THE PSALMS OF DAVID IN METRE.

PSALM 1. C. M.

HOW blest and happy is the man
Who walketh not astray
In counsel of ungodly men,
Nor stands in sinners' way,
Nor sitteth in the scorner's chair,
But places his delight
Upon God's law, and meditates
On his law day and night.

He shall be like a tree that grows
Beside a river's side,
Which in its season yields its fruit,
And green its leaves abide.
And all he does shall prosper well:
The wicked are not so,
But like the chaff before the wind,
Are driven to and fro.
In judgment therefore shall not stand
Such as ungodly are;
Nor in the assembly of the just
Shall wicked men appear.

Because the way of godly men
Is to Jehovah known,
Whereas the way of wicked men
Shall quite be overthrown.

PSALM 1. L. M. 6 lines.

HOW blest the man that doth not Linger
Whose wicked counsel tempts his feet;
Who stands not in the sinner's way,
And sits not in the scorner's seat,
But in God's law he takes delight,
And meditates both day and night.

He shall be like the tree that springs
Where streams of water gently glide,
Which plentiful fruit in season brings,
And ever green its leaves abide.
Thus shall prosperously stand
The good man's work, till life shall end.

Not so ungodly men, for they
Like chaff before the wind are driven;
Hence they'll not stand in judgment day,
Nor mingle with the saints in heaven.
The Lord approves the good man's path,
But sinners' ways shall end in wrath.

PSALM 2. C. M.

WHY rage the heathen? and vain things
Why do the people mind?
The kings of earth do not themselves,
And princes are combined,

To plot against the Lord, and his Anointed, saying thus:
Let us smother break their hands,
And cut their cords from us.

But he that sits in heaven shall laugh;
Jehovah shall deride them all;
Then shall he speak in burning wrath,
His anger and dread shall on them fall.
In rage he vex them shall.

Yet I my King anointed have
Upon my holy hill;
And reign as King on Zion mount
For evermore be will.

The sure decree I will declare;
The Lord hath said to me,
Thou art my only Son; this day
I have begotten thee.

Ask me, and for thy heritage
The heathen I'll make thine;
And, for possession, I to thee
Will give earth's utmost line.

Thou shalt be as with a mighty rod
Of iron break them all in pieces;
And then, as potter's vessel, thou
Shalt dash in pieces small.

Now, therefore, kings, be wise; be taught,
Ye judges of the earth,
In holy fear Jehovah serve,
And tremble in your mirth.

And his Son, lest in his ire
Ye perish from the way,
If once his wrath begin to burn,
Bliss all that call on his day.

PSALM 2. 7s.

WHY do heathen nations rage?
Why vain things do people mind?
Kings of earth in league engaged,
Rulers are in league combined.

Thus against the Lord they speak,
Thus against his Christ they say,
"Let us join their hands to break,
Let us cast their cords away."

He shall laugh who sits above,
God Most High shall scorn them all;
Them in anger fierce reprove;
Burning wrath shall on them fall.

Yet according to my will,
Have I set my King to reign;
Him on Zion's holy hill,
My Anointed, I'll maintain.

Thus hath said the Lord Most High,
I will publish the decree:
Thee I own my Son, for I
Have this day begotten thee.

Ask, for heritage I'll make
All the heathen nations thine;
Thou shalt in possession take
Earth to thy remotest line.

Let thy rod of iron fall;
Break them with thy sceptre's sway!
Dash them into pieces small,
Like the potter's brittle clay.

Therefore, kings, be wise, give ear;
Hearken, judges of the earth;
Learn to serve the Lord with fear,
Mingling trembling with your mirth.

Fear his wrath, and kiss the Son,
Lest ye perish from the way,
When his wrath is but begun,
Blest are all that on him stay.

PSALM 2. L. M.

WHY do the heathen storm with
The people vainly devise? (ire)
The rulers craftily conspire,
The kings of earth rebellious rise.

Against the Lord they plot their hands,
Against him and his Christ they say,
"Annoyed let us break their bands,
And from us cast their cords away."

He that in heaven sits shall laugh,
Jehovah shall deride them all;
Then as he speaks in burning wrath,
His anger and dread shall on them fall.

"Yet notwithstanding I ordain," Thus shall he speak his sov'reign will,
"He my anointed King shall reign,
On Zion, my own holy hill."

Thus spake to me the Holy One,
I enter now the Lord's decree,
"Thou art proclaimed my only Son,
This day have I begotten thee."

"Ask for inheritance thou see,
And I will make the heathen thine,
And for possession, give to thee
The earth to its remotest line."

"An iron sceptre thou shalt sway,
And with it break and crush them all;
Even like the potter's brittle clay,
Thou shalt them dash in pieces small."

And now, ye kings, be wise and hear;
Ye judges of the earth;
See that ye serve the Lord with fear,
And mingle trembling with your mirth.

Unto the Son your homage pay,
Lest, when his wrath begins to flame,
Ye fall and perish from the way,
Bliss all that call on his name.

PSALM 2. C. M.

O LORD, how are my foes increased!
Against me many rise;
How many say of me, For him
In God no safety lies!

Yet thou my shield and glory art,
Thou liftest up my head;
I cried, and from his holy hill,
The Lord me answer made.

I laid me down and slept, I waked,
But God protected me;
I will not fear though thousands ten
Arrayed against me be.

Arise, O Lord, save me, my God,
Thou smitest hast my foes;
The fangs and teeth of wicked men
Are broken by thy blows.

Salvation to the Lord belongs,
In him his saints are blest;
Thy blessing, Lord, for evermore
Shall on thy people rest.

PSALM 2. S. M.

O LORD, how my foes increase!
Against me many rise,
How many say of me, "In God
For him no safety lies!"

My shield and glory, Lord,
Thou liftest up my head,
I cried, and from his holy hill
The Lord me answer made.

I lay and slept, I woke,
Kept by Jehovah's care;
Though myriads compass me around,
Their hosts I will not fear.

Rise, Lord, save me, my God;
The cheeks of all my foes
Thou smitest hast; the wicked's teeth
Are broken by thy blows.

Salvation to the Lord
Alone doth appertain;
Upon thy people evermore
Thy blessing shall remain.

PSALM 4. C. M.

O HEAR me when on thee I call,
God of my righteousness;
Have mercy, hear my cry; for thou hast
Enlarged me in distress.

Ye sons of men, how long will ye
My glory turn in shame?
How long shall vanity and lies
Your willing service claim?

But know that for himself the Lord
The godly man doth choose:
The Lord, when I upon him call,
To hear will not refuse.

Fear, and sin not, talk with your heart
On bed, and silent be;
Present the gifts of righteousness,
And in the Lord trust ye.

O who will show us any good?
Is that which many say?
But of thy countenance the light,
Lord, lift on us to-day.

Upon my heart bestowed by thee
More precious than silver and gold,
Thou givest in times when corn and wine
Didst meet with them abroad.

I will both lay me down in peace,
And quiet sleep will take;
Because thou only me to death
In safety, Lord, dost make.

PSALM 4. L. M.

GOD of my righteousness, reply
In mercy to my earnest cry!
In just distress thou didst relieve,
Be gracious now, my prayer receive!

How long, ye sons of men, do ye
In vanity a while ye devise,
How long delight, and follow lies?

Yet know that ever for his own
The Lord doth choose the godly one;
And when to him my prayers ascend,
The Lord will graciously attend.

Then stand in awe, from sin depart;
And hold communion with your heart
When on your bed reclined at rest,<
And still the things of your breast.

In sacrifice of righteousness
Your homage to the Lord express;
And ever let your hearts be true,
With confidence on God Most High.

O who will show us any good?
Exclaim the restless multitude!
But lift on us, O God of grace,
Thine cheering brightness of thy face.

More joy from thee has filled my heart
Than all their corn and wine impart;
I lay me down to peaceful sleep,
For thou wilt me in safety keep.

PSALM 5. C. M.

JEHOVAH, hearken to my words,
O My meditation weigh;
O hear my cry, my King, my God,
For I to thee will pray.

Lord, thou shalt early hear my voice;
I early will direct
My prayer to thee, and looking up,
An answer will expect.

For thou art not a God that doth
In wickedness delight;
Nor will shall abide with thee,
Nor fools stand in thy sight.

All evil-doers thou dost hate,
Destroyed shall their be;
Thy bloody and deceitful man
Shall be abhorred by thee.

But I thy temple will approach
In thy abundant grace;
And I will worship in thy fear
Within thy holy place.

Because of watchful soul, O Lord,
Direct me by thy grace;
Alas! in thy righteousness they say
Make plain before my face.

For in their mouth there is no truth,
Their inward thoughts are vile;
Their throat is like an open grave,
Their tongue is full of guile.

O God, destroy them; let them fall
By plans which they devise;
Thou for their many sins hast set
For they against thee rise.

Let all who trust in thee be glad,
In shouts their praise proclaim;
Thou avest them; let all rejoice
Who love thy holy name.

For, to the righteous man, O Lord,
Thou wilt thy blessing yield;
With favor thou wilt compass him
About as with a shield.

PSALM 5. 7a

1 O JEHOVAH, hear my words,
And my supplications weigh;
Hear my cry, my King, my God,
For to thee, O Lord, I'll pray.

2 In the morning, Lord, my voice
Thou shalt hear in supplicant prayer;
In the morning, Lord, to thee
I will lift my waking eyes.

3 When, Jehovah, art a God
Who in sin cannot delight;
I shall not dwell with thee,
Nor shall fools stand in thy sight.

4 Evil-doers thou dost hate,
Lovers all destroyed shalt be;
Men of blood maddest thou,
Ever are abhorred by thee.

5 But in thy abundant grace
To thy house will I draw near;
To thy holy temple, Lord,
I will look, and bow in fear.

6 Lead me in thy righteousness;
Evensore my sin and iniquity;
And because of watchful foes,
Make thy way before me plain.

7 In their mouth there is no truth,
All their heart is full of wrong,
Like an open grave is their throat,
And they flatter with their tongue.

8 Let imaginers be destroyed,
In their sin by thee expelled;
By their counsils let them fall,
For against thee they rebelled.

9 But let all in thee who trust,
Ever glad and joyful be;
Let them joy who love thy name,
Safely guarded, Lord, by thee.

10 For Jehovah to the just
Will abundant blessings yield,
And with favour compass him
Safely round as with a shield.

PSALM 6. C. M.

1 IN thy great indignation, Lord,
Do thou rebuke me not;
Nor on me lay thy chastening hand
In thy displeasure hot.

2 Lord, I am weak, thy mercy show,
And me restore again;
O heal me, Lord, for thou dost know
My bones are filled with pain.

3 My soul is sorely vexed, but, Lord,
How long stay wilt thou make?
Return, O Lord, my soul set free,
Save for thy mercies' sake.

4 Because of thee in death there shall
No more remembrance be;
Of those that in the grave do lie
Who shall give thanks to thee?

5 I with my groaning weary am;
Through all my night of weep,
My weeping made my bed to swim,
My couch with tears to flow.

6 By reason of my weeping grief
My eyes consume away;
And through my foe, it waxed old
In fallow and decay.

7 But now depart from me, all ye
That work iniquity and sin;
Because Jehovah heard my voice
When I did mourn and cry.

8 And to my supplicating voice
The Lord didst hearing give;
When I to him address my prayer,
The Lord will it receive.

9 Let all my hatred be consumed,
And smitten with affliction;
In shame let them be driven back,
And put to sudden flight.

PSALM 6. L. M.

1 IN anger, Lord, rebuke me not;
In chastening me, mine own wrath re-
Lord, pity me, for I am weak,
And heal my bones so vexed with pain.

2 My soul is also sorely vexed;
But, Lord, how long stay wilt thou make?
Return, O Lord, my soul set free,
O save me for thy mercies' sake.

3 For they who sleep the sleep of death,
Of thee shall no remembrance have;
And who is he that will to thee
Give praise lying in the grave?

4 I with my groaning weary am;
Through all the dreary night my bed
I made to swim, and with my couch
Have watered with the tears I shed.

5 My eye, consumed with grief, grows dim,
Because of all my sorrow;
Depart, ye wicked workers all,
For God hath heard my weeping cry.

6 My supplication God hath heard,
And will receive my earnest cry,
And shame and vexed be all thy foes,
And look in shame and terror by.

PSALM 6. 8a and 7a

1 LORD, in anger do not chasten;
Thy severe wrath from me restrain;
I am weak; in my misery hasten,
O relieve my flesh from pain.

2 Sorely deep my soul are grieving;
Lord, how long [—] O pity take;
Lord, return, my soul relieving;
Save me for thy mercy's sake.

3 These the graves are more remembered;
Who give thanks among the dead;
Weariness distract my slumbers,
Tears have overflowed on my bed.

4 Sorely vexed by my oppressors,
Grief of life ago has dimmed my eye,
Mourning, and tears me all transgressors,
For the Lord hath heard my cry.

5 God hath heard my supplication;
My petition will not return;
Let my foes, with more vexation,
Back in sudden shame return.

PSALM 7. C. M.

1 O LORD my God, in thee do I
My confidence repose;
Deliver me and save from all
My persecuting foes.

2 Let like a lion fierce the foe
My soul should rend and tear,
In places tearing it, whilst there
Is no one to defend.

3 O Lord, my God, if it be so
That I committed this;
If it be so that in my hands
Iniquity there is;

4 If I rewarded ill to him
Who was at peace with me;
(Yea, ev'n the man that without cause
My foe was, I did free);

5 Then let the foe pursue and take
My soul, and my life thrust
Down to the earth, and let him lay
His honor in the dust.

6 Rise in thy wrath, Lord, raise thyself,
For my foes raging be;
And to the judgment which thou hast
Commanded, wake for me.

7 The people shall assemble then,
And unto thee draw nigh;
Return thou therefore for their sake
Unto thy place on high.

8 Jehovah shall the people judge;
My judge, Jehovah, be,
According to thy righteousness,
And inward purity.

9 O let the wicked's malice cease,
But let the just abide,
For God is righteous, and by him
The heart and reins are tried.

10 In God, who avers the pure in heart,
Is my defence and stay;
God judgeth just men, but is wrath
With sinners every day.

11 Then if the sinner do not turn,
The Lord his sword will whet;
His love he hath already bent,
And hath it ready set.

12 He also hath for him prepared
The instruments of death;
Against the persecutors he Ordained his arrows hath.

13 Behold, he with iniquity
Doth travail as in birth;
He also mischief hath conceived,
And falsehood shall bring forth.

14 He made a pit, and digged it deep,
Another there to take;
But now is he prostrate in the ditch
Which he himself did make.

15 His mischief on his guilty head
He shall himself bring down;
His lawless deeds in vengeance fall
On his devoted crown.

16 According to his righteousness
The Lord I'll magnify,
And will sing praise to the name
Of God, who in Most High.

PSALM 7. S. M.

1 O LORD, my God, in thee
Do I my trust repose;
O do thou save, and rescue me
From all my cruel foes.

2 Let thy my soul should tear,
And like a lion rend,
When no deliverer is near
To rescue and defend.

3 Let, if thy searching eye
This crime in me hath seen;
If on my hand the guilt do lie
Of this most grievous sin;

4 If evil I repaid
To one with me at peace,
(Yea, if my enemies for did aid,
And falsely did release);

5 Then let the foe in strife
Pursue me as his prey,
Tread down upon the earth my life,
In dust my honor lay.

6 In wrath lift up thy hand;
My foes are blid with rage;
Awake, and so thou didst command,
On my behalf engage.

7 So mingle with one accord
Around thee shall draw nigh;
And therefore for their sake, O Lord,
Do thou return on high.

8 Thou, Lord, shall judge all foes;
In judgment set my part,
According to my righteousness,
And purity of heart.

9 Let sin no longer be,
Whilst God the just sustains,
For God is righteous, and doth see,
And try the heart and reins.

10 God mean the pure in heart;
He shields me in my way;
In judgment takes the just man's part,
Lives sinners every day.

11 If they do not repent,
His sword he sharpened hath,
His law is ready made, and bent
To execute his wrath.

12 To smite with deadly blow,
His weapons he hath framed;
All piercing his persecuting foe,
His arrows he hath aimed.

13 The foe hath labored long
In vain and wicked things;
In hurt he mischief plans and wags,
And falsehood forth he brings.

14 A secret pit he made,
When he was at peace with me;
He prostrate in that pit is laid
Which his own hands prepared.

15 The mischief he designed
Shall on his head come down;
His violence reward shall find,
Returned on his own crown.

16 For all his righteousness,
The Lord I'll magnify,
His name will I forever bless,
The name of God Most High.

PSALM 7. 11a

1 JEHOVAH, my God, on thy help I Depend;
From all those who persecute, save and defend!

Let he like a lion, in rage tear my soul,
When no one is near me his rage to control.

2 My God, O Jehovah, if I have done this,
Or if in my hands this iniquity is;
If him I have wronged who with me was at peace;
(My foe without cause, I did even release);

3 My soul let the enemy seize for his prey,
My life and my honor in dust let him lay.
Arise, Lord, in anger, thy help interpose,
Arise, thou, because of the rage of my foes.

4 Awake, that my cause may by thee be sustained,
Awake in the judgment which thou hast ordained,
And then shall the people around thee
draw nigh;
For sake of thee, therefore, return thou on high.

5 All nations of men shall be judged by the Lord;
To me, O Jehovah, just judgment afford,
According as righteous in life I have been,
And aver integrity cherished within.

6 Establish the just, and let evil depart,
For God who is just tries the reins and the heart.
In God for defence I have placed all my trust;
He avails the upright, and judgeth the just.

7 The Lord with the wicked is wrath
every day;
His sword, if they turn not, is sharpened
to slay;
His bow is now bent, and his arrows are aimed;
His weapons of death are appraised and framed.

8 Behold, he in wickedness labors with pains;
He mischief conceives, but he brings forth in vain.
He made a deep pit, other men to ensnare,
But fell in the ditch which himself did prepare.

9 On him shall his mischievous plots return home,
His violent deeds on his own head shall come;
To God, for his righteousness, praise I'll sing!
I'll sing to the name of Jehovah our King.

PSALM 8. C. M.

1 HOW excellent in all the earth,
O Lord, our Lord, thy name!
Thou hast thy glory far advanced
Above the stars in the firm.

2 From mouths of babes and sucklings
O Lord, didst strength unfold,
Because of foes, that to thee mightest
Thy vengeance foes restrain.

3 When to the heavens I look up,
Which thy own fingers framed,
Unto the moon in the firmament,
Which were by thee ordained;

4 Then my I, What is man, that he Remembered is by thee?
Or what the son of man, that thou
be hailed to him shouldst be!

5 For thou a little lower hast
Him placed upon his head,
A crown of majesty glory thou
Hast placed upon his head.

6 Appointed Lord of all thy works,
Heaven and earth thou didst lay,
All sheep and oxen, and beasts
That in the field do stray;

7 The swin of air, and fish of sea,
All passing through the same,
How excellent in all the earth,
O Lord, our Lord, thy name!

PSALM 8. S. 8, and 4.

1 O LORD, our Lord, how excellent
In all the earth thy name,
Who hast thy glory set above
The starry frame.

2 From infants' and from sucklings
Mouths
Is strength by thee ordained,
That so th' avenger may be quieted,
The foe restrained.

3 When I behold thy spacious heavens,
The work of thy own hand,
The moon and stars in order set
By thy command;

4 O what is man that thou shouldst him
In kind remember, and bear
Or what the son of man that thou
For him shouldst care!

5 For thou a little lower hast
Him than the angels made;
With honor and with glory thou
Hast crowned his head.

6 Lord of thy works thou hast him made;
All under him must yield,
All sheep and oxen, and beasts
Which roam the field.

7 Fowl of the air, fish of the sea,
All that pass through the same;
O Lord, our Lord, in all the earth,
How great thy name.

PSALM 8. 7a

1 O LORD, our Lord, o'er earth's vast frame,
How excellent is thy name!
Who hast set thy glory bright
Far above the heavens' height.

2 From the mouth of children young,
From the infant's lispings long,
Mischief strength thou hast ordained,
Thus, thy vengeance foes restrained.

3 When thy heavens I survey,
Which thy fingers' work display,
When the moon and stars I see
Ordered all by thy decree;

4 What is man that in thy mind
He a constant place should find?
What the son of man that he Should be visited by thee?

5 Thou his station didst ordain
Just below the angels train;
Hither thou hast set him, and
And with honor crowned his head.

6 Thou hast given him command
O'er the creatures of thy hand;
And beneath his feet hast laid
All the works which thou hast made;

7 Flocks he set cattle, every tribe,
Beasts that in the field abide;
Birds that through the heavens roam,
Fish that make the sea their home;

8 Every living thing that strays
Through the coast's secret ways,
Lord, our Lord, o'er earth's vast frame,
How excellent is thy name!

PSALM 8. C. M.

1 O LORD, thee I'll praise with all my
They wonders all proclaim, (heart,
O thou, Most High, in thee I'll joy,
And gladly praise thy name.

2 When back my feet were turned,
And perished at thy sight;
My right and counsel thou hast maintained;
Entrusted didst I judge art.

2 The nations all that have rebelled,
The wicked overturned;
Thou hast put out their names, that they
May never more be known.

3 O enemy, destructions have
An end perpetual;
Thou cities hast destroyed, and hast
In their memorial.

4 The Lord forever shall endure,
For judgment will his throne;
In righteousness he judges the world,
And justice give each one.

5 God also will a refuge be
For those who are oppressed;
A refuge will he ever prove
For those that are distressed.

6 And they who know thy name, in thee
Their confidence will place;
For thou hast not forsaken them,
Who truly seek thy face.

7 O sing ye praises to the Lord,
Who dwells on Zion Mount;
Among the people every where
His mighty deeds recount.

8 When he inquireth after blood,
He then remembers thee;
The humble he will not forget
Who call upon his name.

9 Lord, pity me, behold the grief
Which I from sinners have wrought;
O thou, who from the gates of death
Dost raise me up again.

10 That I, in Zion's daughters' gates,
May all thy praise relate;
And that I ever may rejoice
In thy salvation great.

11 The heathen are sunk in the pit
Which they themselves prepared;
And in the net which they have hid
Their own feet they are snared.

12 The Lord is by the judgment known
Which he himself will execute;
The sinners' hands do make the snare
With which themselves are caught.

13 They who are wicked, into hell
Shall driven be with shame;
And all the nations that rebel
The Lord's most holy name.

14 The Lord will not forever be Unmindful of the poor;
Nor shall the hope of needy ones
Be lost for evermore.

15 Arise, Lord, let not man prevail;
Judge heathen in thy sight;
That they may know themselves but men,
The nations, Lord, almighty.

PSALM 9. L. M.

1 LORD, thee I'll praise with all my heart,
And all thy wondrous works proclaim;
In thee, O thou Most High, I'll joy,
And sing the praise of thy great name.

2 When back my enemies were turned,
They fell and perished at thy sight;
Thou hast maintained my right and cause,
And on thy throne set judging right.

3 The nations, Lord, thou hast rebuked,
The wicked thou hast overturned;
Their very names thou hast blotted out,
That they may never more be known.

4 Their rain thou hast made complete;
Their cities thou hast laid in heaps;
With them their name has passed away
Their memory in oblivion sleeps.

5 The Lord forever shall endure,
He hath for judgment set his throne,
In righteousness to judge the world
And justice give to every one.

6 Jehovah shall a refuge prove,
A refuge strong for poor oppressed,
A safe retreat, where weary souls
In troublesome times may find a rest.

7 And thou, O Lord, that know thy name,
Their confidence in thee thou wilt place;
For thou, Jehovah, never hast
Forsaken them that seek thy face.

8 Sing praises to the Lord most high,
To him that dwells in Zion dwell;
Declare his mighty deeds abroad,
His deeds among all people tall.

9 When he inquiry makes for blood,
He shall to mind the murderer's deed;
Nor will forget the humble saint,
Who cry to him in time of need.

10 O Lord, have mercy, and regard
The grief which I from sinners claim;
O thou, who from the gates of death
Dost raise me up to life again.

11 That I, in Zion's daughters' gates,
May sing thy praise with cheerful voice;
In that salvation thou dost bring,
Redeemed from death I will rejoice.

12 The heathen in that pit are sunk
Which they had wickedly prepared;
And in it are their own feet snared.

13 The Lord is by the judgment known
Which he in righteousness has wrought;
The hands of sinners make the snare,
The snare with which themselves are caught.

14 The wicked turned to hell shall be,
And nations that forget the Lord;
The needy shall not be forgot,
Nor poor man lose their hoped reward.

15 Arise, and let not man prevail;
O Lord, judge heathen in thy sight;
That they may know themselves but men,
The nations of the world almighty.

PSALM 9. S. M.

1 MY heart shall praise the Lord,
Thy wisdom I'll proclaim;
In thee, Most High, I'll greatly joy,
And celebrate thy name.

2 Lord, when my foes turn back,
They perish at thy sight;
Thou hast maintained my righteous cause,
Enthroned, thou judgest right.

3 Thou heathen hast rebuked,
The wicked overturned;
And blotted out their very name;
It shall no more be known.

4 The foe in ruin lies,
Made desolate as waste;
His cities all that thou destroyed,
Their memory erased.

5 But God shall ever reign,
His throne eternal stand;
He'll judge the world in righteousness,
And rule by just commands.

6 A refuge God will be,
For those whom sin oppress;
A tower of strength he ever proves
In seasons of distress.

7 And they that know thy name,
In thee their trust will place;
For thou hast not forsaken them,
That truly seek thy face.

8 Sing praise to Zion's God,
And all his works declare;
When he inquireth after blood,
He makes the meek his care.

9 Lord, see what I endure
From foes that do me sore hate;
Have mercy, thou, who liftest me
From death's devouring gate.

10 That I in Zion's gate
May utter all thy praise;
And may, in thy salvation great,
A song of praise relate.

11 The heathen nations sink
In pits which they prepared;
And in the nets which they have hid,
Their own feet fast are snared.

12 The Lord Most High is known
By judgments he hath wrought;
For sinners' hands he made the snare
By which their feet are caught.

13 The wicked into hell
Shall yet be turned with shame;
And all the nations that forget
The Lord's most holy name.

14 The Lord will not forget
The needy when they cry;
Nor always disappoint the poor,
Who on his word rely.

15 Rise, let not man prevail,
Judge heathen in thy sight;
That they may know themselves but men,
The nations, Lord, almighty.

PSALM 10. C. M.

1 WHEREFORE dost thou stand
From us, O Lord, so far?
And why dost thou conceal thyself,
When times so troublesome are?

2 The wicked in his pride
Doth persecute the poor;
The evil things which they devised,
His name let them endure.

3 He of his soul's desire
Doth talk with boasting great;
He blesses him that's covetous,
Whom yet the Lord doth hate.

4 The wicked seeks not God,
Retained through pride of face;
In all his thoughts the thought of God
Hath in his heart no place.

5 His ways all grievous are,
And far above his sight
Thy judgments are; at all his foes
He puffeth with scornful spite.

6 He in his heart hath said,
"I never moved shall be,
And I from all adversity
Forever shall be free."

7 With cursing, fraud, deceit,
His mouth is ever filled;
Whillet vanity and mischief lie
Beneath his tongue concealed.

8 In villages he lurks,
And slays the innocent;
His eyes are set against the poor,
On secret mischief bent.

9 Concealed he lies in wait,
Like lion in his lair;
He takes the poor and needy one
Entangled in his snare.

10 Himself he humbly low,
He croucheth down without,
That so a multitude of poor
May by his strong ones fall.

11 He says within his heart,
"The Lord hath quite forgot;
He turns away his countenance,
His eye behold it not."

12 Do thou, O Lord, arise,
O God, lift up thy hand,
Do not forget the suffering poor,
The humble in the land.

13 Why doth the wicked man
The mighty God despise?
Because that thou wilt in requirer,
He in his heart denies.

14 But thou hast seen, thou wilt
Their wrongs and spite repay;
The poor commits himself to thee,
Thou art the orphan's stay.

15 Break thou the wicked's arm,
Shatter the evil one,
And search out all his wickedness
Until thou hast done none.

8 He croucheth low in villages;
He slays the innocent;
Against the poor doth turn him by
His cruel eye he bent.

9 He, lion-like, lurks in his den;
He waits the poor to take;
And when he draws him in his net,
His prey he doth him make.

10 Himself he humbly low,
He croucheth down without,
That so a multitude of poor
May by his strong ones fall.

11 He thus hath said within his heart,
The Lord hath quite forgot;
He hides his countenance, and he
Forever sees it not.

12 Arise, Jehovah, O my God,
Lift up thy hand on high;
Put not the meek afflicted ones
Out of thy memory.

13 O why is it the wicked man
Thou dost the Lord despise?
Because that thou wilt in requirer,
He in his heart denies.

14 Thou hast it seen; for thou their spite
And mischief wilt repay;
The poor commits himself to thee;
Thou art the orphan's stay.

15 The arm break of the wicked man,
And of the evil one;
Do thou search out all his wickedness,
Until thou hast done none.

16 The Lord is King through ages all,
His throne shall ever stand;
The heathen people utterly
Are perished from his land.

17 O Lord, of those that humble are
Thou the desires dost hear;
Thou wilt prepare their heart, and thou
To hear wilt bend thy ear.

18 To judge the fatherless, and those Beneath oppression are;
To set the poor free from mouth of earth
May them oppress no more.

PSALM 10. S. M.

1 WHEREFORE dost thou stand
From us, O Lord, so far?
And why dost thou conceal thyself,
When times so troublesome are?

2 The wicked in his pride
Doth persecute the poor;
The evil things which they devised,
His name let them endure.

3 He of his soul's desire
Doth talk with boasting great;

Whom yet the Lord doth hate.

Hath in his heart no place.

5 His ways all grievous are,

7 With cursing, fraud, deceit,

Beneath his tongue concealed.

8 In villages he lurks,

On secret mischief bent.

9 Concealed he lies in wait,
Like lion in his lair;

Entangled in his snare.

10 Himself he humbly low,
He croucheth down without,
That so a multitude of poor
May by his strong ones fall.

11 He says within his heart,
"The Lord hath quite forgot;
He turns away his countenance,
His eye behold it not."

12 Do thou, O Lord, arise,
O God, lift up thy hand,
Do not forget the suffering poor,
The humble in the land.

13 Why doth the wicked man

Thou art the orphan's stay.

15 Break thou the wicked's arm,
Shatter the evil one,
And search out all his wickedness
Until thou hast done none.

10 Jehovah ever reigns,
And firm his throne shall stand.
The heathen nations he destroyed
Forever from his land.

11 Of those that humble are,
Thou, Lord, hast heard the prayer;
Thou also wilt prepare their heart,
And still incline thine ear.

12 T judge the fatherless,
And those by man distressed,
That they by man that is of earth
May be no more oppressed.

PSALM 11. C. M.

1 IN Jehovah put thy trust,
Thou who elsewhere say to me;
As timid birds a refuge seek,
So to your mountain seek!

2 For, in the wicked bend the bow,
On string they arrow fit,
That those who upright are in heart
In secret they may hit.

3 For if foundations be destroyed,
What then the righteous do?
Jehovah in his temple is,
In heaven is his throne.

4 His eyes do see, his eyelids try
Men's sin. The just he prays;
But his soul maketh the wicked man,
And him that will'sen leave.

5 Snare, snare, and brimstone, raging
Thou, sinners he shall rain;
This, as the portion of their cup,
Shall unto them remain.

6 Because the Lord most righteous doth
In righteousness light his face,
And with a present countenance
Beholdeth the upright.

PSALM 11. L. M.

1 MY trust is in the Lord Most High;
Then to my soul ye should ye
Away to your high mountains fly,
Speed like a bird and flee away!

2 For in the wicked bend the bow,
With allful hand they aim the dart;
Their arrows through the darkness go,
To pierce the man of upright heart.

3 If the foundations be overthrowed,
Of what avail the righteous are?
The Lord in heaven has fixed his throne,
And reigns within his holy place.

4 His eyes behold, his eyelids scan
The sons of men, the just he tries,
His aim doth hate the wicked man,
And bold transgressors doth despise.

5 Snare, snare and brimstone, round their path,
On wicked men the Lord shall rain;
Their cups full portion shall remain.

6 The Lord is just in all his ways,
And righteousness is his delight;
To upright men his grace displays,
And gives them favor in his sight.

PSALM 11. S. M.

1 MY trust is in the Lord Most High;
How to my soul say ye,
Away with speed, and like a bird
To your high mountains flee!

2 Lo, heaven bend the bow;
On string they fit the dart,
That they sinners may shoot at those
Who upright are in heart.

3 What can the righteous do?
What can for them avail,
If the foundations be destroyed
And all they build on fall?

4 The Lord is Zion dwells,
The Lord's throne is on high;
His eyes behold the sons of men,
Yes, them his eyelids try.

5 The Lord the righteous tries;
But those that wicked be,
And him who loveth violence
In soul abhorreth he.

6 Fire, brimstone, snare, snare, snare,
On sinners he shall rain;
This is the portion of their cup,
The cup which they shall drain.

7 Because the righteous Lord
Delighteth in righteousness;
And with his gracious countenance
The upright he will bless.

PSALM 12. C. M.

1 THOU, Jehovah, grant us help,
Because the godly cease;
And from among the sons of men
The faithful ones decrease.

2 For with his neighbor every one
Doth ever come to speak,
They with a double heart do speak,
And lips of flattery.

8 God shall cut off all the utter lips,
Tongues that speak a deadly thing;
We'll with our tongues prevail, our lips
Are ours; who's lord o'er us?

9 For nose upturned, and for the sight
Of envy, I will rise,
Faith God, and him: in safety set
From such as him despise.

5 Jehovah's words are words most pure,
They are like silver tried:
In earthen furnace, seven times
That hath been purified.

6 O Lord, thou shalt them keep and save
Forever from this race,
On each side walk the wicked, and Vile men are high in place.

PSALM 19. C. P. M.

1 JEHOVAH, help; the godly cease;
Among the sons of men decrease
Those who uprightly live,
With flattering lips all falsehood speak,
And with a double heart they seek
Their neighbors to deceive.

2 The Lord shall flattering lips destroy,
And tongue that uttereth words employ;
That with an eye and heart,
"Our tongue shall in our cause be strong,
Our lips to us alone belong;
Who over us is lord?"

3 For those that are oppressed indeed,
For all the poor that sigh in need,
Lo, now will I arise and Tune with Jehovah in his grace,
"And then I will in safety place
From such as them despise."

4 God's words are pure as silver tried,
In furnace seven times sacrificed,
From this race, O Lord,
Shall keep thy servants ever,
When vilest men are raised to power,
The wicked walk abroad.

PSALM 13. C. M.

1 HOW long will thou forget me, Lord?
Shall I forever be?
O how long shall it be that thou
Wilt hide thy face from me?

2 How long take counsel in my soul,
Sill and in heart, shall I?
How long waited for mine eye,
Shall be my enemy?

3 O Lord, my God, consider well,
And answer to me make;
My eyesight, lo! the sleep
Of death me overtake.

4 Lo! that my enemy should say,
Against him I prevailed;
And those who trouble me rejoice
When I am moved and failed."

5 But I have all my confidence
Upon thy mercy set;
My trust within me shall rejoice
In thy salvation great.

6 I will unto Jehovah sing
His praises cheerfully,
Because he hath his bounty shown
To me abundantly.

PSALM 13. To and Gd.

1 HOW long will thou forget me?
Shall I forever be?
O Lord, how long neglect me,
And hide thy face from me?

2 How long my soul take counsel?
Thus sad in heart each day,
How long shall foes existing,
Subject me to their sway?

3 O Lord, my God, consider,
And hear my prayer aloud;
Lost I in death should slumber,
Enlighten those my eyes!

4 Let foes be heard exclaiming
Against him we prevailed;
And they that were my envy,
Rejoice when I have failed.

5 But on thy tender mercy
I ever have relied,
With joy in thy salvation
My heart shall still abide.

6 And I with voice of singing,
Will praise the Lord alone,
Because to me his love
He hath so largely shown.

PSALM 14. C. M.

1 WHAT there is not a God, the fool
Doth in his heart conclude;
They are corrupt, their works are vile;
Not one of them doth good.

2 Upon the sons of men the Lord
From heaven looked down,
To see if any were wise,
And seeking after God.

2 They altogether filthy are,
Their minds are void of sense,
And there is none that doeth good,
No, not so much as one.

3 These workers of iniquity
Do they not know at all,
That as they people out as bread,
And on God do not call?

4 There feared they much; for God is with
The whole race of the just,
You shame the counsel of the poor,
Because God is his trust.

5 Let Israel's help from Zion come;
When back the Lord shall bring
His captives, Jacob shall rejoice,
And Israel shall sing.

PSALM 14. L. M.

1 THINK God who sits enthroned on high
The fool doth in his heart deny;
Corrupt are they, vile works have done,
And doing good there is not one.

2 From heaven with searching eye (Lord
Did all the sons of men regard;
To see if any understood,
If any were seeking God.

3 From righteous ways they all depart;
All are corrupt and vile in heart;
Among them doing good is none,
Among them all, not even one.

4 His knowledge from the wicked fled,
That they delight in words of shame,
And call not on Jehovah's name!

5 There fearful terror on them fell;
For God is with the righteous dwell;
The poor man's counsel they despise,
Because in God his refuge lies.

6 May Israel's help from Zion come,
When God shall bring his captive home,
Then Jacob greatly shall rejoice,
And Israel shout with glad voice.

PSALM 15. C. M.

1 WITHIN thy tabernacle, Lord,
Who shall abide with thee?
And in thy high and holy hill
Who shall a dweller be?

2 The man who walketh uprightly,
And worketh righteousness,
And as he thinketh in his heart,
So doth he truth express.

3 Who neither slanders with his tongue,
Nor to his friend doth hurt;
Nor yet against his neighbor doth
Take up an ill report.

4 In whose eyes vile men are despised;
But those that God do fear;
His honoreth; and changeth not.
Though to his hurt be aware.

5 His coin putt not to snare,
Nor take a bribe will be;
He rejecteth the gift, he doth thus Unmoved shall ever be.

PSALM 15. To.

1 JEHOVAH, who shall dwell
In the temple of thy grace?
Who shall on thy holy hill
Have a fixed abiding place?

2 He who walks in righteousness,
All his actions just and clear;
His works words the truth express,
Broken from a heart sincere;

3 Who who ne'er with slandering tongue
I love malice and deceit;
Who will ne'er his neighbor wrong,
Nor a slanderous tale repeat;

4 Who the impious will spurn,
Honor those that fear the Lord;
Though he to his hands have sworn,
Will not break his plighted word;

5 Who no snare will claim,
Nor with bribes pollute his hand;
He who thus his life shall frame,
Shall unmoved forever stand.

PSALM 16. C. M.

1 LORD, keep me, for I trust in thee.
To God this was my speech;
Thou art my Lord, and unto thee
My goodness doth not reach;

2 To saints on earth, the soulless,
Whom my delight is pleased,
Their sorrows shall be multiplied
To other gods that haste.

3 Of their drink-offerings of blood
I will not offering make;
Yea, neither I their names
Up in my lips will take.

4 Of that inheritance and cup
Which unto me pertain,
The Lord hath high the portion is;
My lot thou dost maintain.

5 To me most happily the lines
In pleasant places fall;
The heritage which I received
In beauty doth excel.

6 I bless the Lord, because he doth
By counsel me, because I lead,
And in the seasons of the night
My reins do me instruct.

7 Before me still the Lord I set;
Since it is so that he,
Doth ever stand at my right hand,
I never moved shall be.

8 Because of this my heart is glad,
And joy shall be expressed,
Ev'n by my glory; and my flesh
In confidence shall rest.

9 Because within the grave my soul
Shall not be left for dead;
Corruption thou wilt not permit
Thy Holy One to see.

10 Thou wilt me show the path of life;
Of joys there is full store,
Before thy face; as thy right hand
Are pleasures evermore.

PSALM 16. S. M.

1 TO thee, O Lord, I fly,
And on thy help depend;
I said, "Thou art my Lord and King,
To me dost refuge send."

2 Not unto thee my worth,
It reaches not that height,
To saints, the noble ones of earth,
With whom is my delight.

3 Their sorrows shall be great
By that other gods adore,
Their very names I'll not repeat,
Nor their blood-offerings pour.

4 A heritage for me
Jehovah will remain;
The portion of my inheritance,
My lot he shall maintain.

5 The lot to me that fell
Is beautiful and fair;
The heritage in which I dwell,
None can with it compare.

6 I'll praise God while I live,
His counsel guides me right;
My reins to me instruction give,
In seasons of the night.

7 The Lord before me still
I set, and trust his love;
At my right hand he guards from ill,
And nothing shall me move.

8 Now gladness fills my soul,
And joy shall be expressed;
My glory shall his name extol,
My flesh in hope shall rest.

9 My soul in death's dark pit
Shall not be left to see,
Corruption thou wilt not permit
Thy Holy One to see.

10 Life's path, thou wilt me show,
To thy right hand me guide,
Whom righteous pleasures ever flow,
And boundless joys abide.

PSALM 17. C. M.

1 LORD, hear the right, attend my cry,
And to my prayer give heed,
That thou not be in hypocrisy,
From feigning lips proceed.

2 And from before thy presence forth
My judgment do thou send;
And unto things that equal are
O let thy eyes attend.

3 Thou hast my heart proved, and
Thy visit, and me try,
Yet nothing find, for my mouth
Shall not sin purposed I.

4 As for men's works, I, by the word,
Which from thy lips doth flow,
Have kept myself out of the path
In which destroyers go.

5 Hold up my going, Lord, me guide
In paths that are divine,
That no my footstep may not slide
Out of those ways of thine.

6 Upon thee I have called, O God,
Because thou wilt me hear:
That thou mayst hearken to my speech,
To me incline thy ear.

7 Thy wondrous lovingkindness show,
Thou, who by thy right hand
Dost save: O those who trust in thee
From such as them withstand.

8 As the apple of the eye me keep;
In thy wings I'll hide me hide
From wicked men and deadly foe
Who rage on every side.

9 In their own sin they are enclosed;
Their mouth speaks loftily,
One steps they compassed, and to earth
They bowing, set their eye;

10 From ill, as a lion fierce and strong,
And greedy of his prey,
Or lion young, which lurking doth
In secret sin doth stay.

11 Arise, and disappoint my foe,
And cast him down, O Lord,
Kiss thou my soul from wicked men,
From men who are thy sword.

12 From men who are thy hand, O Lord,
From worldly men me save,
Who only in this respect are,
Their part and portion have.

13 They with thy hidden wealth are filled,
And many children have;
The rest of their abundant wealth
They rest on their children have.

14 But as for me, I thy own face
Shall not be left for dead;
Corruption thou wilt not permit
Thy Holy One to see.

PSALM 17. C. H. M.

1 LORD, do thou the right regard,
And to my cry give ear;
From no dissimbling lips, O Lord,
Preceds my humble prayer.

2 O let my judgment come to light,
And let thine eyes behold the right.

3 When thou dost prove and try my heart,
And mightily visit me,
To search me in the inmost part,
And all my thoughts to see,
Thou shalt not find me as a man,
For never shall my mouth transgress.

4 As for the works of men, O Lord,
Who seek my overthrow,
I have proved me by thy word
From paths wherein they go,
And then my footstep shall not stray.

5 I call on thee, for thou wilt hear,
And answer when I pray;
O God, to me incline thy ear,
Thy word now love display,
Thou shalt find me, thy strong right hand
Defends from ill me who thine withstand.

6 Keep as the apple of the eye,
In thy wings' shadow me hide;
Hill my oppressors from me fly,
Preserve from deadly foe.

7 I'm clothed in fat, and filled with pride,
I've loved our steps on every side.

8 They, like a lion craving food,
Crouch down and fix their eye;
As lions young that thirst for blood,
In secret places lie.

9 Arise, withstand, cast down, O Lord,
From the wicked man, thy sword.

10 From men, thy hand, Lord, save thou
This world is all their care;
With wealth and children filled, they
Their wealth their offspring share.
In righteousness thy face I'll see,
Hest when I walk to be like thee.

PSALM 18. C. M.

1 THREE will I love, O Lord, my Strength,
My fortress is the Lord,
My rock, and he that doth to me
Dost refuge afford:

2 My God, my strength, whom I will trust,
A bulwark unto me,
The horn of my salvation, too,
And my high tower is he.

3 The Lord is worthy to be praised,
Upon his name I'll call;
And he from all my enemies
Preserve me safely shall.

4 Death's pang surrounded me, all men
Like floods made me afraid;
I'll never compass me about;
Death's snare were on me laid.

5 In my distress I called on God,
"Try to my God did I;
He from his temple heard my voice,
To his ear came my cry."

6 The earth affrighted then did shake,
Upon it trembled all;
The hills' foundations moved and shook,
Because he was displeased.

7 Then from his nostrils rose a smoke,
And from his mouth there came
Ivorying fire, and coals by it
Were kindled into flame.

8 The heavens also be bowed down,
And thence he did descend,
Whilst thickest clouds of darkness hid
Beneath his feet attend.

9 And he upon a cherub rode,
Upon it he did fly;
Wee, on the swift wings of the wind
His flight was on high.

10 He darkness made his secret place;
Around him gathered were
For his pavilion, waters dark
And clouds that hid the air.

11 And at the brightness of that light
He hid before his eye,
His thick clouds passed away, hailstones
And coals of fire did fly.

13 Jehovah also in the heavens
Did thunder in his ire;
And there the Highest gave his voice,
Halleluiah and hosanna of fire.

14 He sent his arrows forth, and they
Were scattered far and near;
His lightnings also he shot out,
And they consumed it were.

15 The waters' channels then were seen,
The world's foundations vast
At thy rebuke discovered were,
And at thy nostrils' blast.

16 And from above the Lord sent down,
And took me from the flood:
From many waters drew me out,
Which would me overflow.

17 He me relieved from my strong foes,
And such as did me hate;
Because he saw that they for me
Too strong were, and too great.

18 They rose against me in the day
Of my calamity;
But even then the Lord himself
A stay was unto me.

19 He to a place where liberty
And rest was hath me brought;
Because he took delight in seeing power,
He my deliverance wrought.

20 According to my righteousness
He did me recompense,
He me repaid according to
My hands' pure innocency.

21 For I have kept Jehovah's ways,
From God turned not my face;
Before me still his judgments are,
His statutes are my guide.

22 Sincere and upright in my heart
Before his face was I;
And watchfully I kept myself
From any iniquity.

23 According to thy righteousness
The Lord did my sins cleanse;
According as my hands were clean
Before his searching sight.

24 Then wilt thy tender mercy show
To those who mercy love;
To those who mercy love;
Thou also wilt the upright man
Thyself wilt upright prove.

25 To those who walk in purity
Themselves thou pure wilt show;
And forward thou wilt prove to those
In forward ways that go.

26 For thou wilt the afflicted save
In grief that low do lie;
But wilt bring down the countenance
Of them who loose and high.

27 The Lord will light my candle so,
That it shall shine full bright;
The Lord my God will also make
My darkness to be light.

28 By thee through troops of men I break,
And them I do defeat;
And, by thy God assisting me,
I overcome a wall.

29 All perfect is the way of God;
Jehovah's word is tried;
He is a buckler unto all
Who do in him abide.

30 Who but the Lord is God? but he
Who is a rock and stay;
Jehovah giveth me with strength,
And perfect makes my way.

31 He set me on my places high,
Like birds' feet mine did make;
My hands he taught to war, my arms
A bow of steel did make.

32 The shield of thy salvation thou
Upon me didst bestow;
Thy right hand hath me up and great
Thy kindness made me grow.

33 And in my way thou hast ensnared
My footstep's under me,
That I go safely, and my feet
Are kept from sliding free.

34 My enemies I have pursued,
And them I did overtake;
Not turned again in I of them
As utter could I make.

35 I wounded them, they could not rise,
They at my feet did fall.
Thou girded me with strength for war;
My feet thou broughtest down all.

36 And thou hast given me the necks
Of such as are my foes;
That I might then destroy who do
With hatred me oppose.

37 They in their trouble cried for help,
But there was none to save;
Yes, they upon Jehovah called,
But he no answer gave.

38 Then did I beat them small as dust
Before the wind that flies;
And I did cast them out like dith
Upon the street that lies.

38 Thou mad'st me free from people's
The heathen's lead to be;
A people whom I have not known
Shall service do to me.

39 At seeing thy small yield to me,
My ill they shall obey;
From their enclosures, struck with fear,
Small strangers fade away.

40 God lives, blest be my rock, and praised
Let God my favour be.
God doth avenge me, and vindicates
The people under me.

41 He avenged me from my enemies;
Yes, thou hast lifted me
Above my foes; and from the man
Of violence set me free.

42 I therefore will to thee, O Lord,
In songs my thanks proclaim;
And I among the heathen will
Sing praises to thy name.

43 He great deliverance given his king;
He mercy doth extend
To David, his anointed one,
And his seed without end.

PSALM 18. L. M.

1 THREE will I love, O Lord, my might,
My rock, my holy one seeing power,
My God, my trust, my shield in fight,
My great salvation, my high tower.

2 I to Jehovah lift my prayer,
To whose great name all praise we owe;
So shall I by his watchful care
Be safely guarded from my foe.

3 By floods of wicked men distressed,
With deadly sorrow compassed round;
My soul with pains of hell oppressed,
And in death's iron fetters bound.

4 Distressed, I called upon the Lord,
And to my God address'd my prayer;
My voice he from his temple heard,
My cry succeeded to his ear.

5 When God in his fierce anger came,
The everlasting hills did quake;
The trembling earth removed its frame,
Did from its deep foundations shake.

6 Dark clouds of smoke, dread signs of fire
Up from Jehovah's nostrils came;
His mouth sent forth devouring fire,
And coals were kindled into flame.

7 He loved the heavens, his high abode,
Descending 'mid the glory of his light;
His on a chariot swiftly rode,
And on the wings of wind his flight.

8 Dark watery mists in thick array
And lowering clouds his presence veil,
But at his brightness pass away,
And burst in storms of fire and hail.

21 For who as God should be adored?
Who but our God can as befriend?
Who is a rock besides the Lord?
Who else is able to defend?

22 My hope with strength th' Almighty
I made,
My way makes perfect by his hand;
My feet he makes as well as hands,
On my high places mine he stand.

23 By him well trained in arts of war,
My arms the bow of steel shall break;
Thy hand and shield my safety are,
And great thy kindness shall me make.

24 Thou hast made room where I did go,
Kept safe my feet whilst I pursued,
And pressed upon the flying foe,
Not turned till they were all subdued.

25 I smote them, they could rise no more;
They fell down helpless at my feet.
Thou didst me give with strength for war;
Through thee my triumph was complete.

26 The lives of all my deadly foes
To be destroyed to me were given;
They called, but none to save them rose;
In vain they cried for help to heaven.

27 Then small as rising dust which rises
Before the wind, I did them beat;
I cast them forth like dirt which lies
Down in ditches in the mire and sweat.

28 From strife thou hast secured my throne;
O'er heaven mine own head to be;
A people which I have not known
Shall render service unto me.

29 They shall obey soon as they hear!
The sons of strangers shall submit;
Yes, strangers' sons shall fade with fear,
Who in their strong enclosures sit.

30 Jehovah lives, let him be praised,
My rock, on whom alone I rest;
And highly let his name be raised,
Who me with his salvation blessed.

31 The mighty God avenges me,
Hath nations under me subdued,
From all my foes hath set me free,
And saved from all that me withstand.

32 From men of violence and blood
Thou didst to me refuge bring;
So thanks to thee I'll give, O God,
Thy praise among the nations sing.

33 He to his king did deliverance send,
To his anointed saviour his grace;
His mercy evermore extolled,
To David and his promised race.

PSALM 18. C. M.

1 THU heaven's God's glory do declare,
Thou who his hand's works preach;
Day utter speech to day, and night
To night doth knowledge teach.

2 No language utter they, nor speech,
No voice of theirs is heard;
Yet through the world their word goes
To ends of earth their word.

3 There for the sun he placed a tent,
His course with beams of fire;
As brigions' romes, and giant-like
With joy begins his race.

4 His circuit is from heaven's end,
And back to it again;
And there is nothing from his heat
That hidden doth remain.

5 God's law is perfect, and cov'er'd
The soul in sin that lies;
God's testimony is just pure,
And makes the simple wise.

6 The statutes of the Lord are right,
And do rejoice the heart;
The Lord's command is pure, and doth
Light to the eyes impart.

7 Unspotted is the fear of God,
And ever doth endure;
The judgments of the Lord are truth,
And righteousness must pure.

8 They more than gold, yes, much fine
To be desired are;
Thus honey, honey from the comb
That droppeth, sweeter far.

9 Moreover, they thy servant warn
How his life should frame;
A great reward provideth
For them that keep the same.

10 Who can his errors understand?
From secret faults me cleanse;
Thy servant also keep thou back
From all presumptuous aims.

11 And do not suffer them to have
Dominion over me;
I shall be righteous then, and from
The great transgression free.

12 The words which from my mouth
Proceed,
The thoughts sent from my heart,
Accept, O Lord, for thus my strength
And my Redeemer art.

PSALM 18. C. M.

1 JEHOVAH hear thee in the day
Of when trouble doth thee send;
And let the name of Jacob's God
From every ill defend.

2 O let him send his help to thee
From his holy place;
Let him from Zion, his own hill,
Sustain thee by his grace.

3 Let him remember all thy gifts,
Accept thy sacrifice;
Grant thee thy heart's wish, and fulfil
Thy thoughts and counsel wise.

4 In thy salvation we will joy,
And our hearts' names we will Display our tannery; and the Lord
Thy prayers all fulfill.

5 Now know I God his King doth save
From his holy heaven;
We'll hear him, with the saving strength
By his own right hand given.

6 In chariots some put confidence,
But we remember will
The name of God, our God Most High.

7 We rise, and upright stand, when they
Are made to bow and fall;
Differ, Lord, and let the King
Us hear, when we do call.

PSALM 20. L. M.

1 THU Lord thee hear in time of grief,
Let Jacob's God defend thee still;
From his holy place from Zion hill,
And strength on thee place thou will.

2 May he thy sacrifice regard,
And all thy offerings bear in mind;
Thy heart's desire to thee accord,
Fulfilling all thou hast designed.

3 In thy salvation we'll rejoice,
In our God's name our banners raise;
The Lord Jehovah hear thy voice,
And evermore fulfill thy prayer.

4 I know Jehovah doth defend,
And sees his own name on King;
He will from heav'n's an' snow send;
His right hand having power shall bring.

5 In chariots some put confidence,
And others on their steeds rely;
But we remember for defence
The name of God, our God Most High.

PSALM 19. H. M.

1 THU glory of the Lord
The heavens declare abroad;
The firmament displays
The handiwork of God;
Day unto day declareth speech,
And night to night doth knowledge teach.

2 Aloud they do not speak,
They utter forth no word,
Nor into language break;
Their voice is never heard,
Their line through all the earth extends,
Their words to earth's remotest ends.

3 In them he for the sun
Hath set a dwelling-place;
Reposing as a man
Of strength, to run a race;
He, bedegem'd like in his army,
Comes from his chamber, bringing day.

4 His daily going forth
Is from the end of heaven;
His circuit reaches to its ends,
And everywhere his heat extends.

5 God's perfect law conveys
The soul in sin that lies;
His testimony sure
Doth make the simple wise;
His precepts cleanse the heart;
His holy precepts light impart.

6 The fear of God is clean,
And ever doth endure;
His judgments all are truth,
And righteousness must pure.
To be desired are they far more
Than finest gold or richest store.

7 God's judgments to the taste
More sweet than honey are,
Than honey from the comb.
The drops, sweeter far,
With counsel they thy servant guard;
In keeping them is great reward.

8 Who can his errors know?
From secret faults me cleanse;
Thy servant keep thou back
From all presumptuous aims,
O let him not my way contrive,
Nor gain dominion over my soul.

9 Then in thy righteous way
My life sin is might be;
From great transgression free,
Accept my words, and thoughts of heart;
Lord, thou my strength and saviour art.

PSALM 20. C. M.

PSALM 20. L. M.

10 But who is he that is the King of glory? Who is he that is the King of hosts, and none but he The King of glory is.

PSALM 24. 11.

1 THE earth and the fulness which it is stored, The world and its dwellers belong to the Lord; For he on the seas its foundation hath laid, And firm on the waters its pillars hath stayed.

2 What man shall the hill of Jehovah ascend? And who in the place of his holiness stand? The man of pure heart, and of hands without stain, Who swears not to falsehood, nor loves what is vain.

3 He shall from Jehovah the blessing receive, The God of salvation shall righteousness give; For this is the people, yes, this is the race, The Israel true who are seeking thy face.

4 Ye gates, lift your heads, and an entrance display, Ye doors everlasting, wide open the way; The King of all glory shall enter in state, The King of all glory shall enter in state.

5 What King of all glory is this that ye sing? The Lord, strong and mighty, the conquering King; Ye gates, lift your heads, and an entrance display, Ye doors everlasting, wide open the way.

6 The King of all glory high honors await, The King of all glory shall enter in state; What King of all glory is this that ye sing? Jehovah of hosts, he is glory is King.

PSALM 25. C. M.

1 TO thee I lift my soul, O Lord; My God, I trust in thee; O let me never be ashamed, Nor foes exult o'er me.

2 O Lord, let none be put to shame Upon thee who attend; But make all those to be ashamed Who causelessly offend.

3 Thy ways, Lord, show; teach me thy Lead me in truth, teach me; For of my safety thou art God; All day I wait on thee.

4 Thy mercies that most tender are, To mind, O Lord, recall, And loving-kindnesses, for they Have been through ages all.

5 Let not the errors of my youth, Nor sins remembered be; In mercy, for thy goodness' sake, O Lord, remember me.

6 Jehovah good and upright is, The way he'll sinners show; The meek in judgment he will guide, And make his path to know.

7 The whole paths of the Lord our God Are truth and mercy sure; To such as keep his covenant, And testimonies pure.

8 Now, for thy own name's sake, O Lord, I humbly thee entreat To pardon my iniquity, For it is very great.

9 What man fears God? him shall his teach The way that he shall choose; His soul shall dwell at ease; his seed The earth, so heirs, shall use.

10 Jehovah's secret is with those That fear his holy name; And he his gracious covenant Will manifest to them.

11 My waiting eyes upon the Lord Continually are set; For he it is that shall bring forth My feet out of the net.

12 O turn thee unto me, my God, To me thy mercy show; Because by solitude and grief I am brought very low.

13 The sorrows of my heart increase; Me from distress relieve; See my affliction and my pain, And all my sins forgive.

14 Consider thou my enemies, Because they many are; And let a cruel hatred be, Which they against me bear.

15 O Lord, in safety keep my soul; Do thou deliver me; And let me not be put to shame, Because I trust in thee.

16 Let rectitude and truth me keep, For on thee I attend; Redemption, Lord, I seek; From all his troubles end.

PSALM 25. S. M.

1 TO thee I lift my soul; O Lord, I trust in thee; My God, let me not be ashamed, Nor foes exult o'er me.

2 Let none who wait on thee Be put to shame at all; But those who causelessly transgress, On them the shame shall fall.

3 Show me thy ways, O Lord; Thy paths, O teach me; And do thou lead me in thy truth, Therein my teacher be.

4 For thou art God that dost To me salvation send; And waiting for thee all the day, Upon thee I attend.

5 Thy tender mercies, Lord, To mind do thou recall, And loving-kindnesses, for they Have been through ages all.

6 My sins and faults of youth Do thou, O Lord, forget; In tender mercy think of me, And for thy goodness great.

7 God good and upright is; The way he'll sinners show; The meek in judgment he will guide, And make his path to know.

8 The whole paths of the Lord Are truth and mercy sure; To such as keep his covenant, And testimonies pure.

9 Now for thy own name's sake, O Lord, I thee entreat To pardon my iniquity, For it is very great.

10 What man is he that fears The Lord, and doth him serve? Him shall he teach his way that he Shall choose, and still observe.

11 His soul shall dwell at ease; And his posterity Shall flourish still, and of the earth Inheritors shall be.

12 With those that fear him, is The secret of the Lord; The knowledge of his covenant He will to them afford.

13 My eyes upon the Lord Continually are set; For he it is that shall bring forth My feet out of the net.

14 O turn to me thy face, To me thy mercy show, For I am very desolate, I am brought very low.

15 My heart's griefs are increased; Me from distress relieve; See my affliction and my pain, And all my sins forgive.

16 Consider thou my foes, Because they many are; And let a cruel hatred be, Which they against me bear.

17 O do thou keep my soul, Do thou deliver me; And never let me be ashamed, Because I trust in thee.

18 Let truth and right my keep, For on thee I attend; Redemption, Lord, I seek; From all his troubles end.

PSALM 25. 7a.

1 O my God, in thee I trust; From confusion keep my face; Let not foe their triumph boast, Let not foe their triumph boast.

2 Those that wait upon the name, Let no shame their souls oppress; But let those be brought to shame Who without a cause transgress.

3 Lord, to me thy ways make known, Lead in truth, and teach thou me; Thou my Saviour art alone; All the day I wait on thee.

4 Lord, remember in thy grace All thy mercies manifold, And thy loving-kindnesses, They have been from days of old.

5 All my sins of youth forget, Nor my trespasses record; Think of me in mercy great For thy goodness' sake, O Lord.

6 God is good and just indeed, He his way will sinners show; Will the meek in judgment lead, Making them his way to know.

7 All the paths of Jehovah's Lord Grace and truth to those will prove; Who his covenant regard, Who his testimonies love.

8 For the glory of thy name, O Jehovah, I entreat, Be from all my guilt redeem, For my sin is very great.

9 Who is he that fears the Lord, His heart will teach his way to choose; Good shall be his soul's reward; Earth his seed as he sows shall use.

10 Those that reverence his name Shall Jehovah's secret know; In his sovereignty grant to them He his covenant will show.

11 Toward God continually I my waiting eyes have set; For the Lord my feet will free, He will pluck them from the net.

12 O my God, to me return, Unto me thy mercy show; I in deep affliction mourn, Desolates and very low.

13 Griefs of heart are very great; Me from all distress relieve; Look on my afflicted state, All my trespasses forgive.

14 O consider well my foes, For in number they are great; Me they wickedly oppose, Hating me with cruel hate.

15 Let my soul be kept by thee; Rescue me from all my foes; From confusion keep me free, I to thee my trust repose.

16 Truth and right shall me defend, For on thee I never wait; Random, Lord, to Israel send, Him redeem from every strait.

PSALM 26. C. M.

1 JUDGE me, O Lord, for I have sworn; O Lord, I have sworn; I trusted also in the Lord, Slides therefore shall not I.

2 Examine me, and do me prove; Thy heart and reins, O God; For thy love is teaching my eyes, Thy truth's paths I have loved.

3 With persons vain I have not sat, Nor with dissemblers gone; Th' assembly of ill men I hate; To sit with meek men.

4 My hands in innocency, O Lord, I'll wash and purify; So to thy holy altar go, And compass it will I.

5 That I, with voice of thankfulness, May praise and declare, And tell of all thy mighty works, Which great and wondrous are.

6 The habitation of thy house, Lord, I have loved it well; Yes, in that place I take delight, Where doth thy honor dwell.

7 From sinners and from men of blood, My soul and life relieve; Upon whose hands are stains of crime, Whose right hands bristles receive.

8 But as for me I will walk on In my integrity; Do thou redeem me, and O Lord, Be merciful to me.

9 My feet upon an even place Now stands with steadfastness; And where his feet assembled are, Jehovah I will bless.

PSALM 26. S. M.

1 O LORD, do thou me try, In pureness I abide; I also on thy name rely, Nor shall my footsteps slide.

2 Examine me, and prove, Try thou my reins and heart; Before my eyes I set thy love, From truth did not depart.

3 I sat not with the vain, Nor with the false will meet; I shunned the throng of wicked men, With such I will not sit.

4 My hands I'll cleanse, O God, So to thy altar go, With voice of thanks proclaim abroad, And all thy wonders show.

5 In thy house delight, Where in thy honor seen; My soul, my life, do not unite With wicked, bloody men.

6 Their hands with crimes they fill, Their right hands bristles retain; But in all my way shall I Integrity maintain.

7 Redeem me from distress, Thy grace to me afford; I stand upon an even place; With saints I'll bless the Lord.

PSALM 27. C. M.

1 THE Lord my light and Saviour is, Who shall my God of grace, My life's strength is the Lord, of whom Then shall I be afraid?

2 For when my enemies and foes, Most wicked persons all, Against me now to eat my flesh, They stumbled and did fall.

3 Against me though a host encamp, My heart yet fearless be; Though war against me rise, I will Be confident in thee.

4 One thing I of the Lord desired, And will seek to obtain, That all days of my life I may Within God's house remain;

5 That I the beauty of the Lord In beauty may admire, And that I in his holy place May reverently inquire.

6 For he in his pavilion shall Me hide in evil days; In secret of his tent me hide, And on a rock me raise.

7 And even at this present time, My soul shall I adore, Above all those that are my foes, And round encompass me.

8 I therefore to his holy house Will joyful offerings bring; Jehovah I will praise, ye I To him will praise.

9 O Lord, give ear when with my voice I cry aloud to thee; Upon me also mercy have, And do thou answer me.

10 When thou didst say, Seek ye my face, My heart did thus reply; Thy face, O Lord, about all things Forever seek will I.

11 Far from me hide not thou thy face; Not from my face thou Thy servant in thy wrath; thou hast A helper been to me.

12 O God my Saviour, leave me not, And never me forsake; Though parents' wrath should me desert, Jehovah will me take.

13 O Lord, instruct me in thy way, Do thou my leader be, Make plain my path, because of those That hated me are they.

14 Nor give me to my foes' desire, For without thee I live; Against me risen are, and such As breathe out cruelty.

15 I should have perished had I not Believed that I would see Jehovah's goodness in the land Of them that living be.

16 Wait on the Lord, and be thou strong, And he shall strength afford; Thy heart with strength he will confirm, O wait upon the Lord.

PSALM 27. H. M.

1 JEHOVAH is my salvation, And my elevation near; Who shall my soul frighten, Or cause me to fear?

2 When wicked men in power, Came on with all my foes, Impatient to depart, Thy strength, O Lord, nor cease; Though warring hosts beset me round, Still shall my confidence abound.

3 One thing I seek through grace, For this to God I pray; That in his holy place I evermore may stay, To see the beauty of the Lord, And in his temple seek his word.

4 In times of trouble I In his pavilion hide, Safe in his tent I lie, Above my foes he lifts my head, And I delight his praise to praise.

5 Lord, hear me when I pray, In mercy answer me; Even as I heard thee say, "Seek ye my face;" for this With pleasure did my heart reply, Thy face, Jehovah, seek will I.

6 In wrath put not away Thy servant from the face; O that thou hadst been my God, O that thou hadst been my God of grace, Shouldst loth my parents me forsake, The Lord my soul his care will make.

7 Teach me, O Lord, thy way, Make plain to me my path; Because of foes, I pray, Give me not to fall in wrath, False witnesses against me rise, Who breathe out cruelty and lies.

8 Unless my trust had been, When threatened by their spite, Thy goodness to have seen, I should have sinned quite; Write on the rock, to me of heart, Ye, wait, and be ye of heart, Ye, wait, and be ye of heart.

9 Unless my trust had been, When threatened by their spite, Thy goodness to have seen, I should have sinned quite; Write on the rock, to me of heart, Ye, wait, and be ye of heart.

10 Unless my trust had been, When threatened by their spite, Thy goodness to have seen, I should have sinned quite; Write on the rock, to me of heart, Ye, wait, and be ye of heart.

11 Unless my trust had been, When threatened by their spite, Thy goodness to have seen, I should have sinned quite; Write on the rock, to me of heart, Ye, wait, and be ye of heart.

12 Unless my trust had been, When threatened by their spite, Thy goodness to have seen, I should have sinned quite; Write on the rock, to me of heart, Ye, wait, and be ye of heart.

13 Unless my trust had been, When threatened by their spite, Thy goodness to have seen, I should have sinned quite; Write on the rock, to me of heart, Ye, wait, and be ye of heart.

14 Unless my trust had been, When threatened by their spite, Thy goodness to have seen, I should have sinned quite; Write on the rock, to me of heart, Ye, wait, and be ye of heart.

15 Unless my trust had been, When threatened by their spite, Thy goodness to have seen, I should have sinned quite; Write on the rock, to me of heart, Ye, wait, and be ye of heart.

PSALM 28. C. M.

1 THO thou I'll cry, O Lord, my rock,
Then do not silence keep;
Lest by thy silence I become
Like those in death that sleep.

2 The voice of my petition hear,
When unto thee I cry;
When in thy holy courts
I lift my hands on high.

3 With sinners draw me not away
That work iniquity;
They speak to neighbors speak, while in
Their hearts dark mischief lie.

4 Give them according to their deeds,
And illa they have sown;
As delings of their hands deserve,
Be it to them repaid.

5 God shall not build, but them destroy,
Who would not understand
His mighty works, nor yet regard
The doings of his hand.

6 Forever blest be the Lord,
For graciously he heard
My supplications, and my prayers
He kindly did regard.

7 The Lord's my strength and shield; my Upon him did rely.
I have been helped, and hence my heart
Doth joy exceedingly.

8 And with my song I will him praise,
Their strength is true alone;
He sits in the saving strength
Of his anointed one.

9 O thy own people do thou save,
Bless thy inheritance;
Them also do thou feed, and them
For evermore advance.

PSALM 29. B. M.

1 LORD, to thee I cry,
Thou art my rock and trust;
O be not silent, lest I die
And slumber in the dust.

2 O hear my earnest cry,
Thy favor I entreat to give;
Hear, while I lift imploring hands
Before thy mercy-seat.

3 O draw me not away
With men who live in sin;
Who to their neighbors speak of peace
While malice lurks within.

4 Rejoy them for their deeds
And vile attempts, O Lord;
And fee the doings of their hands
Return a just reward.

5 Because they disregard
The works the Lord hath done,
By him they shall not be upheld,
But utterly o'erthrown.

6 Now blest be the Lord,
He heard me when I cried;
Jehovah is my strength and shield,
On him my heart is tied.

7 I help from him obtained,
And therefore give him praise;
And while my heart exults with joy,
My song to him I raise.

8 God is his people's strength,
And his Messiah's over;
Bare, bless, and feed thy heritage,
Exalt them evermore.

PSALM 29. C. M.

1 GIVE ye to the Lord, ye sons
That of the mighty he,
All strength and glory to the Lord
With cheerfulness give ye.

2 The glory to Jehovah give
Which to his name is due;
And laudified in his courts,
Before Jehovah bow.

3 Jehovah's voice is on the deep;
The God of majesty,
Doth thunder, and on multitudes
Of waters sitteth he.

4 A voice of mighty power comes
Out from the Lord Most High;
The voices of that great Lord is full
Of glorious majesty.

5 The voice of the Eternal doth
Assume colors bear;
Yea, God the Lord doth colors break
That Lebanon doth bear.

6 He makes them like a calf to skip,
Ke'n that great Lebanon,
And, like to a young unicorn,
The mountain siton.

7 God's voice divideth the flames of fire;
The desert it doth quake;
The Lord doth make the wilderness
Of Kadesh all to quake.

8 Jehovah's voice makes hills to calve,
It strikes the forest bare;
And to his temple, on the hills,
His glory to declare.

9 Jehovah sits upon the flood;
His thunders shall never cease.
The Lord will give his people strength,
And bless them all with peace.

PSALM 29. 12s and 11s.

1 THE sons of the mighty, give ye to Jehovah,
O give to him honor and strength evermore,
O give to the name of Jehovah due glory;
In beauty of holiness bow and adore.

2 The voice of Jehovah comes a-weep the waters;
His voice o'er the vast and deep ocean
is heard;
The God of all glory is speaking in thunder;
How mighty, how awful the voice of the Lord!

3 The voice of Jehovah is breaking the cedars;
The cedars which Lebanon's summit
adorn;
Yea, Lebanon, Sirion, too, he is making
To leap like a calf, or the young unicorn.

4 The voice of Jehovah the burning fane
severs,
It makes the hills calve, and the forest lays bare;
It shakes the great desert, the desert of Kadesh;
All join in his temple his power to declare.

5 Upon the great waters Jehovah is seated,
A King whose dominion is never to cease,
Jehovah with power will strengthen his people;
Jehovah will bless all his people with peace.

PSALM 30. C. M.

1 LORD, I will thee extol, for thou
Hast lifted me on high,
And over me thou hast rejoiced
And set me my enemy.

2 O thou who art the Lord my God,
In distress to thee,
With loud cries lifted up my voice,
And thou hast heard me.

3 O Lord, my soul thou hast brought up,
And rescued from the grave;
That I to death should not go down,
Alas thou didst me save.

4 O ye that are his holy ones,
Sing praises to the Lord,
And thank to him express, when ye
His holiness record.

5 For but a moment leads his wrath;
Life in his favor lies;
Though weeping for a night endure,
At morn doth joy arise.

6 In my prosperity I said,
That nothing shall me move.
O Lord, thou hast my mountain made
To stand strong by thy love.

7 But when that thou, O gracious God,
Didst hide thy face from me,
Thou quickly was my prosperous state
Turned into misery.

8 To thee, O Lord, in my distress,
With earnest cries I pray'd,
And humbly unto thee most high
My supplication made.

9 Wh' profits is there in my blood,
When I to death do go down?
Shall unto thee the dust give praise?
Shall it thy truth make known?

10 In mercy hear, and help me, Lord;
From scorchings thou didst free;
My grief to dancing thou hast turned,
With gladness girded me.

11 That sing thy praise my glory may,
And never silent be.
O Lord my God, for evermore
I will give thanks to thee.

PSALM 30. 7s and 6s.

1 LORD, by thee delivered,
With songs I'll thee extol;
No en'my hast thou suffered
To glory o'er my fall.
I cried to thee, Jehovah,
Thou didst me hear and save;
From death thou didst deliver,
And ransom from the grave.

2 His holiness, remember,
To mine give thanks and praise;
A moment lasts his anger,
His favor crowns our days.
For sorrow, like a pignora,
May severance for a night,
But joy the heart shall gladden,
When dawn the morning light.

3 In prosperous days I boasted,
That nothing shall me move;
Lord, thou hast made my mountain
Stand firmly by thy love.
But soon I was afflicted,
For thou didst hide thy face;
And then to thee, Jehovah,
Arose my cry for grace.

9 What can my blood avail thee
When in the grave I dwell?
Shall dust repeat thy praise?
Thy truth and glory tell?
O Lord, on me have mercy,
And my petition hear;
That thou mayst be my helper
In misery, Lord, appear.

PSALM 30. H. M.

1 LORD, I will praise thy name,
For thou hast saved me free;
Nor suffered foes to
A triumph over me.
O Lord, my God, to me I cried,
And thou hast heard my cry,
And strength supplied.

2 Thou hast my sorrow
When I was near to
And from the pit, O Lo.,
Alas thou didst me save.
O his name, sing to the Lord,
With thanks his holiness record.

3 His anger soon is past,
Life in his favor lies;
Weeping a night may last,
At morn doth joy arise;
In my prosperity secure,
I said, my peace shall all endure.

4 Jehovah, by thy grace
My mountain standeth strong;
Thou hast withdrawn thy face,
And troubles round me throng.
To thee, O Lord, I raise my cry;
To God my supplications rise.

5 What shall my blood avail,
When in the grave I go?
Shall dust thy praise tell?
Thy truth to others show?
Hear me, O Lord, and mercy send,
My God, to me thy help extend.

6 My mourning now is past,
And ceased my lily employ;
My scorchings from me cast,
And I am girt with joy.
So shall my tongue through life adore,
And praise my God for evermore.

PSALM 31. C. M.

1 IN thee, O Lord, I put my trust, shamed let me never be;
According to thy righteousness
Do thou deliver me.

2 Bow down thine ear to me, with speed
Send me deliverance;
To save me, my strong rock be thou,
And house of my defence.

3 Because thou art my rock, and thee
I for my fortress take;
Do thou me therefore lead and guide,
Ev'n for thine own name's sake.

4 Because thou art my strength, O Lord,
Be rescues from the net,
Which they in snailty for me
So secretly have set.

5 I to thy hands my soul commit,
For thou alone art he,
O thou, Jehovah, God of truth,
Who hast redeemed me.

6 Who lying vanities observe,
I ever have abhorred;
But as for me, my confidence
Is fixed upon the Lord.

7 I'll in thy mercy gladly go,
For thou hast seen my grief;
In troubles thou hast known my soul,
And sent to me relief.

8 Thou also hast not shun me up
Within the enemy's hand;
But in what place have my foes
By thee been made to stand.

9 Because I am in trouble, Lord,
Have mercy, send relief;
My eye, my very flesh, and soul,
Are all consumed with grief.

10 My life is all with sorrow spent;
My years with sighs and groans;
My sin has caused my strength to fall,
And wasted are my bones.

11 A scorn was I to all my foes,
To friends I was a fear,
And specially reproached of them
Who were my neighbors near.

12 And when they thought me walk abroad,
They from my presence fled;
I like a broken vessel am,
Forgotten like the dead.

13 For slanders I'm many heard;
Fear compassed me, while they Against me did conspire, and plot
To take my life away.

14 But as for me, O Lord, my trust
Upon thee I have laid;
And I to thee, Thou art my God,
Have confidently said.

15 My times are wholly in thy hand,
Do thou deliver me
From hands of those that enemies
And persecutors be.

16 Thy countenance to shine do thou
Upon thy servant make;
And thy salvation give to me,
For thy great mercy's sake.

17 Let me not be ashamed, O Lord,
For on thee called I have;
Let sinners be ashamed, let them
Be silent in the grave.

18 To silence put the lying lips,
That things reproful say,
And charge false, in pride and scorn,
Upon the righteous lay.

19 How great the goodness thou for them
Thou hast done, O Lord!
Hast wrought for them that trust in thee
The sons of men before.

PSALM 31. B. M.

20 In secret of thy presence thou
Shalt hide them from man's pride;
From strife of tongues thou closely shalt,
As in a tent, them hide.

21 All praise and thanks be to the Lord,
For he hath magnified
His wondrous love to me within
A city fortified.

22 For from thine eyes cut off I am,
I in my haste and my day;
Yet thou didst hear my voice, when I
My supplication made.

23 O love the Lord, all ye his saints,
The Lord the faithful guards;
And he the proud and haughty ones
Abundantly rewards.

24 Good courage have, and be his strength
Within your heart shall send,
All ye whose hope and confidence
Upon the Lord depend.

PSALM 31. C. M.

1 DE FEND me, Lord, from shame,
For still I trust in thee;
As just and righteous is thy name,
From troubles set me free.

2 Bow down to me thine ear,
Deliver me with speed;
Be thou my rock and fortress near,
My help in time of need.

3 Thee for my rock I take,
My fortress, and my stay;
Do thou me lead for thy name's sake,
And guide me in thy way.

4 Lord, thou dost strength impart;
Thou free me from the snare
Which set for me with wicked art,
Did secretly prepare.

5 In confidence to thee,
My spirit I commend;
Jehovah, God of truth, to me
Thou didst render thy hand.

6 I hate the false and vain,
Which they trust in the Lord;
And still my heart in joyous strains
Thy mercy will record.

7 Lord, thou hast seen my woes,
My soul in trouble known;
Not shut me in the hand of foes,
But freedom to me shown.

8 In mercy send relief,
For troubles none prevail;
My eye is dim, consumed with grief,
My flesh and spirit fail.

9 My life in grief is past,
My weary years to groans;
For sin my strength is falling fast,
Decayed are all my bones.

10 Reproached by every foe,
And more, by neighbors near;
Though I might fear, my friends no friendship
They give when I appear.

11 Forgotten like the dead,
And sprung as broken ware;
I hear the frequent slander spread;
On every side is fear.

12 They join in dark accord,
They set my life to shed;
I trusted have on thee, O Lord,
"Thou art my God," I said.

13 My times are wholly thine,
From cruel foes me take;
Thy face make on thy servant shine,
Save for thy mercy's sake.

14 From shame, O Lord, defend,
For I to thee have cried;
Let foes be ashamed, to death descend,
And, silent, there abide.

15 Do thou their tongues restrain,
Who false reports do speak;
And remove things with proud disdain
Against the righteous speak.

I have not

PART II. C. P. M.

16 How great the goodness thou hast stored In secret by thy saints, O Lord, Thy holy name who fear! How great the mercies wrought for thee While in distress thou trust repose, Before men's eyes appear.

17 Thou in the secret of thy face, Shalt find for them a hiding place, From proud oppressor's wrongs! A safe retreat for them thou art, And keep them in a covert there, Secure from strife of tongue.

18 O Lord Jehovah blest be, Who showed his wondrous love to me In city fortified. "Cut off from thee," I said in fear, Yet thou my suppliant voice didst hear, When unto thee I cried.

19 O love the Lord all that him serve, For he the faithful shall preserve, And all the proud reward. Be of good courage; he with strength Will fill your steadfast hearts at length, All ye who trust the Lord.

PSALM 32. C. M.

1 HOW blest the man whose sins the Lord Hath pardoned in his grace, All whose transgressions are removed, And covered from his face!

2 How blest the man to whom the Lord Imputeth not his sin; And in whose spirit no guile, Nor fraud is found therein!

3 When I from speaking had refrained, And silent was my tongue, My bones waxed old, and were consumed Through fasting; and my eyes became as water, and my heart as chaff; because upon me night and day Thy hand did heavily lie; So that my moisture has been turned To summer's drought thereby.

PSALM 33. C. M.

1 THE Lord is just, and loveth righteousness: Great trouble were not his sinners; For he will not take away his word, Nor will he retract his promise.

2 Nor horse nor mule resemble, Which do not understand; Whose mouths the bit and bridle Must hold in safe command.

3 The arrows of the wicked Will never smite the just; But those that trust Jehovah His grace shall compass round.

4 Ye righteous in Jehovah Be glad, in him rejoice; All that in hearts are upright, For joy lift up your voice.

5 He spake the word, creation came; He gave command, the world's fixed At once to be long rose. He makes the heathen's counsel vain, The planet the people would maintain At will he overthrow.

6 Jehovah's counsels shall endure, And of his heart the thoughts secure Shall stand from age to age. Blessed realm, whose God is he alone; Blessed people whom he makes his own, His chosen heritage.

7 Jehovah looks from heaven to earth, And all the sons of mortal birth His scarching eye surveys; From heaven, his dwelling-place on high, On all who dwell beneath the sky, Rests his omniscient gaze.

8 He forms alike their hearts each one; The works which by their hands are done He carefully observes. No king is saved by mighty hosts; 'Tis not his strength the strong man That him from ruin preserves.

9 The rain to trust the martial sword, Nor can he by his strength or speed Avail in peril great. With watchful eye the Lord is near To those his help he would bestow, And for his mercy wait.

10 He's ever near to them, to save Their soul from all their fears; In famine life to yield. Our soul in hope waits for the Lord, And he protection will afford; He'll be our help and shield.

11 His ever near to them, to save Their soul from all their fears; In famine life to yield. Our soul in hope waits for the Lord, And he protection will afford; He'll be our help and shield.

12 The angel of the Lord encamps, And he encompasseth All those who do his name truly fear, And them delivereth.

13 O taste and see that God is good; Who trusts in him is blest. Fear God, his saints, none that him fear Shall be with want oppressed.

14 The righteous cry unto the Lord, And unto me give ear, And unto me speak thy word, O Lord, For thou art merciful and true.

15 The angel of the Lord encamps, And he encompasseth All those who do his name truly fear, And them delivereth.

16 The face of God is set against Those that do wickedly; That he may quite out from the earth Cut off their memory.

17 The righteous cry unto the Lord, He unto them gives ear; And they out of their troubles all By him delivered are.

PSALM 34. C. M.

1 WHEN I was afflicted and sore, My soul shall boast in God; my voice Will praise his name aloud.

PSALM 35. C. M.

1 THE Lord is just, and loveth righteousness: Great trouble were not his sinners; For he will not take away his word, Nor will he retract his promise.

PSALM 36. C. M.

1 THE Lord is just, and loveth righteousness: Great trouble were not his sinners; For he will not take away his word, Nor will he retract his promise.

PSALM 37. C. M.

1 THE Lord is just, and loveth righteousness: Great trouble were not his sinners; For he will not take away his word, Nor will he retract his promise.

PSALM 38. C. M.

1 My soul is vexed and sore, My heart is troubled and full of pain; My voice is hoarse, my eyes are dim, My heart is as a lute that is broken.

17 Let not my wrongful enemies
With envy rejoice o'er me;
Nor let them wink with scornful eye,
Who hate me causelessly.

18 For peace they do not speak at all;
But craftily plot against me;
Against all those within the land
That mock and quiet are.

19 With open mouth they 'gainst me said,
Ha, ha! our eye doth see.
Lord, thou hast seen, hold not thy peace;
Lord, be not far from me.

20 Arise thyself, awake for me,
And judgment just attain;
Ev'n to thy cause, O thou that art
My only God and Lord.

21 O Lord my God, do thou me judge
In thine own righteousness;
Against me let them not their joy
Triumphantly express.

22 Nor let them say within their hearts,
Ah, we would have it thus;
Nor suffer them to say, Now ha
Is swallowed up by us.

23 Shamed and confounded be they all
That at my loss are glad;
And let those who against me boast
With shame and scorn be clad.

24 Let them who love my righteous cause
With gladness shout; my cause
To say, The Lord be merciful,
Who loves his servant's cause.

25 Then also shall thy righteousness
Be published by my tongue;
And if, the praises due to thee,
Shall utter all day long.

PSALM 35. I. M.

1 LORD, plead my cause against my
I foes,
Against them fight that fight with me;
With shield and buckler them oppose,
Stand up and my defender be.

2 Draw out the spear, and close the bow
Against the men that me oppress;
And to my soul, in mercy say,
"I am thy saviour in distress."

3 Ashamed, confounded let them be,
That to destroy my soul have sought;
Brought to confusion, let them flee,
Turned backward, who to hurt me plot.

4 Jehovah's angel, in his wrath,
Drive them like chaff before the wind;
All dark and shadowy make their path,
His angel pressing hard behind.

5 Without a cause a snare they laid,
Within a pit which they prepared,
A pit which without cause they made,
In which my soul may be ensnared.

6 Let him with sudden ruin meet,
And let him struggle in the snare,
Which he had spread for other feet,
Yes, let him meet destruction there!

7 Then shall my soul in God rejoice,
In his salvation joyful be,
And all my frames shall utter his voice,
And say, Lord, who is like to thee?

8 Who is like thee, who dost defend
The needy poor against the strong;
Who to the poor dost help extend,
To save from him that would him wrong?

9 False witnesses against me stood;
Of things I knew not, charges made,
They me rewarded ill for good;
To rob my soul they ill repaid.

10 But I in mourning garb was clad,
When they in sickness suffered pain,
I made my soul with fasting sad,
My prayer to me returned again.

11 As one for friend's or brother's woes,
So I for them went ailing on;
As one for mother mourning goes,
So I with grief went bowing down.

12 But they rejoiced in my distress;
To mock the object gathered were;
Unknown to me, around did press;
With ceaseless slanders did me tear.

13 With hyperies at feasts that mock,
They with their teeth have gnashed on
How long Jehovah shall me look;
How long wilt thou their railing scorn?

14 My soul from their destruction guard;
My darling from the lions bring;
Then in the great assembly, Lord,
Among the people, praise I'll sing.

15 Let not my causeless foes, elate
With joy, o'er me triumphant cry;
Nor they who me unjustly hate,
With secret warring win the eye.

16 They speak not peace, but falsehoods
Against the quiet ones devise; [they Make wide their mouths at me, and say,
"Ah! we've seen thee with our eyes."

17 This thou hast seen, thy silence break!
Lord, be from me not far away.
Sift up thyself, my God, awake
To judgment; now my cause delay.

18 Judge me in righteousness, O God!
Let them not triumph over me;
Nor from their hearts spurn me abroad,
"Aha! our soul's desire we see."

19 Let them who glory in my fall,
Not say, "We have him as allowed quite!"
Disbrow, shame, confound them all,
Who rise against me in their might.

20 But let them shout, let them rejoice,
Who long to see me justified;
Yes, let them say, with ceaseless voice,
The Lord, the Lord be magnified.

21 The Lord who loves his servant's cause,
To him prosperity doth give,
My joyful tongue shall never cease
To praise thy justice while I live.

PSALM 36. C. M.

1 THE wicked's sin doth cause this
I Within my heart to rise, (though
Unobscuredly the fear of God
Is not before his eyes.)

2 Because in his deceitful eyes
His ways are always right,
Until the violence of his sin
Shall all be brought to light.

3 The words that from his mouth proceed
Are wickedness and lies;
He has refused to do things good,
And ceased from being wise.

4 He mischiefs, lying on his bed,
Must cunningly doth plot;
He sets himself in ways not good,
And ill abhors not.

5 Thy mercy, Lord, is in the heavens;
Thy truth doth reach to earth;
Thy justice is like mountains great;
Thy judgments deep as floods.

6 Lord, thou preservest man and beast,
How precious is thy grace!
Therefore in shadow of thy wings
Men's sons their trust shall place.

7 Thy will the fountains of thy house
Shall be well satisfied;
From rivers of thy pleasures thou
Wilt drink to them provide.

8 Because of life the fountain pure
Remains above with thee;
And in that purest light of thine,
We clearly light shall see.

9 Thy loving-kindness unto them
Continues that thou know;
And still on men upright to heart
Thy righteousness bestow.

10 Let not the feet of cruel pride
Come, and against me stand;
And let me never be removed,
Lord, by the wicked's hand.

11 Thy fallen have, they ruined are,
That work iniquity and strife;
Cast down they are, and never shall
Be able to arise.

PSALM 37. C. M.

1 FOR evil-doers fret them not
I Their words quietly;
Nor do thou envy bear to those
That work iniquity.

2 For even like the falling grass,
Soon be cut down shall they;
And, like the green and tender herb,
They wither shall away.

3 Set thou thy trust upon the Lord,
And he thou doing good,
And so thou in the land shalt dwell,
And verily have food.

4 Delight thyself in God; he'll give
Thy heart's desire to thee,
Thy way to God consult, him trust,
It bring to pass shall he.

5 And like the morning light he shall
Thy righteousness display;
And he thy judgment doth bring forth
Like noon-day of the day.

6 Rest in the Lord, in patience wait,
Nor for the wicked fret,
Who prospering in his evil way,
Success in sin doth get.

7 Do thou from anger cease, and wrath
See thou forsake also;
Fret not thyself in any wise,
That evil thou shouldst do.

8 For they that evil-doers are
Shall be cut off and fall;
But they who wait upon the Lord
The earth inherit shall.

9 For yet a little while, and then
The wicked shall not be;
He place thou shalt consider well,
But it thou shalt not see.

10 But by inheritance the earth
Thy meek ones shall possess;
They also shall quiet themselves
In an abundant peace.

11 The wicked plot and gnash their teeth;
Against the just they stand;
The Lord shall laugh at them, because
He sees their day at hand.

12 The wicked have drawn out the sword,
And least their law, to slay
The poor and needy, and to kill
The man of upright way.

13 But yet the sword which they have
Shall enter their own heart;
Their bows which they have bent shall
And into pieces part. [break,

14 A little that a just man hath
Is more and better far,
Than is the wealth of many such
As low and wicked are.

15 For sinners' arms shall broken be;
But doth the just continue,
He knows their days, and furthermore
Their heritage remains.

16 They shall not be ashamed when they
The evil times shall see;
And when the days of famine are
They satisfied shall be.

17 But wicked men and foes of God
As fat of lambs decay;
They shall consume, yea, into smoke
They shall consume away.

18 The wicked borrow, but the same
Again he doth not pay;
Whereas the righteous mercy shows,
And gives his own away.

19 Because they whom the Lord doth bless
The earth as helm shall own;
But all accused of him shall be Cut off and overrun.

20 The footsteps of the righteous man
The Lord direct aright;
And in the way in which he walks
He taketh good delight.

21 A' though he fall, yet shall he not
Be cast down utterly;
Because the Lord with his own hand
Upholds him mightily.

22 I have been young, and now am old,
Yet have I never seen
The just man left, nor that his seed
For bread have been bereft.

23 He's ever merciful, and lends;
His seed is therefore blessed,
Depart from evil, and do good,
And ever dwell at rest.

24 For God love judgment, and his saints
Leaves not in any case;
They are kept ever; but cut off
Shall be the sinners' race.

25 The just inherit shall the land,
And ever in it dwell;
The just man's mouth doth wisdom speak,
His tongue doth judgment tell.

26 The law of God is in his heart,
His steps aside he never,
The wicked watcheth for the just,
And seeketh him to slay.

27 Yet him the Lord will not forsake,
Nor leave him in his hands;
The righteous will he not condemn,
When he is judged stands.

28 Wait on the Lord, and keep his way,
And thou shalt have thy share,
To hold the land by heritage,
And sinners' ruin see.

29 I saw the wicked great in power,
Spread like a green bay-tree;
He passed, in he was gone, I sought,
But found he could not be.

30 Mark thou the perfect, and behold
The man of upright ways;
Because the man of holy life
In peace shall and his days.

31 But God upon transgressors shall
A common ruin send;
And when the wicked are cut off,
In woos their days shall end.

32 But the salvation of the just
Is from the Lord alone;
He is the time of their distress
Their stay and strength doth prove.

33 The Lord shall help and rescue them;
He shall them free and save
From wicked men, because in him
Their confidence they have.

PSALM 38. C. M.

1 THY great indignation, Lord,
I Do thou revoke me not;
Nor on me lay thy chastening hand,
In thy displeasure hot.

2 For in me fast thine arrows stick,
Thy bow doth press me sore;
And in my flesh there is no health,
Nor soundness any more.

3 Forth grief I have because thy wrath
Is grief against me gone;
And in my bones there is no rest,
For as thou I have done.

4 Because gone up above my head
My great transgressions lie;
And, as a weighty burden, they,
Too heavy are for me.

5 My wounds are purged and corrupt;
My belly makes me as
I troubled am, and much bowed down;
All day I mourning go.

6 For a disease which loathsome is
So fills my loins with pain,
That in my weak and weary flesh
No soundness doth remain.

7 So feeble and infirm am I,
And broken am as air,
That, through disquiet of my heart,
I have been made to roar.

8 O Lord, all that I do desire
Is still before thy eye;
And of my heart the secret groans
No hidden art from thee.

9 My heart doth pant incessantly,
My strength doth quite decay;
As for my eyes, their wonted light
Is from me gone away.

10 My lovers and my friends do stand
At distance from my side;
And in my day of need were
Kinemen and kind before.

11 Yes, they who seek my life lay snares;
And they who would my wrong
Have spoken mischief, and deceit
Imagined all day long.

12 But as one dead, I did not hear,
And as a dumb man I became,
Whose mouth not opened was.

13 As one that hears not, in whose mouth
Are no returns at all;
For Lord, I hope in thee, my God
Will hear me when I call.

14 Because I said, Hear me, lest they Rejoice o'er me with pride;
And o'er me magnify themselves,
Because my feet doth slide.

15 For I am near to halt, my grief
Is still before my eye;
I will declare my sin, and grieve
For my iniquity.

16 But yet my foes are full of life,
My enemies are strong;
As they are greatly multiplied,
Who hate and would me wrong.

17 And they for good who render ill,
As enemies me withstand;
They are my litter foes because
I follow what is good.

18 Forsake me not, O Lord; my God,
Far from me never be;
O Lord, thou my salvation art,
In haste give help to me.

PSALM 38. 8s and 7a

1 LORD, do not in hot displeasure,
I Let thy wrath be kindled on me;
Let thy chastening be in measure,
Thy rebuke from anger free.

2 For thy hand smote sorely me,
And thy arrow stick within;
Wrath thy very fierce displeasure,
Gives my bones as rest for sin.

3 O'er my head like billows rushing
My transgressions risen are;
Like a burden heavy, crushing,
Greater far than I can bear.

4 Because as my wounds neglected,
My own folly make me;
Bowed with grief, and much afflicted,
All the day I mourning go.

5 For my loins are filled with burning,
Health in me no more remains;
I am feeble, brained, and mourning,
Groaning loud through inward pains.

6 My desires and ceaseless wailing,
Lord, unveiled before thee lie;
Pants my heart, my strength is failing,
All thy light hath left mine eye.

7 Friends and lovers none are standing
In distance from my side;
Kinemen once my cause befriending,
Come to visit me no more.

8 They that for my life are seeking,
Snares for me in secret lay;
Hateful things against me speaking,
Flout devising all the day.

9 But as one that's deaf I heard not,
As one dumb no word I speak;
Silent like those that regard not,
Whose mouths no answer make.

10 Lord, my God, in thee I'm trusting,
Thou hast heard me in my need;
Hear, lest they against me boasting,
Joy and triumph when I fall.

11 Ready now to halt and stumble,
Grief before me still have been;
I'll contend with spirit humbled,
For as thou I have done.

12 Great in power, life, and number,
Bitter how have me withstand,
E'en they for kindness render,
Hating me for doing good.

PSALM 39. C. M.

1 I SAID, my ways I'll guard with care,
Lest with my tongue I sin;
In sight of wicked men my mouth
With hidden I'll keep in.

2 With silence I as dumb became,
I did myself restrain;
From speaking word, but then the more
Increased my inward pain.

3 My heart within me was inflamed,
And, while I musing was,
The fire was kindled, and these words
I from my tongue let pass:

4 My end, and measure of my days,
To me, Jehovah, show
What is the end, that I thereby
How fast I am may know.

5 Lo, thou hast made my days a span,
As nothing are my years;
Before thy sight, each man at best
But vanity appears!

6 Yes, each man walks in empty show!
They say themselves in vain;
He boasts up wealth, and knoweth not
To whom it shall pertain.

7 And now, O Lord, what wait I for?
My hope is fixed on thee,
Deliver me from all my sin;
The foul's scorn make not me.

8 As dumb I opened not my mouth,
Because this work was thine,
The stroke renews, for by the stroke
Of thy strong hand I pine.

9 With thy rebukes thou dost correct
Man for iniquity,
And waste his beauty like a moth:
Each man is vanity.

10 Lord, hear my prayer, and at my cry,
And tears not silent be;
I adjure by my fathers' God,
And stranger am with thee.

11 O spare thou me, that I my strength
Recover may again,
Before from hence I do depart,
And here no more remain.

PSALM 39. S. M.

1 I SAID, I'll walk with care,
From sin my tongue I'll guard;
My mouth a wise restraint shall bear,
While sinners near me stand.

2 As dumb, I silent stood,
From words I did refrain,
I held my peace from speaking good,
My soul was filled with pain.

3 My heart was all on fire,
With burning thoughts I'm oppress'd;
Then, with my tongue, my soul's desire
I thus to God express'd:

4 My end and length of days,
To me, O Lord, unveil;
That I may know, in all my ways,
How weak I am and vain.

5 Lord, thou hast made my years
To measure but a span;
As naught to thee my age appears;
How vain, at best, is man!

6 Man lives in empty show,
His anxious care is vain,
He boasts his wealth, and doth not know
Who shall possess his gain.

7 Now, Lord, why do I wait?
My hope is in thy name;
But out my sin in mury great,
Nor let the fool be blame.

8 As dumb, I silent stand,
Because this work is thine;
Remote from me thy chastening hand,
Beneath thy stroke I pine.

9 Rebukes for sin consume,
And chasten man with pain;
Like motes they waste his beauty's bloom;
Lo, every man is vain.

10 Jehovah, hear my prayers,
And answer my request;
Turn not in silence from my tears,
But give the mourner rest.

11 I am a stranger here,
Dependent on thy grace;
A pilgrim, as my fathers were,
With no abiding place.

12 Spare, Lord, and strength bestow,
My fainting soul restore;
Ere I to dust and darkness go,
And be on earth no more.

PSALM 40. C. M.

1 I WAITED for the Lord my God,
And patiently did wait;
Although to me he did incline
My voice and cry to hear.

2 He took me from a fearful pit,
And from the wry clay;
Upon a rock he set my feet,
Establishing my way.

3 He put a new song in my mouth,
Our God to magnify;
Many shall see it, and shall fear,
And on the Lord rely.

4 O blessed is the man whose trust
Upon the Lord relies;
Respecting not the proud, nor such
As turn aside to lies.

5 O Lord my God, how many are
The wonders that are done?
Thy gracious thoughts to us above
All other thoughts are gone.

6 To thee no one can thine express;
If I would them declare;
If I would speak of them, they more
Than can be numbered are.

7 My ears thou opened hast; and thus
No offering had desired,
Nor sacrifice, sin-offering thou
And burnt had not required.

8 Then to the Lord these were my words,
I come, Jehovah, and
Within, the volume of the book,
It written is of me;

9 To do thy will I take delight,
O thou my God that art;
Yes, that most holy law of thine
I have within my heart.

10 Within the congregation great
I righteousness did preach;
Lo, thou dost know, O Lord, that I
Have not refrained my speech.

11 I never have within my heart
(Unceasing) thy righteousness;
I thy salvation have desired,
And shown thy faithfulness:

12 Thy kindness which most loving is
I ever have revere'd;
And from the congregation great
Thy truth have not conceal'd.

13 Thy tender mercies, Lord, from me
O do thou not restrain;
Thy loving-kindness, and thy truth,
Let them me still maintain.

14 For his pastreck'ning compass me,
And my iniquities,
Such hold upon me taken have,
I cannot lift my eyes:

15 They more than walk are on my head,
Thence is my heart dismay'd;
Be pleased, O Lord, to rescue me;
Lord, hasten to my aid.

16 Let them confounded be, and shamed
Who seek my soul to kill;
Yes, let them backward driven be,
And slum, who wish me ill.

17 And for reward of this their shame
Confounded let them be,
Bliss in this manner scoffing say,
Aha, aha! to me.

18 In thee let all be glad, and joy,
Who seeking thee abide;
Who thy salvation love, say still,
The Lord be magnified.

19 I poor and needy am, but yet
The Lord of me takes thought;
Thou art my Saviour and my help;
My God, O carry out.

PSALM 40. L. H. M.

1 I WAITED long for God most High,
And he inclined to hear my cry;
He took me from a fearful pit,
And from the wry clay;
Upon a rock he set my feet,
Establishing my way.

2 He taught my mouth and lips to frame
New songs to magnify his name;
This many seeing, filled with fear,
Shall on the Lord rely;
Blest in their trust, they sin with care
The proud, and such as lie.

3 O Lord my God, thy wonders wrought,
And thy kind thought, exceed all thought
No mind can thine vast aim contain.
If I would I could declare,
And speak of them, the lack is vain,
So numerous they are.

4 Sin-offering thou hast not desired,
Burnt-offering hast not required.
I said, thou opened hast my ears;
I come, said I to thee.
Lo, this within thy book appears;
There it is said of me:

5 To do thy holy will aright,
O Lord my God, is my delight;
Thy law within my heart doth reign,
Thy justice I have shown;
That my lips did not refrain,
To thee, O Lord, I know.

6 I have not in my heart conceal'd,
And thy salvation I bore taught;
The righteousness which thou hast wrought,
And faithfulness made known;
Thy love and truth have shown.

7 I for thy tender mercies cried,
O Lord, let them not be denied;
To me thy loving-kindness show,
Thy truth be still my stay;
Let them preserve me where I go,
And keep me every day.

8 Encompass'd round with lies untold,
On me my sin have taken hold,
They smote thee thus hairs upon my head,
And shame my face hath roll'd,
Lord, save me, haste to give me aid,
My very heart hath fail'd.

9 All those who seek my soul to kill,
Together let confusion fill;
Those who desire my hurt, O Lord,
Drive backward in their way;
Make desolate as their reward,
To me "Aha!" that say.

10 Let all who seek to see thy face
Be glad and joyful in thy grace;
Let those who thy salvation love
Continually proclaim,
O praise the Lord, who dwells above,
And magnify his name."

11 I'm poor and needy, yet the Lord
With kindest thoughts will me regard.
Thy helping grace thou wilt impart,
And keep me in the way.
Thou only my deliverer art,
My God, do not delay.

PSALM 41. C. M.

1 HOW true the man who wisely doth
Upon the Lord rely;
The Lord in times of evil will
To him deliverance send.

2 God will him keep, yea, save alive;
On earth he blest shall live;
And in his chamber's doors
Thou never wilt him give.

3 God will give strength when he on bed
Of languishing doth mourn;
And in his sickness sore, O Lord,
Thou all his bed wilt turn.

4 I said, O Lord, do thou extend
Thy mercy unto me;
And do thou heal my soul, because
I have offended thee.

5 Those that to me are enemies
Of me do evil say;
When shall he die, that so his name
May perish quite away!

6 To see me if he come, he speaks
Vain words, and in his heart
He gathers mischief, which he tells
When forth he doth depart.

7 My haters jointly whispering,
Against me ill doth say;
Disease, say they, cleaves fast to him;
He lies, and shall not rise.

8 Yes, even my familiar friend,
On whom I did rely,
Who ate my bread, even he his heel
Against me lifted high.

9 But, Lord, be merciful to me,
And up again me raise,
That I may justly them requite
According to their ways.

10 By this I know that certainly
I loved am by thy foes,
Because my enemy no more
Doth triumph over me.

11 But in integrity thou hast
Upheld me by thy hand;
And me before thy countenance
Forever made to stand.

12 The Lord, the God of Israel,
Be blest forever then;
From age to age eternally,
Amen, yea, and amen.

PSALM 41. L. M.

1 BLESSED he who wisely helps the poor,
The Lord shall keep him, he shall live;
And blessing on the earth receive.

2 Thou wilt not give him in the will
Of foes that seek to do him ill.
When laid upon the bed of pain,
The Lord with strength will him sustain.

3 On him thou wilt compassion take,
And all his bed in sickness make.
I'll justify, say they, that thou dost,
Because I have offended thee.

4 My foes speak ill of me, they say,
When shall he die? his name decay?
If seeing me, his speech is vain;
His heart boards like to fell again.

5 All those who hate me, whisper lies,
And set me hurtful things on fire;
Now his diseases, say they, is more,
It breeds him fast, he'll rise o more.

6 Yes, ev'n my own familiar friend,
The man on whom I did depend,
Who ate my bread, retreating soul,
Against me lifted up his heel.

7 In mercy raise me up, O Lord,
To render foes a due reward,
By this I know thy love remains,
Because my foe no triumph gains.

8 Thou dost thy steps direct aright,
And set me ever in thy light.
Let Israel's God, Jehovah, then
Be ever blest. Amen, amen.

PSALM 42. C. M.

1 AS in its thirst the panting hart
To water-brooks doth flee,
So vainly my longing soul, O God,
Thou I may come to thee.

2 My soul for God, the living God,
Doth thirst; when shall I near
Before thy countenance approach,
And in God's sight appear?

3 My tears have unto me been most,
Both in the night and day;
While unto me continually
Where is thy God? they say.

4 My soul within me is poured out
When this I think upon;
Because that with the multitude
I beset me had none.

5 With them into God's house I went
With voice of joy and praise;
Yes, with the multitude that kept
The solemn holy days.

6 O why art thou cast down, my soul?
Why in me so dismay'd?
Trust God, for I shall praise him yet,
His presence is my aid.

7 My God, my soul's cast down in me;
I thus remember will
From Jordan's land, from Hermon's,
And even Bala-shil.

8 In answer to thy water-pools,
Deep unto deep doth call;
Thy breaking waves pass over me,
Yes, and they billow all.

9 His loving-kindness yet the Lord
Commanded will in the day;
His song is with me in the night;
To God, my life, I'll pray.

10 I'll say to God my rock, O why
Dost thou forget me so?
Dost thou oppression of my foes
Why do I mourning go?

11 'Tis as a sword within my bones,
When me my foes oppress;
When it by them, Where is thy God?
Is daily to me said.

12 O why art thou cast down, my soul?
Why thus with grief oppress'd,
Art thou disquieted in me?
In God will hope and rest;

13 For yet I know I shall him praise
Who graciously to me
The health is of my countenance,
Yes, my own God is he.

PSALM 42. S. and 4s.

1 AS pants the hart for cooling brook,
So pants my soul, O living God,
To taste thy grace.
When unto thee shall I draw near?
O when within thy courts appear,
And see thy face?

2 Tear-drops and night have been my bread,
Whilist, "Where is now thy God?" is said
By foes to me.
I will these things to mind with grief,
My soul I then, to God relief,
Pour out to thee.

3 With numbers gathered from abroad
I went to seek the house of God,
With joy and praise,
I ever joyful with true delight
The multitude which kept aright
The holy days.

4 O thou my soul, why so depressed?
Why thus with veiling thoughts oppress'd
On God rely?
For I shall yet behold his face;
My God, who helps me by his grace,
I'll magnify.

5 My God, my soul's cast down, yet still
From Jordan, Hermon, Mizraim,
I'll think of thee.
Deep calls to deep with deafening roar,
Thy water-pools and billows pour
Their floods on me.

6 God will command his love by day,
And by night will sing and pray
To God my life.
To God my rock I'll make my plea,
O why hast thou forgotten me
Amidst this strife?

7 Why ever restless do I mourn,
Oppress'd by foes whose words of scorn
Are spread abroad?
And dost thou not remember I will Have pierced my soul like cooling sword
"Where is thy God?"

3 O thou my soul, why art depressed?
Why thus with vexing thoughts oppressed?
And that reply:
For I shall yet behold his face;
My soul, who helps me by his grace,
I'll magnify.

PSALM 42. L. M.

1 As pants the hart for water brooks,
So pants my soul, O God, for thee;
For mine is thirst, and thine is lack,
And long the thirsted soul for thee.

2 Far from thy sacred courts, my tears
Have been my food by night and day,
While constantly, with lute and string,
"Where is thy God?" the scoffer say.

3 These things I'll call to mind, and cry,
When I shall tread the sacred way
To Zion, praising God on high,
With throngs who keep the holy day.

4 O, why art thou cast down, my soul?
And what should so disquiet thee I
Still hope in God, and him extol,
Whose love brings saving health to me.

5 My God, although distressed now,
I think of Zion's towers and towers,
And Mizrahim, for thy name art loved,
Deep wells to drink in thunders roared,
Thy voice repeats the words,
"Walk on me till the valleys pound,
And all thy waves upon me fall."

7 Yet shall the Lord command by day
His blessing and his grace,
And he will say to me, "I'll pray
To him who doth my life prolong."

8 I cry to God, my rock and stay,
O why hast thou forgotten me?
Why go I mourning all the day
Oppressed by my fierce enemy?

9 Keep as a sword within my loins
Are the reproaches of mine enemies,
Whilst every day, in scornful tone,
"Where is thy God?" the scoffer sneer.

10 O, why art thou cast down, my soul?
And what should so disquiet thee?
Still hope in God, and him extol,
Whose love brings saving health to me.

PSALM 43. C. M.

1 Against a wicked nation, Lord,
Plead thus my cause, judge me!
And from unjust and crafty men
O thou set me free.

2 O God my strength, why dost thou me
Cast off in my distress sore?
Why go I mourning all the day
While enemies oppress?

3 O send thy light forth, and thy truth,
Let them be guides to me,
And bring me to thy holy hill,
Where's where thy dwelling be.

4 Then will I to God's altar go,
To God my strength and praise;
Yes, God, my God, thy name to praise
My harp I will employ.

5 Why art thou then cast down, my soul?
What should discourage thee?
And why with vexing thoughts art thou
Disturbed in me?

6 Still trust in God; for him to praise
Good cause I yet shall have;
In of my countenance is the health,
My God that doth me save.

PSALM 43. 8s and 7a.

1 Righteous Judge, from foes defend me,
Who combined false charges lay;
From thy arm deliverance send me,
And my terrors flee dismay.

2 God my rock, my strength sustaining,
Why cast off by distress sore?
Why am I in grief complaining,
By the power of foes oppressed?

3 Now thy light and truth forth sending,
Let them lead and guide me still,
Guide me to thy house ascending,
Lead me to thy holy hill.

4 There thine altar, Lord, surrounding,
God, my God, my boundless joy,
Hark and voice aloud resounding,
Praise shall all my powers employ.

5 Why my soul cast down and grieving?
Why within me such distress?
Hope in God, his help receiving,
God my life I yet shall bless.

PSALM 44. C. M.

1 O God, we with our eyes have heard,
Our fathers have us told
The works by thee in their days done,
Ev'n in the days of old;

2 How thy hand drove the heathen out,
To plant them in their land;
How thou the nations didst afflict,
And cast out by thy hand.

3 For neither did their sword the land,
Nor did their arm them save;
But thy right hand, arm, countenance:
Thy favor conquest gave.

4 Thou art my King; for Jacob, Lord,
Deliverance command.
Through thee we shall push down our foes,
That do against us stand.

5 We through thy name shall tread down those
That rise against us have;
For in my bow I will not trust,
Nor shall my sword me save.

6 But from our foes thou hast us saved,
Our hatreds not to shame;
In God we all the day do boast,
And ever praise thy name.

7 But thou, O Lord, hast cast us off,
Thou hast us put to shame;
And when our armies do go forth,
Thou goest not with them.

8 Thou mak'st us from the enemy,
Mistaken to turn back;
And they who hate us for themselves,
Our souls have they do take.

9 Like sheep for meat thou givest us;
Mild beaten cast we are;
Thou dost for naught thy people sell;
Their price enriched not here.

10 Thou makest us a vile reproach
To all our neighbors near;
Derision and a scorn to them
That round about us are.

11 A by-word also thou dost us
Among the heathen make;
The people in contempt and spite
At us their heads do shake.

12 Before me my confusion great
Abides continually;
And in my health countenance
The shame doth cover me;

13 For voice of him that doth reproach,
And utter blasphemy;
By reason of th' avenging foe,
And cruel enemy.

14 All this is come on us; yet we
Have not forgotten thee;
Nor falsely in thy covenant
Behaved ourselves have we.

15 Back from thy way our heart turned
Our steps no striving made; not;
Though crushed by thee in dragons' place,
And covered with death's shade.

16 If we God's name forgot, or stretched
To fame strange god our hands;
Shall God not search this out? For he Hearts' secrets understand.

17 Yes, for thy sake we're killed all day;
And deemed as slaughter-sheep.
Rise, Lord, cast us not ever off;
A waka, why dost thou sleep?

18 O therefore dost thou hide thy face?
Forget our cause distressed,
And our oppression? For our soul
Down to the dust is pressed;

19 Our bodies also on the earth,
Fast cleaving, hold do take,
Also for our help, and us redeem,
Even for thy mercy's sake.

PSALM 44. 11s.

1 O God, we have heard, and our fathers have brought
The words which old, in their day, thou hast wrought;
The nations were crushed, and expelled
by thy hand,
Cast out that thy people might dwell
in their land.

2 They gained not the land by the edge of the sword,
Their own arm to them could no safety
afford;
But by thy right hand, and the light
of thy face,
The strength of thy arm, and because of thy grace.

3 To Jacob, O God, thou my Saviour and King,
Command, and thy word shall deliverance
bring.
We through thy assistance will push down
our foes;
In thy name we'll trample on all that oppose.

4 No trust will I place in my bow to defend,
Nor yet on my sword for my safety depend,
In God who has saved us, and put them to shame,
We trust all the day, ever praising his name.

5 But now we're cast off, and with shame are brought low;
No more to the field with our troops dost
thou go;
From foes thou hast made us turn back with dismay.
And those who have hated us seize on the prey.

6 Like sheep to the slaughter, for meat
we are given,
And widely dispersed 'midst the heathen with disdain.
The people thou sellest for naught, and in vain,
Their price has returned thee no increase of gain.

7 Our name have our neighbors reproached
in their pride;
They have not aimed us to scoff and despise,
A by-word and proverb 'midst heathen
we're made;
Against us the people in scorn shake their head.

8 Before me I constantly see my disgrace,
And shame and confusion have covered
my face;
For foes in revellings and slanders delight,
Their hearts full of hate and scornful
despite.

9 Though all these sore evils have been our evil lot,
Our God and his covenant we have not forgot.
Our heart turned not back, our feet have not strayed,
Though weaken hidden dragons, and clothed with death's shade.

10 If we have forgotten the name of our God,
Or unto some idol our hands spread abroad,
Shall not the Almighty, who sees all within,
And knows the heart's secrets, discover this sin?

11 Yes, all the day long for thy sake we're consumed;
Like sheep for the slaughter to death we are doomed,
Awake, O Jehovah, and sleep thou no more;
Arise for our help, cast not off evermore.

12 O why hast thou hidden the light of thy face,
Forgotten how enemies grieve and oppress?
Our souls' crushed to earth, and we cleave
to the dust,
Rise, help, and redeem us, thy mercy we trust.

PSALM 45. C. M.

1 My heart brings forth a goodly thing;
My words that I desire
Concern the King; my tongue's a pen
Of one that swift doth write.

2 Thou fairer art than sons of men,
And in thy lips is store
Of grace infused; O therefore thee
Hath blest for evermore.

3 O thou that art the mighty One,
Thy sword gird on thy thigh!
Even with thy glory excellent,
And with thy majesty.

4 For meekness, truth, and righteousness,
In state ride prosperously;
And thy right hand shall thee instruct
In things that fearful be.

5 Thy arrows sharp do pierce the hearts
Of those who hate the King;
And under thy ascension they
The people down do bring.

6 Forever and forever is,
O God, thy throne of might;
The scepter of thy kingdom is
A scepter that is right.

7 Thou lovest right, and hatest ill;
For God, thy God Most High,
Above thy fellows hath with oil
Of joy anointed thee.

8 Of aloes, myrrh, and cassia,
A small thy garments laid,
From palaces of ivory,
Whereby they made thee glad.

9 Among thy women dear to thee,
Kings' daughters were at hand;
Upon thy right hand did the queen
In gold of Ophir stand.

10 O daughter, hearken and regard,
And do thy ear incline;
Do not forget thy father's house,
And people that are thine.

11 And then the King, thy beauty shall Desire most fervently;
Because he is thy Lord, do thou
Him worship reverently.

12 The daughter there of Tyre shall be
With gifts and of thy gifts;
The rich among the people thou
Thy favor shall outtake.

13 Behold, the daughter of the King
All glorious is within;
And with a multitude of gold
Her garments wrought have been.

14 She shall be brought before the King
In robes with needle wrought;
Her follow-yngs following
Shall as to thee be brought.

15 With gladness and rejoicings great
Thou all of them wilt bring;
And they together enter shall
The palace of the King.

16 Instead of those thy fathers dear,
Thy children thou shalt take,
And in all places of the earth
Thou noble princes make.

17 Thy name remembered I will make Through ages all to be;
The people therefore evermore
Shall praises give to thee.

PSALM 45. 8. M.

1 My heart brings forth a goodly thing
I speak the things that I have made
Which is to the King being
2 My tongue shall be as quick,
As the pen of my scribe
That useth fast to write
3 More fair than sons of men
Grace in thy lips doth flow
And therefore blessings evermore
On thee doth God bestow
4 Thy sword gird on thy thigh,
Thou that art great in might;
Appear in dreadful majesty,
And in thy glory bright
5 For meekness, truth, and right,
Ride prosperously thy state;
And thy right hand shall teach to thee
Things terrible and great
6 Thy shafts shall pierce the hearts
Of those that hate the King;
And under thy ascension thou
The people down shalt bring
7 Thy royal seat, O Lord,
Forever shall remain;
The scepter of thy kingdom doth
All righteousness maintain
8 Thou lovest right, but ill
Dost hate, for on thy head
Above thy fellows hath thy God,
The oil of joy hath shed
9 Of myrrh, and spices sweet
From palaces of ivory,
Whereby they made thee glad
10 And in thy glorious train
Kings' daughters were to stand;
And thy fair queen in Ophir gold
Doth stand at thy right hand
11 O daughter, take good heed,
Incline, and give good ear;
Thou must forget thy kindred all,
And father's house most dear
12 Thou, beauty to the King
Shalt then be brought;
And do thou humbly worship him,
Because thy Lord he is 13 The daughter then of Tyre
There with a gift shall be,
And all the wealthy of the land
Shall make their suit to thee
14 The daughter of the King
All glorious is within;
And with a multitude of gold
Her garments wrought have been
15 She cometh to the King
In robes with needle wrought;
The virgin that do follow her
Shall unto thee be brought 16 With gladness and with joy
Thou all of them shalt bring;
And they together enter shall
The palace of the King
17 And in thy fathers' stead,
Thy children thou shalt take,
And in all places of the earth
Thou noble princes make 18 I will show forth thy name
To generations all;
The people therefore evermore
To thee give praises shall

3 A river in whose streams man's glad
The city of our God is built,
The holy place wherein the Lord
Must High hath his abode.

4 God in the midst of her doth dwell,
And nothing shall her move;
God also very early will
To her a helper prove.

5 The heathen raged in tumult great,
And moved the kingdoms were;
The Lord Must High sent forth his voice,
The earth did melt for fear.

6 Our God, who is the Lord of hosts,
Is ever on our part with take,
The God of Jacob evermore
Our refuge will abide.

7 Come, behold what wonders works
Have by the Lord been wrought;
Come, see 's last desolation
Upon the earth hath brought.

8 And to the end of all the earth
Will he the peace be turn;
The low he breaks, the spear he cuts,
In fire the chariot burns.

9 He still, and know that I am God;
Among the heathen I
Will be exalted; I in earth
Will be exalted high.

10 For the God, who is the Lord of hosts,
Is ever on our side;
The God of Jacob evermore
Our refuge will abide.

PSALM 46. I. M.
1 GOD will our strength and refuge
In all distresses present aid;
And though the troubling surer remove,
We will not fear of his abiding aid.

2 Though hills be cast amid the sea,
And angry billows 'round them break,
Though seas be raged and troubled be,
And mountains, with their swelling, shake.

3 A river flows, whose living streams
Make glad the city of our God,
The tents where heavenly glory beams,
Where God Must High hath his abode.

4 God has in her his dwelling made,
And she shall never move;
Her God shall early to her aid,
As he her help hath ever proved.

5 The kingdoms moved, the heathen raged,
He spake, earth melted at his word;
The Lord of hosts for us engaged,
Our refuge high is Jacob's Lord.

6 Come, see the works of God displayed,
The wonders of his mighty hand;
What deathless he hath made,
What ruins spread through all the land.

7 From earth the scourge of war he takes,
The deadly strife to peace he turns,
The spear he cuts, the bow he breaks,
And in the fire the chariot burns.

8 Be still; know I am God Must High,
O'er earth, o'er heathen I will reign,
The Lord of hosts to us is high,
Our shield shall Jacob's God remain.

PSALM 46. 6, 8, 9, 6, 9, 6, 8.
1 GOD is our strength and refuge high;
A sure and present help is he,
Whom dark and troublous days are nigh;
Hence free from fear our hearts shall be.
Though earthquakes move the world,
And hills' midst seas are hurled,
Though waters of the deep
In turmoil roar and leap,
And swelling shake the mountains steep.

2 A river flows, whose waters clear
The city of our God make glad,
The holy tabernacles, where
The Highest One his dwelling made.
In midst of her hath God
Established his abode;
So trouble can he rise,
For God her help will prove,
When morning light dawns from above.

