,—

Homing straight to England's Spring, Wafting homage to their King: Happy Realm, these sons have challenged bitter death for Home and King,—

Weaving deathless strands of glory thro' the web of England's story:

Let the scattered Britains sing! Let the towers and steeples swing!

Let the ships strike home to England and the sounding oceans ring,—

For the Spring brings in the Summer, and the Summer brings the King.

Thro' the roaring streets of London with his princes he will ride;

With his lords from all the Britains will the King of England ride;

Thro' the gray, historic streets Where the heart of Britain beats, Where the looms of labor thunder, Where we trample idlesse under, He will pass from out the Abbey with his Lady at his side;

From the solemn high oblation, to the welcome of the nation,

With an antique pageant splendid and his Lady at his side; From the Blessing from above, To the roar of London's love;—

Happy Town, fling off thy travail and run out to meet thy King, On thy roofs and towers hoary, set the flag of England's glory, Bid thy children dance and sing!

Let thy steeples rock and swing! While the walls hand out their banners and the long-drawn highways ring,

For the Spring brings in the Summer, and the Summer brings the King.
