

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS

Cannot be cured with ordinary soothing syrups. The disease must be attacked at the root to eradicate the irritation of the lungs, heal the wounds and strengthen the respiratory organs.

MATHEU'S SYRUP of Tar and Cod Liver Oil and other Medicinal Extracts marks it amongst all other remedies as the true specific for the disease of the throat, the bronchial tubes and the lungs. Here are a few conclusive proofs:

CHAPTER I. A Letter and an Answer.

"Blooming Meadows, Greenbrier Co., W. Va., August 17th, 189—

"DEAREST BROTHER: Don't you think you can come to our county fair? It is only ten days off now, and they say it will be splendid! We are all going—that is, Aunt Jill says that I sha'n't go, that I must have a chicken money to buy my winter cloak—but Uncle Jack says if I will help to gather in the apples and save him the price of an extra hand, I may have money enough to go. I shall do it, for I rather be out in the sunshine and air, gathering in the fragrant fruit, than perspiring in the hot kitchen, helping Aunt Jill with the pickles and preserves, and sneered at by that red-headed Vida Halliburton, because I have to work and she can play lady on her little income.

"Oh, dear, dear, what a cross it is to be a poor orphan girl! We little thought, dear Ed, five years ago, when we were so happy, you and I, here on the dear old farm, with papa and mama, that both would die so soon of that cruel fever, and that Uncle Jack would have to carry on the farm and pay off the mortgage as our guardian, while you went off to the city to earn money to help. It was a cruel blow, but all the harder to bear since aunt's cousin, Vida Halliburton, came here to live. She is spiteful, and she hates me—just I think, because her hair is red and straight, while mine is brown and curly. I know she sets Aunt Jill against me by cunning little arts, and it is cruel, for Vida has a better time than I have. She has an income, and can pay her board, while I must work for all I get. Vida is going to ride at the fair, too—there's a prize of a beautiful saddle offered for the best lady rider, you know—so Vida is going to try for the prize. Some other girls will work for all I get.

Sluggish Liver Action

Causes indigestion, constipation and bilious headache—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills the cure. "Sluggish liver has been my trouble," writes Mrs. I. P. Smith, Paris, Ont., "and I have been greatly benefited by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I have taken medicines from several good doctors, but none ever did me the same amount of good as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I could not keep up and do my work if I did not use these pills when the bilious spells come on, and I have recommended them to many."

Dr. Chase's medicines were about the only kind that came into my father's house 40 or 50 years ago, and they were always satisfactory. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are prompt, definite and direct in their action on the liver, kidneys and bowels, and are therefore the most effective treatment obtainable for biliousness, indigestion and constipation. 25 cents a box, 2 for $1.00, at all dealers, or Edmanoch, Bates & Co., Toronto.

"He drew rein, and shouted hoarsely."

"I heard the terrible news, Miss Vida!"

"No; what is it?" and she flew down to the gate, alert with curiosity.

"The man's face was pale with excitement through its brown freckles, as he blurted out:

"There's a girl found dead in the woods!"

Vida recoiled, her eyes wide with horror.

"Found dead? Where?" she cried wildly.

"In the 'Prentiss' woods—shot through the heart. It's a dreadful sight, Miss Vida."

"Who is it?"

"A stranger. Don't belong in these parts at all. Mighty pretty she was, too. But I must hurry on. They want me to town for the 'horrities.'"

CHAPTER II. "FOUND DEAD!"

"What a glorious summer morning! Will Stephen Belmont come to-day, I wonder?" exclaimed Miss Halliburton as she came out on the long porch fronting the river, and gazing up and down the country road, straining her blue eyes for a passing sight of a handsome horseman riding up to the gate.

Blooming Meadows was one of the prettiest farms on the picturesque Greenbrier River.

"The house was a ten-roomed, two-story edifice, built of the heavy brown stone so abundantly quarried in West Virginia. The design was colonial, with the usual stately pillared porch. It fronted on the river, standing in a beautiful grove of towering oaks, its fertile acres of stock and farming lands stretching far backward into the gentle slope of green wooded hills. Across the river loomed stately cliffs, white in the blinding sunshine and crowned by wooded heights of mountain ranges outlined against the deep blue sky as far as eye could reach, falling the heart with a sense of sublimity.

Vida Halliburton was tall and handsome in an imposing fashion, with the form of a Juno, and regular features set off by the dazzling fair complexion that goes with blue eyes and vivid auburn hair. She was a beauty of a type peculiarly her own, and possessed that select colors that would not quarrel with her fiery locks. She was but seldom seen in anything but black or white, and in these she appeared to the best advantage.

"This morning she was at her best in a gown of soft white mull, with knots of narrow black velvet, her mass of rich auburn tresses parted, and waving off her dazzling white forehead and wound in a heavy braid at the back.

"Her bosom swelled with ambition as she thought:

The Evening Chit-Chat

Two men looked out from prison bars; One saw mud, another stars.

Robert Louis Stevenson.

Isn't it an interesting thought to realize how much the subjective element enters into our vision?

If other words, what a different world each and every one of us sees.