3 The nations rage, the kingdoms shake,
His voice goes forth, earth melts away.
The Lord of hosts our part with take,
And Jacob's God is shield and stay.
Come, then, let all draw near,
And view with holy fear
The works surpassing thought
Jehovah's arm hath wrought;
What mine ho on earth hath brought.

4 To earth's remotest bounds he turns
Wars into peace; he breaks the bow;
He cuts the spear, the chariot burns;
That I am God, be still and stay;
Among the heathen I
Will be exalted high;
On earth supreme the Lord
Of hosts doth all afford,
And Jacob's God is shield and sword.

PSALM 47. C. M.
1 All people clap your hands for joy
To God in triumph shout;
For dwelleth the Lord Must High,
Greatest King the earth throughout.

2 The heathen people under us
He surely shall beading bring;
The nations he shall also make
Beneath our feet to bring.

3 And he for us a heritage
Will carefully select,
And give to us; the excellency
Of Jacob his elect.

4 God is with shing gone up, the Lord
With trumpet sounding high;
Sing praise to God, sing praise, sing praise,
Praise to our King sing ye.

5 For God is King of all the earth;
With knowledge praise express,
The rules the nations; God sits on
His throne of holiness.

6 The people's princes gathered are,
With Abraham's people meet,
Because earth's shields to God belong;
In glory he is great.

PSALM 47. 8. M.
1 All ye people clap your hands,
Let shouts of triumph ring,
For should all over all the lands
The Lord Must High is King.

2 He'll quell the people's rage,
And nations will destroy;
For we will choose our heritage,
His chosen Jacob's joy.

3 With shouts ascends our King,
With trumpet stirring loud;
Praise, praise ye that, his praises sing,
For God is Lord of all.

4 O sing in joyful strains,
In song his truth make known;
God over all the nations reigns,
High on his holy throne.

5 The holes of gentle thrones
With Abraham's children own;
The shields of earth Jehovah owns;
Exalted is his name.

PSALM 48. C. M.
1 THE Lord is great, and greatly he Should be exalted still,
Within the city of our God,
Upon his holy hill.

2 Mount Zion stands most beautiful,
The joy of all the land;
The city of the mighty King
On her north side doth stand.

3 The Lord within her palaces
Is for a refuge known;
For, lo, the kings that gathered were
Togeth'r, by her gone.

4 When they beheld it, all amazed,
They fled in great dismay;
And, being troubled at the sight,
They thence did haste away.

5 There seized with fear, they were as one
Whom travail-pains o'ercome;
Dost ships of Turkish break,
The city by the Lord of hosts
Established before.

7 We of thy loving-kindness thought,
Lord, in thy holy places,
O God, according to thy name
Through all the earth's thy praise.

8 Thy right hand's full of righteousness;
Make Judah's daughters glad;
Let Zion mount rejoice because
Thy judgments are displayed.

9 Encampment Zion, and go round,
Her lofty towers tell;
Consider ye her palaces,
And mark her bulwarks well;

10 That ye may tell posterity,
For the God doth abide;
O'er God forevermore; he will
Even unto death us guide.

PSALM 48. 8. M.
1 THE Lord our God is great,
And greatly to be praised,
Within his city where his throne
Is on Mount Zion raised.

2 The joy of all the earth,
The walls of Zion rise
Most beautiful, and on the north
The Great King's city lies.

3 God in her palaces
Is known a refuge high;
For, lo, assembled kings drew near,
But quickly hated by.

4 They saw, they were amazed,
And seized with sudden dread,
With anguish like unto travail-pains,
They turned their backs and fled.

5 By thee the Turkish ships
On stormy seas are tossed,
And broken by an Eastern wind
Are with their treasure lost.

6 Such things our eyes have seen,
As we sat here beholding;
In our God's city, which he will Establish evermore.

7 Within thy temple, Lord,
In that most holy place,
We on thy loving-kindness thought,
And wonders of thy grace.

8 According to thy name
Through all the earth thy praise;
And every work of thy right hand
Thy righteousness displays.

9 Let Zion now rejoice,
And Judah's daughters sing;
Let them with joyful voices proclaim
The judgments of thy King.

10 About Mount Zion walk,
Survey her walls with care,
And look upon her lofty towers;
See what their numbers are.

11 Observe her palaces,
And mark her ramparts well,
That so what ye have seen ye may
To future ages tell.

12 Because this God, our God,
Forever will abide;
And till his journey close in death
Will be our faithful guide.

PSALM 48. 11. M. (verses 9-14).
1 WITHIN thy temple, Lord,
We on thy mercies dwell,
As is thy name adored,
That thy praise excel;

2 Thy praise sound through every land,
And right thy scepter shall command.

3 Let Zion mount rejoice,
Let Judah's daughters praise
The Lord with cheerful voice;
For judgment he displays;
Go round the walls of Zion's Mount,
Go round her splendours to recount.

4 The towers of Zion tell,
Her palaces survey,
Mark all her bulwarks well,
And to your children say;
This God forever shall abide,
E'en unto death our God and life.

PSALM 49. C. M.
1 HEAR this, all people, and give ear,<
I'll all in the world that dwell;
Both low and high, both rich and poor;
My month shall wisdom tell.

2 My heart shall knowledge meditate;
I will incline my ear
To paradox, and on the harp
My sayings dark declare.

3 Amidst those days that evil are,
Why should I, fearing, doubt?
When enemies supplanting us
Shall compass us about.

4 Whose'er he be whose confidence
Upon their wealth is placed,
And who do boast themselves because
Their riches are increased:

5 Yet none of these his brother can Redeem by any way;
Nor can he give God him
Sufficient ransom pay.

6 (Their soul's redemption precious is,
And it can never be.)
That still he should forever live,
And not corruption see.

7 Because he sees that wise men die,
The fools, the brutish, see,
They all shall perish, and their wealth
Must then to others go.

8 Their inward thought is, that their house
And dwelling-places shall Continue evermore; their lands
By their own names they call.

9 But yet in honor shall not man
Abide continually,
But passing hence may therefore be
Compared to beasts that die.

10 Thus brutish folly plainly is
Their wisdom and their way;
Yet their posterity approve
What they do fondly say.

11 Like sheep they in the grave are laid,
And death shall them devour;
And in the morning upright men
Shall over them have power.

12 Their beauty from their dwelling shall Consumed within the grave;
But from hell's hand God will me free,
For he shall me receive.

13 Be not afraid when one advanced
In riches thou dost see;
For boasts of riches, cattle all
Increased exceedingly.

14 For he shall carry nothing hence
When death his days shall end;
Nor shall his glory after him
Into the grave descend.

15 For though his soul be bodily blest
While he on earth doth live;
(And when thou to thyself dost sell,
Man will thee praise give.)

16 He in his fathers' race shall go,
They never shall see light,
Man hoarsed wanting, 'twas he
Like beasts that perish go.

PSALM 49. 15.
1 HEAR this, all ye people, hear,
Both low and high estate,
Both rich and poor together meet,
My sayings dark declare.

2 For my mouth shall wisdom speak,
Knowledge in my heart I seek,
To be sure that I myself do not
In the deep make dark things clear.

3 Why should I to fear give way
When I see the evil day?
What joy wicked artful foes—
Vile supplanters round me close.

4 They that trust in treasure gold,
That they least of wealth might hold,
None can life his brother live,
None to find a ransom give.

5 Soul-redemption precious is,
And it can never cease,
And corruption never see.

6 For he sees that wise men die,
Brutish fools in death must lie;
Then their riches' hoarded heap,
Other hands in turn shall keep.

7 Secret hopes engage their heart,
That their house shall ne'er decay;
That their lovely dwelling-places
Shall remain from race to race.

8 To their lands they give their name,
In the hope of lasting time;
But man's pomp shall not abide,
He shall die as beasts he died.

9 Folly thus marks out their way,
Yet their soul find what they say;
In the grave like sheep they're laid,
Death shall there upon them feed.

10 O'er them a stone shall rule the just,
And their strength shall turn to dust;
But my soul shall that redemption
From the grave to dwell with him.

11 Fear not when one's wealth is great,
Whose his house gains high estate;
Death shall all his glory end,
Naught shall after him descend.

12 Though in life his soul be blest
As of all he wished, possessed
(And the world thy praise will tell,
When to self thou hast done well.)

13 With his fathers he shall live,
Whom no light shall shut his eye,
Man in honor when he's dead,
Like the beast both lives and dies.

PSALM 50. C. M.
1 THE mighty God Jehovah spake,
And called the earth upon,
Even from the rising of the sun
To where he gets down.

2 Where beauty in perfect shines,
And it can never be,
E'en Zion hill, from thence the Lord
In glory shone alone.

3 Our God shall come, no silence keep,
Jehovah shall speak high estate;
Before him fire shall waste, great storm
Shall consume him about.

4 He to the heavens from above,
And to the earth below
Shall call that he judgment may
Before his people show.

5 Now unto me let all my salutes
Together gathered be,
Those that by sacrifice have made
A covenant with me.

6 And then the heavens shall declare
His righteousness alone;
Because the Lord himself doth come
None else is judge but God.

7 Fear, O my people, and I'll speak;
O Israel by name,
Against thee I will testify;
For God, thy God, I am.

8 Because of sacrifices,
I require that these ye will,
Nor for burnt-offerings which have been Before me offered still.

9 I'll take no bullock nor he-goat
From house nor fold of thine,
For beasts of forests, cattle all
On thousand hills, are mine.

10 The ewls are all to me well known
That mountains high do yield;
I take claim as all my own
The wild beasts of the field.

11 If I was hungry, I would not
To thee be for my meat;
For earth, and all the fulness, doth
To me of right pertain.

12 That I to eat the flesh of bulls
Take pleasure dost thou think?
Or that, to quench me laid, I need
The blood of goats to drink!

13 Nay, rather unto my God,
Thanksgiving offer thou;
To him who is the Lord Most High,
Pay faithfully thy vow.

14 And when the day of trouble comes,
Then unto me shalt cry; I need
I will deliver thee, and thou
My name shalt glorify.

15 But to the wicked man God saith,
Why shouldst thou mention make
Of my commandments? Why dost thou in Thy mouth my cov'nant take!

16 Since thou instruction in thy way
Pererredly hated hast,
And since my words behind thy back
Thou with contempt dost cast.

17 When thou didst see a thief, with him
Thou didst consent and hide;
And with the vile adulterers
Partaker thou hast been.

18 Thy mouth to evil thou dost give,
Thy tongue doest doth frame,
Thou art as thy lover's evil,
Thy mother's son to shame.

19 These things thou wickedly hast done,
And I have silent been;
Thou thoughtest that I was like thyself,
And did approve thy sin.

20 But I will sharply thee reprove
For that thy evil say;
And all thy wicked deeds I will
Before thy face array.

21 Consider this, and be afraid,
Ye that forget the Lord,
Lest I in pieces tear you all,
When none can help afford.

22 He glorifies my name who brings
The sacrifice of praise;
I'll thine salvation show to him
Who orders right his ways.

PSALM 50. S. M.

1 THINE mighty God, the Lord,
Hath spoken unto all;
From rising to the setting sun,
He unto earth doth call.

2 From Zion, his own hill,
Where perfect beauty dwells,
Behold both his glory shown
In brightness that excels.

3 Our God shall surely come,
Keep silence shall not he;
Before him fire shall waste, great storms
Shall round about him be.

4 Then to the heavens high
He from above shall cry;
And likewise to the earth that he
May judge his people all.

5 To get thee let my saints
Be gathered unto me,
Those that by sacrifice have made
A covenant with me.

6 The heavens then shall show
His righteousness abroad;
Because the Lord himself is judge;
Yes, none is wiser but God.

7 O ye my people, hear,
I'll speak and testify
Against thee, O thou Israel,
For God, thy God am I.

8 For sacrifices I
No blame will on thee lay,
Nor for burnt-offerings which to me
Are offered every day.

9 I'll take no calf nor goats
From house or fold of thine;
For beasts of forest, and
On thousand hills, are mine.

10 The owls on mountains high
Are all to me well known;
Wild beasts which in the fields do lie,
Even they are all my own.

11 Then, if I hungry were,
I would not tell it unto all;
Because the world with fulness stored
Belongs alone to me.

12 Will I eat flesh of bulls?
Or goats' blood drink will I?
Thanksgiving offer thou, and pay
Thy vows to God Most High.

13 And call upon me when
In trouble thou shalt be;
I will deliver thee, and thou
My name shalt glorify.

14 But to the wicked man
God saith, My law and truth
Shouldst thou describe? Why dost thou take
My cov'nant to thy mouth!

18 Since good instruction thou
Pererredly hated hast,
And since my words behind thy back
Thou with contempt dost cast.

16 Thou gavest thy consent
When thou a thief hast seen;
And with the vile adulterers
Partaker thou hast been.

17 Thy mouth to ill is given,
Thy tongue doest doth frame;
Thou stut thy brother to revile,
Thy mother's son to shame.

18 Because I silence kept,
While thou these things hast wrought;
That I was wholly like thyself
Has been thy impious thought.

19 Yet I will thee reprove
For this thy evil way,
And all thy wicked deeds I will
Before thy face array.

20 Now ye that God forget,
Consider this with care,
Lest I, when there is none to save,
Do you in pieces tear.

21 He honors me who brings
The sacrifice of praise;
I'll thine salvation show to him
Who orders right his ways.

PSALM 51. S. M.

1 THY great loving-kindness, Lord,
Be merciful to me;
In thy compassions great blot out
All my iniquity.

2 O wash me thoroughly from sin;
From all my guilt me cleanse;
For my transgressions I confess;
I ever see my sin.

3 Against thee, thee only have I sinned,
Done evil in thy sight,
That when thou speakest thou mayst be
And in the judging right.

4 Behold, I lie in iniquity,
My being first received;
With a nature corrupt
My mother me conceived.

5 Behold, thou in the inward parts
With truth dost delight art;
And unshin thou shalt make me know
Within the hidden part.

6 Do thou with hyssop sprinkle me,
And clean I then shall be;
I shall be whiter than the snow
When I am washed by thee.

7 Of gladness and of joyfulness
Make me to hear the voice,
That as these very loud which thou
Hast broken may rejoice.

8 All my iniquities blot out,
My sin hide from thy view,
Create a clean heart, Lord, in me
A spirit right renew.

9 And from thy gracious presence, Lord,
O cast me not away;
Thy Holy Spirit utterly
Take not from me, I pray.

10 The joy which thy salvation brings
Again to me restore;
With thy free Spirit, O do thou
Uphold me evermore.

11 Then in thy ways will I instruct
Those that transgressed here,
And those that sinners are shall then
Return again to thee.

12 O God, of my salvation God,
Free me from guilt of blood;
Thou of thy righteousness, O Lord,
My tongue shall sing aloud.

13 Lord, open thou my lips again,
Long closed by sin and shame;
And then thy praises with my mouth
I'll open; proclaim.

14 No sacrifice dost thou desire,
Else would I give it thee;
Nor wilt thou with burnt-offering
As all delighted be.

15 A broken spirit is to God
A pleasing sacrifice;
A broken and a contrite heart,
Lord, thou wilt not despise.

16 Show kindness, and do good, O Lord,
To Zion, thy own hill;
The walls of thy Jerusalem
Build up of thy good will.

17 Then righteous offerings shall thee
Praise,
And offerings burnt-offering they,
With whole burnt-offerings, and with
Shall on thy altar lay.

PSALM 51. 7a.

1 LORD, to me compassion show,
As thy tender mercies flow;
In thy vast and boundless grace,
My transgressions all erase;
Wash me wholly from my sins,
Cleanse me from my guilty stains.

2 For my great transgression like
Ever present to my eyes;
I have sinned against thee alone,
In thy sight this evil done;
That thy judgment may be clear,
And thy speaking just appear.

3 Lo, conceived was I in sin,
Born unholy and unclean;
Yet thou dost desire to find
Truth sincere within the mind,
And thou wilt within my heart
Wisdom unto me impart.

4 Wash from every guilty stain,
Cleanse with hyssop, make me clean;
Then from all pollution free,
Whiter than the snow I'll be;
Let me hear joy's cheering tones,
Making glad these broken bones.

5 From my sin hide thou thy face,
Blot them out in thy rich grace;
From my heart, O God, from sin,
Spirit right renew within;
Lest me not away from thee,
Nor thy Spirit take from me.

6 Give salvation's joy again,
Let thy Spirit me sustain,
Then shall sinners, taught by me,
Learn thy ways and turn to thee,
Free me from the guilt of blood,
God, of my salvation God.

7 Freed from guilt, my tongue shall raise
Songs thy righteousness to praise;
Upon them my lips, O Lord,
Then my mouth shall praise accord;
Sacrifice thou wilt not take,
Else would I the offering make.

8 Sacrifice, or burnt-offering,
Can to thee no pleasure bring;
But a spirit prepared for sin,
A heart, broken heart within,
Thine accepted sacrifice,
Thou, O God, wilt not despise.

9 Zion favor in thy grace,
Yes, Jerusalem's ramparts raise;
Then shall sacrifice right,
While burnt-offerings thou delight;
So shall men, their vows to pay,
Victims on thine altar lay.

PSALM 52. S. M.

1 WHY dost thou boast, O mighty
Of mischief and of ill? (man,
The guardian of Almighty God,
Endurably ever still thou dost,
Thy tongue doth slander mischiefous
Devine most cunningly,
Like to a razor sharp to cut,
It works deceitfully.

2 I'll more than good, and more than truth
Thou lovest speaking wrong;
Thou lovest all-accusing words,
O thou deceitful tongue.

3 So God shall thee destroy for aye,
Remove thee, pluck thee out
Quite from thy house, and from the land
Of life he shall thee cast.

4 The righteous shall it see, and fear,
And laugh at him they shall;
Lo, this the man is that did not Make God his strength at all.

5 But he in his abundant wealth
His confidence did place;
He also to himself look, strength
From his own wickedness.

6 But I within the house of God
Am like an olive green;
My confidence forever hath Upon God's mercy been.

7 And I forever will thee praise,
Lo, therefore I am bold to say;
He taketh part with every one
That doth my soul uphold.

8 To all my watchful foes he will
Their evil deeds repay;
O, thy truth's sake cut them off,
And sweep them clean away.

9 A free-will offering I to thee
In sacrifice will bring;
Lent, of thy name, for it is good,
The praises I will sing.

10 Because he hath delivered me
From all adversity;
And his desire my eye hath seen
Upon my enemies.

11 My helper is the Lord,
And judge me by thy strength;
My prayer hear, and to my words,
O God, give ear at length.

12 For they that strangers are to me
Do up against me rise;
Oppressor seek my soul, and God
Set not before their eyes.

13 The mighty God my helper is,
Lo, therefore I am bold to say;
He taketh part with every one
That doth my soul uphold.

14 To all my watchful foes he will
Their evil deeds repay;
O, thy truth's sake cut them off,
And sweep them clean away.

15 A free-will offering I to thee
In sacrifice will bring;
Lent, of thy name, for it is good,
The praises I will sing.

16 Because he hath delivered me
From all adversity;
And his desire my eye hath seen
Upon my enemies.

17 My helper is the Lord,
And judge me by thy strength;
My prayer hear, and to my words,
O God, give ear at length.

18 For they that strangers are to me
Do up against me rise;
Oppressor seek my soul,
They set not God before their eyes,
Nor own his just control.

19 My helper is the Lord,
With those who me defend;
With them shall my eyes reward,
On them destruction send.

7 Thy praise I ever will proclaim,
Because, O Lord, thou hast done this;
And I will wait upon thy name,
For good before thy minis it is.

PSALM 53. S. M.

1 THAT there is not a God, the fool
Doth in his heart conclude;
They are corrupt, their works are vile;
Not one of them doth good.

2 The Lord upon the sons of men
From heaven looked abroad,
To see if any one were wise,
And seeking after God.

3 They altogether filthy are,
They all are lack-wit gone;
And there is none that doeth good,
No, not so much as one.

4 These workers of iniquity,
Do they not know at all,
That their my people are as bread?
On God they do not call.

5 Yea, there they were afraid, and stood
With trembling, all dismayed;
Whereas there was no cause at all
Why they should be afraid.

6 For God his bones that he bestowed
Hath restored all abroad;
Thou hast confounded them, because
They are despised of God.

7 Let Israel's help from Zion come;
When back the Lord shall bring
His captives, Jacob shall rejoice,
And Israel shall sing.

PSALM 53. S. M.

1 THAT there is not a God,
Doth in his heart conclude;
Corrupt they are, their works are vile,
Not one of them doth good.

2 Upon the sons of men
God looked from heaven abroad,
To see if any understood,
Or if any sought for God.

3 Together all are vile,
And they are much dismayed,
Although there was no cause why they Should be at all afraid.

4 His bones who thee bestowed
God hath dispersed abroad;
Thou hast them put to shame, because
They were despised of God.

5 From Zion, Lord, give help,
And break thy majesty bring;
Then Jacob shall exult with joy,
And Israel shall sing.

PSALM 54. S. M.

1 SAVE me, O God, by thy great name,
And judge me by thy strength;
My prayer hear, and to my words,
O God, give ear at length.

2 For they that strangers are to me
Do up against me rise;
Oppressor seek my soul, and God
Set not before their eyes.

Lo, therefore I am bold to say;

From all adversity;

Upon my enemies.

7 My helper is the Lord,
And judge me by thy strength;

O God, give ear at length.

8 For they that strangers are to me
Do up against me rise;

They set not God before their eyes,
Nor own his just control.

9 My helper is the Lord,
With those who me defend;
With them shall my eyes reward,
On them destruction send.

PSALM 54. S. M.

1 SAVE by thy name, O Lord,
In power my judge appear;
My earnest prayer thou shalt regard,
And by thy voice give ear.

2 For foes against me rise,
Oppressor seek my soul,
They set not God before their eyes,
Nor own his just control.

3 My helper is the Lord,
With those who me defend;

Because from all my woes
The Lord hath set me free,
And he the ruin of my foes
Hath made my eyes to see.

PSALM LV. C. M.

O GOD, my prayer hear, nor hide
From my entreating voice;
Attend and hear, in my complaint
I mourn and make a noise.

For the voice of fear, for wicked men
In their oppression great;
Who on me rest iniquity,
And who in wrath me hate.

Sore pained within me is my heart,
Death's terrors seize my soul;
Great trembling, fearfulness, and dread
Like mine o'er me doth roll.

O that I, like a dove, had wings,
And I, then would I flee;
Far hence, that I might find a place
Where I at rest might be.

Lo, then far off I wander would,
And in the desert stay;
From stormy wind and tempest I
Would hate to fly away.

O Lord, on them destruction bring,
For their tongues divide;
For in the city violence
And strife I have espied.

They day and night upon the walls
Do go about in vain;
Iniquity and sorrow there
In midst of it are found.

Abundant wickedness there is Within her inward part;
And from her streets and thoroughfares
And guile doth depart.

He was no foe that me reproach'd,
For that endure I could;
No later banishing order me,
For hide from him I would.

O but thou, a man, my equal, guide,
Who my acquaintance wast;
We joined sweet converse, to God's house
In company we past.

Death shall them seize, and to the grave
Alone they shall go down;
For wickedness is in their homes,
Among them sits abode.

O but as for me, I'll call on God,
Jehovah shall me save,
He'll hear me when I cry aloud
At morning, noon, and eve.

The Lord delivered hath my soul,
That it in peace might be,
From battle that against me was;
For many were with me.

The Lord shall hear, and them afflict;
Of old he hath abas'd;
Because they never changes have,
They therefore shall be bas'd.

Destroyed, Jehovah, let them be;
Inside, consume their tongue;
For in the city, he, I see
Great strife and grievous wrong.

All day and night they go around
Upon her circling walls,
While sin and sorrow great are found
Within her peopled halls.

Yea, crime of violence and fraud
Within the city meet;
Deceit and guile there stalk abroad,
Nor leave the crowded street.

'Twas not a foe who did deride,
For that I could endure;
No later who than me in prison,
Kiss I would hideous.

O but thou it was, my friend and guide,
We walked to God's house side by side,
And banded counsel sweet.

Death shall them seize, and to the tomb
Alone they shall go down;
For wickedness is in their homes;
Among them sits abode.

O but as for me, I'll call on God;
The Lord will safely give;
He'll hear me when I cry aloud
At morning, noon, and eve.

He hath restored my soul to peace,
From trouble set me free,
And made the war against me cease,
For many were with me.

The everlasting God shall hear,
And bring upon them war,
They of Jehovah have no fear,
Since they will no change know.

Against the men that were his friends
And such as were restored,
He wickedly put forth his hands,
And broke his pledged word.

His lips more smooth than butter were,
But in his heart was war;
Mote soft that out of his mouth appear,
But like drawn swords they are.

Upon the Lord thy burden cast,
And he shall thee sustain;
For so will make the just stand fast,
Unmoved shall they remain.

O but, Lord, thou wilt in judgment sit,
And bring them down to woe;
And in thy deep and darksome pit
Of ruin lay them low.

The men of wicked, bloody ways,
And all the like here be,
Shall not live out one-half their days;
But I will trust in Thee.

The Lord delivered hath my soul,
That it in peace might be,
From battle that against me was;
For many were with me.

My prayer shall ascend to him
Who is the Lord Most High;
To that performing all for me
I lift my earnest cry.

From heaven he shall send, and me
From his reproach defend;
Who would deliver me, God his truth
And merry forth shall send.

My soul among Sarcas thorns is,
I advertise live among Men's sons, whose teeth are spears and darts,
A sharpened sword their tongue.

O but thou exalted very high
Above the heavens, O God;
And let thy glory be advanced
O'er all the earth abroad.

My soul's bowed down; for they a net
Have laid, my steps to snare;
But in the pit which they have made
For me, they taken are.

My heart, O God, is fixed, is fixed;
To thee 'till sin and pride;
Among thy glory, love, and help;
Myself I'll early raise.

I'll praise thee with the people, Lord,
With nations sing will I;
For great to heaven thy mercy is,
Thy truth is to the sky.

Above the heavens high, O God,
By them exalted be;
And let thy glory be advanced
Above both land and sea.

CONGREGATION, IS IT SO
That ye speak righteousness?
O ye that are the sons of men,
Judge ye with uprightness!

Yea, even in your very hearts
Ye wickedness have done;
And of your hands the violence
Ye weigh the earth upon.

The wicked even from their birth
Extranged are from the way;
And speaking lies as men as born,
They wander far astray.

And as a serpent's poison too
Their poison doth appear;
Like they are like the adder deaf,
Which closely stops her ear.

That so she may not hear the voice
Of one that charm her would,
No, not though he must running were,
And charms most wisely could.

Their teeth, O God, within their mouth,
Break thou in pieces small;
The great teeth like those out, O Lord,
Of those young lions all.

Let them like waters melt away,
Which downward ever flow;
He screws all in pieces cut
When he shall bend his bow.

Behold, they beth out with their mouth,
And in their lips are swords;
For thou with confidence they say,
Who now doth hear our words?

O but thou, O Lord, will laugh at them;
And all the hostles mock;
While he's in power I'll wait on thee;
For God is my high rock.

The God of all my mercies will
With speed give help to me;
He my desire upon my knee
Will raise my eye to see.

O Lord our shield, destroy them not,
My people wouldst thou save;
But scatter them, and humble them
Beneath thy power great.

For their mouth's sin, and by the which
From their lips doth fly,
Let them be taken in their pride,
Because they curse and lie.

In wrath consume them, them consume,
That so they may not be;
And that in Jacob thou their rule
To earth's ends let them see.

Let them at evening time return,
And make a howling sound;
Even like a dog, and often walk
About the city round.

And let them wander up and down
In seeking food to eat;
And let them grovel when they shall not
Be satisfied with meat.

But of thy power I'll sing; at morn
About thy mercy praise;
For thou a tower and refuge wast
To me in troublous days.

O God, thou art my strength, and I
Will praise thee as of old;
For God is my defence, a God
Of mercy unto me.

LORD, thou hast rejected us,
And scattered us abroad;
With us thou hast offended been,
Returns to us, O God.

The earth to tremble thou hast made,
In it didst breaches make;
Do thou thereof the breaches heal,
Because the land doth shake.

To thy own people thou hast things
Lest shown, and on them sent;
And thou hast caused us drink the wine
Of men's abominations.

And yet a banner thou hast given
To those who thee do fear;
That for the sake of truth by them
Displayed it may appear.

That thy beloved people, Lord,
May all delivered be,
Because the power of thy right hand,
And answer give to me.

PSALM LV. C. M.

BE merciful to me, O God,
For man would me abhor;
He fights against me every day,
Oppressing by his power.

My watchful soul in twilight me
Are seeking day and night;
For they are many, O Most High,
That do against me fight.

When I'm afraid I'll trust in thee;
In God I'll praise his work;
I will not fear what flesh can do,
My trust is in the Lord.

Each day they wrest my works; their thoughts
Are all conceived in hate,
They mock, they lurk, they mark my steps,
While for my soul they wait.

But shall they by iniquity
Escape thy judgments just?
O God, in indignation thou
Do thou the people thrust.

Thou countest all my wanderings,
Not one doest overlook;
Within thy bottle put my ears;
Are they not in the book?

My foes shall, when I cry, turn back;
I know that is for me.
In God his word I'll praise; his word
Praised in the Lord shall be.

I will not fear what man can do;
For on God rely.
Thy vows upon me are, O God;
To thee give praise will I.

From death thou hast me saved; my feet
Do thou from falls keep free;
So in the light of those who live
I'll walk, O Lord, with thee.

PSALM LV. C. M.

MY God, deliver me from those
That are my enemies;
And do thou me defend from those
That up against me rise.

Do thou deliver me from them
That work iniquity;
And keep me safely from the men
Of bloody cruelty.

For, lo, they for my soul lay wait;
The mighty do combine
Against me, Lord, not for my fault,
Nor any sin of mine.

They run, and, without wrong in me,
Themselves they ready make;
Alike to meet me with thy help,
And do thou notice take.

Thou therefore, Lord, the God of hosts,
The God of Israel!
Awake to visit heathen all,
Nor spare those who be pagan.

They at the evening time return,
They make a howling sound;
Even like a dog, and often walk
About the city round.

And let them wander up and down
In seeking food to eat;
And let them grovel when they shall not
Be satisfied with meat.

That thy beloved land
From trouble may be free,
Deliver them with thy right hand;
And bear my earnest plea.

PSALM LV. C. M.

LORD, thou hast rejected us,
And scattered us abroad;
With us thou hast offended been,
Returns to us, O God.

The earth to tremble thou hast made,
In it didst breaches make;
Do thou thereof the breaches heal,
Because the land doth shake.

To thy own people thou hast things

And thou hast caused us drink the wine
Of men's abominations.

And yet a banner thou hast given
To those who thee do fear;
That for the sake of truth by them
Displayed it may appear.

That thy beloved people, Lord,
May all delivered be,
Because the power of thy right hand,
And answer give to me.

God in his holiness did speak,
In this rejoice I will;
In whom I'll divide, and I
Believe in Sarcas's rail.

I'll claim claim as mine by right;
Jehovah mine shall be;
By my hand Ephraim's strength;
Judah gives laws for me.

In Moab I will wait; my shoe
I will to Edom throw;
And o'er the land of Palestine
I will in triumph go.

O who is he will bring me to
The city fortified;
And who is he that to the land
Of Edom will me guide?

O God, who hast rejected us,
This thing will thou not do;
Even thou, O God, thou wilt not
Forth with our trouble go.

PSALM LV. C. M.

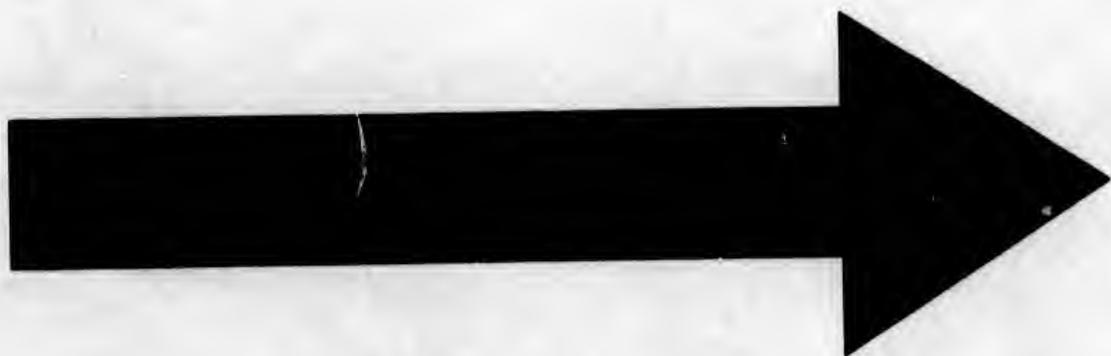

HELP me from trouble; for the help
Of men is vain;
Through God we'll do great acts; he will
Tread down our enemies.

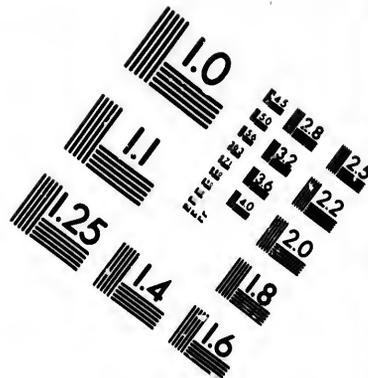

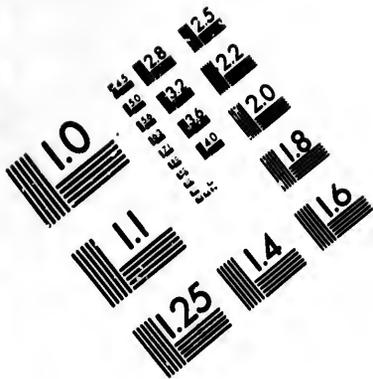

LORD, thou hast cast off,
And scattered us abroad;
Thou wast displeas'd with us, but now
Returns again, O God.

The earth thou mad'st to shake,
In it didst breaches make;
Thou breaches in thy mercy heal,
Because the land doth shake.

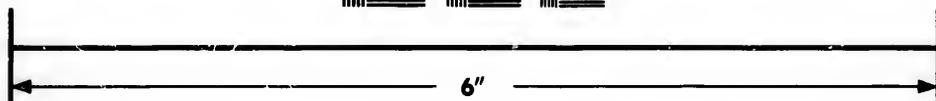

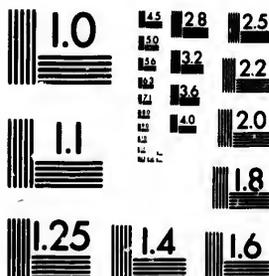

Thou didst hard things to us
Thy crying people show;
And thou art set for us a cup
Of bitterness and woe.

And let them wander up and down
In seeking food to eat;
And let them grovel when they shall not
Be satisfied with meat.

6 In holiness God speaks,
In this rejoice I will;
The land of blackness will divide,
And measure Succoth's vale.

7 To me Manasse's land,
And Gilad belong;
Judah gives laws for me, my head
Shall Ephraim make strong.

8 In Manah I will wash,
My shoe o'er Edom throw;
Thou Palestine because of me
Shalt forth in triumph go.

9 Unto the city strong,
O who will be my guide?
And who will lead me to the land
Where Edom's leads abide?

10 O God, wilt thou not guide?
Thou who dost stand afar,
Beholding with our lust to go
When marching forth to war?

11 From trouble give us help,
For vain is human aid;
Through God we shall do valiant deeds;
He on our foes shall tread.

PSALM 61. C. M.

1 O G. D., give ear unto my cry,
And to my prayer attend,
From th' utmost corner of the land
My cry to thee I'll send.

2 And when my heart is overwhelmed,
And in perplexity,
Do thou me lead unto the rock
That higher is than I.

3 For thou hast for my refuge been
A shelter by thy power;
And for defence against my foes
Thou hast been my strong tower.

4 Within thy tabernacle I
Forever will abide;
And under covert of thy wings
With confidence will abide.

5 For thou the vows that I did make,
O Lord, my God, dost heed;
The heritage hast given me
Of those thy name that fear.

6 A life prolonged for many days
Thou to the king wilt give;
Like many generations are
The years which he shall live.

7 And in God's presence his abode
He evermore shall have;
Thy mercy and thy truth prepare
That may his soul surely save.

8 And so will I evermore
Sing praises to thy name;
That having made my vows, I may
Each day perform the same.

PSALM 61. C. P. M.

1 LORD, hear my voice, my prayer
attend,
From earth's remotest bound I send
My supplicating cry.
When troubles great overwhelm my breast,
Then lead me on the rock to rest
That higher is than I.

2 In thee my soul hath shelter found,
And thou hast been from foes around
The tower of my defence;
My house shall thy pavilion be,
To covert of thy wings I'll see,
And find deliverance.

3 For thou, O Lord, my vows hast heard,
On me their heritage conferred,
That fear thy holy name,
Long life thou to the king wilt give,
Through generations he shall live,
From age to age the same.

4 Before the Lord shall he abide;
O, do thou truth and grace provide
To guard him in the way.
So thy praises still make known,
And hourly bend him to thy throne,
My vows will daily pay.

PSALM 62. C. M.

1 MY soul with expectation doth
Depend on God indeed;
My strength and my salvation do
From him alone proceed.

2 He only my salvation is,
And my strong tower;
He only is my sure defence,
Much moved I shall not be.

3 How long will ye against a man
Considering seek his fall?
Ye all shall die, ye shall be like
A tottering fence or wall.

4 To bring his glory down they plot;
In lies is their device;
And whilst they bless him with their
They curse with inward spite. [mouth,

5 Yet, O my soul, upon the Lord
Still patiently attend;
My expectation and my hope
On him alone depend.

6 He only my salvation is,
And my strong rock is he;
He only is my sure defender,
And moved I shall not be.

7 In God alone my glory is,
And my salvation sure;
My rock of strength is in the Lord,
My refuge and secure.

8 O on him, ye people, evermore
With confidence rely;
Before him pour ye out your heart;
God is our refuge high.

9 Mean men are surely vainly,
And great men are a lie;
In luxury altogether they
Are less than vanity.

10 Then do not in oppression trust,
In robbery be not vain;
And when your riches are increased
Set not your hearts on gain.

11 The Lord hath spoken once to me,
Yes, this I heard again;
That power to Almighty God
Alone doth appertain.

12 Yes, mercy also unto thee
Belongs, O Lord, al me;
For thou according to his work
Reward at every one.

PSALM 63. C. M.

1 LORD, thou my God, I'll early seek;
My soul doth thirst for thee;
My flesh longs in a dry parched land,
Wherein no waters be.

2 That if thy power may behold,
And brightness of thy face,
As I have seen thee heretofore
Within thy holy place.

3 Since better is thy love than life,
O my lips the praise shall give;
I in thy name will lift my hands,
And bless thee while I live.

4 As when with fatness well supplied
My soul enriched shall be;
Then shall my mouth with joyful lips
Sing praises unto thee.

5 When I do thee upon my bed
Remember with delight,
And when on thee I meditate
In watches of the night.

6 In shadow of thy wings I'll joy;
For thou my help hast been;
To thee my soul clings fast, and so
Thy right hand dost sustain.

7 To lowest depths of earth shall go
They who my soul would slay;
They shall perish by the sword,
To foxes be a prey.

8 Yet shall the king in God rejoice,
And each one glory shall
That avails by him; but stopped shall be
The mouth of liars all.

PSALM 63. C. P. M.

1 THOU art my God, O God Most High,
I. And early seek thy face will I;
My soul doth thirst for thee.
My spirit thirsts to taste thy grace,
My flesh longs in a barren place
In which no waters be.

2 I long as in the time of old
Thy power and glory to behold
Within thy holy place;
Because to me thy wondrous love
Thou life itself doth dearer prove,
My lips shall praise thy grace.

3 Thus will I bless thee while I live,
And with uplifted hands will give
Praise to thy holy name.
As when with fatness well supplied,
So shall my soul be satisfied,
My mouth shall praise proclaim:

4 My lips shall in thy praise delight
When on my bed I rest at night,
And meditate on thee.
Because thy hand assistance brings,
Beneath the shadow of thy wing
My heart shall joyful be.

5 My soul, O Lord, cleaves fast to thee,
And thy right hand upholdeth me;
If doth my life defend;
But those who seek me for a prey,
But me for our transgressions,
Shall into earth descend.

6 They by the sword shall fall and die,
They flesh a prey for pestilence.
In God the king shall joy;
Who swears by him shall still rejoice,
But mouths which speak with lying voices
He'll silence and destroy.

PSALM 64. C. M.

1 WHEN I to thee my prayer make,
Lord, to thy voice give ear;
My sin save from the enemy,
Of whom I stand in fear.

2 Me from their secret counsel hide
Who do live wickedly;
From instruction of the men
Who work iniquity.

3 For they their tongues with malice whet,
They make them cut like swords;
In their bent bows are arrows set,
Even sharp as ever shall be.

4 That they may at the perfect man
In secret aim their shot;
Yea, suddenly they dare at him
To shoot, and fear it not.

6 In ill encourage they themselves;
In secret, enares they lay,
They conference together how
Who shall them see? they say.

6 They have sought out iniquities,
A perfect search they keep;
Of each of them the inward thought,
And very heart is deep.

7 God shall an arrow shoot at them,
And wound them suddenly;
Their own false tongue shall them con-
All seeing them shall see. [found;

8 All men shall fear, and that this is God's work they shall declare;
They shall observe and understand
What these his doings are.

9 The righteous shall on God rely,
In him shall they delight.
In him shall glory every one
Who is in heart upright.

PSALM 65. C. M.

1 PRAISE waits for thee in Zion, Lord,
To thee vows paid shall be.
O thou that hearest our prayer,
All flesh shall come to thee.

2 Iniquities, I must confess,
Prevail against me do;
But as for our transgressions all,
Them purge away shalt thou.

3 The man is blest whom thou dost choose,
And make approach to thee,
That he within thy courts, O Lord,
May still a dweller be.

4 We surely shall be satisfied
With thy abundant grace,
And with the goodness of thy house,
Even thy holy place.

5 By fearful works and terrible
Thou in thy righteousness,
O God our Saviour, to our prayer
Thy answer dost express.

6 And so all ends of earth shall place
Their confidence in thee,
Even those who dwell in distant lands,
And far off on the sea.

7 He, being girt with power, sets fast
By his great strength in the hills,
The roar of seas, the noise of waves,
And people's tumult still.

8 They in the utmost parts that dwell
Are at thy signs afraid;
The goings out of morn and eve
By thee are joyful made.

9 Thou earth dost visit, watering it;
Thou mak'st it rich to grow
With God's full fall; thou givest corn,
For thou provid'st it so.

10 Her ridges thou dost water well,
Her furrows down are pressed;
Thou dost with showers soften her,
Her spring by thee is blest.

11 So thou the year most liberally
Dost with thy goodness crown;
And all thy paths abundantly
On us drop fatness down.

12 They drop upon the pastures wide,
That in the deserts lie;
The little hills on every side
Rejoice bright pleasantly.

13 With flocks the pastures covered are,
The vales with corn are clad;
And now they shout and sing to thee,
For thou hast made them glad.

PSALM 65. 7s and 6s.

1 PRAISE waits for thee in Zion,
To thee vows paid shall be;
O thou of prayer the hearer,
All flesh shall come to thee.

2 Iniquities against me
Prevail from day to day;
But as for our transgressions,
Them shalt thou purge away.

3 Blest he whom thou hast chosen,
And unto thee brought nigh;
Who hath for habitation
The courts of God Most High.

4 We shall in rich abundance
Be satisfied with grace,
And filled with all the goodness
Of thy most holy place.

5 O God of our salvation,
We plead with thee in prayer;
Thy righteousness makes answer
By things which fearful are.

6 Of earth the ends remotest,
And those afar at sea,
These all, O Lord, praise thee
Their confidence in thee.

7 His strength sets fast the mountains,
His girt about with power,
He calms the angry people,
Even sharp as ever shall be.

8 Thy dreadful signs and wonders
Make distant lands afraid;
The morning and the evening
By thee are joyful made.

9 Thy visit brings the showers,
Thy floods enrich the field;
Thy blessing so provides it,
That earth our food shall yield.

10 Thou waterst her ridges,
Her furrows down are pressed;
With showers they are softened,
Her spring by thee is blest.

11 The year is crowned with goodness,
Thy paths drop fatness round;
The little hills and pastures
With joyfulness abound.

12 The fields with flocks are covered,
The vales with corn are clad;
They shout, yea, they are singing,
For thou hast made them glad.

PSALM 65. C. P. M.

1 PRAISE thee, Lord, a people waits,
To praise thy name in Zion's gates;
To thee shall vows be paid,
Thou hearer of the supplicant's prayer,
All flesh shall unto thee repair,
To seek thy gracious aid.

2 How great my transgressions appear!
But from all guilt thou wilt me clear,
And my transgressions hide,
How blest thy chosen, who by grace
Are brought within thy dwelling-place,
That they may there abide.

3 The goodness of thy house, O Lord,
The joys thy holy courts afford,
Our souls shall satisfy,
By fearful deeds, in justice wrought,
The Lord will grant us what we ought,
Our Saviour, God Most High.

4 On those sustaining arm depend,
To earth's and sea's remotest end,
All men, in every age,
Who girt with strength sets fast the hills,
Who roaring seas and billows stills,
Who calms 'em nations' rage.

5 The tribes of earth's remotest lands
Behold the tokens of thy hands,
And fear the earth throughout,
The east, where beams the morning light,
The west, in evening glories bright,
By thee in gladness shout.

6 Thy timely visits bless the earth,
To drenching rains thy clouds give birth,
Enriching all the land,
By God's own river, deep and broad,
Thou wilt prepare their corn, O God,
By thy providing hand.

7 Thou wilt its ridge and furrow plain
Make soft and smooth with showers of rain,
Its springing thou wilt bless,
The year thou hast with goodness crowned,
Thy paths drop fatness all around,
Ev'n on the wilderness.

8 The little hills with verdure clad,
Are girt with joy, by thee made glad;
The flocks in pastures live,
The vales are roiled with waving grain;
And shout and song from hill and plain,
Sweet joyous to the sky.

PSALM 66. C. M.

1 ALL lands to God, in joyful sounds,
Lift up your voices raise;
Sing forth the honor of his name,
And glorium make his praise.

2 Say ye to God, How terrible
In all thy works art thou!
Through thy great power thy foes to thee
Shall be constrained to bow.

3 And all the earth shall worship thee,
They shall thy praise proclaim
With cheerful heart, aloud they shall Sing to thy holy name.

4 O come, the works that God hath
With admiration see;
In working, to the sons of men
Most terrible is he.

5 He to dry land did turn the sea,
And they a passage had;
Thy strength through the flood did march
There was in him were glad.

6 He ruleth earth by his power;
His eyes the nations see;
Let not the proud rebellious ones
Lift up themselves on high.

7 O all ye people, bless our God,
Aloud proclaim his praise,
Who safely holds our souls in life,
Our feet from sliding steps.

8 For thou hast proved and tried us, Lord, As men do silver try; Hast brought us into nets, and made Bands on our reins to lie.

9 Thou'er our heads hast caused that thou Try'st us as children of asses; Through fire and flood thou to a place Of ph'ny didst us guide.

10 I'll bring burnt-off'rings to thy house; To thee my vows I'll pay, Which my lips utter, my mouth spoke, Whose truth is on me lay.

11 Burnt-sacrifices of fatness With incense I will bring; Of bullocks and of goats I will Present an offering.

12 All that fear God, come, hear, I'll tell What he did for my soul, I with my mouth cried unto him, My tongue did him extol.

13 If in my heart I ain regard, Jehovah will not hear; But surely God hath heard my voice, Attending to my prayer.

14 G let the Lord, our gracious God, Forever bless us, Who hath not turned my prayer from him, Nor yet his grace from me.

PSALM 67. C. M.

1 O LORD, to us be merciful, Be thou our Father's name, And graciously cause shine on us The brightness of thy face:

2 That so thy way upon the earth To all men may be known; And also to the nations all Thy saving health be shown.

3 Let all the people praise thee, Lord, Their voice in praise employ. O let the nations all be glad, And ever sing for joy.

4 For rightly thou shalt people judge, And nations rule as kings; O let the people praise thee, Lord, All nations praise with praise.

5 The earth her increase then shall God, our God, bless us shall, joyful; God will us bless; and of the earth The ends shall fear his all.

PSALM 67. S. M.

1 O LORD, bless, and pity us, Shine on us with thy face: That earth thy way, and nations all May know thy saving grace.

2 Let people praise thee, Lord, Let people all three praise; O let the nations all be glad, In songs their voices raise.

3 Thou't justly people judge; On earth rule thou as king; Let people praise thee, Lord; let them Praise thee, both great and small.

4 The earth her fruit shall yield; Our God shall blessing send; Our God will us bless; men shall him fear To earth's remotest end.

PSALM 67. 7s and 6s.

1 O GOD, to us show mercy, And bless us in thy grace, Cause thou to shine upon us The brightness of thy face.

2 That so throughout all nations Thy way may be well known, And unto every people Thy saving health be shown.

3 O God, let people praise thee, Let all the people praise thee; O let the nations joyful Their songs of gladness raise.

4 For thou shalt judge the people In truth and righteousness; And on the earth thou shalt rule, Shall thy just rule confound.

5 O God, let people praise thee; Thy praises let them sing; And then in rich abundance And then her fruit shall bring.

6 The earth our God shall bless us: God shall his blessing send; And people all shall fear him To earth's remotest end.

PSALM 68. C. M.

1 LET God arise, and scattered far Let all his enemies lie; And let all those who do him hate Before his presence flee.

2 As smoke is driv'n, so drive thou them; As fire melts wax away, Before God's face in wicked men So perial and decay.

3 But let the righteous all be glad; Rejoice before God's sight; Let them exult exceedingly, And joy with all their might.

4 Sing to God and praise his name; Extol him with thy voice, That ride on heav'n by his name JAH; Before his face rejoice.

5 Because the Lord a father is To children fatherless; He is the widow's judge, within His place of holiness.

6 God doth the solitary set In families; and from bands The chained he frees, but rebels dwell In dry and desert lands.

7 O God, when thou wast going forth Before thy people's face, And when thy glorious marching was Within the wilderness;

8 Then that God's presence shook the earth, Then drops from heaven fell; This Sinai shook before the Lord, The God of Israel.

9 O God, thou to thy heritage Didst send a plenteous rain, By which thou when it weary was, Didst it refresh again.

10 Thy congregation thou did make Their habitation there; Of thy own goodness for the poor, O God, thou didst prepare.

11 The Lord himself did give the word, The mighty word of God; Great was the company of them Who published it abroad.

12 Kings of great armies vanquished were, And women, who remained at home, Distracted the prey.

13 Though ye have lain among the pots, Like doves ye shall appear, And whose wings w'l't s'ilver, and with gold Whose feathers covered are.

14 When there th' Almighty scattered Like Salmon's snow 'twix white, (Kings, God's hill is like to Bashan hill, Like Bashan hill for height.)

15 Why do ye leap, ye mountains high? This is the hill of God; He here desires to dwell, and here Will ever make abode.

16 God's chariots twenty thousand are, Of angels thousands strong; As once on Sinai's holy mount, The Lord is them among.

17 Thou hast, O Lord, most gloriously Ascended up on high, And captive thou triumphantly Hast led captivity.

18 And gifts thou hast received for men, For such as did rebel; Yes, even for them, that God the Lord In midst of those might dwell.

19 Blessed be the Lord, who is to us Of our salvation God, Who daily with his benefits Us plenteously doth load.

20 He of salvation is the God, Who is our God most strong; And unto God the Lord from death The issue do belong.

21 But surely God shall wound the head Of those that are his foes; The hairy scalp of him that on In his transgression goes.

22 God said, My people I will bring Again from Bashan hill; Yea, from the sea's devouring depths Them bring again I will;

23 That in the blood of enemies Thy foot imbued may be, And of thy dogs dipped in the same The tongs thou shalt use.

24 O God, thy goings they have seen; The goings of my God, The stately steppings of my King In his divine abode.

25 Before went singers, next to them The players took the way; Among them also dancers were, Who did on timbrels play.

26 Within the congregations great Bless God with one accord, From Te'tel's fountain be bless, And praise the mighty Lord.

27 Their prince, young Benjamin, is there, And Judah's rulers high, The chiefs of Zebulun are there, And those of Naphtali.

28 Thy God commands thy strength; for Make strong thy work, O Lord, For thy house at Jerusalem Kings shall thee gifts afford.

29 The spearman's host, the multitude Of bulls which fiercely look, Those calves which people have sent forth, O Lord our God, rebuke.

30 Till every one submit himself, And alliver pieces bring; The people that delight in war Disperse, O God and King.

31 They who are princes great shall then Come out of Egypt lands; And Ethiopia to God Shall soon stretch out her hands.

32 O all ye kingdoms of the earth, Sing praise to this King, To him who is the Lord of all, O do ye praise him.

33 To him that rides on heav'n's of heav'n's, Which he of old did found; Lo, he sends out his voice, a voice In might that doth abound.

34 All strength to God do ye ascribe; His glorious majesty, In over Israel, and his strength Is in the clouds most high.

35 How dreadful from thy temple, Lord! Is thy own God to be, Who gives his people strength and power; O let God blessed be.

PSALM 68. 7s and 6s.

1 LET God arise; and scattered Let all his enemies lie; And let all those who hate him Before his presence flee.

2 Drive them as smoke driven, As wax melts in the fire, Before God's face let sinners So perial in their ire.

3 But let the just be joyful; Let them with one accord Exult with joy and gladness In presence of the Lord.

4 To God's name sing, sing praises, Extol him with your voice; Who rides as JAH on heav'n's; Before his face rejoice.

5 The Lord our God a father To children fatherless, The widow's just avenger, Within his holy place.

6 The Lord doth set in families The lonely, and from bands Drings forth the chained, but rebels Luhabit parched lands.

7 O God, when thou wast going Before thy people's face, And when thy glorious marching Was through the wilderness;

8 Earth trembled at thy presence, And Sinai shook before thee, Thou God of Israel.

9 O God, thou to thy people Didst send a plenteous rain; Thy heritage, when weary, Thou didst refresh again.

10 And then thy congregations Did make their dwelling there, O God, thou of thy goodness For the poor ones didst prepare.

11 The Lord the word delivered, And many heard the voice; Of those great was the number Who did the word proclaim.

12 Kings at the head of armies Were forced to flee away; And slain at home who were tried Distracted the prey.

13 Though ye midst pots were lying, Like doves ye shall appear, Whose wings are clothed with silver, Whose feathers golden are.

14 When kings th' Almighty scattered, Like Salmon's snow 'twix white; God's hill is high like Bashan, Like Bashan hill for height.

15 Why leap, ye lofty mountains? This hill the Lord loves well; It is his habitation, Yea, here he'll ever dwell.

16 God's chariots and angels By thousands wait his will; He's with them in his temple As once on Sinai's hill.

17 Thou hast, O Lord, with glory Ascended up again, And captive led captivity Triumphant in thy train.

18 To thee have gifts been granted For men who did rebel, That so the Lord Jehovah In midst of them might dwell.

19 Blessed be the Lord Jehovah, Of our salvation God, Who us with blessings daily Abundantly doth load.

20 He is the Lord, the Saviour, Who is our God most high; And with the Lord Jehovah From death the issue lie.

21 The Lord will break in pieces The heads of all his foes, His hairy crown who ever On in his transgression goes.

22 God said, I'll bring my people Again from Bashan hill; And from the deep sea's billows Them bring again I will.

23 That in the blood of enemies Thy foot imbued may be, And of thy dogs dipped in it The tongues thou mayest see.

24 O God, they've seen thy going Of majesty and grace; With thy King, thy goings Widely thy holy voice.

25 Before went singers, next them The players took their way; Amongst them were the dancers That did on timbrels play.

26 Within the congregations Bless God with one accord; Bless ye from Te'tel's fountain, And praise the mighty Lord.

27 There Judah's chiefs in council, With little Benjamin Their prince; and chiefs of Zebulun And Naphtali are seen.

28 Thy God thy strength commandeth, With calves sent by the people; For thy house at Jerusalem Kings shall thee gifts afford.

29 The spearman's host, great numbers Of bulls, which fiercely look, Those calves which people have sent forth, O Lord our God, rebuke.

30 Till all shall yield submission, And alliver pieces bring; Those who in war take pleasure, Disperse, O God and King.

31 Then princes great and mighty Shall come from Egypt lands; To God in supplicants Shall Cush stretch forth his hands.

32 Through all the earth, ye kingdoms, Sing unto God the King; Sing praises to Jehovah, His praise, O do ye sing.

33 He rides on heaven of heavens, Which he of old did found; Lo, when his voice is uttered His words in might abound.

34 Strength unto God attribute, His glorious majesty, Over Israel, his power, Is in the heavens high.

35 Thou, from thy house art dreadful; Jehovah's own God is he, Who gives strength to his people. O let God blessed be.

PSALM 68. C. M.

1 O GOD, preserve me, for the floods Do so encompass me, That even to my soul they Shall come as death to me.

2 I downward in deep mire do sink, And into waters deep have come, Where floods have o'er me gone.

3 I weary with my crying, ah, My throat is also dried; My sight decays, my feet for me I waiting do abide.

4 The men who do without a cause Bear hatred unto me, E'en than the hate upon my head In number more they be.

5 They who are wrongful enemies, And seek my soul to slay, Are great in might; thou, I restored Wast I took not away.

6 O God, my folly and my sins Are not concealed from thee, Let none that wait on thee be ashamed, Lord God of hosts, for me.

7 O Lord, the God of Israel, Let none who seek thy face Be ever made to suffer shame Because of my disgrace.

8 For I have borne reproach for thee, My face is hid with shame, To brethren strange, to mother's sons An alien I became.

9 Because the soul did eat me up Which to thy house I bear; And the reproach cast at thee Upon me fallen are.

10 I wept and fasted in my soul, And that was to my shame; When I with sackcloth clothed myself, O how-word I became.

11 The men who all within the gate Against me evil speak; They also that vile drunkards were, Of me their song did make.

12 But in a time accepted, Lord, My prayer is to thee; In thy salvation's truth, O Lord, In mercy great hear me.

13 Deliver me out of the mire,
And me from sinking deep;
Free me from those that hate me hate,
And from the waters deep.

14 Let not the flood on me prevail,
Whose water overflows;
Nor deep as a swallow, nor the pit
Her mouth upon me close.

15 Thy loving-kindness, Lord, is good,
My prayer therefore hear;
Turn thou to me, for mine is great
Thy tender mercies are.

16 Nor from thy servant hide thy face;
I'm troubled, soon attend,
Draw near my soul, and it redeem;
Me from my foes defend.

17 To thee is my reproach well known,
My shame and my disgrace;
Those that to me are enemies
Are all before thy face.

18 My heart is broken by reproach,
My soul is full of grief;
I looked in vain for those who would Give pity and relief to me.

19 They also bitter salt did give
To me instead of meat;
They gave me vinegar to drink,
What time my thirst was great.

20 Before them let their table prove
A snare; and do thou make
Their welfare and prosperity
A trap themselves to take.

21 Let thou their eyes so darkened be,
That sight may them forsake;
And let their loins be made by thee
Continually to shake.

22 Upon them, Lord, thy fury pour,
Their noise in anger great;
And in their teeth let not the dwell,
Their homes be desolate.

23 For they have persecuted him,
Whom thou didst smite before;
And to the grief of those they talk
Whom thou hast woe and sore.

24 Add thou iniquity to all
Their former sins and crimes;
And do not 't them come at all
Into thy righteousness.

25 And from the book of life let them
Be blotted out by thee;
Among the just and righteous ones
Their names not written be.

26 But now become exceeding poor,
And sorrowful am I;
By thy salvation, O my God,
Let me be set on high.

27 The name of God I with a song
Most cheerfully will praise;
And I, in giving thanks to him,
His name will highly raise.

28 And to the Lord an offering
More pleasing thine shall prove
Than sacrifice of any beast
That hath both horns and hoofs.

29 When this the humble men shall see,
It joy to them shall give;
O all ye that do seek the Lord,
Your hearts shall ever live.

30 For God the poor hears, and will not
His prisoners contemn,
Let heaven, and earth, and seas him praise;
And all that move in them.

31 For God will Judah's cities build,
And Zion he will save,
That they may dwell therein, and it
In sure possession have.

32 And they that see his servants' seed
Inherit shall his name;
So they shall have their dwelling there
Who love his blessed name.

PSALM 29. S. M.

1 SAVVE me, O God; the floods
So violent have been,
That even to my very soul
The waters have come in.

2 I'm sinking in deep mire,
Where standing there is none;
I ino waters deep have come,
Where floods have o'er me gone.

3 I'm weary with my cries,
My throat is also dried;
My eyes have failed while for my God
In waiting I abide.

4 Those who without a cause
Against me hate and rage,
Ev'n than the hairs upon my head
They more in number are.

5 Those who would me destroy,
My en'miss wrongfully
Are mighty; these that I took not Restore again did I.

6 My sin and sinners, Lord,
Are not concealed from thee;
Let none who wait on thee be ashamed,
Lord God of hosts, for me.

7 O God of Israel,
For me let no disgrace,
Or shame be brought on any one
Who truly seeks thy face.

8 Because for thee reproached,
My face is hid with shame;
To lrethren strange, to mother's sons
An alien I became.

9 The seal hath me consumed
Which to thy house I bear;
And these reproaches cast on thee
Upon me fallen are.

10 My tears and my sad fates
Were counted as my shame;
When sackcloth I put on, to them
A proverb I became.

11 Those sitting in the gate
Against me evil speak,
And drunkards also in their cups
Of me their song did make.

12 But in th' accepted time,
Lord, I will pray to thee;
In truth of thy salvation, Lord,
And mercy great, hear me.

13 O take me from the mire,
And me from sinking deep;
From those who hate me save thou me,
And from the waters deep.

14 Let not the flood prevail,
Whose water overflows,
Nor deep me swallow, nor the pit
Her mouth upon me close.

15 Lord, hear me, for thy love
And kindness is most good;
O turn, and manifest to me
Thy mercies' multitude.

16 Hide not thy face from me,
For I'm troubled, soon attend,
Draw near, thy servant's soul redeem,
Me from my foes defend.

17 Thou my reproach dost know,
My shame and my disgrace;
Those that are enemies to me
Are all before thy face.

18 Reproach hath broke my heart;
I'm full of grief, for on me;
To pity me I looked in vain,
All comforters were gone.

19 They also gave me gall,
They gave it for my meat;
They gave me vinegar to drink,
What time my thirst was great.

20 For recompense to thee
I smote their table with woe;
Their welfare and prosperity
A trap themselves to take.

21 So darkened be their eyes,
That they no light may see,
And let their loins by thee be made
To shake continually.

22 Fierce wrath pour forth, let it
Fast hold upon them take;
And let their tents be desolate;
None there his dwelling make.

23 For him they persecute,
Whom thou didst smite before;
And to the grief of those they talk
Whom thou hast wounded sore.

24 Add thou iniquity
To their past wickedness,
And never let them come at all
Into thy righteousness.

25 And from the book of life
Their names let be erased;
And in the record of the just Let not their names be placed.

26 But now exceeding poor,
And sorrowful am I;
By thy salvation, O my God,
Let me be set on high.

27 I, with a song to God,
His praises will proclaim,
And I, in giving thanks to him,
Will magnify his name.

28 To God this sacrifice
Shall be more pleasing far
Than ox or bullock, bounds on which Both horns and hoofs there are.

29 When this the humble see
It joy to them shall give;
All ye who truly seek the Lord,
He'll make your hearts to live.

30 God hears the poor, nor will
His prisoners contemn;
Let heaven and earth and seas him praise,
And all that move in them.

31 He'll Judah's cities build,
And Zion he will save,
That they may dwell therein, and it
A sure possession have.

32 His servants' children, to Inherit shall the same;
And those shall have their dwelling there
Who love his blessed name.

PSALM 70. C. M.

1 MAKE haste, O God, to preserve;
With speed, Lord, help thou me;
And let all those who seek my soul
Shamed and confounded be.

2 Turned back be they, and put to shame,
That in my lust did shame;
Turned back be they, let that say,
Their shaming to requite.

3 Let all who seek thy face be glad,
And ever joyful be;
Let them who thy salvation love
Say still, The Lord praise ye.

4 But I both poor and needy am;
Come, Lord, and make no stay;
My help thou, and deliver art;
O Lord, make no delay.

PSALM 70. S. M.

1 LORD, haste me to save;
With speed, O Lord, help me;
And I, who seek thy face, my soul
Will shame confounded be.

2 Turned back be they, and shamed,
That in my hurt delight,
Turned back be they, let that say,
Their shaming to requite.

3 In thee let all be glad,
And joy that seek for thee;
Let them who thy salvation love
Say still, The Lord praise ye.

4 I poor and needy am;
Come, Lord, and make no stay;
My help thou and deliver art;
O Lord, make no delay.

PSALM 70. 11s and 8s.

1 MAKE haste, O my God, to deliver,
O Lord, to my succor make haste;
Thy people be confounded who seek me to
And in their own folly disgraced. (8s.)

2 Let them be turned back in confusion,
O Lord,
Who wish my destruction to see;
Yet shame and disdain be their reward,
Who laugh in derision at me.

3 Let all them that seek thee be glad and rejoice,
And who thy salvation would see;
In anthems of praise let them lift up
the voice,
And constantly magnify thee.

4 But I, poor and needy, still trust in thy word,
Make haste to the rescue, I pray;
My helper thou art, and my Saviour, O
No longer thy coming delay. (8s.)

PSALM 71. C. M.

1 O LORD, my hope and confidence:
Let me stand alone in thee;
Then let me evermore be kept
From all confusion free.

2 And let me, in thy righteousness,
From then deliverance have;
O rescue me, incline thy ear
To hear me, and me save.

3 Be thou my dwelling rock, to which
I ever may resort;
Thou my salvation hast obtained;
Thou art my rock and fort.

4 Free me, my God, from wicked hands,
Hands cruel and unjust;
For thou, O Lord God, art my hope,
And from my youth my trust.

5 Thou from my birth hast held me up,
Thou art the same that me
Out of my mother's womb didst take:
I ever will praise thee.

6 To many I a witness am;
Thou art my refuge strong;
Filled let my mouth be with thy praise
And honor all day long.

7 O do not cast me off, when me
Old age doth overtake;
And in the day of falling strength,
O do not me forsake.

8 For they who are my enemies
Against me speak with hate;
And they together counsel take
Who for my soul lay wait.

9 They say God leaves him, him perune,
And take, for none will save;
Be thou not far from me, my God;
Thy speedy help I crave.

10 Confounded, and commuted let
His prisoners contemn;
And clothed with scorn and shame be they
Who seek to injure me.

11 But I in thee with confidence
Will hope continually;
And yet with praise more and more
I will thee magnify.

12 Thy justice and salvation, Lord,
My mouth abroad shall show,
Even all the day; for I thereof
The numbers do not know.

13 And I will constantly go on
In strength of God the Lord;
And thy own righteousness, even thine
Alone, I will record.

14 For even from my youth, O God,
By thee I have been taught;
And hitherto I have declared
The wonders thou hast wrought.

15 And now, O God, forsake me not
When I am old and grey;
Till I to dust and earth;
Thy strength and power display.

16 Thy perfect righteousness, O God,
The heavens height exceeds;
O who is like to thee, who hast
Performed such mighty deeds?

17 Thus, Lord, who great adoration,
And awe, to me dost give,
Shalt quicken me, and bring again
From depths of earth below.

18 My greatness and my power thou wilt
Increase and far extend;
Against all grief on every side
Thou wilt me comfort send.

19 These, ev'n thy truth, I'll also praise,
Thou Holy One of Israel,
With harp I'll sing to thee.

20 My lips shall much rejoice in thee,
When I thy praises shall
My soul, by thy redeemed from death,
In joy shall much abound.

21 And with my tongue I will proclaim
Thy justice all day long;
For they confounded are and shamed
Who seek to do me wrong.

PSALM 72. C. M.

1 O LORD, thy judgments give the Thy son thy righteousness. (King)
Thy people be confounded who seek me to
And in their own folly disgraced. (8s.)

2 The lofty mountains shall bring forth
To all the people peace;
The little hills shall also yield
To him who thy righteousness.

3 The people's poor ones he shall judge,
The needy's children save;
He also shall in pieces break
Those who oppressed them have.

4 They shall see the fair white sun and moon
Do last through ages all;
He'll come like a rain on meadows new,
Or showers on earth that fall.

5 The just shall flourish in his days,
And prosper in his reign;
And while the moon endure he shall Abundant peace maintain.

6 His large and great dominion shall
From sea to sea extend;
It from the river shall reach forth
To earth's remotest end.

7 They in the wilderness that dwell
Bow down before him must;
And they that see his signs
Shall lick the very dust.

8 The kings of Tarshish, and the Isles,
To him shall presents bring;
And unto him shall offer gifts
Sheba's and Soba's king.

9 Yes, all the mighty kings on earth
Before him down shall fall;
And all the nations of the world
Do service to him shall.

10 For he the needy will set free,
When he on him shall call;
He'll save the poor, and those for whom
There is no help at all.

11 The poor man and the indigent
In mercy he shall spare;
He shall preserve alive the souls
Of them that needy are.

12 Both from deceit and violence
Their souls he shall set free;
And also in his sight their blood
Shall very precious be.

13 Yes, he shall live, and give to him
Shall be of Sheba's gold;
For him shall constant prayer be made,
His praise each day be told.

14 Of corn a handful in the earth,
On tips of mountains cast,
Shall save with fruit like Lebanon
When shaken with the blast.

15 The city shall be flourishing,
Her citizens have peace;
And like the grain that clothe the earth,
Their numbers shall increase.

16 His name forever shall endure;
Like like the sun it shall;
And yet he shall be like the dust
All nations shall him call.

17 Now blessed be Jehovah, God,
The God of Israel,
Who only doth wondrous works,
In glory that excel.

18 And blest be his glorious name
To all eternity;
The whole earth let his glory fill.
Amen, So let it be.

PSALM 79. L. M.

1 O GOD, thy judgments give the king,
His royal and thy righteousness:
He to thy people right shall bring,
With judgment shall thy poor redress.

2 The mountains great sh'ill peace secure,
And little hills by means of right;
He'll save the needy, judge the poor,
And crush the proud oppressor's might.

3 Till sun and moon no more are known,
They shall thee fear through ages all;
He'll come like rain on meadows morn,
And showers upon the earth that fall.

4 The just shall flourish in his day,
While lasts the moon shall peace extend;
From sea to sea shall be his way,
And from the river to earth's end.

5 To him shall bow who dwell in wilds,
Down to the dust his foes shall bend;
The kings of Tarshish, and the kings of Sheba,
And gifts shall send.

6 All kings before him down shall fall;
All nations shall his laws obey;
He'll save the needy when they call,
The poor, and those that have no stay.

7 The poor and needy spared shall be,
The needy's soul saved by his might,
From fraud and violence cast free;
Dear shall their blood be in his sight.

8 For I live; before him shall be laid
Of Sheba's gold an offering;
For him shall consecrate incense be made,
His praises they shall daily sing.

9 On hill-tops sown a little corn
Like Lebanon with fruit shall bend;
New life the city shall adorn;
She shall like grass grow ad and extend.

10 Long as the sun his name shall last,
It shall endure through ages all;
And men shall still in him be blest,
Blest all the nations shall his call.

11 Now blest be the mighty One,
Jehovah, God of Israel,
For he alone hath wonders done,
And deeds in glory that excel.

12 And blest be his glorious name,
Long as the ages shall extend;
O'er all the earth extend his fame.
Amen, amen, forevermore.

PSALM 78. C. M.

1 YEET God is good to Israel,
To each pure-hearted one,
With us, my steps had nearly slipped,
My feet were almost gone.

2 For I was envious, and grudged
The foolish ones that see;
When I perceived that wicked men
Enjoyed prosperity.

3 Because their strength continues firm,
Their death from hands is free.
They are as tall as other men,
Not plagued as others.

4 Their pride doth therefore like a chain
Encompass them about;
And, as a garment, violence
Doth cover them throughout.

5 Their eyes stand out with fat, they have
More than their hearts could wish.
They are corrupt; their talk of wrong
Both lewd and lofty is.

6 They set their mouth against the heavens
In their blaspheming talk;
And their reproaching tongue at large
Throughout the earth doth walk.

7 His people, therefore, oftentimes
Look back, and turn to their right,
And in abundance unto them
The waters are wrung out.

8 And thus they say: How can it be
That God these things doth know?
Or, can there in the highest be
Knowledge of things below?

9 Behold, how these the wicked ones
Do prosper at their will
In worldly things; how they increase
In wealth and riches still!

10 I verily have sought in vain
My heart to purify;
And vainly also washed my hands
In innocences have I.

11 For daily, and all day throughout,
Dread plagues I suffered have;
Yes, every morning I must bow,
Did chastisement receive.

12 If in this manner foolishly
To speak I would intend,
Thy children's generation then
Behold I should offend!

13 When I this thought to know, it was Too hard a thing for me!
Till to God's holy place I went,
Then I their end did see.

14 Then set upon a slippery place
Assuredly thou hast;
And suddenly didst thou, O Lord,
Them to destruction cast.

15 How in a moment suddenly
To ruin brought are they!
With fearful terrors utterly
They are consumed away.

16 Even like an empty dream when one
From sleeping doth awake,
So thou, when thou awakest, Lord,
Their image shalt despise.

17 Thus grieved within me was my heart,
And me my reins oppress;
So rude was I, and ignorant,
And in thy sight a beast.

18 Yet notwithstanding this, O Lord,
I ever am with thee;
Thou hast me held by my right hand;
And still upholder, me.

19 With thy good counsel while I live
Thou wilt me safely guide;
And into glory afterward
Receive me to abide.

20 O whom! as I in heavens high,
But thou, O Lord, alone?
And in the earth, where all desire
Besides thee is no one.

21 My flesh and heart do faint and fall,
But God my heart sustains;
The strength and portion of my heart
He evermore renews.

22 For lo, they that are far from thee
Forever perish shall;
And as for those who do not stray,
Thou hast destroyed them all.

23 But surely it is good for me
That I draw near to God;
In God I trust, that all thy works
I may declare abroad.

PSALM 74. C. M.

1 O GOD, why hast thou cast us off
Is it forevermore?
Against thy sanctuary why doth
Thy anger smoko so sore!

2 Thy congregation, Lord, doth languish
In thy remembrance hold;
Forget not those who purchased were
By thee in times of old.

3 The rod of thy inheritance,
Which thou redeemedst Israel,
This Zion hill, in which thou dwellest
Thy dwelling in times past.

4 To these long desolations, Lord,
O haste, and tarry not!
For all the hills thy foes within
Thy holy place have wrought.

5 Amidst thy congregations, Lord,
Thy enemies do rear:
Their ensigns they set up for signs
Of triumph, thus before.

6 A man was famous, and was held
In honor and renown,
According as with lift age,
He cut the thicket down.

7 But all at once, with axes now,
And hammers, they engage;
And all the carved work thereof
They break down in their rage.

8 Thy holy place they set on fire;
They have defiled the same,
By casting down, even to the ground,
The place where dwelt thy name.

9 They said in heart, "Now let them be
To one destruction doom'd;
God's synagogues in all the land
With fire they have consumed."

10 Our signs we do not now behold,
There is not us among,
A prophet now, nor any one
Who knows the time how long.

11 How long shall adversaries, Lord,
Thus in reproach exclaim?
Shall enemies forever thus
Dispheme thy holy name?

12 Thy hand, even thy right hand of Why dost thou thus forget? Light,
O from thy bosom pluck it out,
For our deliverance sake.

13 Because my King is God alone,
Even from the times of old;
He works, in midst of all the earth,
Salvation manifest.

14 The sea by thy great power to part
Aunder thou didst make;
And thou the dragons' heads, O Lord,
Didst in the waters break.

15 The heads of the leviathan
Thy hand did break and give
To be the people's sustenance
Who in the deserts live.

16 The fount and flood were cleft by thee,
The mighty streams were dried,
The day and night are thine, and thou
Didst light and sun provide.

17 By thee the borders of the earth
Were settled every where;
The summer and the winter both
By thee created were.

18 That spiteful foe have thee reproached,
In memory recall;
And that the foolish people have Blasphemed thy name, O Lord.

19 O do not to the multitude
Thy turtle's soul give o'er;
The congregation of thy poor
Forget not evermore.

20 Lord, to thy cov'nant have respect,
Because in every clime
Are earth's dark places filled with hames
Of cruelty and crime.

21 O let not those that are oppressed
Return again with shame;
Let those that poor and needy are
Give praise to thy name.

22 Do thou, O God, arise and plead
The cause that is thy own;
Remember how thou art reproached
Still by the foolish one.

23 O Lord, do not forget the voice
Of such as are thy foes;
Of them that in thy temple rise
The tumult ever grows.

PSALM 74. 8, 6, 4.

1 O GOD, why hast thou cast us off
Why doth thy anger smoko?
Thy wrath against thy chosen race,
Sheep of thy flock?

2 Thy church by thee redeemed of old
In love remembered still,
The rod of thy inheritance,
This Zion hill.

3 Here lion hath dwelt; lift up thy foot,
To these and ruins laid,
Thy holy place, with wicked hands
By foes laid waste.

4 Thy enemies in triumph about
Whose seats were wont to pray;
Their ensigns on thy temple's walls
For signs display.

5 Once men were famed for felling trees,
But now the carved work falls;
With axes and with hammers now
They break the walls.

6 They have thy temple set on fire,
In dust they have defiled,
Thy holy place where dwelt thy name,
Thy house despoiled.

7 They, to destroy us all at once
Dilt in their hearts conspire;
Through all the land God's synagogues
They've burnt with fire.

8 Our signs we see not; there is now
No prophet us among,
Noc is there any one who knows
The time how long.

9 O Lord, how long shall those blaspheme
Thy name who thus withstand?
Why hide thyself? make bare thy hand,
Ev'n thy right hand.

10 Because God is thy King of old;
Salvation worketh he,
Through all the earth, and by his strength
Divides the sea.

11 Thou broken hast the dragons' heads,
And as their meat didst give Leviathan to those who did
In deserts live.

12 Fountain and food thou didst divide,
Single mighty rivers dry,
The day is thine, the night is thine,
Thou sun and sky.

13 Thou hast established by decree
All borders of the earth;
To summer and to winter thou
Hast given birth.

14 O Lord, do thou this keep in mind,
How enemies sit down,
And how the foolish people have Blasphemed thy name.

15 Thy turtle-dove deliver net
To crowds which it doth bear,
And thy poor flock forevermore
Do not forget.

16 Unto thy cov'nant have respect,
For every where we see
The earth's dark habitations filled
With cruelty.

17 O let not those that are oppressed
Return again with shame;
But let the poor and needy ones
Still praise thy name.

18 Arise, O God, plead thy own cause,
Keep thou in memory
How every day the foolish man
Reproacheth thee.

19 Of them that set up against thee rise
The tumult ever grows;
Forget not thou the voice of them
That are thy foes.

PSALM 75. C. M.

1 TO thee, O God, we render thanks,
I We render thanks to thee;
Because thy wondrous works declare
Thy great name near to us.

2 I purpose when I shall receive
Thy congregation, Lord,
That I will judgment uprightly
To every one award.

3 The land has been desolved throughout,
With all that in it dwell,
But set its pillars level up,
And then establish well.

4 In to the foolish people said,
Do not deal fecklessly;
And unto those that wicked are,
Lift not your horn on high.

5 Lift not your horn on high, nor speak
With stultion neck; but know,
Promotion not from east, nor west,
Nor from the south doth flow.

6 But God is judge, he puts down one,
And sets another up,
For in the hands of God Most High
Of rulers is a cup.

7 The full of iniquity, he pours forth,
And makes the wicked all
Bring out the litter drops thereof,
Yes, and they drink them shall.

8 But I forever will exult,
I Jehovah's God will praise,
All power of sinners will cut off,
But just men's power will raise.

PSALM 76. C. M.

1 IN Judah God is known; his name
In Israel is great;
In Salem is his holy place,
In Zion is his seat.

2 There arrows of the bow he broke,
The shield, the sword, the spear,
More glorious than thou than hills of prey,
More excellent art thou.

3 The stout of heart themselves were
A deadly sleep they slept,
And none of all the men of might
Their strength of hands have kept.

4 When thy rebuke, O Jacob's God,
Had forth against them passed,
Then both the chariot and the horse
Were in a dead sleep cast.

5 For thou, yes, thou art to be feared,
And who, O Lord, is he
That may stand up before thy sight,
If once thou angry be?

6 From heaven judgment was proclaimed,
The earth was still with fear,
When God to judgment rose, to save
All meek on earth that were.

7 Because the very wrath of man
Unto thy praise reduces;
Thou to the remnant of his wrath
Wilt set restraining bounds.

8 Vow to the Lord your God, and pay;
All ye that hear him live,
Bring gifts and presents unto him;
To adore him is he.

9 For he the spirits shall cut off
Of those that princes are;
And to the kings that are on earth
He fearful shall appear.

PSALM 76. L. M.

1 IN Judah God is known and feared,
In Israel his name is great,
His tent in Salem he hath reared,
In Zion fixed his royal seat.

2 He thers break arrows of the bow,
The shield, the sword, and war's array,
More excellent, O Lord, art thou,
More glorious far than hills of prey.

3 The stout of heart are spoiled in fight,
A deadly sleep the warrior slept;
No hand of all the men of might,
Its woe'd strength or cunning kept.

4 O Jacob's God, at thy command
The chariot and the horse went down,
For thou art dreadful; who can stand
Before the tempest of thy frown?

5 From heaven Jehovah judgment gave;
Thy trembling earth stood still and feared,
When all the meek on earth to save,
For righteous judgment God appeared.

6 The wrath of man thee praise shall bring,
Remaining wrath thy hand shall stave;
Vow to the Lord your God and King,
Do faithful all your vows to pay.

7 Let all around their presents bring
To him whom all the world should fears
He cuts off princes; God the King
Shall dreadful to earth's kings appear.

PSALM 77. C. M.

1 WITH my voice cried unto God,
I Yes, unto God I cried;
And in my current prayer his ear
He graciously supplies me.

1 Through all the day I sought the Lord,
While trouble rose around me;
Through all the night I spread my hands,
My soul would take no rest.

2 I to remembrance God recalled,
But trouble still remained;
And overwhelmed my spirit was,
While I in grief complained.

3 Thou dost withhold my eyes from sleep,
When sleep and rest I seek;
My trouble is so great that I
Would sleep no more to-day.

4 I thought upon the days of old,
The years departed long;
I hold communion with my heart;
By night recalled my song.

5 My heart inquired with anxious care,
Will thou forever spare?
Shall we no more his favor see?
Will mercy ne'er return?

6 Forever does his promise fall?
Hath thou forgotten grace?
Hath he slung up his tender love
In anger hid his face?

7 "But this is my infirmity,"
My thoughts at once reply;
I'll rail back years of God's right hand,
The years of thine Most High.

8 I will commemorate the deeds
Accomplished by the Lord;
The wonders done of old by thee
I surely will record.

9 I also will of all thy works
My meditation make;
And of thy doings I will ever
Thrust pleasure I will take.

10 O God, most holy is thy way
In thy divine abode;
Who is so great a god of might
As our Almighty God?

11 Thou art the God of wondrous deeds
Performed by thy wondrous grace;
Thou hast declared thy strength among
The tribes of every land.

12 To thy own people with thy arm
Thou dost redemption bring;
To Jacob's sons, and to thy tribes
From Joseph's house dost spring.

13 The waters saw thee, O Most High,
They saw, and troubled were;
And from its lowest depths the sea
Was moved, and God for fear.

14 The clouds poured out abundant rain,
Lord manna filled all the sky;
Yea, here and there on every side
Thy arrows swift did fly.

15 In thunders loud along the heavens
Thy voice was uttered forth;
Thy lightnings blazed across the world,
Then shook and set the earth.

16 Thy paths were in the waters great,
Thy way was in the deep sea waves;
Thy footsteps 'mid the deep sea waves
Were only known to thee.

17 And like a flock of sheep thou didst
Thy people safely guide;
By Moses' and by Aaron's hand
Through all the desert wide.

PSALM 77. L. M.

1 I CRIED to God, I cried, he heard;
In day of grief I sought the Lord;
All night with hands stretched out I wept,
My soul no comfort would accept.

2 I thought of God, and was distressed;
Complained, yet trouble never I pressed;
Thou holdest, Lord, my eyes awake;
So great my grief I cannot speak.

3 The days of old I called to mind,
The ancient years when God was kind;
I called to mind my maker by night,
My making spirit sought for light.

4 Will God cast off forevermore?
His favor will he ne'er restore?
Has grace forever passed away?
Or, doth his promise fail for aye?

5 Hath God forgotten to be kind?
His tender love is then enshrouded?
My weakness this, yet faith doth stand
Recalling years of God's right hand.

6 The works of old done by the Lord,
Thy wondrous works I will record;
His tender love is then enshrouded,
And talk of all thy doings past.

7 The holy place is thy abode;
What god so great as in our God?
Thy wondrous works thou hast made
Known,
Thy strength among the people shown.

8 Thy arm the sons of Jacob saved,
And Joseph's brethren thou enslaved,
The waters saw thee, God of might,
The waters saw thee with afright.

9 Thou troubled was the mighty main;
The clouds poured out abundant rain;
The lowering skies sent out a sound,
And for thy arrows blazed around.

10 Thy lightnings flashed, thy thunders
Rested;
The troubling earth in terror reeled;
Thou through the sea thy way didst keep,
Thy path was in the mighty deep.

11 Thy footsteps were to all unknown;
Thy way to the choicest of Israel;
By Moses' and by Aaron's hand
Thou didst them guide to Canaan's land.

PSALM 78. C. M.

1 A TTENDED, my people, to my law:
Thereto give thou an ear,
The words that from my mouth proceed
Attentively to hear.

2 My mouth shall speak a parable,
And sayings dark of old;
The same which we have heard and
K'n as our fathers told.

3 We will not from their children hide
The wonders done by thee;
To generations yet to come
These things declare will we.

4 The praises of the Lord our God,
And his almighty strength,
The wondrous works that he hath done,
We will show forth at length.

5 His testimony and his law
In Israel did he place,
And charged our fathers to show
To their succeeding race;

6 That so the race which was to come
These things might learn and know;
And sons unborn, who should arise,
Might to their sons them show:

7 That they might set their hope in God,
And suffer not to fall;
His mighty works out of their mind,
But keep his precepts all:

8 And might not, like their fathers, be
A stiff rebellious race;
A race not right in heart; with God,
Whose spirit faithless was:

9 The sons of Ephraim, who nor bows
Nor other arms did lack,
When as the day of battle was,
Yet faintly turned back:

10 They broke God's covenant, and refused
In his commands to go;
His works and wonders they forgot,
Which he to them did show.

11 Things marvellous he brought to pass;
Thy fathers them he led
Within the land of Egypt down,
Yea, even Zion's field.

12 By him divided was the sea,
He led them through the flood;
The waters on each side he raised,
Till we a heap they stood:

13 With cloud by day, with light of fire
All night he did them guide.
In desert, rocks he cleft, and drink,
As from great depths, supplied.

14 He also from the rock brought streams,
Like floods made waters run.
Yet, sinning more in desert they Provoked the highest One.

15 For in their heart they tempted God,
And, speaking with mistrust,
They greedily did meat require
To satisfy their lust.

16 Against the Lord himself they spoke,
And, murmuring, said thus,
"A table in the wilderness
Can God prepare for us?"

17 Behold, he smote the rock, and thence Came streams and waters great;
But saw they his people's thirst,
"Out souls whom loath to eat?"

18 Jehovah heard, his wrath arose;
Thou kindled was a flame
On Jacob, and on Israel
His indignation came.

19 For they believed not God, nor trust
In his salvation had;
Thought clouds above he did command,
And heaven's doors upon made.

20 And icanna rained on them, and gave Them corn of heav'n to eat.
Man angels' food did eat; to them
He to the full sent meat.

21 He in the heavens also caused
An eastern wind to blow;
And by his power he let out
The southern wind to go.

22 Then flesh he rained on them like dust
Which cannot numbered be;
And feathers' food in numbers vast
Like snails upon the sea.

23 As his command, and their camp,
The flesh in show'rs fell;
On every side it fell about,
The tents where they did dwell.

24 So they did eat abundantly,
And had of meat their fill;
For he did give to them what was
Their own desire and will.

25 They from their lust had not estranged
Thou food and their desire;
But while the meat was in their mouths,
Which they did so require,

26 God's wrath upon them came, and slow
The fates of them all;
As to the choicest of Israel,
O'erthrown by death, did fall.

27 Yet after all the Lord had done,
They still went on in sin;
Nor did believe, although his works
So wonderful had been.

28 He therefore did in vanity
In anger o'er he turn;
And by his wrath their wretched years
A way to trouble passed.

29 But when he slew them, then they did
To seek him show desire;
Yet they returned, and after God
Dost earnestly inquire.

30 And that the Lord had been their Rock
They did remember then;
And that the high almighty God
Had their Redeemer been.

31 Yet with their mouth they flattered
And with their tongues they lied;
Their heart was not sincere: they from
His covenant turned aside.

32 But, full of pity, he forgave
Their sin, nor did them slay;
Nor stirred up all his wrath, but oft
His anger turned away.

33 For that they were not facing flesh
To mind he did recall;
A wind that passeth soon away,
And ne'er returns at all.

34 How often in the wilderness
Did they provoke his wrath!
How often grieved him, as they marched
Along their desert path!

35 Yea, turning back, they tempt the Lord,
And boldly limit place
About the high and Holy One—
The God of Israel's race.

36 And they remembered not his hand,
Nor yet the notes they
When he redeemed them from the foe
Who sought them for his prey.

37 Nor how great signs in Egypt land
He openly had wrought;
What miracles in Zion he did,
His hand to pass had brought.

38 How he their rivers and their lakes
Turned everywhere to blood,
That neither man nor beast could drink
Of standing lake or flood.

39 Devouring fire, of divers sorts,
The Lord among them brought;
And swarms of frogs o'er all the land,
Which great destruction wrought.

40 He to the caterpillar gave
The fruits of all their soil;
He gave the labors of their hands
To be the locust's spoil.

41 Their vines with hail, their sycamores
He with the frost did blast;
Their leaves to bill he gave; their flocks
Hot thunderbolts did waste.

42 He cast upon them anger fierce;
To burning wrath gave vent;
In indignation troubled them
By evil angels sent.

43 He did not spare their soul from death,
But for his wrath made way;
And to the fearful pestilence
He gave their life a prey.

44 And over Egypt's land he smote
Their first-born, and their pride,
Till everywhere he took of them
Their chief of strength had died.

45 But forth from thence like sheep he
His own, his chosen led,
And led his people like a flock
Across the desert land.

46 And on their journey he them led,
Secure from every foe;
But by the sea's overwhelming waves
Their enemies covered were.

47 To borders of his holy place
The Lord his people brought,
E'en to the mountain which for them
His own right hand had brought.

48 The nations which in Canaan dwell,
He also by his hand,
Before his people's face, expelled
Beyond their native land;

49 Which for inheritance to them
By lines he did divide,
And made the tribes of Israel
Within their tents abide.

50 But God Most High they did provoke,
They tempted him to show's fall;
His testimonies to observe
Their will did not incline:

51 But, like their fathers, they turned
In faithlessness and pride,
And like a base, deceitful bow,
They all were turned aside.

52 Because to anger they provoked
The Lord with pieces high,
And with their graven images
Moved him to jealousy.

53 When God heard this, he angry was,
And much loathed their sin;
So that the choicest of Israel,
Which he had placed with men,

54 And he his strength delivered o'er
To long captivity;
He left his glory in the hand
Of his proud enemy.

55 His people also to the sword
In anger o'er he turn;
Against his own inheritance
His wrath so fiercely burn.

56 The fire consumed their choice young
Their maid no marriage had; [men;
And when their priests fell by the sword,
Their wives no mourning made.

57 But then the Lord arose, as one
That doth from sleep awake;
And like a giant that, by wine
Refreshed, a stout drink make.

58 And on the backs of feeling foes
He caused his arrows to fall;
And to reproach perpetual
He put his enemies all.

59 Moreover Joseph's tent he spurred,
Nor Ephraim's tribe approved;
Nor Judah's tent he favored chose,
The Zion Mount he loved.

60 And like the firm and lofty hills
He built his holy place;
Yea, strong as earth's foundations fast,
He gave it changeless base.

61 Of David as his servant then
He evergreen choice did make,
And him, from out the fold of sheep,
The Lord was pleased to take.

62 From waiting on the suckling ewe,
He brought him forth to feed
His Israel, his heritage,
The Zion Mount he loved.

63 So with integrity of heart
He did them wisely lead;
And with his skillfulness of hands
He did them safely lead.

PSALM 79. C. M.

1 INTO thy heritage, O God,
I have heathen entrance made;
Thy holy place they have defiled,
On heaps Jerusalem laid.

2 Thy servants' bodies they have cast
To fowls of heaven for food;
The flesh of thy dear saints they gave
To beasts of earth to eat.

3 Their blood about Jerusalem
Like water they have shed;
And of their number none remained
To bury them when dead.

4 And to our neighbors a reproach
Most base became are we;
A scorn and laughing-stock to them
That round about us be.

5 How long, O Lord? for evermore
Will thou still keep thine ire?
O how long shall thy jealousy
Burn like devouring fire?

6 O heathen pour thy fury forth,
That never have thee known,
And on these kingdoms which thy name
Have never called upon.

7 For these are they who have despoiled
Thy servant Jacob's race,
And they all waste and desolate
Have made his dwelling-place.

8 Against us mind not former sins;
Thy tender mercies show;
Let them relieve us specially,
For we're brought very low.

9 For thy name's glory help us, Lord,
Who hast our Saviour been;
Deliver us; for thy name's sake,
O purge away our sin.

10 Why say the heathen, When's their theft
Let him to them be known;
Whom those who shed thy servants' blood
Are in our sight o'erthrown.

11 O let the prisoner's sighs ascend
Before thy sight on high;
Preserve those in thy mighty power
That are condemned to die.

12 And to our neighbors' boomous cause
It seven-fold rendered be,
For that reproach which in their spite,
O Lord, they cast on thee.

13 So we, thy people and thy flock,
Will ever thank thy name;
And unto generations all
We will thy praise proclaim.

PSALM 85. C. M.

1 O LORD, thou hast thy favor shown
To thy beloved land;
And Jacob's captive state thou hast
Recalled with mighty hand.

2 Thou to thy people all their sins
Must freely pardon hast;
And ever all their trespasses
Thou hast a covering cast.

3 Thou all thy anger hast removed;
From wrath hast turned to peace;
O God, our Saviour, turn to us,
And make thy wrath to cease.

4 Shall thy displeasure thus endure
Against us without end?
Will thou to generations all
Thy anger still extend?

5 Shall not thy people joy in thee?
Will thou not us revive?
O Lord, to us thy mercy show,
And thy salvation.

6 I'll hear what God the Lord will speak;
For he will speak in peace,
To all his people and his saints,
Let them from folly cease.

7 To such alone as fear the Lord,
Is his salvation near,
That as a dweller in our land
His glory may appear.

8 Truth met with mercy, righteousness
And peace kissed mutually;
Truth springs from earth, and righteous-
Looks down from heaven's height.

9 Yes, what is good the Lord shall give;
Our land shall yield increase,
And right, to set us in his steps,
Shall go before his face.

PSALM 85. L. P. M.

1 O LORD, thou hast favor shown thy land,
And brought back Jacob's rapine bond;
Thy people's sins thou pardoned hast,
And all their guilt hast covered o'er,
Removed from them thine anger sore,
And all thy fierce wrath behind thee cast.

2 Turn us, O God our Saviour, turn,
Nor longer let thine anger burn,
Will thou forever angry be?
Through ages shall we never revive?
Will thou not us again revive,
That so we may rejoice in thee?

3 O Lord, to us thy mercy show,
And thy salvation now bestow;
We wait to hear what God will say:
Peace to his people shall he speak,
And to his saints, but let them seek
No more in folly's path to stray.

4 His saving help is surely near
To those his holy name that fear;
Thy glory dwells in all our land,
Now heavenly truth unite with grace,
And righteousness and peace entwine,
In full accord they ever stand.

5 Truth springing forth the earth shall crown,
And righteousness from heav'n look down,
And God on us his goodness shed:
Our land shall then with plenty flow;
Before him righteousness shall go,
And cause us in his steps to tread.

PSALM 85. C. M.

1 O LORD, do thou bow down thy ear,
And hear me graciously;
Because I sorely troubled art,
I am to poverty.

2 Because I'm holy, let my soul
By thee delivered be:
O thou my God, thy servant save,
That put his trust in thee.

3 Since unto thee I daily cry,
Be merciful to me:
Rejoice thy servant's soul; for, Lord,
I'll praise thy soul to thee.

4 For thou, O Lord, most gracious art,
And ready to forgive;
And rich in mercy, all that call
Upon thee to relieve.

5 O Lord, my prayer hear, the voice
Of my request attend:
In trouble thou I'll call on thee;
For thou wilt answer me.

6 O Lord, among the heathen gods
Like thee there is not one;
Nor are there any works O Lord,
Like those which thou hast done.

7 All nations, Lord, whom thou hast made
Shall come and praise proclaim;
Before thy face, they worship shall,
And glorify thy name.

8 Because thou art exceeding great,
And works by thee are done,
Which are to be admired; and thou
Art God thyself alone.

9 Teach me thy way, and in thy truth,
O Lord, then walk will I;
Unto my heart, that I day name
May fear continually.

10 O Lord my God, with all my heart
Thy praise I will proclaim;
I will ascribe forevermore
All glory to thy name.

11 Because thy mercy toward me
Is greatness doth exceed;
And thou delivered hast my soul
Out from the lowest hell.

12 O God, the proud against me rise,
And vilest men have met,
That for my soul have sought; and these
Before them have not set.

13 But thou, Jehovah, art a God
In whom compassions flow;
Thy mercy, grace and truth abound,
Thou turn to anger slow.

14 O turn to me thy countenance,
And mercy on me have;
Thy servant strengthen, and the son
Of thine own handmaid save.

15 Show me a sign for good, that they
Who do me hate may see,
And be ashamed; because thou, Lord,
Dost help and comfort me.

PSALM 87. C. M.

1 UPON the hills of holiness
Is his foundation set.
And upon them Jacob's dwellings all,
The Lord loves Zion's gates.

2 Things glorious are said of thee,
Thou city of the Lord,
Hahab and Babel I, to thee
That know me, will record:

3 Behold er'n Tyras, and with it
The land of Palestine,
And likewise Ethiopia;
This man was born therein.

4 Of Zion they shall say, this man
And that man born were there,
And he that is the highest shall Himself establish her.

5 When God the people writes, he'll count
That this man born was there.
They shall be, who sing and play;
My well-springs in these are.

PSALM 87. 7s.

1 GOD'S foundation stands unmoved,
On the rock and holy hills;
Zion's gates by him are loved,
More than tents where Jacob dwells.

2 O thou city of the Lord,
Glorious things are said of thee;
Hahabim, I will record,
Hahab, too, as knowing me.

3 Tyre, Philitia, Cush, behold,
Born in her, her name adored;
Of Zion shall be told,
Multitudes in her were born.

4 God the Highest by his might
Will establish her on earth;
God shall nations' records write,
Counting, "These in her had birth."

5 Those on instruments that play,
Shall with singers joyful be;
And with one accord shall say,
"All my springs are found in thee."

PSALM 87. C. M.

1 O LORD God, my Saviour, day and night
Before thee cried have I.
Before thee let my prayer come;
Give ear unto my cry.

2 For troubles great do fill my soul;
My life draws nigh the grave,
I'm numbered with the buried dead,
And such as no strength have.

3 But like the slain in grave that lie,
Among the dead I'm free;
Like slain, whom thou hast forgotten hast,
Who are cut off from thee.

4 Thou hast me laid in lowest pit,
In deep and darksome caves,
Thy wrath lies hard on me, thou hast
Me pressed with all thy wares.

5 Thou art put far from me my friends,
By them I am abandoned.
I'm shut up, and my eyes are none
Who freedom can afford.

6 By reason of my deep distress,
Mine eyes mourned doctively;
To thee, O Lord, I call, and stretch
My hands continually.

7 Will thou show wonders to the dead?
Shall they rise, and then bless?
Shall in the grave thy love be told?
In death thy faithfulness?

8 Shall thy great wonders in the dark,
Or shall thy righteousness
Be known to any in the land
Of deep forgetfulness?

9 But, Lord, to thee I cried; my prayer,
Each morn shall rise to thee.
And with thy mighty arm thou hast
Why hidest thy face from me?

10 Distressed am I, and from my youth
I ready am to die;
Thy terrors I have borne; I am
Distracted fearfully.

11 By thy fierce wrath I'm overwhelmed;
Cut off I dread of thee;
Like water they around me come,
They daily compass me.

12 My friends thou hast put far from me,
And him that did me love;
And those that my acquaintance were
To darkness did remove.

PSALM 88. 8s and 7s.

1 O THOU God of my salvation,
Day and night I cried to thee;
Hear my humble supplication,
Quickly low thine ear to me.

2 Filled with grief, my soul is sighing,
To the grave my life draws near,
Numbered now among the dying;
Like one who hapless appear.

3 Free to sleep in death's dark chamber,
Like the slain within the grave;
Whom thou dost no more remember,
Whom thy hand no more shall save.

4 In the pit thy hand has laid me,
In the darkness and to deep;
Sorely has thy wrath dismayed me;
O'er my soul affliction sweeps.

5 Friendship's tie by thee are broken,
Friends are banished from my sight;
Scorned by them, my name is spoken;
Closed on me is sorrow's night.

6 Mourns my eye, my powers languish,
Sore affliction presses me;
Lord, I cry to thee in anguish,
Jelly stretch my hands to thee.

7 Shall the dead, to life returning,
Rise and give thy wonders, Lord?
Shall the grave thy love be learning,
Death thy faithfulness record?

8 Shall thy works and wondrous doing,
Be proclaimed in darkness deep?
Righteousness shall they be viewing,
Wrapt in cold oblivion's sleep?

9 But, O Lord, at dawn awaking,
Prayer and cries I'll send to thee;
Why, O God, my soul forsaking,
Hidest thou thy face from me?

10 All my days I've been afflicted,
I with sufferings am distracted,
While thy terror on me lies.

11 Flames of wrath are o'er me leaping,
Horror great upon me roll;
Round they come like waters sweeping,
Daily compassing my soul.

12 Thou my dearest friends hast banished,
My companions put to flight;
All acquaintances have vanished,
Driven to the shades of night.

PSALM 89. C. M.

1 GOD'S mercies I will ever sing,
His throne shall stand secure.
And with my mouth I shall Thy faithfulness make to be known
To generations all.

2 For mercy shall be built, said I,
Forever to endure;
Thy faithfulness, ev'n in the heav'n,
Thou wilt establish sure.

3 I with my chosen One have made
A covenant graciously;
And to my servant, whom I loved,
To David sworn have I:

4 That I thy seed establish will
Forever to remain,
And will to generations all
Thy throne build and maintain.

5 The praises of thy wonders, Lord,
The heavens shall express;
The congregation of thy saints,
Shall praise thy faithfulness.

6 For who in heaven with the Lord
May once himself compare?
Who is like God, and among the sons
Of those that mighty are?

7 Great fear in meeting of the saints
Is due unto the Lord;
And of all souls what should
With reverence be adored.

8 O thou that art the Lord of hosts,
What Lord in nightness
Is like to thee? who compassed round
In death thy faithfulness?

9 'Tis in the raging of the sea
Thou over it dost reign;
And when the waves thereof do swell,
Thou stillest them again.

10 Rahab in pieces thou didst break,
Like one that slaughtered is;
And with thy mighty arm thou hast
Dispersed thine enemies.

11 The heavens are thine, thou for thine
The earth dust also take;
The world, and fulness of the same,
Thy power didst send and make.

12 The north and south from thee alone
Thy first beginning had;
Both Tabor mount and Hermon hill
Shall in thy name be glad.

13 Thou hast an arm that's full of pow'r,
Thy hand is great in might;
And thy right hand exceedingly Exalted is in might.

14 Justice and judgment of thy throne
Are made the dwelling-place;
Mercy, accompanied with truth,
Shall go before thy face.

15 O greatly blessed the people are,
Whose joyful souls do know;
In brightness of thy face, O Lord,
They ever on shall go.

16 They in thy name shall all the day
Rejoice exceedingly;
And in thy righteousness shall they
Exulted be on high;

17 Because thy glory of thy strength
Both only stand in thee;
And in thy favour shall our horn
And pow'r exalted be.

18 For God is our defence; he will
To us salvation bring;
The Holy One of Israel
Is our almighty King.

19 In vision to thy Holy One
Thou satest, I help have laid Upon a mighty one, and from
His people choice have made.

20 Ev'n David, I have found him out
A servant unto me;
And with my holy oil my King
Anointed him to be.

21 With whom my hand shall stablished
My arm shall make him strong;
On him the foe shall not exact,
Nor son of manish wrong.

22 I will be beat down before his face
All his malicious foes;
I will them greatly wither who do
With hatred him oppose.

23 My mercy and my faithfulness
With him yet still shall be;
And in my name his horn and pow'r
His shall exalt to be.

24 His hand and pow'r shall reach afar,
I'll set it in the sky;
And his right hand established shall
Upon the rivers be.

25 Thou art my Father and my God,
He unto me shall cry;
Thou also art the Rock on which
For safety I rely.

26 I'll make him my first-born, supreme
O'er kings of ev'ry land;
My love I'll ever keep for him,
My covenant fast shall stand.

27 And I will also make his seed
Forever to endure;
And, as the days of heaven are,
His throne shall stand secure.

28 But if his children shall forsake
My law, and see I know;
And in my judgments shall not walk,
But wander from my way:

29 And if my statutes they profane,
My laws do not keep;
I'll visit them with their faults with rods,
Their sins with stripes correct.

30 Yet I'll not take my love from him,
Nor false my promise make.
My covenant I'll not break, nor change
What with my mouth I spoke.

31 Once by my holiness I swore,
To David I'll not lie;
His seed and throne shall, as the sun,
Before me last for aye.

32 It, like the moon, shall ever be Established steadily;
And like to that which in the heav'n
Doth witness faithfully.

33 But him, displeas'd, hast cast him off
Thou didst abhor and loathe;
Who is like thee, and thy name is
Thou hast been very wrath.

24 Thou hast thy servant's covenant Made void, and thou hast thy Throat burst; for his crown, while it Cut on the ground doth lie.

25 Thou all his hedges broken hast, His strongholds down hast torn, He to all passers-by a spoil, To neighbors he a scorn.

26 Thou hast set up his feet right hand; Made all his right glad; Turned his sword's edge, and him to stand In battle hast not made.

27 His glory thou hast made to cease, His throne to earth hast cast; His days of youth made short, and him With shame thou covered hast.

28 How long, O Lord, wilt thou thyself Hide always in thine ire? And shall thy indignation great Forever burn like fire?

29 Remember, Lord, how short a time I shall on earth remain: O wherefore is it so, that thou Hast made all men in vain?

30 What man is he that liveth here, And death shall never see? Or from the power of death Who can his soul set free?

31 Thy former loving-kindness, O Lord, where are they now? Those which in truth and faithfulness To David sworn hast thou?

32 Mind, Lord, thy servant's sad reproach; How I in bosom bore The scornings of the people all, Who strong and mighty are;

33 And how thy enemies reproached, Jehovah, thine own; E'en how they have approached the steps Of thine anointed One.

34 All blessings to Jehovah be Ascribed forever, thine, Forevermore, so let it be, Amen, yes, and Amen.

PSALM 89. L. M.

1 MY song shall evermore record In praise the mercies of the Lord; Thy faithfulness my mouth shall show, While ceaseless seas onward flow.

2 For I have said, eternal years Shall crown the temple year; And in the heavens, firm and sure, Thy faithfulness thou wilt secure.

3 With David I a covenant made, And to my servant swore and said, Thy seal forever I'll extend, And build thy throne till time shall end.

4 The wonders done by thee, O Lord, The heaven shall in praise record; Thy faithfulness shall raise command, When holy ones assemble round.

5 For who in heaven's high dwellers there, (As to the Lord himself compare) Or who, among the mighty, avers The likeness that Jehovah bears?

6 Great fear and dread to God belong, When holy ones in conclave throng; Yes, he inspires great dread and fear, In all who round his throne appear.

7 O then Jehovah, God of hosts, What mighty one thy likeness boasts? Thy faithfulness is ever found, Extending all thy path around.

8 The swelling sea, thou dost control, And still its billows when they roll; Rahab, as slain thou didst subvert, Thine arm of strength thy foe o'erthrew.

9 The earth belongs to thee alone, The heavens, too, are all thine own; The world and all that it contains, By thee established, thine remains.

10 The north and south thy hands did frame; Tabor and Hermon praise thy name; Great strength with thee thy doth lie, Thy hand is strong, thy right hand high.

11 On righteousness thy throne is stayed, On justice its foundations laid; Before thy face, thy way to show, Shall truth and mercy ever go.

12 How blest the realm with favor crowned, The hear and know the joyful sound; They in the light, O Lord, shall live, The light thy face and favor give.

13 They in thy name shall joyful be, Yes, all the day be glad in thee; And in thy just and righteous ways To honor great thou wilt them raise.

14 Thou art the glory of thy strength, Thy grace will lift our horn at length; For Israel's Holy One, who reigns As Lord, our shield and King remains.

15 These thou in vision didst make known, And thus didst show thy Holy One; On one with might thou didst thy rayed Great help and succor I have laid.

26 Ye, I have raised to honor great, One chosen from the people's state; My servant David I have found, And him as my anointed crowned.

17 With him my hand shall still remain, Mine arm with strength shall him sustain; The foe shall never him annoy, Nor son of wrong his peace destroy.

18 I'll crush before him every foe, His enemies and his overthrow; My faithfulness to him I'll prove, And ne'er from him my grace remove.

19 Ye, he shall triumph in my name, And great shall be his power and fame; I'll set his hand upon the sea, His right hand on the floods shall be.

20 Thou art my Father, he shall cry, My God, my Rock, my saviour nigh; As my first-born I will him own, O'er kings of earth will act his throne.

21 My grace for him I'll keep secure, My covenant to him is sure; I'll see forever I'll maintain, His throne while days of heav'n remain.

22 But if his sons my law forsake; If they my holy statutes break; If from my judgments they shall stray, And my commands will not obey!

23 Then with a rod their sins I'll smite, Their guilt with stripes will I requite; Yet him my grace shall not forsake, My truth I will not falsehood make.

24 My covenant I will not evade, Nor change the promise I have made; Once in my holiness have I sworn, To David sworn, and will not lie.

25 His seed forever shall endure, And as the an' his throne I'll raise; Eternal as the moon on high, The faithful witness in the sky.

26 Yet now thine anger holy burns, And thine anointed hast thou and spurns; Thy servant's covenant we see Made void as if abhorred by thee.

27 Thou to the earth hast trampled down, And thus profaned his sacred crown; His walls all prostrate thou hast laid, His fortress a ruin made.

28 The passers-by upon him prey, His neighbors turn in scorn away; His foes' right hand hast thou made strong, And giv'n to them the victor's song.

29 His blinded sword hast thou reposed, Not in his battle him upheld; His glory now no more is known, And thou to earth hast cast his throne.

30 His days of youth so quickly past, The garb of shame is o'er him cast; How long, Lord, hast thou slept in bed? Shall wrath forever burn like fire?

31 Think on my life, 'tis but a span, Why thus in vain hast thou made man? What man that lives, has power to save His soul from death, and from the grave?

32 Where are thy former mercies, O Lord, Which thou in truth to David swore? Remember, Lord, thy servant's scorn, And mine, from mighty people borne.

33 The scorn, O Lord, thy foes have shown, On thine Anointed's lot they throw; Remember, let it be redressed; Forever let the Lord be blessed. Amen and Amen.

PSALM 90. C. M.

1 LORD, thou hast been our dwelling-Place In generations all, Before thou ever hadst brought forth The mountains great or small;

2 Ere ever thou hadst formed the earth, And all the world about, E'en thou from everlasting art To everlasting God.

3 O Lord, thou to destruction dost Man that is mortal bring; And unto them thou say'st, Again, Ye sons of men, return.

4 Because a thousand years appear No more before thy sight, Than yesterday, when it is past, Or than a watch by night.

5 As with an overflowing flood Thou sweepest them, and as the grass They grow as sleep, and as the grass That grows at noon are they.

6 At noon it flourisheth and grows, Cut down at eve doth fade; For by thine anger we're consumed, Thy wrath makes us afraid.

7 All our iniquities thou dost Before thy presence place; Our secret sins dost set before The brightness of thy face.

8 For in thine anger all our days Are passing to an end; And one as late that hath been told, Our fleeting years we spend.

9 The years our days on earth do make, Are threescore years and ten; Or if there is more strength in some And they fourscore attain;

10 Yet doth the strength of such old men But grief and labor prove; For it is soon cut off, and we, Thy honours, and soon remove.

11 Thy wrath's according to thy fear; Who knows the power great? Teach us that we our days may count, Our hearts on wisdom set.

12 Return again to us, O Lord, How long time shall it be? Let it repeat itself now for those That servants are to thee.

13 O with thy tender mercies, Lord, O early satisfy; So all our days we will rejoice, We will be glad in thee.

14 According as the days have been, When we were great in our had, And years wherein we'll have seen, So do thou make us glad.

15 O let thy work and pow'r appear Thy servants' face before; And show to all their children dear Thy glory evermore.

16 And let the beauty of the Lord Our God be to us upon; The labors of our hands confirm, Establish them each one.

PSALM 90. L. M. 6 lines.

1 LORD, thou hast been our dwelling-Place From age to age, from race to race, Before the mountains were brought forth, Or ever thou hadst formed the earth, From years which now beginning had To years numbering, thou art the Lord.

2 Thou turnest man to dust again, And say'st, Return, ye sons of men. As yesterday, when past, appears, So in thine sight a thousand years, They like a day are in thy sight, Yes, like a passing watch by night.

3 As with a flood thou mak'st them pass; They like a sleep are, like the grass, That in the morning may be seen To grow and flourish, fresh and green; At evening by the hand of death, It is cut down, and withereth.

4 For in thine anger we're consumed, And by thy wrath to trouble doomed; Not in thy sight our sins dost place, Our secret sins before thy face, For in thy wrath our days we spend, Our years like tales which quickly end.

5 Our days are threescore years and ten, And if, through strength, fourscore, yet 'Tis labor, sorrow and decay; 'Tis soon cut off;—we fly away, Who knows the pow'r thine anger hath? As is thy fear so is thy wrath.

6 O teach thou us to count our days, And set our hearts on wisdom's ways, Return, O Lord, at length relent, And for thy servants' sake relent, How long—how long will it be? Return, that we may joy in thee.

7 O do thy mercy soon impart To satisfy our longing heart, So we rejoice shall all our days, And happy be in thee always, For days of grief that we have had, And years of evil, make us glad.

8 Thy work unto thy servants show, Thy glory let their children know, And let there be on us bestowed The beauty of the Lord our God; The work accomplished by our hand Let it by thee established stand.

PSALM 91. C. M.

1 THE man that doth in secret place Of God Most High reside, Beneath the shade of him that is The Almighty shall abide.

2 I of the Lord my God will say, He is my refuge still; He is my fortress, and my God; And trust in him I will.

3 Assuredly he shall thee save, And give deliverance From cunning fowler's snare, and from The deadly pestilence.

4 His feathers shall thee hide; thy trust Beneath his wings shall be; And buckler unto thee.

5 Thou shalt not need to be afraid For terrors of the night; Nor for the arrow that doth fly By day, while it is light;

6 Nor for the pestilence, that walks In darkness secretly; Nor for destruction, that doth waste At noon-day openly.

7 A thousand at thy side shall fall, On thy right hand shall lie Ten thousand; yet into thee It shall not ever come again.

8 Thou with thy eyes shalt on it look, And a beholder be, And thou therein thy just reward Of wicked men shalt see.

9 Because the Lord, who ever is My refuge and my God, E'en God Most High, has been with thee Thy habitation made;

10 No plague shall nearly dwell on thee, No evil thee befall; For thee to keep in all thy ways His angels charge he shall.

11 They in their hands shall bear thee up, Still waiting thee again; Lest thou at any time shouldst dash Thy foot against a stone.

12 Upon the adder thou shalt tread, And on the lion strong; Thy foot on dragons' troupe shall tread, And on the lions young.

13 Because on us he set his love, I'll save and set him free; Because my great name he hath known, I will him set on high.

14 He'll call on me, I'll answer him; I will be with him still, In trouble, to deliver him, And honor him I will.

15 A length of days to his desire I will on him bestow, And in his kindness unto him I will my salvation show.

PSALM 91. L. M.

1 THE man who once has found abode I Within the secret place of God, Shall with Almighty God abide, And in his shadow safely hide.

2 I of the Lord my God will say, He is my refuge and my stay; To him for safety I'll flee, My God, in him my trust shall be.

3 He shall with all protecting care Preserve thee from the fowler's snare; When fearful plagues around prevail, No fatal stroke shall thee assail.

4 His outspread pinions shall thee hide; Through his wings shalt thou confide; His faithfulness shall ever be A shield and buckler unto thee.

5 No nightly terrors shall alarm, No deadly shaft by day shall harm, Nor pestilence that seeks thy life, Nor plagues that waste in noon-day light.

6 A thousand at thy side shall lie, At thy right hand ten thousand die, But thou unharmed, secure, shalt see What wicked ones reward shall be.

7 Because thy trust in God alone, Thy dwelling-place the Highest One, No evil shall upon thee come, Nor plague approach thy guarded home.

8 O'er thee his angels he commands, To bear thee softly in their hands; To keep thee from the snare of death, Nor dash thy foot against a stone.

9 Thy foot shall crush the adder's head, On lions and on dragons tread; And since on me he set his love, I will be constant Saviour prove.

10 Because in him my name is dear, I'll him exalt above all fear, To us he'll lift his earnest cry, And I will answer from on high.

11 I will be near when troubles press; I'll save him, and with honors bless; With life he satisfied shall be, And my salvation he shall see.

PSALM 92. C. M.

1 TO render thanks unto the Lord It is a conely thing, And to thy name, O thou Most High, Due praise shalt thou sing.

2 Thy loving-kindness to show forth, When shines the morning light; And to declare thy faithfulness With pleasure ev'ry night.

3 Upon a ten-stringed instrument, And on the psaltery, Upon the harp with solemn sound, And grave sweet melody.

4 For thou, Jehovah, by thy work, Hast made my heart right glad; And I will triumph in the works Which by thy hands were made.

5 How great, O Lord, are all thy works, A deep thy ev'ry thought, A foolish person doth not know, Fool's mind—'and it is not.

6 When they thy wicked art, spring up And rise upon the green waves, And thy work iniquity, And thy work iniquity;

7 It is that they forevermore
May be destroyed and slain;
But O Jehovah, thou art high,
Shalt evermore remain.

8 For in thy sea, ye, all thy foes,
Shall be destroyed, O God!
And all that work iniquity
Shall be dispersed abroad.

9 But like the horn of unicorn,
My horn thou wilt exalt,
And raise on high: thou with fresh oil
Anoint me also shalt.

10 My eye shall also my desire
See on my enemies;
My ears shall of the wicked hear,
That do against me rise.

11 But like the palm-tree flourishing
Shall be the righteous one;
And he shall like the cedar grow
That is in Lebanon.

12 Those that within the house of God
Are pleased by his grace,
They shall grow up, and flourish all
In our God's holy place.

13 And in old age, when others fail,
They fruit still forth shall bring;
They shall be fat, and full of sap,
And always flourishing;

14 To show that upright is the Lord;
He is a rock to us;
And he from all righteousness
Is altogether free.

PSALM 93. C. M.

1 JEHOVAH reigns, and clothed is he
With majesty most bright;
Himself Jehovah clothes with strength,
And girds about with might.

2 The world is also firmly fixed,
That it cannot depart.
Thy throne is fixed, and thou
From everlasting art.

3 The floods, O Lord, have lifted up,
They lifted up their voice;
The floods have lifted up their waves,
And made a mighty noise.

4 But yet the Lord, that is on high,
Is mightier by far
Than noise of many waters is,
Or great billows a-ware.

5 Thy testimonies every one
In faithfulness excel;
And holiness forever, Lord,
Thy house becometh well.

PSALM 93. R. M.

1 GOD reigneth, he is clothed
With majesty most bright;
Himself Jehovah clothes with strength,
And girds about with might.

2 The world is firmly fixed,
That it can not depart;
Thy throne is fixed of old, and thou
From everlasting art.

3 The floods have lifted up,
They lifted up their voice,
The floods have lifted up their waves,
And made a mighty noise.

4 But yet the Lord, on high,
Is mightier by far
Than noise of many waters is,
Or great billows a-ware.

5 Thy testimonies all
In faithfulness excel;
And holiness forever, Lord,
Thy house becometh well.

PSALM 94. C. M.

1 O GOD the Lord, to whom alone
All vengeance doth belong;
O mighty God of vengeance, come;
Shine forth, avenging wrong.

2 Lift up thyself, thou of the earth
The sovereign Judge that art;
And unto those that are so proud,
A due reward impart.

3 How long, O mighty God, shall they
Who work iniquity—
How long shall they who wicked are
Thou triumph haughtily?

4 How long shall things so hard by them
Still uttered be and said?
And all that work iniquity
To boast themselves be hold?

5 For they thy people crush, O Lord,
Thy heritage oppress;
The widow and the stranger slay,
They kill the fatherless.

6 And yet they say, God will not see,
Nor God of Jacob know,
Ye brutish people! understand:
Fools! when will ye grow?

7 The Lord did plant the ear of man,
And hear thou shalt not hear!
He also formed the ear, and then
Shall he not clearly see?

8 He that the nettles doth correct,
Shall he not chasten you?
No knowledge; unto man doth teach,
And shall himself not know?

9 Man's thought to be but vanity
The Lord doth well discern,
Best is the man that doth not boast,
And mak' th' thy law to learn;

10 That thou mayst give him rest from days
Of sad adversity,
Until the pit be digged for them
That work iniquity.

11 Because the Lord will not cast off
His people utterly,
Nor shall his own inheritance
By him forsaken be.

12 But judgment unto righteousness
Shall ye return again;
And all shall follow after it,
That are right-hearted men.

13 C who will rise for me against
Those that do wickedly?
And who will stand for me 'gainst those
That work iniquity?

14 Unless the Lord had been my help
When I was sore oppressed,
My soul had almost in the house
Of silence been at rest.

15 When I through fear had spoken thus,
"My foot doth slip away,"
Thy mercy held me up, O Lord,
Thy goodness did me stay.

16 When anxious thoughts my heart op-
And fill my soul with grief,
The consolations of thy grace
To me afford relief.

17 Shall of iniquity the throne
Have fellowship with thee,
Which mischief, cunningly contrived,
Doth by a law decree?

18 Against the righteous: souls they join,
They ruthless blood condemn,
But of thy refuge God's the rock,
And thy defence from sin.

