The Lost Will; OR, LOVE TRIUMPHS AT LAST!

CHAPTER VI.

She seemed to be scarcely listening to him, her eyes were fixed searchingly on the road before her, her brows drawn together. Jack glanced at her, and something more than the actual beauty of the face impressed him strangely, deeply. Who was she, what was her history? For history she had, Jack, though by no means skilled in induction, was certain.

"I do not see any one," she said, after they had been walking for some little time. "I don't think my father could have gone so far; he must have turned off somewhere."

"He could not have turned off anywhere excepting at the gate," said Jack.

"I may have missed him; let us retrace our steps," she said, hurriedly, nervously. "He may have gone back to the village station."

They turned and, as they did so, Jim gave the little bark which indicated that he had heard something, and a moment or two afterwards they saw a man coming out of the gateway. He was walking unsteadily, feebly; his head was bent and his hands were clutching at the breast of his coat, as if he were trying to keep it together. Nora uttered a faint cry. "That is my father. Oh, let us hurry!" she exclaimed in a low voice, and she began to run.

Jim got ahead of them, and ran at the bent, frail figure. Nora caught him up and laid her hand upon his arm, calling to him. He started and turned his face to her; and for a moment there was no recognition in his eyes; then he knew her, and muttering, "Nora, what are you doing here, what do you want?" he shook himself feebly from her grasp and went on, his lips moving, his hand clutching at his breast.

Nora looked over her shoulder appealingly, beseechingly, at Jack. "He is very ill," she said in a low voice. "I don't think he scarcely knows. What shall I do? I must get him home."

"It is not far to the station," said Jack; he looked at his watch. "We shall just catch a train. But if you would like to come back to the house and wait while I get the car, I will take you up to London—if it's London you're going to; or you can remain until he is better—all night if you like."

"No, no," she said timidly. "Thank you very much; you are very kind, very good and kind. I am very grateful. But we will catch the train."

Jack nodded. They walked on either side of Norton, who appeared to be unconscious of their presence and continued to mutter to himself, his eyebrows jerking, his lips twitching. They had got to the end of the road that ran through the park, and were still some way from the station, when Norton stopped suddenly, and looking into vacancy muttered:

"Mustn't carry them about; too valuable—my word, yes!—might lose 'em. Give 'em to Nora? No; too valuable to trust to a woman. A girl; he'd get 'em away from her; too risky, too risky. I want a lawyer; a straight lawyer."

Nora glanced at Jack pitiously. "His mind is wandering," she said.

"Oh, I dreaded this, I dreaded this! Father, you know who I am; I am Nora; I am here. This gentleman and I are taking care of you."

"Taking care," he muttered eagerly. "That's it. I want somebody to take care of me." With a cunning air of affected simplicity, he looked at Jack. "Happen to know a lawyer, a good, straight one, mister?" he inquired, the words broken by a cough.

"I'm a lawyer myself," said Jack, somewhat bewildered by this strange incident in his commonplace life.

"Oh, you are!" said Norton, with an air of partial relief. "But are you one of the straight 'uns; are you a man to be trusted?"

"I hope so," said Jack, quite gravely and without a smile. "At any rate, you can tell me anything; for instance, you can tell me what's worrying you."

"Nothing is worrying me," retorted Norton irritably. "I'm all right—now. So's Nora. What I want is some one I can trust with some valuable property; something I'm afeared to carry about with me, in case I should lose it. You understand me, don't you?"

He asked, catching hold of the lapel of Jack's coat, while with the other hand he still held his own tightly across his breast.

Jack and Nora exchanged a swift glance; there was a poignant anxiety in hers, sympathy and encouragement in his; it was as if his glance said, "Humour him; you can trust me fully."

"That's all right," he said to Norton, soothingly, and in a tone which seemed to inspire the man with confidence. "I'll take care of anything you may entrust to me."

"Right-o," said Norton. "Here you are, then. Catch hold!"

He looked round him cautiously, drew Jack aside with him; then, taking the envelope containing the bundle of notes and the will from his pocket, he pressed it into Jack's hand with a mixture of eagerness and reluctance.

"Put 'em away in your pocket," he said. "Button up your coat, like I did. There're valuable—I bet you'd never guess what they're worth. Here!" he broke off suddenly, with suspicion in his eyes. "I don't know your name; I don't know where your office is—"

He drew his hand across his brow and looked round him vaguely; it was evident that he thought himself in a lawyer's office.

"That's all right," said Jack. "My name's John Chalfont." He was about to give Chertson Hall as the address.

The Farmerettes.

dress, but he knew that the man would be more assured with a legal one; so, as Jack still kept on his chambers, he said, "No. 9, Pump Court, Temple."

But it was evident that Norton had not heard him; his mind was straying again. As if he had forgotten all about the precious packet he had committed to Jack's charge, he put his hand in Nora's arm and, with a hollow cough, said:

"Let's get home, Nora; seems to me to be getting cold; I'll give up the search for to-night."

