CHAPTER XIII.

Garling's face fell, and he suppressed a sigh of disappointment. "Gone, have they?" he said, as indignantly as he could. "How long ago's that, and where have they gone?"

"Oh, it's a long while ago," replied the old man wearily, "and I don't know where they are gone. Nobody does. They went quite sudden-like. Disappeared, as you might say. They lived in that cottage there, by the school. Beautiful young lady she was, and kind. Us misses'er a good deal. No; nobody knows where they are gone. Well, good evening to you, mister, and thank you."

Garling wished him good evening, then sauntered to the cottage, and stood looking at it sadly and wistfully, as if he were suffering a keen disappointment. After that time, he pulled himself together, and, with a shake of his broad shoulders, trudged back to Lowminster. When he reached the hotel, he found a Bradshaw, and ran his thick forefinger down the column of S's. There was no station called Sunninglea. He rang the bell, and asked the waiter if he had such a thing as an atlas, and the man brought him a dinky, much-thumbed one.

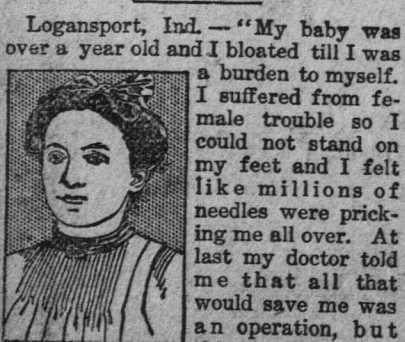

Garland found the little fishing-boat with the romantic and taking name, and traced the nearest station. Then he called for a whisky-and-soda, and sat and smoked and drank, his thick brows bent in a thoughtful frown.

CHAPTER XIV.

"My dear Vane, I wish you luck and every happiness," said the earl, with a fine smile, and holding out his hand.

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Logansport, Ind.—"My baby was over a year old and I bloated till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female trouble so I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all over. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but this I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I am now doing all my work and feeling fine.

"I hope other suffering women will try your Compound. I will recommend it to all I know."—Mrs. DANIEL D. R. DAVIS, 110 Franklin St., Logansport, Ind.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner? If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Write to Lydia E. Pinkham, Medicine Co., (Confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

As he took it, Vane felt and looked somewhat surprised. He knew his father too well to dread a scene; knew that his father had too correct a sense of the rights of men, especially of sons, to go their own way; but he certainly did not expect that the earl would take the announcement so cheerfully.

"And so you are going to turn Benedict, eh, Vane? Well, the Benedict in the play hadn't a better excuse. She is one of the most beautiful girls I have ever seen, and no doubt is as amiable as she is beautiful; but I shall avail myself, at the first opportunity, of assuring myself of that fact. Your aunt and I will do ourselves the honor and pleasure of paying our respects to the young lady this very afternoon."

"You are very kind, sir," said Dalesford, in a low voice, and with an affectionate glance at the handsome face, with its smiling eyes and delicately curved lips. "I did not expect you to take it so nicely. I am grateful. Starkey looked rather flabbergasted!" Starkey had discretely withdrawn. "I suppose he thinks that I have made a mess of it?"

"My dear Vane, it doesn't matter now what any one thinks; the die is cast, the Rubicon has been passed, and the only thing that remains to be done is to exercise our philosophy, and make the best of it; indeed, I am prepared to make the very best of it. I have this consolation, and this cause for congratulation—that your charming cousin, Desmond, will have his nose put out of joint. But we will not think of such an unpleasant person on such an extremely pleasant occasion. You look particularly well and happy, my dear boy. Ah, love's young dream!"

"Of course I am very happy, sir," said Dalesford. "I have got a prize. Diana is— But you don't want me to sing her praises. I shall be very disappointed and surprised if you do not join my song when you know her."

"This afternoon, my dear Vane—this afternoon! I will go and put on my best clothes, and my best manner, and I will do my utmost to cut you out."

"Of course, sir," responded Vane, eyeing his father fondly and proudly. When Dalesford had left him, the earl sat for a minute or two chuckling over the comedy. Then he went to break the news to Lady Selina, which he did in his characteristic manner. He found her and Mabel in the morning room, and, surveying them both with a comic air of dismay and resignation, he said pleasantly, though abruptly:

"Selina, your congratulations, if you please. Our dear Vane is in love, and, what is more, is going to be married. You cannot speak? I am not surprised. Contain your delight with reasonable bounds when I tell you that it is that most charming young lady, Miss Bourne."

Lady Selina gasped like a fish, and echoed the name, in a sepulchral tone; but Mabel sprang to her feet, clapped her hands, and danced the first steps of a passepil.

"Mabel!" cried Lady Selina. "Mabel!"

But the earl broke in upon the rebuke.

"Do not check her, my dear Selina; the child is right. It is a proper occasion for exuberant hilarity. Mabel, you can kiss me, if you like."

Mabel sprang to him, and threw her arms round his neck, exclaiming: "Oh, dear Uncle Edward, I am so glad! It is delightful news! She is the dearest, sweetest, loveliest—"

"Oh, come, my dear child, Vane spared me; do you be as merciful!" "But you surely do not intend to encourage this—this madness, Edward?" said Lady Selina, with stern amazement.