19 On them their own iniquity
The Lord himself shall lay,
He'll cut them off in their own sin:
The Lord our God them slay.

PSALM 95. C. M.

1 COME, let us, in songs to God,
Our cheerful voices raise,
In joyful strains let us the Book
Of our salvation praise.

2 Before his presence let us come
With praise and thankful voice;
Let us sing psalms to him with grace,
And make a joyful noise.

3 For God, a mighty God, and King,
Above all gods he is,
The depths of earth are in his hand,
The strength of hills is his.

4 To him the spacious sea belongs,
For he the same did make;
The dry land also from his hands
Is born at first did take.

5 O come, and let us worship him,
Let us bow down withal,
And in our knees adore our Lord
Our Maker, let us fall.

6 Because he only is our God;
And we the people are
Of his own pasture, and the sheep
Of his almighty care.

7 To-day, if ye his voice will hear,
Your hearts then harden not;
As they in desert did provoke
And tempt his anger hot.

8 Your fathers did me tempt and prove,
They did my working see,
And for the space of forty years
This race hath grieved me.

9 I said, This people errs in heart,
My ways they do not know:
To whom I swear in wrath, that to
My rest they should not go.

PSALM 95. L. M. 6 lines.

1 COME, and let us sing to God,
The rock of our salvation loud;
Let us in psalms our tongues employ;
Before him render thanks with joy,
The Lord is great whose praise we sing,
Above all gods a mighty King.

2 The vast deep places of the land,
And strength of hills, are in his hand;
Thus he his hills doth gird with fire,
His hands prepared the solid earth;
O come, and let us worship now,
Before the Lord our Maker bow.

3 He is our God, we are the sheep
His hand doth feed and safely keep;
If ye his voice will hear to-day,
Then harden not your hearts, as they
Who in the wilderness beheld
His mighty works, and yet rebelled.

4 Your fathers there, my works did see,
But still they proved and tempted me;
For forty years I did them bear;
I said, In heart and ways they err;
To whom in wrath I did protest,
They shall not see my promised rest.

PSALM 96. C. M.

1 SING a new song to the Lord!
Sing all the earth to God.
To God sing, bless his name, and show
His saving health abroad.

2 Among the heathen nations all
His glory do declare;
And unto all the people show
His works that wondrous are.

3 The Lord is great, and greatly he
Is to be magnified,
Ye, worthy to be feared is he Above all gods beside.

4 For all the gods are idols dumb,
Which blinded nations are;
But Jehovah's mighty hand
The heavens' created were.

5 Great honor is before his face,
And majesty divine;
Strength is within his holy place,
And there doth beauty shine.

6 O, do ye to Jehovah give
Of people every tribe,
Ye Jehovah's glory give,
And mightily bow your sacrifice.

7 The glory to Jehovah give,
That to his name is due;
O come into his courts, and bring
An offering with you.

8 And, beautified with holiness,
Bow down before the Lord,
Before his face let all the earth
Fear him with uno accord.

9 Among the heathen say, God reigns;
The world shall steadfastly
Be fixed from moving; let small Judge
The people righteously.

10 Let heav'n be glad before the Lord,
And let the earth rejoice;
Let seas, and all that is therein,
Cry out, and make a noise.

11 Let fields rejoice, and every thing
That springs of life the earth;
Then woods and every tree shall sing
With gladness and with mirth.

12 Before the Lord; because he comes,
To judge the earth come he;
He'll judge the world with righteousness,
The people faithfully.

PSALM 96. L. M.

1 SING a new song to the Lord;
Sing all the earth and bless his
From day to day his praise record, (name,
The Lord's redeeming grace proclaim.)

2 Tell all the world his wondrous way,
Tell heathen nations far and near;
Great is the Lord, and great his praise,
Fared more than gods that nations fear.

3 The heathen gods are idols vain;
He made the heaves, and he supports,
Both light and honor lead his train,
While strength and beauty fill his courts.

4 O give the Lord, ye tribes and tongues,
O give the Lord due praise, and song;
Give strength and glory in your songs,
Come, throng his courts, and offerings
bring.

5 O fear and bow, adorned with grace,
And tell each land that God is King.
He fixed the earth's unchanging base;
Just judgments to the world he'll bring.

6 Let heav'n's exult, let earth rejoice,
Let seas and all their fulness roar;
Let waving fields lift high their voice,
The wood's wild joy in songs shall soar.

7 So let them shout before our God,
For lo, he comes, he comes with might,
To wield the sceptre and the rod,
To judge the world with truth and right.

PSALM 97. C. M.

1 THE Lord Jehovah reigns as King,
Let all the earth rejoice;
And let the multitude of isles
For joy lift up their voice.

2 With thickest clouds and darkness deep
The Lord himself surrounds;
His lofty throne on righteousness
And judgment just he founds.

3 Before him goes a fire; his face
He burns up like the earth and sea;
His lightning-lighten doth the world;
And smok' and shook throughout.

4 Before the Lord the hills did melt
As wax before the flame;
Before the Lord of all the earth,
When he in glory came.

5 The heav'n's declare his righteousness,
All men his glory see,
All who serve green images,
Confounded let them be.

6 They who of idols boast themselves,
Shall all be brought to shame,
O only ye gods, see that ye give
Due worship to his name,

7 When Zion heard, she joyed was,
Held Judah's daughters were;
They sang, rejoice, O Lord, because
Thy judgments did appear.

8 For thou, O Lord, art high above
All things on earth that are;
Above all other gods thou art,
Exalted very far.

9 Heals ill, all ye that love the Lord;
His saints' souls keepeth he;
And from the hands of wicked men
He sets them safe and free.

10 For them that follow righteousness
Is saw a joyful light,
And gladness great is sown for them
That are in heart upright.

11 Ye righteous, in the Lord rejoice;
Express your thankfulness,
When ye into your memory
Do call his holiness.

PSALM 97. L. M.

1 JEHOVAH reigns; let earth be glad,
And all her islands clap their hands,
With clouds and darkness let him lead,
His throne in right and judgment stand.

2 A fiery stream before him goes,
And burns around him all his foes;
His lightning shafts, in vengeance hurled,
Blaze lurid o'er the trembling world.

3 Like wax the mountains melt away,
Before his majesty divine;
The heavens his righteousness display,
All nations see his glory shine.

4 He shamed who idols serve and heat,
For him, ye gods, with all your host;
When Zion glad, thy judgments heard,
Then Judah's daughters praised the Lord.

5 Exalted is thy throne, O Lord,
Above all gods, above all lands;
Hearts evil, ye who serve none,
His saints be free from wicked lands.

6 For all the righteous sown in light,
And joy for men in heart upright,
Ye saints rejoice in God; him bless,
Whom nursing on his holiness.

PSALM 98. C. M.

The church hath made known;
His justice in the heathen's sight
His upoly hath shown.

All ends of earth have seen.

PSALM 99. C. M.

1 THE Lord Jehovah reigns as King, Let all the people quake; He sits between the cherubim, Let earth be moved and shake.

2 Jehovah is in Zion great, Above all people high; Thy fearful, great, and holy name, O let them magnify.

3 The King's strength also judgment Thou settest equity; Thou judgment just dost execute In Jacob righteousness.

4 The Lord our God exalt on high, And reverence us most holy, Before his footstool worship him: The Holy One is he.

5 Moses and Aaron, with his priests, Samuel, with them that call Upon his name: those called on God, And he them answered all.

6 Within the pillar of the cloud He unto them did speak; His statutes they observed; the laws He gave they did not break.

7 O Lord, our God, thou wast a God, Who didst them answer send; Though punishing their iniquities, Thou pardon didst extend.

8 Do ye exalt the Lord our God, And at his holy hill Do ye him worship; for the Lord, Our God, is holy still.

PSALM 99. 8. M.

3 The King's strength judgment loves; Thou justice dost maintain; Both righteousness and judgment thou In Jacob dost sustain.

4 Do ye exalt the Lord, Our God in praise land; And at his footstool worship him, For holy is our God.

5 Moses and Aaron, priests, Midst those that on him call, And Samuel, too, those called on God, And he them answered all.

6 In pillar of a cloud, To them Jehovah spake; He testimonies gave to them, And laws they did not break.

7 O Lord, our gracious God, Thou didst an answer send; Though taking vengeance on their deeds, Thou pardon didst extend.

8 Do ye exalt the Lord; Our God in praise land, And worship at his holy hill, For holy is our God.

PSALM 100. C. M.

1 ALL ye lands, unto the Lord Make ye a joyful noise, Serve God with gladness, and before Him come with singing voice.

2 Know ye the Lord that he is God; He for himself we do not see; We are his people, and the sheep Within his pasture fed.

3 Enter his gates and courts with thanks, His praise in songs psalms; To him express your thankfulness, And ever bless his name.

4 Because the Lord our God is good, His mercy never ends; And unto generations all His faithfulness extends.

PSALM 100. L. M.

1 ALL people that on earth do dwell, Sing to the Lord with cheerful voice; Him serve with mirth, his praise forth tell, Come ye before him and rejoice.

2 Know that the Lord is God indeed; Without our aid he did us make; We are his flock, he doth us feed, And for his sheep he doth us take.

3 O enter then his gates with joy, Within his courts his praise proclaim; Let thankful songs your tongues employ, O bless and magnify his name.

4 Because the Lord our God is good, His mercy is forever sure; His truth at all times firmly stand, And shall from age to age endure.

3 O enter his temple with praise, His portals with thankful acclaim; Thy voices in thanksgiving raise, And bless ye his glorious name.

4 For good is Jehovah the Lord, His mercy to us never ends; His faithfulness true to his word, Through ages unending extends.

PSALM 101. C. M.

1 MERCY will and judgment sing, Lord, I will sing to thee, With wisdom in a perfect way Shall my behavior be.

2 O when, in kindness unto me, With thou be desired to come? I with a perfect heart will walk Within my house at home.

3 I will endure no wicked thing Before mine eyes to be; I hate their work that inn salute, It shall not cleave to me.

4 A snibborn and a froward heart Depart quite from me shall; A person given to wickedness I will not know at all.

5 I'll not him of that slandereth His neighbor pry; The haughty heart I will not bear, Nor him whose looks are high.

6 Upon the faithful of the land Mine eyes shall be, that they May dwell with me; he shall me serve Who walks in perfect way.

7 Who of deceit a worker is In my house shall not dwell; Nor in my presence shall remain The man that lies doth tell.

8 Yes, all the wicked of the land I early will destroy; And from God's city cut them off That work iniquity.

PSALM 101. 7a and 6a.

1 O Mercy and of judgment, O Lord, I'll sing to thee. In wisdom and uprightness Shall my behavior be.

2 O when wilt thou, Jehovah, To me in kindness come? With heart sincere and perfect I'll walk within my home.

3 No work of sin I'll suffer Before my eyes to be; I hate the work of sinners, It shall not cleave to me.

4 The man whose heart is froward, Shall from my sight depart; No man who in sin takes pleasure Will I consent to know.

5 The tongue of secret slanderer Shall from my sight depart; High looks I will not suffer, For yet the haughty heart.

6 My eyes shall seek the faithful, That they may dwell with me; The man who walks uprightly, He shall my servant be.

7 No man of works doctifull Within my house shall dwell; Nor in my sight shall tarry The man who lies doth tell.

8 I'll everywhere on sinners Inflict a swift reward; To free from evil-doers The city of the Lord.

PSALM 103. C. M.

1 JEHOVAH, hear my pray'r, and let My cry come up to thee; And in the day of my distress Hide not thy face from me.

2 Give ear to me; what time I call, To answer me make haste; For, as a hearth, my bones are burnt, My days, like smoke, do waste.

3 My smitten heart is like the grass, When withered by the heat; As no I have forgotten thee, My daily bread to eat.

4 By reason of my graving voice My bones cleave to my skin, Like pelican in wilderness, Forsaken I have been.

5 I like an owl in desert am, That nightly there doth sit; I watch, and like a sparrow am On the house-top alone.

6 My bitter foes reproach me that Upon me all the day; And, being mad at me, with rage Against me sworn are they.

7 Because I ashes eaten have Like bread, in sorrows deep; My drink I also mingled have With tears that I do weep.

8 Thy indignation and thy wrath Did cause this grief to me; For thou hast lifted me on high, And cast me down again.

9 My days are like a fleeting shade, No waiting do they pass; And I am withered as a way, Ev'n like the falling grass.

10 But thou, O Lord, forever art, And thy remembrance shall Continually endure, and be Shall thy remembrance ever be.

11 Thou shalt arise, and merry have Upon thy Zion yet; The time to favor her is come, The time that thou hast set.

12 For in her rubbish and her stones Thy servants pleasure take; Yet, they the very dust thereof Do favor for her sake.

13 So shall the heathen people fear The Lord's most holy name; And all the kings on earth shall dread Thy glory and thy fame.

14 When Zion, by the mighty Lord Built up again shall be; In glory then and majesty To men appear shall he.

15 The prayer of the destitute He surely will regard; The cry of the poor he will not despise, By him it shall be heard.

16 For generations yet to come This truth they shall record; So shall the people that shall be Created praise the Lord.

17 He from his sanctuary's height Hath downward cast his eye; Jehovah on the earth beauteous Did look from heaven high;

18 That of the mournful prisoner The groanings he might hear, To set them free that unto death By men appointed are;

19 That they in Zion may declare The Lord's most holy name, And publish in Jerusalem The praises of the same;

20 When all the people gather shall In troops with one accord, When kingdoms shall assembled be To serve the highest Lord.

21 My wonted strength and force he hath Alas'd in the way; My days he also shortened hath, Thus therefore did I say:

22 My God, O take me not away Ere half my days are past; Through generations all, thy years Eternally do last.

23 The firm foundation of the earth Of old time thou hast laid; The heavens also are the work Which thine own hands have made.

24 Thou shalt for evermore endure, But they shall perish all; Like to a garment, they shall fade, Like to a garment, shall;

25 Thou, as a vestment, shalt them change, And changed they all shall be; But thou art still the same, thy years Are to eternity.

26 The children of thy servants shall Continually endure; And in thy sight, O Lord, their soul Shall be established sure.

PSALM 103. L. M.

1 LOBB, hear my pray'r, and let My cry have speedy access unto thee; In day of my calamity Hide not thy face from me.

2 O hear me when I call; that day An answer speedily return; My days, like smoke, consume away, As a hearth, my bones do burn.

3 My heart is smitten, and like grass When withered by the scorching heat; My days in weariness I pass, And I forget my bread to eat.

4 By reason of my graving within, And voice of my unceasing groans, My flesh is all consumed, my skin, All parched, doth cleave unto my bones.

5 The pelican of wilderness, That nightly there doth sit; And, sparrow-like, compensation, Upon the house-top I do sit.

6 All day long am made a scorn, Reproached by my malicious foes; The malins are against me sworn, The men against me that arise.

7 Because I ashes eaten have, Have eaten as my daily bread; And of the tears which I did weep I with my drink a mixture made.

8 Thy indignation unappeas'd, And thy force with have caus'd this pain, Because, O Lord, thou hast me mis'd, And thou hast cast me down again.

9 My days of life with haste decline; They like the shadow a setting pass; And I am withered as a way, And wither like the falling grass.

10 But thou, O Lord, shalt still endure, From change and all mutation free, And to all generations sure Shall thy remembrance ever be.

11 Thou shalt arise, and merry yet Thou to mount Zion shalt extend; Now is the time for thee to act, That thou to her shall most extend.

12 Thy saints take pleasure in her stones, Her very dust to them is dear; All heathen lands shall kingly thrones On earth thy glorious name shall fear.

13 The Lord in glory shall appear, When Zion he again repairs; He shall regard and lend his ear To all the people's humble pray'r;

14 The afflicted's pray'r he will not scorn, This ever shall be our cry and cry; And generations yet unborn Shall praise and magnify the Lord.

15 He from his holy place heaven'd down, The earth he viewed from heaven high; To hear the prisoner's cry and groan, And free them that are doom'd to die;

16 And Zion, and Jerusalem, His name and praise may we record; When people and the kingdoms we do Assemble all to praise the Lord.

17 My strength he weakened in the way, My days of life he short hath made, My God, O take me not away In mid-time of my days, I said.

18 Thy years through all the ages last, And thou of old, O Lord, hast laid The earth's foundation firm and fast; Thy mighty hands the heav'n's have made.

19 Thou shalt remain, they perish shall, They all like garments shall decay; Thou shalt as vestures change them all, They shall be changed, and pass away.

20 But from all changes thou art free; Thy endless years do last for aye; Thy servants, and their seed who be, Established shall before thee stay.

PSALM 103. 7a.

1 HEAR my prayer, O Lord, attend, Let my cry to thee ascend; From me hide not thy face, In the day of my distress.

2 Unto me incline thy ear; When I call, make haste to hear; For my days to smoke are turned, As a hearth my bones are burned.

3 As the grass my heart doth fade, I forget to eat my bread; Through my noise of ceaseless groans Cleaves my flesh to all my bed.

4 Like the pelican am I, Like the owl in desert dry; Sparrow-like on house-top alone, Through the sleepless night I groan.

8 From my foes, who speak with scorn,
Vile reproach I've daily borne;
They that mad against me are,
In their rage against me swear.

9 I ate ashes for my bread,
Mixed my drink with tears I shed;
Till, for thy discipline, O Lord,
And thy wrath upon me poured.

7 Thou hast lifted me on high,
But cast down again am I;
All my days as shadows pass;
And I a sinner like the grass.

8 But, O Lord, thou shalt endure,
And the name, for evermore;
Thou to mind shall men recall
Through the coming ages all.

9 Thou shalt not for Zion rise,
Viewing her with pitying eyes;
Now shall Zion favor see,
Till the time decreed by thee.

10 For thy saints thy promise trust,
Loving ev'n her stones and dust,
So shall heathen fear thy name,
All earth's kings thy glorious fame.

11 Zion's walls built up shall be;
All shall praise that thy glory see,
He the destitute shall hear,
And will not despise their prayer.

12 Of this truth shall record be,
That the coming times may see,
I'll shall into being bring,
People, that his praise shall sing.

13 From his sanctuary high
He hath looked with pitying eye;
Earth he slowed from heaven, his throne,
Listening to the voice of groan.

14 From the bonds in which they lie
Freeing those condemned to die;
This in Zion they'll proclaim,
And in Salem praise his name.

15 When the people of the earth
Gathered are with one accord,
When to serve the Lord they meet,
Through the light Kingdoms of the earth unite.

16 In the way he made me weak,
Life he shortened, then I awoke;
"Take me not, O God, away,
In the midst of life, I pray."

17 Lord, thy years without an end
Through the ages all extend;
Earth's foundations thou hast laid,
Thou of old the heavens hast made.

18 They shall speedily decay,
But thy years shall last for aye;
Yes, the works we now behold
All like garments shall be old.

19 As a restorer shall they be,
They shall all be changed by thee;
Yet unchanged, as years extend,
Thy years, Lord, shall have no end.

20 Children of thy heritage,
Shall endure through every age,
And their sons from race to race
Shall not fall before thy face.

PSALM 103. C. M.

1 O THOU my soul, bless God the Lord;
And all that live within the Lord,
Be lifted up, his holy name
To magnify and bless.

2 Bless, O my soul, the Lord thy God,
And not forgetful be
Of all his gracious benefits
He hath bestowed on thee.

3 All thy iniquities who doth
Most graciously forgive;
Who thy diseases all and pains
Doth heal, and thee relieve.

4 Who doth redeem thy life, that thou
To death mayest not descend;
Who thee with loving-kindness doth,
And tender mercies crown:

5 Who with abundance of good things
Doth satisfy thy mouth;
And even as the eagle's nest,
He hath renewed thy youth.

6 God righteous judgment executes
For all oppressed ones,
His ways to bless, he his acts
Made known to Jacob's sons.

7 The Lord Jehovah gracious is,
And he is merciful,
Long-suffering and slow to wrath,
In kindness plentiful.

8 He will not chide continually,
Nor keep his anger still,
With us he dealt not as we sinned,
Nor did requite us ill.

9 For as the heaver in its height
The earth surmounteth far;
So great to those that do him fear
His tender mercies are:

10 As far as east is distant from
The west, so far hath he
From us removed in tender love,
All our iniquity.

11 Such pity as a father hath,
Pitied his children dear!
Like pity shows the Lord to them
Who worship him in fear.

12 For he remembers we are dust,
And he our frame will know,
Fruit man, his days are like the grass,
As flow'rs in field he grows.

13 For ever it the wind both pass,
And it away it goes,
And of the place where once it was
It shall no more be known.

14 But unto those that fear the Lord
His mercy never ends;
And to their children's children all
His righteousness extends.

15 To such as keep his covenant,
And walk in wisdom's way;
Who mindful are of his commands,
That they may then obey.

16 Jehovah hath prepared his throne
In heavens firm to stand;
And ev'ry thing that being hath
His kingdom doth command.

17 O ye his angels, that excel
In strength, bless ye the Lord!
Ye who obey what he commands,
And hearken to his word.

18 O bless and magnify the Lord,
Ye glorious hosts of his;
Ye ministers, that do his will,
Whate'er his pleasure is.

19 O bless the Lord, all ye his works,
Wherewith the world is stored,
In his dominions everywhere,
My soul, bless thou the Lord.

PSALM 103. 8 and 7s.

1 O MY soul, bless his name;
All within me bless his name;
Bless, Jehovah, and forget not
All his mercies to proclaim.

2 Who forgives all thy transgressions,
Thy diseases all who heal;
Who redeems thee from destruction,
Who with thee so kindly deal.

3 Who with tender mercies crows thee,
Who with goodness fills thy mouth,
So that even like the eagle
Thou hast been restored to youth.

4 In his righteousness, Jehovah
Will deliver those distressed;
He will execute just judgment
In the cause of all oppressed.

5 He made known his ways to Moses,
And his acts to Israel's race;
God is plentiful in mercy,
Slow to anger, rich in grace.

6 He will not forever chide us,
Nor keep anger in his mind,
Heath not doil as we offend,
Nor rewarded as we sinned.

7 For as high, as is the heaven,
Far above the earth below;
Ever great to us that fear him,
Is the mercy we will show.

8 Far as east from west is distant,
He hath put away our sin;
Like the pity of a father
Heath the Lord's compassion been.

9 Well he knows our frame, remembering
We are dust, our days like grass;
Man is like the flower blooming,
Till the hot winds o'er it pass.

10 Then 'tis gone, and is remembered
By its former place no more;
But on them that fear Jehovah
Heats his mercy evermore.

11 As it was without beginning,
So it lasts without an end;
To their children's children ever
Shall his righteousness extend.

12 Unto such as keep his cov'nant,
And are steadfast in his way;
Unto those who will remember
His commands and obey.

13 In the heavens high, Jehovah
Hath for him prepared a throne,
And throughout his vast dominion
All his works his power shall own.

14 Bless Jehovah, ye his angels,
Spirits that excel in might;
Ye who hear what he commands you,
Ye that do it with delight.

15 Bless and magnify Jehovah,
All ye hosts that do his will;
Ye his servants, ever ready
All his pleasure to fulfil.

16 Bless Jehovah, all his creatures
Ever under his control;
All throughout his vast dominion;
Bless Jehovah, O my soul.

PSALM 104. C. M.

1 BLESS God, my soul, O Lord my God,
Thou art exceeding great;
With honor and with majesty
Thou clothed art in state.

2 With light, as with a robe, thyself
Thou coverest as I shall live;
And, like the curtain of a tent,
The heavens stretchest out.

3 He of his chambers doth the beams
Within the waters lay;
He doth the clouds his curtain make,
On wings of wind make way.

4 He doth the flames his ministers,
The winds his angels make;
He earth's foundations firmly laid
That it should never shake.

5 Thou dost it cover with the deep,
As with a garment spread;
The waters stood above the hills,
When thou the word hast said.

6 But at the voice of thy rebuke
They fled, and would not stay;
They at thy thunder's dreadful voice
Did hasten East away.

7 They by the mountains do ascend,
And by the valley-ground
Descend again to that same place
Which thou for them hast found.

8 To them a limit thou hast set,
Over which they may not go,
That they not return again
The earth to overflow.

9 He to the valleys sends the springs,
Which run about the hills;
They to all beams of field give drink,
And all asses drink their fill.

10 The fowls of heaven their dwellings
Bless each flowing spring;
And there among the branches they
With joyful voices sing.

11 He from his chambers watereth
The hills when they are dried;
And with the fruit of these thy works,
The earth is satisfied.

12 He makes the grass for cattle grow,
He makes the herb to spring;
For use of man, that food to him
He from the earth may bring.

13 And wine, that to the heart of man
Doth cheerfulness impart;
Oh! that his face make shine, and bread
That strengtheneth his heart.

14 The trees of God are full of life;
The cedars great that stand
On Lebanon, all planted were
By his almighty hand.

15 Where birds a place of safety choose
In which their nests to make;
As for the works, the lofty firm
They for their dwelling take.

16 Wild goats a place of refuge find
Upon the mountains high;
The conies also to the rocks
Do for their safety fly.

17 He sets the moon in heav'n, thereby
The seasons to discern;
From him the sun his certain time
Of going down doth learn.

18 'Tis darkness maketh, 'tis night, then
Of forests creep about;
The lions young to roar for prey,
And seek their meat from God.

19 The sun doth rise, and home they flock,
Down in their dens they lie,
Man goes to work, his labor he
Doth to the evening ply.

20 How manifold, O Lord, thy works,
In wisdom wonderful,
Thou ev'ry one of them hast made;
Earth's of thy riches full.

21 So is the great and spacious sea,
Wherein things creeping are,
Which numbered cannot be; and beasts
Both great and small are there.

22 The ships go there, and there thou
Leviathan to play;
They walk on them, and from thy hand
In due time fed are they.

23 And what thy kindness gives to them
They gather for their food;
Thine hand thou open't lib'rally,
And they are filled with good.

24 Thou hid'st thy face; they troubled are,
Their breath thou take'st away;
They die, and to their kindred dust
Return again do they.

25 Thy Spirit then thou sendest forth,
And they created are;
The face of earth thou dost revive,
And all things new appear.

26 The glory of the mighty Lord
For ever shall endure;
And in his works Jehovah shall Rejoice for evermore.

27 Earth, as affrighted, trembleth all,
If he on it but look;
And if the mountains he do touch,
They presently do smoko.

28 I to the Lord Most High will sing
So long as I shall live;
And while I being here I will
To my God praises give.

29 Of him my meditation shall
Sweet thoughts to me afford;
And for me, I will rejoice
In God, my only Lord.

30 From earth let sinners be consumed,
Let ill men no more be;
O that my soul, bless thou the Lord,
Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM 104. C. M.

1 GIVE thanks to God, call on his name;
To men his deeds make known,
Sing ye to him, sing psalms; proclaim
His wondrous works each one.

2 To glory in his holy name
Unite with one accord;
And let the heart of ev'ry one
Rejoice that seeks the Lord.

3 The Lord Almighty, and his strength,
With steadfast hands seek ye;
His blessed and his gracious face
Seek ye continually.

4 Remember all his mighty deeds,
The wisdom he hath done,
The righteous judgments of his mouth,
Remember them each one.

5 O ye the seed of Abraham,
Who served him faithfully;
Ye sons of Jacob whom he chose,
Keep these in memory.

6 Because he, and he only, is
The mighty Lord our God;
In all his righteous judgments are
In all the earth abroad.

7 His cov'nant he remembered hath,
That it may ever stand;
To whomsoever generations he
His promise did command.

8 Which cov'nant he firmly made
With faithful Abraham,
And unto Isaac, by his oath,
He did renew the same:

9 And unto Jacob, for a law,
He made it firm and sure,
A covenant to Isaac,
Which ever should endure.

10 He said, "I Canaan's land will give
For heritage to you;
While they were strangers there, and for,
In number very few did you."

11 While yet they went from land to land,
Without a sure abode;
And while through many kingdoms they
Did wander far abroad;

12 Yet notwithstanding, suffered he
No man to do them wrong;
Yes, for their sake he did reprove
The Kings, who were great and strong.

13 He said, these... anointed are,
Touch not, nor do them wrong;
Nor do the prophets any harm
That are my belonging.

14 He called for famine on the land,
And took the staff of bread;
But yet he sent a man before,
By whom they should be fed;

15 Ev'n Joseph, whom, I'm moved,
Said for a slave did they;
Whose feet they with the fetters hurt,
And he in bonds lay they.

16 Until the time that his word came
To give him liberty;
The word and purpose of the Lord
Did him in prison try.

17 Then sent the king, and did command
That he enlarged should be;
In that the people's ruler was
Did sent to set him free.

18 To be the lord of all his house
He raised him, as most fit;
That of all that he possessed
He did the charge commit!

19 That at his pleasure he might bid
The prince of the land;
And also make his senators
True wisdom understand.

20 The people then of Israel
Drove into Egypt came;
And Jacob for a time sojourned
Within the land of Ham.

21 And he did greatly by his pow'r
Increase his people there;
And stronger than their enemies
They by his blessing were.

22 Their heart he then to hatred turned Against his people there,
To deal in subtilty with those
Who his own servants were.

23 His servant Moses then he sent
And Aaron, chosen one,
And they the mountains he did great,
In land of Ham, made known.

He turned their waters into blood,
And he their fish did slay.

45 The land in plenty brought forth
In chambers of their kings.
His word all sorts of fish and fowl
In all their borders brings.

46 Hall stones for ruin, and flaming fire
Into their land he sent;
And he their vines and fig-trees smote;
Trees of their coasts he rent.

47 He spake, and caterpillars came,
And locusts did abound;
Which in their land all herbs consumed,
And fruits of all their ground.

48 He smote all first-born in their land,
Chief of their strength each one.
With gold and silver brought them forth,
Weak in their tribes were none.

49 Egypt was glad when forth they went,
Their fear on them did light.
He spread a cloud for covering,
And fire to shine by night.

50 They asked, and quails he brought:
Of heavens killed he them,
He opened rocks, floods gushed, and ran
In deserts like a stream.

51 For on his holy promise he,
And servant Abraham thought,
With joy his people he elect
With gladness, forth he brought.

52 And so the heathen's land to them,
He for possession gave;
That of the people's labor they Inheritance might have.

53 That they his statutes might observe
According to his laws obey,
And that they might his laws obey,
Give praise to the Lord.

PSALM 106. C. M.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord, and give him
For bountiful he is: [thanks,
His tender mercy shall endure
To all eternity.

2 God's mighty works who can express?
Or show forth all his power?
O how are they that judgment keep,
And justly do always.

3 Remember me, O Lord, with love,
Which thou to thine doest bear;
With thy salvation, O my God,
To visit me draw near.

4 That I thy chosen's good may see,
And in thy joy rejoice.
And may with thine inheritance
Exult with cheerful voice.

5 We with our fathers have transgressed,
And done iniquity;
With them we have transgressors been,
We have done wickedly.

6 The wonders great, which thou, O Lord,
Didst work in Egypt land,
Our fathers, though they saw, yet them
They did not understand:

7 And they thy mercies' multitude
Kept not in memory;
Dut at the sea, ev'n the Red sea,
Provoked him grievously.

8 Yet notwithstanding he them saved,
Ev'n for his own name's sake;
That so he might, to be well known,
His mighty power make.

9 The Red sea also he rebuked,
And then dried up it was:
Through depths, as through the wilderness,
He made them safely pass.

10 From hands of him that hated them,
He did his people deliver;
And from the enemy's cruel hand
To them redemption gave.

11 The waters overwhelmed their foes,
Not one was left alive.
Then they believed his word, and praise
To him in songs did give.

12 But soon they did his mighty works
Unthankfully forget,
And on his counsel and his will
Did not with patience wait,

13 But much did lust in wilderness,
And God is desert sent;
He gave them what they sought, but to
Their soul he loathsome sent.

14 Moreover Moses, in the camp,
They envied without cause;
At Aaron too, the saint of God,
Inflamed their envy was.

15 The earth did therefore open wide,
Andathan did he ever press;
And all Abraham's company
It covered in that hour.

16 And likewise 'mong their company
A fire was kindled then;
And so the hot consuming flame
Burnt up those wicked men.

17 Yet they at Forch made a calf,
A molten image they:
Their glory changed to form of ox
That in the pastures grazed.

18 They soon forgot the mighty God,
Who had their Saviour been,
By whom such great things brought to
They had in Egypt seen.

19 In land of Ham his wonders works,
Things terrible did he,
When he his mighty hand and arm
Stretched out at the Red sea.

20 He said he would them all destroy,
Had not, his wrath to stay,
He chosen Moses stood in breach,
That them he should not slay.

21 Yea, they despised the pleasant land,
None did believe his word,
But murmur'ing in their tents, refused
To hearken to the Lord.

22 In desert therefore them to slay
He lifted up his hand:
Through nations he o'erthrow their seed,
And scatter in each land.

23 They unto Bull-poor did Themselves associate;
The sacrifices of the dead
They did probably eat.

24 Thus, by insensations of their own,
They much provoked his ire;
At a then upon them suddenly
The plague broke in as fire.

25 Thus 'Phin' has rose, and Justice did,
And so the plague did cease;
That to all ages counted was
To him for righteousness.

26 And at the waters, where they strove,
They did him angry make,
In such a way that ill it fared
With Moses for their sake:

27 Because they there his spirit meek
Provoked so bitterly,
That he with thurst his life did speak
Words unadvisedly.

28 Nor, as the Lord commanded them,
Did they the nations slay;
But with the heathen mingled were,
And learned of them their way.

29 Moreover they their idols served,
Which to a snare was turned.
To demon's they in sacrifice
Their sons and daughters burned.

30 In their own children's guiltless blood
Their hands they did imbrue,
Whom unto Canaan's idols they
For sacrifices slew.

31 So was the land defiled with blood,
Maintained with their own;
And with inventions of their own,
Which they did stray.

32 Against his people kindled was
The anger of the Lord,
They so provoked his wrath that he
His heritage abhorred.

33 He gave them to the heathen's power;
Their foes did them command.
Their wives he them oppressed, they were Made subject to their hand.

34 He many times delivered them;
But with their counsel so
They him provoked, that for their sin
They were brought very low.

35 Yet their affliction he beheld,
When he did hear their cry:
And he for them his covenant
Recalled to memory.

36 And in his mercies' multitude
He did repent, and make Them to be pitied of all those,
Who did them captives take.

37 Save us, O Lord our God, and us
From heathen nations bring,
That we thy holy name may thank,
Thy praises ever sing.

38 Blessed be JEOVAH, Israel's God,
To all eternity;
Let all the people say, Amen.
Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM 107. C. M.

1 PRAISE the Lord, for he is good;
His mercies lasting be.
Let God's redeemed say so, whom he
From pow'r of foes set free.

2 He gathered them from all the lands,
From north, south, east, and west.
They strayed in desert's pathless way,
No city found to rest.

3 Their weary soul within them faints,
And thurst did he ever press;
It troubles them they cry to God,
He frees them from distress.

4 Them also in a way to walk
That right is he doth guide,
And they may be a city gay,
Wherein they may abide.

5 O that men to the Lord would give
Praise for his goodness then,
And for his works of wonder done
Unto the sons of men!

6 For he the soul that longing is Duth fully satisfy:
With goodness he the hungry soul
Duth all abundantly.

7 Such as shut up in darkness deep,
And in death's shade abide,
Whom strongly hath affliction bound,
And iron fast have tied:

8 Because against the words of God
They wrought rebelliously,
And they the counsel did contemn
Of him that is Most High.

9 Their heart with sorrow he brought
They fell, no help could have,
In trouble then they cried to God,
He them from straits did save.

10 He out of darkness did them bring,
And from death's shade them take:
The bands, wherewith they had been
Did annular break.

11 O that men to the Lord would give
Praise for his goodness then,
And for his works of wonder done
Unto the sons of men!

12 Because the mighty gates of brass
In pieces he did tear;
By him in number also out
The bars of iron were.

13 Fools, for their sin, and their offence,
Be sore affliction bear;
All kind of meat their soul abhors;
To death's gates draw near.

14 In grief they cry to God; he saves
Them from their miseries.
He sends his word, them heals, and them
From their destruction frees.

15 O that men to the Lord would give
Praise for his goodness then,
And for his works of wonder done
Unto the sons of men!

16 And let them sacrifice to him
Offerings of thankfulness;
And let them slow abroad his works
In songs of joyfulness.

17 To those who go to sea in ships,
And in great waters trade,
Jehovah's works and wonders great
Are in the deep displayed.

18 For he commands, and forth in haste
The stormy tempest flies,
Which makes the sea with rolling waves
Afloat to swell and rise.

19 They mount to heav'n, then to the
They downward go again;
Their soul doth faint and melt away
With trouble and with pain.

20 They reel and stagger like one drunk,
They are as the sea's foam;
Then they to God in trouble cry,
And he relief doth send.

21 The storm is changed into a calm
At his command and will;
And so the waves which raged before,
Now quiet are and still.

22 Then they are glad, because at rest
And quiet now they be;
So to the haven he them brings,
Which they desired to see.

23 O that men to the Lord would give
Praise for his goodness then,
And for his works of wonder done
Unto the sons of men!

24 Among the people when they meet,
Let them exult with gladness;
Among assembled elders too,
In songs advance his fame.

25 He to dry land turns water-springs,
And floods to wilderness;
For sirs of those that dwell therein,
Fit land to barrenness.

26 He to deserts dry and parched
The standing water brings;
And grounds which dry and barren were
He turns to water-springs.

27 And there, for dwelling, he a place
Duth to the hungry give,
That they a city may prepare,
Wherein they in peace may live.

28 There sow the fields, and vineyards
To yield fruits of increase;
His blessing makes them multiply,
Lets not their boasts decrease.

29 Again they much diminished are,
And brought to low estate;
Through sorrow and affliction sore,
And by oppression grieved.

30 He on the princes pours contempt,
He causes them to stray,
And wanders in a wilderness,
In which there is no way.

31 Yet setteth he the poor on high,
From all his enemies take;
And he, in number like a flock,
Duth make him families.

32 They who are righteous shall rejoice,
When they the same shall see;
And, as confounded, stop their mouth
Shall all iniquity.

33 Whom is wise, and who these things
(Heaven, and thine record,
Ev'n they shall understand the love,
And kindness of the Lord.

PSALM 108. C. M.

1 MY heart is fixed, O Lord; I'll sing,
Ask ye leads melody and harp,
Myself I'll early raise.

2 I'll praise thee 'mong the people, Lord;
'Mong nations sing will I:
Above the heav'n thy mercy's great,
Thy truth doth reach the sky.

3 Be thou above the heavens, Lord,
Exalted very high,
And far above the earth do thou
Thy glory magnify!

4 That thy beloved people may
From bondage be set free:
O do thou save with thy right hand,
And answer give to me.

5 God in his holiness hath said,
In this rejoice I will;
I'll stretch mine hand, and I
Will smite down Sennacherib's vale.

6 I'll claim claim as mine by right;
Manasseh mine shall be;
My head has strength in Ephraim,
Judah gives laws for me;

7 In Hebron I will wash; my shoe
I will to Edom tread;
And o'er the land of Palestine
I will in triumph go.

8 O who is he will bring me to
The city fortified?
O who is he that of the land
Of Edom will me guide?

9 O God, who hast rejected me,
This thing will thou not do;
Ev'n thou, O God, thou who didst not
Forth with our armies go!

10 Help us from trouble, for the help
Is vain which man supplies.
Through God we'll do great acts; he shall
Tread down our enemies.

PSALM 109. L. M.

1 MY heart is firmly fixed, O God,
I'll sing and praise thy name to
My glory, harm, and late avaks. [land;
The morning I will vocal make.

2 I'll thank thee mid the nations, Lord,
Among the people praise accord;
The heavens say thy grace transcends,
And to the clouds thy truth extends.

3 Be thou o'er heavens high, O God,
Thy glory o'er the earth show;
That thy beloved face may stand,
Near us, and save with thy right hand.

4 God spoken hath with holy voice,
And I will triumph and rejoice;
I'll shew signs, and late avaks, go,
O'er Sennacherib's vale will draw the lines.

5 Manasseh, Gilead too, are mine,
On Ephraim shall my head recline;
My ruler I shall Judah grant,
In Hebron I shall wash my feet.

6 To Edom I will cast my shoe,
In triumph o'er Philistia go:
Who to the city fortified?
To Edom, who will be my guide?

7 O God, do thou our leader be,
Though we are now cast off from thee;
For mouths of wicked men to speak
Against me do not cease:

8 From trouble help, and us restore,
For vain the help that man can give;
In God will we great valor show,
And he our foes will overthrow.

PSALM 110. C. M.

1 O THOU the God of all my praise,
Do thou not hold thy peace;
For mouths of wicked men to speak
Against me do not cease:

2 The mouths of vile, deceitful men
Against me opened be;
And with a false and lying tongue
They have slandered me.

3 They did boast me round about
With words of hateful spite;
And though to them no cause I gave,
Against me they did fight.

4 They for my love became my foes,
But cowardly I prayed for peace;
Yea, ill for good and hate for love
To me they have repaid.

5 Set thou the wicked over him;
Do thou, on his right hand,
Give to his greatest enemy,
Ev'n Saba, leave to stand.

6 And when my foes shall be judged,
Condemned then let him be;
And let his prey be turned to sin,
When he shall call on thee.

7 Make for his days, and in his room
His charge another bear;
His children let be fatherless,
And his wife a widow make.

8 His children let be vagabonds,
And let continually;
And from their places desolate
Seek bread for their supply.

9 Let evildoers extortions
Catch all he hath away;
Of all for which he labored hath,
Let strangers make a prey.

10 Let there be none to pity him,
Nor any help to lend;
Nor to his children fatherless
His mercy to extend.

11 Let his posterity from earth
Cut off forever be,
And in the coming age their name
Be blotted out by thee.

12 Let his father's wickedness
Still to remembrance call;
And never let his mother's sin
Be blotted out at all.

13 But let them all before the Lord
Appear continually,
That he may whom from earth
Cut off their memory.

14 Because his mercy minded not,
But persecuted still,
The poor and needy, that he might
The broken-hearted kill.

15 As he in cursing pleasure took,
So let it to him be;
As he delighted not to bless,
So bless him not at all.

16 He cursing as a robe put on;
So let his curse reced;
Like water through his bowels flow,
And in his bones like oil.

17 And like the garment covering him,
So let it round him be,
And as a girdle wherewith he
Is girt continually.

18 From God let this be their reward
That envious are to me,
And their reward that speak against
My soul maliciously.

19 O God the Lord, for thy name's sake,
Do thou appear for me;
Since good and sweet thy mercy is,
From trouble set me free.

20 I am afflicted very much;
I weep and am in pain;
My heart within me is smitten in
And wounded very sore.

21 I like a shade declining pass,
I'm like the locust tossed;
My knees from fasting weakened are,
My flesh hath melted fast.

22 A vile reproach I also am
Made unto them all;
And they that did upon me look
Did shake their heads at all.

23 O do thou grant thy help to me,
Who art my God and Lord;
And for thy tongue mercy's sake,
Deliverance afford.

24 That they thereby may know that this
Is thy almighty hand;
And that, O Lord, thou hast done this,
They well may understand.

25 Although they curse with spite, yet,
Bless thou with loving voice; O Lord,
Thou wilt with shame when they arise;
Thy servant let rejoice.

26 Those that my adversaries are,
Let them be clothed with shame,
And as a mantle, let their own
Confusion cover them.

27 But as for me, I with my mouth
Will greatly praise the Lord;
And I among the multitude
His praises will record.

28 For at the right hand of the poor
Shall stand the Lord, since thou wilt;
To see him from all those that would
Coudann his soul to die.

PSALM 109. L. M.

1 O GOD, whom I in praise adore,
Be silent in my cause no more.
Their mouths the wicked open wide;
Against me hypocrites have lied.

2 With words of hate they throng around,
And fight, although no cause be found.
My love provokes their bitter spite,
But I in constant peace delight.

3 With evil they my good reward,
With hatred meet my kind regard.
Place him beneath the wicked's hand,
And on his right let Satan stand.

4 In judgment let his plea be turned,
And let his prayer to sin be turned.
His days be few, and in his room
To others let another come.

5 A widow let his wife be left;
His children of their sire bereft;
Let them be scattered far from home,
And begging bread through desolate roam.

6 Extortions let his substance take,
His toll a prey let strangers make.
Let him from none compassed know,
None to his orphans favor show.

7 His seed let perish in his shame,
The coming age blot out their name;
His father's sin Jehovah mind,
His mother's sin no garden find.

8 Let them with God ne'er be forgot,
Till he from earth their memory blot;
For he remembered not to show
Compassion to the sons of woe.

9 The poor and those with want distressed,
He persecuted and oppressed;
He them pursued to make his prey,
And broken-hearted ones to slay.

10 The curse he loved on him shall rest,
No blessing not, shall not be blest.
Hisself with cursing he arranged,
To him shall cursing to reward.

11 In him like water it shall flow,
Like oil through all his bones shall go;
Like oilment it shall clothe him o'er,
A girdle binding evermore.

12 Foes and accusers, from the Lord,
Shall find in cursing their reward,
Not God the Lord, for thy name's sake,
For no in mercy undertake.

13 Because thy grace is rich and free,
From all my foes deliver me,
From all my foes deliver me,
My heart without is pierced with grief.

14 Like locusts thou, like feeding shade,
By days to pass away no more,
Through many fasts my strength decline;
My knees are weak, my body pine.

15 To thee a vile reproach I'm made,
On me they look and shake the head.
O Lord, my body let never be,
In thy great mercy save thou me.

16 That this to them, Lord, may be known,
Hear by thy mighty hand be done,
They curse, but let their curse be vain;
Thy blessing, Lord, let me obtain.

17 When thou thy arise shamed let them be,
But make thy servant glad in thee.
Let feet be covered with disgrace,
And mantle o'er with shame their face.

18 My mouth shall greatly praise the Lord,
Yes, with the throng his praise reced;
For on the poor's right hand shall he Stand up, his soul from wrong to free.

PSALM 110. C. M.

1 JEHOVAH to my Lord thou said,
Sit thou at my right hand,
Until I make thy foes a stool,
On which thy feet may stand.

2 The Lord shall out of Zion send,
The rod of thy great power;
In midst of all thine enemies
Be thou the governor.

3 A willing people in the day
Of pow'r shall come to thee,
In holy beauties from mor'n's womb;
Thy youth like dew shall be.

4 The Lord hath sworn, and from his oath
He never will depart,
Of th' anker of Micah's oath
A priest thou ever art.

5 The glorious and mighty Lord,
That sits at thy right hand,
Shall, in his day of wrath, strike through
The kings that him withstand.

6 Among the heathen he shall judge,
The nations fill with dread,
And over all the countries wide
He wound shall every head.

7 The brook that runneth in the way
With drink shall him supply;
And, for this cause, in triumph he
Shall lift his head on high.

PSALM 110. S. M.

1 PRaise Lord to my Lord said,
At my right hand sit thou,
Until I make thy enemies
Beneath thy feet to bow.

2 Thy rod of strength the Lord
Shall out of Zion send,
And over all thy enemies
Shall thy pow'r extend.

3 And in the day when thou
Doest thy great power take,
They people shall themselves to thee
Do as will off'ring make.

4 In basements, holy robes,
Armed they come to thee;
As dew-drops from the morning womb,
Thy youth shall ever be.

5 The Lord an oath hath sworn,
An oath he will not break;
Forever like Micah's oath,
Thy priesthood I will make.

6 The sovereign Lord who sits
At thy right hand as king,
Shall strike through kings in that dread
When he shall vengeance bring. [day]

7 The heathen he shall judge,
And fill the land with dead;
He over countries great and wide,
Shall smite and wound th' head.

8 And in his way, the brook
His thirst shall satisfy,
And thus refreshed, the conqu'ring Lord
Shall lift his head on high.

PSALM 110. L. P. M.

1 JEHOVAH to my Lord thou spake,
Till I thy feet thy footstool make,
Sit thou in state at my right hand;
God shall from Zion send abroad
O'er nations all thy mighty rod,
And thy foes thy throne shall stand.

2 Thou, in thy power's triumphant day,
Thy willing nations shalt obey;
And when thy rising bears thy view,
Shall all, redeemed from error's night,
Appear as numberless and bright
As crystal drops of morning dew.

3 The Lord unchanging oath has made,
"Micah's oath thy priestly grade,
The sovereign Lord, at thy right hand,
Shall strike through princes of the land,
While awful anger flames around.

4 Among the heathen judge he will;
Unnumbered dead the land all fill,
The nations' chief shall smitten lie.
Thou break that runneth in the way,
His burning thirst shall slake that day,
And he shall lift his head on high.

PSALM 111. C. M.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord: with all my
I will God's praise declare, [heart
Even when assemblies of the just
And congregations are.

2 Jehovah's works are very great,
The wonders of his might;
Sought out they are of every one
Who in them takes delight.

3 His work most honorable is,
Most glorious and pure,
And his untainted righteousness
Forever doth endure.

4 His works of wonder he hath made
To be remembered well:
In grace and in compassion great
Jehovah doth excel.

5 The Lord provideth food for all
Who truly do him fear;
And evermore his covenant
He in his mind will bear.

6 He did the power of his works
To his own people show.
That he his people's heritage
Upon them might bestow.

7 His hands' works all are truth and right;
All his commandments are sure;
And, done in truth and uprightness,
They evermore endure.

8 He to his chosen people sent
Redemption by his pow'r;
His covenant he did command
To be forevermore.

9 His name alone most holy is,
In fear to be adored,
Of wisdom the beginning is
To truly fear the Lord.

10 Good understanding have they all
Who can fully obey
His just commandments every one;
His praise endure for aye.

PSALM 113. C. M.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord; that man is
Who doth do Jehovah fear; [blest
Yes, blest is he whose great delight
His holy precepts are.

2 His offering for their might shall be
Upon the earth renewed;
The generation of the just
In blessing shall abound.

3 Abundant wealth within his house
Shall ever be in store;
And his unspotted righteousness
Endures for evermore.

4 Light to the upright doth arise,
Though he in darkness be;
Compassionate and merciful,
And ever just is he.

5 A good man doth his favor show
And doth to others lend;
He with discretion his affairs
Will guide unto the end.

6 There surely is not any thing
That ever shall him move;
The righteous man's memorial
Shall everlasting prove.

7 When evil tidings he shall hear,
He shall not be afraid;
His heart be fixed, his confidence
Upon the Lord is stayed.

8 Establish, firmly is his heart,
He shall be shak'd not be,
Until upon his enemies
He his desire shall see.

9 He hath dispersed his wealth abroad,
And given to the poor;
From him with honor shall be raised,
His righteousness endure.

10 The wicked shall he see, and grieve,
His teeth gnash, melt away;
What wicked men do most desire
Shall utterly decay.

PSALM 113. L. M.

1 HOW blest the man that fears the Lord.
And makes his law his chief delight;
His seed shall share his great reward,
And on the earth be men of might.

2 Abounding wealth shall bless his home,
His righteousness shall still endure,
To him shall light arise in gloom;
He's kind, compassionate and pure.

3 The good will favor show, and lend,
And his affairs discreetly guide;
Unmoved he stands till life shall end,
His name and honor shall abide.

4 No evil tidings shall he fear;
His heart doth on the Lord repose;
He stands unmoved by dangers near,
Till he shall see his prostrate foes.

5 Dispensing gifts among the poor,
His liberal hands their wants supply;
His righteousness shall still endure,
His pow'r shall be exalted high.

6 The wicked shall his honor see,
Consume with grief his flesh and wall;
Their hopes shall disappointed be,
And their desire forever fall.

PSALM 113. C. M.

1 PRAISE God, ye servants of the Lord,
Praise God, his name adore,
Yes, blessed be the name of God
Henceforth and evermore.

2 From rising sun to where it sets,
God's name is to be praised,
Above all nations God is high,
"God's name" his glory raised.

3 Unto the Lord one God that dwells
On high, who can compare?
Himself that humbly things to see
In heav'n and earth can see.

4 He from the dust doth raise the poor,
That very low doth lie;
And from the dunghill lifts the man
Oppressed with poverty.

5 That he may highly him advance,
And with the princes set,
With those that of his people are;
The chief, ev'n princes great.

6 The barren woman hush to keep
He maketh, and to be
Of sons a mother full of joy,
Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM 113. L. M.

1 PRAISE God, ye servants of the Lord,
Praise, praise his name with one
Bless ye the Lord, his name adore [accord;
From this time forth forevermore.

2 From rising unto setting sun,
Praised be the Lord, the mighty one,
O'er nations all God reigns supreme,
Above the heavens his glorious beam.

3 O who is like the Lord, our God,
Who makes the heavens his abode;
Who stoops to look from his high throne
What things in heaven and earth are done?

4 From dust he makes the poor to rise,
The needy who in dunghill lies;
That he with princes may him place,
With princes of his chosen race.

5 He gives the barren woman joy,
In keeping house she finds employ,
And children joy to her afford,
Praise ye Jehovah; praise the Lord.

PSALM 114. C. M.

1 WHEN Israel out of Egypt went,
And did his dwelling change,
When Jacob's house went out from those
That were of language strange.

2 He Judah did his holy place,
His kingdom Israel's bed;
The sea beheld, and quickly fled,
And Jordan backward back.

3 Like rams the mountains, and like lambs
The hills skipped to and fro,
O see, why field's them Jordan, back
Why hast thou driven so?

4 Ye mountains great, why was it so
That ye did skip like rams?
And wherefore was it, little hills,
That ye did leap like lambs?

5 O at the presence of the Lord,
Earth, tremble thou for fear,
Because the presence of the God
Of Jacob doth appear:

6 Who in the desert from the rock
Did standing water bring;
And by his power turned the flint
Into a water-spring.

PSALM 118. L. M.

1 WHEN Israel had from Egypt gone,
Jacob from men of speech un-
Thou Jahah was his holy place, [known,
And his dominion Israel's race.

2 The sea, affrighted, saw and fled;
Back Jordan driven was with dread;
The lofty mountains skipped like rams,
And all the little hills like lambs.

3 What ailed thee that thou fledst, O sea?
Thou, Jordan, that thou didst flee?
Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams?
And all ye little hills like lambs!

4 Earth, tremble, for the Lord is near,
Before the God of Jacob fear;
Who from the rock did water bring,
And made the flint a water-spring.

PSALM 114. H. M.

1 WHEN Israel again
Was out of Egypt brought,
And Jacob's house from noon
Whose language they knew not,
Thou Jahah was his holy place,
And his dominion Israel's race.

2 His face the sea discerned,
It hasted every way,
The Jordan backward turned—
Its waters were afraid;
Behold! the mountains skipped like rams,
And all the little hills like lambs.

3 What ailed thee, O thou sea,
That thou fledst at the sight?
Thou, Jordan! what ailed thee,
That thou didst turn in flight?
Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams?
And ye, ye little hills, like lambs!

4 Let all the earth abroad
Before Jehovah fear;
And tremble when the God
Of Israel draws near—
Who from the rock did water bring,
Who made the flinty rock a spring.

PSALM 115. O. M.

1 NOT unto us, Lord, not to us,
But do thou glory take,
To thy own name, ev' for thy truth,
And for thy mercy's sake.

2 O wherefore should the heathen say,
Where is their God now gone?
But our God in the heavens dwells,
What pleased him he hath done.

3 Their idols silver are and gold,
The work of men they be,
Though mouths they have, they do not
And eyes, they do not see; [speak;

4 Though ears they have, they do not
Their noise hear nor; [hear;
Hands, feet, but handle not, nor walk;
Nor speak they through their throat.

5 Like them their makers are, and all
On them their trust that build.
O Israel, trust thou in the Lord,
He is their help and shield.

6 O Aaron's house, trust in the Lord,
Their help and shield he be.
Ye that fear God, trust in the Lord,
Their help and shield he'll be.

7 The Lord of us hath mindful been,
And he will bless us still;
He will the house of Israel bless,
Bless Aaron's house he will.

8 Both small and great, that fear the Lord,
He will them ever bless;
The Lord will you, and aid your need,
'Till more and more increase.

9 Ye truly blest are ye of God,
Who made the earth and heav'n,
The heav'n, yea heav'n, are God's, but the Earth to man's name hath giv'n.

10 The dead, and who to silence go,
God's praise do not record.
But henceforth we forever will Bless God. Praise ye the Lord.

PSALM 116. C. M.

1 LOVE the Lord, because my voice
And prayer he did hear,
I, while I live, will call on him,
Who bowed to me his ear.

2 Of death the cords and sorrows did
About me come as snare,
The pains of hell took hold on me,
I grief and trouble found.

3 Upon the name of God the Lord
I then did call, and cry,
Deliver thou my soul, O Lord,
I do thee humbly pray.

4 God merciful and righteous is,
Yea, gracious is our Lord.
God saves the meek: I was brought low,
He did me help add.

5 O thou my soul, do thou return
Unto thy quiet rest;
For, largely, unto thee, the Lord
His bounty hath express'd.

6 For my afflicted soul, from death
Delivered was by thee;
Thou didst my mourning eyes from tears,
My foot from falling, free.

7 I in the land of those that live
I will walk the Lord before.
I did believe, and therefore spake:
I was afflicted sore.

8 I said, when I was in my haste,
That all men hate me,
Thou shalt I render to the Lord
For all his gifts to me.

9 Will of salvation take the cup,
In God's name will I call;
I'll pay my vows now to the Lord
Before his people all.

10 In God's sight dear is his saint's death,
Thy servant, and thy handmaid's son;
My hands thou didst wash,
I shall them all destroy.

11 To thee thank-off'rings I will give,
And on God's name will call.
I'll pay my vows now to the Lord
Before his people all;

12 Within the courts of God's own house,
Within the midst of thee,
O city of Jerusalem,
Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM 116. L. M.

1 LOVE the Lord, for he did hear
My voice and supplications all;
Because he hath inclined his ear,
I while I live, will on him call.

2 Death's sorrows compassed me around,
The pains of hell shook all my frame,
I trouble great and sorrow found,
Then called I on Jehovah's name.

3 O Lord, I humbly thee entreat,
From all distress redeem my soul;
The kindness of the Lord is great,
Our God is just and merciful.

4 The simple with his care are blest;
I was brought low, God rescued me;
My soul, return thou to thy rest,
Great love the Lord hath shown to thee.

5 For thou from death hast saved me, Lord,
And thou hast freed my eyes from tears,
My foot from falling hast secured,
With God I'll walk, through all my years.

6 As I bellered, so spake I then,
When great affliction on me pressed;
'How false, how faithless are all men!
Were words I uttered in my haste.

7 What if return, Lord, can I make
For all thy gifts on me bestowed?
The cup of blessing I will take,
And call upon the name of God.

8 Before God's people I'll appear,
And pay my vows there with delight;
The death of saints to God is dear,
Must precious in Jehovah's sight.

9 O Lord, the high and holy one,
I am a servant unto thee,
Thy servant and thy handmaid's son,
Thou hast from bonds delivered me.

10 With sacrifice of thanks I'll go,
And on Jehovah's name will call;
Will pay to God the rest of one,
In presence of his people all.

11 Yea, I will pay my vows to God
In mid- of thee, Jerusalem,
Within the courts of God's abode,
Praise ye Jehovah, praise his name.

PSALM 117. C. M.

1 ALL ye nations of the earth,
Praise ye the mighty Lord;
And all ye people magnify
His name with one accord.

2 For great to us his mercies are,
And lovingkindness:
His truth endures for evermore.
The Lord O do ye bless.

PSALM 117. 8s and 7s.

1 PRAISE Jehovah, all ye nations,
Praise ye all ye people praise proclaim;
For his grace and lovingkindness,
O sing praises to his name.

2 Great to us hath been his mercy,
Sweet faithful in his love his name,
Through all ages it endureth,
Hallelujah, praise the Lord.

PSALM 118. C. M.

1 PRAISE the Lord, for he is good;
His grace is ever sure.
Let Israel now say, His grace
Forever doth endure.

2 Let Aaron's house now say, His grace
Forever doth endure.
Let those who fear the Lord now say,
His grace is ever sure.

3 In the Lord I in trouble called,
The Lord gave an ear to me;
In a large place did me set,
From trouble made me free.

4 The mighty Lord is on my side,
I will not be afraid;
For any thing that man can do
I shall not be dismayed.

5 The Lord doth take my part with them
That render help to me,
And therefore my desire on those
Who hate me I shall see.

6 It better is to trust the Lord,
Than trust in man's defence,
Yea, better trust the Lord than place
In princes confidence.

7 Against me all the nations joined,
They compassed me about;
But in the Lord's most holy name,
I shall them all root out.

8 They have encompassed me about,
They compassed to annoy;
But in the Lord's most holy name
I shall them all destroy.

9 As bees they compassed me about,
But, like the thorns that flame,
They have been quenched; and them
Destroy in God's own name. [shall I

10 Thou sore hast threatened, that I might fall,
The Lord gave help to me;
Jehovah is my strength and song,
And my salvation free.

11 In dwellings of the just, the voice
Of joy and health shall be;
The right hand of the mighty Lord
Doth ever valiantly.

12 The right hand of the mighty Lord
Exalted is on high;
The right hand of the mighty Lord
Doth ever valiantly.

13 I shall not die, but live, and shall
The works of God declare.
The Lord hath sorely chastened me,
But yet my life did spare.

14 O set ye open unto me
The gates of righteousness;
And let me enter into them,
And I the Lord will bless.

15 This is the gate of God, by it
Thou shalt enter in;
I will thee praise, for thou hast heard'st,
And hast my cry been.

16 That stone is made hush corner-stone
Which builders did despise:
This is the doing of the Lord,
And wondrous in our eyes.

17 This is the day the Lord hath made,
In it we glad will be.
Save now, I pray thee, Lord, I pray,
Send now prosperity.

18 O blest be he who comes to save
In God's most holy name;
The blessing from the house of God
Upon you we proclaim.

19 The Lord is God; he unto us
Hath made the light arise;
O hnd ye to the altar's horns,
With cords, the sacrifice.

20 Thou art my God, I will thee praise;
My God, I'll thee extol.
Praise God, for he is good; his grace
Endures through ages all.

PSALM 118. L. M.

1 THE Lord is good; O bless his name;
His mercy ever is the same,
And let the house of Israel say,
His tender mercy lasts for aye.

2 Let Aaron's house this truth declare,
Jehovah's mercies endless are.
Let all that fear the Lord proclaim,
His mercy ever is the same.

3 I called on God in time of grief;
He heard my prayer, and sent relief.
The Lord to rescue me is near;
What man can do I will not fear.

4 The Lord doth take my part with those
Who give me help against my foes;
My desire shall therefore see
On those who hated best to me.

5 Better to trust the Lord than trust
The help of man, my foe,
Better to trust Jehovah's grace,
Than confidence in princes place.

6 The Lord is all around me came;
Thou hast destroyed in God's great name,
They gathered, and around me came;
I'll cut them off in God's great name.

7 Like bees they swarm in forest trees,
They shall be quenched like thorns on fire.
In God's great name shall prevail,
And those destroy who are small.

8 Thou hast thrust sore at me to slay,
But thou hast been my help and stay.
My strength and aid is God the Lord;
To me he safely doth add.

9 The voice of joy and saving grace
Is in the right hand of the Lord above,
In mighty deeds, both valiant prove.

10 The Lord's right hand is lifted high,
The Lord's right hand doth valiantly,
I shall not die, but live, and shall
Jehovah's mercies work and ways.

11 Jehovah hath me chastened sore,
But unto death did he give o'er.
Unfold the gates of righteousness,
I'll enter in the Lord to bless.

12 This gate doth to the Lord belong,
And hither shall the righteous throng.
I will thee praise, for thou hast heard,
And hast become my Saviour, Lord.

13 The stone which builders did disdain
Is now become chief corner-stone.
This from Jehovah's work arose,
And it is wondrous in our eyes.

14 This day God made; with cheerful
I did it all through praise and joy.
Save now, O Lord, we plead with thee;
Lord, send us now prosperity.

15 Him ever blest do we proclaim,
Who cometh in Jehovah's name;
We from the place of his abode
Have blest you in the name of God.

16 Jehovah is the God of might;
And he to us hath given light.
Bring to the altar's horns, and bind
The sacrifice with cords confined.

17 My God thou art; with cord will I bind
I will call thee, my God,
The Lord is good; O praise his name;
His mercy ever is the same.

PSALM 119. C. M.

PART I.

1 HOW blest are they whose lives are
In the law of the Lord; [pure,
Who in the Lord's most holy name,
Do walk, and do not stray.

2 O blest are they who to observe
His statutes are inclined;
And who do seek the living God
With their whole heart and mind.

3 Such in his ways do walk, and they Do no iniquity.
Thou hast commanded us to keep
Thy precepts carefully.

4 O that thy statutes to observe
Thou wouldst permit my ways direct!
Then shall I not be confounded,
When I Thy precepts all respect.

5 Then with integrity of heart
Thou wilt I praise and bless,
When I the judgments all have learned
Of thy pure righteousness.

6 That I will keep thy statutes all,
Firmly resolved have I;
O do not thou, most gracious God,
Forget me utterly.

PART II.

7 By what means shall a young man learn
His way to cleanse, O Lord I
By taking careful heed to it,
According to thy word.

8 Unsignificantly have I sought
With all my soul and heart;
O never let me from the path
Of thy commands depart.

9 Thy word I in my heart have hid,
That I offend not thee.
O Lord, thou ever blest art,
Thy statutes teach thou me.

10 The judgments of thy mouth, each one
My lips recounted have;
More joy thy testimonies' way
Than riches all me gave.

11 I will thy holy precepts make
My meditation still,
And have respect to all thy ways
Continually I will.

12 Upon thy statutes my delight
Shall constantly be set;
And thy grace I never will
Thy holy law forget.

PART III.

13 With me, thy servant, in thy grace,
Deal bountifully, Lord;
That by thy favor I may live,
And duly keep thy word.

14 Unveil my eyes, that of thy law
I may discern the way of truth.
I am a stranger on this earth,
Hide not thy laws from me.

15 My soul within me breaks, and doth
Much fainting still endure,
Through longing that it hath all times
Unto thy judgments pure.

16 Thou hast rebuked the cruel proud,
Who from thy precepts remove,
Reproach and shame withdraw from me,
For I thy laws observe.

17 Against me princes spoke with spite,
While they in council sat;
But thy servant did upon
Thy statutes meditate.

18 Thy testimonies also are
My comfort and delight;
They are as my counsellors,
To guide my steps aright.

19 My soul is cleaving to the dust;
No quicken by thy word.
My ways I showed, thou hast me heard;
Teach me thy statutes, Lord.

20 The way of thy commandments teach,
So all thy works that wondrous are
I will to others show.

21 My soul doth melt, and drop away,
For heaviness and grief;
To me, according to thy word,
Give strength, and relief.

22 O let the wicked way of the Bowed far from me be,
And graciously thy holy law
Do thou grant unto me.

23 I of the perfect way of truth
My choice have freely made;
Thy judgments that most righteous are
Before me I have laid.

24 I to thy testimonies cleave;
Shame do not on me cast.
I'll run thy precepts' way, because
My heart's been taught thy hast.

25 Teach me, O Lord, the perfect way
Of thy commandments,
And to observe it to the end
I will my heart incline.

26 Give understanding unto me,
So keep thy law shall I;
I'll with integrity of heart
Observe it carefully.

27 In thy law's path makes me to go:
For I delight therein.
My heart unto thy precepts turns,
And not to worldly gain.

28 O do thou turn away mine eyes
From viewing vanity;
And in thy good and holy way
Be pleased to quicken me.

29 Confirm to me thy gracious word,
Which I did gladly hear,
To me, thy servant, Lord; I am
Devoted to thy fear.

30 Turn thou away my feared reproach;
For good thy judgments be,
Lo, for thy precepts I have longed:
In thy truth quicken me.

31 Let thy sweet mercies also come
And visit me, O Lord;
Let thy salvation come to me,
According to thy word.

32 So shall I have where'er with I may Give him an answer just,
Who spitefully reproacheth me;
Or in thy word I trust.

33 The word of truth out of my mouth
Take thou not for a lie;
For on thy righteous judgments, Lord,
Doth all my hope rely.

34 For will I keep forevermore
Thy law continually,
Because I all thy precepts seek,
I'll walk as liberty.

35 I'll speak thy word to kings, and I
With shame will not be moved;
I ever will delight myself
In those thy laws I loved.

36 To thy commandments, which I loved,
My hands lift up I will;
And I will also meditate
Upon thy statutes still.

37 Remember, Lord, thy gracious word
Thou to thy servant spak'st;
Which, for the ground of my sure hope,
Thou causatest me to take.

38 By this thy word in my distress
Great comfort I have known,
For in my straits I am revived
By this thy word alone.

39 The men whose hearts with pride are
Did greatly me deride;
But yet from thy servant's mouth
I have not heard aside.

40 Thy righteous judgments which thou
Make known of old, O Lord,
I have remembered, and to use
They comfort did afford.

41 Great fear took hold on me, because
Ill uses thy law forsake,
In my house of pilgrimage
Thy laws my songs do make.

42 Thy name by night, Lord, I recalled,
And I have kept thy law,
And this I had, because that I
Thy precepts kept with a care.

43 Thou my sure portion art alone,
Which I God choose, O Lord;
I have resolved, and said, that I
Would keep thy holy word.

44 With all my heart I did entreat
Thy face and favor free;
According to thy gracious word
Be merciful to me.

45 I thought upon my former ways,
With care did I consider,
And to thy testimonies pure
I then did turn my feet.

46 I did not stay, nor linger long,
As those that stoulish are;
But hastily thy laws to keep Myself I did prepare.

47 The wicked bands me robbed; yet I
Thy precepts did not slight;
I'll rise at midnight thee to praise,
Ev'n for thy judgments right.

48 I am companion to all those
Who fear, and thee obey,
O Lord, thy mercy fill the earth:
Teach me thy laws, I pray.

49 Well hast thou with thy servant dealt,
As thou didst promise give,
Good judgment me, and knowledge teach,
For I thy word believe.

50 Before I chastened was I strayed;
But now I keep thy word.
Both good thou art, and good thou dost:
Teach me thy statutes, Lord.

51 The men whose hearts are full of pride
Against me forged a lie;
But for me, with all my heart
Thy precepts keep will I.

52 These hearts through worldly ease and
Are great and heavy grown;
But my delight, O Lord, is placed Upon thy law alone.

53 It hath been very good for me
That I afflicted was,
And in thy good and holy way
And learn thy holy laws.

54 The law which from thy mouth proceeds,
To me is better far
Than many thousands and great sums
Of gold and silver are.

55 Thy hands have made and fashioned
Teach me thy laws, O Lord;
They who the fear shall joy to see
Me trusting in thy word.

56 That righteous all thy judgments are
I know, and do confess;
And that thou hast afflicted me
To truth and faithfulness.

57 O let thy kindness merciful,
I pray thee, comfort me,
As to thy servant promised was,
In faithfulness, by thee.

58 And let thy tender mercies come
To me, that I may live;
Because thy holy laws to me
A pure delight do give.

59 O let the proud be put to shame,
For they, without a cause,
With me perversely dealt; but I
Will muse upon thy laws.

60 Let such as fear thee, and have known
Thy statutes, turn to me.
My heart make sound in all thy laws,
That thou I never be.

61 My soul for thy salvation faints;
Yet I thy word believe,
Mine eyes fall for thy word: I say,
When wilt thou comfort give!

62 For like a bottle I'm become,
Which in the smoke is set;
But still thy righteous statutes, Lord,
I never do forget.

63 How many are thy servant's days?
When wilt thou execute
Just judgment on these wicked men
That do me persecute?

64 The proud for me have pits prepared,
Which is against thy laws,
But words all faithful are help me,
Pursued without a cause.

65 They so consumed me, that on earth
My life they scarce did leave;
Thy precepts yet forgot I not,
But close to them did cleave.

66 According to thy mercy, Lord,
Me quicken and preserve;
The testimony of thy mouth
So shall I still observe.

67 Thy word forever is, O Lord,
In heaven settled fast;
And unto generations all
Thy faithfulness doth last.

68 The earth by thee established was,
By thee it doth remain,
While for thy word thy servants all,
For thou didst so ordain.

69 Unless in thy most perfect law
My soul delights had found,
I should have perished at the time
My troubles did abound.

70 Thy precepts I will never forget;
They break in me as bread;
Lord, I am thine; O save thou me:
Thy precepts I have sought.

71 For me the wicked have laid wait,
Me seeking to destroy;
But I thy testimonies have true
Consider with thy joy.

72 An end of all perfection here
I have beheld, O God:
But as for thy commendation, Lord,
It is exceeding broad.

73 O how I love thy law! I in
My study all the day;
It makes me wileen my foes;
For it doth with me stay.

74 Than all my teachers now I have
More understanding far;
Because my meditations all,
Thy testimonies are.

75 In understanding I excel
Those that the ancient are;
I muse to keep thy precepts all
Has been my constant care.

76 My feet from each ill way I stayed,
That I might keep thy word.
From thy judgments have not swerved;
For thou hast taught me, Lord.

77 How sweet unto me taste, O Lord,
Are all thy words of truth!
Yea, I do find them sweeter far
Than honey to my mouth.

78 I through thy precepts that are pure,
Do understanding get;
I therefore ev'ry way that's false
With all my heart do hate.

79 Thy word is to my feet a lamp,
And to my path a light,
I will perform, as I have sworn,
To keep thy judgments right.

80 I with affliction very sore
Am overwhelmed, O Lord;
In mercy raise and quicken me,
According to thy word.

81 The free-will offerings of my mouth
Accept, I thee beseech:
And unto me, O Lord, do thou
Thy judgments clearly teach.

82 Though still my soul be in my hand,
Thy laws I'll not forget.
I erred not from them, though far
The wicked snares did set.

83 I of thy testimonies have
Above all things made choice,
To be my heritage for ever;
For they my heart rejoice.

84 With care I have my heart inclined,
That it should all attend,
Thy statutes always to observe,
And keep them to the end.

85 I hate the thoughts of vanity,
But love thy law do I.
My shield and hiding-place thou art:
On thy word rely.

86 All ye that evil-doers are
From me depart away;
Because the precepts of my God
I purpose to obey.

87 According to thy faithful word
Uphold and strengthen me,
That all mine end, and of my hope
Ashamed may never be.

88 Hold thou me up, so shall I be
In peace and safety still;
And to thy statutes have respect
Continually I will.

89 Thou tread'st down all that love to False their deceit doth prove,
Who men like driven, thy dust cast off:
Thy law I therefore love.

90 For fear of thee my very flesh
Doth tremble, O Lord;
And of thy righteous judgments, Lord,
My soul is much afraid.

91 To others I have judgment done,
Performing justice right;
O do not then deliver me
To my oppressor's might.

92 For good to me thy servant, Lord,
Thy servant's surely be:
And from oppression of the proud
Do thou deliver me.

93 My eyes do fall with looking long
For thy salvation great,
While for thy word of righteousness
I earnestly do wait.

94 In mercy with thy servant deal,
Thy statutes to me show;
I am thy servant, wisdom give,
That I thy laws may know.

95 "Thy times for thee to work, O Lord,
Thy soul them keeps with care;
The entrance of thy word gives light,
Makes wise who simple are."

96 Concerning all things thy commands
I therefore judge aright;
And ev'ry false and wicked way
Is hateful in my sight.

97 Thy statutes, Lord, are wonderful,
My soul them keeps with care;
The entrance of thy word gives light,
Makes wise who simple are.

98 My mouth I also opened wide,
And painted earnestly,
While after thy commandments all,
I longed exceedingly.

99 Lord, look on me, and merciful
Do thou unto me prove,
As thou art wont to do to those
Thy name who truly love.

100 O let my footsteps in thy word
Be right as the ancient are;
Let no iniquity obtain
Dominion over me.

101 From man's oppression save thou me:
So keep thy laws I will.
Thy face make in thy servant shine;
Teach me thy statutes still.

102 Great streams of waters from my eyes
Ran down, because I saw
How wicked men run on in sin,
And do not keep thy law.

103 O Lord, thou ever righteous art;
Thy judgments are upright,
Thy statutes, which thou hast ordained
Most faithful are and right.

104 My soul hath me consumed, because
They who against me rise,
Thy holy words forgotten have
And they thy laws despise.

105 Thy word is very pure; so it
Thy servant's heart is true;
Despised and small am I; yet I
Thy laws do not forget.

106 Thy righteousness is righteousness
Which ever doth endure;
Thy holy law, Lord, also is
The very truth most pure.

107 Distress and anguish have me found,
On me fast hold they take;
Yet in my trouble my delights
Thy commandments make.

108 Eternal righteous is in things
Thy testimony all;
O let me understand unto me,
And ever live I shall.

109 With all my heart I cried, Lord, hear;
I will obey thy word,
I erred to thee; save me, and I
Will keep thy laws, O Lord.

110 Before the morning's dawn I rose,
And unto thee I cried,
Because upon thy faithful word
I constantly relied.

111 My wakeful eyes anticipate
The watches of the night,
That on thy word with earnest mind
Thou meditate I might.

112 In loving-kindness let my pray'r
And cry be heard by thee;
According to thy judgment, Lord,
Reprove and quicken me.

113 The men who follow crime draw nigh;
They from thy law are far:
But thou art near, O Lord; and truth
All thy commandments are.

114 As for thy testimonies, all
Of old this have I seen,
That none like driven, thy dust cast off:
Forever to remain.

PART IX.

115 My trouble, Lord, do thou regard, And me in safety set; Deliver me, O Lord, for Thy law doth not forget.

116 And by thy word revive thou me; Save me, and plead my cause. Salvation is from almsgivers far; For they seek not thy laws.

117 Thy tender mercies, Lord, are great, They numbered cannot be. According to thy judgments just, Revive and quicken me.

118 My persecutors many are, And foes that do combine; Yet from thy testimonies mine, My heart doth not decline.

119 I saw transgressors, and was grieved; For they keep not thy word. See how I love thy law as thou Art kind, me quicken, Lord.

120 For from beginning, all thy word Hath been most true and sure; Thy righteous judgments every one For evermore endure.

PART X.

121 The princes persecuted me, (Although no cause they saw; But still of thy most holy word My heart doth stand in awe.)

122 I at thy word rejoice, as one Of spilt that finds great store. Thy law I love; but lying all I hate and do abhor.

123 To praise thy name sev'n times a day Hath been my constant care; Because of all thy judgments, Lord, Which righteous ever are.

124 Great peace have they who love thy Office they shall have none. I hoped for thy salvation, Lord, And thy commands have done.

125 My soul thy testimonies all Observed most carefully; On them my heart is set, and them I love exceedingly.

126 Thy testimonies and thy laws I kept with special care; For all my works and ways each one Before thee open are.

PART XI.

127 O let my earnest pray'r and cry Come near before thee, Lord; Give understanding unto me, According to thy word.

128 Let my request before thee come; After thy word me free. My lips shall niter praise, when thou Hast taught thy laws to me.

129 My tongue of thy most blest word Shall speak, and it continue; Because thy holy statutes all Are perfect righteousness.

130 O let thy hand bring help to me; Thy precepts are my choice. I longed for thy salvation, Lord, And in thy law rejoice.

131 My soul revive, and then it shall Give praises unto thee; And let thy judgments evermore Be judgment unto me.

132 I, like a lost sheep, went astray; Thy servant seek and find; For thy commandments all, O Lord, I ever keep in mind.

PSALM 130. C. M.

1 IN my distress to God I cried, And he gave ear to me. From lying lips and gulfed tongue, O Lord, my soul set free.

2 What shall be given thee? or what Be done to thee, O Jehovah? Ev'n burning coals of juniper, Sharp arrows of the string.

3 Alike for me, that I abide In Mesech's land so long! That I in tabernacles dwell, To Kedar that belong.

4 My soul with him that loveth peace Hath long a dweller been. I am for peace; but when I speak, For battle they are keen.

PSALM 130. L. M.

1 IN my distress I cried to God, My earnest cry Jehovah heard; From lying lips and tongue of fraud, Deliver thou my soul, O Lord.

2 To thee, false tongue, what shall I do? For thy lies a fit return? Sharp arrows of the mighty one, With coals of juniper that burn.

3 Alike for me! that I no long Sojourn with Mesech's godless race; And near the tents of Kedar's throng Am forced to make my dwelling-place.

4 I long have made my dwelling-place With such as seek my peace, to mar; With them I fain would live in peace, But when I speak, they are for war.

PSALM 131. C. M.

1 TO the hills will lift mine eyes, From whence doth come mine aid. My safety cometh from the Lord, Who heav'n and earth hath made.

2 Thy foot he'll not let slide, nor will He stumble that these keeps. Behold, he that keeps Israel, He stumbers not, nor sleeps.

3 The Lord thee keeps, the Lord thy shade On thy right hand doth stay; The moon by night thee shall not smite, Nor yet the sun by day.

4 The Lord shall keep thy soul; he shall Preserve thee from all ill. Henceforth thy going out and in God keep forever will.

PSALM 131. 7a.

1 TO the hills I'll lift mine eyes, Whence my hopes of succor rise; From the Lord comes all my aid, Who the earth and heav'n hath made.

2 He will ever be thy guide, And thy foot shall never slide; God his Israel that keeps, Never slumbers, never sleeps.

3 God thy keeper still shall stand, As a shade on thy right hand; Neither sun by day shall smite, Nor the silent moon by night.

4 God shall guard from every ill, Keep thy soul in safety still; Both without and in thy door, He will keep thee evermore.

PSALM 132. C. M.

1 JOY'D when to the house of God, Go up, they said to me. Jerusalem, within thy gates Our feet shall standing be.

2 Jerusalem as a city is Compactly built, and fair; To it the tribes go up, to it, The tribes of God repair.

3 To Jer'sol testimony, there To God's name thanks to pay. For thrones of judgment, ev'n the throne Of David's house, there stay.

4 Pray that Jerusalem may have Peace and felicity; All those who love thee and thy peace Shall have prosperity.

5 I therefore wish that peace may still Within thy walls remain, And ever may thy palace Prosperity retain.

6 And now, for friends and brethren's Peace be in thee, I'll say. Yea for the house of God our Lord, I'll seek thy good away.

PSALM 132. L. M.

1 WITH joy I hear my friends exclaim, "Come let us in God's temple meet." Within thy gates, Jerusalem, Shall ever stand our willing feet.

2 A city built compact and firm, Jerusalem stands, the sacred place To which the gathering tribes repair, Tribes of Jehovah's chosen race.

3 'Tis there by his command they meet, To render thanks and pay their vows; And there in judgment's royal seat, There are the thrones of David's house.

4 Pray that Jerusalem's peace endure, For all that love thee God will bless; Peace dwell within thy walls secure, And joy within thy palaces.

5 For sake of friends and kindred dear, Jerusalem's desire is peace in thee; And for the house of God, my prayer Shall seek thy good continually.

PSALM 133. C. M.

1 O THOU that dwellest in the heav'n, I lift mine eyes to thee, Behold, as servants' eyes attend, Their masters' hand to see,

2 As handmaid's eyes her mistress' hand; So do our eyes attend Upon the Lord our God, until To us he mercy send.

3 O Lord, be gracious unto us, Into us gracious be; For filled with innocent contempt Exceedingly are we.

4 Our soul is filled with scorn of those That at their ease abide, And with the innocent contempt Of those that swell in pride.

PSALM 133. L. M. 6 lines.

1 TO thee, O Lord, I lift mine eyes, I O thou enthroned above the skies! As servants watch their master's hand, Or maids by mistress watching stand, So to the Lord our eyes we raise, Until his mercy he displays.

2 Have mercy, Lord, we cry to thee; Filled with contempt thy servants see! (In us have mercy, scorned by those Who live in undisturbed repose!) Beneath the scolding of the proud, And their contempt, our soul is bowed.

PSALM 134. C. M.

1 HAD not the Lord been on our side, May Israel now say; Had not the Lord been on our side, When men rose up to slay;

2 They had us swallowed up alive, When their fierce wrath did flame; The waters had us drowned, our soul Had sunk beneath the stream.

3 Then had the waters, swelling high, Above our soul made way, O had not the Lord, who to his teeth U gave not for a prey.

4 Our soul has, like a bird, escaped The cruel fowler's snare; The snare sunder broken lay, And we escaped afar.

5 Our savior and all-sufficient help In JEHOVAH'S name, His name who did the heav'n create, And who the earth did frame.

PSALM 134. L. M.

1 HAD not the Lord, may I'est say, Had not the Lord maintained our side, When men, to make our lives a prey, Rose like the swelling of the tide;

2 The swelling tide had been our grave, So fiercely did the waters roll; The waters proud, with wave on wave, Had swept above our drowning soul.

3 Blest be the Lord; let praise be given, That we escaped from death so nigh; As when the fowler's snare is given, The dove escaping soars on high:

4 The snare is rent, and we are free, Our grateful souls to God arise; For all our help has come from thee, Great makee of the earth and skies.

PSALM 135. C. M.

1 THEY in the Lord that firmly trust, Shall be like Zion hill, Which at no time can be removed, But standeth ever still.

2 As round about Jerusalem The mountains ever stand, So God his people will surround, And evermore defend.

3 For ill men's rod upon the lot Of just men shall not lie; Least righteous men stretch forth their To work iniquity.

4 Do thou to all those who are good Thy goodness, Lord, impart; And also do thou good to them Who upright are in heart.

5 But as for such as turn aside In their own crooked way, God shall lead forth with wicked men; On Lev'el peace shall stay.

PSALM 135. 7a and 6a.

1 HE that in God confideth, Like Zion Mount shall be, Which evermore abideth Unmoved eternally.

2 Mountains, which defend her, Jerusalem surround, His saints cease to render, God compasseth around.

3 The sinner's rod shall never On just men be laid; Least upright men should ever To sin be turned aside.

4 Thy goodness, Lord, our Saviour, To all the good impart; And ever show thy favor To men of upright heart.

5 But those whose choice is rather In crooked ways to go; With sinners God shall gather; On Israel peace bestow.

PSALM 136. C. M.

1 WHEN Zion's bondage God turned back, As men that dreamed were woe, Then lifted up their voices as our mouth, Our tongue with melody;

2 The heathen people said, The Lord Great things for them hath wrought. The Lord hath done great things for us, Whence joy to us is brought.

3 As streams of water in the south, Our bondage, Lord, recall. Who saw in tears, a weeping time Of joy enjoy thy shall.

PSALM 136. L. M.

1 TWAS like a dream, when by the Lord From bondage Zion was restored; Her mouths were filled with mirth, our Were ever singing joyful songs.

2 The heathen owned that God had wrought; Great works, which joy to us have brought. As southern streams, when filled with rain, Lord, turn our captive state again.

3 Who saw in tears, with joy shall reap; Though bearing precious seed they weep. While going forth, yet shall they sing, When coming back their shaves they bring.

PSALM 136. H. M.

1 WHEN Zion by the Lord From her captivity Was graciously restored, Like men that dream were woe, Our mouths were filled with mirth, our Were ever singing joyful songs.

2 Great things the heathen saw, The Lord for them hath wrought; Great things the Lord hath done, Which joy to us have brought. As southern streams sweep up the plain, Lord, turn our captive state again.

3 The man in tears who sows, With joy reaps as the seed; With precious seed he goes, And going forth doth weep. Yet doubtless he his shaves shall bring, And coming back, with joy shall sing.

PSALM 137. C. M.

1 EXCEPT the Lord do build the house, Except the Lord the city keep, The watchmen watch in vain.

2 'Tis vain for you to rise betimes, Or late from rest to keep, To feed on sorrow's bread; so gives He his beloved sleep.

3 Lo, children are God's heritage, To parents his reward, The sons of youth as arrows are, For strong men of his hand prepared.

4 Happy is the man that beth His quiver filled with the; They, unashamed, withit' t' gate Shall speak unto their fo.

PSALM 137. L. M.

1 UNLESS the Lord the house shall build, The weary builders toil in vain; Unless the Lord the city shield, The guards a useless watch maintain.

2 In vain you rise ere morning break, And late your nightly vigils keep, And bread of anxious care partake; God gives to his beloved sleep.

3 Lo, children are the gift of God, And sons the blessing he commands; These, when in youthful days bestowed, Are like the shafts in warrior's hands.

4 And happy they whose quivers bear Full store of arrows such as these; They in the gate are free from fear, And boldly face their enemies.

PSALM 138. C. M.

1 THE man is blest who fears the Lord, And walketh in his ways; For of thy labor thou shalt eat, And prosper all thy days.

2 Thy wife shall as a fruitful vine By thy house sides be found; Thy children like to olive-plants Thy table shall surround.

3 Behold, the man that fears the Lord, Thus blest shall he be. The Lord shall out of Zion give His blessing unto thee.

4 Thou shalt Jerusalem's good behold, Whilst thou on earth dost dwell. Thou shalt thy children's children see, And peace on Israel.

PSALM 138. 8a and 7a.

1 BLESSED the man who fears Jehovah, In walking ever in his ways; Then filled with joy thy hands' labor, And be happy all thy days.

2 Like a vine in fruit abounding, In thy house thy wife is found; And like olive-plants, thy children, Compensating thy table round.

8 Lo, on him that fears Jehovah,
Shall this righteousness attend;
Thus Jehovah out of Zion
Shall to thee his blessings send.

PSALM 129. C. M.

1 THEY that did vex me from my youth,
May let' me now be silent;
They oft did vex me from my youth,
Yet not victorious were.

2 The plowers plowed upon my back;
They long their furrows made.
The righteous Lord did cut the cords
Which sinners on me laid.

3 Let Zion's haters be torned back,
And in confusion throw.
As grass on house-tops let them be,
Which fades ere it is grown:

4 Of which enough to fill his hand
The mower cannot cut; and
Nor can the man his bosom fill,
Whose work is always to bind.

5 Nor may the men who pass them by,
God's blessing on you rest:
In the name of God the Lord
Do wish you to be blest.

PSALM 129. L. M.

1 HOW oft from youth may I'vel' say,
How oft from youth have foes
Smiled!

How sorely troubled me have they!
Yet ne'er against me have prevailed.

2 Upon my back the plowers plowed,
Upon me long their furrows drew.
In mercy cut their sinners' cords,
The righteous Lord subdued the proud.

3 Let all be shamed, and made to flee,
Who have to Zion hatred bred.
As grass on house-tops let them be,
As grass which fades ere it is grown.

4 His blades no mower's hand may break,
The sheaves no binder may lay claim;
No strangers say, "The Lord thee blest,
We bless you in Jehovah's name."

PSALM 130. C. M.

1 FROM depths to thee, O Lord, I cried,
My voice, Jehovah, hear;
And to my supplication's voice
O give attentive ear.

2 Lord, who shall stand, if thou, O Lord,
Shouldest mark iniquity?
But yet with thee forgiveness is,
That feared thou mayest be.

3 I wait for God, my soul doth wait,
My hope is in his word.
Yes, more than they for whom that watch,
My soul waits for the Lord;

4 Yes, more I wait than they that watch
The morning light to see;
Let Israel in Jehovah hope,
For with him mercies be.

5 Redemption plentiful and free
Is ever found with him.
And he from all iniquity
Shall Israel redeem.

PSALM 130. Se and 7a.

1 FROM the depths do I invoke thee,
O Jehovah, give an ear;
To my voice be thou attentive,
And my supplication hear.

2 Lord, if thou shouldest mark transgression,
Who, before thee, Lord, shall stand?
But with thee there forgiveness is,
That thy name may fear command.

3 For Jehovah I am waiting,
And my hope is in his word;
In his word of promise given,
Yes, my soul waits for the Lord.

4 For the Lord my soul is waiting,
More than watchers in the night,
More than they for morning watching,
Watching for the morning light.

5 Let'el, hope thou in Jehovah,
Mercies great are found with him;
He abounding in redemption,
Let'el be found in sin risen.

PSALM 131. C. M.

1 My heart not haughty is, O Lord,
My eyes not lofty be;
Nor do I deal in matters great,
Or strive too high for me.

2 Anxiously have myself behaved
With spirit meek and mild,
As child of mother weaned; thy soul
Is like a weaned child.

3 Upon Jehovah let the hope
Of Israel rest,
E'en from the time that present is Unto eternity.

PSALM 131. S. M.

1 My heart's not haughty, Lord,
Nor lofty is mine eye;
I meditate not in matters great,
In things for me too high.

2 I sorely have composed
And soothed myself to rest,
Yes, even as a weaned child
Upon its mother's breast.

3 My soul is like a child
Weaned and submissive grown;
O Israel, now and evermore
Trust in the Lord alone.

PSALM 132. C. M.

1 LORD, remember David now,
His troubles think upon;
How unto God he swore, and vowed
To Jacob's mighty One.

2 I will not come within my house,
Nor rest in bed at all;
Nor shall my eyes take any sleep,
Nor eyelids slumber shut.

3 Till for the Lord a place I find,
Where he may make abode;
Until I find a dwelling-place,
For Jacob's mighty God.

4 Lo, at the place of Ephraim
Of it we understood;
We also found it in the fields,
And city of the wood.

5 We'll to his tabernacles go,
And at his footstool bow.
Arise, O Lord, into thy rest,
Thy ark of strength bring thou.

6 Let all thy priests be clothed, O Lord,
In robes of righteousness;
And let all those that are thy saints
Shout loud for joyfulness.

7 And for thy servant David's sake,
Do not deny thy grace;
Nor of thy own anointed one
Turn thou away the face.

8 The Lord in truth to David swore,
He will not turn from it,
Of thy body's fruit will make
Upon thy throne to sit.

9 My cov'nant if thy sons will keep,
And laws to them made known,
Their children then shall always
Forever on thy throne.

10 For God of Zion hath made choice;
There he desires to dwell.
This is my rest, here will I stay;
For I do like it well.

11 For food I'll greatly bless; her poor
With bread will satisfy.
Her priests I'll clothe with health; her
Shall shout forth joyfully.

12 And there will I make David's horn
To bud forth pleasantly;
For him that mine anointed is
I am ordained have I.

13 As with a garment I will clothe
With shame his enemies all;
But yet the crown that he doth wear
Upon him flourish shall.

PSALM 132. L. M.

1 LORD, remember David now,
And think on all his weight of care,
How to the Lord he made his vow,
To Jacob's mighty God he swore:

2 I will not tread within my hall,
Nor on my bed will seek repose;
No sleep upon my eyes shall fall,
Nor slumber shall mine eyelids close.

3 Until for Jacob's mighty Lord
I find a sure and fit abode.
Of it at Ephraim we heard,
We found it in the fields of wood.

4 Arise, O Lord, come to thy rest;
Thy footstool is our sacred shrine;
With robes of truth thy priests invest;
And shouts shall hail the ark divine.

5 For thine own servant David's sake,
Turn not away Neathan's face;
The Lord his truth will never break,
The truth thus sworn to David's race:

6 "Upon thy throne thy seed shall reign;
And if their heart my cov'nant own,
And still my honored laws maintain,
Their seed shall hold an endless throne."

7 For high on Zion's hill above,
The Lord has fixed his dwelling bright;
This is the city of my love,
The chosen rest of my delight.

8 I'll bless her stores with large increase;
With bread her poor will satisfy.
Her priests I'll clothe in robes of peace,
And all her saints shall shout for joy.

9 There David's horn shall bud and grow,
Thence mine anointed shall arise;
With utter shame I'll clothe his foe,
But bright his endless crown shall be.

PSALM 132. Se and 7a.

1 LORD, remember thou for David,
All his trouble and his care;
How he vowed to God of Jacob,
To the great Jehovah swore:

2 I my dwelling will not enter,
To my couch will not arise;
I'll not give my eyelids slumber,
Nor in sleep will close my eyes;

3 Till I find a place of dwelling,
Where the Lord may make abode;
Till I find a habitation,
Meet for Jacob's mighty God.

4 Lo, at Ephraim we heard it,
And of it we understood;
In the fields we also found it,
In the city of the wood.

5 Let us seek his courts, and worship
At his footstool with delight;
Rise, O Lord, thy rest to enter;
Come, and bring thy ark of might.

6 Let thy priests be clothed with justice;
Let thy saints rejoicing make;
Ere the face of thy anointed,
For thy servant David's sake.

7 God hath sworn in truth to David,
And his oath will not disown;
Of the children which I give thee,
I will place upon thy throne.

8 If thy sons will keep my cov'nant,
And observe what I command,
On thy throne shalt thou sit,
Shall their children rule the land.

9 For the Lord hath chosen Zion,
'Tis the dwelling loved of God;
Here I'll rest and dwell forever,
I delight in this abode.

10 Richly blessing her provision,
I will fill her poor with bread;
Clothe her priests with my salvation,
Make her saints exceeding glad.

11 There shall David's power flourish,
For thy king a lamp's ordained;
With shame his foes will cover,
But his crown shall be maintained.

PSALM 133. C. M.

1 BEHOOLD, how good a thing it is,
And how becoming well,
Together such as brethren are
In unity to dwell!

2 Like precious ointment on the head,
That down the beard did flow,
E'en to Aaron's beard, and to the skirts
Did of his garments go.

3 As Hermon's dew, the dew that doth
On Zion's hills descend;
For there the blessing God commands,
Lift that shall never end.

PSALM 133. C. P. M.

1 HOW good and pleasant to the sight,
When those that shed brethren are,
Delight

Like precious ointment on the head,
Which o'er Aaron's beard was shed,
And on his garments fell.

2 Or like the dew which night distils,
Which o'er Hermon's lofty hills,
And Zion's mounts descends;
For there the Lord in love commands
The blessing from his gracious hands,
Even till that never ends.

PSALM 133. 7a and 6a.

1 BEHOLD, how good and pleasant,
And how becoming well,
Where brethren all united,
In peace together dwell.

2 'Tis like the precious ointment
That on the head did flow,
Which down the beard of Aaron,
Did o'er his vesture go.

3 Like dew which on Mount Hermon
And Zion hills descend;
Thy God commands the blessing,
Life that shall never end.

PSALM 134. C. M.

1 BEHOLD, O bless the Lord, all ye
That his servants are,
E'en you who in God's temple stand,
And praise him nightly there.

2 Your hands within God's holy place,
Lift up, and praise his name,
From Zion hill the Lord thus blest,
That heav'n and earth did frame.

PSALM 134. C. P. M.

1 BEHOLD, all ye that serve the Lord,
Lift up your voice with one accord,
Jehovah's name to bless,
Thence his holy name arise,
Ye that are standing night by night,
Within his holy place.

2 Yes, in his place of holiness,
Lift up your hands the Lord to bless;
And unto you be given,
From out of Zion, by the Lord,
His blessing rich, who by his word
Created earth and heaven.

PSALM 135. C. M.

1 PRAISE the Lord, the Lord's name
Praise:
His servants, praise ye God,
Who stand in God's house, in the courts
Of our God make abode.

2 Praise ye the Lord, for he is good,
Sing praises to his name,
For it is pleasant thus in songs
His praises to proclaim.

3 Because Jehovah for himself
Of Jacob choice did make;
For his peculiar treasure he Did Israel also take.

4 Because I know Jehovah is Above all others great,
And that our Lord above all gods
In glory hath his seat.

5 Jehovah hath in heaven done
Whatever he did please,
And in the earth and place deep,
And in the mighty seas.

6 From earth's remotest ends he makes
The vapors to ascend;
And with rain he lightning makes, and wind
With storm his treasures send.

7 He first-born all of Egypt smote,
Sent signs and wonders grand
On Pharaoh and his servants all,
In thee, O Egypt land.

8 He smote great nations, slew great kings:
E'en Sihon, Heshbon's king,
And Og of Bashan, and to mount
Did Canaan's kingdoms bring:

9 And for a heritage their land
He unto Israel gave,
That there he chosen people might
A sure possession have.

10 Thy name, O Lord, shall still endure,
And thy remembrance shall
With honor great continued be
To generations all.

11 Because the Lord himself will judge
His people righteously;
Concerning those that do him serve,
Himself repeat will he.

12 The idols of the nations all
Of silver are and gold,
They from the hands of men receive
Their fashion and their mould.

13 Though mouths they have, they do not
And e'en, they hear they not; and in Their mouth no breath can be.

14 Like them their makers are, and all
Who do on them rely.
O Israel's house, bless and praise God,
O Aaron's family.

15 O house of Levi, bless the Lord,
All who his servants are;
And bless the holy name of God,
All ye the Lord that fear.

16 And blest be the Lord our God,
From Zion's holy hill,
Who dwelleth at Jerusalem.
The Lord O praise ye still.

PSALM 135. L. M.

1 PRAISE the Lord, his praise proclaim;
All ye his servants praise his name,
Who in the Lord's house are,
Who stand in our God's temple gale.

2 The Lord is good, his praise proclaim,
Since it is pleasant, praise his name;
He for himself did Jacob take,
And Israel's possession make.

3 I know the Lord is high in state,
Above all gods on earth is great;
The Lord performs what he decrees,
In heaven and earth, in depths and seas.

4 He makes the vapors to ascend
In clouds from earth's remotest end;
He for the rain gives lightning wings,
The wind out from his treasure brings.

5 He smote from greatest to the least
Of Egypt's first-born, men and beast;
In midst of thee, O Egypt land,
Sent signs and wonders from his hand.

6 He made his wonders dread to fall
On Pharaoh and his servants all;
He many nations overthrowed,
And mighty kings and princes slew.

7 He Sihon slew, and Bashan's king,
O Canaan's thrones did ruin bring;
Their land for heritage bestowed
On Israel for their own abode.

8 O Lord, eternal is thy name,
Thy memory is endless fame;
God will his people's cause maintain,
And to his servants turn again.

9 The heathen idols all are nought,
But silver, gold, by man's hand wrought;
With mouths, no power of speech they find,
With eyes to see, they yet are blind.

10 With ears, they hear no voice or sound,
And in their mouth no breath is found;
Their makers all their likeness bear;
Who trust in them their fate shall share.

11 O house of Israel, bless the Lord;
Let Aaron's house his praise accord;
Him bless, let Levi's house proclaim;
Bless ye the Lord, who fear his name.

12 Forever let the Lord be blest;
From Zion let his praise be blest;
Jerusalem is his dwelling-place,
Praise ye the Lord, make known his grace.

PSALM 136. 8c and 7a.

GIVE thanks to God, for good is he:
For mercy hath he ever.
Thanks to the God of gods give ye:
For his grace faileth never.

2 Thanks give the Lord of lords unto:
For mercy hath he ever.
Who only wonders great can do:
For his grace faileth never.

3 Who by his wisdom made heaven's light:
For mercy hath he ever.
Who stretched the earth above the sea:
For his grace faileth never.

4 To him that made the great lights shine:
For mercy hath he ever.
The sun to rule till day decline:
For his grace faileth never.

5 The moon and stars to rule by night:
For mercy hath he ever.
Who Egypt's first-born killed outright:
For his grace faileth never.

6 And Israel brought from Egypt land:
For mercy hath he ever.
With stretched-out arm, and with strong
For his grace faileth never. [loud]

7 By whom the Red sea parted was:
For mercy hath he ever.
He through its midst made Israel pass:
For his grace faileth never.

8 He Pharaoh and his host did drown:
For mercy hath he ever.
And through the desert led his own:
For his grace faileth never.

9 To him great kings who overthrow:
For he hath mercy ever.
Yes, famous kings in battle slew:
For his grace faileth never.

10 Ev'n Sihon, king of Amorites:
For he hath mercy ever.
And Og, the king of Bashanites:
For his grace faileth never.

11 Their land in heritage to have:
For mercy hath he ever.
His servant Israel right he gave:
For his grace faileth never.

12 In our low state who on us thought:
For he hath mercy ever.
And from our feet freedom wrought:
For his grace faileth never.

13 Who doth all flesh with food relieve:
For he hath mercy ever.
Thanks to the God of heaven give:
For his grace faileth never.

PSALM 136. L. M.

THANK the Lord, the Lord of love;
O thank the God, all gods above.
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

2 O thank the mighty King of kings,
Whose arm hath done such wondrous things,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

3 Whose wisdom gave the heavens their birth,
And on the waters spread the earth,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

4 Who taught you glorious lights their radiant sun to rule the day. [soft]
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

5 The moon and stars to rule the night,
With radiance of a milder light,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

6 Who smote th' Egyptian's stubborn pride,
When in his wrath's first-born he died,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

7 But led his Israel from their land,
With outstretched arm and conquering hand,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

8 Whose hand the Red sea's waters clave,
And guided Israel through the wave,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

9 But buried Pharaoh and his lands,
And led his flock through desert sands,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

10 Who smote proud monarchs in their
And warlike princes slew in fight, [might],
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

11 Sihon, the king of Heshbon's towers,
And Og, the lord of Basan's power,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

12 And for inheritances their land
He gave to Israel's chosen band,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

13 Who thought on us, amidst our woes,
And rescued us from all our foes,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

14 Who daily feeds each living thing;
O thank the heaven's Almighty King,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

PSALM 136. H. M.

PRAISE God, for he is kind:
His mercy lasts for aye:
Giveth thanks with heart and mind
To God of gods always:
For certainly
His mercies dure
Stand firm and sure
Eternally.

2 The Lord of lords praise ye,
Whose mercies always last;
The Lord alone is he
Who doth wonders vast.
For certainly, etc.

3 To him, by wisdom's hand,
Who heavens did create;
To him who stretched the land
Above the waters great.
For certainly, etc.

4 To him great lights that made,
The sun to rule by day;
The moon and stars arrayed;
To rule the night are they.
For certainly, etc.

5 To him who Egypt smote
In first-born everywhere;
And Israel thence he brought,
From those who enemies were.
For certainly, etc.

6 Who, with strong hand of guide,
And arm that stretched out was,
The Red sea did divide,
And through made Israel pass.
For certainly, etc.

7 But Pharaoh overthrow
In Red sea with his host;
And led his people through
The deserts to their coast.
For certainly, etc.

8 To him who great kings smote,
Yes, famous kings he slew;
Sihon of Amritre led,
And Og of Basan, too.
For certainly, etc.

9 By lot he gave their lands
To Israel for aye:
To those who his commands
Did faithfully obey.
For certainly, etc.

10 He thought on us when foes
Had brought to low estate;
And from all our woes
Did grant deliverance great.
For certainly, etc.

11 And from his bounty he
All flesh his food hath given.
O thanks to God give ye;
He is the God of heaven.
For certainly, etc.

PSALM 137. C. M.

BY Babel's streams we sat and wept,
When Zion we thought on,
In midst thereof we hung our harp
The willow-trees upon.

2 For there a song required they,
Who did us captive bring:
Our spouters called for mirth, and said,
A song of Zion sing.

3 O how the Lord's song shall we sing
Within a foreign land!
If then, Jerusalem, I forget,
Still part from my right hand.

4 My tongue to my month's roof let cleave,
If I do these forget,
Jerusalem, and thee above
My chief good do not set.

5 Remember Edom's children, Lord,
Who in Jerusalem's day,
Ere unto its foundation stone,
Raze, raze it quite, did say.

6 Whose hand the Red sea's waters clave,
And guided Israel through the wave,
His mercy flows an endless stream,
To all eternity the same.

7 Yes, happy surely shall he be,
Who better little ones
Than those who have his name,
Shall dash against the stones.

PSALM 137. L. M.

BY Babel's streams we sat and wept,
For memory still to Zion cling;
The winds alone our harp-strings swept,
That on the drooping willows hung.

2 There our rude captors, fluted with pride,
A song required to mock our woe;
Our spouters called for mirth, and cried,
"Come, sing us one of Zion's songs."

3 O how can we the Lord's song sing
While thus an exile captive band?
O how can we our voices bring
To sing God's song in this strange land?

4 Jerusalem, God's holy hill,
If of thee forgotten prove,
Let my right hand forget its skill
With grace the harp's sweet strings to move.

5 If I do not remember thee,
Let my parched tongue its utterance
If my chief joy be dear to me [cause];
Beyond Jerusalem's joy and peace.

6 Remember, Lord, how Edom's crowd,
Gird in Jerusalem's day of woe,
Spoke on the victor, shouting loud,
"Down with her walls, o'erthrow, o'er-throw."

7 O Babel's daughter, God's decree
Dooms thee to wrath, a wretched prey;
And thou shalt that avenger be
Who shall to thee our wrongs repay.

8 Yes, truly, shall that man be blest,
And with triumphal honour crowned,
Who rents thy children from the breast,
To dash them bleeding to the ground.

PSALM 138. C. M.

I WILL thee praise with all my heart,
To thee I will sing praise,
Before the gods; and worship will Towards thy holy place.

2 I'll praise thy name, ev'n for thy truth,
And kindness of thy love;
For thou thy word hast magnified
All thy great name above.

3 Thou didst me answer in the day
When I to thee did cry,
And thou my fainting soul with strength
Didst strengthen in wardly.

4 All kings upon the earth that are
Shall give thee praise, O Lord;
When so they from thy moon shall hear
Thy true and faithful word.

5 Yes, in the righteous ways of God
With gladness they shall sing;
For great's the glory of the Lord,
Who is forever King.

6 Though God be high, yet he respects
All them that love his name;
Whence the proud and lofty ones
Afar off knoweth he.

7 Though I in midst of trouble walk,
I life from thee shall have:
'Onset my foes' wrath thou'lt stretch thy Thy right hand shall me save. [loud]

8 That which concealeth me the Lord
Will surely perfect make:
O Lord, thy mercy lasts; do not
Tide mine own hands' work forsake.

PSALM 138. L. M.

WITH all my heart I'll praise thy
name,
Before the gods thy praise proclaim;
I'll worship in thy holy place,
And praise thee for thy truth and grace.

2 For thou o'er all thy name, O Lord,
Hast magnified thy faithful word;
Thou didst me answer when I cried,
Thou hast my soul with strength supplied.

3 All kings of earth shall give thee praise,
When from thy mouth they learn thy
The in Jehovah's ways shall sing, [ways],
For great in glory is our King.

4 The Lord, though high, respects the low;
But he the proud far off doth know;
Though waves of trouble round me roll,
Thou, Lord, wilt yet revive my soul.

5 My foes engaged, my way withstand;
Against them thou wilt stretch thy hand;
Thine own right hand shall set me free,
And perfect make thy work for me.

6 O Lord, thy mercy never ends,
Throughout all ages it extends;
Thou on thy servant pity take,
Thine own hands' work do not forsake.

PSALM 139. C. M.

O LORD, thou hast me searched and known,
Thou know'st my sitting down,
And rising up; yea, all my thoughts
Afar to thee are known.

3 My footsteps, and my lying down,
Thou compassesst all ways;
Thou also know'st my thoughts,
Acquaint with all my ways.

3 For in my tongue, before I speak,
Not any word can be,
But altogether, lo, O Lord,
Thou know'st them.

4 Behold, before thou hast beset,
And laid on me thy hands;
Such knowledge is for me too strange,
Too high to understand.

5 Where from thy Spirit shall I go?
Or from thy presence fly?
Ascend I have'n, lo, thou art there;
There, if I will lie.

6 Take I the wings of morn and dwell
In utmost parts of sea;
Yet there, O Lord, thy hand shall hold
Thy right hand hold shall me.

7 Or if I say that darkness shall
Me cover from thy sight,
Thou surely shalt the very night
About me as be light.

8 Yea, darkness hideth not from thee,
But night doth shine as day;
Because the darkness and the light
Are both alike alway.

9 Because thou hast my reins passsed,
And thou didst cover me,
Ev'n when within my mother's womb
Inclosed I was by thee.

10 I will thee praise, for fearfully
And singularly made I am;
Thy works are wonderful, and well
My soul doth know the same.

11 My iniquance was not hid from thee,
When as in secret I
Was made; and in earth's lowest parts
Was wrought most curiously.

12 Ere yet my iniquance shape received
Thine eyes on it did look;
And all my members even then
Were written in thy book.

13 Then afterwards thou didst impart
Thy form to every one;
Although as yet yet they sinless were,
And of them there was none.

14 How precious unto me, O God,
Thy gracious thoughts appear,
And in their sum how very great,
How numberless they are.

15 If I should count them, then the sand
They more in number be;
What time soever I awake,
I ever am with thee.

16 Thou, Lord, wilt surely avengers slay:
Hence from me wickedness fly;
Thy foes against thee loudly speak,
And take thy name in vain.

17 Do not I hate all those, O Lord,
That hatred bear to thee?
With those that us against thee rise,
Can I but greet thee?

18 With perfect hatred them I hate,
My foe I them do hold;
Search me, O God, and know my heart,
Try me, my thoughts unfold.

19 And see if any wicked way
There be at all in me;
And in thine overlying way
To me a leader be.

PSALM 139. L. M.

I LORD, thou hast searched me, and I'll hat known
My sitting up and lying down,
And from afar thy searching eye
Beholds my thoughts that secret lie.

2 Thou know'st my path and lying down,
And all my ways to thee are known;
For in my tongue no secret can
Be, lo, O Lord, 'tis known to thee.

3 Behold, before me, thou dost stand,
And lay on me thy mighty hand;
Such knowledge is for me too strange,
'Tis high beyond my utmost range.

4 O whether shall my footsteps fly,
Beyond thy Spirit's searching eye?
To what retreat shall I withdraw,
And not thy hand thy presence there?

5 If I to heaven shall ascend,
Thy presence there will me attend;
If in the grave I make my bed,
Lo, there I find thy presence dread.

6 If on the morning wings I see,
And dwell in utmost parts of sea;
Even there thy hand shall guide my way,
And thy right hand shall be my stay.

7 Or, if I say, to flun thine eye,
In shades of darkness I will lie,
Although as yet the very night
Will shine as shines the noon-day light.

8 From thee the shadows can nought hide,
The night is day before thine eyes; [glows]
The darkness is to thee as bright
As are the beams of noon-day light.

9 My very reins belong to thee;
Thou in the womb didst cover me;
And I to thee will praise myself,
For fearful, wonderful is thy name.

10 Thy works are wonderful, I know;
And when in depths of earth below,
This complicated frame was made,
'Twas all before thine eyes displayed.

11 My substance yet unborn by thee,
Thy searching eyes did clearly see;
My days were written in thy frame,
Within thy books, ere yet begun.

12 Thy thoughts, O God, to me are dear,
How vast their numbers do appear!
More than the sand my reck'nings make,
I'm still with thee when I awake.

13 Thou wilt the wicked slay, O God;
Depart from me, ye men of blood;
Who speak of thee for ends profane,
Thy foes who take thy name in vain.

14 Do not I hate thy haters, Lord?
And thy assailants hold abhorred?
A perfect hatred thou I show,
And count each one to me a foe.

15 Search me, O God, my heart discern,
Try me, my very heart to learn;
See if in evil paths I stray,
And guide me in th' eternal way.

PSALM 140. C. M.

1 JEREMIAH, from the evil man,
Do thou deliver me;
And from the man of violence,
O keep me safe and free.

2 They in their heart imagine wrong,
And evil meditate;
And they for battle and for war
From day to day are met.

3 For like a serpent's piercing tongue
Their tongues they sharp do make;
And underneath their lips there lies
The poison of a snake.

4 Lord, keep me from the wicked's hands,
From evil men me save;
Who utterly overthrow
My gings supposed have.

5 The proud a snare and cords have laid,
And they a secret net have set;
Hence by the way-side for me spread;
They traps for me have set.

6 I to Jehovah said, Thou art
My God; then to the cry
Of all my supplications, Lord,
Do thou thine ear apply.

7 O God the Lord, who art the strength
Of my salvation great;
A covering in the day of war,
Thou on my head hast set.

8 Unto the wicked man, O Lord,
His wishes do not grant;
Nor further than his evil will,
Lest they themselves should want.

9 As for the head and chief of those
About that compass me,
E'en 'th by the machin' of their lips
Let them themselves cover.

10 Let burning coals upon them fall,
Them throw in fiery flame,
And in deep pits, that they no more
May rise up from the same.

11 Let not a man of evil tongue
On earth established be;
Let mischief hunt the violent,
'Till rolled utterly.

12 I know God will th' afflicted save,
The poor defend will he;
The just shall surely praise thy name,
The upright dwell with thee.

PSALM 141. C. M.

1 O LORD, I unto thee do cry,
Do thou make haste to me,
And give us ear to our voices,
When we'er I cry to thee.

2 As incense let my prayer, O Lord,
Be ordered in thine eyes;
Accept the lifting of my hands
As th' evening incense.

3 Set, Lord, a watch before my mouth,
Keep of my lips the door,
Nor let my heart be turned aside
To sins I should abhor.

4 To practise wicked works with men
That work iniquity;
And of their dancing let me not
With them partake be.

5 Let him that righteous is me smite,
It shall a kindness be;
Let him reprove, I shall it count
A precious oil to me.

6 Such smiting shall not break my head;
For yet shall come the day,
When I in their calamities
For them to God shall pray.

7 And when their judges down shall be
In stony places,
They then shall hear my words; for they Shall e'en be to their use.

8 About the grave's devouring mouth
Our bones are scattered round,
As wood which men do cut and cleave
Is cast scattered on the ground.

9 But unto thee, O God the Lord,
My longing eyes I raise;
My soul do not leave destitute;
My trust in thee I place.

10 Lord, keep me safely from the snare
Which they for me prepare;
And from the cruel plot of them
That wicked workers are.

11 Let workers of iniquity
Into their own nets fall,
While by thy favor I escape
The danger of them all.

PSALM 141. L. M.

1 O LORD, my God, to thee I cry;
Swift to my aid in misery fly;
And when to thee my cries ascend,
In pity to my voice attend.

2 As fragrant incense on the air,
So mount to heaven my early prayer;
And let my hands uplifted be,
As evening sacrifice to thee.

3 Set, Lord, a watch my mouth before,
And of my lips keep thou the door;
Nor leave my sinful heart to stray
Where evil footsteps lead the way.

4 Let me not of the feast partake
Which wicked men delight to make;
Let righteous men in mercy smite,
In their reproofs I'll take delight.

5 Let righteous lips my errors chide,
Like healing oil the accents glide;
If voice of faithful friend reprove,
Such smiling comes to me in love.

6 For them, when they are in distress,
To God I will my prayer address;
Their judges e'en on rocky ground,
Then avert to them my words shall sound.

7 Around the grave our bones are left,
In faithless hands our bones are cast;
To thee, Lord God, I lift my cry;
On thee my helpless soul relies.

8 Preserve me from the secret net,
The toils which impious hands have set;
In thine own snare the sinner fall,
While I by grace escape them all.

PSALM 143. C. M.

1 WITHIN my voice cried to the Lord,
With it made my request;
To him pour'd out my soul complaint,
To him my grief express'd.

2 When overwhelmed my spirit was,
Thou wilt didst know my way;
Where I did walk a perfect man
They did in secret lay.

3 I looked on my right hand, and viewed,
But none to know me were;
All refuge failed, there was no man
Who for my soul would care.

4 To thee I cried, O Lord, and said,
Thou my sure refuge art;
My portion in the land of life,
Th' ill life itself depart.

5 Because I very low am brought,
Attend my plaintive cry;
From my persecutors save,
Who stronger are than I.

6 From prison bring my soul, that I
Thy name may glorify;
Thou just shall compass me, when thou
With me dost be bounteous.

PSALM 143. L. M.

1 TO GOD my earnest voice I raise;
To God my voice imporing pray:
Before his face I pour my tears,
And tell my sorrow in his ear.

2 When grief my fainting soul o'erflow'd,
Thou knowest, Lord, the way I go;
And all the toils that foes do lay
To snare thy servant in his way.

3 All unprotected, lo, I stand;
No friendly guardant art my head;
No place of flight or refuge near,
And none to whom my soul I lead.

4 O Lord, my Saviour, now to thee,
Without a hope besides, I see;
To thee, my shelter from the strife,
My portion in the land of life.

5 Thou hear and heed my fervent cry,
Ere low with burning grief I lie;
Against my foes thy arm display,
For I am weak, but strong art thou.

6 Redeem me from the captive chains,
That I may sing in grateful strains;
Then shall the righteous round me press,
For God shall me with favor bless.

PSALM 143. C. M.

1 O LORD, hear my prayer, attend my cries;
And in thy kindness
Give an answer unto me,
E'en in thy righteousness.

8 Thy servant also bring thou not
In judgment to be tried;
Because no living man can be
Before thee justified.

9 The foe pursued my soul, and crushed
My life beneath his tread;
In darkness he hath made me dwell,
As who hath long been dead.

10 My spirit, therefore overwhelmed,
Both sink in sorrows great;
Within me breaks my very heart,
And I am desolate.

11 I call to mind the days of old,
I think upon thy deeds;
I meditate on all the works,
Which from thy hand proceed.

12 My hands to thee I stretch; my soul
Thirsts, as dry land, for thee.
Lord, haste to hear; my spirit falls;
Hide not thy face from me.

13 Lest like to thorn I do become
That to the dust descend,
At morn let me thy kindness hear;
On thee do I depend.

14 Teach me the way that I should walk;
I lift my soul to thee,
Lord, from me from my foes; I see
To thee to cover me.

15 Because thou art my God, to do
Thy will do I instruct;
Thy Spirit's good, me to the land
Of righteousness conduct.

16 Rejoice and quicken me, O Lord,
E'er for thine own name's sake;
And also in thy righteousness,
My soul from trouble take.

17 And of thy mercy slay my foes;
Let all destroyed be
That do afflict my soul; for I
A servant am to thee.

PSALM 143. C. M. (Second)

1 O LORD, hear my prayer, and to my cry
In faithfulness reply;
To me in righteousness reply,
A gracious answer send.

2 Nor art thy just tribunal call
Thy servant to be tried;
For by thy sight, of mortals all,
Shall none be justified.

3 For foes against my soul unite;
My life to dust they tread;
I dwell where darkness veils my sight,
And midst those long - see dead.

4 My spirit, overwhelmed with woes,
Within no sighs for rest;
And desolate, without repose,
My heart is sore oppress'd.

5 Yet I recall the days of old,
Thy works of wonder trace;
Thy works which ages past unfold;
I muse upon thy grace.

6 And now, O Lord, my outstretched hands
I lift to thee again;
For thee I long, as thirny lands
For genial showers of rain.

7 O hear me, Lord, nor more delay,
For grief my life consume;
Nor hide thy face from I decay,
Like those who lie in tomb.

8 When morning lights the eastern skies,
Thy mercy, Lord, disclose;
And let thy loving-kindness rise;
On thee my hopes repose.

9 Teach me the way where I should go;
I lift my soul to thee;
Redeem me from the raging foe;
To thee, O Lord, I flee.

10 Because thou art my God, I pray,
Teach me to do thy will;
O lead me in the perfect way
By thy good Spirit still.

11 Rejoice me, Lord, for thy great name,
And for thy judgment's sake;
From all my foes, O Lord, reclaim,
My soul from trouble take.

12 In mercy bare thy mighty arm,
To crush my foes in slum;
Cut off, who work thy servant's harm,
Devoted to thy name.

PSALM 143. 6s.