Jack, on the other side of him and ready to offer an arm, walked with him to the station. The train came up as they reached the platform. Still feeling bewildered, and as if the whole affair were a dream, a nightmare, Jack opened the door of a first-class compartment. Nora shook her head; but Jack insisted upon their getting in.

"I'll make it right," he said, and he beckoned to the guard. Then, suddenly, as he closed the door, it flashed upon him that he didn't know who they were, where they lived. Where were his wits wandering?

"Here!" he said quickly. "What an idiot I am! I don't know your name, address." Then, again, the remembrance of the envelope the man had thrust upon him flashed into his mind.

"Take this!" he said quickly. Nora hesitated for a moment; her father had got into a corner of the carriage, had fumbled for his pipe and was lighting it; he appeared to be quite unconscious of their presence.

"No," she said. "He gave it to you; please take care of it."

"But—" stammered Jack. She shook her head again.

"Take care of it, whatever it is; it may be of no value—please," she said hurriedly.

"Well—" said Jack, with a shrug of resignation. "But, quick—your name and address; I don't know where to find you."

"Norton, 16, Bridget Street, Lambeth," she said in a breath.

The guard came up in a leisurely way; it was a slow train, and Jack put half a sovereign in his hand and said:

"My friends have got third-class tickets; take care of them."

Then he went back to the window and held out his hand.

"I'll look you up in the morning," he said quickly, earnestly.

She gave him her hand; he could feel that it was trembling; but she said, in a low voice and calmly enough:

"Yes. Thank you. Oh, but I can never thank you enough."

The train moved on, and as it did so Jack called himself the biggest fool in the world. Why had he not gone with the girl and helped her to take care of the old man? Oh, yes, there wasn't a bigger fool in existence. Full of remorse, he stared after the train. Then he was conscious that he was holding something, and he looked down at the charge which had been committed to him. With something of the feeling of the sleep-walker, he thrust the envelope into his pocket, mechanically buttoning his dress-jacket over it, as he had been charged to do, and left the station, with Jim walking soberly at his heels, as if conscious that something important, something out of the ordinary, had occurred.

Jack was not curious as to the contents of the envelope; the only object of his intense curiosity and interest was the girl; and, as he went up the steps to the house, the thought that he should see her on the morrow struck pleasantly and warmly at his heart.

Poor girl! Was it possible that she had no one to take care of her but that insane, feeble old man? The conjecture should have moved him to pity, and pity only, but he was conscious of a shameful kind of satisfaction; for, if that were so, if she were helpless, she would not be unwilling to accept his aid, to let him be her friend.

As to the bulky envelope, Jack, as he tossed it on to his open desk, guessed that it only played a part in some hallucination of her father's, that his treasure, contained in the envelope, was probably nothing more valuable than scraps of paper.

"Poor girl!" he murmured again, as, yielding almost unconsciously to the spirit with which he had accepted the trust, he put up the lid of the desk and locked it.

CHAPTER VII.

AS he locked the envelope up in his desk, Jack remembered suddenly that the girl and he had seen her father coming through the gate; he must have been coming from the house, had perhaps been paying a visit to one of the servants, or, not improbably, to Mr. Chalfont himself, for all sorts and conditions of men paid visits to the great financier, who had so many irons in the fire.

Jack went downstairs and knocked at the door of the den; there was no answer, and, thinking that Mr. Chalfont had gone to bed, Jack was turning away, when he saw a streak of light under the door. He knocked again, and, receiving no answer, opened the door and went in. Mr. Chalfont was leaning back in his chair, his hands grasping his arms, his head sunk on his breast.

"Are you asleep, sir?" said Jack.

There was no response, and he went up to the figure and laid his hand gently on its shoulder. Even as he touched him Jack knew what had happened; he bent down and looked at the still face for a moment, then sprang to the door and called, in a voice of fear and horror. It seemed as if it were only a moment later that the room was filled with frightened men and women, who exclaimed in terror-stricken accents as they gazed at that motionless figure.

"Mr. Chalfont is ill; telephone for the doctor," commanded Jack, hoarsely.

The butler, who had gone to his master, shook his head as he looked up at Jack.

"It's too late, sir; he's dead."

"Oh, it isn't possible!" cried Jack, fighting against his own conviction. "He was quite well an hour—a little while ago. Send them out of the room."

WAR REVIEW.