"That is exactly what I intend to do, my dear Selina," said the earl. "Vane's madness is his own private affair, and I should not dream of interfering with it. Besides, we are all so painfully sane nowadays, that insanity of this kind ought to be encouraged. And, really, when you come to think of it, you will admit that it would not matter a brass farthing to Vane whether we approved or disapproved. It wouldn't have mattered to me at his age, and I wouldn't give the aforesaid brass farthing for any young man to whom such disapproval would matter. No; my dear Selina, we will face the inevitable with all the grace we can command. We will call upon the future Lady Dalesford this afternoon. Shall we have the carriage at four o'clock?"

"But—" began Lady Selina, still gasping.

The earl held up his hand, and shook his head, smiling pleasantly, but with a look behind the smile which effectually stopped Lady Selina's threatened expostulation and remonstrance.

"My dear Selina," he said sweetly, "be thankful for the goods the gods send us, and grateful that things are no worse!"

The reader does not want to be told that Vane was at Rivermead long before four o'clock. He was as passionately in love as any boy in his teens could have been. The joy, the ecstatic happiness, that thrilled through every vein of him was so novel, so strange, that he felt as if he had just been born into a new world, a world in which it would be always sunshine, in which every hour would be instinct with the delight of living; as if he had found an angelic being to share his existence, his every thought, his every breath.

He did not tell himself all this in so many words, for Vane, thank Heaven, was quite incapable of analysis and introspection. He only told himself that he loved her, this beautiful young girl, who was as good as she was beautiful, innocent as a child, pure as a star, tender as a woman; and he was filled with amazement that she should condescend to love him, and asked himself, with wonder, and a humility strange in a Dalesford, what she had seen in him.

"Dearest," he said, as, hand in hand, like child lovers, they walked in the friendly screen of the shrubbery, "my father is coming here at four o'clock. He is coming to know you—and to love you. And I think you will like him, Diana. He told me

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy is Home-Made

Essentially Prepared in a Few Minutes. Cheap but Unequaled.

Some people are constantly annoyed from one year's end to the other with a persistent bronchial cough, which is wholly unnecessary. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make you wonder what became of it. Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any druggist, pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflammation in a painful cough with remarkable rapidity. Ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, winter coughs and bronchial asthma.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup mixture makes 16 ounces—enough to last a family a long time—at a cost of only 64 cents. Keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant. Easily prepared. Full directions with Pinex. Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in quinine, and is famous the world over for its ease, certainty and promptness in overcoming bad coughs, chest and throat colds. Get the genuine. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

that he should try to cut me out," he laughed. "The dear old boy! Yes; you will like him."

"I hope he will like me," said Diana, just a wee bit timidly. "I am a little nervous, Vane. Lady Selina— But I will try and be brave, and not feel like a prisoner at the bar, who ought to plead guilty to the heinous crime of winning the affection of the son of the great and all-powerful Earl of Wrayborough. Seriously, Vane, your father must be very sweet and good-natured—to accept me; for, after all—"

"I think that will do, dearest," he said. "When you disparage yourself, it gets on my nerves, and I want to throw up my arms, and shriek out: 'Listen to this angel, that stoops to love a mere mortal!' I suppose I may take it that you do still love me; that it isn't a mistake, that you have changed your mind?"

Within his encircling arms Diana gave him assurance of her love. And the sun shone brightly on them. Moments of happiness are fleet of wing, and Diana started when she heard the Shortledge carriage roll up to the entrance. She was rather pale as she and Dalesford went into the drawing room to receive the party; and there was a touch of reserve in her reception of Lady Selina's rather cold greeting.

But Mabel made amends for her aunt's stiffness, and, encouraged by the presence of the earl, who consistently spoiled her, she put her arms around Diana, and gave her a girlish hug. Then Diana turned to the earl; and now there was a faint look of appeal in the beautiful gray eyes—an appeal to which the earl responded immediately.

Taking both her hands, and bending over her—he was very tall—he smiled at her, and in the voice which had won, in the old days, not a few women's hearts, he said: "My dear Miss Bourne—my dear child, I have come to thank you for making my son happy."

The words, the tone in which they were uttered, went straight to Diana's heart; her eyes grew moist, and the hand which he held trembled. He drew her nearer to him, and kissed her on the forehead.

"An old man's privilege, my dear; indeed, a father's, for I have gained a daughter; and—there was pathos in his eyes and in his voice—"I had not one before."

Fortunately for Diana's strained nerves, Mrs. Burton, at that moment, entered. Diana murmured her aunt's name, and the earl turned, with swift courtesy, to the anxious-looking woman with the haggard, weary face and downcast eyes, bent over her hand, and led her to a seat, and expressed to her his pleasure in the engagement of her niece to his son. Lady Selina seemed to be still too benumbed to grasp the situation, but there was nothing for her to do but to follow suit with as much amiability as she could command; and Diana, seated beside her ladyship, received her congratulations and good wishes.

The tension was still great; but, fortunately, Mabel was there to relieve it. As usual, she was pinning for the garden; when her aunt turned to Mrs. Burton, with the automatic movement of a wax figure, Mabel tugged at Diana's sleeve, and whispered:

Hr. Grace Notes.

Capt. Dunn's schooner arrived from Labrador last night.