1 O LORD, my prayer hear,
And to my suppliant cry
In faithfulness give ear,
In righteousness reply.

2 Nor into judgment call
Thy servant to be tried;
With thee, of mortals all,
Can none be justified.

3 I'm followed by the foe,
My life to earth thy tread,
As men dead long ago,
I dwell in darkness dead.

4 My spirit therefore vex'd
Is overwhelmed with woes;
My heart in me perplex'd
And desolate hath been.

5 Yet I recall to mind
What ancient days record;
Thy works of every kind
I think upon, O Lord.

6 To thee I stretch my hands;
By thou my help receive;
As though the thirny lands,
So long my soul for thee.

7 O Lord, send quick relief,
I humbly pray to thee;
My spirit is in thine right grief,
Thy face hide not from me.

8 Unless thou interpose,
And help to me extend,
I shall be like to those
Who to the grave descend.

9 Because I trust in thee,
O Lord, cause me to hear
Thy loving-kindness free,
When morning doth appear.

10 Cause me to know the way
In which my path should be;
Because to thee I pray,
And lift my soul to thee.

11 O Lord, deliver me
From all who mo oppose;
To thee alone I flee
To hide me from my foes.

12 Thou art my God in need,
Teach me thy just command,
Thy Spirit's good; me lead
Into the perfect land.

13 O Lord, for thy name's sake,
Rejoice and quicken me;
And for thine own truth's sake,
My soul from trouble free.

14 In mercy cut off all
My foes, and put to shame
All who afflict my soul;
For I thy servant am.

PSALM 144. C. M.

1 BLESSED ever to the Lord,
Who in my strength and might,
Who doth instruct my hands to war,
My fingers teach to fight.

2 My goodness, fortress, my high tow'r,
Deliverance and shield,
In whom I trust; who unto me
My people makes to yield.

3 Lord, what is man, that thou of him
Dost so much knowledge take!
Or son of man, that thou of him
So great account dost make!

4 Man is like vanity; his days,
As shadows pass away,
As thine, who hear's, come down, touch
The hills, and smoke shall they.

5 Cut thou thy lightning, scatter them;
Thine arrows shoot, them rout.
Thine hand send down above, no more;
From great depths draw me out.

6 Me free from bands of children strange,
Whose mouth speaks vanity;
And let: right hand a right hand is
Thy work of deliverance.

7 A new song I will sing to thee,
O Lord, on psaltery,
And on a ten-stringed instrument
Will praise sing to thee.

8 For he it is that unto kings
Deliverance doth send;
And he his servant David doth
From hateful sword defend.

9 Me free from bands of children strange
Whose mouth speaks vanity;
And their right hand a right hand is
Thy work of deliverance.

10 That, as the plants, ere some may be
In youth grown up like art;
Our danglers, like to corner-stones,
Carved like a palace fair.

11 That to afford all kind of store
Thou garners mayst fill;
That our sheep thousands, in our streets
Ten thousands they may yield.

12 That strong our oxen be for work,
That no in-breaking be,
Nor going out; and that our streets
May from complaints be free.

13 O bless the people who are found
In such a state as this;
Yea, greatly bless those people are,
Whose God JEREMIAH is.

PSALM 145. C. M.

1 TELL thee exalt, my God, O King;
I Thy name I will adore;
I'll bless thee every day, and praise
Thy name with reverence.

2 The Lord is great, much to be praised,
His greatness search exceeds.
Race unto race shall praise thy works,
And show thy mighty deeds.

Which wondrous are, O Lord.

4 Men of thine acts the might shall show,
Thine act that dreadfull awe;
And I, thy glory to advance,
Thy greatness will declare.

6 The memory of thy goodness great
They largely shall express;
With songs of praise they shall extol
Thy perfect righteousness.

5 The Lord Jehovah gracious is,
In him compassions flow;
In mercy he is very great,
And unto anger slow.

7 The Lord JEHOVAH unto all
His goodness doth express;
And over all his mighty works
His tender mercies are.

8 Thy works shall all these praise, O Lord,
And thee thy saints shall bless;
Thy shall thy kingdom's glory show,
Thy pow'r by speech express:

9 To make the sons of men to know
His acts do mightily,
And of his kingdom to display
The glorious majesty.

10 Thy kingdom shall forever stand,
Thy reign through all ages;
God nath all that are bowed down,
Upholdeth all that fall.

11 The eyes of all things wait on thee,
Thou giver of all good,
And thus in season dost give
To every one his food.

12 Thy hand is opened lib'rally;
It thy bounty giveth
Enough to satisfy the want
Of every thing that liveth.

13 The Lord is just in all his ways,
And good in his works all;
God's name to all that call on him,
In truth that on him call.

14 He will accomplish the desire
Of those that do him fear:
He also will deliver them,
And he their cry will hear.

15 The Lord preserves all who him love,
That nought can hurt them;
But he all those that wicked are
Will utterly destroy.

16 My mouth the praises of the Lord
To publish shall not cease;
Let all flesh join in holy names
Forevermore to praise.

PSALM 145. L. M.

1 O LORD, thou art my God and King;
I'll thee extol, thy praise proclaim;
I will thee bless, and sing
For ever to thy holy name.

2 Each day I rise I will thee bless,
And praise thy name without end.
Much to be praised, and great God is;
His greatness none can comprehend.

3 Face shall thy works praise unto race,
The mighty acts show down thy throne.
And I will speak thy glorious grace,
And honor of thy majesty.

4 Thy wondrous works I will declare;
By men the might shall be extolled
Of all thy acts which dreadfull are,
And I thy greatness will unfold.

5 Thy utter shall abundantly
The memory of thy goodness great;
They shall sing praises cheerfully,
Whilst thy thy righteousness relate.

6 The Lord our God most gracious is,
In him compassions also flow;
In mercy he is rich in blessing,
But unto anger he is slow.

7 To all the Lord is very good,
O'er all his works his mercy is.
Thy works all praise to thee afford;
Thy saints, O Lord, thy name shall bless.

8 Thy kingdom's glory thy shall show,
Thy also shall thy name extol;
That so men's eyes his deeds may know,
His kingdom's grace that doth excel.

9 Thy kingdom hath no end at all,
It shall to ages all remain.
The Lord upholdeth all that fall,
The cast-down raiseth up again.

10 The eyes of all upon thee wait;
In season thou their food dost give;
Thy opened hand, with bounty great,
Supplies the wants of all that live.

11 The Lord is just in his ways all,
And holy in his works each one.
The Lord is near to all who call,
Who call in truth on him alone.

12 God will the just desire fulfil
If such as do him fear indite;
Their cry regard, and hear he will,
And save them in the time of need.

13 The Lord will keep continually
All who him love with upright heart;
But all who work iniquity,
Destroy will be, and quite subvert.

11 My mouth and lips I'll therefore frame,
To speak the praises of the Lord;
To magnify his holy name
Forever let all flesh accord.

PSALM 146. C. M.

1 PRAISE God, the Lord praise, O
my son!
I'll praise God while I live;
While I have being, to my God
In songs I'll praise give.

2 Trust not in princes, nor man's son,
In whom there is no stay;
His breath departs, to earth he turns;
That day his thought is away.

3 O happy is that man, and blest,
Whom Jacob's God doth aid;
Whose hope upon Jehovah rests,
And on his God is stayed.

4 Who made the earth and heavens high,
Who made the swelling deep,
And all that is within the same;
Who truth doth ever keep.

5 God righteous judgment executes
For those oppress'd that lie;
He to the hungry giveth food;
God sets the prisoners free.

6 The Lord doth give the blind their sight,
The bowed down doth raise;
Jehovah dearly loves all those
That walk in upright ways.

7 The stranger's widow, the widow's stay,
The orphan's help is he;
But yet by him the wicked's way
Turned upside down shall be.

8 The Lord shall reign for evermore;
Thy God, O Zion, he Shall reign to all generations all.
Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM 146. L. M.

1 PRAISE the Lord, my spirit, praise
Thy God through all thy length of days;
I'll praise him with the breath he gives;
I'll praise him while my spirit lives.

2 Trust not the pow'r of earthly kings,
Nor strength that man's vain succor brings;
His breath departs, he sinks to clay,
His thoughts shall perish in that day.

3 O blest the man whose hopes are laid
On God, on Jacob's God is stayed,
Who made the heav'n, the earth and main,
And all the fulness they contain.

4 Whose truth forever stands secure;
Who saves th' oppress'd, and feeds the poor;
Who gives them bread with bounteous
hand,
And breaks the captive's iron band.

5 The Lord unseals the sightless eyes,
And gives the weak strength to rise;
The Lord dispels the stranger's fears,
And guards the widow's lonely years.

6 The Lord maintains the orphan's cause,
And loves the man who loves his law;
But rises in paths of sin that stray,
The Lord shall overturn their way.

7 Jehovah shall his throne maintain,
And through eternity shall reign;
Thy God, O Zion, be adored
Through every age: praise ye the Lord.

PSALM 146. L. M. 6 lines.

PRaise the Lord.

1 PRAISE God, my son! while I have breath,
Until my voice is lost in death,
His praise shall all my powers employ.
My days of praise shall ne'er be past;
While life and breath and being last,
My God I'll praise with songs of joy.

2 In princes great put not your trust,
Nor son of man, who turns to dust;
Vain is the hope which there shall bloom;
Thy breath departs, their pomp and power
And thoughts will vanish in an hour,
And all shall perish in the tomb.

3 Happy the man whose hopes rely
On Jacob's God: he made the sky,
And earth, and seas, and fulness all:
His truth forever stands secure;
He saves th' oppress'd; he feeds the poor;
And frees the captive from his thrall.

4 The Lord gives eye-sight to the blind;
The Lord supports the sinking mind;
God loves the just; the poor sustains;
The widow and the orphan's stay;
God overturns the wicked's way;
Thy God, O Zion, ever reigns.

PSALM 146. 8s and 7s.

1 HALLELUJAH! praise Jehovah,
O my soul, Jehovah praise;
While I live I'll praise Jehovah,
To my God sing all my days.

2 Put no trust in earthly princes,
Nor man's son, whose help is vain;
Soon his breath and thoughts forsake him,
Back to dust he turns again.

8 He that hath the God of Jacob
For his help is truly blest;
He whose hope is in Jehovah,
And upon his God doth rest;

4 On the Lord who made the heaven,
Earth and sea, and all therein;
Who will keep his truth forever,
Rights of all oppress'd maintain.

5 He gives food to those that linger,
To the blind restoreth sight;
He gives freedom to the prisoner,
Makes the bowed to stand upright.

6 He the righteous loves, and safely
Keeps the stranger; he's a stay
To the fatherless and widow,
But subverts the slaver's way.

7 Evermore Jehovah reigneth,
Through all ages he is king.
Even he, thy God, O Zion,
To Jehovah praise sing.

PSALM 147. C. M.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord; for it is good
Praise to our God to sing!
For it is pleasant, and to praise
It is a comely thing.

2 The Lord doth build Jerusalem;
And he it is alone
That the dispersed of Israel
That gather into one.

3 Those that are broken in their heart,
And troubled in their mind,
He heareth, and their painful wails
He tenderly up-hinds:

4 He counts the number of the stars;
He names them every one.
Our Lord is great, and full of pow'r;
His wisdom search can none.

5 The Lord lifts up the meek; and casts
The wicked to the ground.
Sing to the Lord, and give him thanks,
On harp his praises sound;

6 Who coverseth the heav'n with clouds,
Who for the earth below
Prepareth rain, who maketh grass
Upon the mountains grow.

7 He gives the beast his food, he feeds
The ravens young that cry.
His pleasure not in horses' strength,
Nor in man's legs, doth lie.

8 But in all those that do him fear
The Lord doth pleasure take;
In those that to his mercy do
By hope themselves betake.

9 The Lord praises, O Jerusalem,
Thy God, O Zion, praise ye he;
For thy gates' bars he maketh strong;
Thy sons in thee doth bless.

10 In thy borders maketh peace;
With fine wheat flourish thee.
He sends forth his command on earth,
His word runs speedily.

11 Hoar frost, like ashes, scattereth he;
Like wool he snow doth give;
Like morsels casteth forth his ice;
Who in his cold can live?

12 He sendeth forth his mighty wind,
And melteth them away;
His wind he makes to blow, and then
The waters flow away.

13 The doctrine of his holy word
To Jacob he doth show;
His statutes and his judgments he Gives Israel to know.

14 To any nation never he
Such favor did afford;
For thy his judgments have not known.
O do ye praise the Lord.

PSALM 147. 7s and 6s.

1 PRAISE God! 'tis good and pleasant,
And comely to adore;
Jehovah builds up Salem;
Her outcasts doth restore.

2 He heals the broken-hearted,
He makes the wounded live;
The stony host he numbers,
And names to all doth give.

3 Our Lord is great and mighty,
All things his Spirit knows;
The Lord lifts up the lowly,
But sinners overthrow.

4 C thank and praise Jehovah,
With harp, O praise his name,
Who clouds the heav'n with vapors,
And sends on earth the rain.

5 He clothes with grass the mountains,
And gives the leas't their food;
He hears the crying raven,
And feeds their tender brood.

6 In horses' strength delights not,
Nor speed of man loves he;
The Lord loves all who fear him,
And to his mercy see.

7 O Salem, praise Jehovah,
Thy God, O Zion, praise;
For he thy gates hath strengthened,
And blest thy sons with grace.

8 With peace he'll bless thy borders,
The flocks he'll send to graze;
He sends forth his commandment,
And swiftly speeds his word.

6 Like wool the snow he giveth,
Sprays hail o'er all the land,
Hoar frost like ashes scattereth;
Who can his cold withstand?

10 Then forth his word he sendeth;
He makes the wind to blow,
The snow and ice are melted,
Again the waters flow.

11 He shows his word to Jacob,
To Israel's seed alone;
His statutes and his judgments,
The heathen have not known;
Praise ye the Lord!

PSALM 148. C. M.

1 PRAISE God, from heavens praise
the Lord,
In heights praise to him be.
O all his angels, praise ye him;
His hosts all, praise him ye.

2 O praise ye him, both sun and moon,
Praise him, all stars of light.
Ye hosts of heav'n his praise, and Above the heavens his light. [choirs]

3 Let all unite to praise the name of our Almighty God,
For he commanded, and they were Created by his word.

4 He also, for all time to come,
Hath them established sure;
He hath appointed them a law,
Which ever shall endure.

5 O praise JEHOVAH from the earth,
Ye dragons, ye deeps;
Fire, hail, snow, vapor, stormy wind,
His word that fully keeps.

6 All hills and mountains, fruitful trees,
And all ye cedars high,
All beson and rattle, creeping things,
And all ye beasts that fly.

7 Ye kings of earth, and people too,
Ye princes, judges, ye lords;
Young men and maidens, praise ye him,
Old men, and children also.

8 Let them the Lord's name praise; he Alone is excellent;
His glory reacheth far above
The earth and firmament.

9 His people's horn, the praise of all
His saints, exalts he;
Of Israel's seed, his people near.
The Lord our God praise ye.

PSALM 148. 11. M.

1 THE Lord of heav'n confess,
On high his glory raise.
Him all ye angels bless,
Him all his armies praise.

2 Him glorify,
Sun, moon, and stars;
Ye higher spheres,
And cloudy sky.

3 From God your beings are,
Him therefore famous make;
You all created were;
When he the word but spake.
And from that place,
Where fixed you were
By his decree,
You cannot pass.

4 Praise God from earth below,
Ye dragons, ye deeps;
Fire, hail, clouds, wind, and snow,
Which in command he keeps.
Praise ye his name,
Hills great and small,
Trees low and tall;
Beasts wild and tame;

5 All things that creep or fly,
Ye kings, ye humble throng,
All princes, men or high;
Both men and virgin young,
Ev'n young and old,
Exalt his name;
For he his name
Should be extolled.

6 O let God's name be praised
Above both earth and sky;
For he his saints hath raised,
And set their horn on high;
Even those that be
Of Israel's race,
Near to his grace.
The Lord praise ye.

PSALM 148. 7s.

PRaise ye the Lord.

1 PRAISE the Lord from heavens high
Praise him in the lofty sky;
Praise him, all ye angels bright;
Praise him, all his hosts of light;
Praise him, sun and moon afar;
Praise him, every host of star.

3 Praise him all ye heavens high: Waters drifting through the sky, Let them praise Jehovah in power, For he called them and they came. He has fixed their places fast; His decree shall ever last.

4 Praise the Lord from earth below, Monsters through the deep that go; Fire and cloud, and snow and hail, And th' obedient stormy gale, Hills and lofty mountains all, Fruitful trees and cedars tall.

4 Beasts and cattle everywhere, Creeping things and fowl of air, Kings and men of humble birth, Princes, judges of the earth, Youthful men and virgins all, Aged men and children small.

6 Let them praise with one consent, For his name is excellent; Flourish he, o'er earth and sky, His his Israel raised on high. Praise him, saints, with one accord; People near him, praise the Lord.

PSALM 148. 2s and 7s.

1 HALLELUJAH, praise Jehovah, From the heavens praise his name.

Praise Jehovah in the highest, All his angels praise proclaim.

2 All his hosts, together praise him, Sun, and moon, and stars on high; Praise him, O ye horns of heavens, And ye floods above the sky.

3 Let them praise give Jehovah, They were made at his command, Thum' forever be established; His decree shall ever stand.

4 From the earth, O praise Jehovah, All ye floods, ye dragons all; Fire, and hail, and snow, and vapors, Stormy winds that bear his call.

2 All ye fruitful trees and cedars, All ye hills and mountains high, Creeping things and beasts and cattle, Birds that in the heavens fly.

4 Kings of earth, and all ye people, Princes great, earth's judges all; Praise his name, young men and maidens, Aged men, and children small.

7 Let them praise give Jehovah, For his name alone is high, And his glory is exalted, Far above the earth and sky.

8 He his people's pow'r exalthe, All his saints to praise secure; Jacob's seed, a people near him, Hallelujah. Praise the Lord.

PSALM 149. C. M.

1 PRAISE ye Jehovah: sing to him A new song, and his praise, In the assembly of his saints, In sweet psalms do ye raise.

2 Let Israel in his Maker joy; Let them with timbrel sing; Let all that Zion's children are Be joyful to their King.

3 O let them all to his great name Give praises in the dance; Let them with timbrel and with harp In songs his praise advance.

4 For God doth pleasure take in those That his own people be; And he with his salvation free The meek will beautify.

5 And in his glory excellent Let all his saints rejoice; Let them to him upon their beds Alone lift up their voice;

6 And in their mouth aloft be raised The praises of the Lord, And let them have in their right hand A sharp two-edged sword;

7 To execute the vengeance due Upon the heathen all, And make the gods and beasts and cattle, Upon the people fall.

8 Let them with chains as prisoners bind Their kings who them command; And hold in iron fetters strong, The nobles of their land.

9 On them the judgment perform Found written in his word; This honor is for all his saints. O do ye praise the Lord.

PSALM 149. 10s and 11s.

1 O PRAISE ye the Lord! Prepare your glad voice, New songs with his saints, Assembled to sing: Before his Creator Let Israel rejoice, And children of Zion Be glad in their King.

2 And let them his name Extol in the dance, With timbrel and harp His praises express; Who always takes pleasure His saints to advance, And with his salvation free The humble to bless.

3 His saints shall sing loud With glory and joy, And rest undimayd, With songs in his praise; The praise of Jehovah Their lips shall employ; A sword in their right hand, Two-edged for the fight.

4 The heathen to judge, Their pride to consume; To fetter their kings, Their princes to bind; To execute on them The long-deer'd doom; Such honor forever The holy shall find. Hallelujah.

PSALM 150. C. M.

1 PRAISE ye the Lord, God's praise His sanctuary raise; To him within the firmament Of power give ye praise.

2 Because of all his mighty acts, With praise him magnify; O praise ye him, as he excels In glorious majesty.

3 Praise him with trumpet's sound; his praise With psaltery advance; With timbrel, harp, stringed instrument, With organs and the dance.

4 Praise him on cymbals loud; him praise On cymbals sounding high, Let each thing breathing praise the Lord, Praise to the Lord give ye.

PSALM 150. L. M.

1 O PRAISE our Lord, where rich in grace His presence fills his holy place; Praise him in yon celestial arch, Where holds his pow'r his glorious march.

2 O praise him for his deeds of fame, O praise the greatness of his name, O praise him with the trumpet's sound, With harp and psaltery answering round.

3 The praises of the Lord advance With organ, timbrel, and the dance; O praise him with the notes of joy, And every harp in praise employ.

4 On cymbals loud, Jehovah praise; On cymbals high, his glory raise; Let all that breathe, with glad accord, Lift up their voice, and praise the Lord.

THE MUTUAL RELATIONS OF THE FOUR GOSPELS.

"The Word, the artificer of all things, who sits upon the [four] Cherubim, holding together all things, being manifested to men, gave to us the four-formed Gospel, actuated by one spirit." So said Irenæus in the middle of century second, reckoning from the Lord's ascension. Earlier than he, Tatian had formed a Harmony, titled the Diatessaron, or Through-the-Four. And still earlier than he, Justin Martyr, Tatian's own teacher, tells us what "the apostles in the memoirs by them, which are called Gospara," said. And those Gospels, he tells us, were, in his day, publicly read as of sole and unique authority in the churches, as the Old Testament was in the synagogues. So that it is beyond rational question, from these and other proofs, that between the death of St. John and the time that Justin wrote, the Four Gospels had, by silent and spontaneous consent of the holy martyr Church, arisen to a universal, unquestioned, unrivalled authority. It was not by decrees of councils or any arbitrary authority, but by unanimous catholic concurrence, that the evangelical Canon was adopted.

But there was a Gospel, that is, a gospel-matter, a gospel-history, before there were the four written Gospel-books. Our Saviour's deeds, words, death, and resurrection, being the very essence and substance of the Gospels, existed in the minds and memory, in the heart and soul of the living Church with great fullness and completeness before the four evangelists wrote. The twelve apostles had been by Jesus chosen as his eye and ear witnesses; and after his death they were the official rehearsers of the narratives. "Beginning at Jerusalem," where the words and deeds of Jesus were well known, endowed with power from on high, they repeated the story of Jesus and him crucified. This oral gospel the Church accepted from these first eye-witnesses; and it formed the complete body of the Christian faith. Hearers and spectators would sometimes commit to parchment memoranda of particular sayings, discourses, or doings of Jesus. And these would be of various authenticity, arrangement, and extent. In time, more extended and completer, yet imperfect narratives, would be composed, and come into the possession of many private Christians and most of the Churches. Thus there existed an oral and documentary gospel-matter before the four Gospel-books.

This living oral gospel had a peculiar power to it during the time when its utterances came from the original inspired apostolic lips, and though in a less degree, from the reports of those who had heard the apostles. Even after the written Gospels had come into existence, and until late toward the close of the second century, a feeling of interest in behalf of the oral tradition over the recorded letter pervaded many hearts. "I do not think," says Papias, soon after the close of the first century, "that I derived so much benefit from books as from the living voice of those who are still surviving." His preference was this: "If I met with any one who has been a follower of the elders," (the apostles and their contemporaries), "I made it a point to inquire what were the declarations of the elders; what was said by Andrew, Peter, or Phillip; what by Thomas, James, John, Matthew, or any other of the disciples of our Lord; what Aristion (Luke?) and the presbyter John, disciples of our Lord, relate." In an age where reading and writing little prevail, such oral traditions are conveyed, by memory, with great accuracy of form. The Jewish succession of Rabbies claimed to transmit, by tradition, an entire unwritten law, without addition or subtraction. Repetition of the same narratives by the same apostolic narrators, often in each other's hearing, would result in a great sameness of expression; and the narrative would finally assume something of a stereotype form. The wonderful deeds and holy words of Jesus, had no writing existed, might have been mentally preserved with a great accuracy for more than one generation.

But as the authoritative written letter alone could preserve above suspicion a gospel intended for ages, so the great Head of the Church took providential care that the record should come from responsible hands.

Two books from original apostles, and two from apostolic contemporaries under apostolic sanction, and with general sanction of the apostolic church, have come down to these and future ages. Of these the three first (which, from their strong likeness, are commonly called The Synoptic Gospels) contain the authentic transcript of the oral gospel, as it existed in varied stereotype forms in the apostles' preaching; while the fourth contains the independent personal narration of the apostle who was nearest and deepest in the heart of Jesus. As these gospels took their place in the archives of the Churches of the widespread Christendom already existing in different quarters of the globe, Asia, Africa, and Europe, and were read to the congregation (as the oral had been delivered) from Sabbath to Sabbath, the oral gospel was gradually superseded, until scarce a trace of it remains to our day. Of the nature of the verbal identities and variations between the three Synoptic Gospels, the following comparative passages, as specimens, will convey some idea:

THE BAPTISM OF JESUS.

MATTHEW iii. 13-17.

13. Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. 14. But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? 15. And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him. 16. And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: 17. And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

MARK i. 9-11.

9. And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

LUKE iii. 21-22.

21. Now when all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized,

10. And straightway coming out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him.— 11. And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

and praying, the heaven was opened. 22. And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.

THE HEALING OF PETER'S WIFE'S MOTHER.

MATTHEW viii. 14-17.

14. And when Jesus was come into Peter's house,

MARK i. 29-31.

29. And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John. 30. But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever; and anon they tell him of her. 31. And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them.

LUKE iv. 38-47.

38. And he arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house.

he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever.

15. And he touched her hand, and the fever left her; and she arose, and ministered unto them.

And Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they besought him for her. 39. And he stooped over her, and rebuked the fever; and it left her; and immediately she arose and ministered unto them.

MATTHEW viii. 28-32.

30. And there was a good way off from them a herd of many swine feeding. 31. So the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine. 32. And he said unto them, Go. And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine; and, behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters.

THE DEMONIAO SWINE.

MARK v. 11-15.

11. Now there was there nigh unto the mountains a great herd of swine feeding. 12. And all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them. 13. And forthwith Jesus gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine; and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea (there were about two thousand), and were choked in the sea.

LUKE viii. 22, 23.

32. And there was an herd of many swine feeding on the mountain; and they besought him that he would suffer them to enter into them. And he suffered them.

33. Then went the devils out of the man, and entered into the swine; and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the lake, and were choked.

The verbal relations between the three Gospels are thus well described by Alford: "First, perhaps, we shall have three, five, or more words identical; then as many wholly distinct; then two clauses or more, expressed in the same words, but differing in order; then a clause contained in one or two, and not in the third; then several words identical; then a clause not wholly distinct, but apparently inconsistent; and so forth, with recurrence of the same arbitrary and anomalous alterations, coincidences, and transpositions."

These agreements and variations cannot be explained on the theory held by some writers that one evangelist copied from another. Neither can they be explained on the assumption that the Gospels are translated from a common original document. Nor would they appear in the style of several perfectly separate and independent narrators of the same transactions. The only solution, as the best biblical scholars now agree, is to be found in the statement given above. Our Gospels are the record of the oral narratives and written memoranda of the apostolic eye-witnesses and ear-witnesses, naturally falling into these mingled uniformities and varieties.

Of the general comparison of the Gospels, the following are a very few of the interesting results:

I. Two, Matthew and Luke, have a proper beginning, middle, and end, namely: 1. The Early Life of Jesus to his Ministry; 2. His Ministry; and 3. His Suffering, Resurrection, and Ascension. The other two, Mark and John, with the beginning nearly omitted, have only the middle and the end. All are full toward the end, as if the Redeemer's sufferings were by all held as the supreme point of interest.

II. There are but about twenty-five verses in Mark which have no parallel in either Matthew or Luke; yet Mark is often more full and fresh in his narrative than either of his parallels; and it is curious to note that Matthew and Luke never both present a passage but Mark presents it also, Matthew and Luke never alone coincide without Mark intermediately coinciding with both.

III. Matthew and Mark furnish, as their peculiar contributions, (not found in either Luke or John,) a most important mass of the Lord's Galilean history, (Matthew xiv. 22; xvi. 12; Mark vi. 45; viii. 26.) On the other hand, Luke's peculiar contributions are particulars of John's and Jesus' birth, (chap. l.) and a full but apparently unchronological account of the Lord's ministry in Perea and eastern Judea; (ix. 51; xviii. 14.) This last Lukean contribution contains some of the most brilliant gems of the Lord's teachings.

IV. Let the entire contents of the Gospels be estimated as 100, and the following table will give an idea of their various peculiarities and agreements:

|              | PECULIARITIES. | AGREEMENTS. |
|--------------|----------------|-------------|
| Mark.....    | 7              | 93          |
| Matthew..... | 42             | 58          |
| Luke.....    | 59             | 41          |
| John.....    | 92             | 8           |

V. There is a great difference between those parts which recite discourses or utterances of the Lord, or other person, and those which narrate facts. In the former there is a prevailing unity, in the latter diversity. Thus:

|              | DISCOURSES. | FACTS. | COINCIDENCES IN DISCOURSES. | COINCIDENCES IN FACTS. |
|--------------|-------------|--------|-----------------------------|------------------------|
| Matthew..... | 25          | 75     | 2.08                        | 14.56                  |
| Mark.....    | 50          | 50     | 3.33                        | 13.33                  |
| Luke.....    | 34          | 66     | .50                         | 9.56*                  |

VI. Each Gospel, notwithstanding, presents the most explicit marks of a single authorship running through its single whole. How much soever of document, quotation, or compilation there is, the author's individual peculiarities of mind and style are unquestionably traceable throughout. Favorite words, texture of style, peculiar general plan and purpose, are obvious to a very slight observation. Hence of each Gospel-book there is a single responsible author. The phrase, "The Gospel according to Mat- thew," means, The common Gospel-matter as embodied in a book by the inspired official eye-witnessing Apostle Matthew.

The question what language was spoken in Palestine in the time of our Saviour has been, and still is, a matter of interesting discussion among scholars. The Jews of Palestine were, no doubt, bilingual; that is, they spoke two languages, the Aramaic and the Greek. During the Babylonian captivity, the Jews lost the use of their primitive Hebrew, and learned to speak the vernacular of Babylon, which was the Chaldee or Aramaic, a sister dialect to the Hebrew. Yet, so unintelligible had their ancestral tongue become, that, when, upon their return, their old Hebrew law was read in their hearing, it revealed, alas! no meaning to their ears. In consequence of this, their doctors prepared for them certain Aramaic or Chaldee paraphrases, or versions, which they called Targums, that is, Interpretations. It was through these that the returned Jews popularly learned in their own tongue the Mosaic law.

Yet, meantime, the conquests of Alexander, and the brilliancy of Grecian genius, had spread the Greek language over the civilized world. In Alexandria, the splendid metropolis of Egypt, the Jews had risen to eminence in Greek composition. Under the patronage of the royal Ptolemics, the Old Testament was translated into Greek. This Greek translation, from its being supposed to have been made by seventy translators, is called Septuaginta, the ΣΕΠΤUΑΓΙΝΤ; that is, the Sevanti. A large number of quotations from the Old Testament in the New are unquestionably made from the Septuagint translation. Both the Greek of the Septuagint and the Greek of the New Testament could, doubtless, be read by the people, especially of the cities of Palestine, better than the Aramaic; otherwise, the New Testament would have been written in Aramaic. But the Greek of the New Testament, as scholars agree, is strongly tinged with a Hebrew influence. It is, therefore, not what is called pure classic Greek. And this was providentially right. Under the guidance of God, the Greeks had been prepared to furnish the most wonderfully flexible and beautiful of all human languages, and to spread it over the earth; and He had also trained the Hebrew race to furnish the religious truth and spirit. These blended together furnished a Hebraised Greek, a style most perfect for expressing a divine revelation, and for conveying to the world a universal religion.

It is very important, in appreciating the truths of the Gospels, to remember that a large share of the epistles of Paul were written earlier than the Gospels. The Epistle to the Romans was written before the Gospel of Luke. And two points are here important. First, the entire epistles of Paul presuppose the same story of Jesus' birth, miracles, ministry, death, and ascension as the Gospels. Every ordinary Christian reader very well knows that St. Paul and St. Luke held forth, not a different, but the same Christ. Second, skepticism itself is obliged for very shame to admit the authenticity of several of Paul's epistles. The Epistle to the Romans contains the undoubted Christ of Luke, and the Epistle to the Romans is by all pronounced authentic. So that in Paul we have a fifth Gospel of the strongest kind, corroborating the other four.

The following list will present the dates of the New Testament books, mostly according to the reckoning of Ehrhard:

33. Ascension of Jesus.
45. Publication of Matthew's Gospel in the Aramaic dialect. Dispersal of the Apostles from Jerusalem.
- 51-54. Publication of Paul's Epistles to the Thessalonians.
- 55-57. Paul's Epistles to Galatians, to Timothy, Titus, Corinthians.
58. To Romans.
- 58-60. Paul imprisoned at Caesarea. Gospel of Luke published.
- 61-64. Paul's imprisonment in Rome. Epistles to Philemon, Colossians, Ephesians, Philippians.
64. Death of Paul. Death of Peter. John goes to Ephesus. Gospel of Mark published. Matthew (Greek) before 70.
- 95-96. Banishment of John to Patmos. Gospel of John, his Epistles and Apocalypses.
100. Death of John.

HISTORY OF ALL RELIGIONS.

ABELIANS, or ABELITES, a temporary sect of Hippo, mentioned only by Augustine. They regulated marriage after the example of Abel, who, as they believed, married, but lived in continence. Their endeavor to perpetuate the sect by adopting the children of others failed, and they died out.

ABYSSINIAN CHURCH is a mixture of Judaism, Christianity, and Paganism. The Abyssinians claim to be of Jewish extraction, circumcise both male and female, observe both the first and seventh days as holy, regard the laws of Moses, and imitate the services of the temple. They believe that Christ came in twofold nature—human and divine—compound, yet distinct. They also worship the Virgin Mary, and invoke saints and angels. They believe in penance, confession, and absolution of sins. They have much in common with the Roman Catholic religion, but deny the supremacy of the Pope.

ACACIANS, named from Acacius, bishop of Caesaria. This sect sprang up and became extinct in the fourth century. They denied the unity of the Father and Son.

ADAMITES, according to Epiphanius, a sect claiming to be created in the primitive innocence of Adam, who maintained that marriage was the institution of Satan. This sect has been extinct since the fifteenth century.

ADOPTIONISTS, a Spanish sect of heretics who maintained that Jesus Christ was the adopted son of God in his human nature.

AERIANS.—See Arians.

AETIANS.—See Arians.

AGAPÆMONIANS, a sect of English communists.

AGONETÆ, a sect of the fourth and sixth centuries, who denied the presence of God and of Christ.

AGONYCLITÆ, a sect of Christians who, in the seventh century, maintained that it was unlawful to bend the knee and always prayed standing. Extinct.

AGYNIANS, a sect of the seventh century, who condemned marriage and the use of certain meats. Extinct.

ALBANIAN and ALBANENSES, relics of Gnostics, who existed in the eighth century. See Gnostics.

ALBIGENSES, reformers of the twelfth century, against whom Pope Innocent III raised a crusade. After resistance for half a century, they disappeared, but became the seed of the Waldenses and other so-called heretics till the time of the Reformation.

ALBRIGHTS.—See Evangelical Association.

ALLENITES, disciples of Henry Allen, a Nova Scotian, who believe the whole human race are parts of one Great Spirit, invested in material bodies as punishment for the transgression, and in a state of probation for immortal bliss.

AMEDIANS, lovers of God, an Italian sect of monks who wore a single garment girt with a cord, afterward merged with the Bistercian and Scolocanti orders.

ANABAPTISTS, or "MUNSTER BAPTISTS," a German sect which arose during the sixteenth century, who, under the pretext that Christ himself was about to assume all government, bid defiance to all magistrates, laws, and every restraint. Munster, a fanatic, assumed the leadership, and, at the head of a large army, attempted to propagate the new faith by force of arms. He was soon overcome, captured, and executed by the elector of Saxony. His followers were scattered, and a party of them settled at Munster, whence their name. Here they established themselves, deposed the magistrates, confiscated estates, and deposited all treasure for common use. They called their city Mount Zion, invited all of their faith to assemble, and proclaimed that they would reduce the world to their doctrines. The city was, after a long siege, taken by the army of the Catholic bishop, and their leaders punished by death. The distinguishing features of their creed were, first, in common with other Baptists, the baptism of believers by immersion, denying the efficacy of infant baptism; second, that all civil law was an encroachment on the rights of Christians, and that all distinctions of birth and rank should be abolished; third, the communist doctrine of equality in possession of wealth; fourth, the patriarchal government and usages in respect to marriage, including plurality of wives. The taking of Munster was the death-blow to the sect, and although scattered over Germany, Switzerland, and Holland, they dwindled and disappeared, merging in other factions or returning to the Romish faith.

ANGELITES, so called from their place of concourse, Angeleum, in the city of Alexandria; a sect of the fifth century, who held the persons of the Trinity to be distinct, a common deity pervading all, and each to be a god through participating in this deity. Also called Severites and Theodosians.

ANTHROPOMORPHITES, an ancient heretic sect who supposed God to be human in form, interpreting Genesis literally.

ANTINOMIANS, a sect founded by John Agricola about 1538. They held that, under the gospel dispensation, the law is neither of use nor binding; that, as Christ assumed our sins, neither good works will promote the salvation of the elect nor evil works hinder it; that the decalogue was abrogated by the gospel, and should no longer be made the rule of life. During Cromwell's protectorate they spread in England, ever maintaining the impossibility of one of the elect displeasing God.

ANTI-SABBATARIANS claim that the Jewish Sabbath was but a typical form, not binding on Christians, and that no new Sabbath was established by Christ. Therefore, they avoid the "observance of days and times."

APHTHARDOCITES.—See Eutychiasts.

APOLLINARISTS, or APOLLINARIANS, from Apollinaris, bishop of Laodicea. This sect, in the fourth century, denied the humanity of Christ, maintaining that his divine nature supplied the place of the intellectual in man.

APOSTOOLIANS.—See Mennonites.

AQUARIANS.—See Encratites.

ARCHONITES, a sect of the second century, who claimed to have revelations to the effect that the world was created by the higher order of angels, archontes. To evil demons they ascribed the creation of woman.

ARIANS, a sect founded in the fourth century by Arius, of Alexandria. They held that Christ was created by God, and therefore not co-eternal, but inferior in nature, though the first and highest of created beings. Since the time of Arius, the heretical views were also extended to the Holy Spirit, subordinating that to the Son.

ARMENIANS, originating in Armenia, but spread over the entire East. They originally were a branch of the Greek Church, and claim a very ancient translation of the whole Bible. Their church government is patriarchal; their worship similar to that of the Greek Church. There is probability of their return to the mother Church.

ASCITES.—See Montanists.

ATHANASIANS, the believers in the doctrines advanced by Athanasius, in the fourth century, at Alexandria, and afterward embodied in a creed by Hilary. They believe in the unity in trinity of the Godhead, that "The Father is made of none, neither created nor begotten; the Son is of the Father alone, neither made nor created, but begotten; the Holy Ghost is of the Father and the Son, neither made, nor created, nor begotten, but proceeding." It is the "orthodox" creed.

ATHEISTS believe there is no God nor Supreme Ruler; that all things exist without law, design, or cause—by chance. "The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God."

AUDEANS, followers of Audens, in the fourth century. They believed God to possess human shape, and observed Easter at the time of the Passover of the Jews.

BAPTISTS, numerically the second denomination of Christians in this country. They believe that the only baptism is by immersion, and that profession of faith is necessarily antecedent to baptism. Therefore they reject baptism of infants as of no avail. They claim that baptism is not a "saving ordinance" in itself, but is the outward symbol of the washing of regeneration, the crowning act necessary to reception into the visible church; that immersion alone was practiced by the Apostles and the early Church, and that any other mode of baptism is not scriptural in its origin, but the institution of man, and therefore not valid. The key-note of all their doctrines is the rejection of traditions of men, and acceptance of only scriptural and divine institutions, and that the sacraments and offices of the Church are of no efficacy to the salvation of the soul without faith. Their government is purely congregational, each church being entirely independent, and amenable to no higher human authority. Their associations are for mutual advantage, but have merely advisory powers. In England, Scotland, Holland, and Germany, they exist in considerable numbers.

BARLAAMITES, a sect of the fourteenth century, founded by Barlaam, who mingled the doctrines of the Greek Church with the moral teachings of the Stoics.

BASILIDIANS, Gnostics, followers of Basilides.

BENI KHAIBER, a tribe of Arabians said to be lineal descendants of Rechab.

BEGHARDS, or BEGUARDS, a sect of Franciscan monks who aimed at purification of the Church, owned no property, and subsisted entirely by begging.

BEGUINES, a female order of Flanders. Its votaries were united for the purpose of devotion and charity, but were not bound by monastic oaths.

BEREANS, adopting their name from Acts xvii, 11, seceded from the Established Church of Scotland in 1773, to follow Mr. Barclay, who was excommunicated. The main points of difference in tenets are that faith and the assurance of salvation are identical; that the Old Testament is entirely prophetic, and that they receive members into the Church with less reliance upon personal experience, but exclude any who may prove unworthy.

BETHEHEMITES, a Donlean order of the thirteenth century, whose distinctive insignia consisted of a breast-plate with a five-rayed star, in commemoration of the star which "came and stood over where the Young Child was." There still exists a Spanish order of Bethlehemites in the West Indies.

BIDELLIANS, an English Socinian sect of the seventeenth century.

BOHEMIAN BRETHERN, a branch of the Hussites, who being dissatisfied with the concessions made to popery, established themselves under the name of Brothers' Union, with separate government and officers. They professed to have none but scriptural doctrines, and thus paved the way for the reformers of the next century. As a sect they no longer exist, though their doctrines in the main are adopted by the United Brethren.

BORRELLISTS, a sect of Holland, who reject all outward ceremonies and observances, and claim to retain apostolic doctrines, performing all their devotions in secret, and giving great portion of their goods to the poor.

BRAHMINS are the first of the four castes of Hindoos. They take their name from Brahma, the first of the Trinity—the Creator—from whose mouth, the seat of wisdom, they proceeded. They are the sacerdotal caste, and have the most absolute authority. Brahminism is the most extended religion on the face of the globe; and it is even claimed that the Hindoo religion, in its several forms, is adhered to by more than half the people of the world. It is, however, in India and elsewhere, beginning to succumb to Christianity; and the day is not far distant when it will be a thing of the past, when the light of Christianity shall have dispelled the heathen darkness.

BROWNISTS, a dissenting sect of the Puritans, followers of Robert Brown. Their articles of faith were much the same as those of the Established Church, but in government they were essentially independent. They rejected all forms of prayer, as well as all ritualistic forms. In 1592 there were computed to be not less than twenty thousand of this sect. Marriages in church were not allowed, and only the children of believers were baptized. They recognized no distinctive priesthood, but admitted of lay-preaching. On account of severe persecution, they fled from England and established themselves in Amsterdam. From this sect sprang the company who laid the first permanent settlement in this country.

BUDDHISTS.—Buddhism originated in India, but was expelled by the Brahmins, and spread to Japan, Thibet, China, and Ceylon, where it remains the established religion still. It was founded by Gautama, a Hindoo sage, in the sixth century B. C., though mythology dates it back to the eleventh century B. C. The faith was at first atheistic and moral, but is now essentially idolatrous, and very similar to that of the Brahmins, which see.

CADIRADELITES believe Mahomet to be the Paraclete, yet reverence Jesus Christ. They believe in both the Bible and the Koran. Their religion is a mixture of Christianity, Mohammedanism, and Stoicism.

CAINITES, a sect of the second century, who revered every one represented in the Scriptures, giving Cain the highest honor.

CALIXTINES, a division of the Hussites, which see.

CALVINISTS derive their name from John Calvin, a native of Picardy, born in 1509. The few articles which distinguish them from Arminians are: 1. That God has chosen a certain number, before the foundation of the world, who shall inherit everlasting glory, and that the rest he has seen fit to ordain to everlasting punishment for their sins, to the praise of his justice.—Election or predestination. 2. That Christ died for the elect only; for if he died for all, then would all be saved, or a part of his mission would be frustrated. But it is certain that all for whom he died will be saved; therefore his salvation was intended for the fore-ordained alone.—Particular redemption. 3. The total depravity of all mankind, and the impossibility of redemption save through faith in Christ.—Total depravity. 4. That whom God hath chosen he will at some time effectually call, through the grace of Christ.—Effectual calling. 5. That those whom God hath called can never finally fall from grace.—The perseverance of the saints.

CAMERONIANS, a Scotch sect, followers of Richard Cameron, who refused the indulgences granted by Charles II, on the ground that their acceptance virtually acknowledged the authority of the king in matters of conscience. They still exist in small numbers—a branch of the Presbyterian Church—in Scotland, Ireland, and the United States.

CAMPBELLITES.—See Disciples.

CAPUTIATI, enthusiasts of the twelfth century, who undertook to level all distinctions and to bring the world back to its primitive simplicity.

CARAITES.—See Karaites.

CARMATHITES, followers of Carmath, who undertook to overthrow the faith of the Mussulmans in the ninth century. They believed themselves to be guided by angels and opposed by demons.

CAROLOSTADIANS, followers of Carolostadt, who differed from Luther in the doctrine of the real presence in the eucharist.

CARPOCRATIANS, a sect adopting the creed of the Gnostics, which see.

CELLITES, so called from their abstemious life in cells; a sect who undertook to make up for the deficiency and negligence of the clergy by devoting themselves to good works.

CERINTHIANIS, followers of Cerinthus, who denied the divinity of Jesus, but maintained that the Spirit took possession of him at the time of his baptism, and deserted him at his passion; so that Jesus, the mere man, died and rose again, but that Christ, the Divinity, suffered not at all.

CHRISTIANS, a denomination which sprang up about the beginning of the present century, and have so rapidly extended that they number some two hundred thousand communicants, and have upward of two thousand preachers, and several prominent institutions of learning, besides a periodical literature of their own. They believe that all Scriptures were written by inspiration, and should be our rule of life; that salvation comes only through faith in Christ, and is open to all; and that those who fall from grace, as well as those who never repent, will be lost. They baptize by immersion, and observe the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Acknowledging the equal divine essence in God, and his Son, and Spirit, they deny a trinity of three equal persons in God. Their church government is essentially congregational, their sessions comprised of ministers and delegates having only advisory powers.

CHRISTIANS OF ST. THOMAS, an East Indian sect whose creed is a mixture of Romish, Protestant, and Syrian. Their priests are allowed to marry, and are distinguished by the tonsure. They acknowledge the sacraments of the eucharist—denying the presence—consecration of priests, and of baptism

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.—See Protestant Episcopalians.

CIRCUMCELLIANS, so called from their wandering among the cells of the monks—a sect of Donatists who pretended to reform abuses, manumitting the slaves of others, forgiving debts where they had no rights, and committing other unwarrantable acts under the color of reform.

CLEMENTINES, a French sect, who separated from the Romish Church, objecting to many of the ceremonies of its worship, but still retaining the mass, confession, etc.

COCCEIANS, followers of Cocceius, who maintained that the whole purpose of the Old Testament was to prefigure what was to take place under the New; that God's covenant with the children of Israel, through the mediation of Moses, was identical with his covenant with all mankind through the mediation of Christ.

COLLEGIANTS, a sect of the seventeenth century, in Holland, who held meetings or colleges twice a week, where every male member exhorted or expounded the Scriptures as the Spirit moved him. A few still retain this faith.

COLORED METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN NORTH AMERICA, seceders from the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1820. Their creed is unchanged, but their government differs in that they style their bishops superintendents, and elect them every four years.

COME-OUTERS, so called because they have come out of the various religious denominations, and have assumed no distinctive name. They believe that all Christians should be perfectly free in their faith without any trammels of creed; that war and the assumption of judgment and authority by man are unwarranted. They have no church government nor organization.

CONGREGATIONALISTS, "Ορθοδοξ."—John Robinson, pastor of the church which, in 1603, was driven from England to Amsterdam, is called the father of Congregationalism. It was from his congregation that the Pilgrims came, who were the first settlers of New England at Plymouth, whence their doctrines have spread over all this country. Their chief tenets are that each congregation of Christians, bound together by a solemn compact, is in and of itself complete, and competent to exercise all the offices of a church, entirely independent of any other human authority. They baptize both infants and adults by sprinkling, and observe the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Though their churches are independent of each other, the members of the church are amenable to its authority. Unitarians were originally a division from the Congregationalists about 1760; hence the distinctive designation, "Orthodox."

COPTS, an Egyptian sect of Jacobites, or Monophysites. Though now sunk almost to the level of the Arab, they claim to be descendants of the first Christians, and number one of the apostles among their saints. Their service and church government are essentially similar to those of the Romish Church. The head of the Church is the Patriarch, chosen by lot from the monks. Next in authority are twelve bishops, who, as well as the Patriarch, are not allowed to marry; next in order are arch-priests, then the priests, and, last, the deacons. They were once very numerous, comprising millions of believers, but now will number scarcely one hundred and fifty thousand souls.

COVENANTERS.—See Reformed Presbyterians.

CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIANS, originated in the Cumberland Presbytery of Kentucky. The cause of their separation from the Synod was that they had licensed uneducated young men to preach, to supply the lack of educated ministers in the then sparsely settled regions west of the Alleghenies. In course of time they formed a General Assembly and organized the full Presbyterian form of government among themselves. The chief points of difference in doctrine are the denial of the doctrine of election as entirely independent of faith or conduct, they declaring that Christ died for all men, that all who believe in him are saved, and that infants are saved through His grace.

DAMIANISTS, a sect of the sixth century, followers of Damian, a bishop of Alexandria. They denied that each person of the Trinity was God, but maintained that they partook of the divine essence, and, by virtue of a common divinity, were God.

DANCERS, a sect that sprang up in Flanders during the last century. They claimed to receive extraordinary manifestations during the excitement following violent dancing.

DAVIDISTS, followers of an enthusiast of the sixteenth century, named David George, who claimed to be the true Messiah sent by God to people heaven.

DEISTS believe in one God, an infinite, eternal, omnipotent Deity, but claim that nature and reason are his only manifestations to man.

DISCIPLES, also called CAMPBELLITE BAPTISTS, were founded by Alexander Campbell in western Pennsylvania. He was one of the ablest theologians and polemics of this country, and undertook to unite the various seceders into one church, to be governed by the primitive rules and faith of Christianity. Their only creed is the Bible. They reject all traditions and deductions of men, requiring faith in Christ and repentance before baptism. They recognize the triple essence of the Godhead, but object to the word Trinity. Alexander Campbell died in 1866. His followers are very numerous in all the Western States.

DONATISTS, followers of Donatus, of the fourth century. They maintained that Christ was of less importance than God, though of the same essence. They also claimed that the Church was corrupt, and that there were no good men in it; therefore, they rebaptized all who joined them. They were effectually overcome by the papal power.

DRUSES, inhabitants of Mount Lebanon, whose creed is peculiar to themselves, and somewhat veiled in mystery. They believe in a Creator, and assign to Christ the second place in importance. They also profess to receive the Koran.

DULCINISTS, followers of Dulcino, who, in the fourteenth century, maintained that the law of grace given by Moses was superseded by the law of love given by Christ, which will last to the end.

DUNKERS were originally established in Pennsylvania. The unmarried portion of the congregations are communists; the married retire to a separate part of the community. They are severists, and deny eternal punishment, but maintain that Christ and the saints preach the gospel to such as die out of the faith.

DURIANS, a people formerly inhabiting Mount Lebanon, whose religion was peculiar to themselves and entirely shrouded in mystery. They were probably the descendants of the Druses.

DUTCH REFORMED, now simply REFORMED CHURCH, originated in Amsterdam, and was very early instituted in this country at New York, the first church being built where the Battery now stands, at the foot of Broadway. It is purely Calvinistic, and Presbyterian in government. It has a liturgy, whose use is elective by the clergy. It has many adherents in all parts of the country.

EBIONITES, a sect of early Jewish Christians, who received the Old Testament and admitted the Messiahship of Jesus Christ, but rather in a subordinate and temporal manner, still adhering to Mosaic laws and ceremonies. There is great similarity between them and the Nazarenes, and it is sometimes difficult to distinguish between their doctrines.

EFFRONITES, a sect of the sixteenth century, who denied the divinity of the Holy Spirit, and for baptism abraded the forehead till it bled, and then poured oil in the wound.

ELXAITES, followers of Elxai, who mingled Christianity, Judaism, and Paganism, accepting and rejecting a part of each.

ENCRATITES, a sect of the second century, who rejected animal food and forbade marriage.

ENGLISH PRESBYTERIANS, a denomination of dissenters from the Established Church, whose creed is similar to the Presbyterian, but whose church government is that of the Independents. They are very numerous.

EQUINIANS, so called from Equinus. Their belief was that Christ's death availed only to the faithful.

EPHRATA BAPTISTS, a division of Dunkers. See Seventh Day Baptists.

EPISCOPALIANS, members of the Protestant Episcopal Church. This church has for its origin the rupture between Henry VIII and the Pope. When the king was excommunicated, he declared himself the head of the Church of England, and appointed Bishop Cramer to perfect its organization. During the long reign of Elizabeth it assumed the form and importance which have marked it since. The American Protestant Episcopal Church is the same as the Church of England, its liturgy only having been sufficiently changed to suit the difference of civil government. In England, the king or queen is supreme head, the Archbishop of Canterbury Primate; beside these are the Archbishop of York, twenty-five bishops appointed by the king, and priests and deacons. The doctrines of the church are those of the thirty-nine articles. In this country, the church government is delegated to bishops, priests, and deacons, and is directed by the canons of a General Convention, consisting of a house of bishops and a house of delegates, clerical and lay, from each diocese. Local matters are referred to an annual diocesan convention, also both clerical and lay. Rectors are chosen by the churches and installed by the bishop; wardens are chosen by the church, the vestry by the parish. This denomination holds a very prominent place for influence and respectability in this country.

ERASTIANS, followers of Erastus, an eminent German divine, who maintained the church to be entirely subservient to the state, and without authority of itself.

EUDOXIANS, a sect of Arians, of the fourth century.

EUNOMIANS, also a branch of the Arians.

EUSTATHIANS, followers of Eustathius, in the fourth century, who refused any other bishop, though he was deposed by Arius.

EUTYCHIANS, followers of Eutyches, who maintained that Christ was human only in appearance, but in nature wholly divine.

EVANGELICAL LUTHERANS.—See Lutherans.

FALASHAS, a people of Abyssinia who have an independent Jewish government. They are probably descendants of the ancient Jews, but have lost all knowledge of the Hebrew language. They have the Old Testament translated into their language.

FARNOVIANS, a division of Unitarians, now extinct.

FETICHISM, the lowest form of idolatry. Its votaries worship some material object, either an animal, a tree, a stone, etc., selected apparently at random. It prevails among Africans and the most degraded of Asiatics.

FIFTH MONARCHY MEN, an English sect who, from the time of Cromwell, maintained that the time for a fifth universal monarch had arrived, when Christ should reign in person.

FLAGELLANTS, a sect of the thirteenth century, who believed the efficacy of the scourge equal to that of baptism or other sacrament. They lasted nearly two centuries.

FRAIRES ALBATI, a sect of the fifteenth century, so called from their white raiment. They endeavored to renew the war against the Turks in Palestine. They were severists, and fully believed in the efficacy of mortification of the body in attaining the forgiveness of sins.

FRA TRICELLI, an appellation given to reformed Franciscans, and afterward applied to many orders of heretics.

FREE THINKERS, a name adopted by a schism of the Trinitarian Universalists, who rejected first one doctrine, then another, till finally they are practically infidels.

FREE-WILL BAPTISTS, a comparatively new denomination, having been founded in New Hampshire less than a century ago, yet it numbers about seventy-five thousand communicants. They believe in the freedom of the human will, in opposition to the Calvinistic belief. Their church government and creed do not differ essentially from those of all Baptists.

FREE COMMUNION BAPTISTS, a division of Baptists who admit to their communion members of other churches who have not been immersed.

FRENCH PROPHETS, a sect of fanatics who in the latter part of the seventeenth century proclaimed themselves inspired prophets. Their time of prophecy were preceded by violent physical spasms and twitchings of the limbs. These continued till they staggered and fell, when the Holy Ghost came upon them, and they uttered whatever came into their minds, the burden of their prophecy being the immediate approach of the year of jubilee and the redemption of the world, mingled with maledictions and threats against the Pope and his votaries.

FRIENDS, OR QUAKERS.—This denomination was founded by George Fox, who was born in England in 1624. They suffered severe persecution from their inception at home, and have struggled to an honored place among God's people. To this country William Penn introduced them when he founded his colony, and they are more numerous in Pennsylvania, especially in and about Philadelphia, than elsewhere. They discard all outward forms and ceremonies, are orthodox in their faith in the Bible, but believe that the conscience is implanted in man by the Holy Spirit as the guide of life. Their worship is entirely informal, each friend speaking as the spirit moveth him or her.

GALENISTS, followers of Galen, a Mennonite, who extended communion to all believers.

GALLICAN CHURCH, the established church of France—Romish.

GAZARES, a party of Albigenses, who were pursued to Gazare by the Pope.

GERMAN REFORMED CHURCH.—This was founded by Zwingli, a Swiss, contemporary with Luther. Afterward Calvin headed this church, and gave it the firm footing it has since maintained. The Heidelberg Catechism is the foundation of their faith. Their church government is strictly Presbyterian. They were early introduced into this country, and are now spread over the entire West and South—the two divisions, North and South, having reunited. This church absorbs a large proportion of the Protestant German population.

GERMAN SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS, a community founded by Conrad Peschel, in 1728, at Mill Creek, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, where they still exist. The chief tenet in which they differ from other Baptists is evident from their appellation, they maintaining that the seventh day should be observed as the Sabbath. Their dress consists of a white robe, like that of the Capuchian monks. Their life is one of simplicity, soberness, and charity, devoted to holy pursuits.

GLASSITES, so called from John Glass, their founder; a division of Scotch Independents.

GNOSTICS, a generic name for a body of philosophers who, in the first century, mingled Oriental theology and Greek philosophy with Christianity, and supposed they held the true theory of all religion. Rejecting the revelation of Moses, they classed all things under three heads—material, animal and spiritual. All evil they attributed to eternal matter, supposing it to be beneath the dignity of the Deity to originate any thing noxious. All intelligence they claimed had its origin in æons, or emanations from the Divine Mind; that these emanations were capable of reproducing like intelligences, some male, some female, so there could be no end to their dissemination. They were divided into numerous sects, prominent among which were the Cerinthians, Elionites, Nicolaitans, Valentinians.

GOSPELLERS, a name of reproach given by papists to all Protestants, but especially to the followers of Wickliffe.

GREEK CHURCH comprises the greater part of the Christian population of Russia, Greece, Moldavia, and Wallachia, beside many in Turkey and Austria. It separated from the Latin Church at the time of the dismemberment of the Roman Empire, when Rome and Constantinople were each striving to be the head. It differs from that Church in that it does not acknowledge the supremacy of the Pope nor of his infallibility. Its form of worship is almost entirely ceremonial, though it admits no statues except those of silver or copper, and calls upon saints merely as mediators. The observance of feasts and fasts is strictly enjoined, and celibacy is not compulsory on its clergy, though they are not permitted to marry after taking orders. Full faith is given to the doctrine of consubstantiation. That the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father and not from the Son, is a fundamental doctrine. They also believe in predestination. Though now quite different from the Romish Church, the two were originally one, and each has made changes in its rites and observances; but it is hardly just to consider this a mere offshoot of the Romish Church.

HARMONISTS, a sect originating in Wurtemberg in 1780. They took umbrage at certain changes made in the service by the government, and refused to attend the parish church; and when the authorities undertook to discipline them they emigrated to this country, arriving in Pennsylvania in 1803. After making several settlements in that State and in Indiana, they finally settled in Economy, Pennsylvania, near Pittsburg, where they have formed a community, having every thing in common. They are Protestants, but profess universal toleration, maintain strict morals, enjoin the rigid observance of the Sabbath, and do not marry. They have never extended the sect beyond the original congregation.

HATTEMISTS, so called from Pontian Van Hattem, who, about the close of the seventeenth century, was degraded from his office of pastor on the charge of maintaining heretical doctrines. They were fatalists, and denied the distinction of good and evil morally. They also denied the fall of man and the expiation of Christ, and maintained that the divine laws were not binding on us, inasmuch as, being formed by the Creator, nothing in us could be displeasing to him.

HENRICIANS, followers of a monk, Henry, who, in the twelfth century, attempted to reform the abuses in the Church. He wandered over Switzerland and Germany, and finally died in prison at Toulouse. He exclaimed against the ceremonies of the Church and infant baptism.

HERACLEONITES, an early Christian sect, followers of Heracleon, who rejected the Old Testament in toto, and denied the creation of the world by the Son of God, but claimed that he was only the cause of its creation indirectly.

HERMOGENIANS, a sect of the second century, followers of Hermogenes, who claimed that matter was the source of all evil, and the inceptive principle of which all things, souls as well as things material, were formed; that this matter was original, uniformly corrupt, and eternal, and was only changed, not created, by the Deity.

HICKSITES, a division of Friends who, in 1827, separated from the Orthodox Friends under the leadership of Elias Hicks. They deny the doctrine of the Trinity, and maintain that the true guide of life is the light within; that the Scriptures are only an emanation from the fountain of light, and not the fountain itself, and therefore inefficacious save as accompanied and guided by the Spirit within. A large number have been attracted from the Society of Friends to this new doctrine. In manner of life and worship they do not differ from the Orthodox societies, but the Socinian doctrines adopted by them have caused an incurable dissension between them. The Hicksites have meetings in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, and Indiana. They are almost entirely confined to this country.

HOFFMANISTS, a small sect of the sixteenth century, followers of Professor Daniel Hoffman, of Elmstadt, who inveighed against the teachings of the old philosophers, and vigorously opposed Rationalism, which then threatened great harm to the doctrine of the Reformation. They were only temporary.

HOPKINSIANS, or HOPKINSIAN CALVINISTS, so called from the expounder of their faith, Rev. Samuel Hopkins, D. D., pastor of a church at Newport, Rhode Island. They claim that he expanded and improved upon the doctrines of Calvin, and therefore claim the second appellation. Their peculiar doctrines are stated as follows: that true virtue and real holiness consist in disinterested benevolence toward a Universal Being, including God and all intelligent creatures; that all sin has its source in, and is essentially, selfishness, the whole dialogue being aimed at this, and this alone constituting enmity against God; that there is no promise of regenerating grace to the deeds of the unregenerate; that the impotency of sinners, with respect to believing in Christ, is not natural, but moral: that, in order to faith in Christ, a sinner must approve in his heart of the divine conduct, even though God should cast him off forever, which, however, neither implies love to misery nor hatred of happiness; that the infinitely wise and holy God has exerted his omnipotent power in such a manner as he purposed should be followed with the existence of moral evil and its entrance into the system; that, therefore, the introduction of sin is, upon the whole, for the general good; that repentance must be antecedent to saving faith in Christ; that, though men became sinners by Adam according to a divine constitution, yet they have, and are accountable for, no other sins than personal; and, lastly, that though believers are justified through Christ's righteousness, yet his righteousness is not transferred to them, they receiving the benefit, not the thing itself.

HUGUENOTS, an epithet applied to the Protestants of the sixteenth century in France. They suffered the most terrible persecutions, nearly eight thousand having been massacred in a single day (St. Bartholomew's, in 1572) by decree of Charles IX. In 1698 they obtained the privilege to worship God according to their own consciences, by the decree of Nantes, granted by Henry IV, which they enjoyed till 1681, when Louis XIV revoked the decree and let loose persecution against them once more. Then many of them fled to America and settled principally in South Carolina. Those who remained were alternately persecuted and tolerated till the Revolution set them free, there having been no power since sufficiently powerful to openly persecute them.

HUMANITARIANS, or PHILANTHROPISTS, names applied to those sects who believe in the mere humanity of Christ, denying his divinity and asserting him to have been a mere man. The most prominent advocates of this doctrine are Unitarians, who, from their former leader, Rev. Theodore Parker, of Boston, afterward of San Francisco, are called PARKERITES.

HUSSITES, followers of John Huss, an ardent reformer, who was burned at the stake in Prague, in 1615. Though he was of most mild and quiet disposition, his followers, after his martyrdom, waged a fierce and successful war against King Sigismund. Finally, a compromise was agreed upon by the intervention of the council at Basil, after continual war for nine years—from 1624 to 1633. From different locations, they were distinguished by the names, CALIXTINES and TABORITES.

HUTCHINSONIANS, followers of John Hutchinson, once steward to the Duke of Somerset, afterward expounder of the Scriptures. He claimed that all necessary knowledge was contained in the Bible, and that God had imparted it in the Hebrew language, which he greatly revered. In 1724 he published the first, and in 1727 the second volume of "Moses Principia," in which he endeavored to deduce from the Hebrew illustrations the whole law of nature.

IBERIAN, or GEORGIAN, a branch of the Greek Church inhabiting the country whence their name is taken, who also have some distinctive ceremonies.

ICONOCLASTS, a name applied to all who, previous to the Reformation, opposed the worship of images then common in the Romish Church, of whom the most extreme vented their disapprobation by violently destroying or breaking the images, whence the name.

INCORRUPTIBLES, a sect of Alexandria in the reign of Justinian, who maintained that Christ, after his conception, was unaffected by any human necessities or desires, so that he suffered hunger, thirst, pain, etc., only in appearance.

INDEPENDENTS, a general name applied to those denominations of Christians who oppose ecclesiastical government in their churches, but maintain each church to be absolutely independent in government, without appeal. They are very numerous, and form an important element among the denominations of this country, England, and the Netherlands.

INGHAMITES, a small sect of dissenters who withdrew from the establishment in the eighteenth century, and differed from other Independents on the doctrine of the Trinity, they maintaining that the Divine Three were one and inseparable. After the death of their leader they were merged in the other denominations.

IRVINGITES, an independent sect, widely spread but nowhere numerous, followers of Rev. Edward Irving, who withdrew from the English Church in 1832.

ISMAELIANS, a sect of Mohammedans who claim Arabic descent from Ismael. They are now found in Hiadostan.

ISRAELITES.—See Jews.

JACOBITES, so called from their renowned leader in the sixth century, Jacob Baradai, a sect of Mesopotamia and Syria. They hold that Christ had but one nature.

JANSENISTS, followers of Cornelius Jansen, who, at Ypres, about 1640, proclaimed certain heresies which were afterward condemned by special bull of the Pope. He claimed that God gave some precepts which it is impossible for man to obey; that the influence of divine grace on the mind is irresistible; that the human will is powerless either to receive or to reject the influences of grace; that Christ died only for the elect; and also that the service should be conducted in the language of the hearers, and that true piety consists in inward holiness and not in outward observances.

JAPANESE are idolaters, divided into two sects. The followers of Sinto believe in one Supreme being, who inhabits the highest heaven, whom they reverence too highly to worship. Their adoration is directed to a multitude of lesser deities who govern different departments of nature. After death the good go to a region just beneath heaven; the bad wander eternally. Followers of Budeo are very similar in belief to Buddhists of India. They believe in the transmigration of souls, and believe the wicked punished by inhabiting the bodies of beasts and reptiles. Every object in earth, air, and water is believed to have a presiding deity, and they accordingly worship thousands of idols.

JESUITS, or THE SOCIETY OF JESUS, a society of the Roman Catholic Church, which was established in 1540, by Ignatius Loyola. The order consists of two classes: Scholars, who take the vows of poverty, chastity, and can discontinue their connection or be dismissed; and of Priests, who take the same vows, but whose connection with the Society cannot be severed. These latter are subdivided into spiritual coadjutors, who are the curators of souls, and members, or Jesuits of the Four Vows, to whom, in addition to the three obligations mentioned, a fourth vow of obedience to any orders from proper authority is given. These latter are the peculiar propagandists of "the faith." From them the missionaries and secret emissaries are chosen. Their rules are guarded as a profound secret, but enough is known of them to give a clew to the whole. They believe in the ultimate authority and infallibility of the Pope; that the motive of an action is more to be considered than the action itself; that in all cases the end justifies the means; that the offices of the Church are alone sufficient to save even the most hardened criminal. They have acted a very prominent part in the dissemination of the doctrines of their Church in this country, and are now very numerous in all parts of it, some as missionaries, others as teachers.

JEW, or ISRAELITES, are the descendants in direct line from Jacob, or Israel, and through him from Abraham. The laws which they recognize are contained in the Pentateuch, or Five Books of Moses. Their early history is related in other parts of the Old Testament. Since the sacking of Jerusalem by Titus, A. D. 70, they have been scattered over the whole earth. They now number some five millions, of which the United States contain some seventy-five thousand. They are, as predicted, "a scattered yet distinct people," never mingling with the nations among whom they live. The creed of the modern Jews, as stated by Meimoides, a Rabbi who lived in the eleventh century, is in substance as follows: Belief in God as the Creator, Governor, and Maker of all things, eternal; in him as one, and that he alone hath been our God, is and forever shall be; that the Creator is not corporeal, and there is no bodily essence to be compared to him; that he is first and last, that nothing was before him nor shall be after, and that he shall abide forever; that he alone is to be worshipped; that all the words of the prophets are true and spoken by inspiration; that the prophet Moses was the chief of all wise men, past or future; that the law was given by Moses; that the law shall never be changed, and that God will give no other; that God knows all thoughts and actions of men; that God will regard those who obey his commands, and punish all transgressors; that the Messiah is yet to come; that the dead shall be raised in God's own time. This is the doctrine of the Conservative or Orthodox Jews, though recently a division, called Progressive or Rationalistic, deny many of these dogmas.

KEITHIANS, a division of Friends who, under the leadership of George Keith, adopted the faith of the Baptists; also called Baptist Quakers.

KIRK, or Church of Scotland, was established in its present form in 1689. The Westminster Confession of Faith is the groundwork of their creed. Their worship is very simple. They have no liturgy, very few ceremonies, and do not observe fasts nor feasts. Their church government is delegated to the Kirk Session, the Presbytery, the Synod, and the General Assembly, ranking in dignity in the order mentioned. There have occurred several dissensions and consequent divisions of the Kirk, which are now in a fair way of settlement and reunion.

LABADISTS, followers of Jean de Labadie, a Frenchman, who in the seventeenth century maintained that the Church of Christ should be a community of sanctified persons, striving after perfection by the guidance of the Scriptures and the light of the Spirit given to the inward mind. The personal reign of Christ upon earth was strongly advocated by him.

LAMAISM, the religion of the Buddhist inhabitants of Thibet, Mongolia and of hordes of Tartars. The Grand Lama, or Delai-Lama, is supposed to be the deity inhabiting the body of a human being, and is worshipped accordingly. When the man dies, the spirit is supposed to have left the worn-out tenement, and to have taken up his abode in the body of some child, where he is discovered, by means of certain tokens, by the Lamas, and the worship is accordingly transferred. This religion is an offshoot of Buddhism, is very nearly coeval with it, and very similar in rites and ceremonies. It is the faith of a very large portion of the human race, and has withstood the lapse of time and efforts of man to overthrow it.

LAMPETIANS, followers of Lampetius, a monk of the seventeenth century, who maintained that, as man was born free, a Christian should be absolutely untrammelled, and should act only as conscience prompted him. He therefore condemned the taking of vows.

LATITUDINARIANS, an epithet applied to certain liberal-minded members of the Church of England, who, in the seventeenth century, endeavored to reconcile the views of Episcopalians, Presbyterians, and Independents, and by mutual compromise to establish an intercommunication. They named a few primal principles which should be the ground for reception to Christian communion, and endeavored to bring all to their views.

LAZARISTS, or LAZARITES, a French Roman Catholic order, also called Priests of the Mission. They attend to teaching and charitable missions.

LEADLYANS, so called from an English woman who claimed to have visions, and maintained that if Christians would heed the inward guide, the reign of peace would be near at hand.

LEUCOPETRIANS, disciples of a fanatic of the twelfth century, Leucopetrus by name, who rejected all forms and sacraments, and maintained that every soul was inhabited by a demon, which could be expelled only by continual prayer to the Supreme Being.

LIBERTINES, a sect of the sixteenth century, who maintained that the Deity pervaded the mind of man and was the sole cause of his actions; that therefore the distinctions between good and evil were erroneous; that the aim of religion was the union of the soul, or reason, with the Supreme Being, and after this union was formed, every thought and action must be perfect and blameless; that the soul, so elevated, passed at death and became part of the Deity. These doctrines led their votaries into excesses and enormities of all kinds. Now the word has been applied to the practical results of their license.

LOLLARDS, a German sect, who denied the efficacy of many rites of the Romish Church, including absolution, extreme unction, and penance, claiming that the sacrifice of Christ availed for all. They rejected infant baptism, and denied the efficacy of the sacrament. They suffered severe persecution. This name is also applied to the followers of Wickliffe, in England.

LUCIANISTS, so called from Lucian, a disciple of Marcion, who denied the immortality of the soul, but claimed it to be only material. He also condemned marriage. He also advocated the theory that the Father, from possessing the power of generation, had always been a father, and thus explained the doctrine of the co-eternity of the Son.

LUCIFERIANIS, followers of Lucifer, Bishop of Cagliari, of the fourth century, a strenuous opposer of the Arians. He claimed the soul to be material, passing from father to son.

LUTHERANS, or EVANGELICAL LUTHERANS, a name first applied as an epithet by enemies, but afterward adopted by the believers in the doctrines advanced by Martin Luther, in the sixteenth century. Their creed is set forth in the Augsburg Confession, prepared by Luther and Melancthon, and submitted to Charles V. They believed that those who have faith in Christ to the end of their lives will be saved. Foreordination or predestination they explain as the foreknowledge of God of this saving faith. They believe that all the perfections of Christ's divinity were communicated to his humanity. He is ubiquitous, therefore it is possible for him to be in and of the bread and wine offered in the sacrament. This denomination is very numerous in Continental Europe, and exists in considerable numbers in many parts of this country, where it has several seats of learning and numerous periodicals.

MACEDONIANS, followers of Macedonius, Bishop of Constantinople, who advanced the doctrine that the Holy Ghost was not a distinct member of the Godhead, but was a divine essence that pervaded the universe. This sect was put down about the middle of the fourth century, soon after its rise.

MAHOMETANISM, or MOHAMMEDANISM.—Mahomet, or Mohammed, a native of Persia, in the sixth century, was by far the boldest, most skillful, and most successful pretender that has ever existed. He claimed to be the last of the prophets. The key of the doctrines found in the Koran, or Alkoran, is this: True religion remains the same throughout all ages of the world, though it varies in form according to the condition of the people. Whenever it becomes corrupt and men degenerate, it pleases God to renew it by sending prophets into the world to remind the good of their allegiance. Of prophets he taught that no less than two hundred and twenty-four thousand had been sent into the world. Of these, three hundred and thirteen were apostles, sent for the special purpose of reclaiming mankind from infidelity, and six of them brought new laws for the guidance of God's people, namely, Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus, and Mohammed. The primal doctrine of the Koran is the unity of God, expressed daily by every true Islamite, in the words, "There is but one God, and Mohammed is his prophet." Their religion is divided into two parts, faith and practice. Under the former head are six propositions: 1st, belief in one God; 2d, in his angels; 3d, in the Scriptures; 4th, in his prophets; 5th, in the resurrection of the dead and in the judgment; 6th, in God's absolute, inviolable decrees. Their practice embraces four distinctions: 1st, prayer, with purifications; 2d, alms, legal and voluntary; 3d, fasting; 4th, pilgrimage to Mecca, which is essential. They believe the Bible was given by inspiration of God, but that it has suffered so many corruptions that the copies in the hands of Jews and Christians are of very little credit, and that the Koran is the only safe guide. They believe the original copy of this has been, from everlasting, inscribed on a vast tablet on God's throne, and that Gabriel was sent to the lowest heaven with a copy on paper, which was transferred to Mohammed, and by him given to the faithful. Their year begins with the Hegira, or anniversary of the flight of Mohammed from Mecca, A. D. 622. Besides angels and devils, who are fallen angels, they believe in an intermediate order of beings, which they call genii, who are subject to death and salvation or damnation as men. They believe in the resurrection of the dead, both soul and body, and that in the judgment they will be divided into three classes: 1st, those who creep, groveling, with their faces to the ground; 2d, those who walk; 3d, those who ride, for whom white-winged camels will be in readiness. The first class will consist of infidels; the second, of believers whose good works are few; the third of those believers who are most acceptable to God. They have fanciful notions of both heaven and hell, both being portrayed vividly in the Koran. Every Mohammedan is required to utter five prayers a day, first washing and turning his face toward Mecca; and they are enjoined to give alms, in order that their prayers may be heeded. Fasting is held to be of utmost importance. During the whole month Ramadan—in which they believe the Koran was sent from heaven—they are required to fast from sunrise to sunset. The pilgrimage to Mecca Mahomed declared to be of such importance, that "he who fails to perform it may as well die a Jew or a Christian." The orthodox Mohammedans entertain remarkably correct views of the Deity; but there is a multitude of sects, some descending to abject idolatry. Another name for this belief is Islamism.

MANICHEANS, followers of Manes, a heretic of the third century, who endeavored to combine Christian doctrines with Oriental philosophy. He maintained there were two principles—light and darkness, from the first of which proceeded all good; from the second, all evil. He taught the total corruption of all matter, and therefore denied the resurrection of the body, holding that nothing material could be made worthy of immortality. Many of their doctrines are very similar to those of the Gnostics. They believed that the duality of good and evil pervaded all things; that the souls of men consisted of two parts—good and bad; that the upper part of the body was made by good spirits, the lower by evil; that the Old Testament was the inspiration of the evil principle, the New Testament of the good principle. Like most Oriental systems of religion, Manichæism was distinguished both by the austerities which it enjoined and by the extreme laxity of morals which it permitted, so that its dual principle was applicable to itself at least. Regarding the body as totally corrupt and the passions abused, Manes enjoined his disciples to lacerate and mortify the one, and to, as far as possible, divest themselves of the latter.

MARCARIANS, followers of an Egyptian monk of the fourth century, celebrated for his piety, but who maintained some superstitious, probably derived from the ancient traditions of his ancestry.

MARCELLANS, so called from Marcellus, of Ancyra, who lived near the close of the second century. Nothing is known certainly of his doctrines, except that they were heretical, some claiming that they were similar to those of Sabellius, while others as stoutly deny this.

MARCIONITES, a sect which take their name from their founder, Marcion, who lived in the second century. They adhered to the Gnostic doctrine that there were two principles, good and evil; but also maintained that there was a third, intermediate, and neither wholly good nor wholly evil. This was the God of the Jews. All other nations, they claimed, were under the dominion of the evil influence. They held that the birth, incarnation, and passion were not real, but only apparent, denied the resurrection of the body, and practiced trine baptism, that is baptizing three times, but only to those who preserved their continence. They accepted a part and rejected a part of both the Old and the New Testaments. At one time this sect was spread very widely throughout Europe and the East, and for a long time they were very popular.

MARCITES, so called from Marcus, one of their number, though they claimed to be adherents of Simon Magus, and called themselves Perfecti. They professed to do everything with great liberty and without fear. Priesthood and administration of the sacraments was conferred on women. They belonged to the second century.

MARONITES, a sect of nominal Christians who inhabited Mount Lebanon. They derived their name from Maron, a monk of the sixth century, who is charged with being a Monothelite. Originally independent, they have for the last six centuries affiliated with the Roman Catholic Church, though they still elect their head Patriarch, or Barak, at Antioch. They have many religious institutions, numbering some two hundred convents for males and females, all of the order of St. Anthony, whose rules are observed with remarkable exactitude. Their priests marry—once, and to a maiden. The gospel is read in Arabic, which all can understand. All other service is in Syriac, which is entirely unintelligible to the greater part of them.

MASSALIANS, or MESSALIANS, a sect of the fourth century, of short duration, about whom there has been much misrepresentation. They held a variation of the Gnostic faith, that man is possessed of two souls—a celestial and a diabolical, and that the latter must be expelled by prayer and fasting. They maintained the convenient doctrine that it was a sin to work for their bread, pleading the words of Jesus: "Labor not for the meat that perisheth."

MATERIALISTS believe that man is material, just as he appears to the senses, and nothing more; that the soul is but the result of the combination of matter; that its being began at conception, and that its life ceases with death, to be renewed only at the will of the Creator. They reason thus: We have evidence that the body is mortal in that its several members are subject to infirmity and decay. Apply the same tests to the soul. It is admitted that the mind is a manifestation of the soul. Every faculty of the mind is subject to decay, severally or collectively, even though the body remains whole. It follows, then, that at death the soul as well as the body must suffer decay. To this, also, the Bible bears proof in that one day of judgment is named for all, and represents the awards of happiness to be made then and not till then. If this be true, then, ex necessitate, the soul must die, and be raised again at the last, exactly as does the body. Materialistic views, in one form or other, prevail among many people of different sects.

MELCHISEDICIANS, a sect of the second century, who gave Melchisedec a place superior to Christ, believing him to be a divine power, mediator for angels as Christ is mediator for men.

MELCHITES, members of the Greek Catholic Church, including the Christians of the Levant. The term was applied as an epithet, meaning Royalists, because they submitted to the council of Chalcedon in conformity to the religion of the emperor. Their creed differs in only a few unimportant points from that of the Greek Church.

MELITONI, disciples of Melito, believed that both soul and body of man are made in the image of God.

MENANDRIANS, followers of Menander, a fanatic who is supposed to have been a disciple of Simon Magus, and pretended to be sent to deliver souls from the bondage of demons that possessed them.

MENCRETIANS, a sect of the Greek Church, distinguished by some difference of ceremonial.

MENNONITES take their name from Simon Menno. They originated in Holland, and early came to this country. They recognize the New Testament as the only rule of life, deny original sin, and maintain that practical piety is the essence of religion. They object to the application of the terms Person and Trinity as applied to the Godhead. They strenuously denounce war under any circumstances, are non-resistants, and never take an oath. In their secret meetings each member is allowed to speak, and they have no hired clergy. They baptize only adults, by pouring, and advocate universal toleration. In this country there are two divisions of this denomination, differing only in some points of experimental religion.

METHODISTS, WESLEYAN, were founded in England by John Wesley and his brother Charles. John Wesley was fellow of Oxford College, and had taken priestly orders in the Established Church. Observing the laxity and retrogression about him, he undertook to reform the service of religion. He gradually gathered adherents around him, among whom was, at one time, the celebrated Whitefield. Afterward, however, Whitefield declared for Calvinistic doctrines, and Wesley remained purely Arminian. This sect, from so small beginnings, became a mighty instrument in stemming the torrent of infidelity which at that time threatened England. The name Methodist was applied first as an epithet on account of the extreme regularity of the lives of its professors. Afterwards it was adopted by them as their distinctive name. At present, in England, there are many congregations under this appellation who are not followers of Wesley. They have circuits and conferences, as well as bishops, in the same manner as in this country.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH in the United States is the same as the English Methodists. The first meeting was held in New York at the house of Philip Embury, in 1766, consisting of five persons. Two years after, in October, 1768, they occupied the first church built by them. Soon after, Wesley, at their request, sent an able minister to them, and also one to Philadelphia. Dr. Coke was sent, in 1784, to superintend the Methodist societies in America, and in December of that year the Methodist Episcopal Church was duly organized at a conference held at Baltimore. At the same conference a bishop was chosen, and twelve of the preachers were appointed elders, and delegated for missionary work. In doctrine Methodists do not differ from other evangelical denominations except in that of free grace, they holding that any one who will may be saved, in opposition to the doctrine of election, and claim that Christ died for all. They also believe in Christian perfection, that it is possible for man so to grow in grace as to become free from sin and all moral turpitude. Their government is indicated by the name, and was instituted by Wesley, who laid great stress on his ordination by the bishop, and by the authority vested in him ordained the first of the line of bishops. The officers consist of bishops, presiding elders, preachers in charge, trustees, stewards, and class leaders. In the ministry are three orders—bishops, elders, and deacons. The General Conference—heretofore comprising only the ministry, but in future probably to be in part of lay delegation—has final authority, and appoints all rules and discipline to the churches. The ministers are distributed also by Conference. This Church is in a very prosperous condition, and is, perhaps, the largest in this country. It has had a rapid and vigorous growth, marked by the zeal and enterprise of its leaders. It has many institutions of learning, a large number of periodicals, an immense publishing house—the Book Concern, one in New York and another in Cincinnati—conduct their own missions, and have a distinct Sunday School Union. The cause of difference between the two branches, North and South, having been removed, this Church apparently has an eminently useful future before it.

METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.—About 1828 the question of lay delegation having come up before the General Conference and been rejected, a schism took place, which resulted in the organizing of the Methodist Protestant Church. The chief difference consists in the assertion of the justice of lay delegation, and of the parity of the ministry; that there should be no difference in rank among the clergy. A constitution was adopted in 1830, in General Convention, at Baltimore. In that are set forth the articles of faith, in brief, as follows: That Christ is the true and only Head of the Church; that the Scriptures are the sufficient rule of faith and practice; and that a written constitution is a necessary guarantee to Christians of their religious rights. Their preachers are appointed in the same manner as in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the doctrines and mode of worship are the same.

MILLENARIANS, or CHILIASTS, believe that Christ is to come literally and reign on the earth a thousand years; that at the beginning of his reign shall be the first resurrection, when only the just shall be raised, and its end shall be characterized by the final resurrection.

MILLERITES.—See Second Adventists.

MODALISTS regard the Deity as one God, and maintain that the terms Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are used merely to express modes or attributes of the Deity, and not the persons.

MOLINISTS, followers of a Spanish monk, Molina, who directly opposed the Jansenist doctrines, adopting others somewhat similar to the Arminian; maintaining the doctrine of predestination, but that grace is not efficacious alone, but only in conjunction with the will, and that God's knowledge of it is only the presence of all things.

MONARCHIANS, a sect of the second century, very similar to the modern Unitarians, who assumed this name as they supposed themselves to be the only defenders of the unity of God against the doctrines of Christians of that day.

MONOPHYSITES are properly the followers of a monk of the sixteenth century, Severus, but the term is applied to all the eastern churches who believe in the one nature of Christ, holding that the divine nature was so united to and mingled with the human that they formed but a single nature. The churches that hold to this faith at present are the Syrian, the Jacobite, the Coptic, including the Abyssinian, the Chaldean, the Arminian, and the Indo-Syriae. These churches all hold this one article of faith in common, though their creeds differ widely.

MONOTHELITES, a sect which was suppressed in the latter part of the seventh century. They claimed that as Christ had two natures he must have two wills, but that the human will was so overpowered by the divine that it became entirely subordinate to it, and consequently there could be but one free will in the same person. This practical denial of the perfection of Christ's human nature raised the opposition of other Christians, and they were condemned in General Council.

MONTANISTS, followers of Montanus, who, in the second century, claimed that the Spirit, the Paraclete, dwelt in him, and through him would give a more perfect system of religion than that expounded by the apostles. He was aided by two women whom he had won over to faith in him and his pretensions. They allowed women to teach, forbade second marriages, and allowed divorce. Persons guilty of great crimes were never after to be admitted to communion, they denying the authority of the bishops to restore them.

MONTE-NEGRINES, inhabitants of Monte-Negro, a district of Albania. They belong to the Greek Church, and cherish extreme antipathy to the Roman Catholic Church and to the Pope, denying the genuineness of the one and the authority of the other.

MORAVIANS.—See United Brethren.

MORMONS.—Joseph Smith, at Palmyra, N. Y., in 1823, proclaimed that he had had a vision, wherein an angel stood before him, who declared that he had been chosen a prophet, to reveal to the world a new religion of Christ, and who pointed out to him the place where were hidden some golden plates, on which were inscribed the new faith and the history of the Indian races of this country. These plates he found covered with a cabalistic cipher, which he alone was able to interpret. By the aid of an amanuensis he translated these, and produced what he called the Book of Mormon. In opposition to this theory, it is claimed that affidavits have been made establishing the identity of this Book of Mormon with a romance written by one Spaulding, a man educated for the ministry, but afterward devoting himself to business pursuits. This romance, a fanciful history of the Indians, tracing their origin from the lost tribes of Israel, was left with a Pittsburgh publisher for examination. Pending its publication, Spaulding died; and after the death of the publisher the manuscript passed into the hands of Sidney Rigdon, through whose means Smith gained access to it. Smith commenced preaching among his own friends, and the first Mormon Church was formed in Manchester, N. Y., in 1830. After various attempts at settlement in Ohio and New York, Smith claimed to have received a command to build the New Zion in Jackson County, Missouri, "the center of the world," and did establish a settlement there, where they remained till expelled by the violence of their neighbors. They then purchased a township in Illinois, and laid out a city, which they called Nauvoo. Here, in 1841, they erected a magnificent temple. They attempted to abrogate all State authority, and Smith, with others, was seized for misdemeanor and confined in jail at Carthage, where he was killed by a mob. It was at Nauvoo that the doctrine of polygamy was first advocated by Sidney Rigdon, but was opposed by Smith, and was not acknowledged a part of Mormon doctrine till after his death. Brigham Young was chosen President in place of the dead prophet; and when the people of Illinois made a move necessary, he conceived the idea of establishing a settlement in the heart of the western wilds, and accordingly set out with his followers, in 1847, for the valley of the Great Salt Lake, where he founded the Great Salt Lake City, where the community have since lived in peace and perfect independence, virtually denying and defying Governmental authority. The present number of Mormons in this country is about forty or fifty thousand, made up in great part of proselytes from Europe. The notable feature of Mormonism, as it now exists, is polygamy, each saint taking as many wives as he pleases, beside forming spiritual unions with others whom he does not marry, but who will accompany him to paradise. The orthodox theory of the Trinity is part of their creed, but total depravity is denied by them. They believe all mankind may be saved by Christ's atonement and the services of the Mormon Church. They believe equally in the Scriptures and the Book of Mormon, and believe that Christ will come in person and reign a thousand years, and that his residence will be with the Mormons.

MUGGLETONIANS, a small sect, followers of an English journeyman tailor, who, with a companion, Reeves, claimed to be inspired. Their doctrines were opposition to all known creeds, and absurd.

MYSTICS profess a pure, sublime, and disinterested devotion, and a secret intercourse with God in their own spirits, such as cannot be attained by the human intellect. They maintain that at the fall man was totally lost, but that God, by his grace granted him an inward monitor and mediator, to whose voice, if he would listen, he might be saved; that all the revelations of God are to be received in the light of this spirit, whose influence is subtle and cannot be described nor explained. They trace their doctrine to Dionysius, the Areopagite. The radical principle of the ancient Mystics was adopted by the Behmists, Bourignonists, and Quietists, in the seventeenth century.

NANEKITES, an idolatrous sect of Hindostan, whose belief is partly Mohammedan and partly Brahminism.

NASSARIANS are another sect of Mohammedans, living on Mount Lebanon and subject to Turkey.

NECESSITARIANS, another name for fatalists, who believe that all things happen through necessity, and that the human will is subject to that necessity.

NEONOMIANS, a general term applied to all those who believe the old law of Moses was abrogated by the gospel, and that, instead of perfect obedience, God requires now only the imperfect though sincere obedience through faith. This doctrine is the key of Arminianism, and is maintained by all who adopt that creed.

NESTORIANS arose in the fifth century, under the leadership of Nestorius, Bishop of Constantinople. He maintained that the appellation, Mother of God, applied to the Virgin Mary, was erroneous, inasmuch as she was mother only of the human part. For this heresy he was anathematized by Cyril, Bishop of Alexandria, tried by council at Ephesus, deprived of his see, and finally banished to Oasis, in Egypt, where he died about 439. The friends of Nestorius spread his doctrines throughout the Oriental provinces, and many congregations were formed, with avowed opposition to the decrees of the Council. First among these was Barsumus, Bishop of Nisibis, who is regarded by many eastern Nestorians of the present day as the real founder of their faith. He established a school at Nisibis, whence Nestorian disciples were sent, spreading their doctrines through Syria, Arabia, Egypt, India, Tartary, and China. The church government of the Nestorians is Episcopal. The key note of their doctrines is that Mary was not the mother of Jesus Christ as God, but only as man; but whether Nestorius went so far as to assert that Christ had two distinct natures is uncertain. Probably, as the best authority states, his theory was that, while there were in reality two natures, yet these were so commingled as to form but one person. The Nestorians have carefully avoided many of the superstitions and errors into which other eastern churches have fallen.

NEW JERUSALEM CHURCH.—See Swedenborgians.

NIHILISTS, extreme skeptics, who deny the possibility of all knowledge and all reality.

NOETIANS, followers of Noetius, who, in the second century, maintained that God was a unit, and that the names Word, Son, and Spirit were applied only as manifestations of the Deity. He claimed a special mission for himself and his brother, calling himself a second Moses, and his brother a second Aaron.

NOVATIANS seceded from the Church of Rome in the third century. They maintained that backsliders should not be received again into the church, and that second marriage is unlawful. They claimed to be the church, and rebaptized all whom they admitted to their communion. They were severely persecuted both by Romanists and Arians. Their doctrines were eminently scriptural and pure.

ORIGENISTS, followers of a patriarch of Alexandria, Origen, a very learned man, who, in the third century, applied philosophical reasoning to the understanding of the Scriptures, and maintained that many errors arose from the too liberal rendering of the word of God, and that the hidden meaning must be sought by reasoning and analogy. The chief tenets of the creed attributed to him are that the soul of man existed before it was clothed in the body, perhaps eternally, because its nature would admit of continued existence before as well as after its investment, requiring only the Divine pleasure, and there are no contrary teachings in Scripture; that souls inhabit bodies as a punishment for the explanation of faults committed in a pre-existent state; that the soul of Christ was united to the Word before the incarnation, for the Scriptures teach that the soul of Christ existed before the beginning of the world; that at the resurrection we shall be clothed in ethereal bodies, as in the pre-existent state, for our present bodies are essentially gross and evil, and the purer the substance with which the soul is united, the more perfect the life; that even the damned, after long periods of probation, shall be released from torment, freed by a second sacrifice of Christ, and be saved; and that the earth, after its purification by fire, shall again become habitable and the mansion of men and other animals, and that in eternal vicissitudes.

ORTLIBENSES, an ignorant heretic sect, branch of the Waldenses, who denied the doctrine of the Trinity and many of the fundamental doctrines of the church.

PAGANS have existed in all ages, and still constitute about three-fifths of the population of the globe. Under this generic name are included all who worship false gods, or idols of whatever name—those who do not belong to one of the three great classes, Christian, Jew, or Mohammedan—Heathen.

PANTHEISTS believe that our solar system is part of a stupendous whole which constitutes the Universe; that the Universe and the laws that govern it are all one—Nature—which is the only Supreme Being. In contradistinction to the Atheists, who believe there is no God, they believe that everything is God, and that man's whole duty lies in producing the highest possible enjoyment to himself and others while he lives.

PASSAGINIANS, also called THE CIRCUMCISED, a sect of the twelfth century, who held that Christ was created, but the first and highest of all created beings, and that the old Jewish ceremonies and services, as established by Moses, were obligatory upon Christians, except the sacrifices.

PASSALORYMCHITES, a branch of the Montanists, which see.

PATRIPASSIANISTS, a general name applied to all those sects which believe that the Father and the Son being one, the Father Himself suffered with Christ. This doctrine is the legitimate outgrowth of Monotheism.

PAULIANISTS, followers of Paul of Samosata, Bishop of Antioch in the third century, who taught that Jesus was born a mere man, but that the Spirit of the Father descended upon, and so far inspired him, that Christ may be somewhat incorrectly called God. Paul did not baptize in the name of the Father, and the Son, etc., and all baptised by him were rebaptised in accordance with the order of the Council of Nice. On account of his heresies he was deposed.

PAULICIANS, a sect which originated in Armenia in the sixth century, and continued in the Greek Protestant communities for some time after. They believed in two original principles which were the foundation of all truth. They placed the highest estimate on the value of the universal use of the Scriptures. They refused to worship the Virgin Mary, and the images and emblems, and some went so far as to reject all outward forms and ceremonies, as the modern Friends do. They suffered severe persecution in the ninth century, and again in Europe in the eleventh century, since which time they have disappeared or become merged in other sects.

PELAGIANS, followers of Pelagius, an English monk of the fifth century, who opposed the commonly received doctrines of free will, predestination, original sin, and the merit of good works. His doctrines were, in the main, that the sins of Adam were imputed to him only, and not by inheritance to mankind in general; that the child is born as pure as was Adam before the fall; that, therefore, mankind are capable of regeneration, and of attaining piety and virtue in the highest degree by means of this innate power; that eternal grace is only necessary to excite the endeavor, not to save; that Adam was created mortal, and that sin was not the cause of his death; that God gives grace in proportion to our merits; that mankind may attain perfection in this life; that the law qualifies men for heaven, and was given with equal promises with the gospel. Pelagius went first to Rome, then to Africa, and afterward to Palestine. His doctrines were condemned by a council at Carthage, and afterward, in 418, by the council at Ephesus, when he was excommunicated and his followers exiled.

PETROBRUSSIANS, a sect of the eleventh century, followers of Peter De Bruis, a Reformer of Languedoc. Their tenets were the rejection of infant baptism, conferring the rite only upon those of mature understanding; opposition to the erection of costly structures for the worship of God as useless and frivolous; that all images and emblems should be discarded as tending to idolatry; denying the doctrine of the real presence, but maintaining the mere figurative symbolising of the flesh and blood; maintaining that prayers for the dead were supererogatory.

PETROJOANITES, converts of an enthusiast of the twelfth century, who claimed that he alone had the key to the true teachings of the gospel, which he interpreted in a fantastic manner. His heresy became known after his death, and his body was exhumed and burned.

PHILANTHROPINISTS.—See Materialists.

PHILIPPISTS, an epithet applied to the followers of Philip Melancthon. They were a division of Lutherans who opposed the doctrines of the Ubiquitists.

PIETISTS, a German sect who strenuously opposed the indulgence in the pleasures and vanities of this world, and maintained a life devoted to piety and good works. They claimed that only those who were models of sanctity were qualified to be teachers of religion. The name was applied as an epithet by their more liberal neighbors.

POLYTHEISTS, a general name applied to those who believe in a plurality of gods, including ancient and modern Pagans.

POMORIANS, a Russian sect who believe that Antichrist is now reigning, and has driven holiness out of the Church.

PRAXEANS, followers of Praxeas, a term applied to Monarchians and Patripassianists, because Praxeas first proclaimed their doctrines in the second century.

PRE-EXISTENTS.—Two classes lay claim to this appellation—the Arians, who maintain Christ's pre-existence but deny his divinity; and Calvinists, who assert that He consists of two beings, one the self-existent Creator, and the other created, but both commingled by an ineffable union which renders the attributes common, and honors due to both alike.

PRESBYTERIANS, ASSOCIATE, seceded from the Church of Scotland in 1733. The occasion of the disension was the question of state patronage, which Rev. Ebenezer Erskine vehemently denounced. In consequence of this he was censured by the Synod, when he and his sympathizers withdrew and formed the "Associate Presbytery of Scotland." In doctrine they are purely Calvinistic, and in government they follow closely the mother Church. Its members are strictly enjoined to educate their children in the fear of the Lord, and the strict discipline of the primitive Presbyterians is maintained. The Associate Presbytery was introduced into this country in 1764. They now have an educated ministry, and are a highly respected denomination.

PRESBYTERIANS, ASSOCIATE REFORMED.—This Church took its rise in this country by the union of Associate and Reformed Presbyterians in Pennsylvania, in 1782. They effected a compromise, or rather union of their doctrines, adapting the Confession to the usages and civil government of this country. The first theological seminary in the United States was founded by them in 1805, and they have since been noted for the talent of their ministry.

PRESBYTERIANS, REFORMED, took their rise in Scotland from the opposition of a portion of the Kirk to the interference of the civil authority which established Presbyterianism in Scotland at the same time (1689), and in the same manner, as Episcopacy in England. They declared that the assumption of such powers by the civil authority was a usurpation, and declined to avail themselves of the privileges offered, protesting that the proclamation was in direct opposition to the "Solemn League and Covenant," which they considered ultimate authority. This Church was organized in this country in 1774, in Pennsylvania. Their doctrines are, like those of the mother Church, purely Calvinistic. Like the Associate and Associate Reformed Presbyterians, they permit only the literal translation of the Psalms to be sung in their churches, and they object to the use of any instruments whatever in the service of God. They claim that every Christian government should distinctly and directly recognize the existence and power of God. They declined to support this government on account of the omission of this essential clause from the Constitution, and also because oaths of office were not worded to give God the glory, and because the importance of piety was not acknowledged in the selection of officers, and, finally, because slavery was allowed and recognized. The last and main objection has been removed, and it is probable this denomination will coalesce with some one of its cognates. Several prominent members of its clergy attempted a modification of some of the last-mentioned views, which led to the formation of a new Presbytery, in 1830, of the same name, but with liberalized views in regard to the civil government.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF THE UNITED STATES.—Presbyterianism dates its inception to the time and preaching of John Knox. He was born in Scotland, educated at Glasgow, took priestly orders in the Roman Catholic Church, and was converted to Protestantism in his thirty-seventh year. Being of an impulsive nature, and possessing true Scotch tenacity of purpose, he became a zealous advocate of his new faith, and soon was the mark of most bitter persecution. Twice he was obliged to flee from his country, but each time, meeting Calvin at Geneva, and being inspired by his doctrines and instructed in his mode of church government, he returned fired with new zeal, and so boldly advocated Protestantism and Presbyterianism that when he died, in 1572, he left both so firmly rooted in the soil of his native land that they have ever since remained the dominant religious faith and power of Scotland. The first Presbyterian church in this country was organized in Philadelphia about the beginning of the eighteenth century, and the first Synod convened in 1716. The doctrines of this Church are purely Calvinistic, and are set forth in the Westminster Confession of Faith and the Catechism. The government is eminently democratic, its Assemblies being composed of both clerical and lay delegates. Its legislative bodies are the Session, which takes cognizance of matters pertaining to the church which they represent; the Presbytery, consisting of the pastor and one ruling elder and one layman from each church within its district, to which appeals may be taken from the Session; the Synod, composed of the minister and a ruling elder from each parish within its jurisdiction, which comprises several Presbyteries; and the General Assembly, the highest tribunal, in which each Presbytery in the country is represented. Both doctrine and government are patterned closely after the Scottish Mother Church, and have been remarkably free from invasion. In 1830 an unfortunate difference in the interpretation of the Confession commenced, and became the subject of vigorous discussion for several years, and finally resulted in the dismemberment of the Church and the formation of two distinct branches—the Old School and the New School. Both have continued to flourish, and have extended over all the country, and each has founded several institutions of learning. After maintaining separate organizations for nearly forty years, the two divisions, by mutual concessions and charity, compromised their differences, and in 1870 formally reunited as The Presbyterian Church of the United States. The immediate origin of the difference was a sermon entitled "The Way of Salvation," preached in Morristown, N. J., by the Rev. Albert Barnes, then a promising young divine. He lived to see the breach which his conscientious zeal had created happily reunited, and soon after fell asleep. This Church, numerically as well as influentially, is one of the strongest in this country.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH OF THE UNITED STATES.—This body is the direct branch of the Established Church of England. It was organized in 1785, by the election of two bishops, White and Provoost, who were consecrated by the Bishop of Canterbury. Since then it has maintained an entirely independent organization from the mother Church, though its doctrines are the same, and its ritual has only been accommodated to the different form of government, while it is entirely free from interference or admixture of civil authority. It has spread throughout the country, and has a numerous and highly influential membership. (Very similar in government is the FRENCH CHURCH OF ENGLAND, which is coming into notice. There are at present twenty-three congregations associated, "retaining to a great extent their episcopal character, but rejecting prelacy." The motive for its organization was the extreme ritualism adopted in some of the Established churches.) The government is committed to presbyteries and deacons, under their chosen bishop, and is enacted as diocesan and general convocation. In this country, too, there is a division between high and low church, or the advocates and opponents of extreme ritualism, though each church regulates the extent of its service without departing from the prescribed form.

PROGRESSIVE FRIENDS, a sect which has recently sprung up in this country, formed by a nucleus of Friends to which the dissatisfied of all creeds have attached themselves. They exclaim against the use of tobacco and alcoholic drinks, and every excess. They claim to be the special advocates of humane treatment of the Indians, on the ground both of policy and humanity. They are earnest advocates of equal rights to women and men. They regard marriage as a civil contract, over which the civil government should alone have jurisdiction, justifying divorce for whatever reason may seem sufficient to the legislators. They maintain that war is both politically useless and morally wrong. They also deny the right of man to inflict capital punishment. As regards doctrine, they reject that of the Trinity, a vicarious atonement, the necessity of any ordinances, and the eternity of future punishment. Their theories of reward and punishment are that virtue brings its own reward, and vice is followed by its punishment without the intervention of a superior justice.

PROTESTANTS.—This name was originally applied to Martin Luther and his followers, who protested against a decree of Charles V and the Diet of Spire. More recently it has become a distinctive name applied to Christians outside the pale of the Roman Catholic Church.

PSATYRIANS, an Arian sect who maintained that the Son was not the Father; that the generation could not be distinguished from creation, as he was taken from nothing, and, therefore, he could not be equal with God.

PUBLICANI, an English sect of the eleventh century, similar in belief to the Waldenses. They denied many tenets of the Roman Catholic Church, and refused its communion. Among the doctrines rejected by them was that of transubstantiation, the elevation of marriage into a sacrament, and the baptism of infants. Before the Oxford Council of 1160 they maintained their heresies, and even courted death "for righteousness' sake."

PURITANS, a term originally applied in England, during the reign of Elizabeth, to those dissenters from the Established Church who professed to aim at the purification of doctrine from all ceremonial impediments. This name, originally a reproach, has since been adopted by the large and highly influential denominations who have more liberal views of church government than the Church from which they sprang. They were subjected to much persecution during the reign of Elizabeth and those following, and many of them fled to other countries to enjoy religious freedom. The earlier settlements in this country were made by them, and to them and their descendants are much of the prosperity and freedom of our country due. Their bigotry and intolerance have been severely criticized; but when the example and influences under which they had received their early training are taken into account, it is not wonderful that they should be prone to throw around their own faith some of those defenses and safeguards which had caused them such a bitter struggle at home. Eventually, the institutions which they formed have become the most liberal on the globe, and have opened the door of toleration and extended the hand of brotherhood to every tribe and kindred of the world.

PUSEYITES.—See Tractarians.

QUAKERS.—See Friends.

QUIETISTS.—This name has been applied to three different sects who have held to a common dogma. The first was a division of early Christians, in Greece. In the seventeenth century, a sect sprang from the French Roman Catholic Church, and at the same time a Spanish monk, Molinos by name, proclaimed the same doctrine and gained many adherents. The distinctive tenet is that, inasmuch as it is declared, "It is God which worketh in you," etc., it only remains for us to maintain a perfectly passive subjection to His workings, and not to attempt to do for ourselves what He has promised to do for us. This was declared heretical by the Roman Catholic Church, but the name Quietists was brought into disrepute by the excesses of certain priests, who made this a cloak for their license.

QUINTILIANS, a sect of the early Christian Church, who magnified the importance of woman's work, claiming great things for all mentioned in the Scriptures, from Eve down. They were so called from Quintilla, their prophetess. They were more enthusiasts, but by their persistency they increased in numbers for about two centuries, until condemned by council at Laodicea, in 320.

RASKOLNIKS, or RASCOLNIKS, an epithet applied to all Russian dissenters from the Greek Church—equivalent to the English heretics.

RATIONALISTS believe that the human reason is the highest authority, and the only guide of life vouchsafed to man. They deny the inspiration of the Bible, as well as everything supernatural pertaining to religion.

RE-ANOINTERS, a schism of the Greek Church, who insist upon the necessity of re-anointing its converts, though they are admitted without re-baptism. They sprang up in the last half of the last century, and are quite numerous in Russia.

REDEMPTORISTS, an order of the Romish Church, founded in Naples, in 1732, and introduced into this country about 1840. They are teachers and curators of the spiritual welfare of the German population.

RELLYANISTS, adherents of James Relly, who varied the Universalist doctrine, claiming that Christ so identified himself with humanity that his sacrifice afforded complete redemption to the whole race. He advocated the doing of good works as preferable to religious observances, claiming that our salvation was already secured, and that our sole aim should be to do good.

RETRORATIONISTS also vary the Universalist belief, claiming that retribution does not follow evil deeds in this life, and that man is not transferred to heaven immediately after death, but that he experiences a probationary state, longer or shorter according to the enormity of his guilt, but that all finally attain to the full enjoyment of heaven, that they are restored to holiness and happiness.

ROCERENES, followers of John Rogers, a fanatic, who, in the last century, proclaimed against the observance of the first day of the week as idolatry, and incited his followers to the disturbance of assemblies of worship on that day. They disappeared with their leader after a few years, about 1680.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, in its present form and with its present observances, has remained identical since the decrees of the Council of Trent, in 1545, though it existed in modified form long prior to that, the Catholics maintaining that Peter was the first of an unbroken succession of popes. They accept the Bible as the Word of God, but claim also the explication of traditions. They believe in the Trinity of the Godhead, and give to the Virgin Mary, "Mother of God," the next place in dignity to the Son. The doctrine of the Immaculate Conception is now a portion of the belief of this Church. They have seven sacraments—Baptism, the Lord's Supper, Confirmation, Penance, Extreme Unction, Holy Order, and Matrimony. Baptism is performed by sprinkling either infants or adults. The bread and wine of the Eucharist they believe to be changed mysteriously into the actual flesh and blood of Christ. Confirmation is the full admission of persons of proper age to the fellowship of the Church, by the laying on of hands performed by the bishop. Penance consists in the performance of certain acts of humility or self-abnegation, prescribed by the confessor in recompense for sins committed. Extreme unction consists in anointing the feet of those about to die. The taking of holy orders is the induction of the clergy into the authority of their office. Marriage is regarded as entirely a religious rite; it is performed only by the clergy, and the vows once taken, full divorce cannot be granted. They believe in an intermediate state, where the souls of sinners who are ultimately redeemed are purified of their sins, which is called Purgatory. Their service is entirely ritualistic, and much of it in Latin. Prayers are addressed to saints, and especially to the Virgin Mary, whose mediatorial offices they believe exceedingly efficacious. They attach much importance to the offices of The Church, as they recognize no other but theirs, which is infallible. The doctrine of Infallibility has always been a part of their belief, but it was not until 1870 that it was proclaimed to be peculiar to the Pope, as the head of the Church. This Church has always exhibited a great degree of enterprise, and has extended to all parts of the world. It now numbers nearly half the Christian population.

ROUNDHEADS, an epithet applied by the cavaliers, in the time of Charles I, to the Puritans, on account of their custom of cropping the hair close to their heads. Afterward the word gained political significance.

SABIANISTS, an ancient sect who worshiped the heavenly bodies, the sun, moon, and stars. They belonged in Persia and are now extinct, except that some traces of their faith remain among scattered eastern tribes.

SABBATARIANS claim that a literal observance of the fourth commandment was not abrogated by Christ, and therefore maintain it to be the duty of Christians to observe the seventh instead of the first day as the Sabbath.

SABELLIANS, followers of Sabellius, a presbyter, of the third century, of Ptolemais, who held that there was but one person of the Godhead, and that the appellations given in the Bible were merely to distinguish his attributes or functions, but did not imply distinct persons.

SACCAPIHORI, a sect of the fourth century. They were severists, and affected great simplicity and austerity of life. They were clothed in sackcloth, whence the name.

SACRAMENTARIAN, a name applied to all who deny either the real or mystical presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Eucharist.

SAMANISTS, worshipers of Dalai-Lama. Their religion is an offshoot of Buddhism and very similar to it. It exists in Thibet and is widespread in Central Asia.

SAMARITANS, a division of Jews whose origin dates to the time of Rehoboam, when the people of Israel were divided into two kingdoms (see Second Chronicles, 10). They still retain their distinctiveness and adhere to their ancient form of worship. They are found chiefly in Egypt, and claim still to have priests in direct line from Aaron.

SANDEMANIANS, a sect originating in Scotland, and there properly called Glasites. They take their name from Robert Sandeman. "They hold to a weekly administration of the Lord's Supper; to love-feasts, which consist in dining at each others' houses in the intermission of public worship; to the kiss of charity, on the admission of new members; to mutual exhortation; to abstinence from things strangled, and from blood; to the washing of each others' feet; to modified community of goods; to a plurality of elders, pastors, or bishops in each church." They also believe that saving faith is the mere admission of the facts recorded in Scripture concerning Christ.

SAINT SIMONIANS, a French sect, taking their name from Claude Henri, Count de St. Simon, who died in 1825. He wrote a syllabus for the formation of a new religion, which, in an amended form, was put in practice about 1830, by the "Family of St. Simon." They had everything in common, but the property was distributed according to the merit and capacity of the recipient. After an existence of two years the community was broken up by government, and is now extinct.

SCHWENKELDIANS, followers of Gaspar Schwenkfeldt, in the sixteenth century, who maintained that Christ's language in regard to the Eucharist was figurative, and that the real meaning was that of such bread was his body, and of such wine his blood, and as the bread and wine strengthened and enlivened the body, so would his body and blood nourish and vivify the soul; that the Scriptures were not endowed with the power of regenerating the soul, but that this power remained alone with the inner word, which is Christ himself; that Christ's human nature, by its union with the Deity, was itself deified, and therefore could not be called a creature.

SE-BAPTISTS, name of an English and also of a Russian sect, who maintained that it was lawful for each one to baptize himself, on the ground that no one possessed sufficient sanctity to confer it upon others.

SECOND ADVENTISTS, also called Millerites, from William Miller, the founder of their sect. They believe that the Millennium will be ushered in by the second coming of Christ; that the judgment day will be a thousand years long; that the just will be raised at the beginning, the unjust at the end of that day. They believe the time of this second advent is near at hand, though they differ as to the indications which are to precede it.

SECULARISTS, a sect recently sprung up in England, under the leadership of George Jacob Holyoake, who discard all current religious views, and advocate merely the teaching "the truths of science and ideas of reform."

SEEKERS, an English sect that arose about the middle of the seventeenth century. Their title comes from the fact that they believed true religion to be lost, and claimed to be seeking it. They claimed that the Scriptures were corrupted; that miracles were necessary to establish faith, and new revelations to guide belief, and that the whole system of religion was without foundation.

SELEUCIANS, followers of Seleucus, a Galatian philosopher of the fourth century. He taught the eternity of matter; that Christ assumed human shape and suffered only in appearance; and that he committed his body to the sun, and sits at the right hand of the Father as a Spirit; and that the soul of man was created by angels, an animated fire.

SEMBIANI, followers of Sembiani, who rejected much of the Old Testament, denied the resurrection of the body, and exclaimed against the use of wine.

SEMI-ARIANS, an ancient sect, who denounced the errors of the Ariane, yet adopted many of their doctrines, under different names or with very little variation. The Son, they claimed, was of like substance with the Father, but not of the same substance. A modern sect have modified this doctrine, maintaining that the Son was begotten from all eternity of the Father, and the equal though not the same as the Father.

SEMI-PELAGIANS deny the universality of the fall of man, claiming that Adam's sin was visited upon him alone, and not on the whole race. This, with some other doctrines approaching Pelagianism, has given them their title.

SERVETIANS, disciples of Michael Servetus, a Spaniard of the sixteenth century, who advanced the theory that God, before the creation, caused to emanate from himself two impersonations, by means of which he was to communicate with men. These were the Word and the Spirit. The former, by the exercise of omnipotence, took possession of the body of Christ; the latter pervades and directs all nature, and especially the mind of man. The distinct purpose of these manifestations was for communication with man. When, therefore, at the end of the world, the object no longer existed, these emanations would be absorbed in the Deity again.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS, a sect of Sabbatarians, who baptize by immersion and hold generally to the doctrines of the orthodox Baptists, differing only in regard to the observance of the Sabbath. They exist in England, Germany, and in the United States, where they came from England first in 1665, and are now spread in moderate numbers throughout many of the States.

SEPARATISTS, a general name applied to all dissenters and seceders from an established church, but particularly applied to the followers of Whitefield and other revivalists.

SERPENTINIANS, or OPHITES, a Gnostic sect of the second century, who revered a serpent as the teacher of good and evil, founding their doctrine on the account of the temptation of Eve.

SETHIANS, a sect that arose in Egypt during the second century, and existed some two hundred years, who believed that Seth was created by a new divinity to replace the descendants of Cain and Abel, and that he was Jesus Christ, and therefore worshiped him. They were extremely licentious and quite numerous.

SHAKERS were originally so called in derision of their mode of worship, which is conducted by dancing and gesticulating in rhythm to the singing of the whole congregation. They at first assumed the name United Society of Believers in Christ's Second Appearing, but have adopted the epithet as their distinctive appellation. Their distinctive tenets are community of property, celibacy of all the members, non-existence of any priesthood, and the use of dancing in divine worship. They originated in England about 1770, and are now confined to this country.

SIUTES, a large sect of Mohammedans, who deny the authority of the first three califs, and assert Ali to be the only true successor of Mohammed. They also deny the authenticity of the Sunna, a book of traditions concerning Mohammed, and are regarded as heretics by orthodox Mohammedans.

SINTOOISTS, believers in Sinto. This is a species of Buddhism, the established religion of Japan, and consists of a plural idolatry.

SIX-PRINCIPLE BAPTISTS, a denomination who add to the articles of faith held by other Baptists another—the laying on of hands. Their principles are succinctly stated in Heb. vi: 1, 2: "Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment." Submission to all these is necessary for admission to their communion.

SOCINIANS, believers in the doctrines advanced by Faustus and Laellus Socinus, in the sixteenth century. They denied the Trinity, maintaining that God is a unit, and Christ did not exist previous to the Conception, and that the Spirit is a mere manifestation of the Deity. They denied the personality of the devil; the doctrine of total depravity, saying men sin in imitation of Adam; and of the vicarious atonement, believing that human salvation is in imitation of the reward of Christ's virtue. They denied the inspiration of the Bible, except where the writer distinctly announced it, maintaining that it is to be explained and understood by human reason, and that its metaphors are not to be taken literally.

SOUTHCOTTIANS, followers of a singular fanatic of the last century, Joanna Southcott by name, an English woman, who claimed to be inspired and to hold communion with Christ. Many of the lower classes looked upon her as a prophetess, and trusted to her teachings, which were wild and fantastic.

SPIRITUALISTS first arose in this country, about 1848, and spread very rapidly and widely. They are now found in small numbers in all parts of the country. They believe in the direct communication of departed spirits with the minds of certain susceptible persons, called Mediums. These communications are manifested by physical effects, such as rapping, and moving ponderous bodies, or directly on the mind of the medium in a state of trance, who is called a speaking medium. They believe the soul, when freed from the body, to possess all the faculties and to be animated by "the impulses which influence it in life."

STAROBRADSI, a sect of Russian dissenters, who opposed what they supposed to be innovations in the ritual of the Established Church.

SUBLAPSARIANS hold that man fell by the suffrance but without the pre-determination of God.

SUFIS, seceders from Mohammedanism, who hold to a mysticism approaching Pantheism, and reject the Koran. They are Persians.

SUPRALAPSARIANS hold that God from all eternity fore-ordained some men to glory and others to perdition, for the exhibition of his own glory and attributes.

SWEDENBORGIANS, or NEW JERUSALEM CHURCH, believers in the doctrines advanced by Emanuel Swedenborg, a Swedish philosopher of the last century. He claimed to have direct communication with spirits of the dead through the opening of his spiritual senses. His doctrines were that Christ comprehended all the fullness of the Godhead; that there is a spiritual sense of the Scriptures underlying the written word, and that not all the Bible was inspired; that there is a spiritual body which experiences resurrection, leaving the natural body to decay; that each goes into the spirit world as he leaves this, neither wholly good nor wholly bad, and that his station is fixed; and that spirits can communicate with each other, and with men whose spiritual sense has been awakened.

SYRIAN CHRISTIANS hold substantially the same faith as that of the Church of England.

TANQUELINIANS, followers of Tanquelinus, in the twelfth century, who held tenets inclining to Mysticism, and inveighed against the clergy and manner of conducting worship and administering the sacraments in the Romish Church.

TASCODRUGITE, a division of Montanists, who placed the forefinger on the nose while praying.

THEODOSIANS, a sect of Russian dissenters, who claim that the National Church is totally corrupt, and that the priests preach Antichrist under the name of Jesus. They are very numerous and influential, and have caused no little dissension in the Established Church.

THEOPASCHITES, a sect of the fifth century, who held that God himself suffered on the cross, inasmuch as Christ possessed only one nature, the divine.

THEOPHILANTHROPISTS, a society who attempted to replace Christianity by a deistic philosophy during the French Revolution. Their teachings as inscribed on their altars were as follows: "We believe in the existence of a God, in the immortality of the soul. Worship God, cherish your kind, make yourself useful to your country. Good is everything which tends to the preservation or the perfection of man; evil is everything which tends to destroy or deteriorate him." Beside those were several enjoining morality. They were put down by the First Consul.

THEOSOPHISTS, those who claim to have a knowledge of the will of God by direct communication or inspiration. The term includes branches of many sects, ancient and modern, and is not distinctive.

THERAPEUTÆ, a Jewish sect in Egypt, who lived in great austerity in separate cells. They interpreted the Scriptures allegorically, and employed their time in prayer and meditation.

TRACTARIANS, or PUSEYITES, take their names from the Oxford Tracts, which contained the doctrines and arguments of Dr. Pusey, endeavoring to reconcile the Established Church to the Roman Catholic Church, as they existed at some period prior to the time of the issue of the Tracts—in 1833. They endeavored to change the forms and ceremonies to correspond with those of the Roman Catholic Church before corruptions had crept in.

TRITHEISTS, a sect of the sixth century, who maintained that there were three distinct persons and natures in the Godhead, which were not united by any common essence.

TSCHOMABOLTSI, a Russian sect of dissenters, who do not use the prescribed form of prayer for the emperor, hold it unlawful to shave the beard, and are bound together by an oath.

TUNKERS.—See Dunkers.

TURLUPINS, one of the minor sects which paved the way for the Reformation, who held that after man arrived at a certain state of perfection he was no longer subject to the Divine law. They were probably the same as the Lollards.

UBIQUITARIANS, a sect of German divines, who held that Christ's body was present everywhere by virtue of his omnipresence.

UCKEWALLISTS, so called from Ucke Wallist, a Friedlander, whose tenets were the same as those of the Mennonists, except that he believed that Judas and the murderers were saved.

UNITARIANS arose in this country in 1815. They hold to the absolute unity of the Godhead, denying the doctrine of the Trinity. They believe Christ to have been the best personage who ever existed, and that he fulfilled a divine mission; that his death was not vicarious, but the seal of his sincerity; and that he performed miracles and was raised from the dead by the "Power of God" which was delegated to him. They make each responsible to God for his own belief, as well as his actions, and that each will be punished or rewarded in proportion to his deserts; and, finally, they believe in a final beatitude, which shall redound to the glory of God.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST, a branch of the German Reformed Church, established in 1775, in Pennsylvania. Their doctrines are not new, but in government they divide the power between clergy and laity, and rulers hold office by consent of the governed. They are widely spread, and are very influential in this country.

UNIVERSALISTS believe that all men will be saved, some claiming that all punishment for sin is meted out on earth, while others admit a temporary penalty in the future. They do not believe in hell, nor a personal devil, nor a literal judgment day, in which the good and bad shall be eternally separated. Some are Arians, regarding Christ as a member of the Godhead, but inferior to the Father; but most of them are Socinians, believing him to be mere man, but the greatest, best, and wisest of men. They admit that sin is in the world, but that suffering its own consequences here and temporarily hereafter will purify the soul and fit it to enjoy eternal bliss.

VAUDOIS.—See Waldenses.