The Teutonic Allied forces in Macedonia and Turkey still are in flight before the armies of the Entente while on the highly important Balkan front in France the British and French armies, after hard fighting, have drawn more closely their lines in the investment of the town on the northwest, west and south. The stubborn resistance of the Germans in defense and in counter attacks had been unavailing except to impede the progress of the men of the British Field Marshal Haig, and General Deney. In Macedonia the Bulgarians and German troops are still faced with disaster. In Palestine the remaining Turks seem to have scarcely a chance for escaping from the British forces and friendly tribesmen who are closing in upon them east of the River Jordan. More than 40,000 prisoners and 265 guns have been taken by the British, and the General Allenby's appetite for further emoluments for his hard campaign has not been satisfied. Gauged by the swiftness of the strokes Allenby is delivering, it is his purpose absolutely to overwhelm the Ottoman and fulfillment of his plans seems appreciably near. In a less critical situation are the Germans and Bulgarians in the Macedonia theatre. Here, except immediately on the Bulgarian frontier where the mountainous country gives them ground for strong resistance to the invasion of Bulgarian territory through the passes, the Bulgarians and Germans everywhere are in rapid retreat before the Italian, Serbian, Greeks and British. Retreating in twain at several points, the enemy forces are bewildered and operating separate units respectively on the western and eastern flanks. The Teutonic Allied forces in Macedonia and Turkey still are in sight before the armies of the Entente, while on the highly important St. Quentin sector in France the British and French armies, after hard fighting, have drawn more closely their lines in the investment of the town on the northwest, west and south. The stubborn resistance of the Germans in defense and in counter attacks has been unavailing except to impede the progress of the men of the armies of Field Marshal Haig and General Debeney. In Palestine the remaining Turks seem to have scarcely a chance for escaping from the British forces and friendly tribesmen who are closing in upon them east of the River Jordan. More than 40,000 prisoners and 265 guns have been taken by the British, and yet General Allenby's appetite for further movements for his hard campaign has not been satisfied. Gauged by the swiftness of the strokes Allenby is delivering, it is his purpose absolutely to overwhelm the Ottomans, and the fulfillment of his plans seems appreciably near. The sector shown for the attacks lacked communications except for great paths which were impracticable for artillery. A road was laid out from Dolje to Pokar and Grevesta, and Serbian engineers set to work vigorously. Long before the French troops, to whom had been assigned the task of piercing the Bulgarian line, were in position, the Allied staff established quarters on the ground and backed the enormous task of preparation. It was on Sept. 15th at 5 o'clock in the morning the Allied creeping barrage began to fire and the French Colonials went over the top. They rushed the enemy trenches with bombs and bayonet. Senegalese troops captured the first line and 900 demoralized prisoners. In a few minutes they took the whole line, except for one trench, which was crammed with machine guns. A company of Senegalese bombers attacked the trench in the rear, and it also fell.

IN MACEDONIA.

PARIS, Sept. 25. Preparations for the present great operation in Macedonia began in August, telegraphs the correspondent of the Petit Parisien on the Salonika front. Various circumstances prevented General Franquet Desperre, the Allied Commander, from beginning his preparations earlier, and quick work was imperative, for if the sum-

JAPANESE TAKE POSSESSION OF BLAGOVIESCHE.

LONDON, Sept. 25. (By the A.P.) Japanese troops took possession of Blagoviesche, the capital of the Amur Province, the capture of which was reported on Sept. 12. After the Bolshevik elements had left the town three Japanese gunboats, accompanied the Japanese transports on their journey up the river. The Russians in the district were very friendly and facilitated the progress of the Japanese squadron.

SUCCESSFUL RAID.

LONDON, Sept. 25. In Flanders last night a successful raid was carried out by the British in the neighborhood of Wolvorghen and in this and other encounters prisoners were taken, Field Marshal Haig's official report to-day announces.

PRISONERS AND GUNS TAKEN.

LONDON, Sept. 25. More than 40,000 prisoners and 265 guns have been taken by the British in their successful offensive in Palestine, it is officially announced this afternoon. The British forces operating east of the Jordan apparently are in a favorable position to cut off the Turks retreating north along the Hedjaz railway. The British are now approaching Amman, on that railway. Arab forces are pressing the retreating enemy northward from Mattan.

BRAZIL AND AUSTRIA AT WAR.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 25. A state of war now exists between Brazil and Austria, though so far there has been no formal declaration of the fact. By instruction from his Government, the Brazilian Minister at Vienna has closed his Legation, and departed for Brazil, and it is understood that the Austrian Minister at Rio de Janeiro is returning to his country shortly.

RESUMED WORK.

CARDIFF, Sept. 25. At a meeting here to-day, 3,000 railway men decided unanimously to resume work at once.

THE TRAIN STRIKE.

LONDON, Sept. 25. While the train service on the main line of the Great Western Railroad was somewhat improved to-day, service on the other railroads was discontinued by the striking engineers, firemen and engine crews who have been on strike for several days. Parts of the South Western and Great Eastern main lines were affected, and local and submarine districts were without adequate train service, compelling munition workers to walk along the railway lines to reach their work. Other city workers besieged the tramways and busses at an early hour. Freight trains generally were at a standstill during the night, and the consequent congestion in the yards was very great. The Northern London railway resumed passenger service early to-day.

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND DEAD.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 25. Archbishop John Ireland of the St. Paul Diocese, Roman Catholic Church, died at 3.55 o'clock this morning after a long illness of heart disease and stomach trouble. He was 80 years old.

COMPLETE VICTORY.