The schooners Pandora and Standard left yesterday for St. John's with fish cargoes.

Mr. Arthur Webber, one of our soldiers now at Salisbury Plains, writing to his mother, says that while the whole regiment were on parade, he was surprised to hear the order for the Harbor Grace lads to fall out of line, as a lady wanted to speak with them. The lady was Mrs. Capt. Ellis who showed great interest in our boys, and who has sent an interesting letter to your correspondent for the Telegram. It will, I feel sure, be read with much interest.

Mr. John E. Tucker, Chief Officer of the S.S. Florizel, is to be married this afternoon to Miss May Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Taylor. All the friends of this popular young couple are sending their best wishes for a very happy married life.

Capt. John Power, who commanded the schr. Arthur Jim at Labrador this summer, is loud in his praise of Mr. John Gushue of Conception Harbor, and his son John Gushue, for valuable assistance rendered the Arthur Jim during the gale at Labrador this season. He says he can't give these men too much praise for their help in saving the craft from destruction during that trying time.

The visit of His Excellency and Lady Davidson on Thursday was very much enjoyed by our people. The addresses to the grown ups and children, and the address of Lady Davidson to the women of Harbor Grace was very interesting, and highly appreciated. Carbonear also had the pleasure of a visit and of hearing an address from the Governor and his lady.

Mrs. Summers, of Clarendville, who we reported a few days ago as being sick at the home of her sister, Mrs. H. Simmons, is still very sick, and is being attended by Dr. Strapp. Mr. Summers arrived yesterday, having been called by wire, owing to the serious condition of his wife.

CORESPONDENT.
Hr. Grace, Nov. 14, 1914.

Our Nfld. Soldiers at Plymouth.

Being an enthusiastic daughter of dear old Terra Nova, I was, of course, very excited at the interesting news that the Newfoundland contingent had been landed at our port (or rather I should say, the transport S.S. Florizel was in the harbor).

Accordingly I boarded a tram car for the part of the port (which is the Hamoaye) where the Florizel in company with many other transport ships was being moored. Arriving at this point in the midst of a crowd numbering several thousand, all intent on having a near view of the Colonial Forces who have so gallantly come to fight on behalf of the Mother Country. The excursion steamboats which accommodated some four or five hundred of people each were soon packed to their utmost capacity, and every kind of smaller craft that could be utilized soon had their quota of passengers also.

I managed to secure a seat in a large motor boat, holding perhaps about forty all told, and had a glorious trip through the long lines of the mighty liners that had brought the Canadian Forces across the Atlantic. We passed the Grandpian, the Tyrolian, the Scandinavian, the Royal Edward, the Royal George and many other big mail boats whose names are familiar as household words, but while of course interested in seeing them I was keeping a keen lookout for the Florizel, that was the one transport I had come to see. At last we reached her moored in company and almost dwarfed by the Tunisian which towered above her, there seemed scarce anyone on board and I felt very disappointed as our motor boat moved away at seeing no one that reminded me of home.

We landed at a different part from where we had embarked so I made my way back once more to the pontoon that had been the starting-point. There I saw six of our boys that told me they had acted as boatmen in landing the others who had gone on a route march, which of course accounted for the reason why I had seen so few in the harbor.

They came from St. John's, they were Privates T. Whalan, T. Connors (Captain of the Portia, Bowring's Boat), C. White and his brother, but I am sorry to say I don't know the names of the other two. We had a most interesting chat about the dear old colony, and as they said the others would be back in half an hour of course I waited, and glad I am I did so. About the time specified I had the great pleasure of seeing our gallant lads as they swung down the street facing the pontoon so that they were all in sight at once and a noble show they made. It would make any Newfoundland proud to see them swing through the street with their many treads and many were the words of admiration on all sides as they marched by. I felt proud to be a daughter of Terra Nova and the tears came in my eyes through emotion as I heard the comments of the crowd who watched them.

Of course a Plymouth crowd being used to the sight of the English regiments are inclined to be critical, and it made their admiring comments all the more valuable. It was not long before I found some of the boys from Harbor Grace and had a chat with Rupert Watts, Eugene Taylor and they were all in the best of health and spirits as indeed were the whole force. Then I met and had a long talk with Dr. Patterson and the general doctor gave me all the news from home, so I asked after everybody I could think of among my relatives and acquaintances of old. He was most emphatic in the praise of the whole company, saying his men were as "hard as nails," the sort of men to go anywhere and do anything that could be asked of them, the kind of men that never let up, while he could not praise their conduct sufficiently, it was most exemplary. The voyage across had been most enjoyable and the sight of the huge feet of transports, escorted by eight naval cruisers, something that would linger in the memory of all. At night they steamed with every light shrouded as much as possible, but in the day the long lines of huge leviathans made a noble spectacle.

One day they had a mild sensation when they saw a strange boat being brought in by one of the cruises; fancying they had taken a German prize, but to their disappointment they found it was an English boat, seeking the protection of the convoy.