VERSCHORISTS, followers of Jacob Verschor, of the seventeenth century, who attempted to form a new religion with an impious and fantastic creed.

WAIHABEES, a sect of Mohammedan reformers, who condemn the worship of the prophet, and claim to purify Islamism and restore it to its pristine glory, accepting the Koran and all the ceremonies. They are Bedouins, and inflict death on all Mussulmans who do not give up the worship of the prophet. Though vigorously opposed, they are widespread in Arabia.

WALDENSES.—This name does not properly belong to a denomination, but is a general name applied to those dissenters or heretics who arose in the twelfth century and bade defiance to the power of Rome. They were the first Protestants, and suffered the bitterest persecutions. Rome declared a war of extermination against them, and they were driven from valley to valley, in their native Piedmont, until, finally, the handful of survivors fled to the protection of the English, Dutch, and Swiss governments, in the seventeenth century. The key of their opposition to the Romish Church was the claim of their right to study and interpret the Scriptures for themselves, and to worship as they saw fit. They derive their name from Peter Waldo, who was a leader in the twelfth century; though it is claimed for them that they have existed from the very earliest history of the Church, under one name or another; and certain it is there have always been dissenters maintaining substantially the same doctrines. They sowed the seeds which ripened in the Reformation, and must always hold a high place as the bold maintainers of the liberty of religion.

WILHELMINIANS, dupes of a fanatical woman of Bohemia, who persuaded them that the Holy Ghost was incarnate in her for the salvation of souls.

WILKINSONIANS, followers of a woman, Jemima Wilkinson, who was born in Rhode Island, in 1776. She claimed that she had died and went to heaven. While there, she heard a voice saying, "Who will go and preach to a dying world?" She answered, "Here am I—send me." And she accordingly left the heavenly delights, imbued with the Holy Spirit, to preach repentance to man. She died in 1819.

WHIPPERS.—See Flagellants.

WINEBRENNARIANS, followers of John Winebrenner, who began to preach in Pennsylvania in 1830. They spring from the German Reformed Church, practice immersion, and in government are Presbyterian. They reject all creeds, but in belief are Arminian. An appointed ordinance is the washing of each others' feet; and they believe in the personal reign of Christ.

WYCKLIFFITES, followers of the reformer Wyckliffe, who, in the fourteenth century, boldly attacked the jurisdiction of the Pope and bishops. Twice he was tried by council, but, being well supported, was not condemned, and continued to advocate his reforms more widely and more strenuously, and gained many followers, and laid the foundation of Protestantism in England.

YEZIDEES, or WORSHIPERS OF THE DEVIL, a people inhabiting the region of the Euphrates, who have a mixture of Christianity, Mohammedanism, magic, and adoration of the devil. This latter probably consists in votive offerings to appease him.

ZACHEANS, disciples of Zacheus, an enthusiast of the fourth century, who interpreted Christ's injunction to secret prayer literally, and as the only prayer acceptable to God. To this dogma he devoted his life.

ZWINGLIANS, followers of Zwinglius, a contemporary of Luther, also a reformer, who differed from the latter only on the point of the presence in the Eucharist, which he declared was only typically true, while Luther strenuously maintained consubstantiation. He did much toward establishing the Lutheran Church.

THE JEWISH TABERNACLE AND PRIESTHOOD;

A BRIEF EXPOSITION OF THEIR

DESIGN AND TYPICAL SIGNIFICATION. ILLUSTRATED.

BY REV. GEORGE C. NEEDHAM.

As the reader advances with the exposition he will find it profitable to examine the accompanying plates, illustrative of the Tabernacle, its vessels and surroundings, with those of the High Priest in his "linen" robes, and in his "garments of beauty and glory."

IN ORDER to have a clear and systematic knowledge of the precious aspects of Divine truth, couched in the types of the Old Testament, it is necessary to have a proper understanding of the type or figure introduced. Some of these types seem fragmentary, scattered along the historical portions of the Word. These fragments must be brought together, that each type may be viewed in its entirety, and present to the mind their proper and symmetrical form. By reference, allusion, comparison, or contrast, the antitypical parallel will be discovered. In this department of investigation one needs the presence of God's Holy Spirit to produce soberness of judgment, and perseverance in a careful comparison of type and antitype.

Frequently types have but one story to relate; one feature of the Gospel to portray; one prominent thought to furnish; one doctrinal truth to unfold. When strained beyond their proper design, erroneous conclusions will be reached. Mere speculation on their meaning, without clear warrant from the Word, will lead to heresy and confusion.

The application of the brazen serpent, and its virtue in healing the Litten Israelites, is applied to Christ as the Saviour from sin. We need not, therefore, speculate on its illustrative teaching, as now we understand its proper application. Thus we are warranted to use those symbols, to which the Spirit calls attention in that inspired Word of Scripture which is "profitable for doctrine, for conviction, for correction, for discipline which is in righteousness: that the man of God may be complete, thoroughly furnished unto every good work."

Chief among the types, and occupying more space than all other, is the Tabernacle of Israel, with its vessels, priests, services, and worship. It is not one type, illustrating one phase of Gospel truth, but many types in one symmetrical whole, expressing the full Gospel of Christ, even the Gospel of our Salvation. Like the kaleidoscope, exhibiting its multiplied colors, and filling the eye with its ever-varying beauties, is the subject of this article. The Tabernacle, to the eye of faith, displays the hidden riches of Christ, portrays His manifold glories, illustrates the excellencies and characteristics of His Person, and points to the accomplished work of Redemption effected upon the cross. The Tabernacle, in its typical signification, occupies a wide range of truth, and is a fruitful theme of meditation. It is my purpose, however, in the present exposition, to confine myself to those parts of the Tabernacle which unfold two great foundation truths, viz.: The PERSON and WORK of the Lord Jesus Christ. And heartily do I wish my reader to be saved from idle curiosity, or a mere intellectual appreciation of these things. I earnestly seek your spiritual profit, and the glory of God in your salvation and sanctification.

MATERIAL CONSTRUCTION.

The superstructure of the Tabernacle proper consisted of forty-eight boards of shittim, or acacia wood, standing erect, in sockets of silver. Twenty of these formed the south wall, twenty the north wall, and eight the west wall. These boards were overlaid with gold. Bars ran through rings on the outside of the boards, and one from end to end through the centre of the boards, thus binding them together, and giving firmness to the whole. (Ex. xxvi. 15-30; xxxvi. 20-34.) The door of entrance was at its eastern end, where five pillars stood upright in silver sockets, and from the top of which hung a beautiful curtain of fine linen, interwoven with colors of blue, purple and scarlet. (Ex. xxvi. 36, 37.)

The length of the Tabernacle was thirty cubits. Its breadth is not so easily ascertained, as two of the boards forming the west wall were placed in the corners in such a position as to ensure strength and firmness. It is generally admitted that the breadth was ten cubits. This building was divided into two rooms, by four pillars, from the top of which was suspended a curtain similar to the one called the door, but having, in addition, figures of the cherubim interwoven with its texture. This curtain was called the veil. (Ex. xxvi. 30-35.) The first room, which was twenty cubits in length, was called "The Holy Place." The second, or inner room, being a square, was called "The Holiest of All," or "Most Holy Place."

In the Holy Place were arranged the Altar of Incense, the Golden Candlestick, and the Table of Shew Bread. In the Most Holy Place was the Ark, Mercy Seat, and Cherubim.

The ceiling and roof of this holy house were composed of curtains and coverings. Those inside, of great richness and beauty. Those outside, of a more enduring character. A full description of those coverings is found in Ex. xxvi. 1-15.

They were arranged in the following order: First, the fine linen curtains, figured with cherubim, and ornamented with gold, and brilliant colors of blue, purple and scarlet. These formed the ceiling. Next over them were curtains of goats' hair. Over those were coverings of rams' skins, dyed red, and badgers' skins, which were more for protection than beauty.

The Tabernacle was surrounded by a court—a double square one hundred cubits in length and fifty in width. This court was formed by pillars, standing erect in sockets of brass. (Ex. xxvii. 9-18.) There were twenty on the south side, twenty on the north, and ten each on the east and west ends. The pillars were ornamented on the tops with silver chapiters and hooks. From those depended linen curtains, which went all around the court, forming a wall or fence. It is supposed that these curtains were of open network, affording the worshippers outside an opportunity of witnessing the transactions transpiring within the enclosure. I am inclined to think a more durable and closely-woven fabric was needed. The gate of the court was the proper place for worshippers to assemble. The hangings of the gate at the eastern side were similar to the door of the Tabernacle, being embroidered with blue, purple and scarlet threads.

Within this enclosure were two prominent objects besides the Tabernacle. The Brazen Altar, standing near the gate of the court, and between it and the door of the Tabernacle the Brazen Laver.

The Brazen Altar stood fronting the gate of the court, between it and the Tabernacle. It was made of the shittim, or acacia wood, and covered with plates of brass. It was five cubits long, five cubits broad, and three cubits high. (Ex. xxvii. 1-8; xxxviii. 1-7.) There were horns on the four corners, and a network of brass within the hollow enclosure, forming a foundation for the fire, on which the sacrifices were laid. This was the grate of the altar. There were rings placed on its sides through which staves were passed. Animals were constantly burned on this altar for sacrifice, and its fire was never suffered to go out. When the Israelites journeyed, the fire was probably placed in a fire-pan, or preserved in some other way. A purple cloth was then spread on top of the altar, on which the bowls, basins, flesh-hooks, shovels, and other utensils accompanying it, were placed. Over all was thrown a covering of badger skins, and thus it was conveyed from place to place, the staves resting on the shoulders of men appointed for that purpose.

The Brazen Laver is the next object within the court, and is supposed to have stood midway between the altar and the door of the Tabernacle. (Ex. xl. 7.) As its object was to hold pure water, that the priests may wash thereat before entering the sanctuary, perhaps it was nearer the door of the Tabernacle. (Ex. xxx. 17-21.) Neither the form or size of this vessel is given, but its material was brass, having been made out of the brazen mirrors, or looking-glasses of the Jewish women, which they, in self-denial, but voluntarily, gave as their offerings to the house of the Lord. (Ex. xxxviii. 8.)

THE ENCAMPMENT.

We now look outside the court, east, west, north, south, and view, spreading abroad in every direction, the encampment of Israel. It was square in form. The first line of tents were those of the Levites. That tribe was chosen for the special services of the Tabernacle, and from this tribe was the family of Priests appointed. The tents of the Priests were pitched before the gate, at the east side, and at a considerable distance from it. Here also was the tent of Moses. (Numb. iii. 38.) On the south side were the tents of the Kohathites, one branch of the Levite tribe. They had charge of all the furniture; the Ark, Altars, Table of Shew Bread, Golden Candlestick, Laver, etc. These they brought on their shoulders. (Numb. iii. 31.) On the north side were pitched the tents of the Merarites, who had charge of the heavy framework, pillars, bars, sockets, etc. To convey all this material, they were allowed four wagons, drawn by eight oxen. (Numb. iii. 36, etc.) On the west side were the tents of the Gershonites. Their charge included all the curtains, coverings, veils, and hangings of the court. They were allowed two wagons, drawn by four horses, for conveying them. (Numb. iii. 24, etc.; vii. 6-10.) Thus the tribe of Levi furnished 8580 males above the age of thirty, who were the guardians of the Holy Tent and its appurtenances; ministers of the sanctuary (Numb. iv. 47, 48); assisting the priests in their sacred duties (Numb. iii. 9); laborers to take apart or erect the Tabernacle (Numb. i. 51), or transport it across the untravelled desert. (Numb. iv.)

Still further outside the Levitical line of tents, stretching into the distance on either side, were the tents of the twelve tribes. When Levi was chosen to be relatively near the Lord in this service, the tribe of Joseph was divided into two, called after the names of his sons, Ephraim and Manasseh. Thus there were twelve tribes as before. These tribes were formed into four large companies, each company embracing three tribes, with their chiefs, captains, and standards.

On the east was the camp of Judah, comprising the tribes of Judah, Issachar and Zebulun. (Numb. ii. 2-10.) The camp of Reuben occupied the south. This included the tribes of Reuben, Simeon, and Gad. (Numb. ii. 10-17.) On the east lay the tents of Ephraim's camp, which was composed of the three tribes of Ephraim, Benjamin and Manasseh. (Numb. ii. 18-28.) The tribes of Dan, Naphtali, and Asher, formed the camp of Dan, and pitched their tents at the north side. (Numb. ii. 25-29.) There were, therefore, four great camps, one on each side of the Tabernacle, including in their population 603,550 adult males, who constituted the standing army of Israel.

THE CLOUD.

When the Tabernacle was first reared, according to the commandment of the Lord, the pillar of cloud rested upon it, "and the cloud was on it by night and by day, in the sight of all Israel." This cloud, which assumed a pillar-like shape, resting on the Tabernacle, spread over the heavens above it, and covered the whole encampment, thus sheltering it from the scorching rays of the desert sun. (Ps. cv. 39.) At night it became brilliantly illuminated, as a cloud of fire, to give light by night to the people. (Numb. ix. 15-23.)

I have now given my reader a brief description of the type itself—the Tabernacle of Israel in the wilderness. We have looked at its external form and internal arrangements. It must have been a stirring sight to have looked upon it really. To have gazed from the top of some near mountain, and noticed the camps, tribes, and companies, with their ensigns, banners, and colors; the squares, avenues, and divisions; the Levitical tents, Court, smoking Altar, and Tabernacle, with its Cloud of brightness, might well stir the heart of the beholder.

When Balaam, the wicked prophet, looked upon this scene, he exclaimed: "How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob! and thy tabernacles, O Israel! As the valleys are they spread forth by the rivers' side, as the trees of lign-aloes which the Lord hath created, and as cedar trees beside the waters." (Numb. xxiv. 5, 6.) There is material enough at hand to produce a more vivid and extended description of this great scene, but enough has been said to suit our present purpose. My object is to present an outline of its general features, and call attention to those truths typically signified therein.

When Jehovah revealed to the people, through Moses, that He desired a sanctuary, to dwell amongst them, they came forward with their voluntary offerings, possessed with an ardor and enthusiasm rarely, if ever, equalled, until Moses restrained the people from giving. (Ex. xxv. 1-9; xxxv. 4-9, 20-30.) The chief metals employed were gold, silver, and brass, of which there were abundance amongst them. The following is a rough calculation of the value of those metals: Gold, $920,000.00; silver, $210,000.00; brass, $1,650.00. Besides this, there were the precious stones brought by the princes of the people, which were employed for the shoulder-stones and breastplate of the High Priest; the linen fabrics spun by willing-hearted women; the acacia wood employed for the structure of the building, the pillars, and parts of the furniture, and skins for coverings. The whole cost, including the workmanship, which was rendered voluntarily likewise, could not be less than $1,500,000.00. Thus we have an example of the liberality of the pilgrim Israelites, when appealed to for means to build a house for the Lord. Gifts from rich and poor were alike received and appreciated.

The principle inculcated in the New Testament, and enforced upon believers of this present dispensation, is that of voluntary giving. (1 Cor. xvi. 2; 2 Cor. viii. 5-12; ix. 7.) Covetousness is one of the sins which God warns His people against. It ill befits one who receives all from Him, to give grudgingly to His service. But where the heart is right towards God, the liberality of the worshipper will be neither strained nor stinted. A right appreciation of God's character in giving to us the Son of His Love, and the consciousness of our indebtedness to Him for the gift of salvation, will lead to nobility of spirit in responding to His claims upon us.

God's design to have the Tabernacle built was that He might have a house wherein to dwell in the midst of His people. (Ex. xxv. 9.) He was His own Architect. He exhibited to Moses the heavenly model, after which he should form every part of the building. (Ex. xxv. 9-40; Heb. viii. 5.) It was the Lord's House, and He testified His approval of the building when completed, by filling it with the glory of His presence. (Ex. xl. 33, 34.)

If in Egypt the people met with deliverance, when out, and from Egypt, they met with Him who had become their deliverer, and there they became acquainted with His ways of grace and purposes of mercy. In Egypt Jehovah could not dwell in the midst of His people. They needed not only salvation through the blood of the Lamb from the sword of the Angel, but likewise full deliverance from Egypt's power, and separation from Egypt's associations before He could be to them their God, and they be to Him His people. And this separation to Himself God claims from his spiritual Israel, the Church now. His call is loud and unmistakable—"Come out, and be ye separate, and touch no unclean thing, and I will receive you." Happy indeed are those who obey, "that He may dwell in them, and walk in them."

TYPICAL TEACHING.

"Christ is the Key to the Bible. Of Him God has given us more than sketches; the Word from end to end is full of Him. Therein we have a whole Christ presented to us. Christ in His offices, in His character, in His Person. Christ in His relations to God and man; Christ in His Body, the Church; Christ as giving to God all that God required from man; Christ as bringing to man all that man required from God; Christ as seen in this dispensation in suffering; Christ as seen in the next dispensation in glory; Christ as the first and last; Christ as all, and in all, to His people." To understand the Word, then, we must know Christ. To understand its letter will not suffice; we need to know its spirit; for said Jesus, "the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." (John vi. 63.) But knowing Christ, possessed with His Spirit, we become qualified to understand the Word, which otherwise will be to us as the letter which killeth, or the hidden hieroglyph which produces confusion. We may expect then to find much of Christ in the Scriptures which speak of the Tabernacle. He said Himself, "Moses wrote of ME." And again, "Search the Scriptures, for they testify of ME." We read, in Heb. ix. 9, the Tabernacle "was a figure for the time then present," and in ix. 11, "Christ being come, . . . a greater and more perfect Tabernacle." He is therefore the Key to the Tabernacle. In this type are found all the leading doctrines of sin and salvation. Every pin and bolt and cord and socket has its own story to relate of the various aspects of

"That wonderful Redemption, God's remedy for sin."

The Tabernacle is doubtless a type of Heaven and of the Church, but in this short exposition I shall confine myself, as already intimated, to those aspects of it which relate to Christ, in order that we may be led to appreciate His relations to us more fully, and realize, without the shadow of a cloud across the vision of our faith, that "He of God is made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption," and we are "complete in Him."

Although the Ark was the first vessel commanded to be made, indicating its pre-eminence (Ex. xxv. 10-22), showing how salvation originated with God, and how He comes forth to save and bless man, yet that aspect of salvation which begins with man, leading him step by step until he stands in the immediate presence of God, is the line of thought I wish to pursue in the application of the typical lessons which we may now gather from the Tabernacle and its services.

THE BRAZEN ALTAR.

As already shown, the Brazen Altar stood within the gate of the court, and between it and the sanctuary. It was the first object which met the eye of the worshipper. It stood chiefly related to all the other vessels and all the Tabernacle services. It was called the "Altar of Burnt-Offering," because the whole burnt-offerings which were offered to the Lord were consumed by fire upon it. (Lev. i. 6-9.) The fat of the sin-offering, and memorials of both the peace-offering and meat-offering were offered upon the same altar. It is called "The Altar," to designate the fact that God had but one altar, to which all sacrificial offerings must be brought. It is called "An Altar Most Holy" (Ex. xxix. 37), having been consecrated to its special uses with the blood of atonement. It was the divinely-appointed place of sacrifice, the pivotal vessel, if I may so say, on which the whole ceremonial worship of Israel balanced. Here we see the worshipper and sacrifice; the offerer and victim; the sinner and substitute. Here sin is transferred in a figure by the laying of hands to the head of an innocent animal. The animal is next slain, and then consumed as the holy fire feeds upon its various parts. And the animal died for sin, but not its own. Thus the Brazen Altar served its purpose, viz.: to make reconciliation upon. Is not the antitype of the altar THE CROSS OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST? "And, having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him, to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth or things in heaven. And you that were sometimes alienated, and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath He reconciled." (Col. i. 20, 21.) Clearly, then, the cross was foreshadowed here. What truth is there more vital, more prominent, and more important than this, "Christ died for the ungodly?" (Rom. v. 6.) Substitution is the primary truth of the Gospel. "Christ was made sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him." (2 Cor. v. 21.) As the prophet Isaiah foresaw the Man of Sorrows walking amidst the scoffing Jews, and lifted up from the earth as the sin-bearer, he cried, "Surely He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; He was wounded for our transgressions; He was bruised for our iniquities, and by His stripes we are healed." By the blood of the cross, Jesus, our surety, met all the righteous claims of God's holy throne, having made atonement for our sins. The believer enters into the peace and joy resulting therefrom. By faith he beholds the sufferer bearing away sin, sacrificing His own life to save him from the penalty of the broken law which demanded sin's wages—death. Exhausting the punishment due to our sin: by draining the bitter cup of Judgment to its dregs; honoring the law and upholding the righteous government of God; bearing our curse, and sin, and doom, we hear the cry of the Victim—"It is finished," and the kingdom of heaven is opened to all believers. The holy fire fed upon the sacrifice. Mercy rejoices with Justice, and Righteousness with Peace. "God is just, and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus." Thus in the lesson of the Brazen Altar the Gospel shines with undimmed lustre. It is no cold and silent monument, a memorial of the past, but, instinct with life, it cries like the Baptist, "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world." Happy the soul who can appropriately say, "He loved ME, and gave Himself for ME!" (Gal. ii. 20.) We commend to the reader the following passages of Scripture bearing on this point: 1 Cor. xv. 3; Matt. xx. 28; 1 John iii. 16; Gal. i. 4; 1 Pet. iii. 18; Rom. iv. 25; Isa. liii. 12; Heb. ix. 28; Lev. xvii. 11; Heb. ix. 22; 1 Pet. i. 18, 19; Acts xx. 28; Rom. v. 8-10.

"Not what I feel or do,
Can give me peace with God;
Not all my prayers and sighs and tears,
Can bear my awful load.

"Thy work alone, O Christ,
Can ease this weight of sin;
Thy blood alone, O Lamb of God,
Can give me peace within.

"I bless the Christ of God,
I rest on love divine;
And with unflinching lip and heart,
I call this Saviour MINE."

THE BRAZEN LAVER.

We now come to notice the Brazen Laver in its typical signification. It stood between the altar and door of the Tabernacle. Its use was to hold water, wherewith the priests cleansed their hands and feet, and with which parts of the sacrifices were washed. Sin is not only guilt needing an atonement—a breach of law needing expiation, as we have seen, but it is also moral defilement, and requires cleansing. To those who would render acceptable worship, purity is essential. Washing the hands and feet from outward defilement is but the symbol. At the Altar we have the great truth of justification foreshown. At the Laver, cleansing, sanctification, preparation for service and worship is the prominent thought. The order of the vessels and their relation to each other is significant. The Altar first, next the Laver. Christ for us at the cross is the first part of the Gospel. Christ in us, as the consequence, by His spirit and word, is the second part. Both stand connected. The Holy Spirit, through the truth, which has a cleansing power, leads us to the blood which faith applies to the soul. Through constant application of this remedy we are cleansed from daily pollutions. And with purged consciences we become prepared for spiritual worship. The following Scriptures set forth this truth: "Christ also loved the Church, and gave Himself for it, that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the WASHING OF WATER BY THE WORD." (Eph. v. 25, 26.) "According to His mercy He saved us by the WASHING OF REGENERATION and the renewing of the Holy Ghost." (Titus iii. 5.) "If we walk in the light as He is in the light we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, CLEANSETH us from all sin." (1 John i. 7.) "Wherewithal shall a young man CLEANSE his way? By taking heed thereto according to thy word." (Ps. cxix. 9.) The Word points out the remedy. The Spirit leads to the remedy. Faith applies the remedy; the remedy itself is "the blood of Jesus Christ." Thus are we "washed in His blood most precious till not a spot remains."

To imagine having attained to a condition of sinlessness, when the blood is no longer needed, is to have "fallen from grace." Against this solemn delusion we affectionately warn our readers. Believers should not sin, but when overtaken, "if we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Exercising ourselves in the Word will correct our wrong habits, condemn our carnal walk, rectify our judgment, ennoble and purify our thoughts, and exalt Christ by constantly exhibiting Him to the soul. Our holiness is not self-attainment, or self-complaisance. It is Christ. And the exhibition of our holiness is growth into His likeness, from glory to glory. In the mirror of the Word we see Him: by the Spirit of our God are we morally transfigured, and by the application of the blood defilement is removed. Thus, the Spirit, the Word and the Blood agree in work and testimony.

THE TABERNACLE PROPER.

This, as has been already shown, consisted of two rooms, the Holy Place and the Most Holy. It was made of boards of the acacia wood, covered with plates of gold, resting in sockets of silver, and protected with coverings of fine linen, goats' hair and skins of animals. The exterior was not beautiful to look upon, but, within, the brilliancy of the gold, the brightness of the light, the beauty of the curtains, and the fragrance of the incense, must have produced awe, reverence, wonder and admiration in the beholder. Christ, when looked upon in His human nature, as the Son of man only, exhibited no glory to the outward eye. Indeed, the Jews "saw no beauty in Him." "His visage was marred more than any man, and his form than the sons of men." (Isa. liii. 2; lii. 14.) Yet was He the Holy One of God, Elect, Precious, of whom the Church sings, "My Beloved is white and ruddy, the chiefest among ten thousand. . . . He is altogether lovely." The eye of faith alone can explore His hidden glories and behold in Him all perfection. The acacia wood, or "incorruptible" wood of His humanity is in close relation to the gold of His Divinity. "We beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father." (John i. 14.) Shining out as the brightness of the sun, His raiment white and glistening, we look upon Him on the holy mount, and hear a heavenly voice saying, "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased; hear ye Him."

"Oh I could I speak the matchless worth,
Oh I could I sound the glories forth
Which in my Saviour shine;
I'd soar, and touch the heavenly strings,
And vie with Gabriel while he sings
In notes almost divine.

"I'd sing the character He bears,
And all the forms of love He wears
Exalted on His throne.
In loftiest songs of sweetest praise,
I would, to everlasting days,
Make all His glories known."

The Tabernacle was God's dwelling-place, and all who sought His blessing approached Him there by way of sacrifice. He has now no local dwelling-place. In "Christ dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." (Col. ii. 10.) Jesus said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." God is in Christ, the true Tabernacle, and all who come to God must come to Him through Christ. "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." (John xiv. 6; vi. 37.) Those who speak of the Fatherhood of God, yet reject Christ as the One in whom Fatherhood is known, know nothing of the teaching contained in these types. It is a solemn matter to disbelieve any part of God's truth, and to ignore this great foundation doctrine is a solemn responsibility. "God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself." (2 Cor. v. 19.) "I in them and THOU IN ME." (John xvii. 23.) God dwelt within the curtains of the Tabernacle by a visible symbol only, and was seen by the High Priest once a year. In contrast to this we can, by faith, always behold the reality of God's glory in the face of Jesus Christ, who is pre-eminently "the true Tabernacle which God pitched, and not man,"—the real habitation in whom He dwelleth.

Having entered the Tabernacle, we now stand in the Holy Place. At the east and west ends are two beautiful curtains, called the door and veil. There was but one mode of entrance into the court, namely, through the gate; one way into the Holy Place, through the door, and one way into the Holiest of All, through the veil. "Jesus died the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God." There is but one way into His presence. The gate, door and veil represent Christ. (John x. 9; Heb. x. 19, 20.)

THE GOLDEN ALTAR.

Facing the beautiful veil, and near to it, midway between the north and south walls, was the Golden Altar, or Altar of Incense. (Ex. xxx. 1-10.) It was a very important vessel of ministry. Though made of wood, it was covered with plates of gold. Its use was to burn incense upon. "And Aaron shall burn thereon sweet incense every morning; when he dresseth the lamps he shall burn incense upon it." This incense was made of four sweet spices. (Ex. xxx. 34, 35.) The fragrance and sweetness of these ingredients were not known till submitted to the action of fire. Hence the phrase, "to burn incense." As the Priest was doing this constantly, it was called "a perpetual incense before the Lord." (Ex. xxx. 8.) To burn incense was a symbol of prayer and thanksgiving. "Lord, I cry unto Thee, make haste unto me; give ear unto my voice when I cry unto Thee. Let my prayer be set forth before Thee as incense, and the lifting up of my hands as the evening sacrifice." (Ps. cxli. 1, 2.) In Rev. v. 8, we read, "The four beasts (living creatures) and four-and-twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odors (incense), which are the prayers of saints." The incense was offered on the Golden Altar. Of what, then, was it a type? Of Jesus. Prayer and praise is acceptable only when offered in His name. " whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in MY NAME, He will give it you." (John xvi. 23.) It is He that gives efficacy and value to our offerings of praise and thanksgiving. The Altar was consecrated with blood, and the incense was offered from a blood-sprinkled basis. (Ex. xxx. 10.) The ministry of the Altar was thus closely connected with atonement by blood. And is it not the meritorious sacrifice of Christ which forms the foundation of all true worship, and by which even the sins of our holy things are purged away?

The Golden Altar in the Holy Place reminds us of the scene of our Lord's present ministry. The Brazen Altar outside suggests the work accomplished on earth. But now His work is carried on in heaven, where "He appears in the presence of God for us." (Heb. vii. 25; Rom. viii. 34.)

In Luke i. we read that "the whole multitude were praying without at the time of incense." This is now the believers' hour of prayer, whilst Jesus intercedes. (Eph. vi. 18; Col. iv. 2; Rom. xii. 12.) A precious thought is given us in Rev. viii. 3, 4. "An Angel came and stood at the Altar, having a golden censer, and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints. And the smoke of the incense with the prayers of the saints ascended up before God, out of the Angel's hand." Thus it is that Jesus purifies our prayers, offering up with them the sweet incense of his own merits, securing their acceptance. How important, then, that our worship should be rendered to God in and through Christ. "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me." (John xiv. 6.)

"Depend on Him, thou canst not fail;
Make all thy wants and wishes known;
Fear not, His merits must prevail;
Ask what thou wilt, it shall be done."

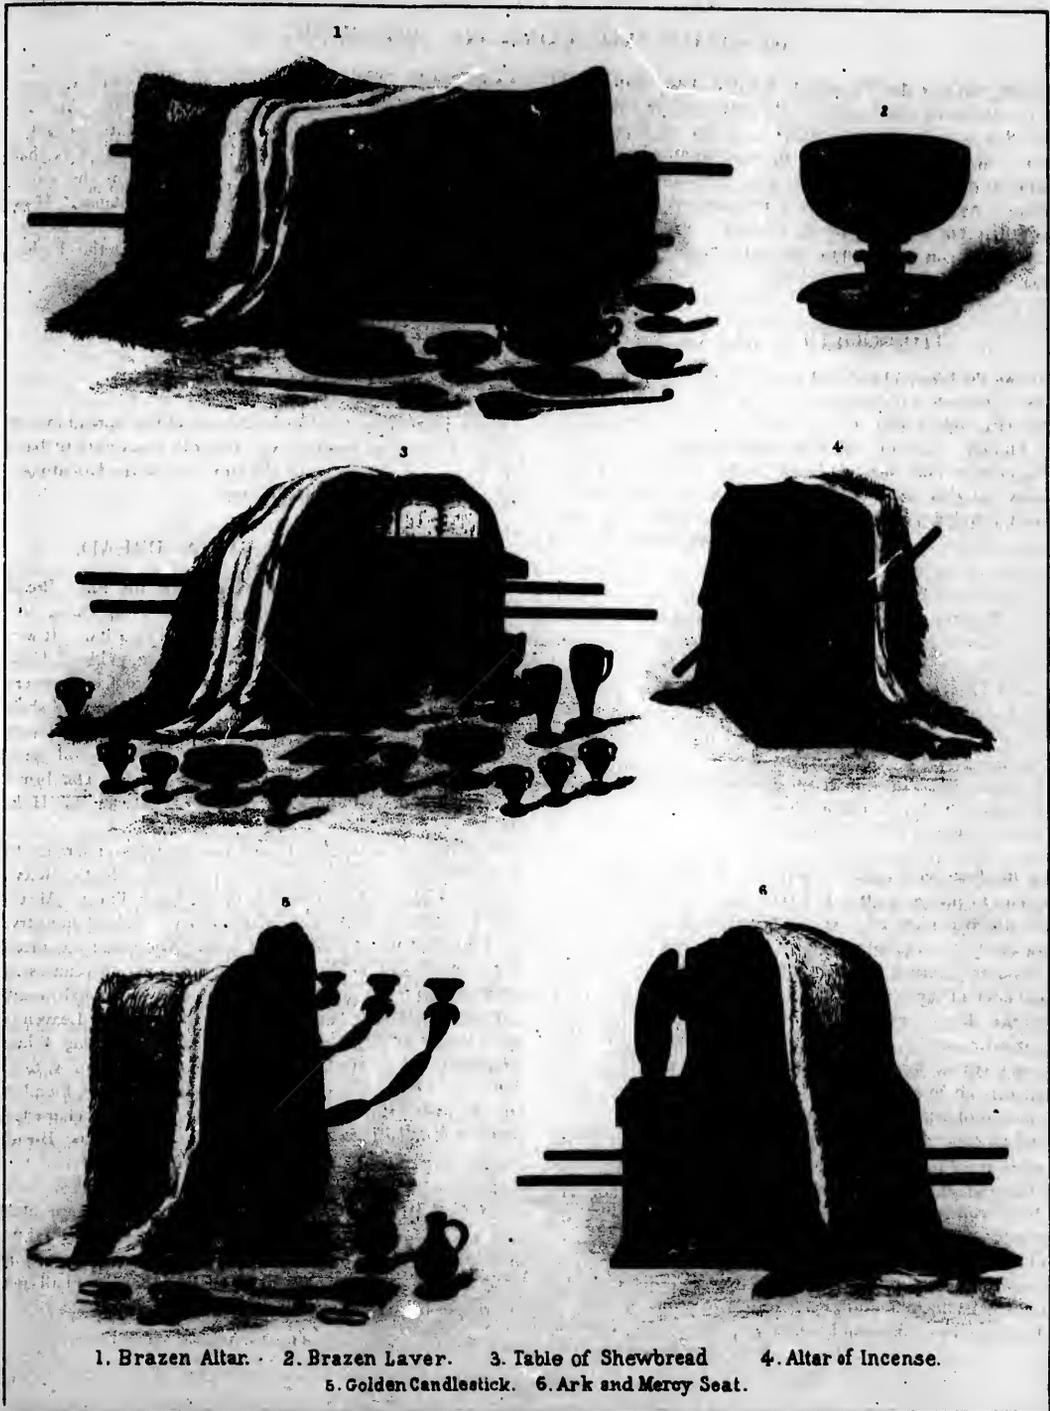

When journeying, the Golden Altar had first spread over it a cloth of blue, and was next covered with a covering of badgers' skins. It was borne on the shoulders of the Kohathites, with staves prepared for that purpose.

THE TABLE OF SHEW BREAD.

In the next place we come to examine the Shew Bread Table. It stood near the north wall, in the Holy Place. Its material was the same as that of the Golden Altar. It was supplied with smaller vessels, made of pure gold. "Thou shalt make the dishes thereof, and spoons thereof, and covers thereof, and bowls thereof, to cover withal; of pure gold shalt thou make them." In Lev. xxiv. 5-9, we observe the design of this Table. Twelve loaves of unleavened bread were placed upon it, and renewed every seventh day. The bread which was removed was eaten by the Priests in the Holy Place.

That there were twelve loaves has, doubtless, reference to the twelve tribes, even as they were represented by the twelve precious stones in the breastplate of the High Priest. Meantime, I believe, as in the case of the other vessels of ministry, the Table and Bread pointed to Christ. The bread was made of fine flour and unleavened. There was no unevenness in the flour, and it was pure. The corn was crushed, and bruised, and baked before it became food for the Priests. Leaven is the emblem of evil, being a corrupt and corrupting thing. (Matt. xvi. 6-12; Mark viii. 15; Luke xii. 1; 1 Cor. v. 6-8; Gal. v. 9.) There was no leaven in Jesus, "no guile found in His mouth." Nor was there unevenness in His character. His flesh is meat indeed. He calls Himself the true Bread, and the living Bread, which, if a man eat, he shall live forever. The bread which He gave was His Flesh. Priests only could feed upon the Shew Bread. Believers now are unto God a Kingdom of Priests, and as such they are invited to draw near. "Eat, O my friends!" "Eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness." Shall not our prayer be, "Lord, evermore give us this bread."

"Bread of Heaven,
Feed us till we want no more."

The covering of the Table was a cloth of blue for its vessels, a cloth of scarlet, and an outside covering of badgers' skins.

THE GOLDEN CANDLESTICK.

This costly vessel stood at the south side of the Holy Place, directly facing the shew bread table, and throwing its light upon it. It was made of pure gold. It was all made out of a talent of gold, beaten with hammers until it assumed its proper shape. The seven bowls on tops of the branches were supplied with pure olive oil, which burned continually. (Lev. xxv. 1-5.) It must have been an imposing object in the Holy Place. Graceful in shape, and elaborately ornamented, giving forth its soft brilliant light, and reflecting that light upon itself with dazzling brightness, it was an object of splendor and beauty.

One thought expressed in the candlestick is Christ our Light. The Spirit was given unto Him without measure. He is the true Light. In Him is no darkness at all. Not only was He "the Light of men," but He fills heaven itself with unclouded brightness. "The glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." (Rev. xxi. 23.)

In Rev. i. the seven candlesticks are the seven churches. I think it is no speculation to say that the seven-branched lamp-stand in the Holy Place is a type of Christ and the Church. The branches were a part of the candlestick, and were beaten out of it. When Adam had fallen into a deep sleep the Lord took out a rib, and of that rib He builded a woman, which the man recognized as bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh. They were therefore no more twain, but one flesh. The Apostle, in Eph. v. 26-30, shows this to be a type of Christ and the Church. This mystical oneness is also represented by the candlestick. The Church is One with Christ, He is the Head of the Body, and is now in heaven. But the Body indwelt by the Holy Spirit on the earth is commanded to "shine as lights in the world." (Phil. ii. 15; Matt. v. 16.)

The High-Priest kept the lamps of the candlestick supplied with oil constantly. With snuffers he removed the burnt matter, that the light may shine undimmed and unhindered. Thus Christ exercises His priestly care over the Church. He gives the residue of the spirit. He baptizes with the Holy Ghost. He walks amidst the seven-branched lampstand to replenish, renovate and trim the lamps. He is the Light, as well as Priest. He shines into the hearts of His people, that they may shine out in His likeness. "Ye were once darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord; walk as children of light." It is important to heed these injunctions lest our light become darkness. "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."

Abiding in Jesus as the living Vine, we shall bring forth fruit. Abiding in Him as the True Light, we shall reproduce that light, in all goodness, and righteousness, and truth. To this end, dear believer, let us seek the fulness of the Spirit, realize our union to Christ, letting His light shine through us, that all may take knowledge of us that we have been with Jesus.

"Like the other vessels it had its covering for protection on the journey. "And they shall take a cloth of blue, and cover the candlestick of the light, and his lamps, and his tongs, and his snuff-dishes, and all the oil vessels thereof, wherewith they minister unto it. And they shall put it and all the vessels thereof within a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put it upon a bar." (Numb. iv. 9, 10.)

THE MOST HOLY PLACE.

Having examined the Holy Place, with its vessels of ministry, let us now look within the veil into "the Holiest of All." This sacred place was four-square, and had but one piece of furniture within its walls. The Ark, Mercy-Seat and Cherubim were all one. The Ark was the sacred chest in which was deposited the Table of the Covenant, Aaron's rod that budded, and the golden pot of Manna. The pre-eminence of the Ark and Mercy-Seat we before pointed out. It was the first thing commanded to be made, and the only vessel of the Tabernacle transferred to the temple. The Mercy-Seat was a solid slab of gold, the same length and width as the Ark, and acted as its cover. On the ends of it were the Cherubim, of one piece with the Mercy-Seat, beaten out of the same piece of gold. This was the only seat in the Tabernacle, and it was God's Throne-seat. The Priests were always standing, accomplishing the service of God. Their work under the Jewish dispensation was never completed. But Jesus, when He finished the work of sacrifice, sat down at the right hand of God.

God, then, had a seat in the Tabernacle. Between the Cherubim shone the Shekinah Glory, symbol of His Divine presence. To this seat of Mercy the High-Priest drew near once every year with the blood of the sin-offering, and sprinkled it upon the Mercy-Seat, and before the Mercy-Seat. Then God communed with man, and blest the people. (Ex. xxv. 10-23.) If there were no Mercy-Seat to receive the blood of propitiation, man could not draw near, for the uncovered law would hurl its terrible anathemas at him. Israel had broken its prohibitory requirements. It could therefore only curse. "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them." The law is holy and just and good, but it cannot save the transgressor. It can only thunder out its righteous sentence. "It never saved a sinner; if it did, it would be no longer a law. If it softened and yielded at any point, it were absolutely annulled. If any sin, or any sinner is allowed to pass, where is the justice of punishing any sin, or any sinner. To bend any commandment for the accommodation of a defaulter is to blot out the law. The law, by its very nature, can have no partialities and no compensations. It never saves those who transgress, and never weeps for those who perish." How then can a sinner be saved? "The wages of sin is death." The penalty of violated law is death. See then on the day of atonement the Priest slaying the goat for a sin-offering. It is the death of an innocent victim, dying as a substitute for the guilty. Behold the Priest enters within the veil with its blood, and in the presence of Jehovah sprinkles it upon the Mercy-Seat. The voice of the law is hushed. The sentence has been executed, and now mercy rejoices against judgment. "Without shedding of blood, there is no remission;" but God's eye sees the blood and He says, "Your sins and your iniquities will I remember no more."

Dear reader, thus it is that "grace reigns through righteousness unto eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." We have sinned, and are condemned already. Jesus Christ came down from heaven, and took our place under the curse of the law. "He was made a curse for us." He died to hush the law's loud thunder, to quench Mount Sinai's flame. The slaying of the goat was repeated yearly, but when Jesus died, the work was fully accomplished and needed never repeating. "By one offering He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." He entered into heaven with His own blood, and now we are invited to draw near to the Mercy-Seat, "with a true heart in full assurance of faith."

When the men of Bethshemesh looked into the Ark they were slain. (1 Sam. vi. 18-21.) They removed the Mercy-Seat, the covering, with its blood of propitiation, and the law killed them. When Paul looked to the law, it slew him. How solemn then to set aside God's way of pardon and salvation. "By the works of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight." But God hath set forth Jesus to be a propitiation, or Mercy-Seat, that through faith in His blood we might be justified from all things. Christ, having met all the claims of law, and the righteous requirements of God's Holy Throne, becomes our Mercy-Seat. "Let us therefore come boldly unto the Throne of Grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." (Heb. iv. 16.) "Not by works of righteousness we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us."

Is my reader a Christian? Are you saved through the precious blood of Jesus? Remember, if yet unsaved, the solemn lessons of the Mercy-Seat. You can do nothing to justify yourself. Your own righteousness will not avail. Your good works cannot meet the law's demands. Why then go about establishing a righteousness of your own? Why not submit now to God's righteous way of salvation? The veil is rent. The blood is sprinkled. The way is open. The invitation is, Come! COME!! COME!!! Do not delay. "Now is the accepted time. Now is the day of salvation."

"There is a place where Jesus sheds
The oil of gladness on our head,
A place than all besides more sweet:
It is the blood-stained Mercy-Seat."

OUR GREAT HIGH-PRIEST.

Nearly all religions uphold Priesthood as a necessity. It is absolutely indispensable to Christianity. Pagan nations have corrupted this office, whilst the Papal system has most shamefully perverted it from its original design. Modern Ritualism likewise has subverted its foundations, substituting a human Priest in the place of Jesus—whose prerogative alone it is to pardon and absolve—the Christian's only Priest.

All these and other perversions of the Priesthood, with kindred doctrinal truths, arise from misconceptions of the economy of grace. The ordinances of the Gospel are not the perpetuation of Jewish ritualism. Superseding them in every respect, they are the substance of which the latter was the shadow; the realities which therein were symbolized; the antitype typified thereby.

The Jewish Priesthood, serving a purpose for the time then present, typified Christ the Great High-Priest over the House of God, who ever liveth to make intercession for us.

Though the believer is absolutely forgiven all trespasses; clothed in Divine righteousness; justified by the blood of Christ; sanctified through the offering up of His body; and reconciled to God through His death, yet he needs the Great High-Priest to represent him in full acceptance before God, without spot or blemish; to maintain him in everlasting life, blessing and glory; to remove from him daily defilement contracted in his pilgrimage through the world, and preserve him blameless unto His heavenly kingdom.

"The Aaronic Priesthood of the Son of God, of which these types and shadows speak, is the presentation of Himself, in all the perfection of His atoning sacrifice, the exceeding preciousness of His Person, and the moral glory of His human character, for acceptance by the God of holiness and justice, having glorified the Father as a man on earth, on behalf of all, for whom He became incarnate and obedient unto death."

The import of the title Priest is that of a sacrificer. It includes ministry. It ensures blessing. It involves a service to be rendered, a victim to be offered, and certain results flowing therefrom. This was God's appointment. "For every high-priest taken from among men, is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins." (Heb. v. 1.) The qualifications of the High-Priest were natural, moral and legal. Chosen from the tribe of Levi, he must be a descendant of Aaron, and be free from all blemishes, superfluities, defects and physical infirmities. (Lev. xxi. 17-21.)

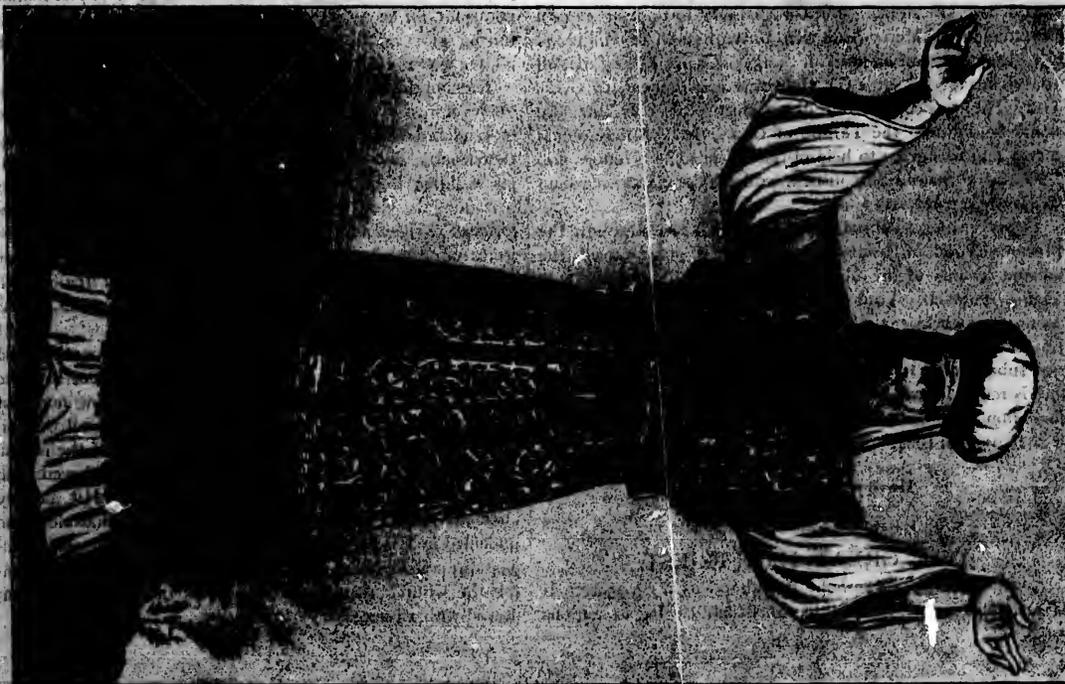

As possessed with moral qualities, being merciful and compassionate (Heb. v. 2), he received appointment to office by a special call from God. (Heb. v. 4.) Marrying none but a virgin (Lev. xxi. 14), he must be separated from all worldliness and defilement, and devoted to the welfare of the nation.

In these many respects Israel's High-Priest shadowed forth the qualifications of the Lord Jesus Christ in His Priestly character. Called of God to this office; holy, harmless and undefiled in His person and character; overflowing with compassion; considerate toward His people, and espousing to Himself the Church as a virgin, He enters the sacred office endowed with all necessary qualifications.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general history of the United States from its discovery by Columbus in 1492 to the present time. It covers the early years of settlement, the struggle for independence, the formation of the Constitution, and the growth of the nation to its present position. The author discusses the various factors that have shaped the country, including geography, climate, and the influence of different groups of immigrants. He also examines the role of the federal government and the states, and the impact of the Civil War and Reconstruction on the nation's development.

The second part of the book is a detailed account of the political and social changes that have taken place in the United States since the Civil War. It covers the Reconstruction era, the Gilded Age, the Progressive Era, and the New Deal. The author analyzes the rise of the industrial revolution, the growth of the middle class, and the emergence of the labor movement. He also discusses the impact of the two world wars on the country's economy and society, and the role of the federal government in social and economic reform.

The third part of the book is a study of the foreign relations of the United States. It covers the country's role in the world from its early years as a young nation to its emergence as a superpower in the 20th century. The author discusses the United States' involvement in the American Revolution, the War of 1812, the Mexican-American War, and the Spanish-American War. He also examines the country's role in World War I, World War II, and the Cold War, and its current position in the world.

The fourth part of the book is a study of the culture and society of the United States. It covers the development of the American identity, the role of the arts and literature, and the impact of mass media and technology on society. The author discusses the influence of the American dream, the role of the family, and the impact of the Civil Rights Movement on the country's social structure. He also examines the role of the federal government in social and economic reform, and the impact of the two world wars on the country's culture and society.

The fifth part of the book is a study of the future of the United States. It covers the challenges that the country faces in the 21st century, including the impact of globalization, the environment, and the role of the federal government. The author discusses the need for reform and the role of the citizenry in shaping the future of the country. He also examines the role of the federal government in social and economic reform, and the impact of the two world wars on the country's culture and society.

Having been called and qualified, the Priest's multifarious duties begun. He offered sacrifice, made atonement for sin (Lev. xvi.), offered incense (Lev. xvi. 12, 13), judged evil (Lev. xiii. 2), declared the mind and will of God (Numb. xxvii. 21; Deut. xxxii. 8), decided controversies and solved difficulties (Deut. xvii. 8-12; xix. 17; xxi. 5), represented the nation on the shoulder-stones and breastplate (Ex. xxviii. 9-29), and blest the people in the name of the Lord. (Numb. vi. 23.) We observe, then, that offering sacrifice was not the only duty of Israel's Priest. It formed, indeed, the foundation of all other services, and was constantly repeated. It must ever remain present to the mind that "without shedding of blood is no remission," but the remission of sins is only the beginning of priestly blessing.

The present ministry of Christ for His people within the veil is closely connected with the sacrifice of Himself, which, without spot, He offered unto God, as an atonement for sin. He has now entered into the Most Holy Place. (Heb. ix. 9, 12.) He represents His people there (Heb. ix. 24); He offers the fragrant incense of His own merits; He declares the will of God (Heb. i. 1); He rebukes evil (Rev. ii., iii.); He judges our thoughts and ways (Heb. iv. 13), and He returns to bless His saints with an everlasting benediction. (Heb. ix. 28.)

The High-Priest's clothing and their typical signification next claim our attention. In Exodus xxviii. 1-4, and xxxix. 27, 28, we have an enumeration of their several parts. The linen breeches, linen robe and linen girdle may be termed his personal clothing. The Ephod, robe of Ephod, girdle of Ephod, Mitre and Crown were his representative garments. The linen garments suggest righteousness. Aaron was not personally perfect. The purity attaching to him was derived from his personal clothing. The other garments worn, on special occasions, were "garments of glory and beauty." The light of the onyx stones on the shoulders, and precious stones on the breastplate, together with the golden wire interwoven and brilliant colors blended on their surface, imparted an appearance of beauty which did not belong to him personally. They covered the man; were fitting in every part; were unique in their setting and design, and were graceful to the eye.

By contrast as well as comparison the preciousness of Christ is set forth in type and symbol. Jesus is, in Himself, perfect, covered with a personal glory which belongs not to earth. His indescribable glories are moral, not physical. The unbelieving Jews saw no beauty in Him, but by faith the believer beholds "His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."

The linen coat, which the High-Priest wore daily next his person, must not be confounded with the linen garment worn by Him on the day of Atonement. Both typified the righteousness of the Lord Jesus.

There were two girdles employed: that which bound the embroidered coat to the body, and that known as the curious girdle, connected with the Ephod. The girdle symbolized readiness for service. Israel's Priest was a servant to God, on behalf of the people. Of Christ, it is said, "Righteousness shall be the girdle of His loins, and faithfulness the girdle of His reins." (Isa. xi. 5.) He became servant of all. Girding Himself with a towel, He washed the disciples' feet. (John xiii. 4, 5.) He came "not to be ministered unto, but to minister and give His life a ransom for many." Not only does He wash the sinner from his sins, in His own blood (Rev. i. 5), but as the girded One, He continues His service as High-Priest over God's House. Believers, as priests in association with Jesus, should follow His example, and heed His injunction: "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for the Lord, when He will return from the wedding."

THE BLUE ROBE.

Worn over the fine linen coat was this long, loose garment, called the Robe of the Ephod. It was woven of one piece. There were slits at the sides for the arms to pass through, and a hole at the top, bound around with a strong binding, for the head to pass through. (Ex. xxviii. 31-35.) Around the hem, which descended to the feet, was an ornamental fringe, with tassels depending therefrom, in the form of the pomegranate fruit, and alternating with small bells of pure gold. The color of this robe was all blue. This color was pre-eminent in the Tabernacle and its surroundings. May it not be suggestive of the fact that heavenly ways characterized the Son of God? Blue is the color of the heavens when peaceful and serene. His origin was heavenly. When on earth, in spirit He dwelt there. "The Son of Man which is in heaven." His actions were heavenly. His words falling from those lips, compared to "lilies dropping sweet-smelling myrrh," were words of grace and compassion. They were golden utterances of which we are reminded in the sound given forth by the golden bells attached to this priestly robe. His words of prayer and praise were musical in the ears of His Father. The pomegranate fruit associated with this garment not only indicated the fruitful service of Israel's High-Priest, but His also whom he represented. Fruitful indeed is He in every act of service. By His precious blood a great multitude will be washed from their sins. And if "reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life." Because He lives, we shall live also. Thus "He bringeth many sons unto glory."

THE EPHOD.

Over the blue robe this distinctive garment was worn. It was made of fine linen, interwoven with gold wire, and colors of blue, purple and scarlet. It was made of two parts, one for the front, the other for the back, and both were fastened together at the shoulders by the golden clasps which formed the setting for the onyx stones. It was brought together under the armpits by the girdle which bound it to the person. (Ex. xxviii. 6-15; xxxix. 2-6.) The onyx stones had engraved upon them the names of the twelve tribes, "six of their names on one stone, and the six names of the rest on the other stone, according to their birth." (Ex. xxviii. 10.) The High-Priest was both representative and burden-bearer of the whole nation. The people were the subjects of his thoughts, and the objects of his intercession. It was his duty to care for them and seek their welfare. In a figure, they rested on the place of strength and security. So Jesus, our great High-Priest, has the government upon His shoulders. (Isa. ix. 6.) But to Him belongs divine might. He is the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, whose strength never faileth, and whose interest in His redeemed people continueth ever. Securely does He carry them, laying the sheep on His shoulders rejoicing. Herein is comfort for the weak and weary. It is no longer a question of their strength, but of His. They are borne

"On a shoulder
Which upholds the government of worlds," enfolded in the preciousness and glory of the Great High-Priest.

THE BREASTPLATE.

We shall now consider this beautiful and costly article connected with the Ephod, and made of the same material. (Ex. xxviii. 15-30.) It was woven two spans long and one broad. It was then doubled, to impart strength and firmness in bearing the weight of twelve precious stones. These stones were placed on its surface, in settings of gold, arranged in four rows. All were precious stones, though differing in value and in brilliancy. On the stones were engraved the names of the tribes, each tribe on its own separate stone. The Breastplate was suspended from the shoulders by golden chains connected with the onyx stones, and from gold rings in the lower corners it was fastened to gold rings in the Ephod by a lace of blue. Thus it was kept firmly secured over the heart of Israel's Priest, and the nation was then doubly represented—upon his shoulders, the seat of strength, and on his heart, the seat of love. What truth is herein signified? Surely, that not only the strength of Christ, the power of Christ, the Almighty of Christ is exercised to uphold His people, but His affections, His deep, tender, unchangeable love embraces them, holding them always close to His heart.

In connection with the Breastplate was the Urim and Thummim. It is impossible to tell what these were. The words mean "lights and perfections." Many fanciful speculations have been indulged in by various writers, but it is best not to speculate where God is silent, and restrict our thoughts within the limits of revelation.

THE MITRE.

This article of dress was made of fine white linen. It was the Priest's bonnet, or head-dress. Fastened with a blue ribbon to the fore-front was a golden plate, on which was engraved the words, "Holiness to the Lord." (Ex. xxxviii. 36-39.) This golden plate was always upon his forehead, "that they may be accepted before the Lord." The nation, composed of individual sinners, was, through God's provisions of grace, represented before Him as "an holy nation, a peculiar people." Such also is the standing of the Church in identification with her Great High-Priest. She is "accepted in the beloved." There is no holiness inherent in the believer, or wrought out by such, that could stand the scrutiny of God's searching light. But we are in Christ, "who of God is made unto us . . . sanctification." Our holiness is therefore always the same, acceptable unto God; but it is in the full recognition of this great truth, realizing that He wears for us the holy crown, that we grow in practical conformity to His image, and become gloriously changed into His likeness. Holding loosely our actual standing where God's grace hath placed us, in His Son, will lead either to a careless walk, which disowns our responsibility, or a legal striving for a personal holiness by the works of the flesh, which ignores His grace.

Types speak not only in similarities, but in contrasts also, and in the light of contrast is seen the superiority of Christ's Priesthood above Aaron's. In His personal perfection; in the value of His sacrifice; in the scene of His ministry; in the regal aspect of His Priesthood, typified in Melchizedek; in the more perfect presentation of the worshipper; in the deeper discrimination of evil, and in the fuller benediction He imparts, He rises superior to Israel's Priest. "In all things He must have the pre-eminence."

"He bears the names of all His saints
Deep on His heart engraved;
Attentive to the states and wants
Of all His love has saved.

"In Him a holiness complete,
Light and perfections shine;
And wisdom, grace, and glory meet;
A Saviour all Divine.

"The blood, which as a Priest He bears
For sinners, is His own;
The incense of His prayers and tears
Perfumes the holy throne.

"In Him my weary soul has rest,
Though I am weak and vile;
I read my name upon His breast,
And see the Father smile."

THE COMMON PRIESTS.

Associated with the High-Priest were other Priests, who served under him. Their duties were many and important. They killed the victims; presented sacrifice; sprinkled and poured out the blood; had charge of the Brazen Altar; saw that the fire was ever burning thereon; prepared the shewbread; compounded the incense, and participated generally in the services of the Tabernacle. Besides, they were intrusted with the education of the people, teaching Jacob and Israel the judgments and law of God. (Deut. xxxii. 10.)

Separated unto this work, they were exclusively given to it. From the people they received tithes, which, with portions of the sacrifices and shew-bread, maintained them. When established in the land, fruit, corn, and other produce, according to a systematic arrangement, ministered to their sustenance. Special garments were provided for them, consisting of breeches (Ex. xxviii. 42; xxxix. 28), a coat, or tunic (Ex. xxviii. 4, 39; xxxix. 27), the girdle (Ex. xxviii. 4, 40; xxxix. 29), and the bonnet. (Ex. xxviii. 40.) All these were made of fine linen, and were pure white, except the girdle, which was interwoven with blue, purple and scarlet threads. This dress suggested purity and beauty.

The Lord Jesus Christ is the Great High-Priest: believers (those who through grace have received the message of reconciliation, and are saved through the blood of His cross, joined unto the Lord by one spirit) are identified with Him in His Priestly character, and associated with Him in Priestly duties. "Ye," says the Apostle, when writing to saints, "are a chosen generation, A ROYAL PRIESTHOOD." (1 Pet. ii. 9.) Again: "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, AN HOLY PRIESTHOOD, to offer up spiritual sacrifices," etc. (1 Pet. ii. 5.) And again: "Unto Him that loved us, and hath washed us from our sins in His own blood, and hath made us Kings and PRIESTS unto His God and Father, to Him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen." (Rev. i. 6; v. 10.)

As none but priests could enter the Tabernacle, so now none but priests can enter into God's presence. The veil is rent, the Holy and Most Holy Places have become one, and those, made priests by faith in Christ, are invited to draw near, to enter into the Holiest by the blood of Jesus, in the full assurance of faith. (Heb. x. 19-22.)

With a beautiful and glorious covering upon us, may we, dear Christian, enjoy our privileges and realize our responsibilities as priests unto God, heeding the injunction, "By Him, therefore, let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to His name. But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased." (Heb. xiii. 15, 16.)

It should be noted, as a matter of vital importance, that the word "Priest," as applied to Christ, or His people, does not imply the continuance of an atonement sacrifice. Atonement has been rendered to God by our Great High-Priest, and His intercession is now based on the ground of its completion. They, therefore, who still insist that ministers, or "the clergy," are priests in the sense that there is a true and real propitiatory sacrifice still offered for sin, trample under foot the blood of the Son of God, and reject the gospel of His grace. "Nor does the word 'priests' denote any particular class in the Christian church. It belonged to Mark, to Phebe, to Lydia, to every Christian in God's church, as well as to St. Paul. Ministerial gifts may and do cause difference of service among priests." Some are Pastors, some Evangelists, some Teachers, some Helpers; and when those gifted exercise such gifts under the Holy Ghost, their service will minister to the edification of the body of Christ. As regards worship, which is God-ward, all priests, believers, occupy the same ground. There are differences in the intelligence of the worshippers, but the qualification for worship is the same in all—a purged conscience through the blood; the indwelling of the Holy Ghost, and oneness with the High-Priest, who is "now in the presence of God for us."

THE LEVITES.

We before remarked that the tribe of Levi was chosen from the twelve tribes to wait upon the services of the sanctuary. From this tribe was chosen the family of priests, with Aaron as their head. The remainder of the tribe consisted of the three families of Merari, Gershon and Kohath, sons of Levi, who were assistants to the priests in their sacred office. After the redemption of the nation from the bondage and darkness of Egypt, God claimed His right to the first-born sons of Israel to be specially set apart to His service. These would become helpers in the duties of the Tabernacle; but in lieu thereof, according to His infinite wisdom, Jehovah chose the families of the Levites for this purpose. This tribe numbered 22,000 (Numb. iii. 39); the first-born Israelites numbered 22,273; but in order that the proportion should be equal, the excess number of first-born sons (273 in number) were redeemed by permission, at the rate of five shekels each. (Numb. iii. 46-51.) As already stated, about 8000 of the Levites were qualified by age, by physical perfectness and moral qualifications, to enter the duties of their office.

The following extract from W. Brown's book on the Tabernacle, where he speaks on the subject of the Levites, so fully accords with my own view, that I feel I cannot do more to profit the patient reader than subjoining it, as a fitting close to the above exposition:

"The Levites were solemnly set apart to their office by Aaron. Having shaved all their flesh and washed their clothes, they were sprinkled with pure water, and then presented as a national offering to the Lord—the nation's representatives—the elders of the respective tribes—putting their hands upon them, thereby signifying that the people gave them to the Lord in place of the first-born. After being thus transferred to the Lord, two bullocks were offered as sacrifices, the one for a sin-offering and the other for a burnt-offering. (Numb. viii. 5-23.)

"Whatever assistance the priests might require to enable them to overtake their sacred work, the Levites were ever at hand to render it. Sceptics would not be so bold in asserting that it was impossible for Aaron and his sons to do all the work connected with the sacrifices, if they had not wilfully shut their eyes to this fact. It is true the mere Levite could not offer up the sacrifices, sprinkle the blood, burn incense or perform other priestly acts; but in helping to prepare the victims for the altar, and in numerous other ways, he might lawfully assist in the religious services of the Tabernacle.

"In the wilderness the Levites had the sole charge of taking down and putting up the Tabernacle, and of transporting it from one place of encampment to another. (Numb. iv.) At one time the Levites may have been seen busy in the Tabernacle court, waiting on the priests and helping them in their work; at another time, taking down the sacred structure; at another, transporting it and its holy vessels through the wilderness; and at another, rearing it in some new place of encampment; but their duties were not confined to such services as these, for to them, with the priests, the religious instruction of the nation was confided: 'They shall teach Jacob thy judgments and Israel thy law.' (Deut. xxxiii. 10.) These were among the dying words of Moses, and there are numerous passages of Scripture illustrating them, showing that the Levites as well as the priests taught the people. (2 Chron. xvii. 7-9; xx. 19-22.)

"When the children of Israel were settled in the promised land, and the Tabernacle fixed for long periods in the same place, the Levites were relieved of a very burdensome part of their labors, that of transporting the Tabernacle from place to place, so that there was no longer any necessity for them all being in attendance at the house of the Lord, and consequently they were formed into divisions, and waited on the priests in turn.

"When disengaged at the sanctuary, the Levites resided in the Levitical cities, which were situated in all the tribal territories, not however passing their time in mere recreation, but employing it in divers ways for the moral and spiritual welfare of the people. They read and explained the law, assisted the elders in the different towns in the administration of justice, took charge of the cities of refuge, whither those who had sinned through ignorance fled for safety. Dwelling in the midst of every tribe, they were everywhere at hand to explain the law, instruct the ignorant, comfort the afflicted, shield the innocent, punish the guilty, and generally to guide the people in the way they should go. (Deut. xvii. 8-12; xxxiii. 10.) . . .

"Many of the priests and Levites, no doubt, performed their duties to God and man so as to glorify the one and benefit the other, and thereby 'purchased to themselves a good degree.' And having, through the shadows of the old dispensation, led many an Israelite to look to the substance—Christ, the one great sacrifice—they are now among the saints in glory, and shall shine as the stars for ever and ever. Others of the priests and Levites were not distinguished by that holiness which became their office; and at the time of our Saviour's advent, few, very few, were to be found executing the duties of their office with clean hands and a pure heart. But, blessed be God, there were still to be found, even then, some who walked in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless. With all their sins and shortcomings the tribe of Levi, up to the time of our Saviour, were the custodiers of the Scriptures, which they read and explained in the synagogues, and thus were instrumental in keeping alive, however faintly, a knowledge of the true God, so that, with all their defects, this tribe was of signal service to the nation. By this wise separation of it to God, the light of true religion was kept burning amidst surrounding darkness; the ritual services of the Tabernacle and Temple attended to; and at least a remnant was ever found, even in the worst times, to worship God in the beauty of holiness, and to magnify and declare His great name.

"God has, in the gospel dispensation, made provision for making known His will, instructing His people, and wafting the glad tidings of salvation—not to one nation only, but to all nations, and peoples, and tongues. But He has not seen meet under this, as under the old economy, to choose a particular tribe as His ministering servants in accomplishing these great ends; for while He has given pastors to His Church, He has also appointed all believers New Testament Levites, and separated them from the rest of the world unto Himself. He calls upon them all to dedicate themselves to His service.

"The Levites, when not on duty at the sanctuary, were scattered up and down the whole land, and thus became centres of light from which religious knowledge was diffused; but Christ's followers are scattered through all lands, shining as lights in the world, and by the grace of God hastening on the bright era of the millennium glory when all people will walk and rejoice in the light of Jacob.

"The beam that shines from Zion hill Shall lighten ev'ry land."

"If you have believed in Jesus, and would remain His disciple, you cannot escape His service. He claims you as really as He did the first-born Israelites; nay, He has stronger claims on you than he had on them. He spared them from the stroke of the angel of death, but He died on the cross that you might live for ever.

"Do you then feel the paramount claims He has upon you? Do you court rather than shun His service? And are you often asking, 'Lord, what wouldst thou have me to do?' If so, then you are doubtless already in harness, and aiding on the great work of building up the New Testament Church. Work on, whether in instructing little ones in the Sunday-school, as tract distributors, or in any other way God in His providence has opened up to you. God speed your efforts to advance the kingdom of His dear son. . . . Wherever you are, at home or abroad, in the midst of saints or sinners, at all places and at all times, seek to adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour, by a walk and a conversation becoming the gospel. The Levites, remember, were centres of light! You are also called upon to 'Let your light shine.' 'Arise, shine.' 'Shine ye as lights in the world.'"

FORTY YEARS' PILGRIMAGE OF ANCIENT ISRAEL

FROM

EGYPTIAN BONDAGE TO THE PROMISED LAND.

A NIGHT much to be remembered was that when the Israelites left Egypt. A terrible panic seized the Egyptians when the eldest son was found dead in every house. Under the excitement, the Israelites were allowed to leave the land of bondage, laden with jewels and other articles of value, which they had previously borrowed, or rather asked, and received willingly from their oppressors. Going before them in a miraculous pillar of smoke and flame, God leads them from Rameses to Succoth, thence to Etham, on the edge of the wilderness, and thence to Pi-ha-hiroth, near the shores of the Red Sea. On the third day they are terrified to observe Pharaoh, with an army, chiefly of chariots and chariot-warriors, close upon their rear. Their exact situation cannot be ascertained, but probably they were a few miles south from Suez, shut in by mountains on each side; the Gulf of Suez, some six or eight miles broad, in front, and the Egyptian army behind. The terror and anxiety of the host of Israel are at their height, when slowly and majestically the pillar of cloud and fire that had gone before them moves to their rear, and throws a screen between them and their pursuers. A miraculous power imparted during the night to a strong east wind, causes it to lay bare a passage across the Gulf, wide enough for the whole host to cross. The fiery column sheds its glare before them, and guides them safely to the further shore. Tempted, amid the darkness of night, to follow them, Pharaoh and all his host are caught and overwhelmed in the returning waters. Israel's bondage is over; the oppressor's yoke is broken; the people of the Lord are free.

Alas! a worse yoke is upon the neck of every human being. By nature we are all the children of wrath, and in the thralls of Satan. The world itself is one vast house of bondage, and its different inhabitants the slaves of divers lusts and passions. We are all fallen into captivity and servitude, and Gold, Ambition, Appetite, are the slave-owners. Woful is the bondage where the higher nature is in thralldom to the lower. Christ only can break the yoke and let the oppressed go free. And in the deliverance of Israel the great work of redemption is symbolized, and sinners are pointed to One who can free them from a worse tyrant and taskmaster than Pharaoh and the Egyptians.

It is a fresh April morning. Three millions of people line the shores and crowd the heights on the Sinai side of the Gulf of Suez. Here, at the water-edge, may be seen groups of men and women, watching the rolling tide as it casts heavily on the beach the ghastly corpses of the Egyptian warriors—perhaps stripping them of their rings and necklaces, and the weapons which are yet grasped in their bleached and bloodless hands. Yonder, where the rock juts out into the sea, are clusters of children gathering the rich red sea-weed, or the brilliant shells and corals, or watching the movements of the strange-looking creatures that roam among the pools. Away, dotted over the rocky heights, or in closer masses in the hollows between, are flocks of sheep, goats, oxen and camels, cropping the spare herbage of the desert, or making eager journeys in quest of water. Conspicuous above the encampment, and contrasting strikingly with the clear blue of the April sky, is the strange column that ever rolls up its wreaths of smoke and fire, as if in communication with heaven. An expression of happy freedom seems to sit on every face. One countenance, however, looks as though the spirit of composure and the spirit of anxiety were moulding it by turns. Others may be deeming their troubles past; but that thoughtful, king-like man, with the eagle eye, and the mild expression, and the massive brow, knows that they are but beginning.

Thus the Israelites commenced their wanderings in the wilderness. The Red Sea was behind and a trackless desert before them, but God was their leader, and his cloudy banner floated in the sky, a waving pennant by day, and a flaming torch by night. Under Divine direction they took their course toward Sinai. They first went three days' journey down the eastern shore of the Red Sea, between the coast on the right and the mountainous ridge on the left, until they came to Marah. During this march they suffered fearfully from thirst. Let us not think lightly of their distress. The sensation we call thirst is no more like the mad and raging fever of the desert than our cool and verdant valleys are like the baked and blistering rocks of that burning wilderness. The vast host of men, women and children, with great herds of cattle, had to travel over the sandy waste on foot, with the burning sun over their heads, and their sufferings were horrible. Look the individuals in the face! They plod moodily, heavily on, no man speaking to his fellow. Many cannot speak if they would. Their tongues are parched and rough, and cling to the roofs of their mouths; their lips are black and shrivelled, and their eye-balls are red with heat, and sometimes a dimness comes over them which makes them stagger and fall. Not one in that multitude but would part with limb or life for one cool draught of water.

But, lo! their misery they think is past. In the distance they behold trees and bushes, clad in refreshing green. There must be water near. With glad looks and quickened steps they push joyously on. What a rush to the water—what eagerness to gulp the refreshing flood! Whence that universal groan of horror and despair? The water is bitter, so bitter as to be loathsome even to their intense agony of thirst. Pity them; but judge them not too severely, if in that awful moment of disappointment, with the waters of Marah before their faces, and the waters of the Nile before their thoughts, they murmured and complained that they had been brought from unfailling waters to perish in that thirsty desolation.

Their sin was pardoned, the waters healed, and they passed on to Elim, six miles further, where there were twelve wells of water, and threescore and ten palm trees. Their next encampment was in a valley by the Red Sea, on the edge of the Wilderness of Sin. This wilderness is memorable as the place where, in answer to their murmurings, the Israelites were, for the first time, miraculously fed with quails, to appease their lusting after the flesh-pots of Egypt. Here also they were first fed with manna, which they continued to eat for forty years, until they reached the land of promise, and ate of the corn of that land.

They now entered the Wady Feiran, and penetrated into the inner and most mountainous part of the peninsula. Having halted at Alush and Dophkah, they reached Rephidim, whence Moses went with the Elders to strike the rock in Horeb, and procure from it a supply of water. Tradition points out, as the rock which Moses struck, a large block of granite, some twenty feet in height, marked by several horizontal grooves, like mouths, such as might have been formed by the flowing of water. At Rephidim they encountered and conquered the Amalekites—a tribe of Edomites, fired by the fiercest jealousy, on account of Jacob's seed having been preferred to Esau's, who came upon their rear and annoyed the feeble and helpless of the host. Moses, with his hands supported by Aaron and Hur, held his rod outstretched while this battle was going on, in token of dependence on the help of God. Here also occurred the visit of Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, and the establishment of subordinate courts of justice, according to his advice.

The next encampment was at Mount Sinai. Here the mountains assume that bold, tall and fearfully bare aspect, which gives to the district its peculiar character of majesty and desolation. No one who has not seen them can conceive the ruggedness of these vast piles of granite rocks, rent into chasms, rounded into small summits, or splintered into countless peaks, all in the wildest confusion, as they appear to the eye of an observer from any of the heights. We may imagine what a strange and solemn region it would be to Israel—come away from the Nile, broad and overflowing, to those ravines, down which nothing flowed but rivers of hot air; from the loud streets and stirring lanes of Goshen and Memphis, to that listening silence which seemed to await the voice of the Eternal, and these lofty peaks which, relieved by no verdure, and interrupted by no life, carried the eye that rested on them straight up to heaven. If it be the perfection of a place of worship to have nothing to distract the mind, there could be nothing more stern and still than this inland solitude, with its granite pinnacles soaring up nine thousand feet into the firmament—an Alpine skeleton, a Tyrol or Savoy, with its forests and its snows torn off, and its lakes dried up—the ruins of a world.

So awful was the sanctuary, so sublime the pulpit, to which Jehovah led his people, that they might hear his memorable sermon, and receive the statute-book of heaven. Here the law was given. The rules of eternal righteousness, which had been lying about the world, tossing along from age to age, without arrangement and without authority, were handed forth from heaven anew; and clear beyond cavil, sufficiently compact for the smallest memory, and comprehensible by the feeblest understanding, they became to mankind a statute-book forever, direct from the presence of Infinite Majesty, and in the solemnities by which it was sanctioned, suggestive of that awful tribunal when it will reappear as the law by which the righteous Judge shall render to every man according to his deeds.

Here the Tabernacle was set up—a peripatetic shrine, a cathedral that could be carried about, a temple of canvas and tapestry which accompanied Israel in their wanderings, and which sufficed as a visible centre of worship until such time as the waving tapestry solidified into carvings of cedar, and the badger skins were replaced by tall arcades of marble, and the tent had grown to a temple. The worship of the one living and true God there inaugurated now counts its adherents by hundreds of millions, and includes all that is worth naming of the world's intelligence and civilization. All the inhabitants of Europe are monotheists. Save a few savage tribes, and a handful of Pagans from Asia, all the inhabitants of America are monotheists. Every Christian in the world is a monotheist; so is every Jew; so is every Mussulman. Today one-half the people upon the globe worship the God of Moses.

From Mount Sinai the course of the Israelites was for some distance nearly due north, down a broad valley which descends by a gradual slope from the tangled labyrinth of the Sinaitic group toward the crescent-shaped ridge of mountains, Et Tilu, which forms the lofty buttress of the great desert. They tarried for some-time at Hazeroth, ever memorable by reason of the envious sedition of Miriam and Aaron. In this neighborhood they were miraculously fed with quails for a whole month. From the plain of Hazeroth they ascended one of the passes of the Tilu, to the broad plains of the desert above. From this position they must have turned their course in a northeasterly direction, toward the head of the Gulf, or advanced northward across the desert, toward the land of Canaan. The latter route seemed to be distinctly mentioned by Moses in his recapitulation of their march through this great and terrible wilderness, as they came to Kadesh Barnea.

This outpost of Canaan, so remarkable in the history of the Exodus, we locate in the midst of this desert, fifty miles or less south of Beersheba.

Disheartened by the report of the spies, the Israelites murmured and rebelled, and were sentenced to linger and die in the wilderness. Then relenting, they went up to fight with the Amalekites and Canaanites, and were discomfited, "even unto Hormah." From Hormah, at the command of God, they returned toward the east arm of the Red Sea, to wander forty years in the wilderness, until they should be consumed and die there for their rebellion against God. Of their subsequent wanderings for thirty-eight years we know nothing. Eighteen stations are specified as occupied in this interval, but of these nothing is known. The Israelites, like the modern Bedouins, doubtless spent this time in roving up and down the Arabah, and over the vast desert of Paran, between Sinai and Palestine, according as they could find pasturage and water. The rebellion of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, is referred to this interval, but the date and place of this judgment are alike unknown.

In the first month, April, they again returned to Kadesh, which they had left in the third or fourth month, almost thirty-eight years before. On their return to Kadesh, Miriam dies; the people murmur for water; Moses and Aaron bring water from the rocks, but, in doing this, sin against God and receive sentence of death without seeing that good land beyond Jordan, so long the object of their desire; a passage is demanded through the land of Edom, and is refused. The Israelites then journeyed from Kadesh to Mount Hor, or Mosera, where Aaron died. While in this vicinity, they gained a signal victory over the Canaanites, by whom they had been repulsed or their previous attempt to go up into Palestine.

Mount Hor is a high, rocky peak, in the mountains of Edom, east of the Arabah, and situated midway between the Dead Sea and the Arabah. It rises, in lone majesty, above the surrounding summits, and overlooks a boundless prospect of craggy cliffs, gloomy ravines, and lofty, barren deserts. The grandeur and sublimity of the scene from the summit of Mount Hor is forcibly sketched by Dr. Wilson, in the following paragraph: "After the greatness and peril of the effort which we had been compelled to make, we should, in ordinary circumstances, have been elated with the success which we had experienced; but the wild sublimity and grandeur and terror of the new and wonderful scene around and underneath us, overawed our souls. We were seated on the very throne, as it appeared to us, of desolation. Its own metropolis of broken and shattered and frowning heights—ruin piled upon ruin, and dark and devouring depth added to depth—lay on our right hand and on our left. To the rising sun, Mount Seir, the pride and glory of Edom, and the terror of its adversaries, lay before us—smitten in its length and breadth by the hand of the Almighty stretched out against it—barren and most desolate, with its daughter, the 'city of the rock,' overthrown and prostrate at its feet. To the west, we had the great and terrible wilderness, with its deserts and pits and droughts spread out before us, without any limit but its own vastness, and pronounced by God himself to be the very 'shadow of death.'" Here Moses took Aaron and Eleazar, and went up into Mount Hor in the sight of all the congregation, where these venerable pilgrims took their last farewell of each other, and "Aaron died there in the top of the mount." A tomb has been erected to his memory on the summit, which has often been visited and described by modern travellers.

From Mount Hor the Children of Israel passed along the Arabah, south to Ezion-Geber, at the head of the Eastern or Ailantic Gulf, which is several times denominated the Red Sea. Elath and Ezion-Geber were both situated at the head of this gulf. The latter afterward became famous as the port where Solomon, and after him Jehoshaphat, built fleets to carry on a commerce with Ophir. Here they turned eastward, up the pass that leads to the high plain of the great eastern desert of Arabia. At this place a large defile comes down steeply from the northeast through the mountains, forming the main passage out of the great valley to this desert. The ascent of the Israelites was, doubtless, through this pass, when they departed from the Red Sea, and turned north to "compass Edom," and to pass on to Moab, and to the Jordan. It was at this point in their wanderings that "the people were much discouraged because of the way;" and they were bitten by fiery serpents. Burckhardt informs us that this place is still infested by poisonous serpents, which are greatly feared by the inhabitants.

The course of the Israelites now lay along the border of the eastern desert, back of Mount Seir, the Mountains of Edom. The Edomites, who had refused the Children of Israel a passage through their land from Kadesh, now suffered them to pass unmolested along their borders on the east, and even supplied them with provisions for their march. Nothing is known of the places mentioned in the interval until the Israelites arrived at the brook Zered, or Sared, a marshy valley which rises in the eastern desert, near the present route to Mecca, and, after a course of several miles to the west discharges, in the rainy season, its waters through the southeastern shore of the Dead Sea. In the summer season the channel is dry. For some distance from the sea the channel of this brook is, like all similar valleys in this region, a deep and almost impassable gorge. This is the "brook of the wilderness" (Isa. xv. 7); and, according to Ritter, the "river of the wilderness." (Amos vi. 14.) It was the southern boundary of Moab. From this station the Children of Israel passed without molestation around Moab, on the borders of the desert, to the river Arnon, twenty-five or thirty miles further north. They were now on the borders of the Ammonites, who, like the Moabites, had been reduced so as to retain a mere remnant of their former possessions. They seem, at this time, to have occupied the margin of the desert to the right of the Israelites. This portion of the desert eastward bore the name of Kedemoth.

The children of Israel now encountered a formidable foe in the Amorites, whom they conquered. From the station on the banks of the Arnon to the plains of Moab, on the east of Jordan, opposite Jericho, the accounts of the intervening stations seem to be contradictory. After the conquest of Sihon, the Israelites directed their forces against Og, the giant of Bashan, the capital of whose kingdom was Edrei, fifteen miles east of the northern extremity of the Sea of Galilee, and seventy-five from the plains of Moab. From Bashan the Israelites spread their conquests farther north, over all the region of the Sea of Galilee and the waters of Merom, as far as Mount Lebanon. The Moabites, well pleased with the subjugation of the Amorites, were still the foes of the Israelites. Though fearing to engage with them in open war, they called Balaam from beyond the Euphrates to curse these hated invaders (Numb. xxii., xxiii., xxiv.); but finding no enchantment to prevail against them, they succeeded by wiles, in harmony with their own incestuous origin, in bringing a plague upon the people, by which 24,000 perished. The Israelites lingered four or five months on the plains of Moab, over against Jericho, in full view of their future inheritance. During this time they had subdued their enemies before them, and Moses had written the book of Deuteronomy, recapitulating the blessings and the curses of their law, and recording his final exhortations and entreaties, in the full consciousness that his eventful life was advancing to a close. His last military act was to wage, by God's command, an exterminating war against the Midianites for their agency in enticing the Israelites into sin. In the dreadful carnage of this expedition, Balaam, the apostate prophet, was slain.

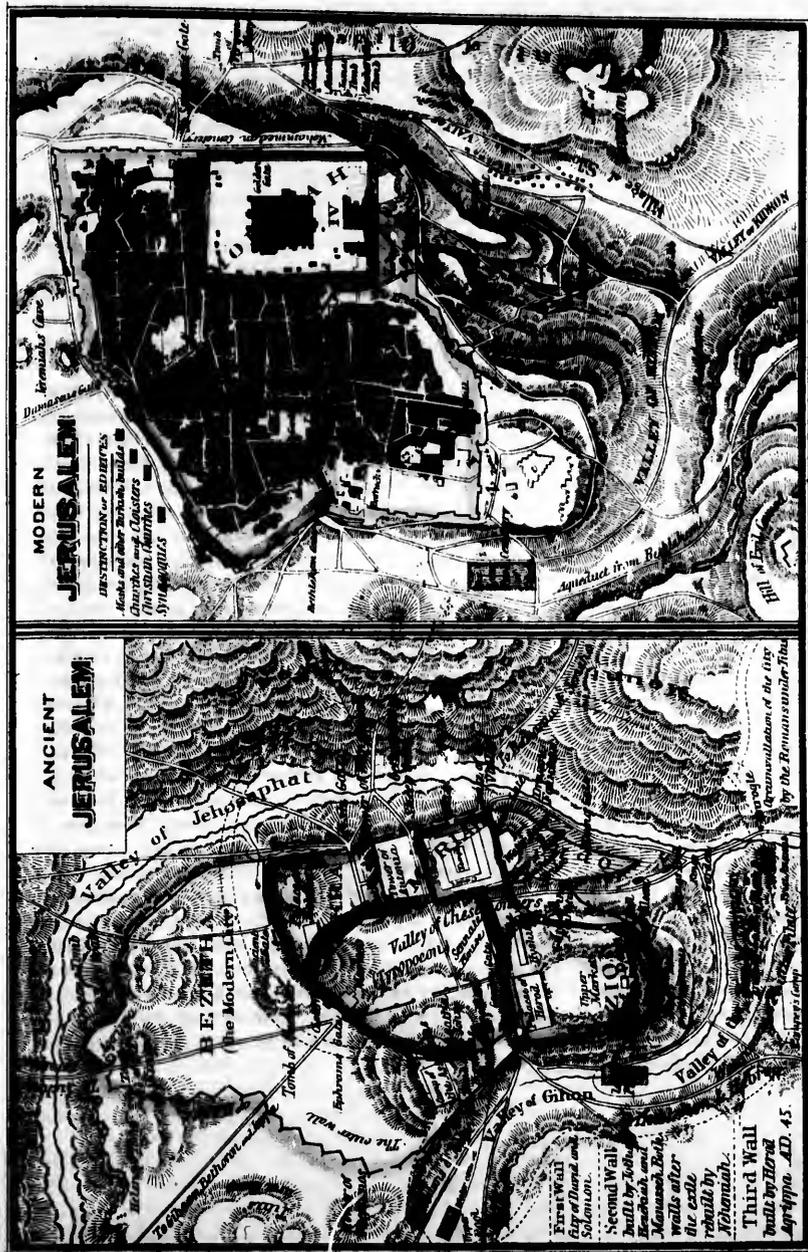

And now nothing remained for the great leader to do but to pour out his heart before the people in lofty odes and eloquent blessings, and then ascend the mountain and die. And never does Moses wear such an air of moral sublimity, as when we behold him leaving the camp and his beloved people, and climbing the summit, where, with the rock for his couch and the broad heaven for his roof, and far from all human companionship, he was to submit himself to the sentence: "Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return." We cannot follow Moses in this mysterious journey. If the law-giver had received a rebuke, this was more than compensated by the peerless distinction attending his exit. His humiliation only brought out more strikingly his real grandeur. Although the sentence shutting him out from Canaan was not literally reversed, its bitterness was greatly mitigated. From Nebo he looked down on the palm-trees of Jericho, close under his feet; and from the warm valley through which the Jordan was gleaming, far across to yon boundless sea; from Jezreel, with its waving corn, to Eshcol, with its luxuriant vines; from Bashan, with its kine, to Carmel, with its rocks dropping honey; from Lebanon, with its rampart of snow, south again to the dim edge of the desert; and as he feasted his eyes upon the rich landscape of Canaan, its fountains and brooks and olives and vines, as what had so long been the land very far off, and what to the fretful host in the wilderness had seemed no better than a myth or a mirage; as this splendid domain spread out, hill and valley, field and forest, in the bright garb of spring, the Lord said, "This is the land!" "This is the land which I swear unto Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, saying, I will give it to thy seed." But beautiful and overwhelming as it was, just then there began to rise on Moses' sight a still more wondrous scene. It was no longer the Jordan with its palms, but a river of water clear as crystal, and on either side of it a tree of life overcanopying. It was no longer Nebo's rocky summit, but a great white throne, and round it light accessible, and before him spread out a better land than the land of promise. "So Moses, the servant of the Lord, died." The spirit was gone home. Behind that countenance, still radiant with the beatific vision, no longer worked the busy brain, no longer went and came the mind which so long had conversed with God, and managed the affairs of the chosen people. Powerless is the hand which had swayed Jehovah's rod and split the sea asunder; and cold in its unconsciousness is that majestic presence before which proud Pharaoh learned to tremble. A corpse is all that now remains of the mighty prophet and law-giver, and there is no man there to bury him. But He who preserved his infant body amid the bulrushes, takes charge now of his lifeless remains. Those hands which had taken the law from God, those eyes which had seen His presence, those lips which had conversed with the Almighty, that face which had been irradiated with the beams of heavenly glory, must not be neglected, though the soul is gone. "The Lord buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Bethpeor."

Upon the death of Moses, Joshua, now in his eighty-fifth year, assumed the command of the people, sent spies into Jericho, crossed the Jordan, fortified a camp at Gilgal, circumcised the people, and kept the passover; then pressed forward to the conquest of the Canaanites, and soon was master of the greater part of Palestine. He died at the age of one hundred and ten years, and was buried in his own city, Timnath-serah.

JERUSALEM.

THE situation of Jerusalem is very remarkable. It stands upon an upland ridge about 2200 feet above the level of the Mediterranean, and 3500 feet above that of the Dead Sea. The town is surrounded on three sides by steep, rocky ravines, the valley of Jehoshaphat on the east, and the valleys of Gihon and Hinnom on the west and south. These ravines are shaped somewhat like a horse-shoe, the open part being towards the northwest. The city itself, lying within the horse-shoe, spread ultimately over four hills or heights, called Zion, Moriah, Acra, and Bezetha. The chief of these hills was Zion; it lay, so to speak, in the western bend of the horse-shoe. In David's time the whole town lay on its northern slope. Additions were made at subsequent times. Between the hills ran valleys, the chief of which was called by the Romans the Tyropæon; but the seventeen great sieges of Jerusalem have caused many of these valleys to be filled up with rubbish, and internally the city now is very much changed from what it must have been. On all sides the neighboring mountains rise somewhat above the city, verifying the simile of the psalm, "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about His people from henceforth even forever." The most celebrated of the hills that thus environ the sacred city is Mount Olivet. It stretches away to the northeast, in the form of a ridge with several summits, rising to the height of 400 feet above the valley of Jehoshaphat, and 2500 above the level of the Mediterranean. South of Olivet is the Hill of Offense; so called because believed to be that on which Solomon built shrines to Chemosh and Moloch. The Hill of Evil Counsel is opposite Mount Zion, having its name from the circumstance that here, in the country-house of Caiaphas, the priests and elders took counsel to put Jesus to death. Mount Gihon guards the city on the west, and Mount Scopus on the north. The brook Kidron runs, or rather ran, through the valley of Jehoshaphat, passing the Garden of Gethsemane near the road to the Mount of Olives and Bethany.

Mount Zion is far the most conspicuous of the hills on which Jerusalem is built. It rises abruptly to the height of nearly 300 feet from the valley of Hinnom, sloping down more gradually "on the sides of the north," where lay the city of the Great King. It was a place of remarkable strength, so that the tabernacle, the palace of David, and the other buildings that stood on it were remarkably secure. (Ps. xlviii.) Part of the hill is now under regular cultivation; thus verifying Micah's prophecy, that Zion should be "ploughed as a field."

The view of Jerusalem from some of the neighboring heights is apt to disappoint the traveller; but from the Mount of Olives it is exceedingly striking. When seen from that point, the hill of Zion justifies the admiring exclamation of the Psalmist, "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion." Although the size of Jerusalem was not very great, its situation, on the brink of rugged hills, encircled by deep and wild valleys, bounded by eminences whose sides were covered with groves and gardens, added to its numerous towers and temples, must have given it a singular and gloomy magnificence, scarcely possessed by any other city in the world. It is true, the ancient city beloved by God has now disappeared, and with it all the hallowed spots once contained within its walls. Yet the face of nature still endures; the rocks, mountains, lakes and valleys are still unchanged, save that loneliness and wildness are now where once were luxury and every joy; and though their glory is departed, a high and mournful beauty still rests on many of their settled scenes. Amidst them a stranger will ever delight to wander; for there his imagination will seldom be in fault: the naked mountain, the untrodden plain, and the voiceless shore will kindle into life around him, and his every step be filled with those deeds through which guilt and sorrow passed away, and life and immortality were brought to light.

No human being could be disappointed who first saw Jerusalem from the east. The beauty consists in this, that you then burst at once on the two great ravines which cut the city off from the surrounding table-land, and that then only you have a complete view of the Mosque of Omar. The other buildings of Jerusalem which emerge from the mass of gray ruin and white stones are few, and for the most part unattractive. What, however, these fail to effect, is in one instant effected by a glance at the Mosque of Omar. From whatever point that graceful dome, with its beautiful precinct, emerges to view, it at once dignifies the whole city. And when, from Olivet, or from the Governor's house, you see the platform on which it stands, it is a scene hardly to be surpassed.

The Jews have a custom singularly expressive and touching, one equally in harmony with the mournful associations which cluster around the holy city. At the foot of the western enclosure of the temple mount, where the walls tower to the height of sixty feet, are evident indications that the large stones at the base are the identical remains of the ancient wall of Solomon's temple. This portion of the wall they denominate the "mourning wall." It is visited by every Israelite on each feast and festival, and on every Friday afternoon. Here, in confident yet mournful expectation of again treading these courts of the Lord, which have so long been profaned by the foot of the Mussulman, the Jews reverentially bow their heads and repeat their wailings together in a most plaintive dirge, rehearsing various portions of their sacred psalms and prophetic lyrics expressive of their confiding lament: "How long yet, O Lord! O Lord our God, how long!"

THE TRAVELS OF OUR LORD.

We shall confine our attention to a few of the leading scenes of Christ's ministry, and try to throw upon his doings and discourses the light which is derived from the places and circumstances with which they are associated. The earlier and greater part of Christ's public ministry was exercised in the neighborhood of the Sea of Galilee, as it was locally called; or, in the more correct language of the Gentile writer, Luke, the Lake of Gennesaret. The first of all His miracles was performed at a village called Cana, in Galilee (now a ruin), where, by turning water into wine, Christ seemed to indicate his power to sweeten and increase the comforts of human life. Crossing eastwards from the hills of Galilee, the traveller reaches a plain, called the Plain of Hattin. Here stands the hill commonly called the Mountain of Beatitudes, and said to be that from which the Sermon on the Mount was delivered. It is a square hill, not above sixty feet high, with two summits and a platform between them on which a multitude might find accommodation. From the top of this hill the Sea of Galilee is well seen. In Dr. Clarke's view, it is longer and finer than any of the lakes of Cumberland and Westmoreland, and only inferior to Loch Lomond in Scotland. In size, the lake is about thirteen miles long by six broad; but in the clearness of the Eastern atmosphere it looks smaller. What makes it unlike English lakes is its deep depression, which gives it something of the strange, unnatural character that belongs to the Dead Sea. On the east side the hills are flat, but on the north and west more varied and picturesque. Descending through the rocky walls which encompass it, the traveller meets with the thorn-tree and palm, and other products of a tropical climate. A strip of level, sandy beach surrounds the lake, from which the hills ascend, usually in gentle grassy slopes, broken by abrupt precipitous cliffs, the bright oleander and other plants often forming a pleasant fringe along the shore. On the western side an abundant supply of springs give birth to a verdure and fertility not found in the eastern.

At one part of the shore—at the northwest corner—the mountains recede, leaving a level, well-watered, fertile plain, five miles wide and six or seven long. This plain is the "land of Gennesaret," so closely identified with Christ's teaching and labors. Four springs pour their streams through it; magnificent corn-fields show the riches of the soil, and along the shore a thick jungle of thorn and oleander affords a home to a multitude of birds. In the days of our Lord the plain of Gennesaret was crowded with cities and villages. Here stood Capernaum and Chorazin, one of the Bethsaidas, Magdala, and many other places, the very sites of which can hardly be distinguished. Besides land occupations, fishing was prosecuted with the greatest activity. The whole basin must have been a focus of life and energy—the surface of the lake constantly dotted with the white sails of vessels flying before the mountain gusts, as the beach sparkled with the houses and palaces, the synagogues and the temples of the Jewish or Roman inhabitants. It must have been an amazing contrast to the present deserted condition of the lake, where, in Dr. Robinson's time, a single boat was all that floated upon its waters.

An earnest spirit, like that of Jesus, toiling amid such a teeming population, and constantly filled with the sense of its spiritual miseries, could not obtain necessary rest or retirement, except by quitting the locality and getting into quite another scene. The mountains round the Lake of Gennesaret, especially those to the east, afforded to Jesus suitable and easily reached places of repose. He had but to retire a few miles from the shore, or to cross to the hills on the other side of the lake, to find a region as still and solitary as his usual residence was active and bustling. Hence the frequent references to "the mountains," where he spent nights in prayer; and to the "desert places," where he called his disciples to rest, on the other side of the lake. An hour's walk or sail would at any time transport Him from the bustle and strife of the streets of Capernaum to the stillest wilds of the desert.

It is to this spot, or its neighborhood, that we are to refer nearly all that is recorded of the life of Jesus to the end of the 18th chapter of Matthew. Yonder, a little way off, between the projecting "horns of Hattin," He delivered the Sermon on the Mount, encouraged the poor in spirit, taught His followers to pray "Our Father," and spoke of the broad road and the narrow way. The objects around supplied Him with natural and apt illustrations. The tulips and anemones on the plain below suggested the image of the "lilies of the field;" the numerous birds, in their bright and varied plumage, fluttering in the thickets near the lake, that of the "fowls of the air;" the fields, the rocks, the sea, and the desert, had all their part in the appeal, "What man is there of you, whom, if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?" Perhaps the great crowded highway passing between the cities, contrasted with some lonely mountain-path, suggested the image of the broad and the narrow way; while some stable edifice built on the rock, and some slender shed by the sandy bed of a winter torrent, may have furnished the closing image of the wise and foolish builders.

Besides traversing several times the whole district of Galilee during His ministry, our Lord made some excursions to more distant places. On one of these occasions deeming it prudent, perhaps, to get beyond the jurisdiction of Herod, He came to the district of Phœnicia, "the coasts of Tyre and Sidon." Notwithstanding all the changes that had passed over it, Tyre

TRAVELS OF OUR SAVIOUR.

EXPLANATION OF MAP.

Because the Scriptural accounts of our Lord's travels are wanting in a careful notation of localities, this map must be rather more conjectural than the others. But though we may not possess exact information, such a sketch is valuable in impressing our minds as it does with his unwearying labors and wonderful devotion to his work of love.

There is, necessarily, some confusion in such a chart; yet if attention is given to the different colors, this map will help us in following him with reasonable correctness.

We have recognized the latest chronology in fixing the dates four years before the common reckoning of the Christian era.

By this map we are shown our Saviour traversing the whole land: Judea, Samaria, and Galilee, from the wilderness on the south to the borders of Tyre, from the Mediterranean to the Jordan, everywhere in the fullest sympathy with the people; touching them, reproving them, healing them, loving them divinely, by all means striving for their confidence, and having compassion for their weakness and unbelief.

1. First, we may trace the earliest journey of Jesus to Jerusalem. In this journey he goes from Nazareth along the east side of Jordan to Bethsaida, where he is baptized by John, and crossing, passes below Jericho, through the wilderness of Judaea to Jerusalem, A. D. 28. He returns through the wilderness to John at Bethsaida, and thence upward to Cana and Capernaum, following the western bank of the river, passing Enon and Nazareth.

2. Jesus goes to Jerusalem a second time, by the western route, §21, A. D. 28. He followed in this journey the plains of Esdrelon and Sharon, and from Jerusalem we follow him to Enon, near Sharon, back to Jerusalem, thence toward Galilee by the middle route. In this journey we find him at Jac's well, §20, and at Sychar, the Shechem of the Old Testament. He reaches in Galilee, §26, and returning by Cana and Nazareth, fixes his abode in Capernaum.

3. There can be no certainty about the first circuit in Galilee, A. D. 27, but it extended "throughout all Galilee" (Mark 1. 30), and justified the indications of the map.

4. The third journey to Jerusalem, §24, A. D. 27, was along the table land east of Jordan, through Ramoth Gilead to the fords near Jericho. Returning, we follow him again along the middle lines of travel, across the fertile plains of Mamre and Beth-leon, across with fields of waving grain, where the disciples may have plucked the ears as they passed.

5. This is another purely conjectural circuit, around Upper Galilee, §47, A. D. 27.

6. The route indicates the excursion to the country of the Gadarenes, across the lake, §57, A. D. 27.

7. This is the third circuit in Galilee, §62, A. D. 28. It passes through Nazareth, Shunem, the plain of Fadrolon, and Tiberias. In this circuit the twelve were also sent to "supply his lack of service."

8. A trip to the northeast coast of the Sea of Galilee to Bethsaida, §64, A. D. 28.

9. The fourth circuit in Galilee, §65, A. D. 28. In this circuit Jesus passes over a wide range, through Serapia, Tyre, Sidon, and the neighborhood of Decapolis beyond Jordan.

10. The fifth circuit in Galilee, §73, A. D. 28. He goes northeast of the Sea to Bethsaida and to Caesarea Philippi.

11. The fourth and final journey to Jerusalem, §81, A. D. 28, along the middle route, on which journey he cleansed the ten lepers at Samaria.

12. He makes a journey to Bethsaida and returns to Bethany, called by the death of Lazarus, §91, A. D. 28. Lastly, He makes the circuit to Ephraim, the valley of Jordan and Perea, §92, A. D. 28.

was still a strong citadel and a flourishing port; eclipsed partly by the Greek mercantile cities, but still carrying on much of that busy traffic which, in the days of the prophets, had made its merchants princes and its traffickers the honorable of the earth. Regarding Christ's emotions in connection with this remarkable country, we have but a single hint. He seems to have found a greater susceptibility to right impressions among the people there than in His own country; so that, when He reproved Chorazin and Bethsaida for their impenitence, He added the remarkable testimony, "If the mighty works which were done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sack-cloth and ashes." The only incident recorded in connection with Christ's visit to this place is the cure of the daughter of the Syro-Phœnician woman. By His mercy to her He showed that even the once doomed and banned descendants of Canaan were not excluded from the sphere of His love and the reach of His blessings.

Another of Christ's more distant excursions was to the region of Cæsarea Philippi, near the sources of the Jordan. This Cæsarea was formerly called Paneas; it had just been repaired by the tetrarch Philip, and named Cæsarea after the emperor, Tiberius Cæsar, and Philippi after himself. It was situated at the foot of Mount Hermon, at the entrance to the noble valley between the ridges of Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon. It was but a few miles from Dan, the most northerly city of Palestine in former times, and the shrine of Jeroboam's idolatrous calves. When the Macedonians obtained possession of the country, they built at this place a shrine for Pan, the god of shepherds; whence the old name of the place, Paneas, and the present one, Baniyas, have come. In a precipitous face of the rock is a large dim grotto, with a niche, empty now, but formerly containing the statue of Pan; and other niches, which were the shrines of the nymphs.

It seems to have been during this visit to Cæsarea Philippi that the Transfiguration took place. And certainly the lofty summit of Hermon is far more likely to have been the scene of that wonderful event than the humble eminence of Mount Tabor. It is impossible to look up from the plain to the towering peaks of Hermon—almost the only mountain which deserves the name in Palestine—and not be struck with its appropriateness to the scene. That magnificent height, mingling with all the views of Palestine from Shechem upwards, though often alluded to as the northern barrier of the Holy Land, is connected with no historical event in the Old or New Testament. Yet this fact of its rising high above all the other hills of Palestine, and of its setting the last limit to the wanderings of Him who was sent only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, falls in with the supposition which the words inevitably force on us. High up on its southern slopes there must be many a point where the disciples could be taken apart by themselves. Even the transient comparison of the celestial splendor with the snow, where alone it could be seen in Palestine, should not, perhaps, be wholly overlooked. At any rate, the remote heights above the sources of the Jordan witnessed the moment when—His work in His own peculiar sphere being ended—He set His face for the last time to go up to Jerusalem. During our Lord's residence at Capernaum, besides itinerating several times over Galilee, and making occasional excursions to more distant places, such as Sidon and Cæsarea, He went up, year by year, to Jerusalem, to attend the festivals. Both in going and returning "He must needs pass through Samaria," except when He preferred the route through the plain of Jordan, when Jericho would lie in His way. The most memorable occasion of His passing through Samaria was the time when He met with the woman at Jacob's well, near Sycher—the ancient Shechem.

The imagery of our Lord's teaching in Galilee had been drawn mainly from fishing and corn-fields. In Judea and the neighborhood of Jerusalem, vines and vineyards become the prominent figures. For still, as in the days of Isaiah, the "inhabitants of Jerusalem and the men of Judah," dwelling, as they did, "in a very fruitful hill," "binding their foal unto the vine and their ass's colt unto the choice vine," were most accessible to illustrations drawn from their staple employment. The parable of the laborers in the vineyard (Matt. xx. 1); that of the father and the two sons whom he sent to work in his vineyard (xxi. 28); that of the householder and the wicked husbandman to whom he let his vineyard (xxi. 33); and that of the true vine (John xv. 1), were all spoken either at Jerusalem or in its neighborhood. During the earlier visits of Christ to Jerusalem, He held His memorable conversation with Nicodemus; He cured the impotent man at the pool of Bethesda, and performed other miracles on the Sabbath; thereby shocking the prejudices of the Pharisees, but indicating the true character of the Sabbath as a day of blessing and privilege to man; He rescued and forgave the woman caught in adultery; welcomed publicans and sinners to salvation; and delivered the inimitable parables of the lost sheep, the lost piece of silver, and the prodigal son.

It was on occasion of His visits to Jerusalem that the loving heart of Jesus began to know, in all its depth of bitterness, the sensation of being hated, cursed, blasphemed. Each successive contest with the Scribes and Pharisees, ending, as it always did, in the triumph of Christ's superior meekness and wisdom, only added fuel to the burning fire of their jealousy. But now also, as He became familiar with the bitterness of human hatred, He came to know better the joys of holy human friendship. In the sequestered village of Bethany—an hour's walk from Jerusalem—Jesus had discovered the family most congenial with His own human heart. The holy fellowship enjoyed, at night, under their humble cottage-roof, served to alleviate the pain arising from the conflicts of the day. It was not less as an enduring monument to the congenial spirit of that family than as a proof of His own power that Jesus, on one of His later visits, performed the stupendous miracle of raising Lazarus from the dead.

On occasion of the last visit our Lord paid to Jerusalem before His death, He travelled by Jericho. (Luke xviii. 31-35.) He had left Galilee a short time before, and spent the interval in Peræa, on the opposite side of the Jordan. The usual place for crossing the river below the Lake of Tiberias was the ford at Beth-shan, where the Philistines had fastened to the wall the bodies of Saul and his sons on the fatal day of Mount Gilboa; its ancient name had lately been exchanged for the Greek name Scythopolis, from an invasion of wild Scythian tribes that had taken place some time before. During His stay in Peræa, He seems to have stationed Himself near the spot where He had been baptized by John. This spot may have possessed peculiar charms for Him. It marked the beginning of His public life on earth. Here He had declared His purpose to fulfil all righteousness, and here He had received wonderful testimony from on high, and the singular anointing of the Holy Spirit, descending visibly upon Him; and from this spot His eye wandered over other places sacred to scenes full of precious significance. Among other memorable incidents that occurred here was the conversation with the mother of James and John about the chief places of honor in His kingdom. Close to this place, on the dark mountain-wall of Moab, was the height on which Moses yielded his spirit into the hands of God, and also the spot where the chariot of fire and horses of fire came for Elijah. Under thoughts of His own coming death-struggle, it would soothe Jesus to remember the words and tones in which these two prophets, a short time before, on the snowy heights of Mount Hermon, had prepared His mind for the decease which He was about to accomplish at Jerusalem.

At last the Passover drawing nigh, He and His disciples re-cross the Jordan, near the place where Joshua and the host of Israel had crossed it, and come to Jericho with its palm groves and fountains. The fame of Jesus has reached the place, and a great multitude has turned out to see Him. Two blind men by the wayside have raised their imploring voices, have received mercy, and are now feasting their wondering eyes on the glories of nature. Aloft on the sycamore-tree Zaccheus, the rich publican, has taken his place, forgetful of his dignity in his eagerness to get a glimpse of the great Galilean, and little thinking how much closer fellowship he is that day to have with Him—how he is to give Him a twofold welcome as a guest in his house, and as a Saviour in his heart. The eagerness of Christian faith always lays a double offering on the altar of the Saviour. With the ardor of love is the earnestness of service. The delight of receiving Jesus is the declaration of self-renouncement. "O Christ! I accept Thee! O Christ, accept me!" are the confession and prayer of the penitent.

Leaving Jericho, Jesus proceeds on His way, repeating to His audience the parable of the pounds, so forcibly conveying the great lessons of accountability which enter so vitally into all our relations, that parable which clothes the smallest advantage, the most inconsiderable capacity with all the solemnity of a divine gift in sacred trust. Climbing the steep mountain-passes, He traverses the scene of the parable of the good Samaritan, in which He impresses on human hearts the wonderful kindness of His own, and lifts their souls toward a realm of sympathy and tenderness more Divine than human, while He shows them the golden chain of brotherly obligation in which He binds His people; at last He reaches the village of Bethany, where sweet thoughts of former times throng upon Him, and every bough and bird and blossom tell of friends eager always with their love and hospitality—where lingers yet the memory of His mighty power over death and tearful affection. Proceeding next day to Jerusalem, He is met by the great crowd from the city that have heard of His arrival, and rides in triumph over the palm-spread road—an accurate fulfilment of the words pronounced by Zechariah more than five hundred years before; a singular triumph over the fears and prejudices of the people, which were soon again to arise and break forth in cruel denials and heartless accusations. The path leads first up the eastern side of Olivet, then down to Jerusalem on the west. As it passes over the ridge, Jerusalem suddenly bursts on the view like a thing of enchantment. Beholding the beloved city, the Saviour wept over it, and poured out His whole heart in the memorable lament: "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes."

Of the localities in the immediate neighborhood of Jerusalem specially consecrated by the footsteps of Jesus, the Mount of Olives and the Garden of Gethsemane hold very distinguished places. The Mount of Olives is a long low ridge extending along the east side of the city, with three several summits. Its name was derived from the olive groves that probably flourished at one time in far greater luxuriance than now; for it is only in one of the slopes that anything like an olive forest can now be seen, although scattering trees appear elsewhere. At the Jerusalem foot of Olivet, close to the brook Kidron and the valley of Jehoshaphat, lies the Garden of Gethsemane. It is a square of about 150 feet. "When we saw it in May," says Lieutenant Lynch, "the trees were in full bloom; and altogether the garden, in its aspects and associations, was better calculated than any place I know to soothe a troubled spirit. Eight venerable trees, isolated from the smaller and less imposing ones which skirt the pass of the Mount of Olives, form a consecrated grove, whose deep shadows blending darkly entertain our meditations of the scene of anguish. It seems a fitting sanctuary for such sorrow. It reminds us of the sequestered walks of the garden which were all radiant with the brightness of love divine until the brow of God darkened on man's sin. In this darkened bower Christ suffered in redemption of the Paradise lost by man."

The Son of man had now all but accomplished the work given Him to do. He had shown a spotless example of all excellence as a man; and in that holy human life had exhibited the image of the invisible God. He had established His claims to the Messiahship, had fulfilled Old Testament prophecies and types, wrought miracles, performed acts of beneficence, and uttered words of divine power and sweetness that showed clearly that He came from God. He had vindicated the law and the prophets from the perversions of the rabbins; had demonstrated that all true goodness must come from the heart; had shown that a renewed will and a pure life are the only real evidence of a right state with God; and had denounced, in withering words that could never be forgotten, the hollow hypocrisy and pretentious formality of the leading religionists of the day. He had shown that a spiritual homage is the only acceptable worship of God; and had encouraged His followers to render that worship by revealing God's fatherly character and great love even for his lost and fallen children. While thus raising the standard of holy living, He had revealed Himself in His divine nature as the Life of men; and under such emblems as the Living Bread, the Living Water, and the True Vine, had taught them where to find the inward strength required for their duty. In His conversation with Nicodemus—one of the earliest on record—He had unfolded the grand gospel doctrines: Ruin by Sin, Regeneration by the Holy Spirit, and Reconciliation by the sacrifice of Himself. It now only remained, by His sacrifice on the cross, to complete that redemption which Messiah was to achieve; to grapple with the last enemy, and by conquering Death show clearly that He was, as He had said, the Resurrection and the Life.

It is the last evening of His mortal life. Night has now fallen, and the Master and His little band seek quiet beyond the walls of the crowded city. They have passed the brook Kidron; eight of them linger in the valley, while Peter, James and John accompany Him into Gethsemane. Stretched on the bare ground, under the gnarled and twisted olives, the struggle of His great agony comes on. Not even that heavenly Helper, whose white form the disciples see gliding through the gloom of the night, has been able to remove His terror. He who has so often said, "Fear not," now seems given up to fear. But at last tranquillity returns. And now the glare of torches is seen across the Kidron. Nearer the din of rough voices is heard. With noisy progress they make straight for Gethsemane, for Judas knows the place. The traitor's kiss is given to the Saviour; He surrenders Himself without resistance; His disciples fly; alone and helpless He goes back a prisoner to the city. He is conducted to the house of Annas, who sends Him bound to Caiaphas. In his palace the rest of the night is spent. Early next day the Sanhedrim assemble, with the chief priests and scribes, and find Jesus guilty of a capital offence. But they have not the power of inflicting death; the Roman governor must therefore confirm their sentence, so they lead Him to the Prætorium, or judgment-hall of Pilate. An unexpected obstacle to their scheme here presents itself. The unscrupulous Roman governor has become strangely scrupulous, and is most unwilling to condemn this extraordinary Prisoner. As the day wears on, he occupies hour after hour in attempts to release Him; for a strange impression has laid hold of him that this Jesus is not an ordinary criminal, and that to give Him up to death would be an unpardonable crime. Hearing that He is a Galilean, he sends Him to Herod, who is at Jerusalem attending the feast; and Herod, after examining Him, sends Him back to the perplexed and hesitating Pilate. But at last a skilful appeal to the fears of the governor settles the question. He knows how precarious is his hold of office; and when the cry gets up, "If thou let this man go, thou art not Caesar's friend," he has no longer courage to resist. Jesus is delivered to be crucified, and is led away to Calvary. At Calvary, or rather Golgotha, the Roman punishment of crucifixion is inflicted on Him. The typical prophecy of the brazen serpent—"lifted up"—is fulfilled, as well as that of the paschal lamb—"a bone of Him shall not be broken." Had the Jewish punishment of stoning been inflicted, such would not have been the case. Over His head the words, "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews," are placed, in Hebrew, Greek and Latin; for all three languages are now spoken in Jerusalem. After hours of protracted misery the sufferings of Jesus come at last to an end. The Prince of Life bows His head and gives up the ghost. Joseph of Arimathea, a member of the Sanhedrim, goes to Pilate and begs the body; and Nicodemus brings a great load of myrrh and aloes, and wraps them in a linen cloth around the corpse. As the hour of sunset, when the Jewish Sabbath commenced, is now drawing on, the body is hastily placed in Joseph's tomb, in the adjacent garden. And Jesus, having finished the great work of Redemption, rests in His grave till the morning of the third day.

The next day is the Sabbath. It brings no relief to the staggering faith of the disciples. This whole day Jesus rests in the sepulchre. But the early light of the following morning shows His empty tomb, and the risen Saviour reveals Himself to some of His apostles and followers. One week after He shows Himself to them again at Jerusalem, and rebukes and removes the unbelief of Thomas. A mountain in Galilee having been appointed as a place of meeting, the apostles return to their native province. There, first on the shore of the lake so familiar to them all, He joins the eleven, and puts to Peter the threefold question, "Lovest thou Me?" Afterwards, on the appointed mountain, He shows Himself to all His Galilean disciples, upwards of five hundred in number. Last of all, He again meets the eleven at Jerusalem; and when He had crossed for the last time the Mount of Olives, and come to the well-known village of Bethany, it came to pass, that, as He blessed them, He was parted from them, and a cloud received Him out of their sight. His work on earth was done; and the crucified outcast of Galilee "forever sat down on the right hand of God."

THE TRAVELS OF ST. PAUL.

THE missionary labors of Paul occupied a period of thirty-five years, from A. D. 33 to 68. They began at Damascus, where, upon his conversion, Paul straightway in the synagogues preached that Jesus was the Son of God. After a few days he went out into unknown regions of Arabia, in fulfilment of his apostolic mission. Then, returning to Damascus, he narrowly escaped assassination, and went from there to Jerusalem. Finding himself distrusted by the Christians, whom he had formerly persecuted, he retired to Tarsus, his native city, in Cilicia. Here he remained in obscurity till Barnabas came for him and took him to Antioch to assist in a revival there. This city for "a whole year" was the scene of Paul's ministry, and for many years the centre of his missionary operations. Embarking at Selucia, Paul went with Barnabas to the island of Cyprus. At the two extremities of the island, Salamis and Paphos, the gospel was preached; and at the latter place, Sergius Paulus, the Roman governor, became a convert. A Jewish sorcerer named Bar-Jesus, or, in Greek, Elymas, made a vehement effort to withstand the apostles, and prevent the conversion of the governor. The contest with this sorcerer was Paul's first great battle. Full of faith and power, he rebuked his countryman in language of stunning intensity, and brought temporary blindness upon him. The effect on the mind of the governor was favorable; he became a firm believer.

Sailing from Cyprus, the apostles returned to the mainland, crossing the Pamphylian gulf, and going first to Perga, the chief town of Pamphylia. Here, Mark, who had accompanied them hitherto, frightened probably in a moment of weak faith, when he learned that Paul and Barnabas meant to penetrate into the wilds of Pisidia, left them and returned to Jerusalem. At Perga they did not remain long, but climbing the mountain-passes that separate Pamphylia from the table-land or elevated plain of Pisidia, reached Antioch, a city which was as much Roman in its composition as Perga was Greek. A commotion was raised, and the apostles had to quit the Pisidian Antioch, shaking the dust from their feet against their countrymen. Proceeding about ninety miles in an easterly direction, the apostles came to Iconium. This town, afterwards called Konieh, became celebrated in history as the cradle of the rising power of the conquering Turks. The elements of its population would be as follows: a large number of frivolous Greeks; some remains of a still older population; a few Roman officials; and an old colony of Jews. The same treatment was given to the apostles here as at Antioch, and they fled to the more rural villages of Derbe and Lystra. At Lystra the miraculous cure of a lame man caused them to be mistaken for Jupiter and Mercury. The fickle multitude, who had first proposed to worship the apostles, being stirred up by the Jews from Antioch and Iconium, ended by stoning them. Paul was so hurt that he was left for dead.

They now retraced their steps, and returned to confirm and comfort the churches which they had planted, amid the persecutions against which they had to struggle. The only new place they are said to have visited was Attalia, on the sea-coast of Pamphylia. From that port they sailed to the Syrian Antioch, where they rehearsed to the brethren the tidings of the success of the gospel among the Gentiles. It was resolved by the brethren at Antioch to send Paul and Barnabas and others to Jerusalem. In the course of their journey, the apostles passed through Phœnicia and Samaria, where the gospel had made great progress, and where many hearts were made glad by the tidings which they carried. At last they reached Jerusalem. It was now fifteen years since Paul's conversion, and fourteen since the first visit he had paid as a Christian to that city. The assembly was addressed by Peter, Paul, Barnabas and James. After the council, Paul and Barnabas returned to Antioch, accompanied by Barsabas and Silas. Paul proposed to Barnabas that they should make a tour of inspection, visiting and watering the churches which they had formerly planted. An unhappy quarrel took place between them, occasioned by the desire of Barnabas to take his nephew Mark along with them, and Paul's want of thorough confidence in Mark, caused by his having left them in Pamphylia. As the two apostles could not agree, they took separate routes, Barnabas and Mark going to Cyprus, while Paul, accompanied by Silas, traversed a large portion of the provinces of Asia Minor.

The first visits of Paul and Silas were paid to the districts of Syria and Cilicia, the provinces where Paul had labored and preached the gospel soon after his conversion. Doubtless his native Tarsus was among the places which he now visited; but no details have been preserved of his actings there. Next, striking up in a northwesterly course, through one of the "gates" or passes of the Taurus, he returned to Derbe and Lystra. Great must have been his joy to find his young friend Timothy so strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus, and so well reported of by the brethren both at Lystra and Iconium. It would be with mingled emotions of joy and sorrow that his grandmother and mother saw Timothy depart with Paul and Silas. Striking into Galatia, Paul entered on new ground, and came among quite a new race. The Galatians, as the first syllable of their name implies, were of Gallic origin; four centuries before their ancestors had worshipped under the oaks of Gaul. They had been borne along in an emigration that at last brought them from the west of Europe to the west of Asia.

After traversing Phrygia and Galatia, it would have been natural for Paul to direct his course to the great seaport of Ephesus, but "they were forbidden by the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia." Bithynia, too, seemed closed against them. The only district to which they had access was Troas, which still preserved the immortal name of Troy. In a vision Paul heard a voice saying, "Come over into Macedonia and help us." That cry of distress was not to be disregarded. Next morning Paul and his companions, of whom the beloved physician Luke was now one, might be seen on the quay of Troas, eagerly inquiring for the first ship to Macedonia. The wind wafts them through the seas that bore, 500 years before, the magnificent armada of Xerxes. The story of the shepherd's sling and stone is again about to be realized. These four humble men in the Trojan ship are to accomplish what the millions of Xerxes failed to accomplish—conquer Greece and Europe too. The first campaign of the gospel of Jesus Christ in Europe was fought in Macedonia; Philippi, Thessalonica, and Berea were the principal battle-fields. A woman in middle life, the head of a house—a girl possessed by a demon—and a cruel jailer, were among the persons first struck down at Philippi by the arrows of the King.

From Philippi the apostle proceeded to Thessalonica, an important seaport, with a Jewish synagogue. From this busy place the holy fame of the new religion, which was embraced by many of the old Pagans, sounded out through all the neighboring districts of Macedonia on the north and Achaia on the south. But persecution drove Paul from Thessalonica, as it had driven him from Philippi. He took refuge in the provincial town of Berea, where, through the diligent study of the Scriptures, many Jews were converted, and also some of the principal Gentiles. The signs of another gathering storm led the brethren in haste to send Paul away, while Silas and Timothy remained at Berea. A ship bound for Athens conveyed the apostle from the shore, where Olympus, dark with woods, rises from the plain to the broad summit glittering with snow, which was the home of the Homeric gods. On three different spots Paul bore testimony to the truth at Athens. The first was the synagogue of the Jews; the next was a more public platform—the Agora or market-place—the common meeting-place of the Athenians. Some of the philosophers who heard Paul here, wishing to listen to him in a quieter and more solemn place, took him to Areopagus, or Mars' Hill. Here he summoned the proud and haughty Stoic to repent of all his wickedness, and foretold the coming of a terrible day of retribution by God's Son; of which the certain pledge had been given to all men, in that he had raised him from the dead.