LONDON, Sept. 24. Detailed reports of operations in Palestine lag considerably behind events there. The latest reports from the Associated British correspondents sent from Nabulus on Monday emphasize the thoroughness of the destruction of the 7th and 8th Turkish armies. Remnants of these forces which succeeded in crossing Jordan river, are isolated, and are almost entirely without war materials. "There has been no more complete victory in history," the correspondent says. "Groups of men have been found sitting under white flags awaiting the acceptance of their surrender." Aside from more than 260 guns captured, vast quantities of ammunition are lying everywhere, some munition depots covering acres of ground. It is reported that if the Turks try to raise new armies to replace those destroyed, they must call on Germany to supply every gun and every instrument of war, as the Turks manufacture only small arm ammunition. The correspondent describes a remarkable spectacle around Balata. This area was strewn with wreckage of the retreat. Here alone the British captured 87 cannon, a thousand of horse-drawn vehicles, hundreds of motor lorries and field kitchens, water carts and masses of other implements. This material mingled with thousands of bodies of Turks, Germans and horses block the roads. Much of the destruction was wrought by airplanes which swooped down upon the retreating columns and dropped bombs from a low altitude until whole columns became vast broken masses of men. Those who escaped wounds or death fled to the hills abandoning everything. Many of these were captured by cavalry while others sought refuge in the British lines.

AIR RAIDS ON GERMAN TOWNS.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 25. Forty-seven air raids were made on German towns during the month of August, according to an official statement issued at Berlin. This statement says that 79 persons were killed and 113 injured during the raids.

THE HYPOCRITES.

LONDON, Sept. 25. Expressing confidence in Field Marshal Von Hindenburg and General Ludendorff Chancellor Von Hertling in the German Reichstag yesterday said they would be equal to the situation and that the Allies "premature cries of victory" will soon die away. He continued "certainly the pure enthusiasm which characterized Aug. 1914 could not last but the firm resolve to hold out till the end will, despite all vacillations and vicissitudes, continue. The people at home will not leave the army in the lurch just when everything is at stake. From the first day we waged the war as a war of defence, only to defend ourselves did we invade Belgium.

GERMAN ATTACK ENTIRE FAILURE.

PARIS, Sept. 25. German troops last night made an effort to regain some valuable ground recently won from them by the French near the Western end of the Chemin des Dames. They attacked in the region of the Moisy farm in this area, but according to to-day's War Office statement the effort was an entire failure.

MAINTAINS HER READINESS.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 25. Germany maintains her readiness for peace despite repeated rejections of peace offers from the Central Powers, stated Admiral Von Hints, the German Foreign Secretary, in addressing the Reichstag's main committee. Speaking on the recent Austrian peace proposal the Foreign Secretary Acre.

The capture of the important towns of Acre and Haifa on the coast of Palestine by the British forces under General Allenby, shows in fair measure how much is being accomplished by Britain's men in the Far East. The fall of Acre to British arms for the second time, revives many historical associations, from Biblical times down to the present day, with which this ancient town is surrounded. Acre is the Acoth of the Bible, mentioned in Judges 1st chapter, 31st verse, and Acts, 21st chapter and 7th verse, (Ptolemais) and means sandy, an ancient times it was a celebrated city. No town has experienced greater changes from the calamities of war and political revolutions. Its antiquity has been proven by the discovery of ruined buildings which were built of a quality of highly sun-burnt brick, mixed with cement and sand, only used in erections of the remotest ages. To the ancients it was known by the name of Aco, but when taken possession of by the Egyptians it was given the name of Ptolemais, in honor of the Egyptian monarch of that time. From Egyptian times to the Roman Empire the extension of the Roman Empire over Asia, Ptolemais came into its possession. During the middle ages it was taken over by the Saracens, who were expelled from the town by the Crusaders in the year 1110. These made it their principal sea port and base for supplies, during the many wars for the recovery of the Holy Places, known as the Crusades. In 1187 it was retaken by the great Emperor Saladin, who held it until 1191, when it was recaptured by Richard of England and Philip of France, who purchased its conquest by the sacrifice of 100,000 men. These monarchs gave the town to the Military Order of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, from whom it received the name of St. Jean d'Acre. It remained in the possession of the Knights for a century, during which time it was subjected to continual assaults from the Saracens, finally falling into their hands in 1291 after a bloody siege from which it suffered severely. In 1517 it fell into the hands of the Turks, and in the beginning of the 18th century presented little more than a scene of ruin. Toward the end of that period it was much improved by the Turks and again arose to some importance. In modern history it is memorable for the gallantry with which it was defended (1799) by the Turks, assisted by that famous Englishman, Sir Sidney Smith, the sailor-soldier, against the French under Buonaparte, who having spent sixty-one days in unsuccessful attempts to reduce the fortifications, were forced to abandon their efforts. In the Winter of 1831-32 Acre was again besieged by the Egyptians under Ibrahim Pasha. This siege lasted for five months and twenty-one days, and before the city was taken by the revolutionaries, its public and private buildings were mostly destroyed. The Egyptian forces held the town until November 3rd, 1840, when it was reduced to ruins by a British fleet, Britain being at that time an ally of Turkey. The Turks resumed control of the town in the following year and have held it until now. British forces once more have captured it, this time as the enemy of Turkey. Acre is 80 miles N.W. of Jerusalem and 37 miles south of Tyre and has a present population of about 8,000. It is situated on a long promontory at the northern extremity of the Bay of Acre. By the capture of Haifa, (Caiffa), which is a seaport on the south of the Bay of Acre, and about 5 miles S.W. from that town, the British now may be said to have camped at the foot of Mount Carmel, as Haifa is situated at the base of Haifa's mountain (St. King's, VIII:19), so well known to Biblical students. This town has a population of 6,000. It is really the port of Acre, vessels coming to this coast frequently anchor at Haifa on account of the shelter offered by the former face during certain winds. The feat of the British cavalry in pushing up to the Mediterranean coast of Palestine through the provinces of Samaria and Galilee, and occupying these coast towns will be no little feat in reducing Turkish resistance. By capturing these places they have established for the armies of occupation, a sea base which can at all times be in touch with the naval units operating and cruising off the Syrian coast, and this will have the effect of enabling supplies of all kinds to be landed without let or hindrance by the Turks.