Owing to the scarcity of steam pinances the men had to be taken on board by their own boats, which took a considerable time, but I can't say I was sorry as it gave me so much the more time to chatter of home. I noticed the people were busy around me bringing apples and bottles of lemonade, etc., and distributing among the lads, who seemed very pleased at the kindly thought that prompted the deed. All pleasures come to an end in time, and the last boat departed, so after watching them out of sight I had reluctantly to bid good bye to my glimpses of home and I sent after them a most fervent and sincere prayer that the Good God in His mercy will watch over them in the battlefield and send them back in safety covered with honour. When I reached home I posted to them what Nfld. papers I had also the latest local papers and a bundle of picture post cards of Plymouth and the neighborhood, to give them some idea of the place.

When Dr. Patterson wished me good bye he gave me as a souvenir a Newfoundland crest (the caribou head) and which I can assure you is a most cherished possession, and which I shall get converted into a brooch (this you will say is womanlike). I may not see them again but my thoughts will turn towards our gallant lads on many an occasion in the future, and could the friends at home have the privilege of seeing them as I have had I am certain they would say with me Terra Nova may well be proud of her sons.

Salvia Hair Tonic Makes Hair Grow

Ladies should have radiant hair. There are thousands of women with harsh, faded, characterless hair, who do not try to improve it.

Charge Germans Set Fire to Ship.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 11.—Only seven of the 800 horses carefully selected for the French Army on their way to France, on board the steamship Rembrandt, were alive yesterday afternoon. Carcasses of the dead animals were thrown overboard, one at a time, for hours during the afternoon, by members of the crew, just off the Virginia Capes.

The flat charge that the ship was set on fire in Baltimore by Germans was made by the captain. He said he heard threats while there, that the ship would be blown up before she reached France.

German Purpose Rather Unsound.

The final reason why we think the Germans will fail is that their purpose is unsound. They are forsaking the principles of war which they have done so much to expound. When the Kaiser orders an advance on Calais at this critical juncture, his reasons are political rather than military. He is expending his strength in a direction foreign to his true objective, and very rarely in war do such blunders fail to meet with retribution. The possession of Calais would leave the fortunes of Germany very much where they were before. It would not disturb the British people, who were long ago prepared quite calmly to see the Germans in occupation of Northern France and even of Paris, as was shown when for a brief space, Sir John French transferred his base to the Bay of Biscay.—London Times.

Russian Underway.

In Every Direction and Prediction Made that within 30 days Germany will have to Submit to Invasion or Withdraw Troops.

London, Nov. 9.—The correspondent of the Times in Warsaw, telegraphing under date of Nov. 6, says that after spending a fortnight in the Polish field of operations he has arrived at the conclusion that the Russian organization is at last under way in every direction and that within thirty days Germany will either have to submit to an invasion by vast Russian hosts or withdraw substantial bodies of her best troops from the western frontier.

"Russia's huge army is now moving with a preciseness which is remarkable," he says, "and it is advancing with incredible rapidity and smothering every rear guard action with its numbers. The transport is keeping pace everywhere, moving forward night and day. In many cases the main bodies accomplish twenty versts (about 14 miles) per day."

Cure Children's Colds By External Treatment.

Mothers Will Find Nothing so Speedy and Reliable as Old-Time "Nerviline."

It's really a shame to upset a young child's stomach by internal dosing, when external treatment will so promptly break up a cold.

When your boy comes in after play with his feet soaking wet, his throat hoarse and sore, his little chest tight and congested, just apply Nerviline. Give him a vigorous rubbing over his throat, and put lots of Nerviline on his chest and rub it right in. To make Nerviline penetrate more quickly cover his chest and throat with a hot flannel bandage. This treatment WON'T fail. Your boy will be feeling better in half an hour, and you will have the satisfaction of knowing you have warded off perhaps a cold, or gripe, or illness that might have laid him up.

Nerviline is mighty good for preventing colds and for breaking up a bad one, too. For general family use it cures all sorts of external aches and pains—you simply can't beat it. Try it for earache, toothache, neuralgia, sciatica, lame back, rheumatism, or lumbago. Wherever there is congestion, inflammation or pain in the joints or muscles, Nerviline will cure mighty quick. The large 50c. family size bottle is so economical, so useful, it should be in every home. There is also a small 25c. size. Dealers anywhere sell Nerviline.

Another Call to the Belgians.

All Able-Bodied Soldiers Must Get Back to the Front.

London, Nov. 9.—Another call to the colors has been issued by the Belgian Government to all nationals. The summons this time is accompanied by an ultimatum that those not joining voluntarily may be "commandeered."

Under the latest decision the Belgian Government has regard to the Belgian refugees. All Belgians under 45 years of age who were previously members of the civil guard, are now allowed to enlist in the regular army, and all unmarried Belgians between 18 and 30 not wishing to enlist, as volunteers are informed that they "may be commandeered" and their services employed in different works for the army.

The Belgian government explains that the object of this order is to get all the able bodied soldiers back to the front and induce as many others as possible to join the army; and secondly, to relieve the British public of the burden of "providing for Belgians who ought to be helping in the struggle to dispossess the invaders."

Have You an Itchy Spot?

Somewhere on your body? If so, attend to it at once. In Eczema—and itchy spots, whether dry and scurfy, or moist and inclined to "weep," are generally eczematous—delays are foolish, allowing the disease to spread and affect more of the good skin. Your best chance for a cure is to use Zylex, which will give almost instant relief, and if used in the earlier stages of the trouble will almost certainly bring a cure, and in any event will greatly ameliorate the trouble. Ask your druggist about it. Price 50c. a box. Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.