Paul had paid his visit to Athens alone; but at Corinth, to which he next proceeded, he was joined by Silas and Timothy. Here Paul had great success. Crispus, the ruler of a synagogue, became a convert—a circumstance that must have caused great excitement. Yet Paul's spirit was burdened and depressed. That which distressed him was the bitter and blasphemous opposition to the truth which the Jews were ever exciting. But the Lord mercifully encouraged him in a vision, and for a year and a half he continued to labor at Corinth. It was now that he wrote his two epistles to the Thessalonians—the earliest of all his recorded letters. At last, having a strong desire to be present at one of the festivals at Jerusalem, he set sail for the holy city, taking Ephesus on his way. Promising to try to return to Ephesus, he went on to Jerusalem, and after his visit returned to Antioch, thus completing his second great missionary tour.

The third missionary campaign of the apostle, during all of which he had Timothy for his companion, opened in Phrygia and Galatia, where he had been before. But the chief place to which his attention was directed in this tour was Ephesus. Sorcery or magic—an importation of the East—was exceedingly common. Diana, a goddess of the West, was the great object of worship; but the style of worship had in it much of oriental mystery and magnificence. On leaving Ephesus, Paul first went to Troas, where he preached with great success; then proceeded to Macedonia and the countries of Greece lying to the north. He seems at this time to have been in a dejected state of mind. At Philippi he wrote the Second Epistle to the Corinthians. He was now actively engaged in a scheme for collecting money for the poor believers in Judæa, designed to show the good-will of the Gentiles, and to soften down the bitter feeling of the Jewish Church towards their uncircumcised brethren. Three months were then spent in Corinth; and the Epistle to the Romans was written, and despatched by Phebe.

Leaving Europe, Paul now directed his course to Jerusalem. He proceeded by sea, and his voyage was full of interest. After spending a week at Troas, taking a most affectionate farewell of the Ephesian Christians at Miletus, and touching at Coos, Rhodes and Patara, the apostle and his companions sailed to Tyre. A church had existed there since the persecution at the death of Stephen, and there were now not only Christians but prophets in what had once been a great stronghold of Baal and Ashtaroth. Leaving Tyre, the party saluted the brethren at Ptolemais, and at length reached Cæsarea. From that place, in opposition to the remonstrances of the Evangelist Philip and other friends, who dreaded the excited feelings of the Jews, Paul travelled to Jerusalem, where he was received kindly by James and the elders, and refreshed them by telling what God had been doing among the Gentiles.

We can only refer in general terms to the occurrences that took place while Paul was in Palestine. The hatred towards him of that part of the Church which was leavened with the spirit of the Pharisees found a speedy outlet. On a false clamor being raised, he was beaten by the people in the temple; rescued, however, by the Roman soldiers, and carried to the neighboring fort and barrack of Antonia; there he was about to be put on the rack, but escaped the torture by declaring himself a Roman citizen; was tried before the Sanhedrim, as Stephen had been twenty-five years before, when he was himself a virulent persecutor; received in a vision a cheering promise of protection from God; and a plot against his life being discovered, was sent, with a large escort, by night, to the Roman capital, Cæsarea. The Roman governor, resident at Cæsarea at this time, was Claudius Felix, an unscrupulous, sensual profligate, whose wife Drusilla was a daughter of Herod Agrippa I. On his first appearance before Felix, Paul was remanded, under pretense of being tried again; the next time, in presence of Drusilla, he made Felix tremble, as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come; after that he was kept a prisoner at Cæsarea for two years. At the end of that period Felix was recalled from Palestine, and Porcius Festus sent as governor in his room. Paul was now tried again, and on this occasion took his memorable appeal to Cæsar.

The record of Paul's voyage to Rome, in the twenty-seventh chapter of Acts, is remarkably interesting. The vessel, on leaving the great dock constructed by Herod at Cæsarea, touched at Sidon; then passing to the north of Cyprus, through the Gulfs of Cilicia and Pamphylia, afforded the apostle a view, probably his last, of his native mountains. At Myra, in Lycia, a ship was found chartered for Rome, to which the prisoners were transferred. After creeping along slowly as far as Cnidus, adverse winds forced the ship out of her direct course, compelling her to pass southward, under lee of the island of Crete, as far as the harbor called Fair Havens. After waiting long for a favorable breeze, the vessel set sail, but had not proceeded far when she was caught by a furious gale from the northeast. The crew seem to have turned round the right side of the vessel to the wind, and allowed her to be carried along, on the starboard tack, in a westerly direction. In the circumstances it is reckoned that she would drift at the rate of about a mile and a half in the hour. After a fortnight of discomfort and terror that can hardly be conceived, the sailors became sensible, one midnight, that they were approaching land. The ship was immediately anchored astern, and daylight anxiously waited for. When it came, it was observed that a creek ran into the shore. Into this creek the vessel was attempted to be run; but in the attempt her bow stuck fast in the bottom. Partly by swimming, and partly through the aid of boards and broken pieces of the ship, all the passengers, who were two hundred and seventy-six in number, got safely to land.

The island on which the ship was cast was Malta, now a part of the British possessions. The bay where the shipwreck occurred still bears the name of St. Paul; and all the circumstances of the shipwreck, as recorded in the Acts, agree wonderfully with existing appearances. The island was inhabited by a people of Phœnician origin. After spending three months among them, Paul and his companions embarked in another vessel; touched at Syracuse in Sicily; had to wait at Rhegium for a favorable wind to carry them through the Straits of Messina; and at last, after gazing on the smoking crater of Vesuvius and the lovely scenery of the Bay of Naples, landed at Puteoli. From this seaport to Rome, a distance of 150 miles, the apostle travelled by land. At Appii Forum, 50 miles from Rome, and again at the Three Taverns, deputations from the Christians of the city came to offer to the great apostle of the Gentiles the expression of their deep regard and affection. For two years he continued a prisoner, dwelling in his own lodging, but constantly chained to a Roman soldier. At last his trial came on; most probably it was conducted in the immediate presence of Nero. It is from Paul's epistles we learn that he was set free.

It is generally believed that from Rome he went to Asia Minor, and from that to Macedonia. He seems then to have gone to Spain, where he is thought to have spent two years. Returning to Ephesus, he found matters in a somewhat critical condition. In Crete, too, which he visited about this time, he found much cause for anxiety. False teachers were busy perverting the truth and sapping the foundations of Christianity. Paul had hoped to spend the winter at Nicopolis, in Macedonia; but he was not allowed to remain there. He was arrested on a new charge, and hurried to Rome to stand a second trial. Since he had been last at Rome, Nero had conducted himself in a very shameful way. More than half the city had been burned by an awful fire, which lasted for six days, and which some ascribe to Nero himself. The blame was laid by him upon the Christians, who were now an exceedingly numerous body. A frightful persecution raged against them. Some were crucified; some disguised in the skins of beasts, and hunted to death with dogs; some were wrapped in robes impregnated with inflammable materials, and set on fire at night, that they might serve to illuminate the circus of the Vatican and the gardens of Nero, where this diabolical monster exhibited the agonies of his victims to the public, and gloated over them. The number who perished was very great. Paul's privileges on his second confinement seem to have been much smaller than on his first. The Second Epistle to Timothy was now written by him, in the full expectation of being offered up. When brought to trial, in presence of a large number of leading men, he was enabled to make a bold statement of the gospel. But no defence could avail against the will of Nero. The apostle, on being called a second time, was condemned. Near the spot now occupied by the English cemetery, his head was struck from his body. Devout men carried the headless corpse to the catacombs, or subterranean vaults below Rome, to which in after times the martyrs used often to fly for concealment. There, in some unknown vault, rests the body of the greatest of the apostles, awaiting the fulfilment of the words so nobly applied by himself—"Death shall be swallowed up in victory."

ERBEN'S INTRODUCTION TO THE HOLY SCRIPTURES.

A NEW AND CONCISE HISTORY

OF ALL THE

BOOKS OF THE HOLY BIBLE,

CAREFULLY COMPILED FROM THE MOST RECENT AND HIGHEST AUTHORITIES.

BY THE

REV. WASHINGTON B. ERBEN.

WITH NUMEROUS SUPERB ILLUSTRATIONS.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1873, by HUBBARD BROS., of Philadelphia, in the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE.

THE Holy Bible is composed of many separate Books by different writers. These Books were written by Divine inspiration at different periods, at places widely distant, and under the most varied circumstances. They cover the religious history of the world during several thousands of years in the past, and foretell the events which are to occur in the distant future. While, however, the reverent student of the Sacred Scriptures will find his comprehensions of their true import assisted by a knowledge of the place where, and the time when each Book was written—the personal history of the author of each Book, and the circumstances by which the writer was surrounded—he will also become more deeply conscious of the unity of the Holy Scriptures.

The Books are numerous, there being thirty-nine Canonical Books in the Old Testament, and twenty-seven Books in the New Testament, according to the Authorized Version; they are distinguished by strongly marked characteristics; but they are all links in one connected chain of Divine Revelation. The veil which obstructs our vision of the Deity here seems to be slightly raised, and in His Word the believer is shown that all events which occur, and all actions that are performed, are under the scrutiny and control of the Almighty.

The grand design of the Holy Scriptures is to reveal the Lord Jesus Christ, God's Blessed Son, as the Saviour of mankind. From the record of the Fall of man, and the promise of the Seed of the woman Who should bruise the serpent's head, which appears in Genesis, to the vision recorded in the Apocalypse, which reveals the Lamb of God in the Heavenly Temple engaged there in His Divine and effectual intercession for His people, the Messiah and Redeemer is held up as the source and centre of all true religious hope: In the Law, the Psalms, the Prophecies, and the Gospels; in type and antitype, with more or less distinctness, the work and person of Christ are described. It is this clear revelation of God's dear Son, in His work of Atonement and Redemption, in all the fulness of His Redeeming Love and saving grace, which makes the Word of God so unspeakably precious to every one of God's people. His Word is a "Light unto our paths," and those who humbly walk in the light of God's own Word shall hereafter be exalted, and see in His glory Him who declared Himself to be the "Light of the World."

THE BOOK OF GENESIS.

GENESIS (generation, or genealogy) is the first of the Five Books of Moses. The title of the Book is taken from the Greek, and is applied to this portion of the Holy Scriptures, because it contains a history of the Creation of the World, and the genealogy of the Patriarchs. The first five Books of the Holy Bible,—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy,—being the work of a single author, are usually grouped together and entitled "The Pentateuch," a word taken from the Alexandrine Greek signifying the five-fold Book;—by the ancient Jewish Rabbis, it is said, they were called the five-fifths of the Law.

The Mosaic authorship of these Books is settled by the concurrent testimony of all ages; by the frequent references to them in the New Testament, where the fact that they were written by Moses seems to be implied; and by the fact that a declaration to this effect has ever been an article of belief among the Jews.

Moses, the great Prophet and Lawgiver of the Children of Israel, was born in the year 1571 B. C., and died in the year 1451 B. C. These Books were written after the departure of the Israelites from Egypt, and before their settlement in the land of Canaan, consequently between the years 1491 and 1451 B. C.

Genesis, according to the received chronology, records the history of the world for a period of 2369 years, or thereabouts; i. e. from the Creation of the World, in the year 4004

B. C., to the death of the Patriarch Joseph in Egypt, in the year 1635 B. C.

In the portion of the Book beginning with chap. i. 1, and ending at chap. ii. 3, there is found an account of the Creation, and the seven-fold division of time. The Bible account of the Creation is evidently not intended primarily to be a scientific account; but the order of the events stated as having occurred at the Creation, is found to be in harmony with the conclusions of the most learned scientists. The Bible account of the Creation is primarily and chiefly a religious account. Whenever the world was made, God created it; and however it was created, whether by prolonged processes, covering very protracted periods; or in briefer periods and by more condensed and accelerated processes, still the declaration of the Bible is the same, God created it. This announcement occupies this first, very distinctly marked section of the Book of Genesis. It is evidently the result of Divine revelation, for there could have been no human observer present "In the beginning," to record at the time, the processes and wonders attendant upon the creation of the heaven and the earth. But by inspiration God revealed to Moses such knowledge as enabled him to write, for the information of succeeding generations, an account of the Creation, and the early history of mankind.

In the succeeding portions the Book of Genesis records the general history of the descendants of Adam,—the Fall of Man, the banishment from the Garden of Eden, the widespread prevalence of sin, the Flood, and the preservation of Noah and his family in the Ark. From the beginning of the twelfth chapter, however, the history of the Book of Genesis takes a much narrower range, and is centred chiefly upon the patriarch Abraham, his descendants, and those with whom they were brought in contact. Jehovah selected Abraham, who is called in the New Testament "the Friend of God" (St. James ii. 23), made with him the Covenant, and gave to him the Promise, that "in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed," Gen. xxii. 18.

The history of Isaac, comparatively quiet and uneventful, apart from his being offered in his youth on Mount Moriah as a type and prefiguration of the offering and sacrifice of Christ;—the history of Jacob or Israel, and his twelve sons, who became the progenitors and heads of the twelve tribes of Israel;—and the memorable story of Joseph and his Brethren, occupy most of the remaining portions of the Book.

The Book of Genesis is quoted and referred to very frequently in the later Books of the Old Testament, and in numerous places in the New Testament Scriptures. The exegetical interpretation of the Book, and the critical discussion of doctrinal points, it is not our intention to undertake; but it is worthy of special notice on the part of every reader of this portion of God's Holy Word, to observe the connection which many of the revelations, and the historical statements found in Genesis, have with the Christian doctrines of the New Testament. In the very beginning of this Book, as soon as the presence of sin in the world is announced, we find the promise given that the "Seed" of the woman should bruise the Serpent's head, and thus have at the very outset of this divinely given history a prophecy of the Messiah; and this prediction of Christ's triumph over the Evil One was fulfilled by His Incarnation, Death, Resurrection and Ascension:—"Forasmuch as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, He also Himself likewise took part of the same; that through death He might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the Devil," Heb. ii. 14. Soon after this we find an announcement of the Promise given to, and the Covenant made with Abraham, which St. Paul explicitly declares is fulfilled in our Lord Jesus Christ:—"To Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ," Gal. iii. 16.

These prophecies and promises give us, as it were, the very key-note of all the Sacred Scriptures, and let us see from their beginning their high purpose and chief design. The Bible is not intended to give us simply the ordinary and superficial history of the world. It has the higher and grander purpose of disclosing our relations to the Deity, and His disposition towards us, and of revealing to all generations "God's remedy for man's ruin,"—a remedy which appears in the Person and Work of our Lord Jesus Christ. This Divine plan for man's redemption, which appears in the very beginning of the Word in Prophecy, Promise, Covenant and Type, grows clearer and brighter in the later Prophets and in the Gospels, but it pervades all the Books of the Bible from Genesis to the very close of the Revelation of St. John; and the chief glory of the Word of God is the light which it throws upon, or receives from, the Grace and Redeeming Love of the Son of God.

Apart from the strictly religious and distinctively theological characteristics of the Book of Genesis, it is remarkable how many principles and facts are stated in this venerable and holy Book, which influence to a great or lesser degree the institutions and the customs of the people of all civilized nations. The sanctity of human life, the marriage relations, the reverent burial of the dead, the adoration of the Deity, and the observance of the seventh day as a day of rest and worship, are all acknowledged in the earlier chapters of Genesis. The separation of the Jews from the whole Gentile world, a distinction still strongly marked and easily to be discerned, appears first in this Book; and the continued preservation of the lineal descendants of Abraham in the world, with their clearly marked identity, is one of the strongest external evidences of the truth of the Holy Scriptures.

Israel in Terra Ægypti. When Jehovah had distinctly marked Israel as his chosen family, then by a series of strange providences, which are recorded in the last fourteen chapters of Genesis, Jacob and all his family went down into Egypt. Their removal to that country, and their prolonged sojourn there, was a part of God's plan to prepare them for their after history. They learned the arts of a higher civilization, among a people with whom they could not intermingle, and by the discipline of affliction the family was consolidated into a nation.

THE BOOK OF EXODUS.

EXODUS (the going forth, or departure) receives its name from the Greek word signifying the "departing," and this title indicates the subject matter of this Book. The Jews generally distinguish this, as they do the other Books of Moses, by the initial words of the original Hebrew. This Book takes up the history of the descendants of Jacob, in Egypt, and narrates their wonderful deliverance. It covers a period of about one hundred and forty-five years, from the death of Joseph, in 1635 u. c., to the erection of the Tabernacle, in 1490 u. c. With this Book begins the history of the children of Israel as a nation, and it has been said, by an eminent German historian, "the real history of the world begun on the night when Moses led forth the children of Israel from the land of Egypt;" for, from that point the history of the Bible becomes more particular and connected than before.

Exodus naturally divides itself into two sections, the first of which, comprising the first eighteen chapters, is chiefly historical ;

the other section, comprising the remaining thirty-two chapters, is rather legislative, and narrates the giving of the Ten Commandments and the Law, and the establishment of the Mosaic economy; with its Tabernacle and Priesthood.

The earlier chapters narrate the great increase of Jacob's posterity in Egypt, their sufferings, the birth and calling of Moses, the Ten Plagues, and the Institution of the Passover. An account follows of the Exodus, the passage of the Red Sea, the destruction of Pharaoh and his host, and of the other memorable events which occurred during the march of the Israelites to Mount Sinai. There, in the plain at the foot of the mountain, amid the awful cliffs, they encamped and awaited the giving of the Law. "Never in the history of the world was there such a scene as that plain presented. A whole nation was assembled, alone with God."

The closing chapters record the giving of the Law at Mount Sinai, the establishment of the Theocracy, the various statutes, civil and ceremonial, which were announced; and the Book ends with a description of the setting up of the Tabernacle. In this Book we have a foreshadowing of man's redemption through the atoning blood of Christ. The Ten Commandments are the unchangeable Moral Law of God for the government of the whole world; and the Passover is significant of Christ's death. Besides the Passover Lamb, many other types of Christ can be found in Exodus, such as the manna, and the smitten rock.

THE BOOK OF LEVITICUS.

LEVITICUS (Levitical, pertaining to the Levites). The Third Book of Moses is entitled Leviticus, because it is chiefly taken up with the laws which were to govern the Levites, including the whole body of priests, who were entrusted with the performance of the ceremonial and sacrificial rites of the worship of the Tabernacle. In this Book we see God's provision for the religious worship of His people. The Laws it contains cover a wide range of subjects, and appear to be designed: (1) to oppose idolatry and false worship, so prevalent in the heathen world; and (2) to prefigure by various rites and typical ceremonies the more spiritual worship of the New Covenant, which is developed in the Gospel, and is the result of the manifestation of the Lord Jesus Christ.

THE BOOK OF NUMBERS.

NUMBERS (the numberings). The Fourth Book of Moses is entitled Numbers, because it records two different takings of a census of the people. The first of these numberings, or musterings of the Children of Israel, took place at Mount Sinai, in the second year after their departure from Egypt; and the second, in the plains of Moab towards the conclusion of their forty years' wandering in the wilderness.

The Book of Numbers records some of the most memorable events in the history of the Children of Israel, and it is frequently referred to in the New Testament. Our Lord applies to Himself the typical lifting up of the Brazen Serpent. (compare Numbers xxi. 9 with St. John iii. 14); and the remarkable prophecy of Balaam, "There shall come a star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel," (Numb. xxiv. 17), is regarded as referring to the coming of the Messiah. In its Types the Book of Numbers is very rich;—God numbered his people, and gathered them around Himself; and He dwelt in midst of them.

THE BOOK OF DEUTERONOMY.

DEUTERONOMY (Second Law, or repetition of the Law). This Book consists of three discourses delivered by Moses in the plains of Moab, in the eleventh month of the fortieth year from the time of the Exodus, followed by the Song of Moses, and the account of his death. At Horeb Moses had the great work of his life before him; now, at the expiration of forty years, he had organized a nation on the basis of a Theocracy and brought it to the borders of the land of promise. Not permitted himself to enter Canaan with them, he recapitulates their history, repeats the precepts of the Law, announces the attendant blessings and curses, and closes with a Song of Praise to God the Rock, and a Blessing upon the twelve tribes, which are in the loftiest strain of inspiration, poetry, and prophecy.

The final chapter, describing the death of Moses, the great Prophet and Law Giver, is believed to have been added by a later writer of the Holy Scriptures, either by the successor of Moses or by Ezra.

THE HISTORICAL BOOKS.

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA.

THE Book of Joshua opens a new field in the Sacred History. It records the passage of the Jordan, the conquest and partition of Canaan, God's confirmation of Joshua as successor to Moses, the renewal of the Covenant, and the setting up of the Tabernacle at Shiloh. The settlement of the Israelites in Canaan is, of itself, a remarkable fulfilment of the promises given to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the first of which had been made to Abraham about four hundred and sixty years before. The Book of Joshua covers a period of about thirty years, from 1451 n. c. to 1420 n. c., and is so entitled because it records the deeds of Joshua, and because the greater part of it was probably written by him.

Joshua himself is usually regarded as a type of Christ. The Hebrew name Joshua is identical with the Greek name Jesus, and both have the same meaning, a Saviour. The land of Canaan is also in some respects regarded as being a type of heaven.

THE BOOK OF JUDGES.

"THE Lord raised up Judges, which delivered them out of the hand of those that spoiled them," Judges ii. 16. The Book of Judges contains the history of a somewhat undeterminate period, covering the interval between the death of Joshua and the time of Samuel the Prophet. The chronology is not exactly determined, and the last five chapters record sundry events, the date of which is not given. For several hundred years the twelve tribes were in a disorganized condition, there was no single leader to rule over them, and the kingly government which had been intimated in the Pentateuch was not yet inaugurated. They declined at times from the true worship of Jehovah, and the idolaters remaining in the land overran and oppressed them. To deliver them, God raised up at various times, by special providences, leaders to rule over them and save them. These were called "Judges," but the word implies military guidance as well as judicial functions. The record of their actions is found in the first sixteen chapters of the Book. Among the thirteen Judges whose names and deeds are stated appear those of Barak (associated with the prophetess Deborah); of Gideon, who overthrew the altar erected to Baal, discomfited the hosts of Midian, and declined the proffered rank of an hereditary king, viii. 22; of Jephthah; and of Samson, who by his personal prowess overcame the Philistines.

THE BOOK OF RUTH.

THE Book of Ruth not only gives a most exquisite and graphic description of rural tranquillity, and domestic virtue and affection, but also supplies an important link in the chain of the Sacred History. Ruth, the Moabitess, voluntarily left her people and her gods, and said to Naomi, "Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." This act of constancy and this cheerful acceptance of, and ready trust in Jehovah, resulted in her marrying Boaz, and becoming the mother of a son, Obed, the father of Jesse, the father of David. The chief reason for the introduction of this Book into the canonical Scriptures was this important genealogical information. By it we are enabled to trace the lineage of Christ, "the son of David," through an unbroken line.

THE FIRST BOOK OF SAMUEL.

THE First Book of Samuel records the establishment of the monarchy and the selection of Saul, the first king of Israel; and the alter history sweeps over the whole of the varied history of the kings of Israel and of Judah, with a faithful and often picturesque narration of the fortunes of the people, their wars, defeats, and victories; their sins and punishments; their deliverances and their conquests. The whole idea of government by a king was, in their case, to some extent abnormal. It was a departure from the pure Theocracy, or direct government of God, and was permitted in response to their own desire that they might have a king over them, to judge them, and to go out before them and fight their battles, that they might be like other nations, "when the Lord their God was their king." At a later day, after the return from the Captivity, the Theocracy was again restored, and never again violated in principle until Herod usurped the kingdom.

SAMUEL was the fifteenth and last of the Judges, and the first in the regular succession of Prophets, which appears never to have ceased until after the return from Babylon.

The First Book of Samuel covers a period of about one hundred and fifteen years, from the birth of Samuel in 1171 B. C. to the death of Saul, 1056 B. C. It gives an account of the history of Samuel, the capture and return of the Ark of the Covenant, the reign of Saul, and the earlier history of David, who was anointed to be Saul's successor. The hymn of Hannah furnishes a grand prophecy of Christ:—

"The Lord shall judge the end of the earth;
And He shall give strength unto His King,
And exalt the horn of His Anointed" (Isa. Messiah).

THE SECOND BOOK OF SAMUEL.

THE Second Book of Samuel is closely connected with the preceding and following Books, and embraces the history of about forty years, i. e., from 1056 B. C. to 1016 B. C. From this period the city of Jerusalem stands out more prominently in the Bible history, not only as the capital of the kingdom, and its chief fortress, but as the site of the Tabernacle, afterwards replaced by the Temple;—"the hill of Zion, the Holy Mountain of our God."

THE FIRST BOOK OF KINGS.

THE interest in the history of the kingdom of Israel becomes more intense, as the period is approached when that kingdom reached the culmination of its glory under the rule of Solomon. The opening chapters describe the accession of Solomon to the throne of Israel, the building and consecration of the Temple, and the other prominent events of his reign, which began in 1015 B. C., and ended with his death in 975 B. C. During the reign of his son Rehoboam, the kingdom was divided, and every intelligent reader of the Bible will, after this point in the Sacred History, carefully distinguish between the kingdom of Judah, composed of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, and having Jerusalem as its capital, and the rival kingdom of Israel, composed of the remaining ten tribes, which had revolted.

THE SECOND BOOK OF KINGS.

THE Second Book of Kings continues the history begun in the First Book. It covers a period of about three hundred years, from 896 B. C. to 586 B. C.; according to the received chronology, arranged by Archbishop Ussher, and printed in the margin of the English Bible.

In 721 B. C., the kingdom of Israel was destroyed by the king of Assyria, who carried away the Ten Tribes as captives, and from that time these "lost tribes" of Israel disappear from history. In 586 B. C., the kingdom of Judah was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, the Babylonian monarch, who broke down the walls of Jerusalem, burned the city and the Temple, and carried off the citizens.

This Book also narrates the history of Elisha; and other prophets are mentioned, who were raised up by the Lord during this period.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES.

THE First and Second Books of Chronicles in the original Hebrew formed but one book, as was also the case with the two Books of Samuel, and the two Books of Kings. The Book of Chronicles was evidently written soon after the return from the captivity, and is a compendious history of the Jewish people.

By means of the various genealogies found in different parts of the Scriptures, the line of descent from Abraham to Christ can be distinctly traced.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES.

THE Second Book of Chronicles continues the epitome of the Sacred History which was begun in the First Book, and carries on the history of the kingdom of Judah, until its overthrow by Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, in the year 586 B. C. This Book is devoted chiefly to the history of the kingdom of Judah, and the other rival kingdom of Israel is only mentioned incidentally when the two come into conflict. The scope of the Book is substantially the same as that of the First and Second Books of Kings; in many passages the language is identical, but some portions are supplementary. This Book was written at a later period, and in the Hebrew Canon the Books of Chronicles stand last in order. It contains very full and specific directions in regard to the details of the public worship of the Temple, written, it is believed, with special regard to the re-establishment of the services at the return from the Captivity, and the rebuilding of the Temple.

The first nine chapters are devoted to the history of Solomon. The magnificence of his kingdom attracted honorable visitors from most distant quarters. Among the most memorable of these was the Queen of Sheba, whose visit is recorded in chap. ix. 1-12.

EZRA.

THE Book of Ezra takes up the history of the Jewish people at the point reached at the close of the Second Book of the Chronicles, and carries it on over a period of nearly eighty years, from about the year 536 B. C. to 457 B. C. The writer of the Book was himself a priest, a descendant of a long line of priests, who had been permitted to return to Jerusalem after the end of the Captivity, and was invested by the monarch of Persia with the governorship of the Jews, chap. vii. 12. He was accompanied on his return, which took place in about 457 B. C., by a number of the Israelites who availed themselves of the liberty given them to rejoin their brethren, and they brought with them a large free-will offering of gold, and silver, and silver vessels, contributed, not only by the Babylonian Jews, but by the king himself and by his counselors, and intended to enrich and adorn the Temple, which by this time had been rebuilt.

Ezra was "a ready scribe in the Law of Moses," "he had prepared his heart to seek the law of the LORD, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments," and his special commission from the king directed him "to teach the laws of his God to such as knew them not." This Book consists of three distinct parts; the first describes the return of the Jews from their captivity in Babylon under the charge of Zerubbabel (whose Chaldaic name was Sheshbazzar), who, upon the issuing of Cyrus' decree, immediately availed himself of it, and placed himself at the head of those of his countrymen "whose spirit God had raised to go up to build the House of the Lord which is in Jerusalem;" the second part gives an account of the rebuilding and dedication of the Temple; and the third relates the journey of Ezra himself to Jerusalem, and his efforts to restore the true worship of Jehovah to its purity.

There is cumulative evidence that Ezra rendered most important service in collecting, carefully editing, and distributing the canonical Scriptures, which, with the exception of the writings of Nehemiah and Malachi, were already extant.

The LORD turned again the captivity of Zion. The deliverance of the Jews from captivity, like the Captivity itself, was a most remarkable fulfilment of prophecy: compare Isaiah xlv. 28 and Jeremiah xxv. 12; xxix. 10. Their captivity had been the punishment sent by the Lord for their sins; their return was a token of His power, and mercy and truth. The results of the Captivity are apparent in their after history. The distinction of the tribes ceases to appear, except in their pedigrees. It is pretty certain that members of all the twelve tribes found their way back to Palestine, but all of the holy nation were henceforth called, simply, Jews. In theory, at least, the Theocracy was again accepted, and no attempt was made to re-establish the Jewish monarchy, until the kingly title was usurped by Herod in 40 B. C.

THE TEMPLE.—This Book gives an account of the rebuilding of the Temple. No other building in the world has so largely affected the religious sentiments of mankind as the Temple of the Lord at Jerusalem. For many generations it was the centre of all true and acceptable worship of Jehovah, and since its final destruction, many most sacred memories cluster around it, and the deepest interest is felt in regard to it. The Tabernacle, or movable Temple, was constructed by Moses according to the pattern which God showed to him in the mount. The first, or Solomon's Temple, was an exact repetition of the Tabernacle, only constructed of more durable material, larger and more magnificent, and built on Mount Zion. When completed it stood forth in all its grandeur and beauty as one of the wonders of the world, the pride of the Jewish nation, and the glory of the whole earth. The second, or Zerubbabel's Temple, was somewhat larger in its dimensions than the Temple of Solomon, but far less rich in its ornaments and furniture. In this Temple, the inner sanctuary, or Holy of Holies, was empty, for the Ark of the Covenant had been lost or destroyed when Nebuchadnezzar destroyed the first Temple. The third, or Herod's Temple, it is believed, was not a new edifice, but rather an enlargement of the second Temple. This is the Temple which was standing in Jerusalem in the time of Christ, and was destroyed by the Romans in the year 70 A. D.

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH.

THIS is the last of the Historical Books of the Old Testament, and covers a period of about twelve years, from 445 B. C. to 433 B. C. Though the Temple had been rebuilt, the walls of Jerusalem were in such a ruinous condition that the city lay exposed to frequent attacks and incursions. Nehemiah, who held a high office in the court of the Persian king, hearing of the lamentable condition of his brethren in Judea, asked permission to visit them, and was appointed to the governorship of the province.

The Book of Nehemiah describes the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem, and the efforts made at religious reformation. The rise of two religious factions, the one adhering closely to the Mosaic institutions, and the other adopting Gentile opinions and customs, is noticed, and these discordant views were developed in the later history of the Jewish sects, the Pharisees, Sadducees, Herodians, and Essenes.

The various researches of individuals and exploring expeditions, and the remarkable advance during the present century in the art of deciphering the hieroglyphics and cuneiform inscriptions on the ancient monuments and ruins which exist in Bible lands, have thrown great additional light on the Sacred History, and it is one of the most conclusive of the external evidences of Religion, to know that each new fact, as it is brought to light, is but another proof of the truth and correctness of the general statements of the historical books of the Holy Bible.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

THE Book of Esther is occupied chiefly with an account of the deliverance of the Jews from an awful impending danger during the reign of Ahasuerus. This monarch is identified as Xerxes, memorable in secular history for his repulse from Greece, and this fixes the time of the event in about the year 474 B. C.

The Book of Esther narrates the malice of Haman; his plot to secure the destruction of all the Jews throughout the empire; the successful intercession of Esther in their behalf; the triumph of Mordecai; the punishment of Haman; and the institution by the Jews of an annual festival, the Feast of Purim, in commemoration of their deliverance, which is still observed by them.

The name of God does not occur in this Book, but the mourning and fasting, and the rejoicing and feasting of the Jews, indicate a religious spirit. Haman's miserable death is often referred to, and hardly any scene of Scripture history is more often applied to a spiritual use, than the bold venture of Esther into the presence of the king, and his reaching out to her the golden sceptre as a sign of grace.

THE POETICAL BOOKS.

THE Book of Job, the Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon, are usually grouped together under the title of "The Poetical Books," because they are almost entirely composed in Hebrew verse. These five books, and several other of the books of the Old Testament, are classified under the Greek title of the Hagiographa (holy writings).

THE BOOK OF JOB.—The oldest book of the Bible—the oldest authentic and original book in the world! Though no date is given in this book, from internal evidence it has always been regarded as being unquestionably the oldest book of the Scriptures. The total absence of any reference to the Exodus or to the Mosaic Law, the multitude of obsolete words, and the archaic idiom of the Hebrew in which it is written, prove, according to the surest canons of criticism, that the book belongs to an earlier age. Though this book is highly allegorical, the fact that Job was a real person is indicated by references to him in the writings of Ezekiel and St. James.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS.—"Te decet hymnus, Deus, in Sion." That which the Temple of God was to the Israelites as a place for worship, the Book of Psalms has ever been to all the people of God as the treasury of devotional expression. There are no feelings of religious joy, of penitence, of trust, but find here their most fitting and happiest expression.

The Book contains one hundred and fifty Psalms, of which the greater part were written by David, the royal Psalmist and sweet Singer of Israel. The remainder were composed at various times by other sacred writers. No portion of the Scriptures was so familiar to the Jews, and our blessed Lord frequently referred to them, and quoted from them prophetic allusions to Himself.

THE BOOK OF PROVERBS.—The superscriptions affixed to several portions of this Book attribute the authorship to Solomon, except the last two chapters, which were written by Agur and Lemuel. The book consists of short, terse sayings, compiled doubtless from the writings of Solomon, of whom it is said, "He spake three thousand Proverbs; and his Songs were a thousand and five." (1 Kings, iv. 32.)

ECCLESIASTES; OR, THE PREACHER.—This Book is believed to have been written by Solomon in his old age, and to be an account of his own experience, as well as an instruction for others.

THE SONG OF SOLOMON.—The "Song of Songs, or Canticles," is a highly poetical allegory, which mystically describes the love of Christ for His Church.

THE PROPHETICAL BOOKS.

THE Old Testament contains the writings of sixteen Prophets, of which four, viz., Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel, are usually called the Greater Prophets, and the remaining twelve are grouped together under the title of the Minor Prophets. This distinction, however, refers rather to the size of the books, than to their relative importance. In the highest sense they are all the work of the same Author, the Holy Spirit, who inspired the various writers, and some of the most important predictions are found in the Minor Prophets.

From the time of Samuel to the close of the Old Testament history, there appear to have been, in addition to the sacerdotal order, organized "schools of the prophets," equivalent to Theological Seminaries, where numerous bodies of men were trained for the prophetic order. While they were not all inspired, nearly every one of those who was called to the prophetic office, seems to have been a member of the prophetic order. The general scope of the prophetic books was to denounce God's judgments upon the wicked; to foretell approaching afflictions; to deliver exhortations to repentance; and to utter predictions of the coming of the Messiah. The most essential characteristic of the Prophets is, that they were instruments of revealing God's will to man, as in other ways, so, specially, by predicting future events, and in particular by foretelling the Incarnation of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Redemption effected by Him.

ISAIAH.—The "Evangelical Prophet," so styled on account of the number and clearness of his predictions concerning the Saviour.

JEREMIAH.—The "Weeping Prophet," so-called on account of his personal afflictions, and the peculiar style of his writings. He prophesied in Judah during the reigns of Josiah, Shallum, Jehoiakim, Jeconiah, and Zedekiah, between 628 and 586 B. C. Much of his personal history is narrated in this Book. Many of his prophecies refer to the temporal fortunes of the people and kingdom, and some of them were fulfilled before his death, for he was a witness of the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. He foretells the calling of the Gentiles, and the mediatorial kingdom of the Messiah.

THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.—A mournful elegy expressive of the Prophet's sorrow at the desolation of Jerusalem.

EZEKIEL.—This great Prophet was a captive during the exile of the Jews, and all his prophecies were delivered during the period of the Babylonian Captivity. The predictions of Ezekiel are marvellously varied, and many of them which yet await fulfilment are of most difficult interpretation. In some of its peculiarities this Book is not unlike the Revelation of St. John.

DANIEL.—When a child, Daniel was carried as a captive to Babylon in 606 B. C., and lived until the third year of the reign of Cyrus, 534 B. C. This Book contains the history of Daniel; various prophecies respecting the four great monarchies of Assyria, Persia, Greece, and Rome; and very distinct prophecies of the Atonement of Christ, of the destruction of Jerusalem, and of the second glorious Advent of the "Son of Man."

THE MINOR PROPHETS.

HOSEA.—Hosea was a contemporary of Isaiah, and delivered his prophecies directly to the kingdom of the ten tribes—Israel; but in some portions the kingdom of Judah is included in the scope of his predictions. He prophesied in the interval between 809 B. C. and 719 B. C.

JOEL.—A Prophet of the kingdom of Judah, whose prophecies are believed to have been uttered at some period between the reigns of Uzziah and Manasseh. His predictions of approaching judgments are peculiarly earnest and strong, and the most terrible of them are applicable, in their secondary fulfilment, to the circumstances of the final Day of Judgment.

AMOS.—This prophet, according to his own declaration, did not belong to the prophetic order, but was called away from his rural employments by the LORD, who gave him a commission to prophesy to His people. His prophecies were delivered between 810 B. C. and 785 B. C. The captivity of the ten tribes is foretold, and the Messianic kingdom, and the calling of the Gentiles predicted. Compare ix. 11 and Acts xv. 16.

OBADIAH.—This brief prophecy is comprised in a single chapter, and is directed against the Edomites, whose destruction is foretold. The writer was a contemporary of the Prophets Jeremiah and Ezekiel.

JONAH.—This prophet is mentioned in 2 Kings xiv. 25, as prophesying in Israel, and predicting the successes of Jeroboam. The Book of Jonah is doubtless the oldest of the Minor Prophets, and is remarkable as being the record of a prophet sent, in that age, to the Gentiles.

MICAH.—The prophecies in this Book refer chiefly to Samaria and Jerusalem, and were delivered between 758 B. C. and 699 B. C. Some of the predictions, however, refer to events which occurred after the Christian era began. The birth-place of Christ, the divinity of the Messiah, the promulgation of the Gospel from Jerusalem, and the destruction of Jerusalem, are all very clearly announced. The style of Micah is bold, vehement, and abrupt, and he mingles stern rebukes and threatenings of the ungodly with glorious promises relating to the Messiah and His kingdom.

NAHUM.—The prophecy of Nahum, "the Elkoshite," is one entire poem, divided, in the English version, into three chapters, which opens with a sublime description of the power and justice of Jehovah, and then predicts the conquest of Nineveh, and its desolation by the invasion of foreign armies.

HABAKKUK.—The first two chapters of this Prophecy are highly dramatic in style, and contain the predictions against the Chaldeans. The final chapter is a most majestic and sublime Prayer or Psalm, of which the wondrous mercies of God is the theme.

ZEPHANIAH.—Zephaniah is believed to have been a contemporary of the prophet Jeremiah, and the topic dwelt upon is the same which is found in the writings of the latter.

HAGGAI.—The first of the Minor Prophets who prophesied after the Captivity. His immediate office was to encourage the builders of the second Temple, and his prophecies were all delivered at about the historical period covered by the fifth chapter of Ezra, in about the year 520 B. C.

ZECHARIAH.—This prophet was, for a time at least, associated with the prophet Haggai; compare Ezra vi. 14. This Book is very rich in expressions and predictions applicable to Messianic times, and many of its prophecies still await their fulfilment.

MALACHI.—This Book is the last of the Books of the Old Testament, and is called "the seal" of the Prophets, being the closing book of the Canon. Nothing is known of the personal history of the writer. The Book was written soon after the Book of Nehemiah, and between the years 436 and 397 B. C. The name Malachi signifies "my messenger," and this remarkable prophecy comes to us simply as a direct and inspired message from the Lord. The Prophet announces the coming of John the Baptist, and the manifestation of the "Sun of Righteousness, who should arise with healing in His wings." Our Lord Jesus Christ applies this prophecy to His own manifestation, and identifies His forerunner as the one spoken of. The prophetic utterances of that dispensation were completed. The Old had prepared the way for the New Testament; and with this clear announcement of the coming of the Messiah, it "expires with the Gospel on its tongue."

THE APOCRYPHA.

THE Books of the Apocrypha are fourteen in number, viz. : I Esdras ; II Esdras ; Tobit ; Judith ; The rest of the Chapters of the Book of Esther, which are found neither in the Hebrew nor in the Chaldee ; The Wisdom of Solomon ; Ecclesiasticus ; Baruch ; The Song of the Three Holy Children ; The History of Susanna ; The History of the Destruction of Bel and the Dragon ; The Prayer of Manasses, King of Judah ; I Maccabees ; II Maccabees.

These Books, though undoubtedly ancient, are not esteemed Canonical Books of the Holy Scriptures. They contain some historical information, but not of a character sufficiently correct to be relied upon. Other portions contain many excellent precepts; but taken altogether, when brought to the test applied to the accepted Books, the Apocrypha is so deficient in evidence as to authenticity, age, and inspiration of the writers, that it is not used in the establishment of any doctrines. Some of the books are not found in the Hebrew, and others cannot be traced back further than about the third century before the Christian era. None of them were admitted into the Hebrew Canon. The word "Apocrypha" signifies hidden or secret books; but no satisfactory explanation is given for the application of this term.

NEW TESTAMENT
OF
OUR LORD AND SAVIOUR
JESUS CHRIST.

---

THE BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

THE "New Covenant" is the Divine and august theme of these inspired writings. They record the manifestation of "Jesus, the Mediator of the New Covenant," and announce the blessings of the New Testament, which was sealed by the death of the Testator. The words "testament" and "covenant" are identical in the original, and the two general divisions of the Holy Bible may as appropriately be entitled the Old and New Covenants, as the Old and New Testaments.

The Books of the New Testament are twenty-seven in number, written by eight different authors, all of whom were contemporary with our Saviour. They were all written before the close of the first century of the Christian era, and the historical portions of the narrative extend over only a portion of the first century. The New Testament is inseparably connected with the Old Testament. There are historical links which bind them together, and the descendants of Abraham and the house of David are not only prominent, but distinctly separated from others of the children of Adam. But the New Testament is more than a mere continuation of the Old Testament History; it is in itself a bright and glowing revelation. The end of the older dispensation, the culmination of the plan of grace foreshadowed by all the rites and ceremonies of the Jewish Church, the fulfilment of all the prophecies which referred to the Advent of the Messiah, the widening of the channels of Divine grace in the present, and the glory of the Redeemed in the future—these are the splendid truths which adorn the pages of this final revelation, and lead us to rejoice in "the glorious Gospel of Christ."

THE FOUR GOSPELS.

Four sacred streams to make glad the whole earth. Each of the four Gospels gives an account of the life of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. In many respects they are similar, each one supplementing, corroborating, and elucidating the others. No one of the Gospels would be so well understood if any of the rest were wanting, yet each of them has its peculiarities, and supplies information not found in the others. Thus the unity of the inspiration is made evident—there is unity in this apparent diversity—and all agree in the main object of revealing Jesus Christ, the only-begotten Son of God, Incarnate, Crucified for the salvation of the world, Risen from the dead, and Ascended into Heaven. What a marvellous theme! What a precious revelation! How dark would the whole spiritual world become if this blessed Gospel, so glorious as it respects our adorable Redeemer, and so unspeakably precious to those who believe in Him, were taken from us?

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. MATTHEW.

ATTENTION is directed in the first words of the New Testament to the appearance of the promised Messiah. The birth of Jesus Christ is the first event recorded by the inspired historian and Evangelist, and the lineage of Jesus, the son of David according to the flesh, is traced back to Abraham. The first two chapters of this Gospel give an account of His miraculous conception by the Holy Ghost, His birth, the visit and adoration of the Magians, the flight of the "young child," and Mary and Joseph, into Egypt, and their subsequent return and settlement at Nazareth. An interval of about thirty years is passed over without notice, and in the third chapter the history of our Lord's public ministry is begun. The authenticity of this Gospel has never been questioned. Like all the other books of the New Testament, it is written in Greek, the language which, as a result of the conquests of Alexander the Great, had become generally known throughout the civilized world. The Greek of the New Testament is not, however, strictly classic, but is found to be a dialect almost peculiar to these sacred writings, and evidently affected by Hebrew or rather Syro-Chaldaic influences. There is an evident providential arrangement in the languages selected for the Old and New Testaments. The more rugged character of the Hebrew tongue, its stately majesty, noble simplicity, and graphic vividness, fitted it to an admirable degree for the historical, poetical, and prophetic writings of the Old Testament. But in the Greek language, more copious than the Hebrew in its vocabulary, elaborate in its inflections and syntax, and delicate and subtle in its distinctions, God's providence gave to the founders of the Christian Church a more perfect medium for the communication of the more abstract and general doctrines and revelations which were to be announced in the books of the New Testament.

St. Matthew, the author of this Gospel, was one of the twelve Apostles. In the account of his call to the Apostleship, he is called Levi, the son of Alphaeus, by St. Mark and St. Luke. It is probable that he was known by both names. He was a publican, one of the class engaged in collecting the Roman taxes, and who were especially odious to the Jews. St. Matthew, in his Gospel, does not omit the title of infamy which had belonged to him, but neither of the other Evangelists speaks of "Matthew the publican." Very little is known of his personal history. Of him, and indeed of most of the writers of the New Testament, it may be said: "If the first feeling on finding but meagre particulars respecting their personal history be disappointment, the second will be admiration for those who, doing their part under God in the great work of founding the Church on earth, have passed away to their Master in heaven without so much as an effort to redeem their names from silence and oblivion."

There is evidence of various kinds that this Gospel was written with the special purpose of presenting Jesus to the Jewish people as the Messiah foretold in the Old Testament. There are some expressions which are peculiar to St. Matthew, and not found in the other Gospels, e. g., the phrase, "the kingdom of heaven," occurs here about thirty-three times; the other writers use the term "kingdom of God," which is also found in St. Matthew's Gospel. There was a belief among the early Christians that this Gospel was written in Hebrew.

The word Gospel is the English equivalent for the Greek word ΕΥΑΓΓΕΛΙΟΝ, which signifies good news, and is derived from the Anglo-Saxon god, good, and spell, tidings. The word is used to designate the inspired historical narratives of the life and words of Jesus, and also in a more comprehensive sense to indicate the whole system of Christianity. The exact date when this Gospel was written is not known. With the exception of St. John's Gospel, which was written at a later date, it is most probable that all the Gospels were written within twenty or thirty years after the Ascension of Christ.

The Gospel of St. Matthew is noticeable for the fulness, orderly management, and particularity, with which many of our Lord's discourses are given. Of this the Sermon on the Mount is a striking example. St. Matthew has also wonderfully united simplicity and energy in relating the replies of his Master to the cavils of His adversaries.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ST. MARK.

This Gospel is briefer than any of the others, and contains little historical matter not found in one or more of the remaining Gospels. It gives no account of the Saviour's birth, but with the opening emphatic words, "The beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God," it notices the ministry of John the Baptist, and then proceeds, with apparently little reference to strict chronological order, to narrate the chief events of our Lord's ministry, closing with a record of His Ascension.

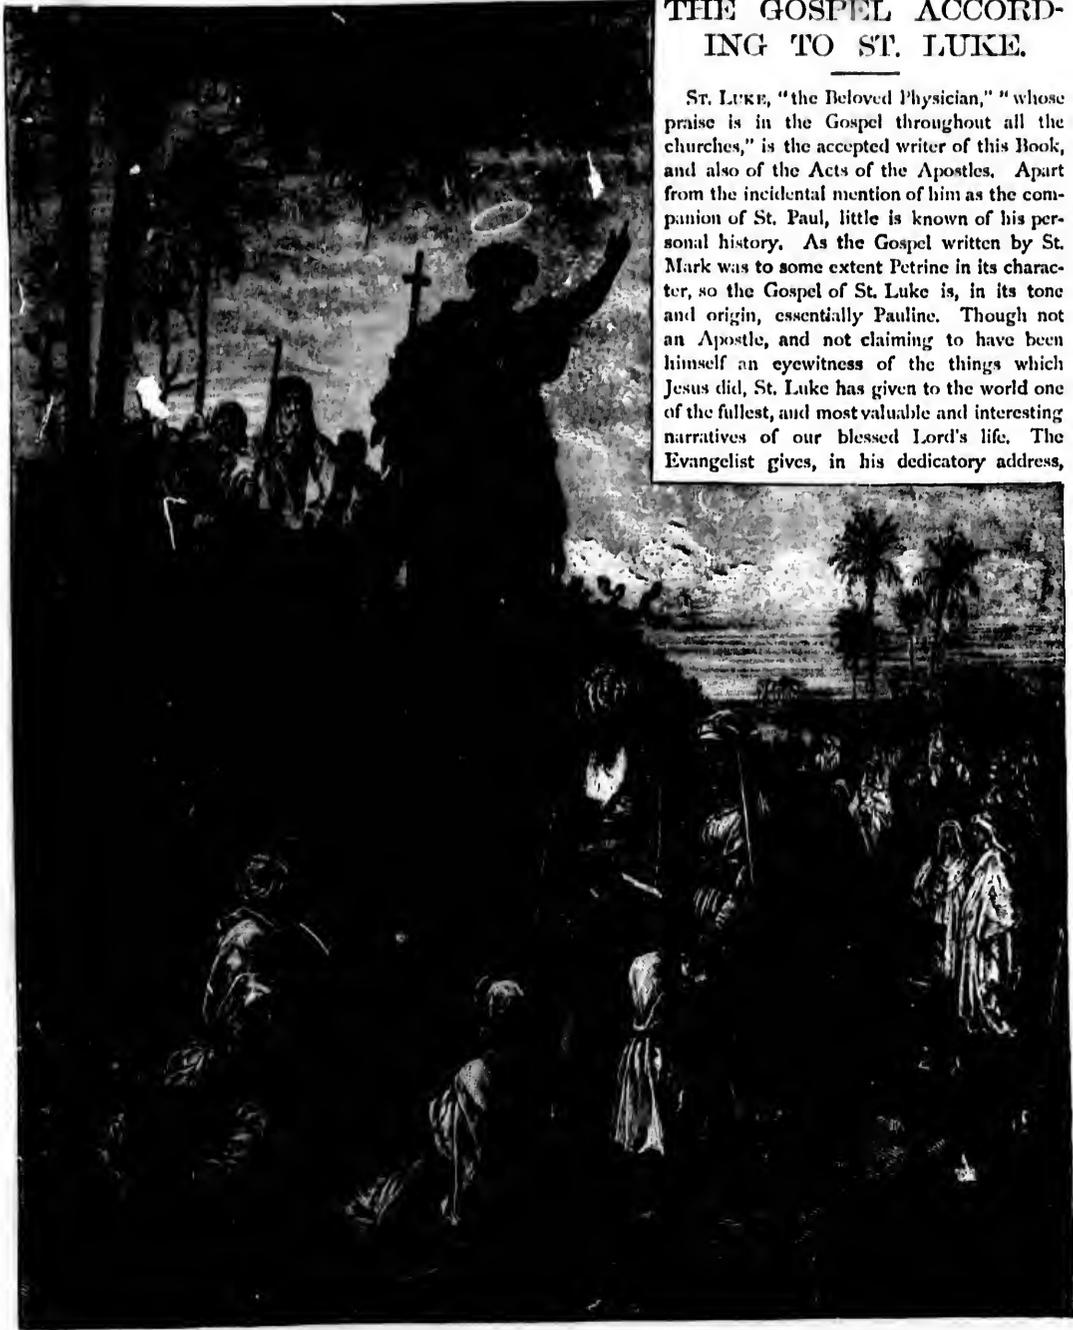

This Gospel was evidently written with special reference to Gentile readers, and many facts and terms quite familiar to all the Jewish people are explained by the inspired author. St. Mark's style is peculiar for graphic vividness and circumstantiality of detail. He possessed a great power of word-painting, and gives a great many minute facts and details in regard to places, persons, and numbers, not found elsewhere. Very much that is interesting and instructive in regard to our Lord's miracles, actions and words, would be lost to us, were it not for the vivid picture of the earthly acts of Jesus, preserved in this Sacred Book.

St. Mark was not an Apostle, but was, as we learn from the Acts and Epistles, a frequent companion and intimate associate of the Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul. Sometimes he was with one of them, sometimes with the other, engaged in missionary labors, or sharing their privations: Acts xii. 12; xiii. 13; xv. 36-40; Col. iv. 10; 2 Tim. iv. 11; 1 Pet. v. 13. He appears to have been known by the Jewish name John, and the Roman name of Mark, and the house of his mother at Jerusalem was a resort and refuge of the Apostles.

There is an ancient traditional belief, now generally believed to be substantially correct, that this Gospel of St. Mark had its origin in the teaching of St. Peter, rather than of the rest of the Apostles. The two were intimate associates, and it is believed that St. Mark either wrote the Gospel at St. Peter's dictation, or recorded the substance of St. Peter's discourses upon the life of our Lord. This, if true, from St. Peter's intimate personal relations to Jesus during His earthly ministry, explains the great exactness with which the various circumstances are described, as coming more or less directly from one who was an eye-witness of many of the wondrous actions of our adorable Redeemer.

THE GOSPEL ACCORD- ING TO ST. LUKE.

ST. LUKE, "the Beloved Physician," "whose praise is in the Gospel throughout all the churches," is the accepted writer of this Book, and also of the Acts of the Apostles. Apart from the incidental mention of him as the companion of St. Paul, little is known of his personal history. As the Gospel written by St. Mark was to some extent Petrine in its character, so the Gospel of St. Luke is, in its tone and origin, essentially Pauline. Though not an Apostle, and not claiming to have been himself an eyewitness of the things which Jesus did, St. Luke has given to the world one of the fullest, and most valuable and interesting narratives of our blessed Lord's life. The Evangelist gives, in his dedicatory address, clear and definite information in regard to the sources of his information. There is, indeed, a high and true view to be taken of all these sacred writings, which leads us to ascribe them all to the direct influences of God, the Holy Ghost. He led the disciples into all truth. He took of the things of Christ and showed them unto the Apostles and first preachers of the Word of Life; and He so guided and controlled the minds of the authors of these inspired Books, that their writings become to us truly the Word of God, a heavenly message, a direct revelation to mankind from on high.

But in addition to this higher and loftier view, there is another aspect in which these holy writings may be regarded by the most reverent believers in the inspiration of the Sacred Scriptures; and this less lofty, this more material and human element, while it affects, in some degree, the character of all these inspired books, is not concealed from us by this Evangelist. It pleased God to use human agencies, and human instrumentalities, in giving to all the world the revelation of the truths of the Gospel, and to make use of secondary and lower means in spreading abroad a knowledge of His love and saving mercy. St. Luke, impelled by the Holy Spirit to write this Gospel, tells us that he made the history of our Lord's life the subject of careful examination and research. He treasured up and compiled and arranged the knowledge he acquired. He held intercourse with those who from the beginning had been eye-witnesses of the things which Jesus did, listeners to Him as He taught, and ministers of the word, and had them impart to him their information that he might increase his own knowledge; then, with materials so obtained, he wrote, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, the history which bears his name. He was evidently a scholar of no mean attainments. His style is graceful and flowing, and the Greek of his Gospel, and of the Acts, is more classic than that of some of the other New Testament writers. His personal fidelity to the great Apostle in his affliction led St. Paul to say, as he alluded to the absence of some, and his desertion by others, "only Luke is with me."

A careful examination and comparison of the various passages in which his name occurs, or where reference is made to him, has led to the generally received conclusion that St. Luke not only wrote the Acts of the Apostles, but that he was a companion of St. Paul on his second missionary tour, and was with him at Rome during his imprisonment, and at other times. He is identified as the author of the Acts by the opening dedication to the same Theophilus to whom his Gospel is dedicated; and by the reference in that place to the Gospel which he had already written. In Acts xvi. 11, there is an abrupt transition to the first person plural, "Loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia," which appears to mark the point where the Evangelist joined the Apostle, and the same peculiarity is noticed at various places in the later chapters of Acts. Having evidently been written before the Acts, and consequently before the termination of St. Paul's imprisonment in Rome, the date of the authorship of this Gospel has been fixed at about 58-60 A. D.

St. Luke's Gospel begins with the following short preface:

1 FORASMUCH AS MANY have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us,

2 Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eye-witnesses, and ministers of the word;

3 It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus,

4 That thou mightest know the certainty of those things, wherein thou hast been instructed.

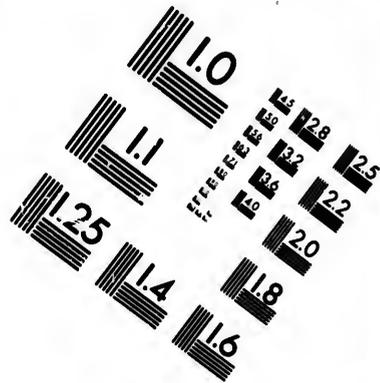

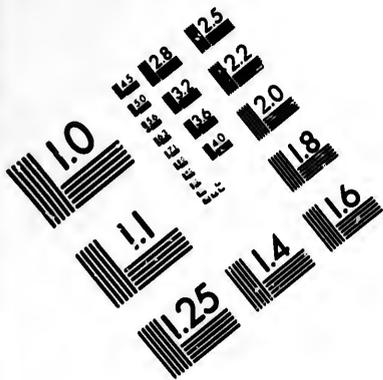

For some years after the day of Pentecost, while the Apostles were yet living, and the extraordinary influences of the Holy Ghost were unusually powerful in various manifestations, the Gospel was preached by those who had been with Jesus during His ministry, and converts were made and churches organized, before any of the New Testament Scriptures were written. The substance of these writings was then imparted orally. But as the number of Christians increased, and the number of those who had been witnesses of the actions of Jesus constantly lessened, many were led to commit to writing narratives of our Lord's life. It is not necessary to infer from the Evangelist's words in reference to them that they were written by enemies; but rather by those unfitted for the task, and whose works were incorrect and incomplete. Then, to preserve to all coming time a true record of what was doubtless the Apostolic account of the Life of Jesus, the Holy Ghost moved the minds of men inspired to prepare the written Gospels. "He taught them all things, and brought all things to their remembrance." The truelight has dispelled the mists and the darkness. The Inspired Word, like the Word Incarnate, is manifested unto us "full of grace and truth."

Theophilus (a lover of God), to whom this Gospel is addressed, is, by most commentators, believed to have been an existing person; by others, however, it is supposed to be a significant name applicable to any amans Dei, and not specifically applied to any one person.

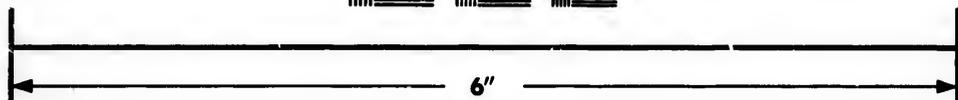

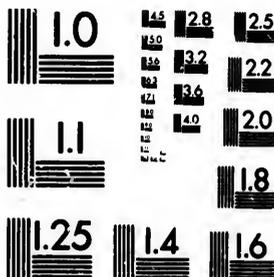

There are few descriptions in the world so graphic and picturesque as those in the opening chapters of St. Luke's Gospel. The Annunciation to the Virgin, the Nativity of Jesus, the Holy Child laid in the manger of the inn at Bethlehem, the rejoicing of the heavenly host, the visit of the Shepherds; all these, and other circumstances, are brought before us with such vividness, that they appear like the figures in some well-drawn picture, and we seem almost to hear the words which were spoken, and to see the things which were done.

The genealogy of Christ is traced by St. Luke, through a somewhat different line from that of St. Matthew's Gospel, to Adam. The one is suggestive of Christ as the promised Messiah of the Jews, the other of Jesus, the second Adam, the Redeemer of the human race. The ministry of John the Baptist, the herald and forerunner of Christ, whose bold and fearless preaching prepared the way for the public ministry of Jesus, is described, and the narrative then proceeds to trace our Lord's course to the time of His Ascension.

THE GOSPEL ACCORD- ING TO ST. JOHN.

ST. JOHN, the Beloved Disciple, Apostle and Evangelist, was the writer of five of the Books of the New Testament, viz., the fourth Gospel, the three Epistles which bear his name, and the Revelation. That portion of his history which is given in the Sacred Scriptures reveals to us very much in respect to his personal character. He was one of the first of those who became disciples of our Lord, and one of the most constant companions of Jesus during His ministry. Of an affectionate disposition, so retiring that he frequently avoids mentioning himself by name, marked by his constancy and fidelity, and distinguished for his deeper insight into his Master's teaching, he became so endeared to the Saviour as to be selected from among the rest of the Apostolic college to be the personal friend of Jesus, and was privileged to call himself by the title of "the disciple whom Jesus loved." He was one of the three Apostles, Peter, James, and John, who were admitted to a special intimacy with our Lord, and who became, as it were, an inner circle, admitted where others were excluded. These three only were permitted to witness the raising of Jairus' daughter, the Transfiguration, and the Agony in Gethsemane. But St. John had other special opportunities to acquire the information which gave him peculiar fitness for his work. He is the only Apostle who is mentioned as having been present at the Crucifixion; and to him our blessed Lord, as He was expiring on the Cross, gave the strongest proof of His confidence and affection by consigning to him the care of His mother. Among the earliest to seek the sepulchre on the morning of the Resurrection, he was the first to believe that Jesus had risen from the dead.

For some years after the Ascension of our Lord, St. John appears to have remained at Jerusalem, and was present on the occasion of St. Paul's visit in about the year 52 A. D. Compare Acts xv. 6, Gal. ii. 9. The generally received opinion is, that the later years of his prolonged life were spent at Ephesus. Many things concerning him are stated by ancient writers, which are partly true, partly legendary. His banishment to the Isle of Patmos, and his death at Ephesus at the age of almost one hundred years, are facts that may be regarded as historically true.

The Gospel of St. John occupies a peculiar and distinctly marked place. The first three Gospels are usually termed the Synoptical Gospels, because they all give a general view of our Lord's life, and from the similarity of their plan and contents are capable of being summed up in a synopsis. Apart, however, from their description of the last visit of the Saviour to Jerusalem, and the circumstances attendant upon His Passion, these three Gospels are taken up in the main with an account of the ministry of Jesus in Galilee. The Fourth Gospel has a different scope. St. John follows our Lord into Judea, and records with evident care the repeated visits of Jesus to Jerusalem, on several of the annual festivals of the Jewish Church; and in this manner fixes the probable duration of His public ministry.

But there is one portion of our Lord's history which all the Gospels agree in treating of at length, and with remarkable harmony so far as the outlines of the history are involved, i. e. the last few days before His death. Some circumstances not noticed by the other Evangelists, are indeed recorded by St. John in his vivid description of the events which occurred; and he mentions at greater length than the other writers, the apparent unwillingness of Pilate to sentence Jesus, and his presentation of Him before the people, with the words, "Behold the Man!"

The Gospel of St. John, however, is not so much historical in its peculiar characteristic, as doctrinal, and this fact is not difficult to be accounted for. It was written long after the other Gospels, and by many is believed to have been written the last of all the Books of the Bible. By the close of the first Christian century the remaining Gospels had been generally received, and become widely known. The faith had spread, many churches been organized, and the main facts of the life of our Lord had become familiar to the members of the Christian Church. But the Church suffered not only from the attacks of open enemies, but from the weakness of avowed friends. Persecution and heresy united in disturbing the peace of Christ's flock. The various heresies that then arose had their origin, as in all succeeding periods, to a very great degree at least, in incorrect views of the person, and nature, and office of our Lord.

The setting forth in the clearest and boldest manner of the truth in respect to the Divinity of our blessed Lord, appears to be the special object and scope of the fourth Gospel. Our Lord's eternal existence, His Incarnation, and His Divinity, His equality with the Father as to substance and nature; His subordination to the Father in His office, and in the work of Redemption; His perfect union with the Father; the sending forth of the other Divine personage of the Holy Trinity, the Holy Comforter, to be the representative of Christ during His personal absence from the earth; these are the themes which are dwelt upon with earnestness and fervency in this Gospel, and in the First Epistle of St. John. Thus these writings are of special significance in respect to the doctrine of the Trinity.

The opening words of this Gospel are striking: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." In this eloquent introduction, grand in its simplicity, the Evangelist reveals to us the mystery of the eternal life of Christ. Others place the beginning of the Gospel at the birth of Jesus, or at the beginning of His earthly ministry; St. John places the beginning far back in the dim recesses of that most distant past, when, in the secret councils of the Most Holy Trinity, the creation was determined. The First Epistle of St. John begins with a similar announcement: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of Life; (for the Life was manifested, and we have seen Him, and bear witness, and shew unto you that Eternal Life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;) that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ." The Word Eternal, but the Word who had become Incarnate that He might be seen and heard, was the theme on which St. John delighted to dwell. He was not compelled to seek outside of his own experience for information, for he had himself been an eyewitness of His majesty, and knew that God had manifested His love towards us, by "sending his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through Him."

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

THIS Book contains the history of the Church from the Ascension of our Lord to the imprisonment of St. Paul at Rome, a period of about thirty years. No attempt is made to give the entire history of this period, and if this book is regarded as a narrative of some of the acts of some of the Apostles, a more correct idea is gained of its scope. Its primary object was to present the results which followed the outpouring of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost (from which time the Church of Christ took a definite form), and to describe the manner in which the Apostles preached the Word. By a selection of events which are representative in their character, we are enabled to gain a just idea of the general development of the Church, and the means by which the Gospel was at first promulgated.

The breaking down of the distinction between the Jew and the Gentile world, and the difficulties which attended this part of the Apostolic work, is a constant theme of the Acts and the Epistles. To the Gentile mind, the election of the Jews to be the special objects of Divine favor, and possessed of peculiar religious privileges, has ever been a cause of wonder; while to the Jewish people the marvel was, that Jehovah should admit the Gentiles to equal religious privileges with themselves. The earlier efforts of the Apostles were directed to the Jews, but they soon extended their labors.

This Book records the Ascension of our Lord, the Pentecostal outpouring of the Holy Ghost, the various events which occurred in the mother-church at Jerusalem, and then the missionary efforts in other places. The Divine nature and personality of the Holy Ghost, and His office in the present government of the Church is distinctly revealed. See v. 3, 4; viii. 29; x. 19; xiii. 2; xvi. 7; xx. 28. The increasing of the number of the Apostles, and the appointment of Elders and Deacons; the administration of the two sacraments; and other religious observances and ordinances connected with the reorganization of the Church on a Christian instead of a Jewish basis, are all stated or referred to in the Acts. The observance of the first day of the week, the day of the Saviour's Resurrection, as the Lord's Day, is also noted. Among the marvellous results of the preaching of the Apostles, we may notice the profession of faith in Christ, made in one day, by three thousand persons who listened to St. Peter's preaching, (ii. 41); and the strange scene at Ephesus, where, affected by the earnest preaching of St. Paul, many voluntarily brought their books, containing the formulæ of magic, to be burnt, (xix. 19).

No one can read the Acts of the Apostles with careful attention, without noticing the very great prominence given in the earlier portion to St. Peter, and the equally great prominence given in the closing portion to St. Paul. Throughout the first twelve chapters St. Peter appears as the foremost of the Apostolic company. On nearly every occasion he was the spokesman and representative of his brethren. His sufferings, and the miracles wrought by him and in his behalf, are recorded. By his bold and eloquent preaching he laid the foundations of the Church, and drew the earliest converts from both the Jewish and Gentile ranks. But after the history of St. Paul is taken up, the great Apostle to the Gentiles completely overshadows St. Peter, whose name does not again appear. The last sixteen chapters give a full and graphic narrative of the missionary labors of St. Paul in Asia Minor and Europe, and the Book closes with an account of his voyage, shipwreck, and arrival at Rome as prisoner. This abrupt termination of this history indicates the time when it was written. The author paused because he had traced St. Paul's career to the period when he wrote, and ceased because he had no more to tell. The date usually ascribed is about 60 A. D.

THE EPISTLES OF ST. PAUL.

FOURTEEN of the Epistles of the New Testament are usually ascribed to St. Paul, the Apostle of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, thirteen of which were undoubtedly written by him, while the Epistle to the Hebrews is of anonymous authorship. This remarkable man united in himself several qualifications which gave him a peculiar, we may truly aver, a providential fitness for the work which he was called to perform. He had received a liberal education, and his natural eloquence, and powers of perception and analysis, were cultivated to a high degree. He was by birth a Jew, and by early religious training a Pharisee, and so was familiar, not only with the customs and ceremonies of the ancient Church of God, but with the various phases of Jewish thought. But he was also by birth a Roman citizen, inheriting all the privileges and enjoying all the benefits that accrued to him by that right. And all of these things; his worldly learning, his natural abilities, his religious knowledge, and his civil privileges, were so overruled by God's Holy Spirit, that they all became in some degree subservient to the furtherance of the Gospel of Christ. No one could have been better fitted for the work of preaching the Gospel to both Jew and Gentile, in that age; no one, in any age, has ever been more devoted and zealous in missionary labors than this noble Apostle.

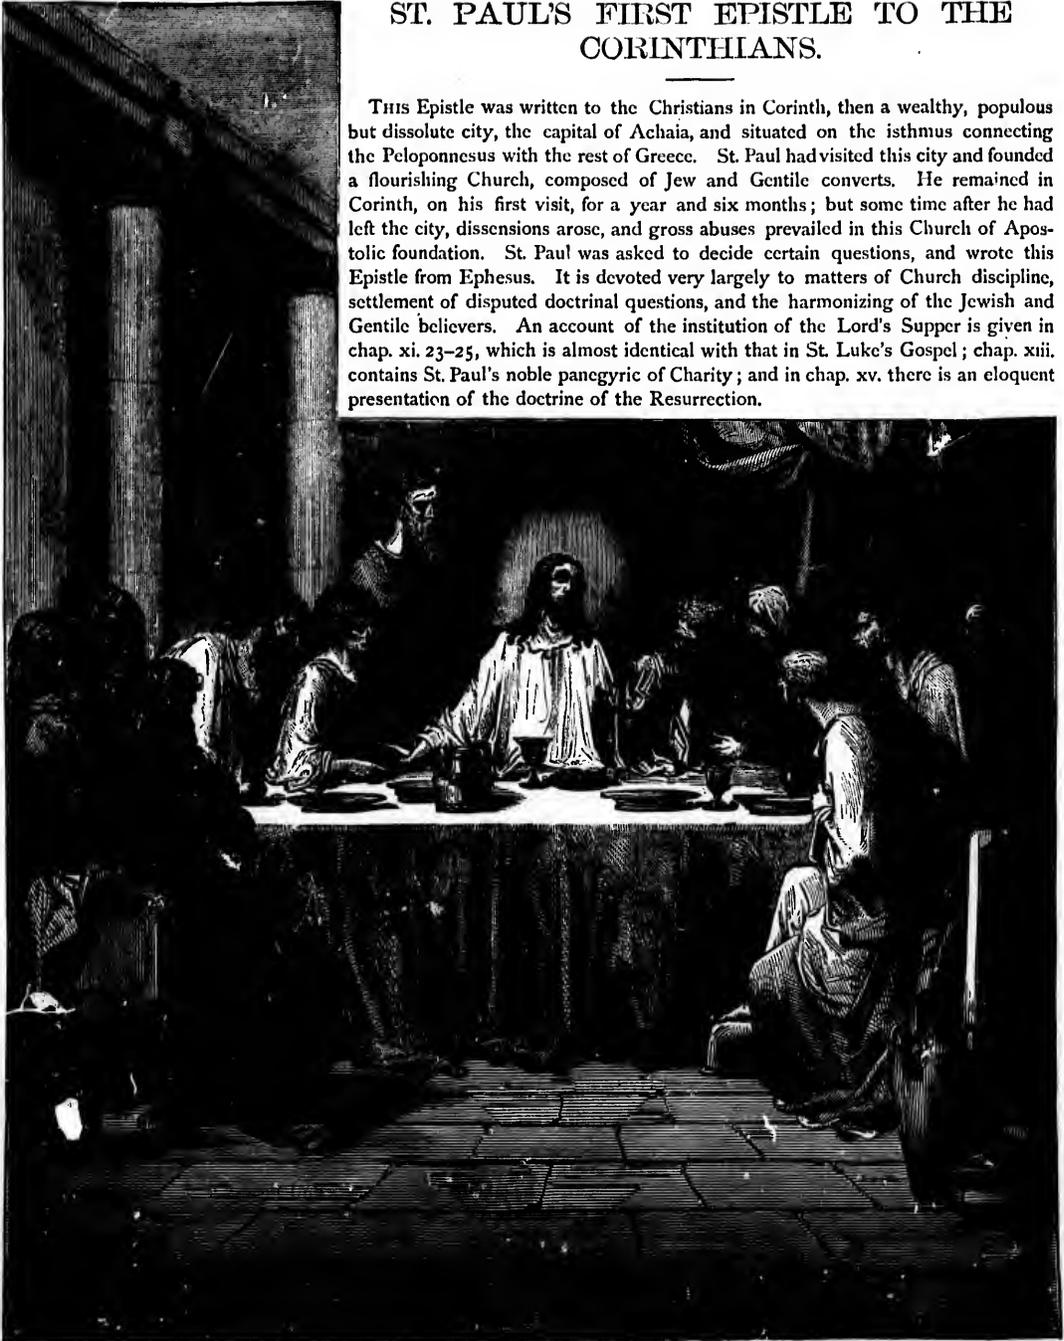

The first nine of the Epistles of St. Paul are known as "the Epistles to the Churches," and the three following, being addressed personally to men ordained and engaged in the work of the Christian ministry, are called "the Pastoral Epistles." The Apostle was brought under the controlling influences of the Holy Spirit at his miraculous conversion, and the influence of the Holy Ghost in succeeding years not only controlled his own personal life, but inspired the Apostolic Letters which make so large a part of the holy writings preserved in the Books of the New Testament. These Epistles are a divine treasury, filled with gifts, and from this rich store-house of inspired truth, humble believers, solitary in obscure places, and the united hosts of the Church militant, have drawn that which was needed to enlighten their ignorance, to arouse their courage, and console them in their griefs.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS.

THE Epistle to the Christians in Rome was written by St. Paul while at Corinth, and before he had ever personally visited the Imperial city. The Apostle had often purposed to visit Rome, but been as often hindered (i. 13). To compensate in part for this failure, he wrote this Epistle, which is of a general character, and having the opportunity sent it by Phoebe, a deaconess of the church at Cenchrea (xvi. 1).

ST. PAUL'S FIRST EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

THIS Epistle was written to the Christians in Corinth, then a wealthy, populous but dissolute city, the capital of Achaia, and situated on the isthmus connecting the Peloponnesus with the rest of Greece. St. Paul had visited this city and founded a flourishing Church, composed of Jew and Gentile converts. He remained in Corinth, on his first visit, for a year and six months; but some time after he had left the city, dissensions arose, and gross abuses prevailed in this Church of Apostolic foundation. St. Paul was asked to decide certain questions, and wrote this Epistle from Ephesus. It is devoted very largely to matters of Church discipline, settlement of disputed doctrinal questions, and the harmonizing of the Jewish and Gentile believers. An account of the institution of the Lord's Supper is given in chap. xi. 23-25, which is almost identical with that in St. Luke's Gospel; chap. xiii. contains St. Paul's noble panegyric of Charity; and in chap. xv. there is an eloquent presentation of the doctrine of the Resurrection.

ST. PAUL'S SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.—This Epistle was written not long after the first Epistle. In it St. Paul vindicates his Apostolic authority, and his enumeration of his labors and sufferings for the Gospel's sake, is a valuable contribution to the history of this Apostle.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE GALATIANS.—The topics are much the same as those treated of in the Epistles to the Romans and Corinthians.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.—The first three chapters are argumentative and doctrinal the remaining three chapters are hortatory and practical.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.—It is a marked peculiarity of this Epistle that the Apostle speaks only in terms of commendation, and praises the Philippian disciples for their charities.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.—This Epistle, like that to the Ephesians, was written at Rome, and being written and forwarded at the same time, one is, in most places, a commentary upon the other.

ST. PAUL'S FIRST EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.—This is, for some reasons, supposed to be the earliest written of all St. Paul's Epistles. The date of it is fixed at about 53 A. D.

ST. PAUL'S SECOND EPISTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.—This Epistle, like the preceding one, breathes a spirit of tender affection for the members of the Church in Thessalonica. It corrects some erroneous opinions which had sprung up in regard to the near approach of Christ's Second Advent, and predicts the great apostasy which should precede that event.

The Epistles to the Churches, written incidentally, and addressed at first to particular churches, all deal with great questions of Christian doctrine and duty, in a life-like and practical manner.

THE PASTORAL EPISTLES.

ST. PAUL'S FIRST EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY.—The three following Epistles are all of the same tone and character, and are believed to have been written in the closing part of St. Paul's life.

ST. PAUL'S SECOND EPISTLE TO TIMOTHY.—This Epistle appears to have been written by St. Paul at a time when he regarded his death, by martyrdom or otherwise, to be imminent.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO TITUS.—Like the other Pastoral Epistles, this, addressed to Titus, is no less valuable to the private Christian than to those engaged officially in the work of the ministry.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO PHILEMON.—Written to Philemon, a private Christian at Colosse, in behalf of Onesimus. The Epistle is a model of delicacy and skilful address.

THE EPISTLE TO THE HEBREWS.—This explanation of the typology of the Old Testament system is exceedingly grand. The glory of Christ's person, and the excellency of His sole priesthood is the theme of the first ten chapters. The virtues of faith and patient endurance are commended in glowing terms in the remaining portions of the Epistle.

THE CATHOLIC EPISTLES

THE EPISTLE OF ST. JAMES.—The seven Epistles of which this is the first, not being addressed to particular Churches, or to individuals, are grouped together under the collective title of the "Catholic" or General Epistles. St. James, who presided over the Church at Jerusalem, is the accredited author. The Epistle is eminently practical in its character.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF ST. PETER.—The ministry of St. Peter lay chiefly among the Jews, and this first Epistle is addressed to the "sojourners of the dispersion," i. e. the Jews scattered in various places. It was evidently written during a fierce persecution of the faithful, and, in the finest language, cheers them by predictions of the glories of the heavenly inheritance.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF ST. PETER.—This Epistle is primarily intended for the same circle of hearers and churches as the preceding one; but its object is different. It is largely taken up with warnings against false and heretical teachings.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF ST. JOHN.—Among the early heresies was that of a denial of the human nature of the Lord Jesus Christ. To reveal the truth in regard to this point was one special object of St. John, in his Gospel, and in this Epistle. The love of the Father, the Incarnation of His Son, Jesus Christ, as the only Saviour of mankind, and the necessity of love among Christians, are the chief topics of this inspired, fervid, and most useful Epistle.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF ST. JOHN.—An exhortation to a woman and a mother, to guard against the prevailing heresies regarding the person of our Lord.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF ST. JOHN.—A short Epistle, addressed to Gaius, commending his Christian hospitality.

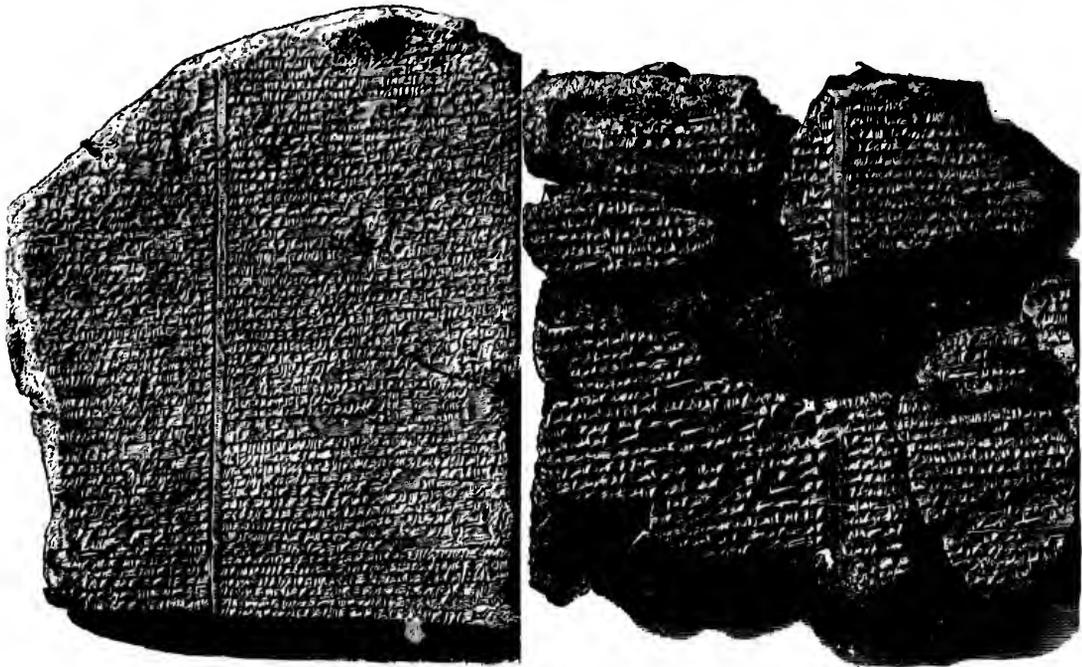

THE EPISTLE OF ST. JUDE.—There is an intimate relation between this brief warning against false teachers, and 2 Peter ii., where the same subject is treated.

THE REVELATION.

THE REVELATION OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE.—The Apocalypse (ΑΠΟΚΑΛΥΨΙΣ, Revelation), the closing Book of the New Testament, contains a Revelation made to St. John, the Apostle and Evangelist, during his exile in the Isle of Patmos; very near the close of the first Christian century.

It is the grandest of all the Books of the Bible. Its value and richness do not lie in the multitude of figures and types which are scattered so profusely on its pages, but are found rather in its grand outlines. It is a present Revelation of what is occurring in the heavenly places of our God. It announces to us the constant intercession of Jesus for His people. He is revealed to us as being in Heaven, but as seen even there as the Lamb, the Lamb slain that He might redeem us by His blood; and who is to come forth again with majesty and power, and gather His redeemed into the Heavenly City.

LEAVES FROM AN OLD BOOK OF KING ASSURBANIPAL'S LIBRARY.

FRAGMENT OF EGYPTIAN MANUSCRIPT.

The treasures of the buried East are revealing their secrets to antiquarian students. The researches of Layard and others among the exhumed palaces of ancient Ninevah, brought to light many sculptured representations and inscriptions of the power and glory of the ancient Assyrian monarchs. Besides these, vast quantities of the books constituting the royal library,—of which the above are accurate representations,—were found in complete preservation. These volumes are not such as fill the alcoves and adorn the shelves of our modern libraries, in their sumptuous bindings, and attractive letter-press, but are far more solid and substantial. They were printed on pottery.

Large quantities of these volumes, some entire and others shivered, were removed to the British Museum. Mr. George Smith, of the British Museum, one of the most accomplished adepts in deciphering these hieroglyphics, has toiled for fourteen years over these volumes, has ascertained that these thousands of fragments really constitute a connected series. Among these is a continued narrative of the deluge, which corresponds in many remarkable particulars with the Biblical account as given by Moses.

These tablets were taken from the palace of King Assurbanipal, who reigned about 660 B. C., and contain the legends of a King Izdubar, who lived shortly after the flood, and is thought to have founded the Babylonian monarchy.

A.

Aar'ou (Heb. Aharon). The son of Amram and Jochebed, and the elder brother of Moses and Miriam (Num. xxvi. 59, xxxiii. 39). He was a Levite, and is first mentioned in Ex. iv. 14, as one who could "speak well." He was appointed by Jehovah to be the Interpreter and "Mouth" (Ex. iv. 16) of his brother Moses, who was "slow of speech;" and accordingly he was not only the organ of communication with the Israelites and with Pharaoh (Ex. iv. 30, vii. 2), but also the actual instrument of working most of the miracles of the Exodus. (See Ex. vii. 19, &c.) Thus on the way to Mount Sinai, during the battle with Amalek, Aaron is mentioned with Hur, as staying up the weary hands of Moses, when they were lifted up for the victory of Israel (not in prayer, as is sometimes explained, but) to bear the rod of God. (See Ex. xvii. 9.) Through all this period he is mentioned as dependent upon his brother, and deriving all his authority from him.

Aaron was consecrated by Moses to the new office of high-priesthood. The order of God for the consecration is found in Ex. xxix., and the record of its execution in Lev. viii.

Aaron's death took place on Mount Hor, after the transference of his robes and office to Eleazar (Num. xx. 28). This mount is still called the "Mountain of Aaron."

Ab (father). Abba is a Chaldaic form. Applied to God by Jesus Christ (Mark xiv. 36).

Ab. [MONTHS.]

Ab'na (perennial). One of the "rivers of Damascus" (2 K. v. 12). The Barada and the Awaj are now the chief streams of Damascus, the former representing the Abana and the latter the Pharpar of the text.

Ab'arim. A mountain or range of highlands on the east of the Jordan, in the land Moab, facing Jericho, and forming the eastern wall of the Jordan valley at that part.

Ab'ba. [Ab.]

Abd'nego (Servant of Nogo, perhaps the same as Acho). The Chaldean name given to Azariah, one of the three friends of Daniel, miraculously saved from the fiery furnace (Dan. iii.).

Mount Hor and Aaron's Tomb.

A'bel (meadow). The name of several places in Palestine. Probably signifies a meadow.

A'bel (i. e. breath, vapor, transitoriness, probably so called from the shortness of his life). The second son of Adam, murdered by his brother Cain (Gen. iv. 1-16). Jehovah showed respect for Ab'l's offering, but not for that of Cain, because, according to the Epistle to the Hebrews (xi. 4), Abel "by faith offered a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." The traditional site of his murder and his grave are pointed out near Damascus.

Abi'athar (abundance). High-priest and fourth in descent from Eli, who was of the line of Ithamar, the younger son of Aaron. Abiathar was the only one of all the sons of Ahimelech the high-priest who escaped the slaughter inflicted upon his father's house by Saul, in revenge for his having inquired of the Lord for David, and given him the shewbread to eat (1 Sam. xxii.).

Abi'dan, chief of the tribe of Benjamin at the time of the Exodus (Num. i. 11).

Abi'ser. 1. Eldest son of Gilead, and descendant of Manasseh (Josh. xvii. 2; 1 Chr. vii. 18; Num. xxvi. 30, where the name is given in the contracted form JEZER). He was the ancestor of the great judge Gideon.

SHROUDING OF THE DEAD.

Ab'igail (maker of joy). The beautiful wife of Nabal, a wealthy owner of goats and sheep in Carmel. When David's messengers were slighted by Nabal, Abigail supplied David and his followers with provisions, and succeeded in appeasing his anger. Ten days after this Nabal died, and David sent for Abigail and made her his wife (1 Sam. xxv. 14, &c.).

Abihu (God is father). The second son (Num. iii. 2) of Aaron. Being, together with his elder brother Nadab, guilty of offering strange fire to the Lord, he was consumed by fire from heaven (Lev. x. 1, 2).

Abi'jah or Abi'jam. Son and successor of Rehoboam on the throne of Judah (1 K. xiv. 31; 2 Chr. xii. 16). 2. The second son of Samuel, called ABIAH in our version.

Abi'la, Abile'ne (grassy meadow).

Abile'ne (Luke iii. 1), a tetrarchy of which the capital was Abila, a city situated on the eastern slope of Antilibanus, in a district fertilized by the river Barada. Its name probably arose from the green luxuriance of its situation, "Abel" perhaps denoting "a grassy meadow."

Abim'elech (father-king).

The name of several Philistine kings, was probably a common title of these kings, like that of Pharaoh among the Egyptians, and that of Cæsar and Augustus among the Romans.

Abin'eada (prince). 1. A Levite, a native of Kirjath-jearim, in whose house the ark remained 20 years (1 Sam. vii. 1, 2). 2. Second son of Jesse. 3. A son of Saul, who was slain with his brothers at Mount Gilboa (1 Sam. xxxi. 2). 4. Father of one of the twelve chief officers of Solomon (1 K. iv. 11).

Ab'ram (high). 1. A Reubenite, who, with Datnan and On, and Korah, a Levite, organized a conspiracy against Moses and Aaron (Num. xvi.). 2. Eldest son of Hiel, the Bethelite.

Ab'lahag (cause of error). A beautiful Shunammite, taken into David's harem to comfort him in his extreme old age (1 K. i. 1-4).

Abisaha'. The eldest of the three sons of Zeruah, David's sister, and brother to Joab and Asahel (1 Chr. ii. 16).

Abihu'a (of happiness). 1. Son of Bela, of the tribe of Benjamin (1 Chr. viii. 4). 2. Son of Phinehas, the son of Eleazar.

Ab'ner (light-maker). Son of Ner, brother of Kish (1 Chr. ix. 36), the father of Saul. Abner, therefore, was Saul's first cousin, and commander-in-chief of his army (1 Sam. xiv. 61, xvii. 67, xxvi. 2-12).

Abomination of Desolation, mentioned by our Saviour as a sign of the approaching destruction of Jerusalem, with reference to Dan. ix. 27, xi. 31, xii. 11. The Jews considered the prophecy of Daniel is fulfilled, when the Israelites themselves erected an idolatrous altar upon the sacred altar, and offered sacrifice thereon. This altar is described as "an abomination of desolation."

Abrahám (father of a multitude). As his name appears in the earlier portion of the history, was the son of Terah, and founder of the great Hebrew nation. His family, a branch of the descendants of Shem, was settled in Ur of the Chaldees, beyond the Euphrates. Terah had two other sons, Nahor and Haran. Haran died before his father in Ur of the Chaldees, leaving a son Lot; and Terah, taking with him Abram, with Sarai his wife, and his grandson Lot, emigrated to Haran in Mesopotamia, where he died. On the death of his father, Abram, then in the 7th year of his age, with Sarai and Lot, pursued his course to the land of Canaan, whither he was directed by divine command (Gen. xii. 5), when he received the general promise that he should become the founder of a great nation, and that all the families of the earth should be blessed in him.

But the country was suffering from famine, and Abram, finding neither pasture for his cattle nor food for his household, journeyed still southwards to the rich corn-lands of Egypt.

Abram left Egypt with great possessions, and, accompanied by Lot, returned by the south of Palestine to his former encampment between Bethel and Ai. The increased wealth of the two kinsmen was the ultimate cause of their separation. The soil was not fertile enough to support them both; their herdsman quarrelled; and, to avoid dissensions in a country where they were surrounded by enemies, Abram proposed that each should follow his own fortune. Lot chose the fertile plain of the Jordan, rich and well watered as the garden of Jehovah; while Abram quitted the hill-fortness between Bethel and Ai, and pitched his tent among the oak-groves of Mamre, close to Hebron (Gen. xiii.).

Thirteen years elapsed, during which Abram still dwelt in Hebron, when the last step in the revelation was made, that the son of Sarai, and not Ishmael, should inherit both the temporal and spiritual blessings. The covenant was renewed, and the right of circumcision established as its sign.

This most important crisis in Abram's life is marked by the significant change of his name to Abraham, "father of a multitude;" while his wife's from Sarai became Sarah. In his 99th year Abraham was circumcised, in accordance with the divine command, together with Ishmael and all males of his household, as well the slaves born in his house as those purchased from the foreigner (Gen. xvii.).

The promise that Sarah should have a son was repeated in the remarkable scene described in ch. xviii.

At length Isaac, the long-looked-for child, was born. His birth was welcomed by all the rejoicings which could greet the advent of one whose future was of such rich promise.

But the severest trial of Abraham was yet to come. For a long period the history is almost silent. At length he receives the strange command to take Isaac, his only son, and offer him for a burnt-offering at an appointed place. Such a bidding, in direct opposition to the promptings of nature and the divine mandate against the shedding of human blood, Abraham hesitated not to obey. His faith, hitherto unshaken, supported him in his final trial, "accounting that God was able to raise up his son, even from the dead, from whence also he received him in a figure" (Heb. xi. 19). The sacrifice was stayed by the angel of Jehovah, the promise of spiritual blessing for the first time repeated, and Abraham with his son returned to Beersheba, and for a time dwelt there (Gen. xxii.).

But we find him, after a few years, in his original residence at Hebron, for there Sarah died (Gen. xxiii. 2), and was buried in the cave of Machpelah, which Abram purchased of Ephron the Hittite, for the exorbitant price of 400 shekels of silver. The mosque at Hebron is believed to stand upon the site of the sepulchral cave.

The remaining years of Abraham's life are marked by but few incidents. He lived to see the gradual accomplishment of the promise in the birth of his grandchildren Jacob and Esau, and witnessed their growth to manhood (Gen. xxv. 26). At the goodly age of 175 he was "gathered to his people," and laid beside Sarah in the tomb of Machpelah by his son Isaac and Ishmael (Gen. xxv. 7-10).

From the intimate communion which Abraham held with the Almighty, he is distinguished by the high title of "the 'friend' of God" (2 Chr. xx. 7; Is. xli. 8; Jam. ii. 23).

ADDER.

Ab'salom (pacemaker). Third son of David by Maachab, daughter of Talmai king of Geshur, a Syrian district adjoining the N. E. frontier of the Holy Land.

Absalom tried to supplant his father by courting popularity, standing in the gate, conversing with every suitor, and lamenting the difficulty which he would find in getting a hearing. He also maintained a splendid retinue (2 Sam. xv. 1), and was admired for his personal beauty and the luxuriant growth of his hair. It is probable too that the great tribe of Judah had taken some offence at David's government, perhaps from finding themselves completely merged in one united Israel. But whatever the causes may have been, Absalom raised the standard of revolt at Hebron, the old capital of Judah, now supplanted by Jerusalem. The revolt was at first completely successful; David fled from his capital over the Jordan to Mahanaim in Gilead. Absalom occupied Jerusalem and by the advice of Ahithophel took possession of David's harem, in which he had left ten concubines. At last, after being solemnly anointed king at Jerusalem (xix. 10), Absalom crossed the Jordan to attack his father. A decisive battle was fought in Gilead. Absalom's forces were totally defeated, and as he himself was escaping, his long hair was entangled in the branches of a terebinth, where he was left hanging. He was despatched by Joab in spite of the prohibition of David, who loving him to the last, had desired that his life might be spared. He was buried in a great pit in the forest, and the conquerors threw stones over his grave, an old proof of bitter hostility (Josh. vii. 26).

Accad. One of the cities in the land of Shinar (Gen. x. 10).

supposed to be limited to the edification of Theophilus, whose name is prefixed only, as was customary then as now, by way of dedication. The readers were evidently intended to be the members of the Christian Church, whether Jews or Gentiles; for its contents are such as are of the utmost consequence to the whole Church. They are The fulfillment of the promise of the Father, the descent of the Holy Spirit, and the results of the pouring, by the dispersion of the Gospel among Jews and Alexandria, Egypt.

Gentiles. Under these leading heads all the personal and subordinate details may be ranged.
Adah (beauty). 1. The first of the two wives of Lamech, by whom were born to him Jubal and Jubah (Gen. iv. 19). 2. A Hittite, one of the three wives of Esau.
Adall'a. The fifth son of Haman (Esth. ix. 8).
Ad'am (the man; or reddish tint). The name given

Ad'am (red earth). A city on the Jordan "beside Zaretan."
Adder. This word is used for any poisonous snake, and is applied in this general sense by the translators of the A. V. They use in a similar way the synonymous term Asp.
Adon'jah (my lord is Jehovah). The fourth son of David by Haggith, born at Hebron, while his father was king of Judah (2 Sam. iii. 4).
Adonikam. The sons of Adon'kam, 666 in number, were among those who returned from Babylon with Zerubabel (Ezr. ii. 13).

Adram'melech. The name of an idol introduced into Samaria by the colonists from Sopheraim (2 K. xvii. 31). He was worshipped with rites resembling those of Molech, children being burnt in his honor.
Adul'lam. Apoc. ODOLLAM. A city of Judah in the lowland of the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 35); the seat of a Canaanite king (Josh. xii. 15), and evidently a place of great antiquity (Gen. xxxviii. 1, 12. 20).
Ag'abus (locust). A Christian prophet in the apostolic age, mentioned in (Acts xi. 28 and xxi. 10). He predicted (Acts xi. 28) that a famine would take place in the reign of Claudius "throughout all the world."

Agag. Possibly the title of the kings of Amalek, like Pharaoh of Egypt. One king of this name is mentioned in Num. xxiv. 7, and another in 1 Sam. xv. 8, 9, 20, 32. The latter was the king of the Amalekites, whom Saul spared, together with the best of the spoil, although it was the well known will of Jehovah that the Amalekites should be extirpated (Ex. xvii. 14).
Age. Old age. In early stages of civilization, when experience is the only source of practical knowledge, old age has its special value, and consequently its special honors. A further motive was superadded in the case of the Jew, who was taught to consider old age as a reward for piety, and a signal token of God's favor. For these reasons the aged occupied a prominent place in the social and political system of the Jews.
Ag'riculture. This, though prominent in the scriptural narrative concerning Adam, Cain, and Noah, was little cared for by the patriarchs. The pastoral life was the means of keeping the sacred race, whilst yet a family, distinct from mixture and locally unattached, especially whilst in Egypt. When, grown into a nation they conquered their future seats, agriculture supplied a similar check on

As'aron. [EKRON.] ANCIENT PLOUGH AND YOKES.
As'cho. Asse. (hot sand, the PTOLEMAIS of the Maccabees and N. T.). Now called Acca, or more usually by Europeans, St. Jean d'Acre, the most important sea-port town on the Syrian coast, about 30 miles S. of Tyre.
Auel'dama (field of blood). The name given by the Jews of Jerusalem to a field near Jerusalem purchased by Judas with the money which he received for the betrayal of Christ, and so called from his violent death therein (Acts i. 19). The "field of blood" is now shown on the steep southern face of the valley or ravine of Hinnom.
Aoh'a'ia. Signifies, in the N. T., a Roman province.
Aoh'a'ious. A name of a Christian (1 Cor. xvi. 17, subscription No. 25).
Aoh'sah (anklet). Daughter of Caleb. Her father promised her in marriage to whoever should take Deber. Othniel, her father's younger brother, took that city, and accordingly received the hand of Aehsah as his reward.
Aoh'sib. A city in the lowlands of Judah.
Acts of the Apostles. A second treatise by the author of the third Gospel, traditionally known as Luke. The book commences with an inscription to one Theophilus, who was probably a man of birth and station. But its design must not be in Scripture to the first man. It apparently has reference to the ground from which he was formed, which is called in Hebrew Adamah. The idea of redness of color seems to be inherent in either word. The creation of man was the work of the sixth day. His formation was the ultimate object of the Creator. It was with reference to him that all things were designed. He was to be the "roof and crown" of the whole fabric of the world. In the first nine chapters of Genesis there appear to be three distinct histories relating more or less to the life of Adam. The first extends from Gen. i. 1 to ii. 3, the second from ii. 4 to iv. 26, the third from v. 1 to the end of ix. The word at the commencement of the two latter narratives, which is rendered there and elsewhere generations, may also be rendered history. The object of the first of these narratives is to record the creation; that of the second to give an account of paradise, the original sin of man, and the immediate posterity of Adam. The third contains mainly the history of Noah, referring, it would seem, to Adam and his descendants principally in relation to that patriarch. Adam is stated to have lived 930 years. His sons mentioned in Scripture are Cain, Abel and Seth; it is implied however that he had others.

ALMOND BLOSSOM AND FRUIT.
 the foreign intercourse and speedy demoralization, especially as regards idolatry, which commerce would have caused. Thus agriculture became the basis of the Mosaic commonwealth.
 Land-marks were deemed sacred (Deut. xix. 14), and the inalienability of the heritage was insured by its reversion to the owner in the year of jubilee so that only so many years of occupancy could be sold (Lev. xxv. 8-16, 23-35).

Crops.—The cereal crops of constant mention are wheat and barley, and more rarely rye and millet (?). Of the two former, together with the vine, olive, and fig, the use of irrigation, the plough and the harrow, mention is made in the book of Job (xxx. 40; xv. 33; xxiv. 6; xxix. 19; xxxix. 10).

Ploughing and Sowing.—The plough was probably very light, one yoke of oxen usually sufficing to draw it. Mountains and steep places were hoed (Is. vii. 25). Sowing also took place without previous ploughing, the seed, as in the parable of the sower, being scattered broadcast, and ploughed in afterwards. The soil was then brushed over with a light harrow, often of thorn bushes. In highly irrigated spots the seed was trampled in by the cattle (1. xxvii. 20), as in Egypt by goats.

Reaping and Threshing.—The wheat, &c., were reaped by the sickle, or pulled up by the roots. They were bound in sheaves—a process prominent in Scripture. The sheaves or heaps were carted (Am. ii. 13) to the floor—a circular spot of hard ground, probably, as now, from 50 to 80 or 100 feet in diameter. On these the oxen, &c., forbidden to be muzzled (Deut. xxv. 4), trampled out the grain, as we find represented on the Egyptian monuments.

ALTAR OF BURNT OFFERING.

Winnowing.—The "shovel" and "fan" (Is. xxx. 24), the precise difference of which is doubtful, indicate the process of winnowing—a conspicuous part of ancient husbandry (Ps. xxxv. 5; Job xxi. 18; Is. xvii. 13), and important, owing to the slovenly threshing. Evening was the favorite time (Ruth. iii. 2), when there was mostly a breeze.

The "fan" (Matt. iii. 12) was perhaps a broad shovel which threw the grain up against the wind. The last process was the shaking in a sieve to separate dirt and refuse (Am. ix. 9).

A'gur (one of the assembly). The son of Jakeh, an unknown Hebrew sage, who uttered or collected the sayings of wisdom recorded in Prov. xxx.

A'hab (father's brother). Son of Omri, seventh king of Israel, reigned B. C. 910-896. He married Jezebel, daughter of Ethbaal, king of Tyre; and in obedience to her wishes, caused a temple to be built to Baal in Samaria itself, and an oracle grove to be consecrated to Astarte. (See 1 K. xviii. 19).

Ahasuerus (Achashverosh—lion-king). The name of one Median and two Persian kings mentioned in the O. T. (1) In Dan. ix. 1, Ahasuerus is said to be the father of Darius the Mede. This first Ahasuerus is Cyaxares, the conqueror of Nineveh. (2) In Est. iv. 6. The enemies of the Jews, desirous to frustrate the building of Jerusalem, send accusations against them to Ahasuerus king of Persia. This must be Cambyses. (3) The third is the Ahasuerus of the book of Esther.

Ahava (river). A river (Est. viii. 21) on the banks of which Ezra collected the second expedition which returned with him from Babylon to Jerusalem.

Ahas (possessor). Eleventh king of Judah, son of Jotham, reigned 751-726.

Ahasiah (halden of Jehovah). Son of Ahab and Jezebel, eighth king of Israel, reigned B. C. 896-895.

A-i (heap of ruins). (1) A city lying east of Bethel and "beside Bethaven" (Josh. vii. 2, viii. 9). (2) A city of Ammonites, apparently attached to Heshbon (Jer. xlix. 3).

Ais'lon (gazelle-place). "A place of deer or gazelles." (1) A city of the Kohathites, originally allotted to the tribe of Dan. (2) A place in Zebulun, mentioned as the burial-place of Elon (Judg. xii. 12).

Ai'leth Bha'har (i. e. the hind of the morning dawn). Found once only in the Bible, in the title of Ps. xxii. It probably describes to the musician the melody to which the psalm was to be played.

A'in (fountain). (1) One of the land-marks on the eastern boundary of Palestine (Num. xxxiv. 11). (2) One of the cities of Judah (Josh. xv. 32).

Ak-rab'blm (scorpions). "THE ASCENT OF," and "THE GOING UP TO;" also "MAALEH-ACRABIM" (= "the scorpion-pass"). A pass between the south end of the Dead Sea and Zin.

Alaba'ster. Occurs in the N. T. only in the notice of the alaba'ster-box of ointment which a woman brought to our Lord. The contents of which she poured on the head of the Saviour (Matt. xxvi. 7; Mark xiv. 3; Luke. vii. 37). The ancients considered alaba'ster to be the best material in which to preserve their ointments.

Alexan'der (man-helper). King of Macedon, surnamed THE GREAT, the son of Philip and Olympias, was born at Pella, B. C. 356, and succeeded his father B. C. 336. Two years afterwards he crossed the Hellespont (B. C. 334) to carry out the plans of his father, and execute the mission of Greece to the civilized world. The battle of the Ahim'as. Son of Zadok, the high-priest in David's reign, and celebrated for his swiftness of foot.

Ahi'man (river). One of the three giant Anakim who inhabited Mount Hebron (Num. xiii. 22, 23).

Ahimelech (king's brother). Son of Ahitub (1 Sam. xxii. 11, 12), and high-priest at Nob in the days of Saul.

Ahi'sam. The daughter of Ahimaaz and wife of Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 50).

Ahi'ram. One of the sons of Benjamin.

Ahithophel (foolish). A native of Giloh, was a privy councillor of David, whose wisdom was highly esteemed, though his name had an exactly opposite signification (2 Sam. xvi. 23).

Ahi'tub. Father of Ahimelech and grandson of Eli, of the family of Ithamar (1 Sam. xiv. 3; xxii. 9, 11).

Aheliba'mah (tent of the high place). One of the three wives of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 2, 25).

Granicus was followed by the subjugation of western Asia; and in the following year the fate of the East was decided at Issus (B. C. 333). Tyre and Gaza were reduced and treated with unusual severity B. C. 332). Egypt next submitted to him; and in B. C. 331 he founded Alexandria, which remains to the present day the most characteristic monument of his life and work.

In the prophetic visions of Daniel the emblem by which Alexander is typified (a he goat) suggests the notions of strength and speed; and the universal extent (Dan. viii. 5. . . from the west on the face of the whole earth) and marvellous rapidity of his conquests (Dan. i. c., he touched not the ground) are brought forward as the characteristics of his power, which was directed by the strongest personal impetuosity (Dan. viii. 6, in the fury of his power). He ruled with great dominion, and did according to his will (ix. 3), "and there was none that could deliver . . . out of his hand" (viii. 7).

Alexan'der Balas. Was, according to some, a natural son of Antiochus IV. Epiphanes, but he was more generally regarded as an impostor who falsely assumed the connection.

Alexan'der Jannaeus. (1) Son of Simon the Cyrenian (Mark xv. 21). (2) One of the kindred of Annas (Acts iv. 6). 3. A Jew at Ephesus (Acts xix. 33). 4. An Ephesian Christian (1 Tim. i. 20). 5. ALEXANDER the coppersmith, mentioned by the same apostle (2 Tim. iv. 14).

Alexan'dria. (3 Macc. iii. 1; Acts xviii. 24, vi. 9). The Hellenic, Roman, and Christian capital of Egypt, was founded by Alexander the Great, B. C. 332, who himself traced the ground-plan of the city. The work thus begun was continued after the death of Alexander by the Ptolemies. Its population and wealth were enormous. Its importance as one of the chief corn-ports of Rome secured for it the general favor of the first emperors. According to Josephus, Alexander himself assigned to the Jews a place in his new city. Their numbers and importance were rapidly increased under the Ptolemies by fresh immigrations and untiring industry. Pulo estimates the number of the Alexandrian Jews in his time at little less than 1,000,000; and adds, that two of the five districts of Alexandria were called "Jewish districts," and that many Jews lived scattered in the remaining three. According to the common legend, St. Mark first "preached the Gospel in Egypt, and founded the first Church in Alexandria."

Allelu'ia. So written in Rev. xix. 7, foll., or more properly HALLELUJAH, "praise ye Jehovah."

Al'lon. 1. A large strong tree of some description, probably an oak. 2. AL'LOH-BA'CHUTIT ("oak of weeping"), the tree under which Rebekah's nurse, Deborah, was buried (Gen. xxv. 8).

Almond-Trees. The almond-tree is a native of Asia and North Africa. The height is about 12 or 14 feet; the flowers are pink. The covering of the fruit is downy and succulent, enclosing the hard shell which contains the kernel.

Alms. The duty of alms-giving, especially in kind, consisting chiefly in portions to be left designedly from produce of the field, the vineyard, and the oliveyard (Lev. xix. 9, 10, xxiii. 22; Deut. xv. 11, xxiv. 19, xxvi. 2-13; Ruth ii. 2), is strictly enjoined by the Law. Every third year also (Deut. xiv. 28) each proprietor was directed to share the tithe of his produce with "the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow." The Pharisees were zealous in alms-giving, but too ostentatious in their mode of performance, for which our Lord finds fault with them; Matt. vi. 2. The duty of relieving the poor was not neglected by the Christians (Matt. vi. 1-4; Luke xiv. 13; Acts xx. 35; Gal. ii. 10).

Aloes, Lign Aloes (in Heb. Ahālim Ahāloth) the name of a costly and sweet-smelling wood which in Num. xxiv. 6; Ps. xiv. 8; Prov. vii. 17; Cant. iv. 14; John xix. 39.

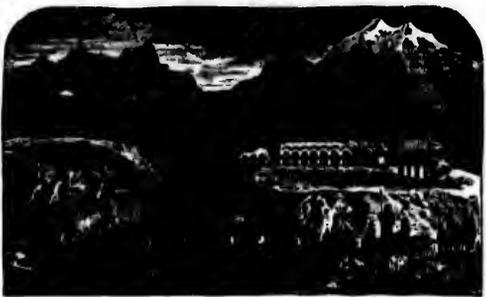

THE ARAB'S TENT

Alpha'us. The father of the Apostle James the Less (Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18; Luke vi. 15; Acts i. 13), and husband of that Mary who, with the mother of Jesus and others, was standing by the cross during the crucifixion (John xix. 25).

Al'tar. (A). The first altar of which we have any account is that built by Noah when he left the ark (Gen. viii. 20). In the early times altars were usually built in certain spots hallowed by religious associations, e. g. where God appeared (Gen. xii. 7, xiii. 18, xxvi. 25, xxxv. 1). Generally of course they were erected for the offering of sacrifice; but in some instances they appear to have been only memorials.

Amal'chites. A nomadic tribe, which occupied the peninsula of Sinat and the wilderness intervening between the southern hill-ranges of Palestine and the border of Egypt (Num. xiii. 29; 1 Sam. xv. 7; xxvii. 8).

Am'sa (burden). Son of Ithra by Abigail, David's sister (2 Sam. xvii. 25). He joined Absalom in his rebellion, and was by him appointed commander-in-chief in the place of Joab, by whom he was totally defeated in the forest of Ephraim (2 Sam. xviii. 6).

Am'ath. [HAMATH.]

Amaz'ah (whom Jehovah strengthens). 1. Son of Joash, and eighth king of Judah, reigned B. C. 837-809. He succeeded to the throne at the age of 25, on the murder of his father, and punished the murderers. 2. A descendant of Simeon (1 Chr. iv. 34). 3. A Levite (1 Chr. vi. 45). 4. Priest of the golden calf at Bethel (Am. vii. 10, 12, 14).

Am'en' (truth).

Literally "true;" and, used as a substantive, "that which is true," "truth" (Is. lxxv. 16); a word used in strong asseverations, fixing as it were the stamp of truth upon the assertion which it accompanied, and making it binding as an oath (comp. Num. v. 22).

Am'mon, Am'menites, Children of Ammon. A people descended from Ben-Ammi, the son of Lot by his younger daughter (Gen. xix. 38; comp. Ps. lxxxiii. 7, 8), as Moab was by the elder; and dating from the destruction of Sodom.

Am'mon. An Egyptian divinity. One of the eight gods of the first order, and chief of the triad of Thebes.

Am'mon (builder). King of Judah, son and successor of Manasseh, reigned two years, from B. C. 642 to 640.

Amerites, the Am'rites, i. e. the dwellers on the summits—mountaineers—one of the chief nations who possessed the land of Canaan before its conquest by the Israelites.

Am'os (burden). A native of Tekoa in Judah, originally a shepherd and dresser of sycamore-trees, was called by God's Spirit to be a prophet, although not trained in any of the regular prophetic schools (i. i. vii. 14, 15).

Am'ose (strong). Father of the prophet Isaiah.

Amphip'olis. A city of Macedonia, through which Paul and Silas passed on their way from Philippi to Thessalonica (Acts xvii. 1).

Am'ulets were ornaments, gems, scrolls, &c., worn as preservatives against the power of enchantments, and generally inscribed with mystic forms or characters.

Am'nah (answer). The son of Zibeon, the son of Seir the Horite (Gen. xxxvi. 20, 24), a "duke" or prince of his tribe, and father of Aholibamah, one of the wives of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 2, 14, 25).

Anah'rath (pass). A place within the border of Issachar.

An'akim. (neck-chain). A race of giants, descendants of Arba (Josh. xv. 13, xxi. 11), dwelling in the southern part of Canaan, and particularly at Hebron.

Anam'molech (kingly image). One of the idols worshipped by the colonists introduced into Samaria from Sepharvaim (2 K. xvii. 31).

Anan'as. 1. A high-priest in Acts xxiii. 2-5, xxiv. 1. 2. A disciple at Jerusalem, husband of Sapphira (Acts v. 1-11). Having sold his goods for the benefit of the church, he kept back part of the price. St. Peter denounced the fraud, and Ananias fell dead and expired. 3. A Jewish disciple at Damascus (Acts ix. 10-17), of high repute (Acts xxii. 12).

Anāth'ama (suspended). Which literally means a thing suspended, is the equivalent of the Hebrew word signifying a thing or person detested. Any object so devoted to Jehovah was irremovable.

The word anathema frequently occurs in St. Paul's writings, and is generally translated accursed.

An'athoth (city). A priests' city belonging to the tribe of Benjamin with "suburbs" (Josh. xxi. 18; 1 Chr. vi. 60).

An'drew (strong man). One among the first called of the Apostles of our Lord (John i. 40; Matt. iv. 18); brother (whether elder or younger is uncertain) of Simon Peter (ibid.). He was of Bethsaida, and had been a disciple of John the Baptist. On hearing Jesus a second time designated by him as the Lamb of God, he left his former master, and, in company with another of John's disciples, attached himself to our Lord. By his means his brother Simon was brought to Jesus (John i. 41).

Mount Ararat, Armenia.

Ang'els (messengers). By the word "angels" (i. e. "messengers" of God) we ordinarily understand a race of spiritual beings, of a nature exalted far above that of man, although infinitely removed from that of God, whose office is "to do Him service in heaven, and by His appointment to succor and defend men on earth."

An'as. The son of one Seth, was appointed high-priest in the year A. D. 7, by Quirinus, the imperial governor of Syria. Our Lord's first hearing (John xviii. 13) was before Annas, who then sent him bound to Caiaphas. He lived to old age, having had five sons high-priests.

An'ointing. In Holy Scripture, is either I. Material, with oil, or II. Spiritual, with the Holy Ghost.

Antioch. 1. In SYRIA. The capital of the Greek kings of Syria, and afterwards the residence of the Roman governors of the provinces which bore the same name. No city, after Jerusalem, is so intimately connected with the history of the apostolic church.—The chief interest of Antioch is connected with the progress of Christianity among the heathen. Here the first Gentile church was founded (Acts xi. 20, 21); here the disciples of Jesus Christ were first called Christians (xi. 26). It was from Antioch that St. Paul started on his three missionary journeys. 2. In PISIDIA (Acts xiii. 14, xiv. 19, 21; 2 Tim. iii. 11), on the borders of Phrygia. This city, like the Syrian Antioch, was founded by Seleucus Nicator. Under the Romans it became a colonia, and was also called Caesarea.

RAMLEH OR ARIMATHEA.

Anti'oehus II. (who lasts out). King of Syria, surnamed the God, succeeded his father Antiochus Soter B. C. 261.

Anti'oehus III. Surnamed the Great, grandson of the preceding, succeeded his brother Seleucus Keraunos, who was assassinated after a short reign B. C. 223. He prosecuted the war against Ptolemy Philopator with vigor, and at first with success. In B. C. 218 he drove the Egyptian forces to Sidon, conquered Samaria and Gilead, and wintered at Ptolemais, but was defeated next year at Raphia, near Gaza (B. C. 217), with immense loss, and in consequence made a peace with Ptolemy. During the next thirteen years Antiochus was engaged in strengthening his position in Asia Minor, and on the frontiers of Parthia, and by his successes gained his surname of the Great.

His victorious course was checked at Thermopylae (B. C. 191), and after subsequent reverses he was finally defeated at Magnesia, in Lydia, B. C. 190. In B. C. 187 he attacked a rich temple of Belus in Elymais, and was slain by the people who rose in its defence.

Anti'oehus IV., Epiph'anes (the illustrious). Was the youngest son of Antiochus the Great. He was given as a hostage to the Romans (B. C. 188) after his father's defeat at Magnesia. In B. C. 175 he was released by the intervention of his brother Seleucus. Antiochus was at Athens when Seleucus was assassinated by Heliodorus. He took advantage of his position, easily expelled Heliodorus who had usurped the crown, and himself obtained the kingdom by flatteries (Dan. xi. 21).

Anti'oehus V., Eu'pator (of noble descent). Succeeded his father Antiochus IV. B. C. 164, while still a child, under the guardianship of Lyfias (1 Macc. iii. 32, vi. 17), though Antiochus had on his death-bed assigned this office to Philip, his own foster brother (1 Macc. vi. 14, 15, 55; 2 Macc. ix. 29).

Antiochus VI. Was the son of Alexander Balas and Cleopatra. After his father's death (146 B. C.) he was brought forward (c. 145 B. C.) as the claimant to the throne of Syria, against Demetrius Nicator by Tryphon (1 Macc. xli. 39), the young king, and ascended the throne (1 Macc. xlii. 31).

Anti'oehus VII. Side'tos (of Side, in Pamphylia), King of Syria, was the second son of Demetrius I. When his brother Demetrius Nicator was taken prisoner (c. 141 B. C.), he obtained possession of the throne (137 B. C.), having expelled the usurper Tryphon (1 Macc. xv. i. ff.), in a campaign against the Parthians he was entirely defeated by Phraortes II. (Arsaces VII.), and fell in the battle c. n. c. 127-6.

Apes (Heb. Apshim). Are mentioned in 1 K. x. 22, and 2 Chr. ix. 21. Apes were brought from the same country which supplied ivory and peacocks, both of which are common in Ceylon.

Apol'os. A Jew from Alexandria, eloquent (which may also mean learned) and mighty in the Scriptures; one instructed in the way of the Lord, but on his coming to Ephesus was more perfectly taught by Aquila and Priscilla, and became a preacher of the Gospel in Corinth (Acts xviii. 27, xix. 1), where he watered that which Paul had planted (1 Cor. iii. 6).

Apol'ycer, or, as it is literally in the margin of the A. V. of Rev. ix. 11, "a destroyer," is the rendering of the Hebrew word ABADDON, "the angel of the bottomless pit."

Apos'tle (one sent forth). In the N. T., originally the official name of those Twelve of the disciples whom Jesus chose to send forth first to preach the Gospel and to be with Him during the course of His ministry on earth. The Apostles were from the lower ranks of life, simple and uneducated; some of them were related to Jesus according to the flesh; some had previously been disciples of John the Baptist. They seem to have been all on an equality, both during and after the ministry of Christ on earth. Early in our Lord's ministry, He sent them out two and two to preach repentance, and perform miracles in His name (Matt. x.; Luke ix.).

On the Feast of Pentecost, ten days after our Lord's ascension, the Holy Spirit came down on the assembled church (Acts ii.); and from that time the Apostles became altogether different men, giving witness with power of the life and death and resurrection of Jesus as He had declared they should (Luke xxiv. 48; Acts i. 8, 22, ii. 32, iii. 15, v. 32 xlii. 1). First of all the mother-church at Jerusalem grew up under their hands (Acts iii.-vii), and the prominent figure is that of St. Peter.—The centre of the second period of the apostolic agency is Antioch, and the central figure of this and of the subsequent period is St. Paul. The third apostolic period is marked by the almost entire disappearance of the Twelve from the sacred narrative, and the exclusive agency of St. Paul, the great apostle of the Gentiles.

Ap'pli-to'rum (market-place of Ap'pius). A well-known station on the Appian Way, the great road which led from Rome to the neighborhood of the Bay of Naples (Acts xxviii. 13).

Aq'uila (eagle). A Jew whom St. Paul found at Corinth on his arrival from Athens (Acts xviii. 2). He was a native of Pontus, but had fled, with his wife Priscilla from Rome.

Ar, or Ar of Moab. One of the chief places of Moab (Is. xv. 1; Num. xxi. 28).

Ar'abah (waste—sterile). Although this word appears in the A. V. in its original shape only in Josh. xviii. 18, yet in the Hebrew text it is of frequent occurrence. It indicates more particularly the deep-sunken valley or trench which forms the most striking among the many striking natural features of Palestine, and which extends from the slope of Hermon to the Eilatitic Gulf (Gulf of Akabah) of the Red Sea; the most remarkable depression known to exist on the surface of the globe. Through the northern portion of this extraordinary fissure the Jordan rushes through the lakes of Huleh and Gennesareth down its tortuous course to the deep chasm of the Dead Sea.

Ar'abia (Arab country). A country known in the O. T. under two designations.—1. The East Country (Gen. xxv. 6); it appears that the Land of the East and Sons of the East indicates, primarily, the country east of Palestine, and the tribes descended from Ishmael and from Keturah; 2. 'Arāb and 'Arab, whence Arabia (2 Chr. ix. 14; Is. xxi. 13; Jer. xxv. 24; Ez. xxvii. 21). This name seems to have the same geographical reference as the former name to the country and tribes east of the Jordan, and chiefly north of the Arabian peninsula. These tribes, principally descended from Ishmael and from Keturah, have always led a wandering and pastoral life. Ar'abians. The nomadic tribes inhabiting the country to the east and south of Palestine.

ANISE.

A'rad. A Benjamite, son of Beriah, who drove out the inhabitants of Gath (1 Chr. viii. 15).
A'rad. A royal city of the Canaanites (Josh. xii. 14).
A'rah. (1.) An Asherite, of the sons of Ulla (1 Chr. vii. 39). (2.) The sons of Arah returned with Zerubbabel in number 775, according to Ezr. ii. 5, but 652, according to Neh. vii. 10. One of his descendants, Shechaniah, was the father-in-law of Tobiah the Ammonite (Neh. vi. 10).