Major James Heard From.

The many friends of Major R. H. James, 7th Battalion, Canadian Railway Troops serving in France, will be glad to learn that he is quite well. Writing under date of August 21st, Major James says: "Some of the English papers received here (France) feature the visit of Dr. Lloyd both to England and France, but so far, no account of his visit to your Regiment has been seen. The Overseas Pressmen are well regarded and ditto treated by the people of England. From this fact it can be well understood why there is a tendency to overstay the pass granted at home. Meanwhile the war goes on, with interesting developments which keep the Boche guessing in what part of his anatomy he is going to receive the next poke. The Railway Troops have been engaged building new railways for the armies of His Majesty all summer. The King honored us with his presence some time ago and was in a fair measure of inspection of our line. His Majesty expressed himself as being well pleased with what he saw, particularly a steam shovel and a ballast spreading device, neither of which he had seen before. I enclose copy of our Field Day Sports Programme, scheduled for Sunday, August 25th, which may interest some of the folk. After this event we shall have to hike to parts unknown."

SPORTS PROGRAMME:

That the "boys" over there enjoy themselves during days of rest "spent at the back," will be shown by the following programme of events, put on by the 7th Battalion, Canadian Railway Troops, France, Sunday, August 25th:
1. Standing Broad Jump; 2. High Jump; 3. 100 yards Flat Race; 4. Putting Shot; 5. Boxing (lightweight); 6. Boxing (heavyweight); 7. Pick-a-Back Wrestling; 8. Wrestling on Mules; 9. Mule Race; 10. Sack Race; 11. Potato Race; 12. Wheelbarrow Race; 13. Mile Relay; 14. Tap-a-Way; 15. 1/2 Mile Mule Race; 16. 1/2 Mile Horse Race.

Assaulted Police Officers.

At 2 o'clock this morning, in Sebastian Street, Constable Thos. Murphy was assaulted by parties who were arrested this morning. Accompanied by Constable Wm. Flynn, he went to the street where four rowdies were carrying a 70 year old laborer. In attempting to round up the rascals, the officers separated, and Wade was confronted by the half-crazy boogies, who threatened his life if he did not get out of the neighborhood. In retreating, he was struck in the back with a stick, and his assailants moved around the corner, making a charge on Murphy, who was downed, kicked about the ribs and arms, and beaten with sticks. A woman, Mrs. McManus, who interfered, was also ill-treated, and kicked about the body. By the time Constable Wade arrived to the rescue of his brother officer, the rascals had escaped. During the night, Dr. Rendell attended the wounded policemen.

Police Make Liquor Seizure.

One Cask and Two Jars of Spirits Comprising the Haul. Sensational Developments Expected.

This morning, at 3.10, an employee of the Star Candy Factory was arrested on Casey's Street with two jars of alleged high-proof rum in his possession. Constable Shepherd made the capture, and he was accompanied by Sergeant Furlong, and Constables Forsey and Wade. These officers were east-bound on New Gower Street when Constable Shepherd glimpsed a man passing by Casey Street, just near where the old "Coffin House" was formerly situated. He made a run up Barron's St. and Forsey and Wade sprinted up Duddy's Lane, and as they reached Casey's Street flashed their lights on the fugitive who had the two jars in his hands. He dropped the booze when apprehended and asked to be freed. This request, however, the police refused, and the man and his rum were taken to the police station, where he was recognized as being the man they had seen earlier in the night, in the Star Candy Factory, which they had visited, finding the door open and all the lights aglow. Prisoner was the one who had said, as he showed them in: "Things are alright here; we are working," and it was very reasonably supposed that the factory was the home of the booze. After putting the capture behind the bars, Sgt. Furlong, accompanied by Constables Shepherd, Forsey and Wade, raided the factory, where they found the watchman asleep. Searching the building, they found an empty pall smelling strongly of rum, and a little later a cask of rum was located. Corking and sealing the cask, they rolled it to the doorway, and questioning the watchman, whom they found asleep at his post, and awakened, elicited that he knew nothing whatever of the stuff, and that he had not seen anybody on the premises during the night. The cask was carted to the police station to be used as evidence.