A Fight to a Finish.

The German people are now being told that the war will be a long one, as is evidenced by the address of the King of Bavaria at Munich. The steady blocking of all attempts at a German advance in the West during the past two months, in spite of the enormous sacrifice of life of the German active army and its reserves, and the steady drive of the German and Austrian armies over the frontiers in the East have proved to the Germans that their anticipated walk-over France in a few weeks has become a delusion and a snare, and that they are face to face with enemies who are determined to push them over their frontiers on both borders and to carry on war in their own territories until their martial resources are exhausted and Prussian militarism is absolutely crushed. With the present block in the West and the increasing pressure in the East, the future is clearly with the allies. Russian pressure in spite of any temporary back which may ensue will become greater and greater. Austria is already not far from the point of exhaustion, and she cannot contribute very material aid to the Germans. Britain is becoming more and more awake. It takes much to rouse the British bull-dog but when once roused he will hold in to a finish and win or die in the fight. To the million men afloat or ashore when hostilities commenced, already a million men have been added either to the Regular Army, the Territorials, or to the naval forces, and now the Commons have passed an additional vote of a thousand million dollars and authorized the raising of an additional million men.

Britain's gold is being spent to keep trade going, to enable Belgium and Serbia to carry on war, to provide loans for the self-governing colonies, to provide for the dependents of her own soldiers and sailors, and to provide the latter with the best armaments going to bring the war to a successful issue. While the Germans are giving way before the Russians, while they are breaking themselves in the rock-like defence of the French, they are exhausting their military strength to a degree far greater than the allies. The strength of the British Empire has only begun to be tapped, the Empire is only getting roused, and when that strength is moulded in a military form it will begin to tell as surely as the Russian millions are telling, and next year with a fresh million British troops in the field the Germans will find themselves being pushed together over both frontiers, and the notion of Germany's allies will be knocked out of Prussian heads once for all.

LONDON, To-day.
A Petrograd correspondent to the Morning Post says the Russians have not succeeded in marching on to attack the formidable position of the Dev-Boyn Range which protects the approach to Erzerum. The Turks brought up from Erzerum, from Trabzon and from Cysnaak such large reinforcements with heavy guns as to compel the Russians already occupying Koprakaya to retreat. Whether this retirement from positions secured after very heavy fighting must be reckoned as a Turkish success or not depends on factors of which we have no knowledge.

King Ludwig of Bavaria, on reviewing the Cadets of Munich Bay to-day, according to the Lokal Anzeiger, Berlin, says the war will last a long time, but we shall not rest until the enemy is beaten off the battlefield and until a place is secured that will protect us for a long time against attack.

DESTRUCTION IN DARDANELLES.

LONDON, To-Day. A despatch from Athens says the Turks lost 250 men and two guns, destroyed in the bombardment of the forts of the Dardanelles. The former German cruisers Goeben and Breslau, which are now flying the Turkish flag, have re-entered the Bosphorus.

MONUMENT TO LORD ROBERTS.

LONDON, To-Day. In order that no time should be lost in providing a suitable memorial for Lord Roberts, Premier Asquith will move in the Commons that an address be presented to King George, asking the King's directions that a monument be erected at public cost with an inscription on it, expressing the admiration of this House for his illustrious military career and his gratitudo for his devoted services to the State.

LONDON, To-Day. The greatest single demand made upon the material resources of Britain was voiced by Premier Asquith yesterday afternoon when in the Commons he moved an additional credit for war purposes of $1,125,000,000, which in addition to the millions already voted in August is equivalent to an increase of more than 50 per cent to the national debt. The Premier told the House that the largest portion of the first £100,000,000 had already been expended in the conduct of military operations, loans to allies, disbursements for securing food supplies for this country, expenditure for sugar, which has been especially large and would, in the belief of the Premier, ultimately be recouped by the Exchequer. A considerable sum will be spent to secure control of the railroads. The Government's expenditure included provisions for refugees. With regard to the purposes of the new credit, by far the greater bulk of this would be for armaments and expenditure. The Premier said the civil expenditures would be inconsiderable. They would be largely for the purpose of securing food supplies and for further commodities necessary for British use which must be made impossible for the enemy. Another large item was made up in loans of money to others, amounting to £43,000,000. The principal item in this list would be to the Belgian Government, £10,000,000, and Serbia, £800,000, on which no interest was to be charged until the end of the war. Other loans to self-governing Dominions - Canada, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, countries which under ordinary circumstances would be compelled to borrow in the London market - would account for £30,250,000 of the new credit, for the reason that the Govt. had undertaken the responsibility of raising loans for these Dominions.

Regarding the cost of the war, Asquith said he declined to delve into the future or speculate what commitments it might be necessary for Britain later, but up to last Saturday the actual additional expenditure falling upon the Exchequer amounted to between £900,000 and £1,000,000 a day. Having regard to the enormous scale of the operations and other considerations, this sum, the Premier said, did not exceed the estimates of expenditures that might reasonably have been expected. Continuing, the Premier said he would hold out no hope that these expenditures would likely be diminished. The present measure carries the provisions to March 31st, which would not only satisfy the calculations, based on experience, but would leave in hand a reasonable margin.