WILD ASS.

Aram (height). The name by which the Hebrews designated, generally, the country lying to the north-east of Palestine.
A'ram-naharain. (Ps. lx. title). [ARAM.]
A'ram-so'bah. (Ps. lx. title). [ARAM, I.]

A'ramtess. A female inhabitant of Aram (1 Chr. vii. 14).

A'ran. A Horite, son of Dishan and brother of Uz (Gen. xxxvi. 28; 1 Chr. i. 42).

Ar'arat (holy land). A mountainous district of Asia, mentioned in the Bible in connection with the following events:—(1.) As the resting-place of the Ark (Gen. viii. 4); (2.) as the asylum of the sons of Sennacherib (2 K. xix. 37; Is. xxxvii. 38); (3.) as the ally, and probably the neighbor, of Minni and Aschenaz (Jer. li. 27). (1.) Its elevation. It rises to a height of from 6000 to 7000 feet above the level of the sea. (2.) Its geographical position.

The Armenian plateau stands equidistant from the Euxine and the Caspian seas on the N., and between the Persian Gulf and the Mediterranean on the S. Viewed with reference to the dispersion of the nations, Armenia is the true centre of the world.

Araunah (yah is strong). A Jebusite who sold his threshing-floor on Mount Moriah to David as a site for an altar to Jehovah (2 Sam. xxiv. 18-24).

Arohela'us. Son of Herod the Great, by a Samaritan woman, Malthaké, and, with his brother Antipas, brought up at Rome.

Aroop'agus. (hill of Ares). [MARS' HILL.]

Ar'gob (stony). A tract of country on the east of the Jordan, in Bashan, the kingdom of Og, containing 60 great and fortified cities.

Arimatea's. "A city of Judaea." It is identified by many with the modern Ramlah.

Ark, Noah's. [NOAH.]

Ark of the Covenant. The first piece of the tabernacle's furniture, for which precise directions were delivered (Ex. xxv.). The ark, when transported was enveloped in the "veil" of the dismantled tabernacle, in the curtain of badgers' skins, and in a blue cloth over all, and was therefore not seen (Num. iv. 5, 20). Its purpose or object was to contain inviolate the Divine autograph of the two tables, that "covenant" from which it derived its title. It was also probably a reliquary for the pot

Acampsis pour down their waters in different directions; the two first to the Persian Gulf, the last two respectively to the Caspian and Euxine seas.

Armlet. An ornament universal in the East, especially among women; used by princes as one of the insignia of royalty.

Arms, Armor.—I. Offensive weapons: Arms. II. Defensive weapons: Armor.—I. Offensive Weapons. (1.) The Chereb, or "SWORD." Very little can be gathered as to its shape, size, material, or mode of use. It was carried in a sheath (1 Sam. xvii. 51) slung by a girdle (1 Sam. xxv. 13), and resting upon the thigh (Ps. xlv. 3). (2.) Next to the sword was the SPEAR. It was the weapon of Goliath (1 Sam. xvii. 7, 45), and also of other giants (2 Sam. xxiii. 21) and mighty warriors. (3.) The Bow, Kesheth. It is met with in the earliest stages of the history, in use both for the chase (Gen. xxi. 20, xxvii. 3) and war (xlvii. 22). (4.) The SLING is first mentioned in Judg. xx. 16. II. Armor. I.

ASHTORETH.

The BREASTPLATE, enumerated in the description of the arms of Goliath, a "coat of mail" literally a "breastplate of scales" (1 Sam. xvii. 5).

As's. Son of Abijah, and third king of Judah (II. C. 956-916).

Ash'dod or Aso'tus (Acts viii. 40). One of the five confederate cities of the Philistines, situated about 30 miles from the southern frontier of Palestine, 3 from the Mediterranean Sea, and nearly midway between Gaza and Joppa. Its chief importance arose from its position on the high road from Palestine to Egypt. It is now an insignificant village, with no memorials of its ancient importance, but is still called Esud.

animal from what he is in Western Europe. The most noble and honorable amongst the Jews were wont to be mounted on asses; and in this manner our Lord Himself made His triumphant entry into Jerusalem (Matt. xxi. 2).

Astyages. The last king of the Medes, B. C. 595-560, or B. C. 592-558, who was conquered by Cyrus (Bel and Dragon, 1). The name is identified by Rawlinson and Niebuhr with Deioes = Ashdāhāk, the ancestor of the Median power.

Athens. The capital of Attica, and the chief seat of Grecian learning and civilization during the golden period of the history of Greece. St. Paul visited it in his journey from Macedonia, and appears to have remained there some time (Acts xvii. 14-34). Under the administration of Pericles, Athens was adorned with numerous public buildings, which existed in all their glory when St. Paul visited the city. The Acropolis was the centre of the architectural splendor of Athens. After the Persian wars, the hill had ceased to be inhabited, and was appropriated to the worship of Athena and to the other guardian deities of the city. It was covered with the temples of gods and heroes; and thus its platform presented not only a sanctuary, but a museum, containing the finest productions of the architect and the sculptor, in which the whiteness of the marble was relieved by brilliant colors, and rendered still more dazzling by the transparent clearness of the Athenian atmosphere.

Atōnement, The day of (at-ōnement). I. The great day of national humiliation, and the only one commanded in the Mosaic law. [FASTS.] The mode of its observance is described in Lev. xvi., and the conduct of the people is emphatically enjoined in Lev. xxiii. 26-32. II. It was kept on the tenth day of Tisri, that is, from the evening of the ninth to the evening of the tenth of that month, five days before the Feast of Tabernacles. [FESTIVALS.] III. It was kept by the people as a high solemn sabbath. On this occasion only the high-priest was permitted to enter into the Holy of Holies.

ASSYRIAN SCULPTURE, SHOWING THE KING, THE HOLY TREE, HORSES, SERVANTS, ETC.

Ash'er, Apoc. and N. T. A'ser (happy). The eighth son of Jacob, by Zilpah, Leah's hand-maid (Gen. xxx. 13).

Ash'kelon, As'kelon, Apoc. Assalon. One of the five cities of the lords of the Philistines (Josh. xiii. 3; 1 Sam. vi. 17), but less often mentioned and apparently less known to the Jews than the other four. Samson went down from Tinnath to Ashkelon (Judg. xiv. 19), as if to a remote place, whence his exploit was not likely to be heard of.

Ash'taroth and once As'taroth. A city on the E. of Jordan, in Bashan, in the kingdom of Og, doubtless so called from being a seat of the worship of the goddess of the same name.

Ash'toroth. The principal female divinity of the Phoenicians, called Ishtar by the Assyrians, and Astarte by the Greeks and Romans. She was by some ancient writers identified with the moon.

Asiar'ehas (chief of Asia, A. V.; Acts xix. 31). Officers chosen annually by the cities of that part of the province of Asia, of which Ephesus was, under Roman government, the metropolis. They had charge of the public games and religious theatrical spectacles, the expenses of which they bore.

Asp (pehen). The Hebrew word occurs in the six following passages:—Deut. xxii. 33; Job xx. 14, 16; Ps. lviii. 5, xci. 13; 1s. xi. 8. It is expressed in the passages from the Psalms by adder in the text of the A. V., and by asp in the margin; elsewhere the text of the A. V. has asp in the representative of the original word pehen.

Ass. The ass in Eastern countries is a very different

Angus'tus Cæs'ar (venerable). The first Roman emperor. He was born A. U. C. 691, B. C. 63. His father was Caius Octavius; his mother Ati, daughter of Julia, the sister of C. Julius Caesar. He was principally educated by his great-uncle Julius Caesar, and was made his heir.

After Herod's death in A. D. 4, Augustus divided his dominions, almost exactly according to his dying directions, among his sons. Augustus died in Nola, in Campania, Aug. 19, A. U. C. 767, A. D. 14, in his 76th year.

Azar'iah. A common name in Hebrew and especially in the families of the priests of the line of

ELEAZAR, whose name has precisely the same meaning as AZARIAH. It is nearly identical, and is often confounded with Ezra, as well as with Zerubiah and Seraiah.

Ba'anah. Son of Rimmon, a Benjamite, who, with his brother Rechab, murdered Ishbosheth. For this, they were killed by David, and their mutilated bodies hung up over the pool at Hebron (2 Sam. iv. 2).

THE ACROPOLIS AT ATHENS.

Azazel. A Levite musician in the reign of David, appointed to play the harp in the service which attended the procession by which the ark was brought up from the house of Obed-edom (1 Chr. xv. 21).

B.

Baal. A Reubenite, whose son or descendant Beerah was carried off by the invading army of Assyria under Tiglath-Pileser (1 Chr. v. 5).

Baal (sun or lord). The supreme male divinity of the Phoenician and Canaanitish nations, as ASHORETH was their supreme female divinity. Both names have the peculiarity of being used in the plural, and it seems certain that these plurals designate not statues of divinities, but different modifications of the divinities themselves. There can be no doubt of the very high antiquity of the worship of Baal. We find it established among the Moabites, and their allies the Midianites, in the time of Moses (Num. xxii. 41), and through these nations the Israelites were

Babel, Bab'ylon (Gate of God). Is properly the capital city of the country of the Chaldeans. The city was built on both sides of the Euphrates, and formed a vast square, enclosed within a double line of high walls, the extent of the outer circuit being 480 stades, or about 56 miles. The entire area included would thus have been about 200 square miles. In each division of the town there was a fortress or stronghold, consisting in the one case of the royal palace, in the other of the great temple of Belus. The two portions of the city were united by a bridge, composed of a series of stone piers with movable platforms of wood

Ba'asha (bad), B. C. 953-951. Third sovereign of the separate kingdom of Israel, and the founder of its second dynasty. He was son of Ahijah, of the tribe of Issachar, and conspired against king Nadab, son of Jeroboam, when he was besieging the Philistine town of Gibbethon (1 K. xv. 27), and killed him with his whole family. Baasha died in the 24th year of his reign, and was honorably buried in the beautiful city of Tirzah (Cant. vi. 4).

perity of the place. Since then Babylon has been a quarry, from which all the tribes in the vicinity have derived the bricks with which they have built their cities. The "great city," "the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency," has thus emphatically "become heaps" (Jer. li. 37).

Babel, Tower of. The "tower of Babel" is only mentioned once in Scripture (Gen. xi. 4, 5), and then is incomplete. It was built of bricks, and the "stone" used for mortar was probably bitumen. When the Jews were carried captive into Babylonia, they were struck with the vast magnitude and peculiar character of certain of the Babylonian temples, in one or other of which they thought to recognize the very tower itself. The predominant opinion was in favor of the great temple of Nebo at Borsippa, the modern Birs-Nimrud.

Ba'aa (weeping). The Valley of. A valley in Palestine, through which the exiled Palmist sees in vision the pilgrims passing in their march towards the sanctuary of Jehovah at Zion (Ps. lxxxiv. 6).

Baoh'des (Son of Bacchus). A friend of Antiochus Epiphanes, and governor of Mesopotamia (1 Macc. vii. 8).

scurity as to the meaning of the word tachash, rendered "badger" in our A. V. (Ex. xxv. 5, xxxv. 7, &c.); the ancient versions seem nearly all agreed that it denotes not an animal, but a color, either black or sky-blue.

Bahurim (young men's village). A village, the slight notices remaining of which connect it almost exclusively with the flight of David (2 Sam. xvi. 5).

Bala'am (stranger). The son of Beor, a man endowed with the gift of prophecy (Num. xxii. 5). He belonged to the Midianites, and perhaps as the prophet of his people possessed the same authority that Moses did among the Israelites.

Balak (empty). Son of Zippor, king of the Moabites. Baldness. There are two kinds of baldness, viz: Artificial and natural. The latter seems to have been uncommon, since it exposed people to public derision, and is perpetually alluded to as a mark of squallor and misery (2 K. ii. 23; Is. lii. 24, xv. 2; Jer. xlvii. 5; Ez. vii. 18, &c.).

Balm (Heb. l'ori, l'eri). Occurs in Gen. xxxvii. 25, xliii. 11; Jer. viii. 22, xli. 11, li. 8; and Ez. xxvii. 17. It has a most fragrant smell, which is resinous, balsamic, and very agreeable.

Bamah (lit. "high-place").

Ban'quets, among the Hebrews, were not only means of social enjoyment, but were a part of the observance of religious festivity. At the three solemn festivals the family also had its domestic feast (Deut. xvi. 11). Probably both males and females went up (1 Sam. i. 9) together, to hold the festival. Sacrifices, both ordinary and extraordinary (Ex. xxiv. 15; Judg. xlv. 23), included a banquet, and El's sons made this latter the prominent part.

Bap'tism. It is well known that ablution or bathing seduce to the worship of this god under the particular form of Baal-Peor (Num. xxv. 3-18; Deut. iv. 3). In the times of the kings the worship of Baal spread greatly, and together with that of Asherah became the religion of the court and people of the ten tribes (1 K. xvi. 31-33, xviii. 19, 22).

stretching from one pier to another.

With the conquest by Cyrus commenced the decay and ruin of Babylon, though it continued a royal residence through the entire period of the Persian empire. After the death of Alexander the Great, the removal of the seat of empire to Antioch, under the Seleucidae, gave the finishing blow to the pros-was common in most ancient nations as a preparation for prayers and sacrifice, or as expiatory of sin. The history of Israel and the Law of Moses abound with such illustrations (Gen. xxv. 2; Ex. xix. 10; Lev. xv. xvii. 15, xxii. 4, 6, xvi. 26, 28; Num. xix. 10). It was natural, that of all the people, the priests most especially should be required to purify themselves in this manner. It was first by baptism, then by unction, and lastly by sacrifice (Ex. xxix. 4, xl. 12; Lev. viii.).

From the Gospel history we learn that at that time ceremonial washings had been greatly multiplied by traditions of the doctors and elders (see Mark vii. 3, 4). The most important, and probably one of the earliest of these traditional customs, was the baptizing of proselytes.

into bread by mixing it with wheat, beans, lentils, millet, &c. (Ex. lv. 9), and as fodder for horses (1 K. iv. 28). Barley bread is even to this day little esteemed in Palestine.

Bar'nabas (exhorter). A name signifying "son of prophecy," or "exhortation" given by the Apostles (Acts iv. 36) to JOSEPH (or Joses), a Levite, of the island of Cyprus, who was early a disciple of Christ. In Acts ix. 27, we find him introducing the newly-converted Saul to the Apostles at Jerusalem, in a way which seems to imply previous acquaintance between the two.

Bar'nabas. [JOSEPH BARSABAS; JUDAS BARSABAS.] Bartholomew (son of Talmai). One of the Twelve Apostles. It has been not improbably conjectured that he is identical with Nathanael (John i. 45, ff.).

important district was bestowed on the half tribe of Manasseh (Josh. xiii. 29-31), together with "half Gilead."

Ba'chan-la'voth-ja'ir. A name given to Argob after its conquest by Jair (Deut. iii. 14).

Bash'emat's. Daughter of Ishmael, the last married of the three wives of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 3, 4, 13). In Gen. xxviii. 9 she is called Mahalath, whilst the name Bashemath is, in Gen. xxvi. 34 given to another of Esau's wives, the daughter of Elon the Hittite. This is probably due to a transcriber's error.

Ba'sin. Among the smaller vessels for the Tabernacle or Temple service, many must have been required to receive from the sacrificial victims the blood to be sprinkled for purification. The "basin" from which our Lord washed the disciples' feet was Athens and its Ports restored.

Barab'bas (son of Abba). A robber (John xviii. 40), who had committed murder in an insurrection (Mark xv. 7; Luke xxiii. 19) in Jerusalem, and was lying in prison at the time of the trial of Jesus before Pilate.

Ba'rah (lightning). Son of Abinoam of Kedesh, a refuge-city in Mount Naphtali, was incited by Deborah, a prophetess of Ephraim, to deliver Israel from the yoke of Jabin (Judg. iv.).

Barba'rian. "Every one not a Greek is a barbarian," is the common Greek definition, and in this strict sense the word is used in Rom. i. 14.

Bar'lay was grown by the Hebrews (Lev. xxvii. 16; Deut. viii. 8; Ruth ii. 17, &c.), who used it for baking into bread, chiefly amongst the poor (Judg. vii. 13; 2 K. iv. 42; John vi. 9, 13); for making

Bartime'us. A blind beggar of Jericho who (Mark x. 46 ff.) sat by the wayside begging as our Lord passed out of Jericho on His last journey to Jerusalem.

Ba'ruch. Son of Neriah, the friend (Jer. xxxii. 12), amanuensis (Jer. xxxvi. 4-32), and faithful attendant of Jeremiah (Jer. xxxvi. 10 ff.; B. C. 603), in the discharge of his prophetic office.

Bar'illai. A wealthy Gileadite who showed hospitality to David when he fled from Absalom (2 Sam. xvii. 27).

Ba'han (soft, rich soil, or basalt soil). A district on the east of Jordan. It is sometimes spoken of as the "land of Bashan" (1 Chr. v. 11). It was taken by the children of Israel after their conquest of the land of Sihon from Amon to Jabbok. This probably deeper and larger than the hand-basin for sprinkling.

Ba'ket. The Hebrew terms used in the description of this article are as follows: (1.) Sol, specially used for holding bread (Gen. xl. 16 ff.). (2.) Salsillath, used in gathering grapes (Jer. vi. 9). (3.) Tene, in which the first-fruits of the harvest were presented (Deut. xxvi. 2, 4). (4.) Clah, so called from its similarity to a birdcage or trap; it was used for carrying fruit (Am. viii. 1, 2). (5.) Dad, used for carrying clay to the brickyard (Ps. lxxxii. 6; pots, A. V.).

Bat (bat). There is no doubt whatever that the A. V. is correct in its rendering of this word (Lev. xl. 19; Deut. xiv. 18). Many travellers have noticed the immense numbers of bats that are found in caverns in the East, and Mr. Layan<sup>1</sup> says that on the occasion of a visit to a cavern some beasts compelled him to retreat.

Bath, Bathing. This was a prescribed part of the Jewish ritual of purification in cases of accident, leprosy or ordinary uncleanness (Lev. xv., xvi. 28, xxii. 6).

RUINS OF THE KASR, BABYLON.

Bāthahā/bā (promised—sworn). The daughter of Eliam (2 Sam. xi. 3), and the mother of four sons, Solomon (Matt. i. 6), Shimea, Shobab, and Nathan.

Bay-tree (carach). "A tree which grows in its own soil."

Bdellium (bedolach). (Gen. ii. 12; Num. xi. 7.) Bdellium is an odoriferous exudation from a tree which is perhaps the Bovassus flabelliformis, Lin., of Arabia Felix.

Beans (2 Sam. xvii. 28; Ezr. iv. 9) Beans are cultivated in Palestine, which produces many of the leguminous order of plants, such as lentils, kidney-beans, vetches, &c.

Bear (1 Sam. xvii. 34, 2 Sam. xvii. 8). The Syrian bear, which is, without doubt, the bear mentioned in the Bible, is still found on the higher mountains of Palestine.

Beard. Western Asiatics have always cherished the beard as the badge of the dignity of manhood, and attached to it the importance of a feature. The Egyptians, on the contrary, for the most part shaved the hair of the face and head. The beard is the object of an oath, and that on which blessings or shame are spoken of as resting. The removal of beard was part of the ceremonial treatment proper to a leper (Lev. xiv. 9).

Bed and Bed-chamber. We may distinguish in the Jewish bed five principal parts: (1.) The mattress, which was limited to a mere mat. (2.) The covering, a quilt. In summer a thin blanket or the outer garment worn by day sufficed. (3.) A pillow, formed of sheep's fleece or goat's skin, with a stuffing of cotton, &c. (4.) The bedstead was not always necessary, the divan, or platform along the side or end of an Oriental room, sufficing as a support for the bedding. (5.) The ornamental portions were pillars and a canopy (Jud. xiii. 9), ivory carvings, gold and silver, and probably mosaic work, purple and fine linen (Esth. i. 6; Cant. iii. 9, 10).

Bees (debrāh). (Deut. i. 44; Judg. xiv. 8; Ps. cxviii. 12; Is. vii. 18.) That Palestine abounded in bees is evident from the description of that land by Moses, for it was a land "flowing with milk and honey." There can be no doubt that the attacks of bees in Eastern countries are more to be dreaded than they are in more temperate climates.

Beel'sebul (fly-god). The title of a heathen deity, to whom the Jews ascribed the sovereignty of the evil spirits (Matt. x. 25, xii. 24; Mark iii. 22; Luke xi. 15 ff.). The correct reading is Beelzebub, and not Beelzebub, as given in the Syriac.

Be'er (well). One of the latest halting-places of the Israelites.

Be'er-lahā'l-roi (well of the living and seeing God). A well, or rather a living spring, between Kadesh and Bered, in the wilderness, "in the way to Shur."

Be'er-oth (wells). One of the four cities of the Hivites who deluded Joshua into a treaty of peace with them (Josh. ix. 17).

ORNAMENTAL BED.

Be'er-sheba (well of swearing or well of seven). The name of one of the old places in Palestine, which formed the southern limit of the country. There are at present on the spot two principal wells, and five smaller ones. The larger of the two, which lies to the east, is, according to the careful measurements of Dr. Robinson, 12½ feet diam., and at the time of his visit (Apr. 12) was 44½ feet to the surface of the water; the masonry which encloses the well reaches downwards for 28½ feet. The other well is 5 feet diam., and was 42 feet to the water. The curb-stones round the mouth of both wells are worn into deep grooves by the action of the ropes of so many centuries, and "look as if fluted or fluted all round."

Beesh'terah. One of the two cities allotted to the sons of Gershon, out of the tribe of Manasseh beyond Jordan (Josh. xxi. 27). It appears to be identical with Ashtaroth (1 Chr. vi. 71).

Beetle. [LOCUST.]

Beholding. [PUNISHMENTS.]

Behemoth (excellence). There can be little or no doubt that by this word (Job xl. 15-24) the hippopotamus is intended, since all the details descriptive of the behemoth accord entirely with the ascertained habits of that animal.

Be'la. One of the five cities of the plain which was spared at the intercession of Lot, and received the name of Zoar (Gen. xiv. 2, xix. 22).

Be'lial. Its meaning is worthlessness, and hence recklessness, lawlessness.

Bells. In Ex. xxviii. 33, the bells alluded to were the golden ones, according to the Rabbis, 72 in number, round the hem of the high-priest's ephod. The object of them was "that his sound might be heard when he went in unto the holy place, and when he came out, that he die not."

Belshazzar (Bel's prince). The last king of Babylon. According to the well-known narrative in Dan. v., he was slain during a splendid feast in his palace.

Belteshazzar. [DANIEL.]

Be-ne-be'rah (sons of lightning). One of the cities of the tribe of Dan (Josh. xix. 45.)

BALM.

Bene-ké'dem. "The children of the East."

Benhādād. The name of three kings of Damascus. —BENHADAD I. was either son or grandson of Rezon, and in his time Damascus was supreme in Syria. BENHADAD II., son of the preceding, and also king of Damascus. Long wars with Israel characterized his reign. BENHADAD III., son of Hazael, and his successor on the throne of Syria. The date of Benhadad III. is B. C. 840.

Ben'jamin (fortune). The youngest of the children of Jacob, and the only one of the thirteen who was born in Palestine. His birth took place on the road between Bethel and Bethlehem, a short distance from the latter, and his mother Rachel died in the act of giving him birth, naming him with her last breath Ben-oni, "son of my sorrow." This was by Jacob changed into Benjamin (Gen.

BEES OF PALESTINE.

xxxv. 16-18). Until the journeys of Jacob's sons, and of Jacob himself, into Egypt, we hear nothing of Benjamin. Henceforward the history of Benjamin is the history of the tribe. And up to the time of the entrance on the Promised Land that history is as meagre as it is afterwards full and interesting.

Bera'chah (blessing) Valley of. A valley in which Jehoshaphat and his people assembled to "bless" Jehovah after the overthrow of the hosts of Moabites, Ammonites, and Meunim, who had come against them, and which, from that fact, acquired its name of "the valley of blessing" (2 Chr. xx. 26).

Beré'a. A city of Macedonia, mentioned in Acts xvii. 10, 15.

Bethany, one mile east of Jerusalem.

Béred. (1.) A place in the south of Palestine, between which and Kadesh lay the well Lahai-roi (Gen. xvi. 14). (2.) A son or descendant of Ephraim.
Berani'oe and Bereni'ce (gift). The eldest daughter of Herod Agrippa I. (Acts xii. 1, &c.)
Béth. The most general word for a house or habitation. Like Aedes in Latin, and Dom in German, it has the special meaning of a temple or house of worship.
Beth-ab'ara. A place beyond Jordan, in which, according to the Received Text of the N. T., John was baptizing (John i. 28).
Beth'any (house of dates). A village which, scanty as are the notices of it contained in Scripture, is more intimately associated in our minds than perhaps any other place with the most familiar acts and scenes of the last days of the life of Christ. It was situated "at" the Mount of Olives (Mark xi. 1; Luke xix. 29), about fifteen stadia from Jerusalem (John xi. 18), on or near the usual road from Jericho to the city (Luke xix. 29 comp.). Beth-any has been commonly explained "House of Dates," but it more probably signifies "House of Misery" (H. Dixon, Holy Land, ii. 214, foll.).
Beth-béhal-mé'on. A place in the possessions of Reuben on the downs (A. V. "plain") east of Jordan (Josh. xiii. 17). The name is still attached to a ruined place of considerable size, a short distance to the S. W. of Heshbôn.
Beth-há'rah (house of the ford). Named only in Judg. vii. 24, as a point apparently south of the scene of Gideon's victory.
Beth-da'gon. (house of Dagon). A city in the low country of Judah (Josh. xv. 41), and therefore not far from the Philistine territory.
Beth'el (house of El). A well-known city and holy place of central Palestine. Of the origin of the name of Bethel there are accounts extant. (1.) It was bestowed on the spot by Jacob, under the awe inspired by the nocturnal vision of God (Gen. xxviii. 19). (2.) But according to the other account, Bethel received its name on the occasion of a blessing, bestowed by God upon Jacob after his return from Padanaram; at which time also (according to this narrative) the name of Israel was given him (Gen. xxxv. 14, 15). Here was the ark of the covenant under the charge of Phinehas, the grandson of Aaron (xx. 26-28, xxi. 4). Here Jeroboam placed one of the two calves of gold,

Beth'e'da. The Hebrew name of a reservoir or tank, with five "porches," close upon the sheep-gate or "market" in Jerusalem (John v. 2). The porches—i. e. cloisters or colonnades—were extensive enough to accommodate a large number of sick and infirm people, whose custom it was to wait there

A magnificent spring and a ruin between Jericho and the Jordan still bear the names of Ainhajla and Kür Hajla, and are doubtless on or near the old site.
Beth-hó'ron (house of caverns). The name of two towns or villages, an "upper" and a "nether" (Josh. xvi. 3, 5; 1 Chr. vii. 24), on the road from Gibben to Azebak (Josh. x. 10, 11).
Beth-jesh'imoth or Jesh'imoth (house of the wastes). A town or place east of Jordan. It was one of the limits of the encampment of Israel before crossing the Jordan.

for the "troubling of the water."
Beth-ga'mul (house of the camel). A town of Moab, in the downs east of Jordan (Jer. xlviii. 23, comp. 21).
Beth-ha'ran. One of the fenced cities on the east of Jordan, the same as BETH-ARAM, (Josh. xiii. 27).
Beth-hog'la and Hog'lah (house of part-ridge). A place on the border of Judah.
Beth-már'caboth (house of the chariots). One

ENTRANCE TO BETHLEHEM.

Bo'as. A wealthy Bethlehemite, kinsman to Elimelech, the husband of Naomi. He married Ruth, and redeemed the estates of her deceased husband Mahlon (iv. 1, ff.).

Booty consisted of captives of both sexes, cattle and whatever a captured city might contain, especially metallic treasures.

Bottle. The Arabs keep their water, milk and other liquors, in leathern bottles. These are made of goatskins. When the animal is killed they cut off its feet and its head, and they draw it in this manner out of the skin, without opening its belly.

Box-trs. Box-wood writing tablets are alluded to in 2 Esdr. xiv. 24).

BETHLEHEM.

Bo'ses (shining.—Teeth of the cliff). One of the two sharp rocks between the passages by which Jonathan entered the Philistine garrison (1 Sam. xiv. 4, 5).

Bs'kath. A city of Judah in the lowlands (Josh. xv. 39).

Bs'rah (enclosure; sheepfold). In Edom—the city of Jobab the son of Zerah, one of the early kings of that nation (Gen. xxxvi. 33; 1 Chr. i. 44).

GOLDEN CANDLESTICK.

Bracelets. [See ARMLET.] Bracelets of fine twisted Venetian gold are still common in Egypt. Men, as well as women, wore bracelets, as we see from Cent. v. 14. Layard says of the Assyrian kings: "The arms were encircled by armlets, and the wrists by bracelets."

Bread (Hebrew lacham). The preparation of bread as an article of food dates from a very early period; the earliest undoubted instance of its use is found in Gen. xviii. 6. The corn or grain employed was of various sorts; the best bread was made of wheat, which, after being ground, produced the "flour" or "meal" (Judg. vi. 19; 1 Sam. i. 24.) In the towns where professional bakers resided, there were, no doubt, fixed ovens, in shape and size resembling those in use among ourselves; but more usually each household possessed a portable oven, consisting of a stone or metal jar, about three feet high, which was heated inwardly with wood (1 K. xvii. 12; Is. xlv. 15; Jer. vii. 18) or dried grass and flower-stalks (Matt. vi. 30).

Brick. Herodotus (i. 179), describing the mode of building the walls of Babylon, says that the clay dug out of the ditch was made into bricks, as soon as it was carried up, and burnt in kilns. The bricks were cemented with hot bitumen, and at every thirtieth row crates of reeds were stuffed in (comp. Gen. xi. 3).

Brother. The Hebrew word is used in various senses in the O. T., as, any kinsman, and not a mere brother.

Bur'ial, Sepulchres. [TOMBS.] On this subject we have to notice: I. The place of burial, its site and shape; II. The mode of burial; III. The prevalent notions regarding this duty. (1.) A natural cave enlarged and adapted by excavation, or an artificial imitation of one, was the standard type of sepulchre. Sepulchres were marked sometimes by pillars, as that of Rachel, or by pyramids, as those of the Asmoneans at Modin. Such as were not otherwise noticeable were scrupulously "whited" (Matt. xxiii. 27) once a year, after the rains, before the passover, to warn passers-by of defilement (2.) "The manner of the Jews" included the use of spices. A portion of these were burnt in honor of the deceased. It was the office of the next of kin to perform and preside over the whole funeral office. The bier was borne by the nearest relatives. The grave-clothes were probably of the fashion wore in life. (3.) The precedent of Jacob and Joseph's remains being returned to the land of Canaan, was followed, in wish at least, by every pious Jew. Some of the Rabbis taught that only in that land could those who were buried obtain a share in the resurrection, which was to usher in Messiah's reign on earth.

Burnt-offering. The word is applied to the offering which was wholly consumed by fire on the altar, and the whole of which, except the refuse ashes, "ascended" in the smoke to God.

Ca'bal (little). A place named as one of the landmarks on the boundary of Asher (Josh. xix. 27).

Caesars'a (Acts viii. 40, ix. 30, x. 1, 24, xi. 11, xii. 19, xviii. 22, xxi. 8, 16, xxiii. 23, 33, xxv. 1, 4, 6, 13) was situated on the coast of Palestine, on the line of the great road from Tyre to Egypt, and about half way between Joppa and Dora. The distance from Jerusalem was about 70 miles; Josephus states it in round numbers as 600 stadia. It was the official residence of the Herodian kings, and of Festus, Felix, and the other Roman procurators of Judaea. Caesarea continued to be a city of some importance even in the time of the Crusades, and the name still lingers on the site (Kaisariyeh). Caesars'a Philipp'i. PANEAS (Pan). Is mentioned only in the two first Gospels (Matt. xvi. 13; Mark viii. 27), and in accounts of the same transactions. It was at the easternmost and most important of the two recognized sources of the Jordan, the other being at Tel-el-Kadi. The spring rises, and the city was built on a limestone terrace in a valley at the base of Mount Hermon. Caesarea Philippi has no O. T. history, though it has been not unreasonably identified with Baal-Gad.

Caesarea, Palestine.

Butter. Hasselquist describes the method of making butter employed by the Arab women: "they make butter in a leather bag, hung on three poles erected for the purpose, in the form of a cone, and drawn to and fro by two women."

Caia'phas (rock or depression). In full JOSEPH CAIAPHAS, high-priest of the Jews under Tiberius (Matt. xxvi. 3, 57; John xi. 49, xviii. 13, 14, 24, 28; Acts iv. 6). The Procurator Valerius Gratus appointed him to the dignity. He was son-in-law to Annas, [ANNAS.]

Cain (acquisition). He was the eldest son of Adam and Eve; he followed the business of agriculture; in a fit of jealousy, roused by the rejection of his own sacrifice and the acceptance of Abel's, he committed the crime of murder, for which he was expelled from Eden, and led the life of an exile; he settled in the land of Nod, and built a city which he named after his son Enoch.

He and Oshea, or Joshua, the son of Nun, were the only two of the whole number who encouraged the people to enter in boldly to the land, and take possession of it.

MOUNT CARMEL.

Cal'nán (possessor). (1.) Son of Enos, aged 70 years when he begat Mahalaleel his son. He lived 840 years afterwards, and died aged 910 (Gen. v. 9-14). (2.) Son of Arphaxad, and father of Sala, according to Luke iii. 35, 36, and usually called the second Cainan.

Cal'lah (old age). One of the most ancient cities of Assyria (Gen. x. 11). The site of Calah is probably marked by the Nimrod ruins.

Cal'dron. A vessel for boiling flesh (2 Chr. xxxv. 13.)

Cal'leb (dog). (1.) According to 1 Chr. ii. 9, 18, 19, 42, 50, the son of Hezron, the son of Pharez, the son of Judah, and the father of Hur by Ephrath.

Cal'vary (a bare skull). A word occurring in the A. V. only in Luke xxiii. 33, and there arising from the translators having literally adopted the word calvaria, i. e. a bare skull, the Vulgate rendering of kranion, which again is nothing but the Greek for GOLGOTHA. The popular expression "Mount Calvary" is not warranted by any statement in the accounts of the place of our Lord's crucifixion.

Cam'ol. (Heb. game). It is clear from Gen. xii. 16 that camels were early known to the Egyptians, though no representation of this animal has yet

"with camels that bare spices and gold and precious stones" (1 K. x. 2). John the Baptist wore a garment made of camel's hair (Matt. iii. 4; Mark i. 6), and some have supposed that Elijah "was clad in a dress of the same stuff." Dr. Kitto says "the Arabs adorn the necks of their camels with a band of cloth or leather, upon which are strung small shells called cowries in the form of half-moons." This very aptly illustrates Judg. viii. 21, 26. [The word erroneously translated "camels"

in Esth. viii. 10 probably signifies "mules" of a fine breed.] The speed of the dromedary has been greatly exaggerated, the Arabs asserting that it is swifter than the horse; eight or nine miles an hour is the utmost it is able to perform; this pace, however, it is able to keep up for hours together.

Cam'on (full of grain). The place where JAIR the Judge was buried (Judg. x. 5).

Camphire (Heb. sopher). There can be no doubt that "camphire" is an incorrect rendering of the Hebrew term, which occurs in the sense of some aromatic substance only in Cant. i. 14, iv. 13. The whole shrub is from four to six feet high. The Lawsonia alba, the only known species, belongs to the natural order Lythraceae.

Can'na of Galilee, once Cana in Galilee. A village or town not far from Capernaum, memorable as the scene of Christ's first miracle (John ii. 1, 11, iv. 46), as well as of a subsequent one (iv. 46, 54), and also as the native place of the Apostle Nathanael (xxi. 2). The traditional site is at Kifr Kenna, a small village about 4½ miles north-west of Nazareth.

Can'naan (bowed down). The fourth son of Ham (Gen. x. 6; 1 Chr. i. 8), the progenitor of the Phoenicians ("Zidon") and of the various nations who, before the Israelites conquest, peopled the sea-coast of Palestine, and generally the whole of the country westward of the Jordan (Gen. x. 13; 1 Chr. i. 13).

Can'naan, The Land of, lit. "Lowland," a name denoting the country west of the Jordan and Dead Sea, and between those waters and the Mediterranean; specially opposed to the "land of Gilead," that is, the high table-land on the east of the Jordan.

Can'naanite, The. The designation of the Apostle SIMON, otherwise known as "Simon Zelotes."

Can'naanite, The. The dwellers in the lowland. The whole of the country west of Jordan was a "lowland," as compared with the loftier and more extended tracts on the east. Like the Phoenicians, the Canaanites were probably given to commerce; and thus the name became probably in later times an occasional synonyme for a merchant (Job, xii. 6; Prov. xxxi. 24).

Can'dace. A queen of Ethiopia (Meroë), mentioned in Acts viii. 27. The name was not a proper name of an individual, but that of a dynasty of Ethiopian queens.

Candlestick, which Moses was commanded to make for the tabernacle, is described in Ex. xxv. 31-37; xxxvii. 17-24. It is called in Lev. xxiv. 4, "the pure," and in Eccles. xxvi. 17, "the holy candlestick." With its various appurtenances it required a talent of "pure gold," and it was not moulded, but "of beaten work."

Cane of Scripture. The. May be generally described as "the collection of books which form the songs, entitled in the A. V. THE SONG OF SOLOMON. According to the most generally received interpretation of the modern literalists, the Song is intended to display the victory of humble and constant love over the temptations of wealth and royalty.

Capernaum (village of Nahum). Was on the western shore of the Sea of Galilee (Matt. iv. 13) in the "land of Gennesaret" (Matt. xiv. 34.) It was of sufficient size to be always called a "city" (Matt. ix. 1; Mark i. 33); had its own synagogue in which our Lord frequently taught (John vi. 59; Mark i. 21; Luke iv. 33, 38). The only interest attaching to Capernaum is as the residence of our Lord and His Apostles, the scene of so many miracles and "gracious words." At Nazareth He was "brought up," but Capernaum was emphatically His "own city."

Cappado'cia, Cappadocians (Acts ii. 9; 1 Pet. i. 1). Cappadocia is an elevated table-land intersected by mountain-chains. Its Roman metropolis was Caesarea.

Cap'tain. As a purely military title, Captain answers to zar in the Hebrew army, and "tribune" in the Roman.

Captivities of the Jews. The 70 years of captivity predicted by Jeremiah (xxv. 12), are dated by Prieux from B. C. 606. The captivity of Ezekiel dates from B. C. 598, when that prophet, like Mordecai, the uncle of Esther (Esth. ii. 6,) accompanied Jehoiachin. The captives were treated not as slaves but as colonists. The Babylonian captivity was brought to a close by the decree (Ezr. i. 2) of Cyrus (B. C. 536), and the return of a portion of the nation under Sheshbazzar or Zerubbabel (B. C. 535), Ezra (B. C. 458), and Nehemiah (B. C. 445). The number who returned upon the decree B. C. 536, was 42,360, besides servants.

Caroh'mish (sort of Chemosh). Occupied nearly the site of the later Mabug, or Hierapolis. It seems to have commanded the ordinary passage of the Euphrates at Bir, or Birahik.

Ca'ria. The southern part of the region which in the N. T. is called ASIA.

Car'mel (park—fruitful field). (1.) A mountain which forms one of the most striking and characteristic features of the country of Palestine. As if to accentuate more distinctly, the bay which forms the one indentation in the coast, this noble ridge, the only headland of lower and central Palestine, forms its southern boundary, running out with a bold bluff promontory all but into the very waves of the Mediterranean. Its structure is in the main, the Tera formation (upper oolite), which is prevalent in the centre of Western Palestine—a soft, white limestone, with nodules and veins of flint. In form Carmel is a tolerably continuous ridge, at the W. end about 600, and E. about 1600 feet above the sea. There seem to be grounds for believing that from very early times it was considered as a sacred spot. In later times we know that its reputation was not confined to Palestine. But that which has made the name Carmel most familiar to the modern world is its intimate connection with the history of the two great prophets of Israel—Elijah and Elisha. It is now commonly called Mar Elyas; Kürmel being occasionally, but only seldom heard. (2.) A town in the mountainous country of Judah (Josh. xv. 55), familiar to us as the residence of Nabal (1 Sam. xxv. 2, 5, 7, 40).

Car'naim. A large and fortified city in "the land of Galaad."

Car'pus. A Christian at Trons (2 Tim. iv. 13). According to Hippolytus, Carpus was bishop of Berytus in Thrace.

Cart. (Gen. xiv. 19, 27; Num. vii. 3, 7, 8.) A vehicle drawn by cattle (2 Sam. vi. 6), to be distinguished from the chariot drawn by horses. The only cart used in Western Asia has two wheels of solid wood. But in the monuments of ancient Egypt, representations are found of carts with two wheels having four or six spokes, used for carrying produce, and of one used for religious purposes having four wheels with eight spokes.

Carving. The arts of carving and engraving were much in request in the by various kinds of Cinnamomum, which grow in different parts of India.

Ca'stor and Pollux (sons of Jupiter). (Acts xxviii. 11). The twin sons of Jupiter and Leda were regarded as the tutelary divinities of sailors.

Cat's. The domestic cat of the ancient Egyptians is supposed, by some, to be identical with the Felis maniculata.

CINNAMON.

Cave. The most remarkable caves noticed in Scripture are: (1.) That in which Lot dwelt after the destruction of Sodom (Gen. xix. 30). (2.) The cave of Machpelah (xxiii. 17). (3.) Cave of Makkedah (Josh. x. 10). (4.) Cave of Adullam (1 Sam. xxii. 1). (5.) Cave of Engedi (xxiv. 3). (6.) Obadiah's cave (1 K. xviii. 4). (7.) Elijah's cave in Horeb (ix. 9). (8, 9). The rock sepulchres of Lazarus, and of our Lord (John xi. 38; Matt. xxvii. 60).

Cedar. The Heb. word eres, invariably rendered "cedar" by the A. V., stands for that tree in most of the passages where the word occurs. As far as is at present known, the cedar of Lebanon is confined in Syria to one valley of the Lehanon range, viz. that of the Kedisha river, which flows from near the highest point of the range westward to the Mediterranean, and enters the sea at the port of Tripoli. The grove is at the very upper part of construction both of the Tabernacle and the Temple (Ex. xxxi. 5, xxxv. 33).

Ca'sia. The cassia-bark of commerce is yielded the valley, about 15 miles from the sea, 6500 feet above that level, and its position is moreover above that of all other arborescent vegetation.

Ceiling. The descriptions of Scripture show that the ceilings of the Temple were formed of cedar planks, probably with sunk panels, edged and ornamented

II. for ornaments; III. for confining prisoners. (1.) The gold chain placed about Joseph's neck (Gen. xii, 42), and that promised to Daniel (Dan. v, 7), are instances of the first use. In Ez. xvi, 11, the chain is mentioned as the symbol of sovereignty. (2.) Chains for ornamental purposes were worn by men as well as women.

Chales'dony, only in Rev. xxii, 19. The name is applied in modern mineralogy to one of the varieties of agate.

Chalcol. (1 K. iv, 31.) [CALCOL.]

Chalde'a, more correctly Chaldaea, properly only the most southern portion of Babylonia, is used in Scripture to signify that vast alluvial plain which has been formed by the deposits of the Euphrates and the Tigris—at least so far as it lies to the west of the latter stream. This extraordinary flat, unbroken except by the works of man, extends a distance of 400 miles along the course of the rivers, and is on an average about 100 miles in width. The extraordinary fertility of the Chaldean soil has been noticed by various writers. It is said to be the only country in the world where wheat grows wild. Herodotus declared (i, 193) that grain commonly returned 200-fold to the sower, and occasionally purpose (Ex. xiv, 7). In this point of view chariots, among some nations of antiquity, as elephants among others, may be regarded as filling the place of heavy artillery in modern times, so that the military power of a nation might be estimated by the number of its chariots.

Chabar, (great river). A river in the "land of the Chaldeans" (Ez. i, 3), on the banks of which some of the Jews were located at the time of the captiv-

Harbor of Corinth and the emporium of its trade with the Asiatic shores of the Mediterranean. St. Paul sailed from Cenchreae (Acts xviii, 18) on his return to Syria, from his second missionary journey; and when he wrote his Epistle to the Romans, in the course of the third journey, an organized church seems to have been formed here (Rom. xvi, 1).

Censer. A small portable vessel of metal fitted to receive burning coals from the altar, and on which the incense for burning was sprinkled (2 Chr. xxvi, 18; Luke i, 9).

300-fold. The palm was undoubtedly one of the principal objects of cultivation.

Chamberlain. The office which he held was apparently that of public treasurer. It was a post of honor which involved great intimacy and influence with the king.

Chame'leon (Heb. KO-ACH, strength). Occurs in the sense of some kind of unclean animal in Lev. xi, 30. Others suppose it to be the lizard, a large, strong reptile common in Egypt and other parts of Africa.

Char'ger, (Heb. AGARTAL). A shallow vessel for receiving water or blood, also for presenting offerings of fine flour with oil (Num. vii, 79).

Chariot. A vehicle used either for warlike or peaceful purposes, but most commonly the former. The earliest mention of chariots in Scripture is in Egypt, where Joseph, as a mark of distinction, was placed in Pharaoh's second chariot (Gen. xli, 43), and later, when he went in his own chariot to meet his father on his ity, and where Ezekiel saw his earlier visions (Ez. i, 1, lii, 15, 23, &c.).

Chedorla'omer. A king of Elam, in the time of Abraham, who, with three other chiefs, made war upon the kings of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar, and reduced them to servitude (Gen. xiv, 17).

Cheese is mentioned only three times in the Bible (Job x, 10; 1 Sam. xvii, 18; 2 Sam. xvii, 29). It is difficult to decide how far these terms correspond with our notion of cheese; for they simply express various degrees of coagulation.

Ché'mosh (subducer). The national deity of the Moabites (Num. xxi, 29). In Judg. xi, 24, he also appears as the god of the Ammonites. Solomon introduced, and Josiah abolished, the worship of Chemosh at Jerusalem (1 K. xi, 7; 2 K. xxiii, 13).

DAGON.

Ché'phar-Haammo'nia, "Hamlet of the Ammonites."

Cheph'irah (the hamlet). One of the four cities of the Gilebeons (Josh. ix, 17).

Cherith. The Brook. The torrent-bed or wady in which Elijah hid himself during the early part of the three years' drought (1 K. xvii. 3, 5).

Chest (Heb. ARON and GENAZIM). This is used for the Ark of the Covenant, and, with two exceptions, for that only. The two exceptions are, (a) the or the shoulder, a custom to which allusion is made by Isaiah (Is. xlix. 22, lxxvi. 12). The first-born male children were regarded as devoted to God, DROMEDARIES.

Char'ub, Cherubim (mystic figure on the ark). The symbolical figure so called was a composite creature-form which finds a parallel in the religious insignia of Assyria, Egypt, and Persia, e. g. the sphinx, the winged bulls and lions of Nineveh, &c. A pair (Ex. xxv. 18, &c.) were placed on the mercy-seat of the ark: a pair of colossal size overshadowed it in Solomon's Temple with the canopy of their contiguously extended wings. The cherubim are placed beneath the actual presence of Jehovah, whose moving throne they appear to draw (Gen. iii. 24; Ez. i. 5, 25, 26, x. 1, 2, 6, 7; Is. vi. 2, 3, 6). The glory symbolizing that presence which eye cannot see rests or rides on them, or one of them, thence dismounts to the temple threshold, and then departs and mounts again (Ez. x. 4, 18; comp. ix. 3; Is. xviii. 10). There is in them an entire absence of human sympathy, and even on the mercy-seat they probably appear not merely as admiring and wondering (1 Pet. i. 12), but as guardians of the covenant and avengers of its breach. Those on the ark were to be placed with wings stretched forth, one at each end of the mercy-seat, and to be made "of the mercy-seat". They are called the cherubim of glory (Heb. ix. 5), as on them the glory, when visible, rested. They were 26; and (b) the "chest" in which Jeholada the priest, collected the alms for the repairs of the Temple (2 K. xii. 9, 10; 2 Chr. xxiv. 8-11). Chestnut-tree (Heb. 'armôn) (Gen. xxx. 37; Ezek. xxxi. 8) it is spoken of as one of the glories of Assyria, for which the "plane tree" ought probably to have been substituted. Chá'don (Javelon). The name which, in 1 Chr.

xiii. 9, is given to the threshing-floor at which the accident to the ark took place.

Children. The blessing of offspring is highly valued among all Eastern nations, while the absence is regarded as one of the severest punishments (Gen. xvi. 2; Deut. vii. 14; 1 Sam. i. 6). Arab mothers sometimes rub their children with earth or sand (Ez. xvi. 4; Job xxxviii. 9; Luke ii. 7). On the 8th day the rite of circumcision, in the case of a boy, was performed, and a name given, generally conveying some special meaning. The time of weaning was an occasion of rejoicing (Gen. xxi. 8). Arab children wear little or no

Chim'ham (longing). A follower, and probably a son, of Barzillai.

Chí'os. Chios is separated from the main-land by a strait of only 5 miles. Its length is about 32 miles, and in breadth it varies from 8 to 18.

Chit'tim, Kittim (maritime). A family or race descended from Javan (Gen. x. 4; 1 Chr. i. 7; A. V. KITTIM), closely related to the Dodaním, and remotely to the other descendants of Javan. The Tyrians procured thence the cedar or box-wood, which they inlaid with ivory for the decks of their vessels (Ez. xxvii. 6).

Chora'ain. One of the cities in which our Lord's mighty works were done, but named only in His denunciation (Matt. xi. 21; Luke x. 13).

Christ. [JESUS.]

Christian. The disciples, we are told (Acts xi. 26), were first called Christians at Antioch on the Orontes, somewhere about A. D. 43. The name "Christian" which, in the only other cases where it appears in the N. T. (Acts xxvi. 28; 1 Pet. iv. 16), is used contemptuously, could not have been applied by the early disciples to themselves, nor could it have come to them from their own nation the Jews; it must, therefore, have been imposed upon them by the Gentile world, and no place could have so appropriately given rise to it as Antioch, where the first Church was planted clothing for four or five years; the young of both sexes are usually carried by the mothers on the hip among the heathen. Its inhabitants were celebrated for their wit and a propensity for conferring nicknames. The Emperor Julian himself was not secure from their jests. Apollonius of Tyana was driven from the city by the insults of the inhabitants. Their wit, however, was often harmless enough; and there is no reason to suppose that the name "Christian" of itself was intended as a term of scurrility or abuse, though it would naturally be used with contempt. Suidas says the name was given in the reign of Claudius, when Peter appointed Evodius, bishop of Antioch, and they who were formerly called Nazarenes and Galileans had their name changed to Christians.

Chronicles, First and Second Books of. The name originally given to the record made by the appointed historiographers in the kingdoms of Israel and Judah. In the LXX, these books are called Paralipomena (i. e. things omitted), which is understood as meaning that they are supplementary to the books of Kings. The Vulgate retains both the Hebrew and Greek name in Latin characters, Dibre jammim or hajamin, and Paralipomenon. The constant tradition of the Jews is that these books were for the most part compiled by Ezra. In fact, the internal evidence as to the time when the book of Chronicles was compiled, seems to tally remarkably with the tradition concerning its authorship. As regards the plan of the book, of which the book of Ezra is a continuation, forming one work, it becomes apparent immediately we consider it as the compilation of Ezra or some one nearly contemporary with him. One of the greatest difficulties connected with the captivity and the return must have been the maintenance of that genealogical distribution of the lands which yet was a vital point of the Jewish economy. Another difficulty intimately connected with the former was the maintenance of the temple services at Jerusalem. This could only be effected by the residence of the priests and Levites in Jerusalem in the order of their courses; and this residence was only practicable in the case of the payment of the appointed tithes, first-fruits, and other offerings. But then again the registers of the Levitical genealogies were necessary, in order that it might be known who were entitled to such and such allowances, as porters, as singers, as priests, and so on; because all these offices went by families; and again the payment of the tithes, first-fruits, &c., was dependent upon the different families of Israel being established each in his inheritance. Obviously therefore one of the most pressing wants of the Jewish community after their return from Babylon would be trustworthy genealogical records. But further, not only had Zerubbabel, and after him Ezra and Nehemiah, labored most earnestly to restore the temple and the public worship of God there to the condition it had been in under the kings of Judah, but it appears clearly from their policy, and from the language of the contemporary prophets, Haggai and Zechariah, that they had it much at heart to reinfuse something of national life and spirit into the heart of the people, and to make them feel that they were still the inheritors of God's covenanted mercies, and that the captivity had only temporarily interrupted, not dried up, the stream of God's favor to their nation. Now nothing could more effectually add these pious and patriotic designs than setting before the people a compendious history of the kingdom of David, which should embrace a full account of its prosperity, should trace the sins which led to its overthrow, should carry the thread through the period of the captivity, and continue it as it were unbroken on the other side; and those passages in their former history would be especially important which exhibited their greatest and best kings as engaged in building or restoring the temple, in reforming all corruptions in religion, and zealously regulate the services of the house of God. As regards the kingdom of Israel or Samaria, seeing it had utterly and hopelessly passed away, and that the existing inhabitants were among the bitterest "adversaries of Judah and Benjamin," it would naturally engage very little of the compiler's attention. These considerations explain exactly the plan and scope of that historical work which consists of the two books of Chronicles and the book of Ezra. For after having in the first eight chapters given the genealogical divisions and settlements of the various tribes, the compiler marks distinctly his own age and his own purpose, by informing us in ch. ix. 1 of the disturbance of those settlements by the Babylonish captivity, and in the following verses, of the partial restoration of them at the return from Babylon (2-24); and that this list refers to the families who had returned from Babylon is clear, not only from the context, but from its insertion (Neh. xi. 3-22), with additional matter evidently extracted from the public archives, and relating to times subsequent to the return from Babylon, extending to Neh. xii. 27, where Nehemiah's narrative is again resumed in continuance with Neh. xi. 2.

ANCIENT MANNER OF USING CATTLE.

The genealogies are obviously transcribed from some register, in which were preserved the genealogies of the tribes and families drawn up at different times; while the history is mainly drawn from the same documents as those used in the Books of Kings. Chronology. than inferential, although there is very important evidence of the latter kind, but the present state of the numbers makes absolute certainty in many cases impossible. Three principal systems of Biblical Chronology have been founded, which may be termed the Long System, the Short, and the Rabbinical. There is a fourth, which, although an offshoot in part of the last, can scarcely be termed biblical, inasmuch as it depends, for the most part, upon theories, not only independent of, but repugnant to the Bible; this last is at present peculiar to Baron Bunsen. The principal advocates of the Long Chronology are Jackson, Hales, and Des-Vignoles. Of the Short Chronology Ussher may be considered as the most able advocate. The Rabbinical Chronology accepts the biblical numbers, but makes the most arbitrary corrections. For the date of the Exodus it has been virtually accepted by Bunsen, Lepsius, and Lord A. Hervey. The numbers given by the lxx., for the antediluvian patriarchs, would place the creation of Adam 2262 years before the end of the Flood, or B. C. cir. 5361 or 5421. Chrysolite. One of the precious stones in the foundation of the heavenly Jerusalem (Rev. xxii. 20). It has been already stated [BERYL] that the chrysolite of the ancients is identified with the modern Oriental topaz, the targhish of the Hebrew Bible.

Church (called). The derivation of the word Church is uncertain. It is generally said to be derived from the Greek kuriaikon, "belonging to the Lord." The Church was a body of baptized men and women who believed in Jesus as the Christ, and in the revelation made by Him, who were united by having the same faith, hope, and animating Spirit of love, the same Sacraments and the same spiritual invisible Head. What was the Constitution of this body? On the evening of the Day of Pentecost, the 3140 members of which it consisted were—(1) Apostles; (2) previous Disciples; (3) converts. At this time the Church was not only morally but actually

Cillo'ia (Ciliz, son of Agenor.) A maritime province in the S. E. of Asia Minor, bordering on Pamphylia in the W., Lycæonia and Cappadocia in the N., and Syria in the E. Cilicia was the native country of St. Paul; hence it was visited by him, firstly, soon after his conversion (Gal. i. 21; Acts ix. 30) and again in his second apostolical journey. Cin'namon. A well-known aromatic substance. It is mentioned in Ex. xxx. 23 as one of the component parts of the holy anointing oil, which Moses was commanded to prepare—in Prov. vii. 17 as a perfume for a bed—and in Cant. iv. 14 as one of the plants of the garden which is the image of the spouse. In Rev. xviii. 13 it is enumerated among one congregation. Soon, however, its numbers grew so considerably that it was a physical impossibility that all its members should come together in one spot. It became, therefore, an aggregate of congregations, though without losing its essential unity.

the merchandise of the great Babylon. Cin'neroth, All. A district named with the "land of Naphtali;" and other northern places as having been laid waste by Benhadad (1 K. xv. 20). It was possibly the small enclosed district north of Tiberias, and by the side of the lake, after wards known as "the plain of Gennesareth." Circumcise/lon (cutting around). Was peculiarly, though not exclusively, a Jewish rite. It was enjoined upon Abraham, the father of the nation, by God, at the institution, and as the token of the Covenant, which assured to him, and his descendants, the promise of the Messiah (Gen. xvii.). It was thus made a necessary condition of Jewish nationality. Every male child was to be circumcised when eight days old (Lev. xii. 3) on pain of death. The attitude which Christianity, at its introduction, assumed towards circumcision was one of absolute hostility, so far as the necessity of the rite to salvation, or its possession of any religious or moral worth was concerned (Acts xv.; Gal. v. 2).

Cis. The father of Saul (Acts xiii. 21), usually called KISH.

Cis/tern. A receptacle for water, either conducted from an external spring, or proceeding from rain-fall. The dryness of the summer months, between May and September, in Syria, and the scarcity of springs in many parts of the country, make it necessary to collect, in reservoirs and cisterns, the rain-water, of which abundance falls in the intermediate period. The largest sort of public tanks or reservoirs is usually called in A. V. "pool," while for the smaller and more private it is convenient to reserve the name cistern.

Cities of Refuge. Six Levitical cities specially chosen for refuge to the involuntary homicide until released from banishment by the death of the high-priest (Num. xxxv. 6, 13, 15; Josh. xx. 2, 7, 9).

empire. The privilege of Roman citizenship was originally acquired in various ways, as by purchase (Acts xxii. 28), by military services, by favor, or by manumission. The right once obtained descended to a man's children (Acts xxii. 28). Among the privileges attached to citizenship, we may note that a man could not be bound or imprisoned without a formal trial (Acts xxii. 29), still less be scourged (Acts xvi. 37; Cic. in Verr. v. 63, 66). Another privilege attaching to citizenship was the appeal from a provincial tribunal to the emperor at Rome (Acts xxv. 11).

Claude (Acts xxvii. 16). A small island W. of Cape Matala.

Claudius. Fourth Roman emperor who reigned from 41 to 54 A. D. He was the son of Nero Drusus, was born in Lyons Aug. 1, B. C. 9 or 10, and lived private and unknown till the day of his being called to the throne, January 24, A. D. 41.

Clay. The great seat of the pottery of the present day in Palestine is Gaza, where are made the vessels in dark blue clay so frequently met with. Another use of clay was for sealing (Job xxxviii. 14). Wine jars in Egypt were sometimes sealed with clay; mummy pits were sealed with the same substance. Our Lord's tomb may have been thus sealed (Matt. xxvii. 66), as also the earthen vessel containing the evidences of Jeremiah's purchase (Jer. xxxii. 14).

was identical with the Bishop of Rome, who afterwards became so celebrated.

Clem/ent. (Phil. iv. 2). A fellow-laborer of St. Paul, when he was at Philippi. It was generally believed in the ancient church that this Clement

Ptol. VI. Philometor and Cleopatra. During the captivity of Demetrius in Parthia, Cleopatra married his brother Antiochus VII. Sidetes. She afterwards murdered Seleucus, her eldest son by Demetrius, and at length was herself poisoned B. C. 120 by a draught which she had prepared for her second son Antiochus VIII.

Clothing. [DRESS.]

Cloud, Pillar of. This was the active form of the symbolical glory-cloud, betokening God's presence to lead His chosen host, or to inquire and visit offences, as the luminous cloud of the sanctuary exhibited the same under an aspect of repose. The cloud, which became a pillar when the host moved, seems to have rested at other times on the tabernacle, whence God is said to have "come down in the pillar" (Num. xii. 5; so Ex. xxxiii. 9, 10).

Cai/dua. It was a city of great consequence, situated at the extreme S. W. of the peninsula of Asia Minor, on a promontory now called Cape Crio, which projects between the islands of Cos and Rhodes (see Acts xi. 1).

Coal (burning). In 2 Sam. xxii. 9, 13, "coals of fire" are put metaphorically for the lightnings proceeding from God (Ps. xviii. 12, 13, xli. 10). In Prov. xxv. 22, we have the proverbial expression, "Thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head," which has been adopted by St. Paul in Rom. xii. 20, and by which are metaphorically expressed the burning shame and confusion which men must feel when their evil is requited by good.

Cock. In the N. T. the "cock" is mentioned in reference to St. Peter's denial of our Lord, and indirectly in the word "cock-crowing" (Matt. xxvi. 34; Mark xiv. 30, xiii. 35, &c.). We know that the domestic cock and hen were early known to the ancient Greeks and Romans, and no mention is made in the O. T. of these birds, and no figures of them occur on the Egyptian monuments, they probably came into Judea with the Romans, who, as is well known, prized these birds both as articles of food and for cock-fighting.

Col'lege. The. In 2 K. xxii. 14, it is said in the A. V. that Huldah, the prophetess, "dwelt in Jerusalem in the college" (Heb. mishneh).

Colony. A designation of Philippi, in Acts xvi. 12. After the battle of Actium, Augustus assigned to his veterans those parts of Italy which had espoused the cause of Antony, and transported many of the expelled inhabitants to Philippi, Dryrarchium, and other cities. In this way Philippi was made a Roman colony with the "Jus Italicum."

Col'ors. The terms relative to color occurring in the Bible, may be arranged in two classes, the first including those applied to the description of natural objects, the second those artificial mixtures which were employed in dyeing or painting. The natural colors noticed in the Bible are white, black, red, yellow, and green. The only fundamental color of which the Hebrews appear to have had a clear conception was red; and even this is not very often noticed. They had, therefore, no scientific knowledge of colors, and we cannot but think that the attempt to explain such passages as Rev. iv. 3 by the rules of philosophical truth, must fail.

Colos'se (more properly COLLOSSÆ). A city in the upper part of the basin of the Maeander, on one of its affluents named the Lycus. St. Paul passed this way, and founded or confirmed the Colossian Church on his third missionary journey (Acts xviii. 23, xix. 1).

Colos'sians. The Epistle to the, was written by the Apostle St. Paul during his first captivity at Rome (Acts xxviii. 16).

EGYPTIAN COBRA.

Com'merco (traffic). From the time that men began to live in cities, trade, in some shape, must have been carried on to supply the town-dwellers with necessities. We find that Abraham was rich, not only in cattle, but in silver, gold, and silver plate and ornaments (Gen. xiii. 2, xxiv. 22, 53). The internal trade of the Jews, as well as the external, was much promoted, by the festivals, which brought large numbers of persons to Jerusalem, and caused great outlay in victims for sacrifices and in incense (1 K. viii. 63).

Co'ney (Shôphân). A gregarious animal found in Palestine, living in the caves and clefts of the rocks. Its color is gray or brown on the back, white on the belly; it is like the alpine marmot, scarcely of the size of the domestic cat, having long hair, a very short tail, and round ears. It is found on the Lebanon and in the Jordan and Dead Sea valleys.

Congregation (adth). This describes the Hebrew people in its collective capacity under its peculiar aspect as a holy community, held together by religious rather than political bonds. Sometimes it is used in a broad sense as inclusive of foreign settlers (Ex. xii. 19); but more properly, as exclusively appropriate to the Hebrew element of the population (Num. xv. 15). Every circumcised Hebrew was a member of the congregation, and took part in its proceedings, probably from the time that he bore arms. After the occupation of the land of Canaan, the congregation was assembled only on matters of the highest importance. In the later periods of Jewish history, the congregation was represented by the 71 or Great Sanhedrim.

EASTERN WOMAN CHURNING.

Convo'cation. This term is applied invariably to meetings of a religious character, in contradistinction to congregation.

Cooking. As meat did not form an article of ordinary diet among the Jews, the art of cooking was not carried to any perfection. Few animals were slaughtered, except for purposes of hospitality or festivity.

Cop'per was almost exclusively used by the ancients for common purposes, for which its elastic and ductile nature rendered it practically available. We read in the Bible of copper, possessed in countless abundance (2 Chr. iv. 18), and used for every kind of instrument; as chains (Judg. xvi. 21), pillars (1 K. vii. 15-21), lavers, the great one being called "the copper sea" (2 K. xxv. 13; 1 Chr. xviii. 8), and the other temple vessels.

Cor'al (lofy). With regard to the estimation in which coral was held by the Jews and other Orientals, it must be remembered that coral varies in price with us. Pliny says that the Indians valued coral as the Romans valued pearls.

Cor'ban. An offering to God of any sort, bloody or bloodless, but particularly in fulfillment of a vow.

Corian'ter. The plant called Coriandrum sativum is found in Egypt, Persia, and India, and has a round, tall stalk. It is mentioned twice in the Bible (Ex. xvi. 31; Num. xi. 7).

Corinth's. This city is alike remarkable for its distinctive geographical position, its eminence in Greek and Roman history, and its close connection with the early spread of Christianity. Geographically its situation was so marked, that the name of its Isthmus has been given to every narrow neck of land between two seas. But, besides this, the site of Corinth is distinguished by another conspicuous physical feature, viz. the Acrocorinthus, a vast citadel of rock, which rises abruptly to the height of 2000 feet above the level of the sea. The situation of Corinth, and the possession of its eastern and western harbors (CEENCHREAE and LECHAEUM), are the secrets of its history. Corinth was a place of great mental activity, as well as of commercial and manufacturing enterprise. Its wealth was so celebrated as to be proverbial; so were the vice and profligacy of its inhabitants. The worship of Venus here was attended with shameful licentiousness. All these points are indirectly illustrated by passages in the two epistles to the Corinthians. Corinth is still an episcopal see.

Corinth'ians, First Epistle to the, was written by the Apostle St. Paul toward the close of his nearly three years' stay at Ephesus (Acts xix. 10, xx. 31). Corinth'ians, Second Epistle to the, was written a few months subsequent to the first, in the same year, and thus, if the dates assigned to the former epistle be correct, about the autumn of A. D. 57 or 58, a short time previous to the Apostle's three months stay in Achaia (Acts xx. 3).

2. King's Head, Upper Country. 3. Isis.
4. Jackal. 5. Ark. 6. Sun. 7. Sacred Ark.
8. Triumph. 9. Head of Isis.

Corn. The most common kinds were wheat, barley, spelt (A. V. Ex. ix. 32, and Is. xxviii. 25, "rie" (Ez. iv. 9), "fitches" and millet; oats are mentioned only by rabbinical writers. Corn-crops are still reckoned at twenty-fold what was sown, and were anciently much more. From Solomon's time (2 Chr. ii. 10, 15), as agriculture became developed, Palestine was a corn-exporting country, and her grain was largely taken by her commercial neighbor, Tyre (Ez. xxvii. 17; comp. Am. viii. 5).

Cornelius. A Roman centurion of the Italian cohort stationed in Caesarea (Acts x. 1, &c.), a man full of good works and alms-deeds. With his household he was baptized by St. Peter, and thus Cornelius became the first-fruits of the Gentile world to Christ.

Cornet. The "corner" of the field was not allowed (Lev. xix. 9) to be wholly reaped. It formed right of the poor to carry off what was so left, and times used to denote any principal person, and is thus devoted to our Lord (Is. xxviii. 16).

Cornet (Heb. Shôphâr). A loud-sounding instrument, made of the horn of a ram or of a chamois, and used by the ancient Hebrews for signals, for announcing the "Jubilee" (Lev. xxv. 9), for proclaiming the new year, for the purposes of war (Jer. iv. 5, 19; comp. Job xxxix. 25), as well as for the sentinels placed at the watch-towers to give notice of the approach of an enemy (Ez. xxxiii. 2, 5). Shôphâr is generally rendered in the A. V. "trumpet," but "cornet" is used in 2 Chr. xv. 14.

Cox'bi. Daughter of Zur, a chief of the Midianites (Num. xxv. 15, 18).

Co'sam. Son of Elmodan, in the line of Joseph the husband of Mary (Luke iii. 28).

Court (Heb. châdêr). An open enclosure, applied in the A. V. most commonly to the enclosure of the Tabernacle and the Temple (Ex. xxvii. 9, xl. 32).

Covenant. In its Biblical meaning of a compact or agreement between two parties, the word is used, improperly, of a covenant between God and man. Man not being in any way in the position of an independent covenanting party, the phrase is evidently used by way of accommodation. Strictly speaking, such a covenant is quite unconditional, and amounts to a promise (Gal. iii. 15, ff.), or act

Cro'soena. (2 Tim. iv. 10). An assistant of St. Paul, said to have been one of the seventy disciples. According to early tradition, he preached the Gospel in Galatia. Later tradition makes him preach in Gaul, and found the Church at Vienne.

Crete. The modern Candia. Though extremely bold and mountainous, this island has very fruitful valleys, and in early times it was celebrated for its hundred cities.

EGYPTIAN GRANARY.

Cris'pus. Ruler of the Jewish synagogue at Corinth (Acts xviii. 8); baptized with his family by St. Paul (1 Cor. i. 14). According to tradition, he became afterwards Bishop of Aegina.

Cross. As the emblem of a slave's death and a murderer's punishment, the cross was naturally looked upon with the profoundest horror. But after the celebrated vision of Constantine, he ordered his friends to make a cross of gold and gems, such as he had seen, and "the towering eagles resigned the flags unto the cross," and "the tree of cursing and shame" "sat upon the sceptres, and was engraved and signed on the forehead of kings" (Jer. Taylor, Life of Christ, iii. xv. 1). The new standards were called by the name Labarum, and may be seen on the coins of Constantine the Great and his nearer successors. The Latin cross, on which our Lord suffered, was in the form of the letter T, and had an upright above the cross-bar, on which the "title" was placed. An inscription was generally placed above the criminal's head, briefly expressing his guilt, and generally was carried before him. It is a question whether tying or binding to the cross was the more common method. That our Lord was nailed, according to prophecy, is certain (John xx. 25, 27, &c.; Zech. xii. 10; Ps. xxii. 16). It is, however, extremely probable that both methods were used at once. The cross on this was a part of the maintenance from the soil to which that class were entitled.

Corner-stone. A quoin or corner-stone, of great importance in binding together the sides of a building. The phrase "corner-stone" is some-of mere favor (Ps. lxxxix. 28). Thus the assurance given by God after the flood, that a like judgment should not be repeated, and that the recurrence of the seasons, and of day and night, should not cease, is called a covenant (Gen. i.; Jer. xxxiii. 20).

which our Saviour suffered is said to have been discovered in A. D. 326, and to this day the supposed title, or rather fragments of it, are shown to the people once a year in the Church of Sta. Croce in Gerusalemme at Rome. It was not till the 6th century that the emblem of the cross became the image of the crucifix. As a symbol the use of it was frequent in the early Church. It was not till the 2d century that any particular efficacy was attached to it. [CAUCIFIXION.]

Crown. This ornament, which is both ancient and universal, probably originated from the fillets used to prevent the hair from being dishevelled by the wind. Such fillets are still common, and they may be seen on the sculptures of Persepolis, Nineveh, and Egypt; they gradually developed into turbans, which, by the addition of ornamental or precious materials, assumed the dignity of mitres or crowns.

THE PYRAMIDS AND SPHINX.

Crown of Thorns. (Matt. xxvii. 29.) Our Lord was crowned with thorns in mockery by the Roman soldiers. The object seems to have been insult, and not the infliction of pain, as has generally been supposed.

Crucifixion was in use among the Egyptians (Gen. xl. 19), the Carthaginians, the Persians (Esth. vii. 10), the Assyrians, Scythians, Indians, Germans, and from the earliest times among the Greeks and Romans. Whether this mode of execution was known to the ancient Jews is a matter of dispute. Probably the Jews borrowed it from the Romans. It was unanimously considered the most horrible form of death. Our Lord was condemned to it by the popular cry of the Jews (Matt. xxvii. 23) on the charge of sedition against Caesar (Luke xxiii. 2). This accursed and awful mode of punishment was happily abolished by Constantine.

Cross. A vessel for holding water.

Cubit. [MEASURES.]

Cucumbers (Heb. kishshutim). One of the good things of Egypt for which the Israelites longed. Egypt produces excellent cucumbers, melons, &c., the cucumis chate being the best of its tribe yet known. This plant grows in the fertile earth around Cairo after the inundation of the Nile, and not elsewhere in Egypt.

Cummin. One of the cultivated plants of Palestine (Is. xxviii. 25, 27; Matt. xxiii. 23). The Maltese are said to grow it at the present day, and to thresh it in the manner described by Isaiah.

Cup. The cups of the Jews, whether of metal or earthenware, were possibly borrowed, in point of shape and design, from Egypt and from the Phoenicians, who were celebrated in that branch of workmanship.

Cup-bearer. An officer of high rank with Egyptian, Persian, Assyrian, as well as Jewish monarchs (1 K. x. 5). The chief cup-bearer, or butler, to the king of Egypt was the means of raising Joseph to his high position (Gen. xl. 1, 21, xl. 9).

Cush. A Benjamite. He was probably a follower of Saul, the head of his tribe.

Cuth or Cuthah. One of the countries whence

Shalmaneser introduced colonists into Samaria (2 K. xvii. 24, 30).

Cuttings [in the Flesh]. The prohibition (Lev. xix. 28) against marks or cuttings in the flesh for the dead must be taken in connection with the parallel passages (Lev. xxi. 5; Deut. xiv. 1), in which shaving the head with the same view is equally forbidden.

Cymbal, Cymbals. A percussive musical instrument. The use of cymbals was not necessarily restricted to the worship of the Temple or to sacred occasions; they were employed for military purposes, and 'so by Hebrew women as a musical accompaniment to their national dances.

Cypress (Heb. tsirah). The Heb. word is found only in Is. xlv. 14. We are quite unable to assign any definite rendering to it. The true cypress is a native of the Taurus. The Hebrew word points to some tree with a hard grain, and this is all that can be positively said of it.

Cyprus. This island was in early times in close commercial connection with Phoenicia. Possibly Jews may have settled in Cyprus before the time of Alexander.

Cyrene. The principal city of that part of northern Africa, which was anciently called Cyrenaica; though on the African coast, it was a Greek city; the Jews were settled there in large numbers, and under the Romans it was politically connected with Crete. Simon, who bore our Saviour's cross (Matt. xxvii. 32; Mark xv. 21; Luke xxiii. 26), was a native of Cyrene. Christian converts from Cyrene were among those who contributed actively to the formation of the first Gentile church at Antioch (xl. 20).

TOR, NEAR ELIM

Cyrenianus. The full name is Publius Sulpicius Quirinus. He was consul B. C. 12, and made governor of Syria after the banishment of Archelaus in A. D. 6.

Cyrus. The founder of the Persian empire (see Dan. vi. 28, x. 1, 13; 2 Chr. xxxvi. 22, 23), was, according to the common legend, the son of Mandane, the daughter of Astyages the last king of Media, and Cambyses a Persian of the royal family of the Achemenidae.

In consequence of a dream, Astyages, it is said, designed the death of his infant grandson, but the child was spared by those whom he charged with the commission of the crime, and was reared in obscurity under the name of Agradates. When he grew up to manhood his courage and genius placed him at the head of the Persians. The tyranny of Astyages had at that time alienated a large faction of the Medes, and Cyrus headed a revolt which ended in the defeat and capture of the Median king B. C. 559, near Pasargadae. After consolidating the empire which he thus gained, Cyrus entered on that career of conquest which has made him the hero of the east. In B. C. 546 (?) he defeated Croesus, and the kingdom of Lydia was the prize of his success. Babylon fell before his army, and the ancient dominions of Assyria were added to his empire (B. C. 538). Afterwards he attacked the Massagetae, and, according to Herodotus, fell in a battle against them B. C. 529. His tomb is still shown at Pasargadae, the scene of his first decisive victory.

D.

Dab'areh (Josh. xxi. 28), or DABERATH. A town on the boundary of Zebulun (Josh. xix. 12).

Da'gon (Heb. DAG, little fish, dear). Apparently the masculine (1 Sam. v. 3, 4) correlative of Atargatis, was the national god of the Philistines. The most famous temples of Dagon were at Gaza (Judg. xvi. 21-30) and Ashdod (1 Sam. v. 5, 6; 1 Chr. x. 10). Dagon was represented with the face and hands of a man, and the tail of a fish (1 Sam. v. 5). The fish-like form was a natural emblem of fruitfulness, and as such was likely to be adopted by seafaring tribes in the representation of their gods. Dalmanutha. A town on the west side of the Sea of Galilee near Magdala (Matt. xv. 39, and Mark viii. 10). Dalma'tia. A maritime district on the eastern coast of the Adriatic Sea. St. Paul sent Titus there (2 Tim. iv. 10), and he himself had preached the Gospel in its immediate neighborhood (Rom. xv. 19). Dam'aris. An Athenian woman converted to Christianity by St. Paul's preaching (Acts xvii. 34). Dama'scus. One of the most ancient and most important of the cities of Syria. It is situated in a plain of vast size and of extreme fertility, which lies east of the great chain of Anti-Libanus, on the edge of the desert. According to Josephus, Damascus was founded by Uz, the son of Aram, and grandson of Shem. Strabo says that it was the most famous place in Syria during the Persian period. At the time of the Gospel history, and of the apostle Paul, it formed a part of the kingdom of Aretas (2 Cor. xi. 32). Damascus has always been a great centre for trade. It would appear from Ez. xxvii. that Damascus took manufactured goods from the Phoenicians, and supplied them in exchange with wool and wine. Certain localities in Damascus are shown as the site of those Scriptural events which especially interest us in its history. A "long, wide thoroughfare," leading direct from one of the gates to the Castle or Palace of the Pasha, is "called by the guides 'Straight'" (Acts ix. 11). The house of Judas is shown, but it is not in the street "Straight." That of Ananias is also pointed out. The scene of the conversion is confidently said to be an open green spot, surrounded by trees, and used as the Christian burial-ground. The point of the walls at which St. Paul was let down by a basket (Acts ix. 25; 2 Cor. xi. 33) is also shown.

Dan'iel (God's judge). .. The second son of David by Abigail the Carmelitess (1 Chr. iii. 1). II. The fourth of "the greater prophets." Nothing is known of his parentage or family. He appears, however, to have been of royal or noble descent (Dan. i. 3), and to have possessed considerable personal endowments (Dan. i. 4). He was taken to Babylon the second dream of Nebuchadnezzar (iv. 8-27), and the hand-writing on the wall which disturbed the feast of Belshazzar (v. 10-28). At the accession of Darius he was made first of the "three presidents" of the empire (Dan. vi. 2), and was delivered from the lions' den, into which he had been cast for his faithfulness to the rites of his faith (vi. 10-23; cf. Bel and Dr. 29-42). At the accession of Cyrus he still retained his prosperity (vi. 28; cf. i. 21; Bel and Dr. 2); though he does not appear to have remained at Babylon (cf. Dan. i. 21), and in "the third year of Cyrus" (B. C. 534) he saw his last recorded vision on the banks of the Tigris (x. 1, 4). In the prophecies of Ezekiel mention is made of Daniel as a pattern of righteousness (xiv. 14, 20) and wisdom (xxviii. 3).

Daniel. The book of, is the earliest example of apocalyptic literature, and, in a great degree, the model according to which all later apocalypses were constructed. In this aspect it stands at the head of a series of writings in which the deepest thoughts of the Jewish people found expression after the close of the prophetic era.

Darlo (A. V. "dram;" Ezr. ii. 69; viii. 27; Neh. vii. 70, 71, 72; 1 Chr. xxix. 27). A gold coin current in Palestine in the period after the return from Babylon.

Darius (in Heb. daryavesh). The name of several kings of Media and Persia. Three kings bearing this name are mentioned in the O. T. I. DARIUS

THE MEDE (Dan. xi. 1, vi. 1), "the son of Ahasuerus of the seed of the Medes" (ix. 1). Only one year of his reign is mentioned (Dan. ix. 1, xi. 1). Daniel was advanced by the king to the highest dignity (Daa. vi. 1, ff.), and after his miraculous deliverance, Darius issued a decree enjoining "reverence for the God of Daniel" (Dan. vi. 25, ff.). II. DARIUS, the son of Hystaspes, the founder of the Perso-Arian dynasty. Upon the usurpation of the Magian Smerdis, he conspired with six other Persian chiefs to overthrow the imposter, and on the success of the plot was placed upon the throne, B. C. 521. III. DARTUS THE PERSIAN (Neh. xii. 22).

Dark'ness is spoken of as encompassing the actual presence of God, as that out of which he speaks, the envelope, as it were, of Divine glory (Ex. xx. 21; 1 K. viii. 12), has been ascribed by various commentators to non-miraculous agency, but no sufficient account of its intense degree, long duration, and limited area, as proceeding from any physical cause, has been given. The darkness

Dan (judge). The fifth son of Jacob, and the first of Bilhah, Rachel's maid (Gen. xxx. 6). The origin of the name is given in the exclamation of Rachel—"God hath judged me (dinanni)" . . . and given me a son; therefore she called his name Dan," i. e. "judge." The records of Dan are unusually meagre. Only one son is attributed to him (Gen. xlvi. 23); but when the people were numbered in the wilderness of Sinai, his tribe was, with the exception of Judah, the most numerous of all, containing 62,700 men able to serve.

Dan'ites. The descendants of Dan, and members of his tribe (Judg. xiii. 2, xviii. 1, 11; 1 Chr. xii. 35).

in "the third year of Jehoiakim" (B. C. 604), and trained for the king's service with his three companions. Like Joseph in earlier times, he gained the favor of his guardian, and was divinely supported in his resolve to abstain from "the king's meat" for fear of defilement (Dan. i. 8-16). At the close of his three years' discipline (Dan. i. 5, 18), Daniel had an opportunity of exercising his peculiar gift (Dan. i. 17) of interpreting dreams, on the occasion of Nebuchadnezzar's decree against the Magi (Dan. ii. 14, ff.). In consequence of his success he was made "ruler of the whole province of Babylon," and "chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon" (ii. 48). He afterwards interpreted "over all the land" (Matt. xxvii, 45) attending the crucifixion has been similarly attributed to an eclipse. Phlegon of Tralles indeed mentions an eclipse of intense darkness, which began at noon, and was combined, he says, in Bithynia, with an earthquake, which in the uncertain state of our chronology more or less nearly synchronizes with the event. Darkness is also used for the state of the dead (Job x. 21, 22); and frequently figuratively, for ignorance and unbelief (John i. 5, iii. 19).

Dates. (2 Chr. xxxi. 5, marg.)

[PALM TREE.]

Daugh'ter. (1.) The word is used in Scripture not only for daughter, but for granddaughter or other female descendants. (2.) The female inhabitants of a place, a country, are called daughters (Gen. vi. 2, xxvii, 46). (3.) The same notion of descent explains the phrase "daughters of music," i. e. singing birds (Ecc. xii. 4). (4.) It is also used of cities in general (Is. x. 32). (5.) But more specifically of dependent towns or hamlets, while to the principal city the correlative "mother" is applied (Num. xxi. 25).

David (beloved) The son of Jesse. His life may be divided into three portions:—I. His youth before his introduction to the court of Saul. II. His relations with Saul. III. His reign. I. The early life of David contains in many important respects the antecedents of his future career. (1.) His family may best be seen in the form of a genealogy. It thus appears that David was the youngest son of a family of ten. His mother's name is unknown.

his father's feet, and his arm strong enough to break a bow of steel (Ps. xviii, 33, 34). He usually carried a switch or wand in his hand (1 Sam. xvii, 40), and a scrip or wallet round his neck, to carry anything that was needed for his shepherd's life (xvii, 43). II. Relations with Saul. We now enter a new aspect of David's life. The victory over Goliath had been a turning point of his career. Saul inquired his parentage, and took him finally to his court. Jonathan was inspired by the romantic friendship which bound the two youths together to the end of their lives. Three new qualities now began to develop themselves in David's character. The first was his prudence. Secondly, we now see his magnanimous forbearance called forth, in the first instance, towards Saul, but displaying itself (with a few painful exceptions)

RUINS OF THE THEATRE AT EPHESUS.

His father, Jesse, was of a great age when David was still young (1 Sam. xvii, 12). His parents both lived till after his final rupture with Saul (1 Sam. xxii, 3). (2.) As the youngest of the family he may possibly have received from his parents the name, which first appears in him, of David the beloved, the darling. His swiftness and activity made him (like his nephew Asahel) like a wild gazelle, his feet like in the rest of his life. Thirdly, his hair-breadth escapes, continued through so many years, impressed upon him a sense of dependence on the Divine help, clearly derived from this epoch. III. David's reign. (1.) As king of Judah at Hebron, 7½ years (2 Sam. ii, 1-v. 5). Hebron was selected, doubtless, as the ancient sacred city of the tribe of Judah, the burial-place of the patriarchs and the inheritance of Caleb. Here David was first formally anointed king (2 Sam. ii, 4). To Judah his dominion was nominally confined. Gradually his power increased, and during the two years which followed the elevation of Ishbosheth a series of skirmishes took place between the two kingdoms. Then rapidly followed, though without David's consent, the successive murders of ABNER and ISHBOSETH (2 Sam. iii, 30, iv. 5). The throne, so long waiting for him, was now vacant, and the united voice of the whole people at once called him to occupy it. A solemn league was made between him and his people (2 Sam. v. 3). For the third time David was anointed king, and a festival of three days celebrated the joyful event (1 Chr. xii, 39). His little band had now swelled into "a great host, like the host of God" (1 Chr. xii, 22). The command of it, which had formerly rested on David alone, he now devolved on his nephew Joab (2 Sam. ii, 28). The erection of the new capital at Jerusalem introduces us to a new era in David's life and in the history of the monarchy. He became a king on the scale of the great Oriental sovereigns of Egypt and Persia, with a regular administration and organization of court and camp; and he also founded an imperial dominion, which, for the first time, realized the prophetic description of the bounds of the chosen people (Gen. xv, 18-21). The internal organization now established, lasted till the final overthrow of the monarchy. The empire was of much shorter duration, continuing only through the reigns of David and his successor, Solomon. But, for the period of its existence, it lent a peculiar character to the sacred history. But clouds gathered over David's fortunes, and henceforward "the sword never departed from his house" (2 Sam. xii, 10). The outrage on his daughter Tamar; the murder of his eldest son Amnon; and then the revolt of his best-beloved Absalom, brought on the crisis which once more sent him forth a wanderer, as in the days when he fled from Saul; and this, the heaviest trial of his life, was aggravated by the impetuosity of Joab, now perhaps, from his complicity in David's crime, more unmanageable than ever. His last words, as recorded by his successor, are general exhortations to his duty, combined with warnings against Joab and Shimei, and charges to remember the children of Barzillai. He died, according to Josephus, at the age of 70, and "was buried in the city of David." After the return from captivity, "the sepulchres of David" were still pointed out "between Siloah and the house of the mighty men," or "the guard-house" (Neh. iii, 16).

David, City of. [JERUSALEM.]

Daysman. An old English term meaning umpire or arbitrator (Job ix, 33).

Dea'con. The office described by this title, appears in the N. T. as the correlative of Bishop. [BISHOP.] The narrative of Acts vi, is commonly referred to as giving an account of the institution of this office. The Apostles, in order to meet the complaints of the Hellenistic Jews, that their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations, call on the body of believers to choose seven men "full of the Holy Ghost and of wisdom," whom they "may appoint over this business."

Dea'coness. There existed in the Apostolic age, as there undoubtedly did a little later, an order of women bearing that title, and exercising, in relation to their own sex, functions which were analogous to those of the deacons.

Dead Sea. In the O. T. the lake is called "the Salt Sea," and "the Sea of the Plain," and under the former of these names it is described.

Dearth. [FAMINE.]

Deb'ir (oracle). The name of three places of Palestine. (1.) A town in the mountains of Judah (Josh. xv, 49). (2.) A place on the north boundary of Judah, near the "Valley of Achor" (Josh. xv, 7). (3.) The "border of Debir" is named as forming part of the boundary of Gad (Josh. xiii, 26), and, as apparently, not far from the Mahanaim.

De'bora (see). (1.) The nurse of Rebekah (Gen. xxv, 1). Deborah accompanied Rebekah from the house of Bethuel (Gen. xxiv, 59), and is only mentioned by name on the occasion of her burial, under the oak-tree of Bethel, which was called in her honor Allon-Bachuth. (2.) A prophetess who judged Israel (Judg. iv, v.). She lived under the

Deb'tor. [LOAN.]

Deesp'olis. Pliny says it reached from Damascus on the north to Philadelphia on the south, and from Scythopolis on the west to Canatha on the east. This region, once so populous and prosperous, from which multitudes flocked to hear the Saviour, and through which multitudes followed His footsteps, is now almost without an inhabitant.

AN EASTERN FEAST.

Dé'dan (low country). (1.) The name of a son of Raamah, son of Cush (Gen. x. 7; 1 Chr. i. 9). (2.) A son of Jokshan, son of Keturah (Gen. xxv. 3; 1 Chr. i. 32).

Dedication, Feast of the. The festival instituted to commemorate the purging of the Temple, and the rebuilding of the altar after Judas Maccabaeus had driven out the Syrians, B. C. 164. Its institution is recorded in 1 Macc. iv. 52-59.

Deer. [FALLOW-DEER.]

Degrees, Songs of (steps). A title given to fifteen Psalms, from cxx. to cxxxiv. inclusive. Four of them are attributed to David, one is ascribed to the pen of Solomon, and the other ten give no indication of their author.

Deia'vites (villagers). Mentioned only once in Scripture (Ezr. iv. 9) among the colonists planted in Samaria after the completion of the captivity of Israel.

EGYPTIAN LANDING NETS.

Delaiah. (1.) A priest in the time of David, leader of the twenty-third course of priests (1 Chr. xiv. 18). (2.) "Children of Delaiah" were among the people of uncertain pedigree who returned from Babylon with Zerubbable (Ezr. ii. 60; Neh. vii. 62). (3.) Son of Mehetabeel and father of Shemaiah (Neh. vi. 10). (4.) Son of Shemaiah, one of the "princes" about the court of Jehoiakim (Jer. xxxvi. 12, 25).

Delilah (drooping, languishing). A woman beloved by Samson (Judg. xvi. 4-18). She was a Philistine courtesan. [SAMSON.]

Déluge. [NOAH.]

Délus (G. delos visible). Mentioned in 1 Macc. xv. 23, the smallest of the islands in the Aegean Sea. It was one of the chief seats of worship of Apollo, and was celebrated as the birthplace of this god and of his sister Artemis (Diana).

Dé'mas. A companion of St. Paul (Philem. 24; Col. iv. 14) during his first imprisonment at Rome. At a later period (2 Tim. iv. 10) we find him mentioned as having deserted the apostle through love of this present world, and gone to Thessalonica.

Démétrius (votary of Demeter, Ceres). A maker of silver shrines of Artemis at Ephesus (Acts xix. 24).

Démétrius I., surnamed Soter, the son of Seleucus Philopator, and grandson of Antiochus the Great.

Démétrius II., "The Victorious" (Nicator), was the elder son of Demetrius Soter. He was sent by his father, together with his brother Antiochus, with a large treasure, to Chaldas, when Alexander Balas laid claim to the throne of Syria.

Dé'mon (Gr. daimona, god).

Its usage in classical Greek is various. In Homer, where the gods are but supernatural men, it is used interchangeably with "god"; afterwards in Hesiod, when the idea of the gods had become more exalted and less familiar, the "demons" are spoken of as intermediate beings, the messengers of the gods to men. In the gospels generally, in James ii. 19, and in Rev. xvi. 14, the demons are spoken of as spiritual beings, at enmity with God, and having power to afflict man, not only with disease, but, as is marked by the frequent epithet "unclean," with spiritual pollution also. The description is precisely that of a nature akin to the angelic in knowledge and powers, but with the emphatic addition of the idea of positive and active wickedness.

Démóniacs. This word is frequently used in the N. T., and applied to persons suffering under the possession of a demon or evil spirit, such possession generally showing itself visibly in bodily disease or mental derangement.

Der'be. (Acts xiv. 20, 21, xvi. 1, xx. 4). The exact position of this town has not yet been ascertained. It was in the eastern part of the great upland plain of LYCAONIA.

Des'ert. A "desert" in the sense ordinarily attached, is a vast, burning, sandy plain, alike destitute of trees and of water. The words rendered in the A. V. by "desert," denoted definite localities; and not the common conception of a "desert."

Dé'a'el (El knows). Father of Eliasaph, the "captain" of the tribe of Gad at the time of the numbering of the people at Sinai (Num. i. 14, vii. 42, 47, x. 20).

JERUSALEM.

Deuterón'omy, "the repetition of the law," consists chiefly of three discourses delivered by Moses shortly before his death. Subjoined to these discourses are the Song of Moses, the Blessing of Moses, and the story of his death.

Devil (Gr. diabolos, slanderer, false accuser). The name describes Satan as slandering God to man, and man to God. The former work is, of course, a part of his great work of temptation to evil; and is not only exemplified but illustrated as of its general nature and tendency by the narrative of

Gen. iii. The effect is to stir up the spirit of freedom in man to seek a fancied independence; and it is but a slight step further to impute falsehood or cruelty to God. The other work, the slandering or accusing man before God, is, as it must necessarily be, unintelligible to us. The essence of this accusation is the imputation of selfish motives (Job i. 9, 10), and its refutation is placed in the self-sacrifice of those "who loved not their lives unto death." [SATAN; DEMON.]

FIG BRANCH.

Dew. This in the summer is so copious in Palestine that it supplies, to some extent, the absence of rain (Ecclus. xviii. 16, xliii. 22), and becomes important to the agriculturist. It becomes a leading object in prophetic imagery, by reason of its penetrating moisture without the apparent effort of rain (Deut. xxxii. 2; Job xxix. 19; 1s. cxxxiii. 3; Prov. xix. 12; Is. xxvi. 19; Hos. xiv. 5; Mic. v. 7); while its speedy evanescence typifies the transient goodness of a hypocrite (Hos. vi. 4, xiii. 3).

Dí'adem (bound around). What the "diadem" of the Jews was we know not. That of other nations of antiquity was a fillet of silk, two inches broad, bound round the head and tied behind, the invention of which is attributed to Liber. Its color was generally white; sometimes, however, it was of blue, like that of Darius; and it was sown with pearls or other gems (Zech. ix. 16), and enriched with gold (Rev. ix. 7). It was peculiarly the mark of Oriental sovereigns (1 Macc. xiii. 32).

Dí'al. The word ma'aboth is the same as that rendered "steps" in A. V. (Ex. xx. 26; 1 K. x. 19), and "degrees" in A. V. (2 K. xx. 9, 10, 11; Is. xxxviii. 8). The ma'aboth were stairs, and the shadow (perhaps of some column or obelisk on the top) fell on a greater or smaller number of them, according as the sun was low or high.

Diamond (Heb. yakhôlm). A precious stone, the third in the second row on the breastplate of the high-priest (Ex. xxviii. 18, xxxix. 11).

Dian'a. This Latin word, properly denoting a Roman divinity, is the representation of the Greek Artemis, the tutelary goddess of the Ephesians, who plays so important a part in the narrative of Acts xix. The Ephesian Diana was, however, regarded as invested with very different attributes, and is rather to be identified with Astarte and other female divinities of the East. This idol was regarded as an object of peculiar sanctity, and was believed to have fallen down from heaven (Acts xix. 35).

Dib'laim. Mother of Hosea's wife Gomer (Hos. i. 3).

Dib'lath. A place named only in Ez. vi. 14, as if situated at one of the extremities of the land of Israel.

Dibon. A town on the east side of Jordan, in the rich pastoral country, which was taken possession of and rebuilt by the children of Gad (Num. xxxii. 3, 34).

Dik'lah (palm-tree). (Gen. x. 27; 1 Chr. i. 21), a son of Joktan. The name in Hebrew signifies "a palm-tree;" hence it is thought that Diklah is a part of Arabia, containing many palm-trees.

Dime'nah. A city in the south of Judah (Josh. xv. 22), perhaps the same as DIMON in Neh. xi. 25).

Di'nah (acquitted). The daughter of Jacob by Leah (Gen. xxx. 21). She accompanied her father from Mesopotamia to Canaan.

Dionys'ius the Areop'agite (Acts xvii. 34), an eminent Athenian, converted to Christianity by the preaching of St. Paul. He is said to have been first bishop of Athens.

OFFERING OF FIRST FRUITS.

Dionys'ius (2 Macc. xiv. 33; 3 Macc. ii. 29), also called BACCHUS, the god of wine.

Disper'sion, The Jews of the, or simply THE DISPERSION, was the general title applied to those Jews who remained settled in foreign countries after the return from the Babylonian exile, and during the period of the second Temple. The dispersion, as a distinct element influencing the entire character of the Jews, dates from the Babylonian exile. Outwardly and inwardly, by its effects both on the Gentiles and on the people of Israel, the dispersion appears to have been the clearest providential preparation for the spread of Christianity.

Divina'tion (Heb. kesem, to divide). Has been universal in all ages, and all nations alike, civilized and savage. Numerous forms of divination are mentioned, such as divination by rods (Hos. iv. 12); divination by arrows (Ex. xxi. 21); divination by cups (Gen. xlv. 5); consultation of Teraphim (Zech. x. 2; Ez. xxi. 21; 1 Sam. xv. 23) [TERAPAIM]; divination by the liver (Ex. xxi. 21); divination by dreams (Deut. xiii. 2, 3; Judg. vii. 13; Jer. xxiii. 32); consultation of oracles (Is. xii. 21-24, xlv. 7). Moses forbade every species of divination, because a prying into the future clouds the mind with superstition, and because it would have been an incentive to idolatry; indeed the frequent denunciations of the sin in the prophets tend to prove that these forbidden arts presented peculiar temptations to apostate Israel.

Divorces. The law regulating this subject is found in Deut. xxiv. 1-4, and the cases in which the right of a husband to divorce his wife was lost, are stated ib. xxii. 19, 29.

Do'og (fearful). An Idumaean, chief of Saul's herdsmen. He executed the king's order to destroy the priests of Nob, with their families, to the number of 85 persons, together with all their property (1 Sam. xxi. 7, xxii. 9, 18, 22; Ps. lii.).

Dog (Heb. keleb, seizer; Ar. keib). An animal frequently mentioned in Scripture. It was used by the Hebrews as a watch for their houses (1r. lvi. 10), and for guarding their flocks (Job xxx. 1). Moreover the dog being an unclean animal (Is. lxvi. 3), the terms dog, dead dog, dog's head, were used as terms of reproach, or of humility in speaking of one's self (1 Sam. xxiv. 14; 2 Sam. iii. 8, ix. 8, xvi. 9; 2 K. viii. 13).

Doors. [GATES.]

Dor (habitation). (Josh. xvii. 11; 1 K. iv. 11; 1 Macc.

xv. 11). An ancient royal city of the Canaanites (Josh. xii. 23), whose ruler was an ally of Jaban, king of Hazer, against Joshua (Josh. xi. 1, 2). The original inhabitants were never expelled, but during the prosperous reigns of David and Solomon they were made tributary (Judg. i. 27, 28).

Do'than (two wells). A place first mentioned (Gen. xxviii. 17) in connection with the history of Joseph, and apparently as in the neighborhood of Shechem, it next appears as the residence of Elisha (2 K. vi. 13). It was known to Eusebius, who places it 12 miles to the N. of Setaste (Samarria); and here it has been discovered in our own times, still bearing its ancient name unimpaired.

Dove (Heb. Yonah). The first mention of this bird is alluded to in Ps. lv. 6; the beauty of its plumage in Ps. lxxviii. 13; its dwelling in the rocks and valleys in Jer. xviii. 28, and Ez. vii. 16; its mournful voice in Is. xxxviii. 14, lix. 11; Nah. ii. 7; its harmlessness in Matt. x. 16; its simplicity in Hos. vii. 11, and its amateness in Cant. i. 15, ii. 14. Doves are kept in a domesticated state in many parts of the East.

Drag'on (Heb. tannim, dragons). It is always applied to some creatures inhabiting the desert, and we should conclude from this that it refers rather to some wild beast than to a serpent. When we examine special passages we find the word used in Gen. i. 21, of the great sea-monsters, the representatives of the inhabitants of the deep. On the other hand, in Ex. vii. 9, 10, 12; Deut. xxxii. 33; Ps.

THE FOUNTAIN SEALED.

xc. 13, it refers to land-serpents of a powerful and deadly kind. In the N. T. it is only found in the Apocalypse (Rev. xii. 3, 4, 7, 9, 16, 17, &c.), as applied metaphorically to "the old serpent called the Devil." The reason of this scriptural symbol is to be sought not only in the union of gigantic power with craft and malignity, of which the serpent is the natural emblem, but in the record of the serpent's agency in the temptation (Gen. iii.).

Dreams. The Scripture declares, that the influence of the Spirit of God upon the soul extends to its sleeping as well as its waking thoughts. But, in accordance with the principle enunciated by St. Paul in 1 Cor. xiv. 15, dreams, in which the understanding is asleep, are placed below the visions of prophecy, in which the understanding plays its part. The book of Job dwells on dreams and "visions in deep sleep," as the chosen method of God's revelation of Himself to man (see Job iv. 13, vii. 14, xxxiii. 15).

Dress. This subject includes the following particulars: I. Materials. II. Color and decoration. III. Name, form, and mode of wearing the various articles. IV. Special usages relating thereto.

(1.) The earliest and simplest robe was made out of the leaves of a tree, portions of which were sewn together, so as to form an apron (Gen. iii. 7). After the fall, the skins of animals supplied a more durable material (Gen. iii. 21), which was adapted to a rude state of society, and is stated to have been used by various ancient nations. The art of weaving hair was known to the Hebrews at an early period (Ex. xxvi. 7, xxxv. 6); the sackcloth used

Ps. xlv. 14). Purple (Prov. xxxi. 22; Luke xvi. 19) and scarlet (2 Sam. i. 24) were occasionally worn by the wealthy. (3.) The names, forms, and mode of wearing the robes. The general characteristics of Oriental dress have preserved a remarkable uniformity in all ages. The costume of the men and women was very similar; there was sufficient difference, however, to mark the sex, and it was strictly forbidden to a woman to wear the append-

develped upon women in a family (Prov. xxvi. 22; Acts ix. 39); little art was required in what we may term the tailoring department; the garments by mourners was of this material. John the Baptist's robe was of camel's hair (Matt. iii. 4). Wool was introduced at a very early period. It is probable that the acquaintance of the Hebrews with linen, and perhaps cotton, dates from the period of the captivity in Egypt, when they were instructed in the manufacture (1 Chr. iv. 21). Silk was not introduced until a very late period (Rev. xviii. 12). (2.) Color and decoration. The prevailing color of the Hebrew dress was the natural white of the materials employed. It is uncertain ages, such as a staff, signet-ring, and other ornaments, or, according to Josephus, the weapons of a man; as well as to a man to wear the outer robe of a woman (Deut. xxii. 5). (1.) The cethōneth was the most essential article of dress.

It was a closely-fitting garment, resembling, in form and use, our shirt. The material of which it was made was either wool, cotton, or linen. The primitive cethōneth was without sleeves, and reached only to the knee. It was kept close to the body by a girdle. (2.) The sādin appears to have been a wrapper of fine linen, which might be used in various ways, but especially as a night-shirt (Mark xiv. 51). (3.) The mēll was an upper or second tunic, the difference being that it was longer than the cethōneth.

(4.) The ordinary outer garment consisted of a quadrangular piece of wollen cloth, probably resembling, in shape, a Scotch plaid. The size and texture would vary with the means of the wearer. The bege might be worn in various ways, either wrapped round the body, or worn over the shoulders like a shawl. The dress of the women differed from that of the men in regard to the outer garment, the cethōneth being worn equally by both sexes (Cant. v. 3). The garments of females were terminated by an ample border of fringe (skirts, A. V.), which concealed the feet (Is. xlvi. 2; Jer. xiii. 22). The business of making clothes of an eagle is now and has been long a favorite military ensign. The Persians so employed it; a fact which illustrates the passage in Is. xlvi. 11.

Earrings (Heb. nezem). The material of which earrings were made was generally gold (Ex. xxxii. 2), and their form circular. They were worn by women and by youth of both sexes (Ex. i. 2). It had been inferred from the passage quoted, and from Judg. viii. 24, that they were not worn by men; these passages are, however, by no means conclusive. The earring appears to have been regarded with superstitious reverence as an amulet. On this account they were surrendered along with the idols by came forth, for the most part, ready made from the loom, so that the weaver supplanted the tailor.

Drusilla, daughter of Herod Agrippa I. (Acts xii. 1, 19, ff.), perished in the eruption of Vesuvius.

Du'ra. The plain where Nebuchadnezzar set up the golden image (Dan. iii. 1).

Eagle (Heb. neshar). At least four distinct kinds of eagles have been observed in Palestine, viz., the golden eagle Aquila Chrysaetos, the spotted eagle (A. naevia), the commonest species in the rocky districts, the imperial eagle (Aquila Helvaca), and the very common Circus gallinus, which preys on the numerous reptiles of Palestine. when the art of dyeing became known to the Hebrews. The notice of scarlet thread (Gen. xxxviii. 28) implies some acquaintance with dyeing. The Egyptians carried the art of weaving to a high state of perfection, and from them the Hebrews learned various methods of producing decorated stuffs. The elements of ornamentation were: (1.) Weaving with threads previously dyed (Ex. xxxv. 25). (2.) The introduction of gold thread or wire (Ex. xxvii. 6, ff.). (3.) The addition of figures. Robes decorated with gold (Ps. xlv. 13), and at a later period with silver thread (cf. Acts xii. 21), were worn by royal personages; other kinds of embroidered robes were worn by the wealthy both of Tyre (Ex. xvi. 13) and Palestine (Judg. v. 30;

Jacob's household (Gen. xxxv. 4). Chardin describes earrings, with talismanic figures and characters on them, as still existing in the East. Jewels were sometimes attached to the rings. The size of the earrings still worn in eastern countries far exceeds what is usual among ourselves; hence they formed a handsome present (Job xlii. 11), or offering to the service of God (Num. xxxi. 50).

THE GAZELLE.

Earth (Heb. Eretz, Gr. Ge). The term is used in two widely different senses: (1.) for the material of which the earth's surface is composed; (2.) as the name of the planet on which man dwells; Adamah for the former, Eretz for the latter. 1. Adamah is the earth in the sense of soil or ground, particularly as being susceptible of cultivation. The earth supplied the elementary substance of which man's body was formed, and the terms adam and adamah are brought into juxtaposition, implying an etymological connection (Gen. ii. 7). 2. Eretz is applied in a more or less extended sense: (1.) to the whole world (Gen. i. 1); (2.) to land as opposed to sea (Gen. i. 10); (3.) to a country (Gen. xxi. 32); (4.) to a plot of ground (Gen. xxiii. 15); and (5.) to the ground on which a man stands (Gen. xxxiii. 3). As to the size of the earth, the Hebrews had but a very indefinite notion.

THE GOLDEN GATE.

Earthquakes. Earthquakes, more or less violent, are of frequent occurrence in Palestine, as might be expected from the numerous traces of volcanic agency visible in the features of that country. The recorded instances, however, are but few; the most remarkable occurred in the reign of Uzziah (Am. i. 1; Zech. xiv. 5), which Josephus connected with the sacrifice and consequent punishment of that monarch (2 Chr. xxvi. 16, ff.). From Zech. xiv. 4, we are led to infer that a great convulsion took place at this time in the Mount of Olives, the mountain being split so as to leave a valley between its summits.

E'bal, Mount. A mount in the promised land, on which, according to the command of Moses, the Israelites were, after their entrance on the promised land, to "put" the curse which should fall upon them if they disobeyed the commandments of Jehovah. The blessing consequent on obedience was to be similarly localized on Mount Gerizim (Deut. xi. 26-29). Ebal and Gerizim are the mounts which form the sides of the fertile valley in which lies Avbhis, the ancient SICHEM—Ebal on the north and Gerizim on the south.

Eb'ens'-sar ("the stone of help"). A stone set up by Samuel, after a signal defeat of the Philistines, as a memorial of the "help" received on the occasion from Jehovah (1 Sam. vii. 12).

Ebony (Heb. Aobnim) occurs only in Ez. xxvii. 15, as one of the valuable commodities imported into Tyre by the men of Dedan. The best kind of ebony is yielded by a tree which grows in Ceylon and Southern India.

Ecbatana (Heb. Achmetha). In the apocryphal books Ecbatana is frequently mentioned (Tob. iii. 7, xiv. 12, 14; Jud. i. 7, 2; 2 Macc. ix. 3, &c.). Two cities of the name of Ecbatana seem to have existed in ancient times, one the capital of Northern Media, the Media Atropatena of Strabo; the other the metropolis of the larger and more important province known as Media Magna.

Ecclesiastes. The title of this book is in Hebrew Kohleth, a feminine noun, signifying one who speaks publicly in an assembly. The Book is that which it professes to be,—the confession of a man of wide experience looking back upon his past life, and looking out upon the disorders and calamities which surround him. The writer is a man who has sinned in giving way to selfishness and sensuality, who has paid the penalty of that sin in satiety and weariness of life, but who has, through all this, been under the discipline of a divine education, and has learnt the lesson which God meant to teach him.

Eden (garden of God). (1.) The first residence of man, called in Septuagint Paradise. The latter is a word of Persian origin, and describes an extensive tract of pleasure land, somewhat like an English park; and the use of it suggests a wider view of man's first abode than a garden. In the eastern portion of the region of Eden was the garden planted. The Hiddekel is the Tigris; but with regard to the Pison and Gihon, a great variety of opinion exists. Many ancient writers, as Josephus, identified the Pison with the Ganges, and the Gihon with the Nile. Others, guided by the position of the two known rivers, identify the two unknown ones with the Phasis and Araxes, which also have their sources in the highlands of Armenia. Others, again, have transferred the site to the sources of the Oxus and Jaxartes, and place it in Bactria; others, again, in the valley of Cashmere. Such speculations may be multiplied ad infinitum, and have sometimes assumed the wildest character. (2.) One of the marts which supplied the luxury of Tyre with richly embroidered stuffs. In the absence of positive evidence, probability seems to point to the N. W. of Mesopotamia as the locality of Eden. (3.) BETH-EDEN, "house of pleasure."

E'dom, Idume'a or Idumae'a. The name Edom was given to Esau, the first-born son of Isaac, and twin brother of Jacob, when he sold his birth-right to the latter for a meal of lentil pottage. The peculiar color of the pottage gave rise to the name Edom, which signifies "red" (Gen. xxv. 29-34). The country which the Lord subsequently gave to Esau was hence called the "field of Edom" (Gen. xxxii. 3), or "land of Edom" (Gen. xxxvi. 16; Num. xxxiii. 37), and his descendants were called the Edomites. Esau's bitter hatred to his brother Jacob for fraudulently obtaining his blessing, appears to have been inherited by his latest posterity. The Edomites peremptorily refused to permit the Israelites to pass through their land (Num. xx. 18-21).

E'drei. One of the two capital cities of Bashan (Num. xxi. 33; Deut. i. 4, iii. 10; Josh. xii. 4). In Scripture it is only mentioned in connection with the victory gained by the Israelites over the Amorites under Og their king, and the territory thus acquired.

Educa'tion. Although nothing is more carefully inculcated in the Law than the duty of parents to teach their children its precepts and principles (Ex. xii. 26, xiii. 8, 14; Deut. iv. 5, 9, 10, vi. 2, 7, 20, &c.), yet there is little trace among the Hebrews in earlier times of education in any other subjects. The wisdom therefore and instruction, of which so much is said in the Book of Proverbs, are to be understood chiefly of moral and religious discipline, imparted, according to the direction of Law, by the teaching and under the example of parents.

E'glon. (1.) A king of the Moabites (Judg. iii. 12, ff.), who, aided by the Ammonites and the Amalekites, crossed the Jordan and took "the city of palm-trees." (2.) A town of Judah in the low country (Josh. xv. 39).

E'gypt. A country occupying the north-eastern angle of Africa. Its limits appear always to have been very nearly the same. In Ezekiel (xxix. 10, xxx. 6) the whole country is spoken of as extending from Migdol to Syene, which indicates the same limits to the east and the south as at present. A'gyptos.—The common name of Egypt in the Bible is "Mizraim," or more fully "the land of Mizraim." Under the Pharaohs Egypt was divided into Upper and Lower, "the two regions," General Appearance, Climate, &c.—The Delta was always a vast level plain. The whole country is remarkable for its extreme fertility, which especially strikes the beholder when the rich green of the fields is contrasted with the utterly bare yellow mountains of the sand-strewn rocky desert on either side. The climate is equable and healthy. Rain is not very frequent on the northern coast, but inland very rare. Egypt has been visited in all ages by severe pestilences. Famines are frequent, and one in the middle ages, in the time of the monuments of the country. As early as the age of the Great Pyramid it must have been densely populated. Egypt is naturally an agricultural country. As far back as the days of Abraham, we find that when the produce failed in Palestine, Egypt was the natural resource. In the time of Joseph it was evidently the granary, at least during famines, of the nations around. Vines were extensively cultivated. Of other fruit-trees, the date-palm was the most common and valuable. On the tenure of land much light is thrown by the history of Joseph. Before the famine each city and large village had were tolerated it was rarely practised. The occupations of the higher class were the superintendence of their fields and gardens; their diversions, the pursuit of game in the desert or on the river, and fishing. Magicians.—We find frequent reference in the Bible to the magicians of Egypt (Gen. xli, 8; Ex. vii, 11, &c.). Industrial Arts.—The industrial arts held an important place in the occupations of the Egyptians. The work in fine flax, and the weavers of white linen were contributory to the riches of the country (Is. xix, 9). Festivals.—The religious festivals were numerous, and some of them were, in the days of Herodotus, kept with great merrymaking and license. History.—The ancient history of Egypt may be divided into three portions: the old monarchy, extending from the foundation of the kingdom to the invasion of the Hyksos; the middle, from the entrance to the expulsion of the Hyksos; and the new, from the re-establishment of the native monarchy by Amosis to the Persian conquest. With respect to the period of the sojourn of the Israelites in Egypt, the accession of the eighteenth dynasty may be regarded as fixed to within a few years of B. C. 1525. The era of the Exodus, in the system of Usher, is B. C. 1491. The conclusion is that Moses left Egypt under Amosis, the first king of the eighteenth dynasty.

Ek'ron (Heb. evrakation). One of the five towns belonging to the lords of the Philistines, and the most northerly of the five (Josh. xlii, 3).

E'l'am. The son of Shem (Gen. x, 22; 1 Chr. i, 17). Commonly, however, it is used as the appellation of a country (Gen. xiv, 1, 9).

its field (Gen. xli, 48); but Joseph gained for Pharaoh all the land, except that of the priests, and required for the right thus obtained a fifth of the produce (xlvii, 20-26). Religion.—The basis of the religion was the lowest kind of nature-worship, differing in different parts of the country, and hence obviously indigenous. Upon this were grafted, first, cosmic worship, mixed with traces of primeval revelation, as in Babylonia; and then, a system of personifications of moral and intellectual attributes.

The rise begins in Egypt about the summer solstice, and the inundation commences about two months later. The greatest height is attained about or somewhat after the autumnal equinox. The inundation lasts about three months. Cultivation, Agriculture, &c.—The ancient prosperity of Egypt is attested by the Bible as well as by the numerous

There were three orders of gods: the eight great gods, the twelve lesser, and the Osirian group. The great doctrines of the immorality of the soul, man's responsibility, and future rewards and punishments were taught. Among the rites, circumcision is the most remarkable; it is as old as the time of the fourth dynasty. Remphan and Chion were foreign divinities, adopted into the Egyptian Pantheon. Ashtoreth was worshipped at Memphis. Of the Egyptian army the most important branch was the chariot-force. Pharaoh led 600 chosen chariots, besides his whole chariot-force, in pursuit of the Israelites. Domestic Life.—The sculptures and paintings of the tombs give us a very full insight into the domestic life of the ancient Egyptians. Marriage appears to have been universal, at least with the richer class; and if polygamy

E'lath, E'loth. A town of Edom, situate at the head of the Arabian Gulf.

El'der, or old man, was an official title among the Hebrews and the surrounding nations. As betokening a political office, it applied not only to the Hebrews, but also to the Egyptians (Gen. l, 7), the Moabites and Midianites (Num. xxii, 7). It is so at the present day among the Arabs, where the Sheikh (=the old man) is the highest authority in the tribe.

E'leaz'ar. Third son of Aaron. With his brother Ithamar he ministered as a priest during their father's lifetime, and immediately before his death was invested on Mount Hor with the sacred garments, as the successor of Aaron in the office of high-priest (Num. xx, 28).

E'leu'therus. A river of Syria. It is the modern Nahr-el-Kebir, "Great River."

E'lah'man. A distinguished warrior in the time of King David, who performed a memorable exploit against the Philistines.

E'li was descended from Aaron through Ithamar, the youngest of his two surviving sons (Lev. x, 1, 2, 12).

History makes no mention of any high-priest of the line of Ithamar before Eli, he is generally supposed to have been the first of that line who held the office. The character of Eli is marked by eminent piety. In addition to the office of high-priest, he held that of judge. He died at the advanced age of 98 years (1 Sam. iv. 15), overcome

Eli'shab (firm bond). The eldest son of Javan. (Gen. x. 4).
Eli'shah' (Eli's power). The birth-place of the prophet Nahum.

by the disastrous intelligence that the ark of God had been taken in battle by the Philistines, who had also slain his sons Hophni and Phinehas.

Eli'jah (Heb. Elihu, God-Jah, El-Jehovah) has been well entitled "the grandest and the most romantic character that Israel ever produced." Certainly no career is more vividly portrayed, or exercises on us a more remarkable fascination. His chief characteristic was his hair, long and thick, and hanging down his back; which, if not betokening the immense strength of Samson, yet accompanied powers of endurance no less remarkable. The closing transaction of Elijah's life was at Gilgal; he was, at the time, with Elisha, who seems now to have become his constant companion. And it came to pass as they talked, behold a chariot of fire and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder, and Elijah went up by the whirlwind into the skies.

Elm'elech. A man of the tribe of Judah.
Eli'sabeth (fullness of God). The wife of Zacharias and mother of John the Baptist.
Eli'sha (God of Salvation). Son of Shaphat, the attendant and disciple of Elijah, and subsequently his successor as prophet of the kingdom of Israel. In almost every respect Elisha presents the most complete contrast to Elijah. The copious collection of his sayings and doings, which are preserved from the 3d to the 9th chapter of the 2d book of Kings, is full of testimonies to this contrast. The call of Elisha seems to have taken place about four years before the death of Ahab. He died in the reign of Joash, the grandson of Jehu.

Embalming (em-bā-ming). The process by which dead bodies are preserved. It was most general among the Egyptians. Of the method of embalm-

ROCK GOAT.

ing there remain minute accounts. The embalmers first removed part of the brain through the nostrils, by means of a crooked iron, and destroyed the rest by injecting caustic drugs. An incision was then made along the flank with a sharp Ethiopian stone, and the whole of the intestines removed. The cavity was rinsed out with palm-wine, and afterwards scoured with pounded perfumes. It was then filled with pure myrrh, pounded, cassia and other aromatics, except frankincense. This done, the body was sewn up and steeped in natron for seventy days. When the seventy days were accomplished, the embalmers washed the corpse and swathed it in bandages of linen, cut in strips and smeared with gum. They then gave it up to the relatives of the deceased, who provided for it a wooden case, made in the shape of a man, in which the dead was placed, and deposited in an erect position against the wall of the sepulchral chamber.

Embroiderer. The productions of the art described as "needle-work." In Exodus the embroiderer is contrasted with the cunning workman (Abshab). The art of embroidery by the loom was extensively practised among the nations of antiquity. In addition to the Egyptians, the Babylonians were celebrated for it.

Emerald. A precious stone, first in the second row on the breast-plate of the high-priest (Ex. xxviii. 18, xxxix. 11).

Emm'us. The village to which the two disciples were going when our Lord appeared to them on the way, on the day of His resurrection (Luke xxiv. 13).

Encampment (Heb. mahanah). The resting-place of an army or company of travellers at night (Ex. xvi. 13; Gen. xxxii.).

Engad (spring of the kid). A town in the wilderness of Judah (Josh. xv. 62), on the western shore of the Dead Sea (Ex. xlvii. 10).

Engraver (harash). His chief business was cutting names or devices on rings and seals.

E'noah (teacher). I. The eldest son of Cain (Gen. iv. 17). II. The son of Jared and father of Methuselah (Gen. x. 21, ff.; Luke iii. 28). In Jude (24) he is described as "the seventh from Adam," probably conveying the idea of divine completion and rest, while Enoch was himself a type of perfected humanity. Both the Latin and Greek fathers commonly coupled Enoch and Elijah as historic witnesses of the possibility of a resurrection of the body.

En-rögel (fuller's fountain). A spring which formed one of the landmarks on the boundary line between Judah (Josh. xv. 7) and Benjamin (xviii. 16).

Ea'sign. The character of the Hebrew military standards is quite a matter of conjecture; they probably resembled the Egyptian, which consisted of a sacred emblem, such as an animal, a boat, or the king's name.

Ephesians. The Epistle to the, was written by the Apostle St. Paul during his first captivity at Rome (Acts xxviii. 16). This Epistle was addressed to the Christian church at Ephesus.

Ep'hesus. The capital of the Roman province of Asia, and an illustrious city in the district of Ionia. Conspicuous at the head of the harbor of Ephesus was the great temple of Diana or Artemis, the tutelary divinity of the city. The magnificence of this sanctuary was a proverb throughout the civilized world. The city was celebrated for its magical arts. The whole place is now utterly desolate, with the exception of the small Turkish village. The ruins are of vast extent.

Ephod. A sacred vestment originally appropriate to the high-priest (Ex. xxviii. 4), but afterwards worn by ordinary priests (1 Sam. xxii. 18).

Ephraim (double fruitfulness). The second son of Joseph by his wife Asenath. The first indication we have of that ascendancy over his elder brother Manasseh, which at a later period the tribe of Ephraim so unmistakably possessed, is

In the blessing of the children by Jacob (Gen. xlviii). It is at the time of the sending of the spies to the Promised Land that we are first introduced to the great hero to whom the title owed much of its subsequent greatness.