PLEADS GUILTY.

The man, in whose possession was found the two jars and one bottle of rum, was before Judge McCarthy this morning, and after Sgt. Furlong's evidence was taken, and the prisoner having pleaded guilty of the larceny of the rum from the Star Candy Co., he was sentenced to a $15 fine, or 30 days imprisonment.

Tuesday's Railway Accident.

SOME FURTHER PARTICULARS.
Special to Evening Telegram:
STEPHENVILLE CROSSING, Sept. 25, 1918.
West bound express of Monday after six hours delay at Topsails, went off track, Tuesday, about two miles west of Curling. Train was rounding a curve at a very steep embankment when second class car, which was third, left the rails, pulling dining car, first class car and two sleepers with it. Second class car toppled completely over and went down the embankment. Dining car was partly down in the gulch and the other cars were just turned over. Engine and baggage car remained on track. One person, Philomena O'Neill, of Holyrood, going to Boston, who was sitting on a chair on rear platform of sleeper was thrown under car and killed instantly. The passengers in the second class car had miraculous escapes from death. Some met very severe injuries. One of the volunteers standing on the platform of the second class car jumped, as the car turned, and ran down the embankment, reaching the bottom before car unhurt. There was a large passenger list. The passengers were brought to Curling and Humbermouth and were well attended. Many lady passengers on board are suffering from shock and some have slight injuries. The accident occurred at 4.10 p.m., Conductor Noseworthy being in charge of train. No cause has yet been assigned.

"An Autumn chill is in the air,
The Winter cold will soon be here,
And whilst the burning question's Coal,
Still must you have warm Underwear."

Men's Winter Underwear

is a specialty of ours and we advertise it a lot, as there is always, somehow or other, a lot of winter around Newfoundland. And sometimes people say, "Are you agents for Stanfield Underwear?" And we say, "We are sorry we aren't." We suppose the reason we are asked this is because we are always advertising that is Real Good Underwear.

Perhaps we stock more Stanfield's Underwear than any other Underwear, but we also carry a large stock of Men's New Knit Underwear.

The "New Knit" is made by St. John's labor, and many lines are good value, and that is why we are always endeavouring to get for our customers as well as rendering them the best service possible in those strenuous times.

Our Prices

for these two makes of Underwear in Winter Weights

are as Low as Obtainable Anywhere,

Perhaps even lower, and we carry a full range of the various qualities and sizes, so that you can always be certain of our being able to take care of your requirements. If you require

Boys' Winter Wool Underwear

we stock it in Stanfield Makes,

and we have also CHILDREN'S STANFIELD COMBINATION SUITS and SLEEPERS in stock at the moment.

"Waiting"
(Im) patiently.

Mitro Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—A big number of Govt. officials in St. John's are patiently waiting the arrival of Premier Lloyd, with the (live horse, you'll get grand hope, that the absent great man will permit the Government to give the "half paid civil servant a few-dollar raise on his salary.

I wonder if the figures of some of the salaries of our civil servants were shown to Dr. Lloyd, would the heart of the great patriot be touched? They say he is an educationalist—this mushroom Premier—well, let him delve into figures and solve the mathematical problem "how a man can live in such times as those on a salary (maximum) of seven hundred dollars a year?" Such a problem of course does not appeal to the noble Lloyd or to the well-fed and clothed Cashin and Coaker and associates. They do not have to weary heart and brain to seek solve the hard proposition of life that faces the poor civil servant in St. John's to-day.

It would be interesting to know (not that it will ever be told to us, no, no,) how many hundreds of salaries of underpaid men could have been increased substantially with the monies that the admirable Dr. Lloyd has unstintingly spent on "his little trip" Empire inspecting—and for what?

Why, one unrecognized poor telegraph or postal official does more in his daily handling of duty FOR THE PUBLIC GOOD than Dr. Lloyd has accomplished for all his days abroad.

Is it beneficial to the public that our Premier disports himself amidst royalty, and has his noble—though bulky—person photographed by the "mover man?" Not much.

Is it going to lessen one cent the cost of living? Is it going to reduce the prices of coal or provisions?

The only one that I can see who benefits anything from Dr. Lloyd's "holiday making" is—Dr. Lloyd—and the good Doc knows it.

"But he's coming home"—ah me, ah me. Arise in your thousands, citizens of the Dominion, and rejoice, and be happy—the Doctor IS COMING HOME—and there will be no more want or deprivation, for the cheerful "SMILE of the pogy PRIMTYER will lighten all our woes."

