WEDNESDAY EVENING, JUNE 12, 1872

Town and County News.

The Drayton Enterprise records the death of Mrs. Samuel Robertson, after a severe and lingering illness.

Five or six farmers left on Monday for North Carolina on a prospecting tour, some having the intention of buying farms there.

The Canadian Ice Keeper's Guide is an excellent and very manual for those who keep bees. It is written by J. H. Thomas the well-known bee-keeper. For sale by Mr. J. Anderson.

The inefficient colors to be presented by the ladies of Walkerton, Kinross and Southampton, to the Bruce Battalion, have arrived from England. The Battalion will bring them into use at the Windsor Camp.

Whitby Chronicle.—This excellent paper has been enlarged to thirty-six columns, and the enterprising proprietor has furnished his office with a new power press, new type, and other improved printing material, by the skillful use of which the paper presents a very handsome appearance.

Billiards.—The Hamilton Times says:—On Monday evening Mr. A. Egerer, of this city, played a friendly game of billiards at Egerer's billiard hall, Kingston, Ont. The score was 71 runs in the large room, and 114 of an average. Mr. Egerer's greatest run during the game was 36, average run 13. Quite a large number assembled to witness the game.

The Wellington Field Battery.—The Battery leaves for Windsor on Monday at one o'clock. It will remain at London all night, and proceed next day to the camp along with the London Battery. The battery will consist of the Battalion (including the left wing from Puslinch), and 57 horses. The officers are Capt. Macdonald, First Lieutenant McGee and Nicoll, and second Lieutenant Macdonald. The Wellington Battalion, we believe, does not leave till the morning of the 14th inst.

Appals from Magistrate's Convictions on Sunday.—A correspondent asks:—How is it that so many convictions for the above offence are quashed on appeal to the Judge of the County? Is it because half of the fine going to the informer, the party convicted compromise the matter with that personage by paying him the amount he would receive, minus the olivine, trouble &c., if the conviction was sustained by the Superior Court? At least such is the supposition current and on no mean authority either. If so, the law requires amendment on this point, and by paying him the amount he would receive, minus the olivine, trouble &c., if the conviction was sustained by the Superior Court? Debate on the Treaty.

The Washington Treaty has been again the subject of discussion in the British Parliament. Mr. Gladstone stated on Tuesday that his Government had made a proposal to the United States for a postponement of the meeting of the Board of Arbitration at Geneva for eight months, and defended the course of the Government as honorable to both countries.

A New York paper says: For many days, from twenty to forty thousand workmen have been idle in New York city. The cost of maintaining these men, their wives and their children, during this time, must have been enormous.

LARGE quantities of copper ore from the Huntington Mine are now being shipped to England. It is carted to Waterloo, sent to St. Johns by railway, conveyed from thence in barges to Quebec, and at the latter port re-shipped in sailing vessels.

BERNINOY PARLIAMENT.

Sir John A. Macdonald rose to move an address to his Excellency the Governor-General. He said it was known that Lord Lisgar was about to retire from the government of this country; he had been in this country more than three years, and during the whole of his administration he had performed the high duties of his position as representative of our most grateful Queen in a manner to command the respect and esteem of all classes of the people of the country generally, and especially of the representatives of the people in Parliament.

Sir F. Hincks moved the House into Committee on a resolution respecting the repeal of the duties on tea and coffee. He explained that it was proposed to allow all tea and coffee imported from any other country than the United States to come in free of duty, also tea and coffee coming through the United States in bond from any other country, but all tea and coffee imported direct from the United States would be liable to the same duty that the United States produce impose, namely, on tea not imported direct from China.

Sir F. Hincks introduced a bill for the relief of the subscribers on Friday night, the 7th, an aged roan cow, with a dark face, newly calved, in fair condition. Any one returning her or giving such information as will lead to her recovery will be suitably rewarded.

construction of all necessary canals at once.

On the motion to receive the report on Militia Estimates, Mr. Fournier moved a resolution that nothing in the present circumstances of the Dominion can justify the expenditure of so large a sum as $1,500,000 demanded for Militia Service.