And I don't refer only to the different worlds of the man who sees mud and the man who sees stars, the man who sees clouds and the man who sees sunshine, but to the fact that no two people ever see the same world in any sense.

For instance, three people—two men and a woman—walk down the street together.

One man is interested in architecture. He is thinking of building a house. So he sees all the houses on the street. He notes the French roof of one, the comfortable bay windows of another, places a third in the Queen Anne period, and approves the long French windows of a fourth.

The other man is interested in automobiles. He notices the makes of all that pass, calculates their horsepower, mentally criticises the wind shield of one and admires the color scheme of another.

The woman sees the people they pass, gets an idea for her evening hat from the first woman, thinks the man who comes next is a Gibson type and looks rather like her beloved Mr. Gillette, wonders why on earth the next woman wears her hair so unbecomingly, is so glad she doesn't have to live with that cross-looking man, and screws her head way round for a last look at that duck of a baby in the white kitty cap.

One and the same street. And yet, what different things those three people saw—and didn't see—as they passed down it.

And then there is the element of subjective vision even in the way different people see the same person or object.

My dog, for instance (I realize that he is neither an object nor a person, but he is so near the second that I feel justified in using him for an example) may be homely and ungainly to other people, but to me he is a handsome dog because I see a light in his eyes and an intelligence in his gaze which the stranger misses.

It may be partly that the light and the intelligence leap up to greet me and shade it from the stranger, but they are also partly subjective, I think.

The old apple tree in your yard that you climbed and played house in and fell out of as a child must look different to you than it does to the man who comes to trim it.

The living room that you have gradually added to and saved for and enriched with the gifts and purchases of years must look a very different place to you than it does to the casual caller.

We are apt to think we see merely what is before us, and to liken our eyes to photographic apparatus.

As a matter of fact, we see what is within us as much as what is without, and our eyes are far more like the artist who picks and chooses and concentrates the light on one object and shades it from the other, than the camera, which must represent everything before it impartially.

Red Cross

Declined a 2nd Round.

The Judge of a Western Court decided a point adversely to a certain lawyer. The lawyer was stubborn and insisted that the Judge was wrong.

"I tell you that I'm right!" yelled the judge, with flashing eyes.

"I tell you that you are not!" retorted the counsel.

"Crier!" yelled the judge, "I adjourn the court for ten minutes."

He pitched into the counsel, and after a sharp fight placed him hors de combat, after which business was resumed. But it was not long before another misunderstanding arose.

"Crier!" yelled the judge, "we will adjourn this time for twenty minutes."

"Never mind, Judge," cried the counsel; "keep on your coat—the point is yielded. My thumb's out of joint and I've sprained my shoulder."

PREMATURE BURIAL.

Stilled Cries From a Girl's Grave.

Salonica, Turkey, July 26.—The only daughter of a Bulgarian family at Uskub, after alling some time, was found hanged recently, and her parents thinking her dead, had her buried, in accordance with local customs, the same evening.

A few hours afterwards a policeman passing the cemetery heard stifled cries from the newly made grave. He ran to the parents' house, and a large number of townspeople attended the examination, only to find that the girl had died a few minutes previously from suffocation.

The Lady Napier is due here from Sydney with coal to Crosbie & Co.

30 Witnesses.

To be Summoned in Dynamite Trial.

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 9.—The prosecution in the trial of the McNaras, the alleged dynamiters, will summon, it is said, about 150 witnesses and the defence fully as many.

Witnesses are to be sent to all parts of the country to summon persons named as witnesses. The detectives who were employed by the District Attorney's office are not having the success in locating those who were wanted as the women detectives.

One young woman alone served 25 subpoenas in San Francisco and vicinity, where it is said the men could find none of the persons wanted.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, indigestion, loss of appetite, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attached under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or kava-kava, or habit-forming drugs, and is made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medicinal forest plants. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Household Notes.

A cement made by adding a teaspoonful of glycerine to a stiff glue is a great convenience in the kitchen, and is especially good for fastening leather, paper or wood to metal.

Dampers should be placed in all pipes leading from heaters and kept closed in summer, as air from the furnace should not be allowed to flow into the house when the fire is out.

Cookies put into an earthen jar lined with a clean cloth, while they are still hot and kept covered close will be much more meltingly and crumbly than if they are allowed to cool in the air.

The label on a glass jar will keep clean and will stick longer if painted on the inside. Of course this applies only where dry materials are stored in the jar, such as seeds, rice, tapioca, etc.

If the house is infested with ants, dip a sponge into sweetened water and lay it where they can get at it. They will soon cluster upon it, when the sponge should be dipped into hot water.

A dry rubber sponge is excellent for cleaning woollen materials.

They should be laid flat and the sponge swept over them briskly, care being taken always to rub the wrong side of the nap.

A mixture of finely powdered fuller's earth and alum is excellent for cleaning white goods. It should be rubbed in well, then brushed off, and the clothes sprinkled with dry bran and whitening.

If the gas stove is not equipped with a broiler, try heating a pan piping hot. Put the steak into this without greasing, and turn as soon as it is seared on the bottom, and keep turning until the meat is done.

The most practical use for old corks is to make a low fire burn up. Empty spools also make good kindling, and if these things are saved it will be surprising how many will accumulate in the average household.