Walter Long congratulated the Premier on the evident determination of the Government to carry through the great war and leave nothing undone to make the issue the only one Britain could contemplate, that is to say successful. The Government could count on the widest latitude and absolutely on a free hand. Long said as long as the country is satisfied it would prosecute the war with vigor and determination.

Replying to the criticism of the news raised in the course of debate, Asquith declared nothing had been kept back except in cases where such a course was required by immediate military exigencies. Touching on other points raised in the course of debate, Asquith said increased exports to neutral countries were in most cases due to the fact that the supply to these countries from Germany had been cut off rather than to the fact that goods were being re-exported by those countries to Germany. Dealing with the vote of a million additional men, the Premier remarked that apart from the territorials 1,100,000 men were already under arms. That number, however, he added was not enough. He said he saw no reason to be discouraged by the recruiting figures. The number of men the exigencies of the country demanded, he believed, would be raised. Indeed he considered the recruiting position was very satisfactory. Since the outbreak, Asquith said, more than 700,000 recruits had joined the regular army and nearly 300,000 had joined the territorials. The votes for the additional war credit of $1,125,000,000 and the additional $1,000,000 men were immediately agreed upon.

The picture programme presented at the Crescent Picture Palace yesterday was as usual up to the Crescent's standard - nothing but the best, and attracted large audiences. "The Stranger," an I. M. P. production, featuring King Baggot, is a great story and contains some beautiful scenes, the chase by the moonshiners after the supposed revenue officer is most exciting and well worth seeing.

Several very interesting events are pictured in the Universal Animated Weekly, such as His Majesty King George inspecting Imperial troops, Yacht and Automobile Racing; Fashion Hints; Knights Templars Parade and several others.

"The Tale of A Hat" and "When His Courage Failed" are two clever comedies that afford much laughter.

Mr. Walsh made a big hit in the fine Irish ballad "Where the River Shannon Flows." "Paddy" is the finest singer of Irish songs we have heard for some time.

Mr. McDonald sang a nice sentimental ballad: "Yesterday," by Chas. K. Harris, which gained rounds of applause for him.

The same big bill will be repeated this evening and is going to bring another packed house to the Crescent.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never stir or sicken.

FRENCH OFFICIAL REPORT.

PARIS, Nov. 16. The French official announcement this afternoon says: During the day of yesterday along the Yser Canal from Nieport to the country up the river from Dixmude, the fighting was limited to artillery exchanges. The country having been further inundated, the submerged territory now stretches from Dixmude to a point north of Bixchoote. The forces of the enemy which endeavored to cross the Canal between the region of Dixmude and Bixchoote were all driven back beyond the bridges, and it is said a German regiment was completely destroyed at a point south of Bixchoote. To the southeast of Ypres, two other German attacks were repulsed. On our part we have taken the offensive and reconquered certain points of support which the enemy some days ago succeeded in capturing. Between the Yser and the Oise there have only been operations of minor importance, partial progress being made by our advance positions. In the region of the Aisne and in Champagne country there have been artillery exchanges without result. In the Argonne the town of St. Hubert has again been attacked by the Germans without success. In the region of St. Mihiel, a surprise attack undertaken by the enemy against Apremont resulted in failure.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—(Official.) At a Cabinet meeting yesterday morning, under the Presidency of Mr. Poincare, Messrs. Millerand and Delcasse discussed the military and diplomatic situation. It being the Feast of St. Albert, the President of the French Republic sent a congratulatory message to King Albert of Belgium, with his best wishes, and a renewal of France's determination not to lay down arms, before obtaining full satisfaction for the violation of Belgium's rights, and a firm guarantee for a lasting peace. The King of Belgium replied, expressing his deep gratitude.

Official Communique.—Along the Yser Canal from Nieport beyond Dixmude, yesterday, simple cannonading was reported. Owing to new flooding, the immersed ground now covers a district, extending south of Dixmude right up to five kilometres north of Bixchoote. The enemy's forces who attempted to cross the Canal between the region of Dixmude and the region of Bixchoote were thrown back beyond the bridges, and an entire German regiment was wiped out south of Bixchoote. To the southeast of Ypres two other German attacks proved equally fruitless. On our side we have again assumed the offensive and re-occupied several positions which fell into the hands of the enemy a few days ago. Between La Yser and the Oise only secondary operations are signalled, with partial progress for our troops. In the region of the Aisne and around Chateau-Thierry there has been simple cannonading. In Argonne, St. Hubert has again been attacked by the Germans without success. In the region of St. Mihiel, the enemy has failed in an assault on Apremont woods. In the Vosges there is very little activity.

FOR GERMAN CONSUMPTION.

BERLIN, Nov. 16. The Khedive has been in Constantinople since the outbreak of hostilities. He owes spiritual allegiance to the Sultan as Head of the Mohammedan Faith. Despatches from Constantinople a month ago said the British Government had ordered him not to return to Egypt. Messages from Berlin received yesterday, said the Khedive had declared to a correspondent of a German newspaper his loyalty to the Sultan, which was dictated by his religious obligations. The same message said the Khedive intended to accompany the Turkish army which is marching on Egypt by way of Palestine.

THE SPY PROBLEM.