Hon. Mr. Blake asked whether the Government had received any communication with respect to the recent kidnapping case at London, and whether the Atlantic cable had been used in order that speedy justice might be done in the matter.

Sir John A. Macdonald said a few days ago he was informed by telegram of the matter. He replied at once, asking that a statement of the facts of the case be at once forwarded. Those papers were received yesterday, and upon them a statement of the case was prepared and forwarded to Her Majesty's representative at Washington, and also to Her Majesty's Government.

CHAPTER I.

THE PAINTING—THE ARTIST AND HIS WIFE—
THE STORY—THE DRIFTING SHIP.

"Ah little gipsy, little gipsy," he exclaimed, "how dare mamma and you invade papa's sanctum in such a stealthy way? Ah, how dare you?" added, as fondly he kissed them both, and caught the child in his arms, and held it as high in the air as he could reach, to baby's wild delight, who laughed and screamed with very glee.

"Because we thought papa had been long enough in his sanctum, and could not see to work any longer," answered the young wife in the happiest of tones. "Besides," she continued, "tea is ready and baby will soon be going to sleep. Then, catchingsight of the almost finished picture, she gave vent to an admiring exclamation, and stood for some moments in silence examining it by the decreasing light of twilight.

"Oh, Kenneth," she cried, in rapturous accents, "how vivid the painting has become since morning!"
"And so it should, my darling, seeing that I have spent the whole day in trying to make it so. How do you like it? Have I realised the scene in any measure?"

"Oh, it is grand, Kenneth; grand and true. It is a great picture; it will bring you fame. It will make you known as you should be known."

"Ah, if all my critics were as lenient and partial as my own little wife, the picture would be sure to be praised," he answered with a merry laugh. "But unfortunately for my ease of mind, it will be subjected to cold incorable eyes, whose chief business will be to find flaws and blemishes, and this fault and that fault will be found by men who are more concerned to show their own critical knowledge than to give honest encouragement to the artist."

"None who are competent to judge will, if they speak truly, disparage a painting like that," exclaimed the fair creature, with earnest warmth. "Are you not satisfied yourself, dear Kenneth, that it is the greatest thing you have done?"

"The praise of my Lucy is satisfaction enough for me," he fondly replied. "Seriously, however, I do not think it is the best I have done. As you know, it has been summer's work, and I have devoted much time, care, and study to it. I have thrown my whole soul and strength into it, and, on the whole, it pleases me, though I know how greatly I have failed to reach the sublimity of the scene. It lacks, too, one thing to make it perfect in the assemblage of its features."

"What is that, dear Kenneth?" asked Lucy, running her eye with care over the picture. "I see nothing you have missed, and I know the scene so well now, having gazed at it scores of times."

"Not missed exactly," he smilingly returned. "Fortunately the feature I allude to has not been presented to me, yet my artistic sense informs me that it is wanting to complete the representation of the scene in storm such as I have painted it."

"And what is the feature that is wanting?" inquired Lucy, studying the picture again, and with a puzzled look.
"A shipwreck on these terrible rocks?" answered Kenneth.

"Lucy started back shocked.
"Oh, Kenneth, a shipwreck! Thank heaven, that has not occurred to go into your picture!"

"Amn, my darling, I only speak from a painter's point of view, and no one can doubt that it would render the scene on canvas more vivid, more realistic. I had at one time some thought of inserting an ideal catastrophe, for the fishermen told me that several wrecks have taken place on these very rocks; but when my imagination went to work I saw how wrong it would be to introduce an ideal feature which all else was faithful reality. So I relinquished the thought. Still my Lucy, the longer one gazes at that stormy sea, dashing foam over these black jagged rocks, the idea is confirmed that a shipwreck would not only be keeping with the surroundings, but would heighten and intensify the effect. It would concentrate the interest of the entire picture and draw its power together as in a focus."

"But at the cost of adding painful thoughts to the mind of the onlooker, rejoined Lucy—thoughts of pity and fear, of sadness and regret for the doomed vessel and those on board—for in such an angry sea no one could reach them, and no hope of rescue could be entertained."