To clean a burned kettle, turn out the burned contents, but do not fill with water. Set it aside to cool, and then place in it a handful of washing soda and water and let the solution boil for an hour or more.

Patent leather shoes should be carefully wiped off with a soft cloth when they are removed, and then a few drops of olive oil should be rubbed in.

Hay Fork Ran Through His Foot

But Able to Work the Second Day

Mr. V. Thorpe, of Saskatoon, Sask., was saved much suffering by Douglas's Egyptian Liniment. He says: "My hay fork ran through my foot. I applied Douglas's Egyptian Liniment freely as soon as possible and kept a bandage wet with the liniment over the wound. On the second day I was able to work again and was surprised how quickly the wound healed."

"Last summer I suffered greatly from boils having as many as 14 at one time. On the advice of a friend I tried your liniment. The boils disappeared as if by magic, and I have since since." "Our liniment is undoubtedly the finest thing of the kind I have ever used."

It is really surprising how quickly and cleanly a wound heals when it is treated with Douglas's Egyptian Liniment. Boils, pimples, hemorrhoids, barber's itch and all skin affections of this kind disappear before it like magic, and sores, cuts, splits and similar troubles in hoises.

Get a bottle from your druggist and keep it handy. Send all orders. Free sample on request. Douglas & Co., Niagara, Ont.

Fares for Cabmen.

The scale of charges, which we understand were agreed to by a body of cabmen, will form a basis of discussion between them and the City Council. We do not presume at this stage to offer an opinion. Cabmen are entitled to fair treatment, and so are the public, and it is the interests of the public which have been committed to the charge of the City Council by the Legislature. But due regard must be paid to the heavy cost of outlay and upkeep under which cabmen labour. Horse flesh is dear, so are carriages and stables and feed, and the city and its suburbs are hilly and trying to horses, so that cabmen are forced to keep two or three horses in order to be constantly ready for hire. The powers under which the City Council will act were conferred last session and extend to the hiring of cabs within a twelve mile limit of the City Hall.

Fisherman Missing.

Wilfred Jones, a bank fisherman of Lunenburg, who was on account of illness sent home from his vessel by the captain at Cape Broyle on Monday last, is reported missing. He was to leave here by the express for home last evening at 6, but he did not turn up at the station. He was staying at the S. A. Food Depot with another fisherman named Tennant, and as he did not see him since yesterday morning, he got uneasy. Last night an S. A. officer called at the Police Station and reported that the man was missing.

Mob Try to Rescue Prisoners.

Soldiers Fire and Kill One Man and Wound Many.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LIVERPOOL, To-Day.
A reign of terror excited here last night. Troops are pouring into the city with the object of putting down disorder. A special guard was detailed to protect the landing stage of the transatlantic steamers, which it is asserted, the rioters had planned to destroy by fire. Five prison vans, escorted by Hussars, which were carrying riot prisoners from the Police Court to Waltham Jail, were attacked by three thousand members of the roughest class in Vauxhall street, who tried to rescue the prisoners. The mob attacked the soldiers with missiles of every description. Defending themselves the Hussars fired. First blanks were used, then ball cartridges. One man was killed and many were wounded. The troops then charged the mob with drawn sabres and cleared the street. So daring were the rioters that one of them tried to unhorse an officer who was obliged to use a revolver, wounding the man. Another, but less serious affair, in which the troops were again compelled to fire, took place on Bow Street. Only a few persons were wounded here. In each case the troops were ordered to fire. Many of their number had faces streaming with blood from injuries caused by stones and bottles, thrown by rioters. Before enforcing a general strike order, the strike leaders have decided to allow the railroad companies 24 hours to agree to meet representatives of the employees to discuss grievances.

Constitutional

Premier Asquith to Mr. Balfour Speech

London, Aug. 8.—The following is the complete text of the reply of Premier Asquith to Mr. Balfour's speech in moving the vote of censure in the House of Commons, yesterday, upon the government's course on the Veto Bill. He said:—Although there was no excessive kindness in the tone of Mr. Balfour's speech my first duty is to render him on behalf of the government and its supporters our most grateful acknowledgement of this opportunity motion. It is everything we wanted, for, on the one hand it gives representatives of the government an opportunity for stating in explicit and clear terms, and to emphasize whether that advice truly reflects the opinion and judgment of the chosen representatives of the people. Mr. Balfour has complained that I did not give him in support of what was apparently a hypothetical question, but I am sure, the materials in advance from which he could ascertain whether his hypothesis was well founded or not, but the only point he raised in his motion is this: whether under the circumstances in which we stand with the Veto Bill twice approved in principle, once approved in all its details by the electors, passed through the House of Commons by a comfortable and overwhelming majority and now met in the House of Lords by so-called amendments which are really changes, fundamental in character and fatal to its purpose, whether it is not the constitutional duty of ministers of the crown to advise the crown if the Lords refuse to give way to use its prerogative of creation in order to carry out the will of the people. Mr. Balfour asked me when the advice was given. It was given in regard to the existing situation when that situation had risen so that no other constitutional outlet was possible in reference to that situation. It is by a review of that situation, how it arose and what it involves, that the question must be answered as to whether or not it is the duty of ministers of the crown to advise the crown to use its prerogative of creation in order to carry out the will of the people. I have so much confidence in these medicines that I have recommended them to dozens of my friends.