In the meantime the officials at the Post Office, the Custom House, the Penitentiary and Asylum and Poor House await the beloved Doctor, for Mr. Cashin says and so does friends Coaker and Halfyard that when Dr. Lloyd comes the "rise" will be given.

In the interim "Live horse you'll get grass."

Yours truly,

Wedding.

TUCKER-WATTS.
St. Thomas's Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding Tuesday afternoon, when Lt. C. Frank Watts, one of the Blue Puttee Boys, led to the altar Miss, Alice Lillian, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Tucker, the Rev. Dr. Jones officiating. The bride who was handsomely attired in lace over white silk, with veil and wreath of orange blossoms, and carrying a bouquet of white sweet peas, asters and maiden-hair fern, looked charming as she entered the church leaning on the arm of her father. She was attended by Miss Ethel Tucker, Miss Florence Watts, sisters of the bride and groom, and Miss Jean Shields, who were daintily attired in coral pink and white silk, with black hats. The little flower girls, Gertrude Webber and Dorothy Watts, niece of the bride and groom, respectively, looked very pretty in dresses of yellow silk with Dutch bonnets, and carried bouquets of sweet peas, white Sert. Major Andrews performed the duties of best man. After the ceremony the party drove to the residence of the bride's parents, where the reception was held. Quite a number of friends of the bride and groom were present, and a very enjoyable time was spent. The happy couple were the recipients of many useful and valuable presents.

ON BULLYING.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Daughter, irri-
tably, "Mother
you simply must remember that telephone number."
Mother, nervously,
"Well I can't
seem to. Was it 314?"
Daughter, cross-
ly, "No it wasn't,
it was 624. How can you forget
things so? Why,
you must have called that up
thousand times when you lived here." Mother, apologetically, "but I've been away quite a while."
Daughter, impatiently, "Well go ahead and call up anyway."
While waiting to use a telephone booth, the other day, I was the audience to the above conversation, between two people whom, as you perceive, I immediately decided were mother and daughter.
(I'll leave it to you if they could have been anything else.)

Why Will We Bully Those We Love?

And as I listened I wondered why I will she—and you and I—bully people whom we love, that way?
And especially over little things, things that don't matter, and things that our bullying doesn't change in the least.
Really it is appalling, when one thinks how many of the things that we scold and fuss and nag about, belong to these classes.
He Never Passes Over These Silps.
I know a man whose wife has the nervous habit of saying just the opposite of what she means—"hot" when she means "cold," "day" when she means "night," etc. He knows she has this habit, he knows it is the result of advancing age and nervousness, and probably incurable. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, he knows what she actually means. And yet I never heard her make a mistake in his presence that he didn't either give a little sarcastic laugh or else ask crossly, "Don you mean so-and-so?" Naturally the effect is not to tranquillize her nerves or make it any easier for her to say the right thing.
Nothing in the world could be more foolish than to let your tranquillity and the tranquillity of those about you be marred by making much of such things.

No Fretting Could Change The Fact.
Doubtless, it did seem absurd to the daughter that the mother shouldn't remember a telephone number she had called a hundred times. But the fact remained that she didn't remember it. To fuss over it didn't change the fact, and did fret her mother and make things generally unpleasant.
When these things come up (as they inevitably do in everyone's life), I say to myself, "You know you can't do any good by fussing, and you know you'll be sorry afterward if you are irritable."
And sometimes I succeed in teaching myself wisdom.
And sometimes I don't.

This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family for years, and consider it the best liniment on the market. I have found it excellent for horse flesh.

Fish is better when fried in oil.

Rice is better when it has cooked

Excellent breakfast pancakes can

PEACE TERMS.
I asked a Belgian mother what her terms of peace would be.
And I asked a lonely widow of a sailor drowned at sea,
And I asked the old and helpless who had seen the Hungarians
And had trudged like driven cattle over desolated France.
"Men who hear the brunt of battle,"
they replied with eyes agleam.
"We may rest when you have shattered every brutal Prussian's dream."
"It is not with men you're fighting, when you grapple with the Hun;
It's with brutes who murder women with the bayonets on the guns.
True, the shape of them is human,
but the soul of them is beast.
On the way that they have led us they
and all their kind should feast.
If you smile and settle with them
To their level, you descend;
For the man that you're at peace with, has the right to call you friend."
"You may rest when you can tell us that the Prussian's dream is o'er.
That the homes of gentle people shall be safe forevermore;
That through all the future ages there shall be no reign of dread,
No such grief as we have suffered,
No such mangled heaps of dead."
Men who hear the brunt of battle,
there must be no compromise,
And no peace 'till all that the Prussian in the dust forever lies.

Japanese Commander is Well Equipped.