LONDON, Nov. 16. The vast cost of the European war was realized in England to-day for the first time when Premier Asquith stated in the House of Commons, that Britain alone was expending between $4,500,000 and $5,000,000 daily. To-day's session was devoted to a discussion of the war. Some members were dissatisfied with the manner in which the Government had been run, and numerous pertinent questions were asked of Cabinet Ministers. The first minister grilled was Reginald McKenna, who was asked what precaution had been taken by him, as Home Secretary, to prevent the operations of spies in England. In reply, Mr. McKenna stated that 14,500 aliens had been interned in concentration camps, this number not including prisoners taken in action. He admitted, however, that about 29,000 aliens had, thus far, escaped the Government's dragnet, and were still at liberty. The First Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchill, came in for questioning, because of naval losses. Churchill said he had every reason to believe that the Canopus was quite safe. He admitted that she had been ordered to join the British Squadron in the Southwest Coast of South Africa.

ADMIRAL TROUBRIDGE ACQUITTED.

PORTLAND, Eng., Nov. 16. Admiral Troubridge, who was in command of the British Mediterranean fleet at the time the German cruiser Goeben and Breslau escaped from Messina, was to-day acquitted by the court-martial before which he was tried on charges following the flight of the warships. Rear-Admiral Troubridge was recalled to England soon after the Goeben and Breslau escaped and were successful in reaching Turkish waters. Both the British and French fleets were in the Mediterranean at the time, and Rear-Admiral Troubridge was charged with neglect of duty in permitting the German warships to escape.

Obituary.

On Monday, the 9th. inst. there passed away at his residence, Winthrop, Mass., a former resident of this city in the person of Mr. John Siddons. His last illness was brief and his end peaceful. For many years the deceased was well and favourably known in this community where he conducted an up-to-date painting and decorating business; he also possessed ability of no mean order as an artist and several productions of his brush remain in the possession of his relatives here. Some ten years ago he retired from business and up to the time of his death resided in Winthrop, Mass. His former acquaintances in this city will remember him as a kindly and honourable gentleman and one who was ever ready to assist his fellowman. He leaves to mourn him three daughters, Elizabeth who lived with him; Mrs. Winsten also residing in the United States, and Mrs. Alex. Rooney, of this city, also a large circle of friends to whom we extend our sympathy in their bereavement.

Doctors and Gas Fires

In an article which recently appeared in the London "Evening News," Mr. W. G. Faulkner stated: "In making my inquiries I discovered one significant fact. This was that one company—the Gas Light and Coke Company—had among their consumers 2,500 doctors who had gas fires installed in their houses, some as many as ten or a dozen; that 1,600 of these doctors had become users of gas during the past three years; and that not one had ever given them up."

Professor C. V. Boys, F.R.S., says in the "Standard": "Sentiment and inertia are the only obstacles against the general adoption of gas fires and cooking appliances. Wonderful strides have been made, in spite of deeply-rooted prejudice. As gas fires, burning with a blue, is an admirable agent for heating a room; and, as a scientist, I fail to understand how such a gas-fire dries the air in a room more than any other fire."—nov17,tf

Can Someone Help Molly?

By RUTH CAMERON.

The conversation had ranged about the handicap the European war imposes upon this and future generations in the sacrifice of men who, had they lived, might have made epoch marking contributions to science, art or literature.

"The individual is submerged in the mass: the day-laborer and the student in the laboratory, the untutored peasant and the dreamer, the materialistic and the idealistic are uniformed, armed, and sent to the front," said the Author-man. "In fashioning their mighty war machines the nations are pouring into the crucible everything that can be used for the purpose. No man is considered save as a fighting unit—potential food for the cannon!"

"It seems to me said the Author-man's wife, "that some provision should be made which would exempt great scientists, artists—musical and otherwise—and leaders of thought generally."

"War is necessity and necessity knows no distinction," said the Cynic. "If you were barricaded in your house, with a foe bearing down upon you, would you hesitate to make bullets of your gold watch and silver spoons—if you needed ammunition, that is?"

"I suppose not," admitted the Author-man's wife, "but think of a civilization that would permit the sacrifice of a Caruso!"

"Come, Molly," said the Cynic, "you've been sitting there like a sphinx. What do you think of it?"

"I haven't been thinking so much about what you have been saying," confessed Molly, "as I have of something it all suggested to my mind. I've been thinking of the girl at the place we went to last summer—the daughter of the former who had the little place down the road. Perhaps I told you of her passion for painting. Poor child, she can't see anything but what she feels she must express in color. Of course she showed me some of her work. It looked good to me, but I'm no judge. So many people do creditably clever work without having talent enough to accomplish much. But I brought back some of her work. To-day I showed it to an artist and he could scarce believe what I told him about the painter, it seemed so really fine to him."

"Now the girl is needed at home. Her father has no money to send her away to school, even worse he has no sympathy with her art. He sincerely believes that her life would be wasted. Now I suppose there ought to be some way in which this girl's talent, if not absolute genius—remember the artist was very enthusiastic—might be developed. But I can think of none. And when the Author-man's wife spoke of a civilization that would permit the sacrifice of a singer, like Caruso, I thought of this girl and wondered at a civilization that would let a potential genius like hers go to waste."

"Eventually, I imagine, we will have some way of conserving national talent, just as we now conserve the forests and other national resources," said the Author-man. "Genius will be encouraged and developed—if such a thing be possible, instead of being permitted to run to seed."