Neuralgia and Sciatica

Caused great suffering for 25 years. Nothing effective until Dr. Chase's Medicines were used.
"It affords me pleasure to speak favorably of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills," writes Mr. W. T. Collins, Morpeth, Ont. "I had been a sufferer for 25 years from sciatica, lumbago and neuralgia and tried nearly all the remedies advertised without one particle of benefit until I began the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. Before I had finished two boxes of the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills I noticed considerable benefit in my condition. I have so much confidence in these medicines that I have recommended them to dozens of my friends."
In severe cases of this nature the combined use of these medicines brings results which are both surprising and satisfactory. Constitutional Crisis.

Premier Asquith's Reply to Mr. Balfour's Speech.

London, Aug. 8.—The following is the complete text of the reply of Premier Asquith to Mr. Balfour's speech in moving the vote of censure in the House of Commons, yesterday, upon the government's course on the Veto Bill. He said:—Although there was no excessive kindness in the tone of Mr. Balfour's speech my first duty is to tender him on behalf of the government and its supporters our most grateful acknowledgement of this opportune motion. It is everything we wanted, for, on the one hand it gives representatives of the government an opportunity such as no discussion upon the Lords amendment could afford to state to the country with clearness and precision the grounds for the advice tendered to the crown. On the other hand, it gives to us the opportunity for stating with equal clearness, and to emphasize whether that advice truly reflects the opinion and judgment of the chosen representatives of the people. Mr. Balfour has complained that I did not give him in support of what was apparently a hypothetical vote of censure, the materials in advance from which he could ascertain whether his hypothesis was well founded or not, but the only point he raised in his motion is this: whether under the circumstances in which we stand with the Veto Bill twice approved in principle, once approved in all its details by the electors, passed through the House of Commons by continuous and overwhelming majorities and now in the House of Lords by so-called amendments which are really changes, fundamental in character and fatal to its purpose, whether it is not the constitutional duty of ministers of the crown to advise the crown if the Lords refuse to give way, to use its prerogative of creation in order to carry out the will of the people.

Mr. Balfour asked me when the advice was given. It was given in regard to the existing situation when that situation had risen so that no other constitutional outlet was possible in reference to that situation. It is by a review of that situation, how it arose and what it involves, that the question must be answered as to

Caused great suffering for 25 years. Nothing effective until Dr. Chase's Medicines were Used. "It affords me pleasure to speak favorably of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills," writes Mr. W. T. Collins, Morpeth, Ont. "I had been a sufferer for 25 years from sciatica, lumbago and neuralgia and tried nearly all the remedies advertised without one particle of benefit until I began the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. Before I had finished two boxes of the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills I noticed considerable benefit in my condition. I have so much confidence in these medicines that I have recommended them to dozens of my friends. In severe cases of this nature the combined use of these medicines brings results which are both surprising and satisfactory. whether or not the advice was warranted and justified, but when I say that that advice was tendered in view of existing circumstances it must clearly be understood that I do not mean in the least to convey that there had not been anxious communications as events developed between the Sovereign and his ministers on the subject. As it is desirable that there should be no misunderstandings over a perfectly simple and correct transaction, I may be allowed to say that at the King's strong desire, and there were of course, with his expressed permission, I am able to disclose communications which hitherto have been treated both by the King and his ministers as confidential. To make matters clear I must go back to the ninth of April, 1910, when the so-called Veto resolutions, approved by large majorities in the Commons and the Parliament bill founded thereon, had been introduced. King Edward was then on the throne. I ask the House to remember that there was then every reason to believe that his life and reign would be prolonged. It was notorious that our resolutions, carried in the House of Commons, and which were shortly to come before the House of Lords, would be laid aside or rejected there. The majority inside and outside this house were beginning to ask, not unnaturally, whether the election just held was to be retired to nullity and matters again to result in a future deadlock. It was in these circumstances that on the 26th of April, 1910, after careful consultation with my colleagues in language approved by them and communicated to the King who was abroad, that I issued these words in the House of Commons. "If the Lords failed to accept our policy and consider it as formally presented, then we shall feel it our duty to immediately render advice to the crown regarding the steps which will have to be taken, if the policy is to receive statutory effect in this parliament. What the precise terms of that advice may be of course it would not be right for me to say, but, if we do find ourselves in the position of receiving the answer that statutory effect shall be given to it by this parliament, we shall then either resign or recommend dissolution. Here came the important words "Let me add this, that in no case will we recommend dissolution except on such conditions that will secure that in the new parliament the judgment of the people, as expressed at the election, will be carried into law. That is the very plain language which represents the deliberate policy of the government and was so understood and accepted at the time, not only by our friends but by our antagonists. That policy was carried by me to the country and that is the only observation I make in reply to what, I think, was the unhappy reference of Mr. Balfour to the new King. That policy was announced by me as head of the government while I was still King Edward's minister. Within a month I knew his reign was prematurely and most unexpectedly ended. A political truce followed and for the best part of the six months since, honest, continuous, well inspired endeavour was made by the leading representatives of both parties in the state to arrive at a settlement agreement. That experiment finally broke down in the early part of November. We then reverted to the situation as it stood in April. The first question we as ministers had to determine was whether we should continue in the then existing parliament, or advise dissolution, having regard in both cases to my declaration of the preceding year.