"There my Lucy speaks out of her tender and humane heart," said Kenneth, bestowing upon her another fond smiling glance. "But see, which one you have fallen the light of the day has quite departed, and Carry has gone to sleep; so we shall adjourn to the parlor, put her to bed, and have our tea; and then, my love, we shall have one of our quiet happy evenings."

A pretty and interesting sight was the interior of the brightly lighted parlor with baby's crib in one corner, in which was revealed the golden head and beautiful face of the little innocent sleeper, and with Lucy and Kenneth sitting opposite each other at the tea table, so full of love and happiness, and deep, pure joy. The freshness and ardour of their first affection were still upon their souls and beaming on their faces, as if their cup of bliss was full and satiating.

"Oh, Kenneth, how the tempest increase," said Lucy, as the thundering sound of the roaring wind and the dashing waves were reported to their chamber.
"Indeed it does. I think you have realised your oft-expressed wish to see a storm before we leave."

"Shall we leave soon, dear?" asked Lucy.
"In a week or two now, I expect. Shall you be glad to go?"
"Indeed no, I shall quit this place with regret. We have been so happy all the summer, and baby has thriven so nicely."

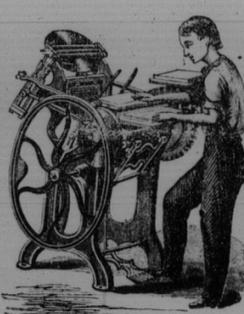

"Nevertheless," added Kenneth, "the season is now too far advanced for sea-side quarters, and I do not feel it so desirable to finish my picture on the spot. We should have returned home ere this. But such is the penalty my Lucy has to pay for becoming the wife of a poor, struggling artist."

"Your Lucy does not think the penalty a very heavy one," was the loving reply, as the speaker came and bent on the back of the chair and ran her fair fingers affectionately through his glossy raven locks.

He drew her towards him, and fondly kissed, then gazed long and tenderly into her beautiful glowing countenance, so radiant with admiring pride and wisely devotion.

"We are told that sundry good women of Boston have formed a mending and repairing society, and will soon on buttons, darn stockings, and do other kind of service for unfortunates at half the usual rates, and be very particular not to steal or destroy their garments."

GRAND GIFT CONCERT

IN AID OF THE
Public Library of Kentucky,
At Louisville, Kentucky.

By authority of the act of the Legislature of Kentucky, the Trustees will give the SECOND GRAND GIFT CONCERT in the Grand Hall of the Public Library building in Louisville, Ky., on

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1872.

This magnificent hall, known as Westcott Hall, is the largest, most centrally located, and best arranged for large and fashionable audiences of any in Louisville, and is fitted up in superb style. The building has a front of 100 feet on Fourth street, and a depth of 250 feet, four stories in height, and was recently purchased for the Public Library at a cost of $200,000. Three large rooms are now fitted up for a library, and contain about 20,000 volumes and a museum of 100,000 specimens, now open and free to the gratuitous use and enjoyment of all citizens of every State in the Union. It is the purpose of the Trustees by the Grand Gift Concert now announced to raise the money with which to pay the balance of the purchase money due upon the Public Library building, to enlarge the library, and to so endow the institution as to make it self-sustaining and forever beyond the necessity of calling upon any individual who uses the books for the contribution of a single cent toward its support.

100,000 TICKETS OF ADMISSION

will be issued at 100 tickets for 25 cents; 25 tickets for 50 cents; 10 tickets for 100 cents; 5 tickets for 200 cents; 2 tickets for 500 cents; 1 ticket for 1,000 cents. No discount on less than 100 worth of tickets at a time.

Tickets will be sent, when requested, by registered mail. The money for admission may be sent by Adams Express Co. and its connections, by O. R. money order, registered letter or bank draft.

The holder of each ticket, or fraction of a ticket in half or quarter, is entitled to admission to the concert, and to the gift awarded to it. During the concert the sum of