"Perhaps so," said Molly, "but what I want to know is, how am I going to help this girl?"

"Come, Molly," said the Cynic, "you've been sitting there like a sphinx. What do you think of it?"

"I haven't been thinking so much about what you have been saying,"

Temperance Meeting at Synod Hall.

His Lordship the Bishop of Newfoundland presided at the Temperance meeting held under the auspices of the C.E.T.S. at the Synod Hall last night. In his opening remarks His Lordship referred to his recent visit to England, at the outbreak of war, and to the steps taken by the Government to have business conducted normally. Cards appeared in the windows of the principal business houses bearing the words, "business as usual." These words, though used in a strictly commercial sense, might also be applied to the cause of temperance, and those workers who have not been privileged to go to the front may render much service at home by uplifting the nation through the advocacy of temperance. He felt that interest in the cause of temperance was not flagging and that the small attendance was due to the fact that the stores were open, and that many others who were not working had gone to attend the patriotic concert at the Grenfell Hall. His Lordship said that since the formation of the Society in 1880, he had attended many meetings, at which the sin of intemperance and its consequences were fully dealt with, so that it was unnecessary to dilate any further on the subject as the time was ripe for active work. Referring to the action of the Central Board, he recently stopped the sale of liquor to his army. His Lordship said that the people of Russia would as a consequence arise from their former state of degradation. He then went on to contrast the conditions existing during the Crimean War with those of the present conflict, and exhorted all present to pray fervently for the success of the C.E.T.S. During the evening several hymns were sung. At the close His Lordship pronounced the Benediction.

A Rabbit Hunt.

Some of our enthusiastic sportsmen are now arranging to get up a rabbit hunt, the place of the meet has not as yet been selected—some are anxious to have it at Dillon's Grove and others the White Hills. Some of our prominent merchants and bankers are amongst the number of gentlemen getting up this heretofore unknown sport in St. John's. A little difficulty exists in getting suitable horses for the hunt, as several who are anxious to take part have never ridden on horse back in fact one remarked at the meeting he was afraid to ride the old nag through the "gap at Dunloo"; however, arrangements will soon be finalized and the public will have due notice of the meet.

SIR JOHN MANDEVILLE died 1372 aged 72. "The Voyage and Travails of Sir John Mandeville," the first book of travels published in England and probably fuller of romance than reality, was the work of this worthy, who described himself as of St. Albans.
RENE le SAGE died 1747, aged 79. Author of the famous stories "Gil Bias" and "Le Diable Boiteux," also a dramatist of note and one of the wittiest of European writers.

TO THE FLEUR-DE-LIS.

Lovely Iris, winsome lily,
On the glorious shield of France,
We are weeping; vigils keeping;
Waiting your deliverance.

Long, too long, the rude invader,
Ravages your fair domain;
Oh, the drooping of your petals,
Grieving for your loved ones slain.

From the terrors of your trials,
Fleur-de-lis may you emerge,
Emblem still of best attainment;
Blooming on advancement's verge.

Allen shore sends this tribute
To the lily's praise:
Courage fair-one, you will triumph;
Be the pride of coming days.
—Walter Edward Turner.

Watson, Mr. Justice Johnson, the members of the Grenfell Literary Committee and several other prominent ladies and gentlemen.

RIO JANEIRO, To-day. The Cruiser Glasgow, one of the vessels engaged with the German squadron off the coast of Chili, arrived here to-day. The damage caused by German shell fire is plainly visible on the cruiser.

THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE.

PETROGRAD, To-day. The Russian advance in East Prussia, according to advices from the front, has been assisted materially by the cold weather, which enables the troops to move more rapidly in the swampy lake region of East Prussia. The movements of the army had been retarded by soft roads. This condition has now been remedied by cold weather which has frozen the roads.

NO CRIPPLED SOLDIERS IN WORKHOUSE. NO DEPENDENTS ON SCRAP HEAP.

LONDON, To-day. Walter H. Long, Unionist, said the country was not likely to be faced with the stupendous problem of unemployment which might naturally have been expected. He believed also that the men needed for the army would be forthcoming because the spirit of the country was so magnificent. He congratulated the Government on behalf of the Opposition on its steadfast determination to carry the war to a successful conclusion. Long, Healy and Lord Beresford discussed the question of publicity, and urged that the Government should give fuller details of the achievements of the troops in the fields. Cowan, Liberal, proposed that Britain follow Russia's example and prohibit the sale of liquor during the war. Mr. Healy demanded greater liberality in dealing with the dependants of soldiers. He said we are not going to have crippled warriors in the workhouses again, or their dependants thrown up in a scrap heap. In his closing address, Asquith placed the burden of conscription on France and said it was necessary to refer to the wishes of the country which was doing the greatest part of the fighting and where fighting was being carried on. Dealing with the matter of pay, the Premier said, the insufficiency of the pay of the lower ranks of the conscripted officers has long been a reproach to this country, but has become an indecency and a scandal when men are laying down their lives. He said that he had prepared a scheme for increased pay. He concluded by declaring that sickness among troops had not exceeded 10 per cent, and he believed no body of men had ever been brought together who had comforted themselves better than the present army.