Two Months on Barren Rock.

Two Starving and Ragged Sailors Rescued. Valdez, Alaska, Aug. 8.—Attracted by signals of distress from Bardwell Island, a barren rock near the entrance to Resurrection Bay, the steamship Bertha on August 2nd sent out a small boat and took off two ragged and starving men, Charles Alexander and Alvin Anderson. The men had been on the island for two months, and would have perished but for the coming of the Bertha. News of the rescue reached here to-day.

The men sailed from Kodiak, May 11, in a dory, on a prospecting voyage. About June 1st a storm upset their craft off Bardwell Island, and their provisions and outfit were lost in the sea. They managed to get ashore, but with practically nothing but their clothing. The men, who had a few matches, lived for a month on mussels, clams, young gulls, seaweed and wild herbs, which they cooked. After their matches gave out about July 1st, they ate their food raw. Two vessels passed without noticing their signals of distress.

Indigestion & Dyspepsia

In all its Forms Can be Cured. It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: "Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headache, I feel too tired to do anything. I have no heart to exert myself, and at times I care for nothing I often have a pain in the pit of the stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion." I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed, and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden. Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons to be suffering like that when it is in their power to get cured by taking a bottle of Dr. Stafford's Prescription A. A sure cure for persons afflicted with stomach troubles. It can be obtained at Triumph of the Monoplane.

The Daily Mail £10,000 prize for the 1,000 miles flight round Great Britain in a flying machine had been won by Lieut. Jean Conneau, of the French Navy, who uses the name "Beaumont."

What it Means.

The Mail, writing on this great feat, called it "the greatest flying race that the world has yet seen, and the most significant in its lessons to mankind." "Three names stand out preeminent from this historic contest—those of M. "Beaumont," M. Bleriot, the maker of M. "Beaumont's" monoplane; and M. Vedrines. When the second Daily Mail prize of £10,000 was offered more than a year ago for a flight of 1,000 miles round Great Britain, under conditions which imposed the most stringent test of reliability of the flying machine, sceptics declared that the feat demanded the "impossible." They have their answer to-day. The "impossible" has been accomplished. Not one airman but two have covered the distance in less than twenty-four hours of actual flying time, and less than an hour parted them at the finish. Not a single one of the marked parts in either of their machines was replaced. "The two champions of the air had to endure every vicissitude of weather in the gorges of the Pentlands and over the wild uplands of the Lake mountains they drove their roaring machines unflinchingly through sleet and thunderstorm and torrential rain. They descended where they alighted without mishap. They rose again as easily and as lightly as birds. They flew to schedule time, and both fulfilled their determination to be at Brooklands. If this does not mark the final triumph of the aeroplane what fresh evidence of its power is needed? Can there be clearer proof of its inestimable value as a skilled hands for naval and military service and of its countless possibilities in its application to theilder uses of life? "Not the least noticeable feature of the contest has been the entire absence of injury to competitors or gas of life. The stringent conditions have here proved of the greatest value. It may be said, of course, that only two of the seventeen representatives of seven nations who left Brooklands on July 22 fought their way through to the goal, and that all the others dropped out of the race soon trouble to their machines; but the early accounts of motor racing re studied it will be seen that the motor car in its youth was even less reliable than the aeroplane of to-day. Nothing can conceal the fact that man has gained a new faculty, a new power, and has added a new realm to his scores of triumph. A fresh revolution, the greatest conceivable, in human transit is upon the world—is, indeed, fast becoming accomplished. Vital it is for us as a nation to gird up our loins and acknowledge the truth that we are being left behind in this new age and in his new art which may transform our own and the world's future history. We have the pluck; we must see whether that we, have the science and skill."

Woman Sentenced

To Don Bloomers and Join Street Workers. Iola, Kansas, Aug. 9.—Iola city officials, with the exception of municipal Judge Smeltzer, are up in arms, because a woman had been sentenced to don a pair of bloomers and join the street gang from the city jail. Judge Smeltzer, sentenced Mrs. Ella Reese to the street gang, and ordered that the city officials provide her with the bloomers. Street Commissioner Glynn refused to have a woman in the chain gang. Mrs. Reese did not go to work breaking rock or sweeping the streets to-day, because the bloomers had not been provided, and the officials say they will not allow the woman to carry out the sentence imposed upon her.

Mother of Battler Killed by Train.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 11.—Mrs. Ida Nelson, mother of "Battling" Nelson, the pugilist, was killed by a fast train on the Wabash R. R. at Burnham Hills, late yesterday. Mrs. Nelson was returning from a shopping trip to Hammond, Ind. She was accompanied by Annie Martin, a friend, and had just alighted from a Lake Shore and Michigan Southern train at the Burnham station. Mrs. Nelson waited for a freight train to pass and then started to cross the tracks. She apparently did not see or hear the mail train. Mrs. Martin narrowly escaped death in a vain effort to save Mrs. Nelson. Mrs. Nelson was 52 years of age. "Battling" Nelson and a brother, Arthur Nelson, are in Oregon on a vacation trip.