Because Japan is the nearest of the Allies to Russia, and also because it is likely that she will send a larger force into Siberia than any of her partners in the enterprise, it is fitting that the commander-in-chief of the expedition should be Gen. Otani Kikuzo, and it appears to be generally approved by those who know anything of the man and his military record. His staff will be composed of British, French, American and probably Italian commanders, some of them ranking as major-generals, like William S. Graves, the soldier diplomat, who will be in charge of the American contingent. The commander-in-chief, too, has diplomatic qualifications for his task, which are almost as important as his military equipment, since whether the Allies are to operate in a friendly or a hostile country may depend much upon how they are handled, and this again depends chiefly upon the general in command.

A Product of Modern Japan.

The commander-in-chief has an other advantage in that he is a seventh son, but whether his father was also gifted in this way is not mentioned.
He has been a soldier from his youth up, and is 62 years old. Gen. Otani, if that is the proper way to address him since in Japan the family name comes first, while he was born at a time when Japan was steeped in feudalism, had the good fortune early in life to fall under the influence of Western ideas. In 1871 an American teacher entered the country to teach chemistry and physics and to organize schools on the American model, and one of his first pupils was this slender, well-developed boy who was later to become one of Japan's most trusted military officers. It was in this year that the Japanese Government opened the army and navy to all classes of people, and deprived the Samurai or aristocratic class of their dearest privilege, namely, that of having the exclusive right to bear arms. It appears that the Otanis, though a prominent and long-established family, did not belong to the Samurai, but the new law paved the way for Kikuzo.

Fought Against Russia.

He remained at his studies until of military age, and then with a well-trained body and a broadened mind he entered the army as a private. His rapid advance in rank was no doubt due to the great advantages he had over most of his comrades, for he was made a sub-lieutenant in 1879, a lieutenant in 1883, a captain in 1894, and a major the year following. When the war with China broke out in 1894 he was made transport officer, and had charge of what would then be considered very large troop movements. He was promoted to the rank of colonel, and just before the war with Russia, at a time when the Japanese Government had made up its mind that a war was certain, Otani was made major-general. He went to Manchuria and commanded a division of the Fourth Army. He served with distinction at the Battle of Liaoyang and through the long and fierce campaign in the Spring of 1905 that ended in the capture of Mukden and the final defeat of the Russians.

Fine Type of Commander.

In 1909 he was gazetted lieutenant-general, and in this capacity served as the right-hand man of General Kamio when war was declared on Germany and the Japanese naval and military expedition was sent to capture Tsing-tao. Since that time he has been commander of the garrison there.
General Otani is well acquainted with both German and Russian character and has had experience of the Hun propaganda, which has tried to penetrate every part of Asia. He knows the Russians both as enemies and as allies, and is thoroughly conversant with the conditions that will obtain in the Siberian campaign. He is said to be a strict disciplinarian and in every worthy respect a fine representative of a modern Japanese soldier, for he has been a close student of the new developments of warfare as revealed in the past four years, and is deeply in the confidence of the military representatives of the allied armies in Japan.

Japan is Keen.

All reports from Japan indicate that the country is entering upon the Siberian adventure with the greatest enthusiasm. The army has long desired that it might be permitted to take a more active part in the struggle against the Hun, and leading Japanese statesmen are equally anxious that the other allies should be convinced that Japan is not in the war merely to play for her own hand, but to help rid the world of the German menace. Though the army has been perforce inactive, its training has been intensified in the past four years and many improvements have been made as suggested by the events on the western front. Japanese military observers have been going and coming between military headquarters at Tokyo and military headquarters in France, and the Japanese army in Russia will be magnificently equipped and trained for the task before it—

THE GARDENER.
 The man who doesn't do his bit
 is worthy of no
 pardon; and I feel
 cherty, I admit,
 when I survey
 my garden. I always hated honest
 toil, but war-
 time needs impressed me, and I got down and tilled
 the soil, although the stunt distressed me. And now, through Autumn's golden haze, I view the greens I've nourished, the product of my lonesome days, the plants that grew and flourished. My cocclebeurs are large and tall, they grew in rank profusion; my neighbor views them o'er the wall, and makes profane allusion. My sunflowers stand, some twelve feet high, majestic in their beauty, and turn their faces to the sky as though I were a duty. Between the coalhouse and the shed where stands my shorthorn heifer, the milkweed rears its stately head, and bows to every zephyr.
 Bull thistles shade the fertile soil, and none of you is knowing how much of hard and earnest toil it took to keep them growing. My prunes and squash and cabbage died, but I have compensation; my dandelions are my pride, the finest in the nation!
 I stand and view my handiwork with wholesome satisfaction, and how I loathe the slacking shirk who took no proper action! A man should raise enough of greens to feed his own gross body, and though I rather stumbled on beans, my limpson weeds are gaudy.

Bull Durham Cigarette Tobacco.
 You can make for yourself with your own hands the nicest, most fragrant, most enjoyable cigarette in the world. Machines cannot imitate it. The only way to get that freshness, that lasting satisfaction—is to roll your own with Genuine Bull Durham Tobacco, 10¢ each. For sale at CASE'S East End Tobacco Store,
 Water Street.