LONDON, Aug. 15.
Liverpool, the storm centre of the strike which is menacing the trade of Britain, was under arms to-day. In addition to the city police force, there were reinforcements from surrounding cities. Troops—infantry and cavalry—under General McKinnon-Wood are quartered in the city. The troops, it was shown during the early morning riots, were prepared to back up the police with their arms in maintaining order. Some troops rescued a prisoner from the police, and the reserves were hurriedly called out, but could not control the mob which vented its fury by wrecking the shops in the neighborhood. Two hundred soldiers were then brought to the scene, but were made targets for bricks, bottles and other missiles. Several soldiers and policemen received wounds. An order was given the soldiers to charge the mob with bayonets, and when this failed to clear the streets, the officer commanding gave the order to the soldiers to fire in the air. Two volleys were fired which dispersed the mob. Numbers of the rioters were wounded in the bayonet charges, but no person was hurt by the bullets. Many of the rioters were arrested. This afternoon matters are quieter.

The response to a midnight appeal by the strikers' committee of Liverpool, for a general strike of all transport workers, including railway men, was not unanimous. Trucks continue to move in the streets under guard, while small forces are at work about some docks. The Cunard steamer Coronia, due to sail from Liverpool to New York, with other liners, is still in the stream and unable to get away. There is but little change in the situation here.

Before His Honour!
If variety be charming there should be a good deal of attraction in the programme presented by Manager Kieley at the Casino Theatre last night. The selection chosen was a one act satire on Bowery justice, entitled, "Before His Honour." Mr. Jack Rossley, as Judge Duffy, and Mr. Will Olio, as Officer O'Flannagan, drew from the situation all the laughter possible. Mr. J. J. O'Grady made a capital Lawyer Bum. Mr. L. C. Murphy, as the District Attorney, acted with a great deal of spirit; while Bonnie Rossley, as the girl thief, Mrs. Rossley, as the Bigamist, and Vivian Desamore, as Bridget McQuirk, all moved and spoke to admiration; the pas-de-sent of the latter being splendidly executed. For those who appreciate a highly imaginative drama there are three photo plays, while for lovers of simple folk song there are also delightful Irish ditties.

Two Killed in Bomb Explosion.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 11.—A black hand bomb was exploded in the crowded Italian colony on "Dago Hill" here early to-day, killing a man and a woman and more or less seriously injured fourteen other residents of a two story brick building, which was completely wrecked. The placing of the bomb followed the receipt last Friday and Saturday of two black hand letters by the owners of the building. The letters came from Brooklyn, N.Y., where the owner, Tony Romano, resided until seven months ago. A score of sleeping families were thrown from their beds when the explosion took place. Immediately after the explosion the building caught fire and it was with difficulty extinguished.

Rest a Necessity.

In an interesting and informing article on "The Physiology of Exercise and Rest," Professor F. S. Lee, of Columbia University, gives his readers some good advice. Amongst other things, Professor Lee says that "The healthy body is provided with great recuperative powers, and does not rapidly succumb to even excessive demands on its energy. But it should be allowed the proper condition for recuperation, and that condition is adequate rest." The writer puts his finger on the absolute and essential condition on which alone health can be maintained when he wrote the words "adequate rest." He goes on to strike a warning note. And every nerve specialist can give many a sad instance of the truth of his warning words: "There is danger when the fatigue of one-day's labor is not eliminated before the next day's work is begun. The effects may then be cumulative, the tissues may be in a continued state of depression, the end may be disastrous."

One Sailor in 251 Drowned.

Last year saw more lives of seamen and passengers lost by wreck of British ships than since 1905. A return gives the total of passengers lost as 146 compared with 117 in 1903 and 94 in 1908, but 275 in 1905. Of masters and seamen 669 were lost by crowding or wreck, which is one out of every 251 employed. The last perilous year for sailors was 1906, when one in every 341 was drowned.

Priests Rescued From Sinking Boat

Rockport, Me., Aug. 11.—Seven Redemptorist fathers from the Mission Church, Boston, were rescued yesterday by the life savers from the Gap Cove Station, after the power boat Diana, in which they were on their way to Bar Harbor, had been placed in a sinking condition by running on the southerly end of the Sandy Bay Breakwater. The boat was almost on the point of sinking when the party were rescued. The boat was owned by a woman and her passengers, brought up alongside and took them off. Laughingly they remarked they had been shipwrecked, without having wet their feet. The priests in the party were Rev. Thomas V. Twobler, Rev. Jas. Clark, Rev. Frank Passnacht, Rev. William Prager, Rev. Michael Gannon, Rev. Simon Grogan, a native of Quebec, and Rev. Henry Borgman.

New York, Aug. 8.—The Tammany corn eating contest is an annual event of the greatest importance on the New York east side. This year's contest, held on the porch of a Broome street saloon last night, was won by James Dugan, a cab driver, who ate fifty-seven separate and distinct ears, carrying off the 1911 championship and a purse of gold coins. Dugan's nearest competitor was eleven ears behind his record.

Rats Kill Elephants.

Hippopotamus, Too, Suffers From Attacks of Small Rodents.
In 1868 three of Hagenbeck's elephants, just brought from Africa, were attacked by rats, which ate through the wooden floor on which they (the elephants) stood and gnawed the animals' feet. All three died, no doubt from fright rather than from pain. Mr. Robinson, in quoting this story as "the most dreadful" apparently in his collection of anecdotes of elephants attacked by puny enemies, seems to be unaware that the same thing has happened in England. The first chronicled instance, we believe, belongs not to the Regent's Park Zoological Gardens, but to Clifton, and has been duly recorded by Frank Buckland. But there has been trouble in the London Gardens before now with rats attacking the three animals: the old hippopotamus Guy Pawkes was one of the sufferers.

Wedding Bells.
The marriage of Mr. Leonard C. Mews, of C. L. March Co., Ltd., and Miss Minnie Rabbits, of 208 Le-Marchant road, was solemnized at 2:30 last evening at Westey Church by Rev. F. R. Matthews, B.A. The bride wore a dress of cream embroidered net on cream satin and was attended by her cousin, Miss A. M. Rabbits, of Brigan, as bridesmaid, and Miss Helen Lodge as flower girl. Mr. Geo. Rabbits and Mr. Fred Burden attended the groom. The party were treated to a luncheon at the home of the bride's parents, afterwards driving to Mount Pearl where they took the train for Whitebourne. The presents were many and useful. The Speaker's Honor.
Full Apology by a Labour M. P.
Mr. Pointer, the Labour member for the Attercliffe division of Sheffield, apologized fully in the House of Commons recently for words used in a letter addressed to his constituents by which he had charged the Speaker with political partiality.

The letter suggested that if Labour, Irish, or Liberal members instead of Unionists had "shouted down" Mr. Asquith they would have been "named," and said the Speaker's "fallure was the outcome of a violent party feeling."

Mr. Pointer was invited by the Speaker yesterday to make a statement on a motion by Col. Lockwood that the letter was a libel and a breach of privilege.

He said he had felt very strongly that the Speaker ought to have taken action with regard to disorderly and insulting words which were used. "When I wrote the letter I attributed the Speaker's inaction to party partiality; I ought not to have done so. (General cheers.) I ought to have allowed my experience of the Speaker's impartiality to weigh more with me before coming to the conclusion I did."

"Without withdrawing any other part of the letter, I unreservedly withdraw the statement which charged the Speaker with having taken a partisan view of the matter, and I apologise for having made it. (Cheers.) I make that apology as fully and freely as I possibly can. Certain facts have been brought to my notice since which had I known them before, would have made it perfectly impossible for me to have written the statement I did."

The Speaker said he was quite ready to accept the apology so frankly and freshly offered. "I do not consider it fair comment, but I did rather feel that the imputation the hon. member had cast upon me did not come quite within that category. I am perfectly confident that my judgment has never for one instant been biased by any sense of partiality. (Loud general cheers.) In the circumstances I hope that Colonel Lockwood will not desire me to put the motion."

Colonel Lockwood fell in with the Speaker's suggestion, and the incident came to an end.

Uncle Walt
THE POET PHILOSOPHER.

The way I slept when I was young! My nerves were never then unstrung. I was asleep before my head had fairly touched my downy bed, and then I awoke a cheerful soul, and night seemed but two seconds long. At morning father climbed the stairs and childhood fondled me with elms and chairs, and pulled me from my humble bed and then he stood me on my head, and rolled me round upon the floor until I ceased to sleep and snore. And now that I am old and serene, the night seems longer than a year. I go to most and kick and toss, but slumber will not come across, or if it comes I have such dreams I rouse the neighbours with my screams. How often have I walked the floor, and envied youths who calmly snore! How often fallen over chairs, and tumbled down the cellar stairs! How often have I stubbed my toes, and barked my shins and bumped my nose, while roaming in the midnight gloom about my sleepless sleeping room! How happy are the drowsy boys! Of all the boons that youth enjoys, this trick of climbing into bed and sleeping like the sheeted dead is first and best, and old, tired men can never have it back again.

The New Welsh Nationalism

Mr. Hall Caine on the Investiture of the Prince and the Motive Which Lies Behind It.

The Daily Telegraph was fortunate in securing the most brilliant description of the scene in Carnarvon last Thursday, the scene which Mr. Balfour said was the most moving of all the historical ceremonials he had ever witnessed. It was from the pen of Mr. Hall Caine. Here are some of the glowing passages in his report—

"It was a drama—a drama with a great motive, and the motive has been the same as that of the great Welsh Renaissance, which is at once the most moving and the most momentous fact in modern Welsh life. The new Welsh nationalism—the nationalism that is both new and old, to permanent subjection? Oh, wild irony of history: on this spot of all others, this last seaward reach of the untamable regions of the Welsh home of the Welsh, that were reared to quell it, we celebrate to-day the crowning triumph not only of English Royalty and magnanimity, but of that unconquerable Welsh independence which our English Justinian had spent his strength to put down.

Act II.

"The second act of to-day's drama began, for some of us, this morning, when we made our way to the town's pavilion, where the Mayor of Carnarvon was giving a luncheon to his countrymen from all quarters of the Principality. In the midst of such a preliminary scene, was it possible to forget other gatherings of long ago that had a far different significance—was it possible not to think of other and more hostile groupings on the same historic spot by the greatest of all Welshmen, perhaps, Owen Glendower, who, gathering up in his magnetic person all the volcanic and outraged patriotism of the Welsh people, claimed the sovereignty of Wales, called himself its rightful Prince, burnt down castle after castle which the great Crusader had set up, called a Welsh Parliament, re-established a Welsh church, and carried through it all a charmed life—until, the christian element getting the better of him, he disappeared as swiftly as he came, the brilliant meteor of Welsh history? Does it wrong the past to say that in that preliminary assembly, this morning, the spirit of the great Welshman expressed itself again in the person of the most magnetic and powerful Minister in England, or, perhaps in Europe, at this hour? Lord George was there, David to one-half of that eager company, 'Davie' to the other half, and credited by all with the highest influence in bringing about this day's brilliant business.

Acts III and IV.

"The third act began at noon, when we gathered in the Castle: it self, an immense concourse of people, out of all calculation in number. What a spectacle! Once more a Prince of seventeen years, another Edward of Carnarvon, another David, too, as he said in his charming speech, is coming to be invested with in these walls.

"The fourth act was the moment when, after long waiting under a brooding sun, broken only at intervals by the supremely beautiful singing of a matchless native choir, interspersed by the indistinguishable hum of innumerable voices that, were like the murmur of the sea, we were startled by the shrill call of trumpets from the topmost heights of the polygon towers. That told us within the walls that the Prince was on his way, and presently he came in by the Eagle Tower. It was not at first that we all could see him; but when he came into sight, the boy Prince—a slim, young figure, a little pale, a little nervous, as he well might be, bearing himself bravely for all that—our hearts went out to him, and the deafening shouts that rang through the old walls, that rose to the blue sky and dimly the voices of the singers, was not the cry of subjects to their master, the allegiance of servants to the vassal of the King, but the welcome of 10,000 Welsh souls to him who, in the larger meaning of this gorgeous pageantry, stood to them for their race and nation.

Act V.

"The fifth act was the entrance of the King. What does it all mean for the Welsh people here assembled? The old theory of kingship? No; but a far saner and more human thing—that here in King George, fresh from his Coronation at Westminster, is the visible embodiment of the British GOVERNMENT SYSTEM.

"The sixth act was the Investiture itself, and he who wishes to know the exact order and detail of it may find it in the reports. What, again, did this mean? The old feudal relation of Suzerain and vassal? The actual giving away of the Principality of Wales, the power of Wales, its power and its people, to this boy Prince in return for his fidelity and military service? No, but a far greater and higher thing. The creation of a living embodiment of the Welsh nation so that, just as he, George V., stood there before all men for the people of his Empire, so this young Prince stood for the people of Wales, their racial rights and national aspirations.

Act VII.

"After Principal Rhys had delivered an address on behalf of the Welsh people, the boy Prince rose and replied.

"His clear young voice, charged with emotion, but still strong and resonant, rang out word for word, syllable by syllable, and was heard by everybody in the Inner Court. And not better than the beautiful delivery of the speech was the excellent substance of it. After the Prince's speech it was hard to make an effort that would touch such an audience, but there was one to do it, and that was the call on God to set His seal on the ceremony we had just witnessed. With one mighty voice, the choir and people together sang Watt's transcendent hymn, 'Oh, God, our Help in ages past, our Hope for years to come.' This was followed by a short religious service, conducted, as was fit, by the combined clergy of the Established and Free Churches.

The Climax.

"But perhaps the greatest moment of all was still to come. That was the moment when, the service being over, the King and Queen, with the Prince hand in hand between them, rose, and walking, with the guns booming outside and the bands playing within, to Queen Eleanor's Tower, stepped on to a balcony overlooking the Castle square. There the King presented the boy Prince to his people, where the leader of the choir, John Williams, mounting the dizzy height of the loftiest battlement, conducted both the singers within

Walt PHILOSOPHER.

My nerves were never then unadvisedly touched by my downy bed, and night seemed but two long hours. My father climbed the stairs and chairs, and pulled me from my room to sleep and snore. And now that I am older than a year, I do not roost but come across, or if it comes to me with my screams. How often I have thought you calmly snore! How often you shine and hummed my nose, while my sleepless sleeping room! How often the boons that youth enjoys, this is like the sheeted dead in first and have been brought to my notice since which, had I known them before, could have made it perfectly impossible for me to have written the statement I did.

The Speaker said he was quite ready to accept the apology so frankly and freely offered. "I do not complain of fair comment, but I did rather feel that the imputation on my member had cast upon me did not come quite within that category, I am perfectly confident that my judgment has never for one instant been used by any sense of partiality, and general cheers.) In the circumstances I hope that Colonel Lockwood did not desire me to put the motion.

"Colonel Lockwood fell in with the speaker's suggestion, and the incident came to an end.