Epicureans. The, derived their name from Epicurus (342-271 B. C.), a philosopher of Attic descent, whose "Garden" at Athens rivaled in popularity the "Porch" and the "Academy." The object of Epicurus was to find in philosophy a practical guide to happiness. True pleasure, and not absolute, truth was the end at which he aimed; experience and not reason, the test on which he relied. Epicureism was the popular philosophy at the beginning of the Christian era.

Eras'us. One of the attendants or deacons of St. Paul at Ephesus, who, with Timothy, was sent forward into Macedonia while the Apostle himself remained in Asia (Acts xix. 22).

Esarhad'don (Assyrian), one of the greatest of the kings of Assyria, was the son of Sennacherib (2 K. xix. 37) and grandson of Sargon, who succeeded Sardanapal. He appears by his monuments to have been the most powerful of all the Assyrian monarchs.

Wise Men offering Gifts to the Infant Saviour.

Esau (Heb. esav, hairy). The eldest son of Isaac, and twin-brother of Jacob. The singular appearance of the child at his birth originated the name

Esau, means hairy (Gen. xxv. 25). He was a thorough Hedonist, a "son of the desert," who delighted to roam free as the wind of heaven, and who was impatient of the restraints of civilized or settled life.

Esauy. The form of the name of Esau in Ecclesi. xlviii. 20, 22; 2 Esd. ii. 18. [ISAIAH.]

Esdrae'lon. In the O. T. the plain is called the VALLEY OF JIZREEL; by Josephus "the great plain." Two things are worthy of special notice in the plain of Esdraelon: (1.) Its wonderful richness. (2.) Its desolation.

Essé'nes. A Jewish sect, who, according to the description of Josephus, combined the ascetic virtues of the Pythagoreans and Stoics with a spiritual knowledge of the Divine Law. As a sect the Essenes were distinguished by an aspiration after ideal purity rather than by any special code of doctrines.

Esther. A beautiful Jewish maiden, whose ancestor Kish had been among the captives led away from Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. She was brought up by her cousin Mordecai, who had an office in the household of Ahasuerus, king of Persia.

Ethiopia (burnt) lay to the S. of Egypt, and embraced, in its most extended sense, the modern Nubia, Sennar, Kordofan, and northern Abyssinia. The Hebrews do not appear to have had much practical acquaintance with Ethiopia itself, though the Ethiopians were well known to them through their intercourse with Egypt.

Ea'nuah (Heb. anah). The law (Deut. xxiii. 1; comp. Lev. xxii. 24) is repugnant to this teaching; any Israelite. The origination of the practice is signifying "the good and abounding river." It is the largest, the longest, and by far the most important of the rivers of Western Asia. The entire course is 1780 miles. The Euphrates is mentioned in Scripture as one of the four rivers of Eden (Gen. ii. 14).

SYRIAN GOAT.

Evange'list (publisher of glad tidings), and therefore seems common to the work of the Christian ministry generally; yet in Eph. iv. 11, the "evangelists" appear on the one hand after the "apostles" and "prophets;" and on the other before the "pastors" and "teachers."

Eva (Heb. chawwah, living). The name given to the first woman (Gen. ii. 21, 22). Perhaps that which we are chiefly intended to learn from the narrative is the foundation upon which the union between man and wife is built, viz., identity of nature and oneness of origin.

Exco'mmuni'cation. Jewish Excommunication. The twenty-four offences for which it was inflicted are various, and range in heinousness from the offence of keeping a fierce dog to that of taking God's name in vain. In the New Testament, Jewish excommunication is brought prominently before us in the case of the man that was born blind (John ix.).

Ex'odus (that is, going out [of Egypt]). The second book of the Law or Pentateuch. It may be divided into two principal parts: I. Historical (l. 1-xviii. 27); and, II. Legislative (xix. 1-xi. 38). The former of these may be subdivided into, (1.) the preparation for the deliverance of Israel from their bondage in Egypt; (2.) the accomplishment of that deliverance. I. (1.) The first section contains an account of the birth, education, and flight of Moses; his solemn call to be the deliverer of his people, and his return to Egypt; his first ineffectual attempt to prevail upon Pharaoh to let the Israelites go; a further preparation of Moses and Aaron for their office; the successive signs and wonders, by means of which the deliverance of Israel from the land of bondage is at length accomplished, and the institution of the Passover. (2.) A narrative of events from the departure out of Egypt to the arrival of the Israelites at Mount Sinai. II. The solemn establishment of the Theocracy on Mount Sinai.

Ex'odus. The, of the Israelites from Egypt. On the date of this event see EGYPT. The history of the Exodus itself commences with the close of that of the Ten Plagues. [PLAGUES OF EGYPT.] In the night in which, at midnight, the firstborn were slain (Ex. xii. 29), Pharaoh urged the departure of the Israelites (ver. 31, 32). They at once set forth from Rameses (ver. 37, 39), apparently during the night (ver. 42), but towards morning on the 15th day of the first month (Num. xxxiii. 3). They made three journeys and encamped by the Red Sea. Here Pharaoh overtook them, and the great miracle occurred by which they were saved, while the pursuer and his army were destroyed. [RED SEA, PASSAGE OF.]

Ex'on. (1.) Son of God, and founder of one of the G-dite families (Gen. xlv. 16; Num. xxvi. 16). (2.) Son of Bela, the son of Benjamin, according to 1 Chr. vii. 7.

Ezeki'as. (Matt. i. 9, 10.) [EZEKIAH.]
Ezok'iel (Heb. yehzekel, God will strengthen). One of the four greater prophets, was the son of a priest named Buzi, and was taken captive in the captivity of Jehoiachin, eleven years before the destruction of Jerusalem. His call took place "in the fifth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity" B. C. 595. He is said to have been murdered in Babylon by some Jewish prince whom he had convicted of his influence with the king does not appear, but in the seventh year of his reign, he obtained leave to go to Jerusalem, and to take with him a company of Israelites. It appears that his great design was to effect a religious reformation among the Palestine Jews, and to bring them back to the observation of the Law of Moses. This was effected in little more than six months after his arrival at Jerusalem.

Es'ra, Book of, is a continuation of the books of Chronicles. Like these books, it consists of the contemporary historical journals kept from time to time, which were afterwards strung together, and either abridged or added to, as the case required.

idolatry. Ezekiel was distinguished by his stern and inflexible energy of will and character; and we also observe a devoted adherence to the rites and ceremonies of his national religion. The depth of his matter, and the marvellous nature of his visions, make him occasionally obscure.

the country is almost devoid of moisture. Egypt owes all its fertility to its mighty river, whose annual rise inundates nearly the whole land. The causes of dearth and famine in Egypt are occasioned by defective inundation, preceded and accompanied and followed by prevalent easterly and

Fa'ble. Of the fable, as distinguished from the parable [PARABLE], we have but two examples in the Bible; (1.) that of the trees choosing their king, addressed by Jotham to the men of Shechem (Judg. ix. 8-15); (2.) that of the cedar of Lebanon and the thistle, as the answer of Jehoshaphat to the challenge of Amaziah (2 K. xiv. 9).

Fair Ha'vens. A harbor in the island of CRETE (Acts xxvii. 8).

Fallow-deer (Heb. yachmar). It is about the size of a stag, and lives in herds.

Famine. In the whole of Syria and Arabia the fruits of the earth must ever be dependent on rain. If therefore the heavy rains of November and December fail, the sustenance of the people is cut off in the parching drought of harvest time, when

Fasts. (1.) One fast only was appointed by the law, that on the day of Atonement. It appears that the Jews, during their captivity, observed four annual fasts, in the fourth, fifth, seventh, and tenth months. The number of annual fasts in the present Jewish Calendar has been multiplied to twenty-eight. (2.) Public fasts were occasionally proclaimed to express national humiliation, and to supplicate divine favor. (3.) Private occasional fasts are recognized in one passage of the law (Num. xxx. 13). The instances given of individuals fasting under the influence of grief, vexation, or anxiety, are numerous.

Fat. The Hebrews distinguished between the suet or pure fat of an animal, and the fat which was intermixed with the lean (Neh. viii. 10).

Father. The position and authority of the father as the head of the family are expressly assumed and sanctioned in Scripture, as a likeness of that of the Almighty over His creatures. It lies of course at the root of that so-called patriarchal government (Gen. iii. 16; 1 Cor. xi. 3), which was introductory to the more definite systems which followed, and which in part, but not wholly, superseded it. The father's blessing was regarded as conferring special benefit, but his malediction special injury, on those on whom it fell (Gen. ix. 25, 27, xxvii. 27-40, xlviii. 15, 20, xlix.).

Felix. A Roman procurator of Judea, appointed by the Emperor Claudius, whose freedman he was, on the banishment of Ventidius Cumanus in A. D. 53. Felix was the brother of Claudius's powerful freedman Pallas. He ruled the province in a mean, cruel and profligate manner.

Forret. One of the unclean creeping things mentioned in Lev. xi. 30. The animal referred to was probably a reptile of the lizard tribe.

Festivals. J. The religious times ordained in the Law fall under three heads. (1.) Those formally connected with the institution of the Sabbath. (2.) The historical or great festivals. (3.) The Day of Atonement. (1.) Immediately connected with the institution of the Sabbath are: (a) The weekly Sabbath itself. (b) The seventh new moon or Golgotha, near Damascus Gate, Jerusalem.

Faion-ga'ber or E'zion-ge'ber (giant's backbone) (Num. xxxiii. 35; Deut. ii. 8). The last station named for the encampment of the Israelites before they came to the wilderness of Zin.

Es'ra (help). All that is really known of Ezra is contained in the four last chapters of the book of Ezra and in Neh. viii. and xii. 26. The origin of southerly winds. The modern history of Egypt throws some curious light on these ancient records of famines. In Arabia, famines are of frequent occurrence.

Farthing. A coin current in Palestine in the time of our Lord. It was equivalent to two lepta (A. V. "mites").

Feast of Trumpets. (c) The Sabbatical Year. (d) The year of Jubilee. (2.) The great feasts are: (a) The Passover. (b) The Feast of Pentecost, or Weeks, of Wheat-harvest, or of the First-fruits. (c) The Feast of Tabernacles, or of Ingathering. On each of these occasions every male Israelite was commanded "to appear before the Lord." that is, to attend in the court of the tabernacle or the temple, and to make his offering with a joyful heart (Deut. xxvii. 7; Neh. viii. 9-12). The attendance of women was voluntary. (3.) After the Day of Atonement, see that article. II. After the captivity, the Feast of Purim (Esth. ix. 20, sq.) and that of the Dedication (1 Macc. iv. 56) were instituted.

Fir (Heb. beresh, beresh, Is. xiv. 8; Ez. xxvii. 5, &c.). As the term "cedar" is in all probability applicable to more than one tree, so also "fir" in the A. V. represents probably one or other of the following trees: Scotch fir, Larch, or cypress, all which are at this day found in the Lebanon. Fire is represented as the symbol of Jehovah's presence, and the instrument of his power, in the way

10, 12, ii. 12). (3.) At the expiration of seven weeks from this time, i. e., at the Feast of Pentecost, an oblation was to be made of two loaves of leavened bread made from the new flour, which were to be waved in like manner with the Passover sheaf (Ex. xxxiv. 22; Lev. xxiii. 15, 17; Num. xxviii. 26). (4.) The feast of ingathering was itself an acknowledgement of the fruits of the harvest (Ex. xxiii. 16, xxxiv. 22; Lev. xxiii. 39). (5.) A cake of the first dough that was baked, was to be offered as a heave-offering (Num. xv. 19, 21). (6.) The first-fruits of the land were to be brought in a basket to the holy place of God's choice, and there presented to the priest, who was to set the basket down before the altar (Deut. xxvi. 2-11).

Fish. The Hebrews recognized fish as one of the great divisions of the animal kingdom, and, as such, gave them a place in the account of the creation (Gen. i. 21, 28). The Mosaic Law (Lev. xi. 9, 10) pronounced unclean such fish as were devoid of fins and scales. In Palestine, the Sea of Galilee was and still is remarkably well stored with fish. The existence of a regular fish-market is implied in the notice of the fish-gate, which was probably contiguous to it (2 Chr. xxxiii. 14).

Flax (Heb. pishtah, peeled). Two words are used for this plant in the O. T., or rather the same word slightly modified. Eliminating all the places where all the words are used for the article manufactured in the thread, the piece, or the made up garment, we reduce them to two (Ex. ix. 31; Josh. ii. 6). It seems probable that the cultivation of flax for the purpose of the manufacture of linen was by no means confined to Egypt; but that originating in India it spread over Asia at a very early period of antiquity.

Flour. [BREAD.]

Flute (1 K. i. 4, marg. [PIPE]). A musical instrument mentioned amongst others (Dan. iii. 5, 7, 10, 15) as used at the worship of the golden image which Nebuchadnezzar had set up.

Flux, Bloody (Acts xxviii. 8). The same as our dysentery, which in the East is, though sometimes

GROUP OF ANCIENT GODS.

Festus Porcius. Successor of Felix as procurator of Judaea (Acts xxiv. 27). A few weeks after Festus reached his province, he heard the cause of St. Paul, who had been left a prisoner by Felix, in the presence of Herod Agrippa II. and Bernice his sister (Acts xxv. 11, 12).

either of approval or of destruction (Ex. iii. 2, xiv. 19, &c.).

First-born. Under the Law, in memory of the Exodus, the eldest son was regarded as devoted to God, and was in every case to be redeemed by an offering not exceeding 5 shekels, within one month from birth. If he died before the expiration of 30 days, the Jewish doctors held the father excused, but liable to the payment if he outlived that time (Ex. xiii. 12-15, xxii. 29; Num. viii. 17, xviii. 15, 16; Lev. xxvii. 6). The eldest son received a double portion of the father's inheritance (Deut. xxi. 17), but not of the mother's. Under the monarchy, the eldest son usually, but not always, as appears in the case of Solomon, succeeded his father in the kingdom (1 K. i. 30, ii. 22). The male first-born of animals was also devoted to God (Ex. xiii. 2, 12, 13, xxii. 29, xxxiv. 19, 20). Unclean animals were to be redeemed with the addition of one-fifth of the value, or else put to death, or, if not redeemed, to be sold, and the price given to the priests (Lev. xxvii. 13, 27, 28).

First-fruits. (1.) The Law ordered in general, that the first of all ripe fruits and of liquors should be offered in God's house (Ex. xxii. 29, xxiii. 19, xxxiv. 27). (2.) On the morrow after the Passover sabbath, a sheaf of new corn was to be brought to the

THE HART.

Fig, Fig-tree (Heb. terebinth). A word of frequent occurrence in the O. T., where it signifies the tree Ficus Carica of Linnaeus, and also its fruit. The fig-tree is very common in Palestine (Deut. viii. 8). Mount Olivet was famous for its fig-trees in ancient times, and they are still found there. "To sit under one's own vine and eat one's own fig-tree" became a proverbial expression among the Jews to denote peace and prosperity (1 K. iv. 25; Mic. iv. 4; Zech. iii. 10).

priest, and waved before the altar, in acknowledgement of the gift of fruitfulness (Lev. xxiii. 5, 6). Food. The diet of Eastern nations has been in all ages light and simple. As compared with our sporadic, generally epidemic and infectious, and then assumes its worst form.

Fly, Flies. (1.) Zebab occurs only in Eccl. x. 1 and in Is. vii. 18, and is probably a generic name for any insect. (2.) 'Arab ("swarms of flies," "divers sorts of flies," A. V.), the name of the insect, or insects, which God sent to punish Pharaoh; see Ex. viii. 21-31; Ps. lxxviii. 45, cv. 31.

Forehead. The practice of veiling the face in public for women of the higher classes, especially married women, in the East, sufficiently stigmatizes with reproach the unveiled face of women of bad character (Gen. xxiv. 65; Jer. iii. 3).

Fortuna/tar. (1 Cor. xvi. 17). One of three Corinthians, the others being Stephanas and Achaicus, who were at Ephesus when St. Paul wrote his first Epistle.

Fountain (Heb. ayin, to flow). Among the attractive features presented by the Land of Promise to the nation migrating from Egypt by way of the desert, none would be more striking than the natural gush of waters from the ground. The springs of Palestine are remarkable for their abundance and beauty. Jerusalem appears to have possessed either more than one perennial spring, or one issuing by more than one outlet. In Oriental cities generally public fountains are frequent. Traces of such fountains at Jerusalem may perhaps be found in the names En-Rogel (2 Sam. xvii. 17), the "Dragon-well" or fountain, and the "gate of the fountain" (Neh. ii. 13, 14).

Frontlets, or Phylacteries were strips of parchment, on which were written four passages of Scripture (Ex. xiii. 2-10, 11-17; Deut. vi. 4-9, 13-23) in an ink prepared for the purpose. They were then rolled up in a case of black calf-skin, which was attached to a stiffer piece of leather, having a thong one finger broad, and one and a half-fingers long. They were placed at the head of the left arm. It is said that the Pharisees wore them always, whereas the common people only used them at prayers.

Fuller. The trade of the fullers, so far as it is mentioned in Scripture, appears to have consisted chiefly in cleansing garments and whitening them. Furlong. [MEASURES.]

Galatia is literally the "Gallia" of the East. The Galatians were in their origin a stream of that great Keltic torrent which poured into Greece in the MOSQUE AT HEBRON.

Furnaces. Various kinds of furnaces are noticed in the Bible, such as a smelting furnace (Gen. xix. 23); a refining furnace (Prov. xvii. 3, xxvii. 21); the potter's furnace (Ecclus. xxvii. 5); the blacksmith's furnace (Ecclus. xxxviii. 28).

G.

Ga'al. Son of Ebed, aided the Shechemites in their rebellion against Abimelech (Judg. ix).

Ga'ash (earthquake). On the north side of "the hill of Gaash" was the city which was given to Joshua (Josh. xxiv. 30; Judg. ii. 9).

Gabriel. In the ordinary traditions, Jewish and Christian, Gabriel is spoken of as one of the archangels.

Gad (troop). Jacob's seventh son, the first-born of Zilpah, Leah's maid, and whole-brother to Asher (Gen. xxx. 11-13, xvi. 16, 18). The word means either "fortune" or "troop"; hence Leah said at his birth,—"a troop (of children) cometh" (Gen. xxx. ii; comp. xlix. 19). Of the childhood and life of the patriarch GAD nothing is preserved.

Gad. "The seer," or "the king's seer," i. e. David's (1 Chr. xxix. 29; 2 Chr. xxix. 25; 2 Sam. xxiv. 11; 1 Chr. xxi. 9), was a "prophet" who appears to have joined David when in the house (1 Sam. xxii. 5). He wrote a book of the Acts of David (1 Chr. xxix. 29), and also assisted in the arrangements for the musical service of the "house of God" (2 Chr. xxix. 25).

Gad'ara. A strong city situated east of the Sea of Galilee, over against Scythopolis and Tiberias. Gadara derives its greatest interest from having been the scene of our Lord's miracle in healing the demoniacs (Matt. viii. 28-34; Mark v. 1-21; Luke viii. 26-40).

third century before the Christian era. The Roman province of Galatia may be roughly described as the central region of the peninsula of Asia Minor, with the provinces of ASIA on the west, CAPPADOCIA on the east, PAMPHYLIA and CILICIA on the south, and BITHYNIA and PONTUS on the north.

Galilee (gallil, a circle). In the time of our Lord all Palestine was divided into three provinces, Judaea, Samaria, and Galilee (Acts ix. 31; Luke xvii. 11; Joseph. B. J. iii. 3). The latter included the whole northern section of the country, including the ancient territories of Issachar, Zebulun, Asher and Naphtali. Lower Galilee included the great plain of Esdraelon with its offshoots, which run down to the Jordan and the Lake of Tiberias. It was one of the richest and most beautiful sections of Palestine. Galilee was the scene of the greater part of our Lord's private life and public acts. His early years were spent at Nazareth; and when He entered on His prophetic work He made Capernaum His home (Matt. ii. 13, ix. 1). The Apostles were all either Galileans by birth or residence (Acts i. 11). After the destruction of Jerusalem, Galilee became the chief seat of Jewish schools of learning, and the residence of their most celebrated Rabbins.

Galilee, Sea of. [GENNESARETH].

Gallio. Junius Annaeus Gallio, the Roman proconsul of Achaia when St. Paul was at Corinth, A. D. 53, under the Emperor Claudius (Acts xviii. 12). He was brother to Lucius Annaeus Seneca, the philosopher. He committed suicide in the year 65 A. D.

Gama'i'el (benefit of God).

(1.) Son of Pedahzur, prince or captain of the tribe of Manasseh (Num. i. 40, ii. 20). (2.) A Pharisee and celebrated doctor of the law, who gave prudent worldly advice in the Sanhedrim, respecting the treatment of the followers of Jesus of Nazareth (Acts v. 34, ff.). He was the preceptor of St. Paul. He was son of Rabbi Simeon, and grandson of the celebrated Hillel; he was president of the Sanhedrim under Tiberius, Caligula, and Claudius, and is reported to have died eighteen years before the destruction of Jerusalem.

Gamos. Among the Greeks the rage for theatrical exhibitions was such that every city of any size possessed its theatre and stadium. At Ephesus an annual contest was held in honor of Diana. It is probable that St. Paul was present when these

VALLEY OF HINNOM, OR GEHENNA.

Fowl. In 1 K. iv. 23, among the daily provisions for Solomon's table, "fatted fowl" are included. Fox (Heb. shaf). Probably the "jackal" is the animal signified. With respect to the jackals and foxes of Palestine, there is no doubt that the common jackal of the country is the Canis aureus, which may be heard every night in the villages.

Frankincense (Heb. lebana). A vegetable resin, brittle, glittering, and of a bitter taste, used for the purpose of sacrificial fumigation (Ex. xxx. 34-36). It is obtained by successive incisions in the bark of a tree called the arbor thuris.

games were proceeding. St. Paul's Epistles abound with allusions to the Greek contests. The competitors (1 Cor. ix. 25; 2 Tim. ii. 5) required a long and severe course of previous training (1 Tim. iv. 8). In the Olympic contest these preparatory exercises extended over a period of ten months. The contests took place in the presence of a vast multitude of spectators (Heb. xii. 1), the competitors being the spectacle (1 Cor. ix. 9; Heb. x. 33).

High-Priest at the Altar.

Gar'den (Heb. gan ginnah. Gr. keros). Gardens in the East are enclosures on the outskirts of towns, planted with various trees and shrubs. They were surrounded by hedges of thorns (Is. v. 5), or walls of stone (Prov. xxiv. 31). The gardens of the Hebrews were planted with flowers and aromatic shrubs (Cant. vi. 2, iv. 16), besides olives, fig-trees, nuts, or walnuts (Cant. vi. 11), pomegranates, and others for domestic use (Ex. xxiii. 11; Jer. xxix. 5; Am. ix. 14). Of all the gardens of Palestine none is possessed of associations more sacred and imperishable than the garden of Gethsemane, beside the oil-presses on the slopes of Olivet. The retirement of gardens rendered them favorite places for devotion (Matt xxvi. 36; John xviii. 1; cf. Gen. xxiv. 63).

In the degenerate times of the monarchy they were selected as the scenes of idolatrous worship (Is. i. 29.) The traditional gardens and pools of Solomon are shown about an hour and a quarter to the south of Bethlehem.

ADORATION.—ANCIENT EGYPTIAN.

Gate (Heb. shaar, gate; Gr. thura, pule pulon). The gates and gateways of eastern cities anciently held, and still hold, an important part, not only in the defence but in the public economy of the place. They are thus sometimes taken as representing the city itself (Gen. xxii. 17, xxiv. 60; Deut. xii. 12; Judg. v. 8; Ruth iv. 10; Ps. lxxxvii. 2, cxxii. 2). Among the special purposes for which they were used may be mentioned: (1.) As places of public resort (Gen. xix. 1, xxiii. 10, xxxiv. 20, 24; 1 Sam. iv. 18, &c.). (2.) Places for public deliberation, administration of justice, or of audience for kings and rulers, or ambassadors (Deut. xvi. 18, xxi. 19, xxv. 7; Josh. xx. 4; Judg. ix. 35, &c.). (3.) Public markets (2 K. vii. 1). In heathen towns the open spaces near the gates appear to have been sometimes used as places for sacrifice (Acts xiv. 13; comp. 2 K. xxii. 8). Regarded therefore as positions of great importance the gates of cities were carefully guarded and closed at nightfall (Deut. iii. 5, Josh. ii. 5, 7; Judg. ix. 40, 44). Gath (wine-press). One of the five royal cities of the Philistines (Josh. xiii. 3; 1 Sam. vi. 17); and the native place of the giant Goliath (1 Sam. xvii. 4, 23).

Ga'sa (properly Asah). One of the five chief cities of the Philistines. It is remarkable for its continuous existence and importance from the very earliest times. The secret of this unbroken history is to be found in the situation of Gaza. It is the last town in the S. W. of Palestine, on the frontier towards Egypt. The same peculiarity of situation has made Gaza important in a military sense, its name means "the strong" and this was well elucidated in its siege by Alexander the Great, which lasted five months.

Ga'bal (a line, or mountain ridge). A maritime town of Phoenicia.

Genealogy (the book of the generations). The promise of the land of Canaan to the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob successively, and the separation of the Israelites from the Gentile world; the expectation of Messiah as to spring from the tribe of Judah; the exclusively hereditary priesthood of Aaron with its dignity and emoluments; the long succession of kings in the line of David; and the whole divinity alogy among the Jews than perhaps any other nation. Generation (Heb. dor, a period of time). In the long-lived Patriarchal age a generation seems to have been computed at 100 years (Gen. xv. 16; comp. 13, and Ex. xii. 40); but subsequently the reckoning was the same which has been adopted by other civilized nations, viz. from thirty to forty years (Job xlii. 16).

Gen'esia. The first book of the Law or Pentateuch, so called from its title in the Septuagint, that is, Creation. It is a part of the writer's plan to tell us what the Divine preparation of the world was, in order to show, first, the significance of the call of Abraham, and next, the true nature of the Jewish theocracy. The book of Genesis has a character at once special and universal. It embraces the world; it speaks of God as the God of the whole human race. But as the introduction to Jewish history, it makes the universal interest subordinate to the national.

SUMMIT OF MOUNT HOR.

Gennesaret, Sea of, called in the O. T. "the Sea of Chinnereth," or "Cinneroth" (Num. xxxv. 11; Josh. xii. 3), from a town of that name which stood on or near its shore (Josh. xix. 35). At its north-western angle was a beautiful and fertile plain called "Gennesaret" (Matt. xiv. 34; Mark vi. 53), from which the name of the lake was taken; also called the sea of Galilee," Most of our Lord's public life was spent in the environs of the Sea of Gennesaret. This region was then the most densely peopled in all Palestine. No less than nine cities stood on the very shores of the lake. The water of the lake is sweet, cool, and transparent; and as the beach is everywhere pebbly it has a beautiful sparkling look. It abounds in fish now as in ancient times.

Gerizim (dessert or shorn). On the position of and occupation of the land upon genealogical principles by the tribes, families, and houses of fathers, gave a deeper importance to the science of gene-

Mount Gerizim, see ERAL. The Samaritans, through whom the tradition of the true site of Gerizim has been preserved, are probably not wrong when they point out still—as they have done from time immemorial—Gerizim as the hill upon which Abraham's "faith was made perfect." Gerizim is likewise still to the Samaritans what Jerusalem is to the Jews, and Mecca to the Mohammedans.

Gethsemane (oil-press garden—wine-press, GATHI, wine). A small "farm" (A. V. "place;" Matt. xxvi. 36; Mark xiv. 32), situated across the brook Kedron (John xviii. 1), probably at the foot of Mount Olivet (Luke xxii. 39), to the N. W., and about  $\frac{1}{2}$  or  $\frac{3}{4}$  of a mile English from the walls of Jerusalem. There was a "garden," or rather orchard, attached to it, to which the olive, fig, and pomegranate doubtless invited resort by their hospitable shade. And we know from the Evangelists Luke (xxii. 39) and John (xviii. 2) that our Lord oftimes resorted thither with his disciples. But Gethsemane has not come down to us as a scene of mirth; its inexhaustible associations are the

Giants. They are first spoken of in Gen. vi, 4, under the name Nephilim. We are told in Gen. vi. 1-4 that "there were Nephilim in the earth," and that afterwards the "sons of God" mingling with the beautiful "daughters of men" produced a race of violent and insolent Gibborim (A. V. "mighty men"). But who were the parent of these giants? who are "the sons of God?" They were mus. probably the pious Sethites, though the prevalent opinion both in the Jewish and early Christian Church is that they were angels.

Gib'oon (belonging to a hill). One of the four cities of the HIVITES, the inhabitants of which made a league with Joshua (ix. 3-15), and thus escaped the fate of Jericho and Ai (comp. xl. 19). Gibeon lay within the territory of Benjamin (xviii. 25), and with its "suburbs" was allotted to the priests (xxi. 17), of whom it became afterwards a principal station.

Gib'onites, The. The people of Gibeon, and perhaps also of the three cities associated with Gibeon (Josh. ix. 17)—Hivites; and who, on the discovery of the stratagem by which they had obtained the protection of the Israelites, were condemned to be perpetual bondmen.

Gid'oon. A Manassite, youngest son of Joash of the Abiezrites, an undistinguished family who lived at Ophrah, a town probably on the west of Jordan (Judg. vi. 15). He was the fifth recorded Judge of Israel, and for many reasons the greatest of them all.

Gil'boa (bubbling fountain). A mountain range on the eastern side of the plain of Esdraelon, rising over the city of Jezreel (comp. 1 Sam. xxviii. 4, with xxix. 1).

Gil'ead (rugged). A mountainous region bounded on the west by the Jordan, on the north by Bashan, on the east by the Arabian plateau, and on the south by Moab and Ammon (Gen. xxxi. 21; Dent. iii. 12-17). It is sometimes called "Mount Gilead" (Gen. xxxi. 25), sometimes "the land of Gilead." The mountains of Gilead have a real elevation of from two to three thousand feet; but their apparent elevation on the western side is much greater, owing to the depression of the Jordan valley, which averages about 1000 feet. Their outline is singularly uniform, resembling a massive wall running along the horizon.

Gil'gal (creek). The site of the first camp of the Israelites on the west of the Jordan, the place at which they passed the first night after crossing the river, and where the twelve stones were set up which had been taken from the bed of the stream (Josh. iv. 19, 20, comp. 3); where also they kept their first passover in the land of Canaan (v. 10).

Girdle. An essential article of dress in the East, and worn both by men and women. The common girdle was made of leather (2 K. i. 8; Matt. iii. 4), like that worn by the Bedouins of the present day. A finer girdle was made of linen (Jer. xiii. 1; Ez. xvi. 10), embroidered with silk, and sometimes with gold and silver thread (Dan. x. 5; Rev. i. 13, xv. 6), and frequently studded with gold and precious stones or pearls.

Glass. The Hebrew word occurs only in Job xviii. 17, where in A. V. it is rendered "crystal." In spite of the absence of specific allusion to glass, in the sacred writings, the Hebrews must have been aware of the invention. From paintings representing the process of glass-blowing, which have been discovered at Beni-hassan, and in tombs at other places, we know that the invention is at least as remote as the age of Osirtasen the first (perhaps a contemporary of Joseph), 3500 years ago. Fragments, too, of wine-vases as old as the Exodus have been discovered in Egypt. The art was also known to the ancient Assyrians. In the N. T. glass is alluded to as an emblem of brightness (Rev. iv. 6, xv. 2, xxi. 18).

Goat. There appear to be two or three varieties of the common goat (Hircus aegagrus) at present bred in Palestine and Syria, but whether they are identical with those which were reared by the ancient Hebrews it is not possible to say. The most marked varieties are the Syrian goat (Capra Mambrica, Linn.), and the Angora goat (Capra Angorensis, Linn.), with fine long hair. As to the "wild goats" (1 Sam. xxiv. 2; Job xxxix. 1, and Ps. cv.

THE HORNET.

18) it is not at all improbable that some species of ibex is denoted.

God. Throughout the Hebrew Scriptures two chief names are used for the one true divine Being—ELOHIM, commonly translated God in our Version, and JEHOVAH, translated Lord. ELOHIM is the plural of ELOAH (in Arabic Allah), a form which occurs only in poetry and a few passages of later Hebrew (Neh. ix. 17; 2 Chr. xxxii. 15). The etymology is uncertain, but it is generally agreed

Greece, Greeks, Grecians. The histories of Greece and Palestine are little connected with each other. The Greeks and Hebrews met for the first time in the slave-market. The medium of communication seems to have been the Tyrian slave-merchants.

Grove. A word used in the A. V., with two exceptions, to translate the mysterious Hebrew term Asherah, which is not a grove, but probably an idol or image of some kind. In the religions of the ancient heathen world groves play a prominent part. In the old times altars only were erected to the gods. It was thought wrong to shut up the gods within walls. The groves were generally found connected with temples, and often had the right of affording an asylum. Some have supposed that even the Jewish Temple had an enclosure planted with palm and cedar (Ps. xcii. 12, 13) and olive (Ps. lii. 8), as the mosque which stands on its site now has. This is more than doubtful; but we know that a celebrated oak stood by the sanctuary at Shechem (Josh. xxiv. 26; Judg. ix. 6). There are in Scripture many memorable trees: e. g. Allon-bachuth (Gen. xxxv. 8), the tamarisk in Gibeah (1 Sam. xxii. 6), the terebinth in Shechem (Josh. xxiv. 26) under which the his prophecy about the 12th or 13th year of Josiah (ii. c. 630 or 629). The whole concludes with the magnificent Psalm in chap. iii., a composition unrivalled for boldness of conception, sublimity of thought, and majesty of diction.

Hacli'tah, The Hill. A hill apparently situated in a wood in the wilderness or waste land in the neighborhood of Ziph; in the fastnesses, or passes, of which David and six hundred followers were lurking when the Ziphites informed Saul of his whereabouts (1 Sam. xxiii. 19; comp. 14, 15, 18). No trace of the name Hachilah has yet been discovered.

that the primary idea is that of strength, power to effect; and that it properly describes God in that character in which He is exhibited to all men in His works, as the creator, sustainer, and supreme governor of the world.

Go'lan. A city of Bashan (Deut. iv. 43), allotted out of the half tribe of Manasseh to the Levites (Josh. xxi. 27), and one of the three cities of refuge east of the Jordan (xx. 8). Its very site is now unknown. It lay east of Galilee, and north of Gadartitis. [GADARA.]

Gold. The most valuable of metals, from its color, lustre, weight, ductility, and other useful properties. Hence it is used as an emblem of purity (Job xxiii. 10) and nobility (Lam. iv. 1). Gold was known from the very earliest times (Gen. ii. 11). It was at first chiefly used for ornaments, &c. (Gen. xxiv. 22).

Golgo'tha. The Hebrew name of the spot at which our Lord was crucified (Matt. xxvii. 33; Mark xv. 22; John xix. 17). By these three Evangelists it is interpreted to mean the "place of a skull." St. Luke's words are really as follows—"the place which is called 'a skull'"—not, as in the other Gospels, "of a skull," thus employing the Greek term exactly as they do the Hebrew one. Two explanations of the name are given: (1) that it was a spot where executions ordinarily took place, and therefore abounded in skulls. Or, (2) it may come from the look or form of the spot itself, bald, round, and skull-like, and therefore a mound or hillock, in accordance with the common phrase—for which there is no direct authority—"Mount Calvary."

Goli'ath. A famous giant of Gath, who, "morning and evening for forty days," defied the armies of Israel (1 Sam. xvii.). He was possibly descended from the old Rephaim [GIANTS], of whom a scattered remnant took refuge with the Philistines after their dispersion by the Ammonites (Deut. ii. 20, 21; 2 Sam. xxi. 22). His height was "six cubits and a span," which, taking the cubit at 21 inches, would make him 10½ feet high.

Go'shen. The name of a part of Egypt where the Israelites dwelt for the whole period of their sojourn in that country. It is usually called the "land of Goshen," but also Goshen simply. It was between Joseph's residence, at the time, and the frontier of Palestine, and apparently the extreme province towards that frontier (Gen. xli. 29).

law was set up, the palm-tree of Deborah (Judg. iv. 5), the terebinth of enchantments (Judg. ix. 37), the terebinth of wanderers (Judg. iv. 11), and others (1 Sam. xiv. 2, x. 3, some-had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan and had no children by Sarah (xvi. 2 and 3). That she was a bond-woman is stated both in the O. T. and in the N. T., in the latter as part of her typical character. It is recorded that "when she saw that she had conceived, her mistress was displeased in her eyes" (4), and Sarah, with the anger, we may suppose, of a free woman rather than of a wife, reproached Abraham for the results of her own act. Hagar fled, turning her steps towards her native land through the great wilderness traversed by the Egyptian road. By the fountain in the way to Haggai. The tenth in order of the Minor Prophets, and first of those who prophesied after the Captivity. With regard to his history, it is probable that he was one of the exiles who returned with Zerubbabel and Joshua.

Hair. The Hebrews were fully alive to the importance of the hair as an element of personal beauty, whether as seen in the "curled locks, black as a raven," of youth (Cant. v. 11), or in the "crown of glory" that encircled the head of old age (Prov. xvi. 31). Long hair was admired in the case of young men; it is especially noticed in the description of Absalom's person (2 Sam. xiv. 26). The practice of wearing long hair was unusual, and only resorted to as an act of religious observance.

JACKAL (CANIS AUREUS).

In times of affliction the hair was altogether cut off (Is. lii. 17, 24, xv. 2; Jer. vii. 29). Tearing the hair (Ezr. ix. 3) and letting it go dishevelled were similar tokens of grief. The usual and favorite color of the hair was black (Cant. v. 11). The approach of age was marked by a sprinkling (Hos. vii. 9) of gray hairs, which soon overspread the whole head (Gen. xlii. 38, xlv. 29; 1 K. ii. 6, 9; Job. xvi. 31, xx. 29). Pure white hair was deemed characteristic of the Divine Majesty (Dan. vii. 9; Rev. i. 14).

Hall. Used of the court of the high-priest's house (Luke xxii. 55).

Ham (warm). The name of one of the three sons of Noah, apparently the second in age. It probably signifies "warm" or "hot." Of the history of Ham nothing is related except his irreverence to his father, and the curse which that patriarch pronounced. The sons of Ham are stated to have been "Cush, and Mizraim, and Phut, and Canaan" (Gen. x. 6; comp. 1 Chr. i. 8). The name of Ham alone, of the three sons of Noah, is known to have been given to a country. Egypt is recognized as the "land of Ham" in the Bible (Ps. lxxviii. 51, cv. 23, cvi. 22). Ha'man (magnificent). The chief minister or vizier of king Ahasuerus (Esth. iii. 1). After the failure of his attempt to cut off all the Jews in the Persian empire, he was hanged on the gallows which he had erected for Mordecai.

Ha'math (to defend). The principal city of Upper Syria, was situated in the valley of the Orontes, which it commanded from the low screen of hills which forms the water-shed between the Orontes and the Litany—the "entrance of Hamath," as it is called in Scripture (Num. xxxiv. 8; Josh. xiii. 5, &c.)—to the defile of Daphne below Antioch. The Hamathites were a Hamitic race, and are included among the descendants of Canaan (Gen. x. 18). Nothing appears of the power of Hamath until the time of David (2 Sam. viii. 10). Hamath seems clearly to have been included in the dominions of Solomon (1 K. iv. 21-24). The "store-cities," which Solomon "built in Hamath" (2 Chr. viii. 4), were perhaps staples for trade.

Handicraft. (Acts xviii. 3, xix. 25; Rev. xviii. 22). In the present article brief notices only can be given of such handicraft trades as are mentioned in Scripture. The preparation of iron for use either in war, in agriculture, or for domestic purposes, was doubtless one of the earliest applications of labor; and together with iron, working in brass, or rather copper alloyed with tin, bronze, is mentioned in the same passage as practised in antediluvian times (Gen. iv. 22). In the construction of the Tabernacle, copper, but no iron, appears to have been used. After the establishment of the Jews in Canaan, the occupation of a smith became recognized as a distinct employment (1 Sam. xiii. 19). Various processes of the goldsmith's work are illustrated by Egyptian monuments. The Phoenicians appear to have possessed greater skill than the Jews in these arts, at least in Solomon's time (Judg. viii. 24, 27, xvii. 4; 1 K. vii. 13, 45, 46). The work of the carpenter is often mentioned in Scripture (Gen. vi. 14; Ex. xxxvii; Is. xiv. 13). That the Jewish carpenters must have been able to carve with some skill is evident from Is. xlii. 7, xlv. 13. The use of whitewash on tombs is remarked by our Lord (Matt. xxiii. 27). Houses infected with leprosy were required by the Law to be re-plastered (Lev. xiv. 40-45).

Akin to the craft of the carpenter is that of shif and boat-building. Solomon built, at Ezion-Geber, ships for his foreign trade, which were manned by Phoenician crews, an experiment which Jehoshaphat endeavored in vain to renew (1 K. ix. 26, 27, xxii. 48; 2 Chr. xx. 36, 37). The perfumes used in the religious services, imply knowledge and practice in the art of the "apothecaries," (Ex. xxx. 25, 35; Neh. iii. 8). The arts of spinning and weaving both wool and linen were carried on in early times, as they are still usually among the Bedouins, by women (Ex. xxxv. 25, 26; Lev. xix. 19). Together with weaving we read also of embroidery, in which gold and silver threads were interwoven with the body of the stuff, or precious stones set in the needlework (Ex. xxvi. 1, xxviii. 4, xxxix. 6-13). Besides these arts, those of dyeing and of dressing cloth were practised in Palestine, and those also of tanning and dressing leather (Josh. ii. 15-18; Matt. iii. 4). Shoemakers, barbers, and tailors are mentioned in the Mishna (Pesach, iv. 6); the barber, or his occupation, by Ezekiel (v. 1; Lev. xiv. 8; Num. vi. 5), and the tailor, plasterer, and glass vessels, painters, and gold-workers are mentioned in the Mishna (Chet, viii. 9, xxix. 3, 4, xxx. 1). Tent-makers are noticed in the Acts (xviii. 3), and frequent allusion is made to the trade of the potters. Bakers are noticed in Scripture (Jer. xxxvii. 21; Hos. vii. 4).

BOAT OF WICKER-WORK,

Han'nah. One of the wives of Elkanah, and mother of Samuel (1 Sam. i. li.). A hymn of thanksgiving for the birth of her son is in the highest order of prophetic poetry; its resemblance to that of the Virgin Mary (comp. 1 Sam. ii. 1-10 with Luke i. 46-55; see also Ps. cxliii.) has been noticed by the commentators.

Ha'ran. (1.) The third son of Terah, and therefore youngest brother of Abram (Gen. xi. 26). Three children are ascribed to him--Lot (27, 31), and two daughters. Haran was born in Ur of the Chaldees, and he died there while his father was still living. (2.) A Gershonite Levite. (3.) A son of the great Caleb by his concubine Ephah (1 Chr. ii. 46). (4.) HARAN OF UHARRAN (Acts vii. 2, 4) name of the place whither Abraham migrated with his family from Ur of the Chaldees. It is said to be in Mesopotamia (Gen. xvii. 10). It was celebrated among the Romans under the name of Charne, as the scene of the defeat of Crassus.

Hare (Heb. arnebeth) occurs only in Lev. xi. 6, and Deut. xiv. 7, amongst the animals disallowed as food by the Mosaic law. The hare is at this day of Sisera, captain of Jabin, king of Canaan (Judg. iv. 2), and it was the point to which the victorious Israelites under Barak pursued the discomfited host and chariots of the second potentate of that name (Judg. iv. 16).

AN EASTERN CASEMENT.

called arnet by the Arabs in Palestine and Syria. It was erroneously thought by the ancient Jews to have chewed the cud. They were no doubt misled, as in the case of the shaphan (Ilyxax), by the habit of these animals have of moving the jaw about.

Harlot. That this class of persons existed in the earliest states of society is clear from Gen. xxxviii.

Harp (Heb. kinnor). The kinnor was the national instrument of the Hebrews, and was well known throughout Asia. Moses assigns its invention to the antediluvian period (Gen. iv. 21).

Hart. The hart is reckoned among the clean animals and seems to have been commonly killed for food.

Ha'sham. (1.) Bene-Hasham, two hundred and twenty-three in number, came back from Babylon with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 19; Neh. vii. 22; Ezr. x. 33). The chief man of the family was among those who sealed the covenant with Nehemiah (Neh. x. 18). (2.) One of the priests or Levites who stood on Ezra's left hand while he read the law to the congregation (Neh. viii. 4).

Ha'toah. One of the eunuchs in the court of Ahasuerus. Haar'an. A province of Palestine twice mentioned by Ezekiel (xlvii. 10, 18)

Havilah (son) (1.) A son of Cush (Gen. x. 7); and (2.) A son of Joktan (x. 29). Various theories have been advanced respecting these obscure peoples.

Ha'voth Ja'fir. Certain villages on the east of Jordan, in Gilead or Bashan, which were taken by Jair the son of Mana-seh, and called after his name (Num. xxxii. 41; Deut. iii. 14). In 1 Chr. ii. 22, they are specified as twenty-three, but in Judg. x. 4, as thirty.

Hawk. With respect to the passage in Job (l. c.), which appears to allude to the migratory habits of hawks, it is curious to observe that of the ten or twelve lesser raptors of Palestine, nearly all are summer migrants.

Ha'ser (enclosed as a court-yard or camp). Topographically, seems generally employed for the "villages" of people in a roving and unsettled life, the semi-permanent collections of dwellings which are described by travelers among the modern Arabs to consist of rough stone walls covered with the tent cloths.

Hazer'im. The AVIMS, or more accurately the AVIM, are said to have lived in "the villages (A. V. 'Hazerim') as far as Gaza" (Deut. ii. 23) before their expulsion by the Captivity.

Haze'roth (Num. xi. 35, xii. 16, xxxiii. 17; Deut. i. 1). A station of the Israelites in the desert, and perhaps recognizable in the Arabic Hadhira.

Ha'saron-ta'mar, and Haz'aron-ta'mar. The ancient name of Engedi (Gen. xiv. 7). The name occurs in the records of the reign of Hezekiah (2 Chr. xx. 2).

Ha'sud. A Levite in the time of David, of the family of Shimei or Shimi, the younger branch of the Gershonites (1 Chr. xxiii. 9).

Ha'so. A son of Naboth, y Muleah's wife (Gen. xxii. 22).

Ha'zor. (1.) A fortified city, which on the occupation of the country was allotted to Naphtali (Josh. xix. 36). It was the principal city of the whole of North Palestine (Josh. xi. 10). It was fortified by Solomon (1 K. iv. 15), and its inhabitants were carried captive by Tiglath-Pileser (2 K. xv. 29).

(2.) One of the "cities" of Judah in the extreme south, named next in order to Kadesh (Josh. xv. 23). (3.) Hazor-Hadattah = "new Hazor," another of the southern towns of Judah (Josh. xv. 25). (4.) A place in which the Benjamites resided after their return from the captivity (Neh. xi. 33).

Head-dress. The earliest notice we have of such a thing is in connection with the sacerdotal vestments (Ex. xxviii. 40). The ordinary head-dress of the Bedouin consists of the keffieh, a square handkerchief, generally of red and yellow cotton, or cotton and silk, folded so that three of the corners hang down over the back and shoulders, leaving the face exposed, and bound round the head by a cord.

Heaven. St. Paul's expression "third heaven" (2 Cor. xii. 2) has led to much conjecture. Grotius said that the Jews divided the heaven into three parts, viz., (1.) the air or atmosphere, where clouds gather; (2.) the firmament, in which the sun, moon, and stars are fixed; (3.) the upper heaven, the abode of God and his angels.

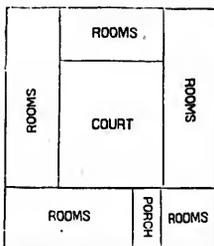

ORIENTAL HOUSE.

He'brow. The term Israelite was used by the Jews of themselves among themselves, the term Hebrew was the name by which they were known to foreigners. All the Books of the Old Testament are written in the Hebrew language, with the exception of the following passages—Dan. ii. 4-vii.; Ez. iv. 8-vi. 18, and vii. 12-26; Jer. x. 11—which are in Chaldee.

COURT OF HOUSE.

He'bron (the friend). (1.) The third son of Kohath, who was the second son of Levi. (2.) A city of Judah (Josh. xv. 54); situated among the mountains (Josh. xx. 7), 20 Roman miles south of Jerusalem, and the same distance north of Beersheba. Hebron is one of the most ancient cities in the world still existing; and in this respect it is the rival of Damascus. It was built "seven years before Zoan in Egypt" (Num. xiii. 22); and was a well-known town when Abraham entered Canaan 3780 years ago (Gen. xiii. 18). Hebron now contains about 5000 inhabitants, of whom some 50 families are Jews. It is picturesquely situated in a narrow valley, surrounded by rocky hills. About a mile from the town, up the valley, is one of the largest oak-trees in Palestine. This, say some, is the very tree beneath which Abraham pitched his tent, and it still bears the name of the patriarch. (3.) One of the towns in the territory of Asher (Josh. xix. 28).

GROUND-PLAN OF ORIENTAL HOUSE.

Heifer (ag'la, the young of kine). The heifer or young cow was not commonly used for ploughing, but only for treading out the corn (Hos. x. 11; but see Judg. xiv. 18), when it ran about without any head-stall (Dent. xxv. 4); hence the expression an "unbroken heifer" (Hos. iv. 16, A. V. "back-sliding"), to which Israel is compared.

Hell. This is the word generally and unfortunately used by our translators to render the Hebrew Sheol. It is clear that in many passages of the O. T. Sheol can only mean "the grave," and is so rendered in the A. V. (see, for example, Gen. xxxvii. 35, xlii. 38; 1 Sam. ii. 6; Job, xiv. 13). In other passages, however, it seems to involve a notion of punishment, and is therefore rendered in the A. V. by the word "Hell."

Helmet. Referred to in 1 Sam. xvii. 5; 2 Chr. xxvi. 14.

Hem of Garment. The importance which the later Jews attached to the hem or fringe of their garments was founded upon the regulation in Num. xv. 38, 39, which gave a symbolical meaning to it.

Herd, Herdsmen. The herd was greatly regarded both in the patriarchal and Mosaic period. The ox was the most precious stock next to horse and mule. The herd yielded the most esteemed sacrifice (Num. vii. 3; Ps. lxxix. 3; Is. lxvi. 3); also flesh meat, and milk, chiefly converted, probably, into butter and cheese (Deut. xxx. ii. 14; 2 Sam. xvii. 29). The full-grown ox is hardly ever slaughtered in Syria; but, both for sacrificial and convivial purposes, the young animal was preferred (Ex. xxix. 1). The argricultural and general usefulness of the ox, in ploughing, threshing, and as a beast of burden (1 Chr. xii. 40; Is. xlvi. 1), made such a slaughtering seem wasteful.

Her'mon (nose of mountain). A mountain on the north-eastern border of Palestine (Deut. iii. 8; Josh. xii. 1), over against Lebanon (Josh. xi. 17), and is the most conspicuous and beautiful mountain in Palestine or Syria. This mountain was the great landmark of the Israelites. The height of Hermon has never been measured, though it has often been estimated. It may safely be reckoned at 10,000 feet.

He'rod. This family, though of Idumaean origin, and thus aliens by race, were Jews in faith. (1.) HEROD THE GREAT was the second son of Antipater, an Idumaean, who was appointed Procurator of Judaea by Julius Caesar, b. c. 47, and Cypros, an Arabian of noble descent. At the time of his father's elevation, though only fifteen years old, he received the government of Galilee. When Antony came to Syria, a. c. 41, he appointed Herod and his elder brother Phasael tetrarchs of Judaea. Herod was forced to abandon Judaea next year by an invasion of the Parthians. In the course of a few years, by the help of the Romans, he took Jerusalem (b. c. 37), and completely established his authority throughout his dominions. The remainder of the reign of Herod was undisturbed by external troubles, but his domestic life was embittered by an almost uninterrupted series of injuries and cruel acts of vengeance. The terrible acts of bloodshed which Herod perpetrated in his own family were accompanied by others among his subjects equally terrible. He ordered the nobles whom he had called to him in his last moments to be executed immediately after his decease, that so at least his death might be attended by universal mourning. But while he alienated the affections of the Jews by his cruelty and disregard for the Law, he adorned Jerusalem with many splendid monuments of his taste and magnificence. The Temple, which he rebuilt with scrupulous care, was the greatest of those works. (2.) HEROD ANTIPAS was the son of Herod the Great by Malthace, a Samaritan. His father originally destined him as his successor, but by the last change of his will appointed him "tetrarch of Galilee and Persea" (Matt. xiv. 1; Luke iii. 19, ix. 7). He first married a daughter of Aretas, but after some time he made overtures of marriage to Herodias, the wife of his half-brother Herod Philip, which she received favorably. Pilate took occasion from our

The city of TIBERIAS, which Antipas founded and named in honor of the emperor, was the most conspicuous monument of his long reign (3.) HEROD PHILIP I. (Philip, Mark vi. 17) was the son of Herod the Great and Mariamne, and must be carefully distinguished from the tetrarch Philip. He married Herodias, the sister of Agrippa I., by whom he had a daughter Salome. Herodias, however, left him, and made an infamous marriage with his half-brother Herod Antipas (Matt. xiv. 3; Mark vi. 17; Luke iii. 19). He built a new city on the site of Paneas near the sources of the Jordan, which he called Caesarea (Matt. xvi. 13; Mark viii. 27), and raised Bethsaida to the rank of a city, under the title of Julius, and died there A. D. 34. (5.) HEROD AGRIPPA I. was the son of Aristobulus and Berenice, and grandson of Herod the Great. He was brought up at Rome with Claudius and Drusus, and after a life of various vicissitudes, was stowed on him the ensigns of royalty and other marks of favor (Acts xii. 1). (A. D. 44) Agrippa attended some games at Caesarea, held in honor of the Emperor. When he appeared in the theatre (Acts xii. 21) his flatterers saluted him as a god; and suddenly he was seized with terrible pains, and being carried from the theatre to the palace, died after five days' agony. (6.) HEROD AGRIPPA II. was the son of Herod Agrippa I. and Cypros, a grand-niece of Herod the Great. In the last Roman war Agrippa took part with the Romans, and after the fall of Jerusalem retired with Berenice to Rome, where he died in the third year of Trajan (A. D. 100).

Heron. An unclean bird (Lev. xi. 19, Deut. xiv. 18). Hesh'bon. The capital city of Sihon, king of the Amorites (Num. xxi. 26). It stood on the western border of the high plain (Alfshor, Josh. xiii. 17), and on the boundary-line between the tribes of Reuben and Gad. The ruins of Heshbon, 20 miles east of the Jordan, on the parallel of the northern end of the Dead Sea, mark the site, as they bear the name, of the ancient Heshbon.

Hezeki'ah (hezekiyah, strength of Jay). (1.) Twelfth king of Judah, son of the apostate Ahaz and Abi (or Abijah), ascended the throne at the age of 25, B. C. 726. Hezekiah was one of the three most neglected during the careless and idolatrous reign of his father. A decisive act was the destruction of a brazen serpent, said to have been the one used by Moses in the miraculous healing of the Israelites (Num. xxi. 9), which had become an object of adoration. At the head of a repentant and united people, Hezekiah ventured to assume the aggressive against the Philistines; and in a series of victories not only rewon the cities which his father had lost (2 Chr. xxviii. 18), but even dispossessed them of their own cities, except Gaza (2 K. xviii. 8) and Gath. Hezekiah lived to enjoy his well-earned peace and glory. He slept with his fathers after a reign of twenty-nine years, in the 56th year of his age (B. C. 697). (2.) Son of Neariah, one of the descendants of the royal family of Judah (1 Chr. iii. 23). (3.) The same name, though rendered in the A. V. HEZEKIAH, is found in Zeph. i. 1. (4.) ATER-OF-HEZEKIAH [ATER.]

Hierap'olis. This place is mentioned (Col. iv. 13) with COLOSSAE and LAODICEA. The three towns were all in the basin of the Maeander, and within a few miles of one another.

High Places (hamoth). From the earliest times it was the custom among all nations to erect altars and places of worship on lofty and conspicuous thrown into prison by Tiberius, where he remained till the accession of Caius (Caligula) A. D. 37. The new emperor gave him the governments formally held by the tetrarchs Philip and Lysanias, and be-perfect kings of Judah (2 K. xviii. 5; Ecclus. xlix. 4). His first act was to purge, and repair, and reopen with splendid sacrifices and perfect ceremonial, the Temple, which had been despoiled and spots. To this general custom we find constant allusion in the Bible (Is. lxxv. 7; Jer. iii. 6; Ez. vi. 13, xviii. 6; Hos. iv. 13).

High-Priest. I. LEGALLY. We find from the very first the following characteristic attributes of Aaron and the high-priests his successors, as distinguished from the other priests; (1.) Aaron alone was anointed (Lev. viii, 12). (2.) The high-priest had a peculiar dress, which passed to his successor at his death. (3.) Aaron had peculiar functions. To him alone it appertained, and he alone was permitted, to enter the Holy of Holies, which he did once a year, on the great day of atonement. II. THEOLOGICALLY. The theological view of the high-priesthood would embrace the consideration of the office, as typical of the priesthood of our Lord Jesus Christ, and as setting forth under shadows the truths which are openly taught under the Gospel. III. HISTORICALLY. The history of the high-priests embraces a period of about 1,370 years, and a succession of about 80 high-priests, beginning with Aaron, and ending with Phinias.

CARAVANSARY.

Hinge. Both ancient Egyptian and modern Oriental doors were and are hung by means of pivots turning in sockets both on the upper and lower sides (1 K. vii, 50).

Hin'jem, Valley of, otherwise called "the valley of the son." A deep and narrow ravine, with steep, rocky sides to the S. and W. of Jerusalem, separating Mount Zion to the N. from the "Hill of Evil Counsel." It appears to have become the common cesspool of the city, into which its sewage was conducted, to be carried off by the waters of the Kidron.

Hit'hites, The. The nation descended from Cheth (A. V. "Heth"), the second son of Canaan.

Honey. All travelers agree in describing Palestine as a land "flowing with milk and honey" (Ex. xiii, 8); bees being abundant even in the remote parts of the wilderness, where they deposit their honey in the crevices of the rocks or in hollow trees.

Hor. Mount (HAR, mountain). The mountain on which Aaron died (Num. xx, 25, 27). It was on the "boundary line" (Num. xx, 23) or "at the edge" (xxiii, 37) of the land of Edom. It was the halting-place of the people next after Kadesh. It was during the encampment at Kadesh that Aaron was gathered to his fathers. Its height is 4,800 feet above the Mediterranean.

Horn. The word "horn" is often used metaphorically to signify strength and honor. Of strength the horn of the unicorn was the most frequent representative (Deut. xxxiii, 17, &c.).

Among the Druses upon Mount Lebanon the married women wear silver horns on their heads. In the sense of honor, the word horn stands for supreme authority.

Horse. The most striking feature in the Biblical notices of the horse is the exclusive application of it to warlike operations; in no instance is that useful animal employed for the purpose of ordinary locomotion or agriculture, if we except Is. xxviii, 28, where we learn that horses were employed in threshing, not in gears, but simply driven about wildly over the strewed grain.

The animated description of the horse in Job xxxix, 19-25, applies solely to the war-horse. The Hebrews in the patriarchal age, as a pastoral race, did not stand in need of the services of the horse, and for a long period after their settlement in Canaan they dispensed with it, partly in consequence of the hilly nature of the country, and partly in consequence of the prohibition in Deut. xvii, 16, which would be held to apply to all periods. David first established a force of cavalry and chariots after the defeat of Haddadzer (2 Sam. viii, 4). But the great supply of horses was subsequently effected by Solomon through his connection with Egypt (1 K. iv, 26). Solomon also established a very active trade in horses, which were brought by dealers out of Egypt and resold at a profit to the Hittites, who lived between Palestine and the Euphrates (1 K. x, 28, 29). In the countries adjacent to Palestine, the use of the horse was much more frequent. The harness of the Assyrian horses was profusely decorated, the bits being gilt, and the bridles adorned with tassels.

Hosanna (save, we pray). The cry of the multitudes as they thronged in our Lord's triumphal procession into Jerusalem (Matt. xxi, 9, 15).

Hosea (salvation). Son of Beeri, and first of the Minor Prophets.

Hosea's (safety). The nineteenth, last, and best king of Israel. He succeeded Pekah, whom he slew in a successful conspiracy, thereby fulfilling a prophecy of Isaiah (Is. vii, 16).

Hospitality. Hospitality was regarded by most nations of the ancient world as one of the chief virtues. Among the Arabs we find the best illustrations of the old Bible narratives, and among them see traits that might besem their ancestor Abraham. The laws respecting strangers (Lev.

Emblems of the Twelve Tribes.

xix, 33, 34) and the poor (Lev. xxv, 14, seq.; Deut. xv, 7), and concerning redemption (Lev. xxv, 23, seqq.), &c., are framed in accordance with the spirit of hospitality. The good Samaritan stand, for all ages as an example of Christian hospitality, embodying the command to love one's neighbor as himself.

Hour. The ancient Hebrews were probably unacquainted with the division of the natural day into 24 parts; but they divided the day into four parts (Neh. ix. 3), and the night into three watches (Judg. vii. 19).

Hous (beth, to pass the night). The houses of the rural poor in Egypt, as well as in Syria, Arabia, and Persia, are for the most part mere huts of mud, or sunburnt bricks. In some parts of Palestine and Arabia stone is used, and in certain districts caves in the rock are used as dwellings (Amos. v. 11). The houses are usually of one story only, viz., the ground floor, and often contain only one apartment. The roofs are commonly but not always flat. The difference between the poorest houses and those of the class next above them is greater than between these and the houses of the first rank. The prevailing plan of Eastern houses of this class presents a front of wall, whose blank and mean appearance is relieved only by the door and a few latticed and projecting windows. Within this is a court or courts with apartments opening into them. An awning is drawn over the court, and the floor strewn with carpets on festive occasions. Around part of the court is a veranda, often nine or ten feet deep. There are usually no special bedrooms in Eastern houses. The outer doors are closed with a wooden lock. There are no chimneys, but fire is made when required with charcoal in a chaffing-dish.

Husks (Gr. keratia). The word rendered in the A. V. "husks" (Luke xv. 16) describes really the fruit of the carob. This tree is very commonly met with in Syria and Egypt; it produces pods, shaped like a horn, varying in length from 6 to 10 inches, and about a finger's breadth or more. Hyasna. The hyasna was common in ancient Egypt, and is constantly depicted upon monuments; it

Hul (region). The second son of Aram, and grandson of Shem (Gen. x. 23).

Hul'dah (zeveah). A prophetess, whose husband Shallum was keeper of the wardrobe in the time of king Josiah (2 K. xxii. 14).

Hunting. The Hebrews, as a pastoral and agricultural people, were not given to the sports of the field; the density of the population, the earnestness of their character, and the tendency of their ritual regulations, particularly those affecting food, all combined to discourage the practice of hunting. Hur. A man who is mentioned on the occasion of the battle with Amalek (Ex. xvii. 10), when with Aaron he stayed up the hinds of Moses.

must, therefore, have been well known to the Jews. Hymn. To Christians the Hymn has always been something different from the Psalm; a different conception in thought, a different type in composition. In the jail at Philippi, Paul and Silas "sang hymns" (A. V. "praises") unto God, and so loud was their song that their fellow-prisoners heard them. This must have been what we mean by singing, and not merely recitation. It was in fact a veritable singing of hymns.

Hyssop (Heb. zohob). The zohob was used to sprinkle the doorposts of the Israelites in Egypt with the blood of the paschal lamb (Ex. xii. 22); it was employed in the purification of lepers and leprous houses (Lev. xiv. 4, 51), and in the sacrifice of the red heifer (Num. xix. 6).

I.

Ico'nium was the capital of LYCAONIA. It was on the great line of communication between Ephesus and the western coast of the peninsula on one side, and Tarsus, Antioch, and the Euphrates on the other. Iconium was a well chosen place for missionary operations (Acts xiv. 1, 3, 21, 22, xvi. 1, 2, xviii. 23). Idol, Image. Among the earliest objects of worship, regarded as symbols of deity, were the meteoric stones which the ancients believed to have been the images of the god sent down from heaven. From these they transferred their regard to rough unhewn blocks, to stone columns or pillars, of wood, in which the divinity worshipped was supposed to dwell, and which were consecrated, like the sacred stone at Delphi, by being anointed with oil, and crowned with wool on solemn days. Of the forms assumed by the idolatrous images we have not many traces in the Bible. Dagon, the fish-god of the Philistines, was a human figure terminating in a fish; and that the Syrian deities were represented in the later times in a symbolical human shape we know for certainty.

Idolatry, strictly speaking, denotes the worship of deity in a visible form, whether the images to which homage is paid are symbolical representations of the true God or of the false divinities which have been made the objects of worship in His stead. (1.) History of Idolatry among the Jews.—The first undoubted allusion to idolatry in the Bible is Rachel's stealing her father's teraphim (Gen. xxxi. 19), a relic of the worship of other gods. The Israelites blended in a strange manner a theoretical belief in the true God with the external reverence which they were led to pay to the idols of the nations by whom they were surrounded. During their long residence in Egypt, the country of symbolism, they defiled themselves with the idols of the land, and it was long before the taint was removed (Josh. xxiv. 14; Ez. xx. 7). Under Samuel's administration, a fast was held, and purificatory rites performed, to mark the public renunciation of idolatry (1 Sam. vii. 3-6). But in the reign of Solomon all this was forgotten. Each of his many foreign wives brought with her the gods of her own nation; and the gods of Ammon, ISRAELITES CROSSING THE RED SEA.

Mosh, and Zidon were openly worshipped. Rehoboam, the son of an Ammonite mother, perpetuated the worst features of Solomon's idolatry (1 K. xiv. 22-24); and in his reign was made the great schism

In the national religion. (2.) Objects of Idolatry. In the old religion of the Semitic races the deity, following human analogy, was conceived of as male and female; the one representing the active, the other the passive principle of nature; the former the source of spiritual, the latter of physical life.

MOUNTAIN PASS NEAR JERICHO.

The sun and moon were early selected as outward symbols of this all-pervading power, and the worship of the heavenly bodies was not only the most ancient but the most prevalent system of idolatry. The Assyrian Ibel, or Ielus, is another form of Baal. By the later kings of Judah, sacred horses and chariots were dedicated to the sun-god, as by the Persians (2 K. xxiii, 11). The moon, worshipped by the Phoenicians under the name of Astarte or Baaltis, the passive power of nature, as Baal was the active, and known to the Hebrews as Ashtaroth or Ashtoreth, the tutelary goddess of the Zidonians, appears early among the objects of Israelitish idolatry, and in later times the brazen serpent became the object of idolatrous homage (2 K. xviii, 4). (3.) Punishment of Idolatry.—If one main object of the Hebrew polity was to teach the unity of God, the extermination of idolatry was but a subordinate end. Jehovah, the God of the Israelites, was the civil head of the State. He was the theocratic king of the people, who had delivered them from bondage, and to whom they had taken a willing oath of allegiance. Idolatry, therefore, to an Israelite was a state offence (1 Sam. xv, 23), a political crime of the gravest character, high treason against the majesty of his king. The individual offender was devoted to destruction (Ex. xxii, 20).

He-ab'arin (heaps, or ruins of Aharim). One of the later halting-places of the children of Israel (N. m. xxi, 11, xxiii, 44).

I'jon (ruin). A town in the north of Palestine, belonging to the tribe of Naphtali. It was taken and plundered by the captains of Benhadad (1 K. xv, 20), and a second time by Tiglath pileser (2 K. xv, 29). Hydruntum. An extensive district lying along the eastern coast of the Adriatic, from the boundary of Italy on the north to Epirus on the south.

Imman'uel (that is God with us)

The symbolical name given by the prophet Isalah to the child who was announced to Ahaz and the people of Judah, as the sign which God would give of their deliverance from their enemies (Is. vii, 14). It is applied by the Apostle Matthew to the Messiah, born of the Virgin (Matt. i, 23).

In'cense. The incense employed in the service of the tabernacle was compounded of the perfumes stacte, onycha, galbanum, and pure frankincense. All incense which was not made of these ingredients was forbidden to be offered (Ex. xxx, 9). The morning incense was offered when the lamps were trimmed in the Holy place. When the lamps were lighted "between the evenings," incense was again burnt on the golden altar (1 K. vi, 22). The offering of incense has formed a part of the religious ceremonies of most ancient nations.

India. The name of India does not occur in the Bible before the book of Esther, where it is noticed as the limit of the territories of Ahasuerus in the east, as Ethiopia was in the west (i, 1; viii, 9). There is undoubted evidence that an active trade was carried on between India and Western Asia. The trade opened by Solomon with Ophir through the Red Sea consisted chiefly of Indian articles.

Inns. The Hebrew word (mishkan) thus rendered literally signifies "a lodging-place for the night." Inns, in our sense of the term, were, as they still are, unknown in the East, where hospitality is religiously practised. The khans, or caravanserais, are the representatives of European inns, and these were established but gradually. On the more freoxygen, the knowledge of the art of forging iron, which is attributed to Tubal Cain, argues an acquaintance with the difficulties which attend the smelting of this metal. The book of Job contains passages which indicate that iron was a metal well known. That it was plentiful in the time of David appears from 1 Chr. xxii, 3. The market of Tyre was supplied with bright or polished iron by the merchants of Dan and Javan (Ez. xxvii, 19). Isaac (Heb. yishak, laughing). The son whom Sarah, in accordance with the Divine promise, bore to Abraham, in the hundredth year of his age, at Gerar. In his infancy he became the object of quented routes, remote from towns (Jer. ix, 2), caravanserais were, in course of time, erected, often at the expense of the wealthy.

Iron is mentioned with brass as the earliest of known metals (Gen. iv, 22). As it is rarely found in its native state, but generally in combination with age of 180 years. He was buried by his two sons in the cave of Machpelah. As the child of the promise, and as the progenitor of the children of the promise, he is contrasted with Ishmael (Rom. ix, 7, 10; Gal. iv, 28; Heb. xi, 18). In our Lord's remarkable argument with the Sadducees, Isaac, of whom it was said (Gen. xxxv. 29) that he was gathered to his people, is represented as still living to Giod (Luke xx. 38, &c.).

Iss'iah. The prophet, son of Amoz. He prophesied concerning Judah and Jerusalem, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah (Is. i. 1). Isaiah must have been an old man at the close of Hezekiah's reign. Rabbinical

Ishmael He would make a nation, sent them both away, and they departed and wandered in the wilderness of Beerseba. Of the later life of Ishmael we know little. He was present with Isaac at the burial of Abraham. He died at the age of 137 years (xxv. 17, 18).

Is'ra'el (soldier of God). (1.) The name given to Jacob after he wrestling with the Angel a. Peniel. (2.) It became the national name of the twelve tribes collectively.

Israel. Kingdom of. (1.) The prophet Ahijah of Shiloh, who was commissioned in the latter days of Solomon to announce the division of the kingdom, left one tribe (Judah) to the house of David, and assigned ten to Jeroboam (1 K. xi. 35, 31). Levi being intentionally omitted. Eventually the greater part of Benjamin, and probably the whole of Simon and Dan, were included as if by common consent in the kingdom of Judah. The sea-coast between Acha and Japho remained in the possession of Israel. (2.) The population of the kingdom is not expressly stated. The whole population may perhaps have amounted to three millions and a half. (3.) STURON was the first capital of the new men of Issachar, when taken in the census at Sinal, was 54,400. During the journey they seem to have steadily increased. The allotment of Issachar lay above that of Manasseh (Josh. xix. 17-23). This territory was, as it still is, among the richest land in Palestine.

It'aly. This word is used in the N. T. as denoting the whole natural peninsula between the Alps and the Straits of Messina.

Ith'amar. The youngest son of Aaron (Ex. vi. 23). After the death of Nadab and Abihu (Lev. x. 1), Eleazar and Ithamar were appointed to succeed to their places in the priestly office (Ex. xxviii. 1, 40, 43).

Ituraa's (from Itur, the son of Ishmael). A small province on the north-western border of Palestine, lying along the base of Mount Hermon, only mentioned in Luke iii. 1.

Ivory. The word literally signifies the "tooth" of any animal, and hence more especially denotes the substance of the projecting tusks of elephants.

The skilled workmen of Hiram, King of Tyre, fashioned the great ivory throne of Solomon, and overlaid it with pure gold (1 K. x. 18; 2 Chr. ix. 17). The ivory thus employed was supplied by the caravans of Dedan (Is. xxi. 13; Ez. xxvii. 15), or was brought with apes and peacocks by the navy of Tarshish (1 K.

tradition says that Isaiah was slain under the trunk of a tree by order of Manasseh, to which it is supposed that reference is made in Hebrews xi. 37.

JERUSALEM.

Ish-bo'sheth. The youngest of Saul's four sons, and his legitimate successor. Ishbosheth was "40 years old when he began to reign over Israel, and reigned two years" (2 Sam. iii. 10).

Is'h'mael (whom God hears). The son of Abraham by Hagar the Egyptian, his concubine; born when Abraham was fourscore and six years old (Gen. xvi. 15, 16). Ishmael was the first-born of his father. He does not again appear in the narrative until the weaning of Isaac. At the great feast made in celebration of the weaning, Sarah saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, which she had borne unto Abraham, mocking, and urged Abraham to cast out him and his mother. The patriarch, comforted by God's renewed promise, that of kingdom (1 K. xii. 25), venerable for its traditions, and beautiful in its situation. Subsequently Tirzah became the royal residence, if not the capital, of Jeroboam (1 K. xiv. 17) and of his successors (xv. 33, xvi. 8, 17, 23). Samaria, uniting in itself the qualities of beauty and fertility, and a commanding position, was chosen by Omri (1 K. xvi. 24), and remained the capital of the kingdom until it had given the last proof of its strength by sustaining for three years the onset of the hosts of Assyria. (4.) The kingdom of Israel lasted 254 years, from B. C. 975 to B. C. 721, about two-thirds of the duration of its more compact neighbor Judah.

Is'sachar (hire). The ninth son of Jacob and the fifth of Leah. At the descent into Egypt four sons panelled with vory, like the palace of Menelaus; described by Homer (Odys. iv. 73) Beds inlaid or veneered with ivory were in use among the Hebrews (Am. vi. 4).

Jab'ok (flowing). A stream which intersects the mountain-range of Gilead (comp. Jesh. xii. 2 and 5), and falls into the Jordan about midway between the Sea of Galilee and the Dead Sea.

BLUE THRUSH OF JUDEA.

Jabesh. (1.) Father of SHALUM, the 15th king of Israel (2 K. xv. 10, 13, 14). (2.) Jabesh, or Jabesh Gilead, or Jabesh in the territory of Gilead. In its widest sense Gilead included the half tribe of Manasseh (1 Chr. xxvii. 21) as well as the tribes of Gad and Reuben (Num. xxxii. 1-42) east of the Jordan—and of the cities of Gilead, Jabesh was the chief.

Jachin (intelligent). (1.) King of Hazor, who organized a confederacy of the northern princes against the Israelites (Josh. xi. 1-3). Joshua surprised the allied forces by the waters of Merom (ver. 7) and utterly routed them. (2.) A king of Hazor, whose general, Sisera, was defeated by Barak (Judg. lv. 3, 13).

Jab'neh. 2 Chr. xxvii. 6. [JABNEEL.]

Ja'ehan. One of seven chief men of the tribe of Gad (1 Chr. v. 13).

Ja'ebla. (1.) One of the two pillars which were set up "in the porch" (1 K. vii. 21) or before the temple (2 Chr. iii. 17) of Solomon. [BOAZ.] (2.) Fourth son of Simeon (Gen. xlvii. 10; Ex. vi. 15); founder of the family of the JACHINITES (Num. xxvi. 12). (3.) Head of the 21st course of priests in the time of David. Some of the course returned from Babylon (1 Chr. ix. 10. xxiv. 17; Neh. xi. 10).

Jacynth. A precious stone, forming one of the foundations of the walls of the new Jerusalem (Rev. xxi. 20).

Jacob (supplanter). The second son of Isaac and Rebeckah. He was born with Esau, when Isaac was 59 and Abraham 159 years old, probably at the well Lahai-roi. His history is related in the latter half of the book of Genesis. He bought the birth-right from his brother Esau; and afterwards, at his mother's instigation, acquired the blessing intended for Esau, by practising a well-known deceit on Isaac. Hitherto the two sons shared the wanderings of Isaac in the South Country; but now Jacob, in his 78th year was sent from the family home, to avoid his brother, and to seek a wife among his kindred in Padan-aram. As he passed through Bethel, God appeared to him. After the lapse of 21 years he returned from Padan-aram with two wives, two concubines, eleven sons, and a daughter, and large property. He escaped from the angry pursuit of Laban, from a meeting with Esau, and from the vengeance of the Canaanites provoked by the murder of Shechem; and in sign of the grace won by a night of wrestling with God, his name was changed at into Egypt eleven years before the death of Isaac; and Jacob had probably exceeded his 130th year when he went thither. After giving his solemn blessing to Ephraim and Manasseh, and his own sons one by one, and charging the ten to complete their reconciliation with Joseph, he died in his 147th year. His body was embalmed, carried with great care and pomp into the land of Canaan, and deposited with his fathers, and his wife Leah, in the cave of Machpelah.

James. (1.) JAMES THE SON OF ZEBEDEE, one of the Twelve Apostles. We first hear of him in A. D. 27, when Zebedee, a fisherman (Mark i. 20), was out on the Sea of Galilee with his two sons, James and John, and some boatmen. He was engaged in his customary occupation of fishing, and near him was another boat belonging to Simon and Andrew, with whom he and his sons were in partnership. Finding themselves unsuccessful, the occupants of both boats came ashore, and began to wash their nets. At this time the new Teacher appeared upon the beach. At His call they left all, and became, once and forever, His disciples. It would seem to have been at the time of the appointment of the twelve Apostles that the name of Boanerges was given to the sons of Zebedee.—The "Sons of Thunder" had a burning and impetuous spirit, which twice exhibits itself in its unchastened form (Luke ix. 54; Mark x. 37). (2.) JAMES THE SON OF ALPHEUS, one of the Twelve Apostles. Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18; Luke vi. 15; Acts i. 13. (3.) JAMES THE BROTHER

OF THE LORD. Matt. xiii. 55; Mark vi. 3; Gal. i. 19. (4.) JAMES THE SON OF MARY. Matt. xxvii. 56; Luke xxiv. 10. Also called THE LESS. Mark xx. 40.

JAMES THE SERVANT OF GOD AND OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST. James i. 1. James the Less, son of Alphaeus or Clopas, and brother of our Lord (see above), was called to the Apostolate, together with his younger brother Jude, in the spring of the year 28. It is not likely (though far from impossible) that James and Jude took part with their brothers and sisters, and the Virgin Mary, in trying "to lay hold on" Jesus in the autumn of the same year (Mark iii. 21); and it is likely, though not certain that it is of the other brothers and sisters, without these, that St. John says, "Neither did His brethren believe on Him" (John vii. 5), in the autumn of A. D. 29. According to tradition, James was thrown down from the Temple by the Scribes and Pharisees; he was then stoned and his brains dashed out by a fuller's club, from Jerusalem, which St. James does not seem to have ever left. Its main object is not to teach doctrine, but to improve morality. St. James is the moral teacher of the N. T.

Japheth (light-colored race). One of the three sons of Noah. The descendants of Japheth occupied the "isles of the Gentiles" (Gen. x. 5), i. e. the coast lands of the Mediterranean Sea in Europe and Asia Minor, whence they spread northwards over the whole continent of Europe and a considerable portion of Asia.

Jasher, Book of, or, as the margin of the A. V. gives it, "the book of the upright. Gesenius conjectured that it was an anthology of ancient songs, which acquired its name, "the book of the just or upright," from being written in praise of upright men.

Jasper. A precious stone frequently noticed in Scripture. It was the last of the twelve inserted in the high-priest's breast-plate (Ex. xxviii. 20, xxxix. 13), and the first of the twelve used in the foundations of the new Jerusalem (Rev. xxi. 19). The characteristics of the stone, as far as they are specified in Scripture (Rev. xxi. 11), are, that it was "most precious," and "like crystal;" we may also infer from Rev. iv. 3, that it was a stone of brilliant and transparent light.

Jebusites, The, were descended from the third son of Canaan (Gen. x. 16; 1 Chr. i. 14). The actual people first appear in the invaluable report of the spies (Num. xiii. 29). A mountain-tribe they were, and a mountain-tribe they remained,

Jeduthun (praising). A Levite, of the family of Merari, is probably the same as Ethan (comp. 1 Chr. xv. 17, 19, with 1 Chr. xvi. 41, 42, xxv. 1, 3, 6; 2 Chr. xxxv. 15). His office was generally to preside over the music of the temple service.

and Nehushta, and for three months and ten days king of Judah, B. C. 597. Jehoiahin came to the throne when Egypt was still prostrate in consequence of the victory at Carchemish. Jerusalem was quite defenceless, and unable to offer any resistance to the regular army which Nebuchadnezzar sent to besiege it (2 K. xxiv. 10, 11). In a very short time Jehoiahim surrendered at discretion; and he and the queen-mother, and all his servants, captains, and officers, came out and gave themselves up to Nebuchadnezzar, who carried them, with the harem and the eunuchs, to Babylon (Jer. xxix. 2; Ezek. xvii, 12, xix, 9).

Jehoi'akim (Jah appoints). Called ELIAKIM, son of Josiah and Zeldah, and king of Judah. After deposing Jehoahaz, Pharaoh Necho set Eliakim, his elder brother, upon the throne, and changed his name to Jehoiakim, B. C. 608-597. The reign of Jehoiakim extends from B. C. 609 to B. C. 598, or as some reckon 599.

Jeho'nadab, and Jona'dab, the son of Rechab, founder of the Rechabites.

Jeho'ram (Jah has exalted). (1.) Son of Ahab king of Israel, who succeeded his brother Ahaziah, B. C. 896, and died B. C. 844. The alliance between the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, commenced by his father and Jehoshaphat, was very close throughout his reign. With the life of Jehoram ended the dynasty of Omri. (2.) Eldest son of Jehoshaphat, succeeded his father on the throne of Judah at the age of 32, and reigned eight years, from B. C. 893-2 to 885-4. As soon as he was fixed on the throne, he put his six brothers to death, with many of the ed to produce any good effect upon him. This was in the first or second year of his reign. The remainder of it was a series of calamities. He died of a terrible disease (2 Chr. xxi. 19, 20) early in the twelfth year of his brother-in-law Jehoram's reign over Israel.

Jehosh'aphat (Jah is judge). (1.) King of Judah, son of Asa, succeeded to the throne B. C. 914, when he was 35 years old, and reigned 25 years. His history is to be found among the events recorded in 1 K. xv. 24; 2 K. viii. 16, or in a continuous narrative in 2 Chr. xvii. 1-xxi. 3. He was contemporary with Ahab, Ahaziah, and Jehoram. In his own kingdom Jehoshaphat ever showed himself a zealous follower of the commandments of God; he tried, it would seem not quite successfully, to put down the high places and groves in which the people of Judah burnt incense. Riches and honors increased around him. He received tribute from the Philistines and Arabians; and kept up a large standing army in Jerusalem. Turning his attention to foreign commerce, he built at Ezion-geber, with the help of Ahaziah, a navy designed to go to Tarshish; but it was wrecked at Ezion-geber. In his declining years the administration of affairs was placed (probably B. C. 891) in the hands of his son Jehoram. (2.) Son of Ahilud, (2 Sam. viii. 16, &c. and Solomon (1 K. iv. 3). (3.) One of from captivity, Jehovah would gather all the heathen (Joel iii. 2), and would there sit to judge them for their misdeeds to Israel (iii. 12).

Jehosh'eba (oath to Jah). Daughter of Joram king of Israel, and wife of Jehoiada the high-priest (2 K. xi. 2). She is the only recorded instance of the marriage of a princess of the royal house with a high-priest.

Jehovah. The true pronunciation of this name, by which God was known to the Hebrews, has been entirely lost, the Jews themselves scrupulously avoiding every mention of it. This custom, which had its origin in reverence, was founded upon an erroneous rendering of Lev. xxiv. 16, from which it was inferred that the mere utterance of the name constituted a capital offence. According to Jewish tradition, it was pronounced but once a year by the high-priest on the day of Atonement when he entered the Holy of Holies; but on this point there is some doubt.

Je'hu (Jah is he). (1.) The founder of the fifth dynasty of the kingdom of Israel, son of Jehoshaphat (2 K. ix. 2). In his youth he had been one of the guards of Ahab. He had been known to Elijah as a youth of promise. He was buried in state in Samaria, and was succeeded by his son JEHOIAHAZ (2 K. x. 35). (2.) Jhu, son of Henani; a prophet of Judah, but whose ministrations were chiefly directed to Israel. His father was probably the seer who attacked Asa (2 Chr. xvi. 7). He must have begun his career as a prophet when very young. He first denounced Baasha (1 K. xvi. 1, 7), and then, after an interval of thirty years, reappears to denounce Jehoshaphat for his alliance with Ahab (2 Chr. xix. 2, 3). He survived Jehoshaphat and wrote his life (xx. 34). (3.) A man of Judah of the house of Hezron. (4.) A Simeonite, son of Josibiah (1 Chr. iv. 35).

Jeph'thah. A judge, about B. C. 1143-1137. His history is contained in Judg. xi. 1-xii. 8. He was a Gileadite, the son of Gilead and a concubine. Driven by the legitimate sons from his father's inheritance, he went to Tob, and became the head of a company of freebooters in a debatable land probably belonging to Ammon (2 Sam. x. 6). His fame as a bold and successful captain was carried back to his native Gilead; and when the time was ripe for throwing off the yoke of Ammon, Jephthah consented to become their captain, on the condition (solemnly ratified before the Lord in Mizpeh) that in the event of his success against Ammon, he should still remain as their acknowledged head. He collected warriors throughout Gilead and Manasseh, the provinces which acknowledged his authority; and then he vowed his occasioned his flight into Egypt. There he remained during the rest of Solomon's reign. On Solomon's death, he demanded Shishak's permission to return. Jer'icho (city of the moon; and another, a fragrant place). A city of high antiquity, situated in a plain traversed by the Jordan, and exactly over against where that river was crossed by the Israelites under Joshua (Josh. iii. 16). It had a king. Its walls were so considerable that houses were built upon them (ii. 15), and its gates were shut, as throughout the East still, "when it was dark" (v. 5). The spoil that was found in it betokened its affluence. Jericho is first mentioned as the city to which the two spies were sent by Joshua from Shittim; they were lodged in the house of Rahab the harlot upon the wall, and departed, having first promised to save her and all that were found in her house from destruction (ii. 1-21).

Jerem'ah (Jah throws). Was "the son of Hilkiah of the priests that were in Anathoth" (Jer. i. 1), and was a child in the reign of Josiah, B. C. 638-608 (i. 6). In his youth he was called to the prophetic office, but we have hardly any mention of him during the eighteen years between his call and Josiah's death, or during the short reign of Jehoahaz. Under Jehoiakim B. C. 607-597, he opposed the Egyptian party, then dominant in Jerusalem, and maintained the supremacy of the Chaldeans. If we could assume that Jii, 31 was written by Jeremiah himself, it would show that he reached an extreme old age, but this is so doubtful that we are left to other sources. On the one hand there is the Christian tradition, resting doubtless on some earlier belief, that the Jews at Tabpanhes, irritated by his rebukes, at last stoned him to death. On the other side there is the Jewish statement that on the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, he, with Baruch, made his escape to Babylon or Judaea, and died in peace.

BRAZEN LAVER.

Jerobo'am (Heb. yarob'am, many people). (1.) The first king of the divided kingdom of Israel (B. C. 975-954), was the son of an Ephraimite of the name of Nebat. He was employed by Solomon in the fortifications of Milo underneath the citadel of Zion, and was raised to the rank of superintendent over the taxes and labors exacted from the tribe of Ephraim (1 K. xi. 28). He made the another princess who had married the Edomite chief Hadad. A year elapsed, and a son, Abijah (or Abijam), was born. Then Jeroboam again requested permission to depart, which was granted; and on his return to Shechem took place the conference with Rehoboam, and the final revolt [JEROBOAM]; which ended in the elevation of Jeroboam to the throne of the northern kingdom. (2.) JEROBOAM II., the son of Joash, the 4th of the dynasty of Jehu (B. C. 825-784). The most prosperous of the kings of Israel. He repelled the Syrian invaders, took their capital city Damascus (2 K. xiv. 28; Am. i. 3-5), and recovered the whole of the ancient dominion from Hamath to the Dead Sea (xiv. 25; Am. vi. 14).

Jerusalem (Jerusalem, of s. acc.). (1.) THE PLACE ITSELF. Jerusalem stands in latitude 31° 46' 35" North, and longitude 35° 18' 30" East of Greenwich. It is 32 miles distant from the sea, and 18 from the Jordan; 20 from Hebron, and 36 from Samaria. "In several respects," says Dean Stanley, "its situation is singular among the cities of Palestine. Its elevation is remarkable; occasioned not from its being on the summit of one of the numerous hills of Judaea, like most of the towns and villages, but because it is on the edge of one of the highest table-lands of the country. Hebron indeed is higher still by some hundred feet, and from the south, accordingly (even from Bethlehem), the approach to Jerusalem is by a slight descent. But from any other side the ascent is perpetual; and to the traveller approaching the city from the E. or W. it must always have presented the appearance beyond any other capital of the then known world—we may say beyond any important city that has ever existed on the earth—of a mountain city; breathing, as compared with the sultry plains of Jordan, a mountain air; enthroned, as compared with Jericho or Damascus, Gaza or Tyre, on a mountain fastness" (S. & P. 170, 1.). The elevation of

LOCUST.

Jerusalem is a subject of constant reference and exultation by the Jewish writers. Their fervid poetry abounds with allusions to its height, to the ascent thither of the tribes from all parts of the country. It was the habitation of Jehovah, from which "He looked upon all the inhabitants of the world" (Ps. xxxiii. 14); its kings were "higher than the kings of the earth" (Ps. lxxxix. 27).

TOPOGRAPHY.—To convey an idea of the position of Jerusalem, we may say roughly, that the city occupies the southern termination of a table-land, which is cut off from the country round it on its west, south, and east sides, by ravines more than usually deep and precipitous. These ravines leave the level of the table-land, the one on the west and the other on the north-east of the city, and fall rapidly until they form a junction below its south-east corner. The eastern one—the Valley of the Kedron, commonly called the Valley of Jehoshaphat, runs nearly straight from north to south. But the western one—the valley of Hinnon—runs south for a time, and then takes a sudden bend to the east until it meets the Valley of Jehoshaphat, after which the two rush of as one to the Dead Sea. Of these two, that on the west is the higher and more massive on which the city of Jerusalem now stands, and in fact always stood. The hill on the east is considerably lower and smaller, so that, to a spectator from the south, the city appears to slope sharply towards the east. Here was the Temple, and here stands now the great Mohammedan sanctuary with its mosques and domes.

North of the side of the Temple is the building now known to Christians as the Mosque of Omar, but by Moslems called the Dome of the Rock.

Burial grounds.—The main cemetery of the city seems from an early date to have been where it is still—on the steep slopes of the valley of the Kedron. The tombs of the kings were in the city of David, that is, Mount Zion. The royal sepulchres were probably chambers containing separate recesses for the successive kings. Other spots also were used for burial.

Gardens.—The king's gardens of David and Solomon seem to have been in the bottom, formed by the confluence of the Kedron and Hinnon (Neh. iii. 15). The Mount of Olives, as its name and those of various places upon it seem to imply, was a fruitful spot. At its foot was situated the Garden of Gethsemane. At the time of the final siege the space north of the wall of Agrippa was covered with gardens, groves, and plantations of fruit-trees, enclosed by hedges and walls.

Population.—Taking the area of the city enclosed by the two old walls at 750,000 yards, and that enclosed by the wall of Agrippa at 1,500,000, we have 2,250,000 yards for the whole. Taking the population of the old city at the probable number of one person to 50 yards, we have 45,000, and at the extreme limit of 30 yards, we should have 75,000 inhabitants for the old city. And at 100 yards to each individual in the new city, about 15,000 more; so that the popula-suming that in times of festival, one-half were added to this amount, which is an extreme estimate, there may have been 60,000 or 70,000 in the city when Titus came up against it.

Environ of the City.—The various spots in the neighborhood of the city are described under their own names, and to them the reader is accordingly referred.

and on two other occasions its walls were levelled. In this respect it stands without a parallel in any city, ancient or modern.

Jesh'imou, "the waste," a name which occurs in Num. xxi. 20, and xxiii. 28, in designating the position of Pisgah and Peor; both described as "facing the Jeshimon." Perhaps the dreary, barren waste of hills lying immediately on the west of the Dead Sea.

Jesse, the father of David, was the son of Obed, who again was the fruit of the union of Boaz and the Moabitess Ruth. Nor was Ruth's the only foreign blood that ran in his veins; for his great-grandmother was no less a person than Rahab the Canaanite, of Jericho (Matt. i. 5). He is an "old man" when we first meet with him (1 Sam. xvii. 12), with eight sons (xvi. 10, xvii. 12), residing at Bethlehem (xvi. 4, 5). Jesse's wealth seems to have consisted of a flock of sheep and goats, which were under the care of David (xvi. 11, xvii. 34, 35).

Jeh'ous. (1.) The Greek form of the name Joshua or Jeshua, a contraction of Jehoshua, that is, "help of Jehovah" or "Saviour" (Num. xiii. 16). (2.) Joshua, son of Nun (vii. 45; Heb. iv. 8). [Jehoshua]. Jesus, the Son of Sirach, is described in the text of Ecclesiasticus (i. 24) as the author of that book, which in the LXX., and generally, except in the Western Church, is called by his name the Wisdom of Jesus the Son of Sirach, or simply the Wisdom of Sirach. [ECCLESIASTICUS.]

Jesus Christ. (1.) NAME. The name Jesus signifies Saviour. The name of Christ signifies Anointed. Priests were appointed among the Jews, as their inauguration to their office (1 Chr. xvi. 22; Ps. cv. 15), and kings also (2 Macc. i. 24; Ecclus. xlvi. 19). In the New Testament the name Christ is used as equivalent to Messiah (John i. 41), the name given to the long-promised Prophet and King whom the Jews had been taught by their prophets to expect (Acts x. 4, Matt. xi. 3). The use of this name, as applied to the Lord, has always a reference to the promises of the Prophets. The name of Jesus is the proper name of our Lord, and that of Christ is added to identify Him with the promised Messiah. (2.) BIRTH AND EARLY LIFE. According to the received chronology, the Birth of Christ occurred in the year of Rome 754 (A. D. 1). The salutation addressed by the Angel to Mary His mother, "Hail thou that art highly favored," was the prelude to a new act of divine creation. Mary received the announcement of a miracle, the full import of which she could not have understood, with the submission of one who knew that the message came from God; and the Angel departed from her. As there was no room in the inn, a manger was the cradle in which Christ the Lord was laid. But signs were not wanting of the greatness of the event that seemed so unimportant. Lowly shepherds were the witnesses of the wonder that accompanied the lowly Saviour's birth; an angel proclaimed to them "good tidings of great joy;" and then the exceeding joy that was in heaven amongst the angels about this mystery of love broke through the silence of night with the words, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men" (Luke ii. 8-20).

Thirty years had elapsed from the birth of our Lord to the opening of His ministry. It was in the eighteenth year of Tiberius the Emperor, that John the Baptist began to teach. The career of John seems to have been very short. Jesus came to Jordan to receive baptism at John's hands; first, in order that the sacrament by which all were hereafter to be admitted into his kingdom might not want His example to justify its use (Matt. lii. 15); next, that John might have an assurance that his course, as the herald of Christ, was now completed by His appearance (John i. 33); and last, that some public token might be given that He was indeed the anointed of God (Heb. v. 5).

Our Lord now passed through the ordeal of temptation, and His ministry is begun. At Bethabara disciples begin to be drawn towards Him; Andrew and another, probably John, the sole narrator of the fact, see Jesus, and hear the Baptist's testimony concerning Him. Andrew brings Simon Peter to see Him also. Then Philip and Nathanael are brought into contact with our Lord. At Capernaum He wrought many miracles for them that needed. Here two disciples who had known Him before, namely, Simon Peter and Andrew, were called from their fishing to become "fishers of men" (Matt. iv. 19), and the two sons of Zebedee received the same summons.

He carries the training of the disciples one step further by sending them forth by themselves to teach (Matt. x. xi.) They went forth two and two; and our Lord continued His own circuit (Matt. xi. 1), with what companions does not appear.

The calling of Zacchaeus has more than a mere personal interest. He was a publican, one of a class hated and despised by the Jews. But he was one who sought to serve God. From such did

It was not till Lazarus had been four days in the grave that the Saviour appeared on the scene. But with the power of God He breaks the fetters of brass in which Lazarus was held by death, and at His word the man on whom corruption had already begun to do its work, came forth alive and whole (John xi. 1-45).

On the death of Jesus, the veil which covered the most Holy Place of the Temple, the place of the more especial presence of Jehovah, was rent in twain. There was a great earthquake. Many who were dead rose from their graves, although they returned to the dust again after this great token of Christ's quickening power had been given to many (Matt.)

The exact hour of the resurrection is not mentioned by any of the Evangelists. Of the great mystery itself, the resumption of life by Him who was truly dead we see but little.

Jo'shro (superiority) was priest or prince of Midian. Moses spent the forty years of his exile from Egypt with him, and married his daughter Zipporah. Jo'sobel. Wife of Ahab, king of Israel, and mother of Athaliah, queen of Judah, and Ahazia and Joram, kings of Israel. She was a Phoenician princess, daughter of "Ethbaal king of the Sidonians." In her hands her husband became a mere puppet (1 K. xxi. 25). At her table were supported no less than 450 prophets of Baal, and 400 of Astarte (1 K. xvi. 31, 32, xviii. 19).

Jo'ab (Jah his father). The most remarkable of the three nephews of David, the children of Zerulah, David's sister. Joab first appears after David's accession to the throne at Hebron. Abner slew in battle Asahel, the younger brother of Joab; and when David afterwards received Abner into favor, Joab treacherously murdered him. [ABNER.] There was now no rival left in the way of Joab's advancement, and at the siege of Jericho was appointed for his prowess command in chief—'captain of the host'—the same office that Abner had held under Saul, the highest in the state after the king (1 Chr. xi. 6; 2 Sam. viii. 16). In this post he was content, and served the king with undeviating fidelity. There is something mournful in the end of Joab. At the close of his long life, his loyalty, so long unshaken, at last wavered. "Though he had not turned after Absalom he turned after Adonijah" (1 K. ii. 28). The revival of the pretensions of Adonijah after David's death was sufficient to awaken the suspicions of Solomon.

Joab fled to the shelter of the alter at Gibeon, and was there slain by Benaiah.

Jo'sash, contr. from JEHOASH. (1.) Son of Ahaziah, king of Judah, and the only one of his children who escaped the murderous hand of Athaliah. In the 7th year of his age a successful revolution placed him on the throne of his ancestors. Joash's reign lasted 40 years, from 878 to 838 B. C.

Job (Heb. iyob, afflicted). The patriarch. The name of one of the books of the O. T. His residence in the land of Uz (Gen. x. 23), marks him as belonging to a branch of the Aramaean race, which had settled in the lower part of Mesopotamia. The opinions of Job and his friends are thus peculiarly interesting as exhibiting an aspect of the patriarchal religion outside of the family of Abraham, and as yet uninfluenced by the legislation of Moses. The form of worship belongs essentially to the early patriarchal type; with little of ceremonial ritual, without a separate priesthood, it is thoroughly domestic in form and spirit. Job is represented as a chieftain of immense wealth and high rank, blameless in all the relations of life.

The probable age, country and position of the author. It may be regarded as a settled point that the book was written long before the exile; while there is absolutely nothing to prove a later date than the Psephite. Job is far more remarkable for obscurity than any Hebrew writing. The controversy about the authorship cannot ever be finally settled. From the introduction it may certainly be inferred that the writer lived many years after the death of Job.

John, the same name as Johanan, a contraction of Jehohanan, "Jehovah's gift." There were seven of this name though none specially famous.

John the Apostle was the son of Zebedee, a fisherman on the Lake of Galilee, and of Salome, and brother of James, also an apostle. His call, and that of his brother, to be first disciples and then apostles of our Lord, are related under JAMES. Peter and James and John come within the innermost circle of their Lord's friends. Peter is throughout the leader of that band; to John belongs the yet more memorable distinction of being the disciple whom Jesus loved. The three are with

John the Baptist was of the priestly race by both parents, for his father Zacharias was himself a priest son of king Saul. He was regarded in his father's lifetime as heir to the throne. Like Saul, he was a man of great strength and activity (2 Sam. i. 23). He was also famous for the peculiar martial exercises in which his tribe excelled—archery and slinging (1 Chr. xii. 2). In the battle of Gilboa he fell, with his two brothers and his father, and his corpse shared their fate (1 Sam. xxxi. 2, 8). The news of his death occasioned the celebrated elegy of David.

Jop'pa, or JAPHO, now Jaffa, a town on the S. W. coast of Palestine, in the portion of Dan (Josh. xix. 46). Having a harbor attached to it it became the port of Jerusalem in the days of Solomon, and has been ever since. Here Jonah "took ship to flee from the presence of his Maker." Here, on the house-top of Simon the tanner, "by the seaside," St. Peter had his vision of tolerance (Acts and had shown his preference by making him a dress which appears to have been a long tunic with sleeves, worn by youths and maidens of the richer

It is the river of the "great plain" of Palestine—the "Decender"—if not "the river of God" in the book of Psalms, at least that of His chosen people throughout their history. There were fords over against Jericho, to which point the men of Jericho pursued the spies (Josh. ii. 7; comp. Judg. iii. 28). Higher up, perhaps over against Succoth, were the fords or passages of Bethlathrah, where Gideon lay in wait for the Midianites (Judg. vii. 24), and where the men of Gilead slew the Ephraimites (xii. 6). From its fountain heads to the Dead Sea, it rushes down one continuous inclined plain, only broken by a series of rapids or precipitous falls. Not a single city ever crowned the banks of the Jordan.

Joseph (he will increase). The elder of the two sons of Jacob by Rachel, is first mentioned when a youth, seventeen years old. Joseph, we read, brought the evil report of his brethren to his father, and they hated him because his father loved him more than them, as the "son of his old age," of the course of Abia, or Ahijah; and Elizabeth was of the daughters of Aaron (Luke i. 5). His birth was foretold by an angel sent from God, and is related at length in the first chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke. The birth of John preceded by six months that of our Lord. Dwelling by himself in the wild and thinly peopled region westward of the Dead Sea, he prepared himself for the wonderful office to which he had been divinely called.

John, Gospel of. No doubt has been entertained at any time in the Church, either of the canonical authority of this Gospel, or of its being written by St. John.

John, The First Epistle General of. There can be no doubt that the Apostle John was the author of this Epistle. Like the Gospel it was probably written from Ephesus.

Jon'ah (yonah, dove). The fifth of the Minor Prophets, and a native of Gathhepher, a town of Lower Galilee in Zebulun (2 K. xiv. 25). He lived after the reign of Jehu, when the losses of class (Gen. xxxvii. 2). The whole story of Joseph's treatment of his brethren is so graphically told in Gen. xlii.-xlv., and is so familiar, that it is unnecessary here to repeat it. We know of Joseph that he lived "a hundred and ten years," having been more than ninety in Egypt; that he "saw Ephraim's children of the third [generation]; and that dying he took an oath of his brethren that they should carry up his bones to the land of promise. Like his father he was embalmed, "and put in a coffin in Egypt." Moses laid the bones of Joseph in his inheritance in Shechem, in the territory of Ephraim his offspring.

Joshua (Jah isohely). His name appears in the various forms of HOSHUA, OSHEA, JEROSHUA, JESHUA, and JESUS. (1.) The son of Nun, of the tribe of Ephraim (1 Chr. vii. 27), was nearly forty years old when he shared in the hurried triumph of the Exodus. The 40 years of wandering were almost passed, when Moses, shortly before his death, was directed (Num. xvii, 15) to invest Joshua solemnly and publicly with definite authority, in connection with Eleazar the priest, over the people. And after this was done, God Himself gave Joshua a charge by the mouth of the dying Lawgiver (Deut. xxxi, 14, 23). Under the direction of God again renewed (Josh. i, 1), Joshua assumed the command of the people at Shittim, sent spies into Jericho, crossed the Jordan, fortified a camp at Gilgal, circumcised the people, kept the passover, and was visited by the Captain of the Lord's Host. He died at the age of 110 years, and was buried in his own city, Timnath-serah. (2.) An inhabitant of Bethshemesh. (3.) A governor of the city who gave his name to a gate of Jerusalem (2 K. xxiii, 8).

(4.) JESTRAA the son of Jozaadak (Hag. i, 14, ii, 1; Zech. iii, 4, &c.).
JOSHUA, Book of. This book has been regarded as a part of the Pentateuch, forming with the latter one complete work.
JOSHUA, (yoshiahu, Jsh heals). The son of Amnon and Jedidah, succeeded his father n. c. 641, in the eighth year of his age, and reigned 31 years. His history is contained in 2 K. xxii, xxiv, 30; 2 Chr. xxxiv, xxxv; and the first twelve chapters of Jeremiah throw much light upon the general character of the Jews in his days.

JOTHAM (Jah is upright). (1.) The youngest son of Gideon (Judg. ix, 5), who escaped from the massacre of his brethren. (2.) The son of king Uzziah or Azariah and Jerushah. He succeeded to the throne

n. c. 758, when he was 25 years old, and reigned 16 years in Jerusalem. (3.) A descendant of Judah, son of Jahaai (1 Chr. ii, 47).

JUBILEE, The Year of. The fiftieth year after the succession of seven Sabatical years, in which all the land which had been alienated returned to the families of those to whom it had been allotted in the original distribution, and all bondmen of Hebrew blood were liberated.

JUDAEA, or JUDEA (Jewish). A territorial division which succeeded to the overthrow of the ancient landmarks of the tribes of Israel and Judah in their respective captivities.

JUDAH (yehudah, praise Jah). The fourth son of Jacob and the fourth of Leah. Of Judah's personal character more traits are preserved than of any other of the patriarchs, with the exception of Joseph.

In the matter of the sale of Joseph, he and Reuben stand out in favorable contrast to the rest of the brothers. And when, through Joseph's artifice, the brothers were brought back to the palace, he is again the leader and spokesman of the band. His sons were five. Of these three were by his Canaanite wife Bathshua. The other two, PHAREZ and ZERAH, were illegitimate sons by the widow of Er. As is not unfrequently the case, the illegitimate sons surpassed the legitimate, and from Pharez, the elder, were descended the royal and other illustrious families of Judah. The numbers of the tribe at the census at Sinai were 74,600 (Num. i, 26, 27), considerably in advance of any of the others, the largest of which—Dan—numbered 62,700. On the borders of the Promised Land they were 76,500 (xxvi, 22). The boundaries and contents of the territory allotted to Judah are narrated at great length, and with greater minuteness than the others, in Josh. xv, 20, 63.

WOMEN GRINDING CORN.

JUDAH, Kingdom of. When the disruption of Solomon's kingdom took place at Shechem, only the tribe of Judah followed the house of David. But almost immediately afterwards the tribe of Benjamin also is recorded as obeying his summons, and contributing its warriors to make up his army. The kingdom of Judah possessed many advantages which secured for it a longer continuance than that of Israel by 135 years, and lasted from n. c. 975 to n. c. 536.

JUDAS, surnamed Bar-sabbas. A leading member of the Apostolic church at Jerusalem (Acts xv, 22).

JUDAS of Galilee. The leader of a popular revolt "in the days of the taxing" referred to by Gamaliel in his speech before the Sanhedrim (Acts v, 37).

JUDAS ISCARIOT. He is sometimes called "the son of Simon" (John vi, 71, xiii, 2, 26). Of the life of Judas, before the appearance of his name in the lists of the Apostles, we know absolutely nothing. What that appearance implies, however, is, that he had previously declared himself a disciple. He was drawn, as the others were, by the preaching of the Baptist, or the "gracious words" of the new Teacher, to leave his former life, and to obey the call of the Prophet of Nazareth. The choice was not made, we must remember, without a prevision of its issue (John vi, 64). The germs of the evil, in all likelihood, unfolded themselves gradually.

JUDAS, or JUDAS, Lebbe'us, and Thadde'us (A. V. "Judas the brother of James"). One of the Twelve Apostles; a member, together with his namesake "Ischariot," James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, of the last of the three sections of the Apostolic body. The Apostle has been generally identified with "Lebbeus whose surname was Thaddeus" (Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18).

Ko'nath (possession). One of the cities on the east of Jordan, taken possession of by Nonath, who then called it by his own name (Num. xxxii. 42).

Ko'nite, The, and Ko'nites, The (smith). A tribe first mentioned in company with the Kenizzites and Kadmonites (Gen. xv. 19). Their origin is hidden from us.

But we may fairly infer that they were a branch of the larger nation of Midian—from the fact that Jethro, who is represented as dwelling in the land of Midian, and as priest or prince of that nation, is in Judges (i. 16, iv. 11) as distinctly said to have been a Kenite.

Kettle. A vessel for culinary or sacrificial purposes (1 Sam. ii. 14). The Hebrew word is also rendered "basket" in Jer. xxiv. 2, "caldron" in 2 Chr. xxxv. 13, and "pot" in Job. xli. 20.

Kot'rah. The wife whom Abraham "addled and took" (A. V. "again took") besides, or after the death of Sarah (Gen. xxv. 1; 1 Chr. i. 32).

Key. The key of a native Oriental lock is a piece of wood, from 7 inches to 2 feet in length, fitted with wires or short nails, which, being inserted laterally into the hollow bolt which serves as a lock, raises other pins within the staple so as to allow the bolt to be drawn back.

Kid'ron (or Ked'ron). The Brook. A torrent or valley—not a "brook," as in the A. V.—close to Jerusalem.

It lay between the city and the Mount of Olives, and was crossed by David in his flight (2 Sam. xv. 23, comp. 30), and by our Lord on His way to Gethsemane (John

Judas, the Lord's brother. Among the brethren of our Lord mentioned by the people of Nazareth (Matt. xiii. 55; Mark vi. 3), occurs a "Judas," who has been sometimes identified with the Apostle of the same name.

Juda, Epistle of. Its author was probably Jude, one of the brethren of Jc. s, the subject of the preceding article.

Ka'desh, Ka'desh-bar'nea (Kadesh means holy). This place, the scene of Miriam's death, was the farthest point which the Israelites reached in their direct road to Canaan; it was also that whence the spies were sent, and where, on their return, the people broke out into murmuring (Num. xiii. 3, 26, xiv. 29-33, xx. 1; Deut. ii. 14).

Ke'desh (sanctuary). (1.) In the extreme south of Judah (Josh. xv. 23). (2.) A city of Issachar, allotted to the Gershonite Levites (1 Chr. vi. 72). (3.) KEDESH IN GALILEE. One of the fortified cities of the tribe of Naphtali, appointed as a city of refuge (1 Chr. vi. 76). It was the residence of Barak (Judg. iv. 6), and there he and Deborah assembled the tribes of Zebulun and Naphtali before the conflict, being probably, as its name implies, a "holy place" of great antiquity.

Ke'l'ah (fort). A city of the Shefelah or lowland district of Judah (Josh. xv. 44).

Ke'l'ah the Garmite. Apparently a descendant of the great Caleb (1 Chr. iv. 19).

Ke'l'ita. One of the Levites who returned with Ezra (Ezr. x. 23).

former on the west, the latter on the east of the valley. King. The name of the Supreme Ruler of the Hebrews during a period of about 500 years previous to the destruction of Jerusalem, B. C. 586. The original idea of a Hebrew king was twofold: first, that he should lead the people to battle in time of war; and secondly, that he should execute judgment and justice to them in war and in peace (1 Sam. viii. 20).

Kiriab. (town). Apparently an ancient or archaic word, meaning a city or town. Closely related to Kiriah is Kereth, apparently a Phoenician form, which occurs occasionally (Job xxix. 7; Prov. viii. 3).

Kir'jath. The last of the cities enumerated as belonging to the tribe of Benjamin (Josh. xviii. 28), probably identical with the better known place KIRJATH-JEARIM.

Kirjath'im. On the east of the Jordan, one of the places which were taken possession of and rebuilt by the Kenites.

Kir'jath-ar'ba. An early name of the city which after the conquest is generally known as HEBRON (Josh. xiv. 15; Judg. i. 10).

Kir'jath-hu'zoth. A place to which Balak accompanied Balaam immediately after his arrival in Moab (Num. xxii. 39).

Kir'jath-je'arim. One of the four cities of the Gibeonites (Josh. ix. 17). It bore another name—that of the great Canaanite deity Baal, namely BAA-LAIT and KIRJATH-BAAI. In this high place the ark remained for twenty years (vii. 2.) At the close of that time Kirjath-je'arim lost its sacred treasure, on its removal by David to the house of Obed-edom the Gittite (1 Chr. xiii. 5, 6; 2 Chr. i. 4).

VIA DOLOROSA, OR SORROWFUL WAY.

Kish. (1.) The father of Saul; a Benjamite of the family of Matri. (2.) Son of Jehiel, and uncle to the preceding (1 Chr. ix. 36). (3.) A Benjamite, great-grandfather of Mordecai (Esth. ii. 5). (4.)

A Merarite, of the house of Manasse. Kiss. Kissing the lips by way of affectionate salutation was customary amongst near relatives of both sexes, both in Patriarchal and in later times (Gen. xxix. 14; Cant. viii. 1). In the Christian Church the kiss of charity was practised not only as a friendly salutation, but as an act symbolical of love and Christian brotherhood (Rom. xvi. 16; 1 Cor. xvi. 20; 2 Cor. xiii. 12).

A. V. of Gen. xxiv. 62, and xxv. 11, the name of the famous well of Hagar's relief, in the oasis of verdure round which Isaac afterwards resided.

La'ish (strong lion). The city which was taken by the Danites, and under its new name of DAN became famous as the northern limit of the nation (Judg. xviii. 7, 14, 27, 29).

Lamba formed an important part of almost every sacrifice (Ex. xxix. 38-41).

La'mech, properly Lemech (powerful). (1.) The VARIOUS STYLES OF ANCIENT LOOKING GLASSES.

Knife. The knives of the Egyptians, and of other nations in early times, were probably only of hard stone, and the use of the flint or stone knife was sometimes retained for sacred purposes after the introduction of iron and steel.

Ko'hath. Second of the three sons of Levi, from whom the three principal divisions of the Levites derived their origin and their name (Gen. xvi. 11; Exod. vi. 16, 18). Kohath was the father of Amram, and he of Moses and Aaron.

Ko'rah (bold). (1.) Third son of Esau. He was born in Canaan before Esau migrated to Mount Seir. (2.) Another Edomitish duke of this name, sprung from Eliphaz, Esau's son by Adah (Gen. xxxvi. 16). (3.) One of the "sons of Hebron," in 1 Chr. ii. 43. (4.) Son of Izhar, the son Kohath, the son of Levi. He was leader of the famous rebellion against his cousins Moses and Aaron in the wilderness (Num. xvi. 1, xxvi. 9-11).

Kor'ahite. Frequently styled Sons of Korah. They were an important branch of the singers (2 Chr. xx. 19).

L.

La'ban (white). (1.) Son of Bethuel, brother of Rebekah, and father of Leah and Rachel. (2.) One of the landmarks named in the obscure and disputed passage Deut. i. 1.

La'olish (obstinate). A city of the Ammorites. It was chosen as a refuge by Amaziah from the conspirators who threatened him in Jerusalem, and to whom he at last fell a victim at Lachish (2 K. xiv. 19; 2 Chr. xxv. 27).

Laha'ro'el, The Well. In this form is given in the fifth lineal descendant from Cain (Gen. iv. 18-24). His three sons, JABAL, JUBAL and TUBAL-CAIN, are celebrated in Scripture as authors of useful inventions. (2.) The father of Noah (Gen. v. 29).

Lamp (Ner, light). (1.) That part of the golden candlestick which bore the light; also of each of the ten candlesticks (Ex. xxv. 37). The lamps were lighted every evening, and cleansed every morning (Ex. xxx. 7, 8). (2.) A torch or flambeau, such as was carried by the soldiers of Gideon (Judg. vii. 16, 20; comp. xv. 4).

Laodice'a A town in the Roman province of ASIA, situated in the valley of Maeander, on a small river called the Lycus, with COLLOSSA and HIERAPOLIS a few miles distant to the west. Built, or rather rebuilt, by one of the Seleucid monarchs and named in honor of his wife, Laodicea became

MUSTARD TREE. Under the Roman government a place of some importance. It was the seat of a conventus, amongst the list of those birds which were forbidden by the law of Moses to be eaten by the Israelites.

Lassa (Acts xxvii. 8), a city of Crete, the ruins of which were discovered in 1856, a few miles to the eastward of Fair Havens.

La'sha (Assure). A place noticed in Gen. x. 19, as marking the limit of the country of the Canaanites.

Latchet. The thong or fastening by which the sandal was attached to the foot.

Laver. In the Tabernacle, a vessel of brass containing water for the priests to wash their hands and feet before offering sacrifice.

Law (torah). The word is properly used, in Scripture as elsewhere, to express a definite commandment laid down by any recognized authority.

Lazarus (God is his helper). Another form of the Hebrew name Eleazar. (1.)

Lazarus of Bethany the brother of Martha and Mary (John xi. 1). All that we know of him is derived from the Gospel this passage for any green food, lettuce, endive, &c. Legion. The chief subdivision of the Roman army containing about 6000 infantry, with a contingent of cavalry.

Le'hi. A place in Judah, the scene of Samson's well-known exploit with the jawbone (Judg. xv. 9, 14, 19), and a spring of great and lasting repute—En-hak-kore. It may perhaps be identified with Beit-Liklyeh, a village about 2 miles below upper Beth-horon.

Leopard (namer, spotted). From Cant. iv. 8, we learn that the hilly ranges of Lebanon were in ancient times frequently by these animals.

Lead. One of the most common of metals, found generally in veins of rocks, though seldom in a metallic state, and most commonly in combination with sulphur. It was early known to the ancients, and the allusions to it in Scripture indicate that the Hebrews were well acquainted with its uses.

Le'ah. The daughter of Laban (Gen. xxix. 16). The dulness or weakness of her eyes was so notable that it is mentioned as a contrast to the beautiful form and appearance of her younger sister Rachel. Her father took advantage of the opportunity which the local marriage-rite afforded to pass her off in her sister's stead on the unconscious bridegroom, and excused himself to Jacob by alleging that the custom of the country forbade the younger sister to be given first in marriage.

Leaven. Various substances were known to have fermenting qualities; but the ordinary leaven consisted of a lump of old dough in a high state of fermentation, which was inserted into the mass of dough prepared for baking.

Le'b'ani (white). A mountain range in the north of Palestine. The name Lebanon signifies "white," and was applied either on account of the snow, which, during a great part of the year, covers its whole summit, or on account of the white color of its limestone cliffs and peaks.

Leeks (Heb. chadder). The Hebrew term, which properly denotes grass, is derived from a root signifying "to be green," and may therefore stand in

FIG MULBERRY

Léper, Leprosy. The predominant and characteristic form of leprosy in Scripture is a white variety, covering either the entire body, or a large tract of its surface, which has obtained the name of lepra Mosaicæ. Such were the cases of Moses, Miriam, Naaman, and Gehazi (Ex. iv. 6; Num. xii. 10; 2 K. v. 1, 27; comp. Lev. xiii. 13).

Le'vi (to adhere). (1.) The name of the third son of Jacob by his wife Leah. The name, derived from lebh, "to adhere," gave utterance to the hope of the mother that the affections of her husband, which had hitherto rested on the favored Rachel, would at last be drawn to her. (2.) Son of Melchizedek, one of the near ancestors of our Lord. (3.) A Finding Moses.

Lapwing (Heb. duchphak). Occurs in Lev. xi. 19, and in the parallel passage of Deut. xiv. 18, properly denotes grass, is derived from a root signifying "to be green," and may therefore stand in more remote ancestor of Christ, son of Simeon (Luke iii. 29). (4) Son of Alphaeus (Mark ii. 14). Leviathan occurs five times in the text of the A. V., and once in the margin of Job iii. 8, where the text has "mourning." In the margin of Job iii. 8, and text of Job xli. 1, the crocodile is most clearly the animal denoted by the Hebrew word.

from Levi. The existence of another division, however, within the tribe itself, in the higher office of the priesthood as limited to "the sons of Aaron," gave to the common form, in this instance, a peculiar meaning. Most frequently the Levites are distinguished, as such, from the priests (1 K. viii. 4; Ezr. ii. 70; John i. 19, &c.), and this is the meaning which has perpetuated itself,

Lib'nah (לִבְנָה). A city which lay in the south-west part of the Holy Land, taken by Joshua immediately after the rout of Bethhoron. It belonged to the mountainous lowland of Judah, among the cities of which district it is enumerated (Josh. xv. 42).

Ligure (לִיגוּרָה). A precious stone mentioned in Ex. xxviii. 19, xxxii. 12, as the first in the third row of the high-priest's breastplate.

Linon. Egypt was the great centre of the linen manufacture of antiquity. Joseph, when promoted to the dignity of ruler of the land of Egypt, was arrayed "in vestures of fine linen." Among the offerings for the tabernacle of the things which the Israelites had brought out of Egypt were "blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen" (Ex. xxv. 4, xxxv. 6). The dress of the rich man in the parable was purple and fine linen (Luke xvi. 19). "Fine linen," with purple and silk, is enumerated in Rev. xviii. 12 as among the merchandise of the mystical Babylon.

Lion. At present lions do not exist in Palestine; but they must in ancient times have been numerous. They had their lairs in the forests, which have vanished with them (Jer. v. 6, xii. 8; Am. iii. 4), in the tangled bush-wood (Jer. lv. 7, xxv. 38; Job xxxviii. 40), ... in the caves of the mountains

(Cant. iv. 8; Ez. xix. 9; Nah. ii. 12). Look. Where European locks have not been introduced, the locks of Eastern houses are usually of the Chaldees (ver. 28), and Lot was therefore born there. The last scene preserved to us in the history of Lot is too well known to need repetition

(Gen. xix). His deliverance from the gilty city points the allusion of St. Peter (2 Pet. ii. 6-9).

Lot. The custom of deciding doubtful questions by lot is one of high antiquity. The religious estimate of them may be gathered from Prov. xvi. 33.

Lu'blim. A nation mentioned as contributing, together with Cushites and Sukkiim, to Shishak's army (2 Chr. xii. 3).

Lu'eifer, found in Is. xiv. 12, coupled with the epithet "son of the morning," clearly signifies a "bright star," and probably what we call the morning star.

Lud. The fourth name in the list of the children of Shem (Gen. x. 22).

Luke or Lu'cas, is an abbreviated form of Lucanus. He was born at Antioch in Syria, and was taught the science of medicine. The well-known tradition that Luke was also a painter, and of no mean skill, rests on the authority of late writers. The date of his conversion is uncertain. He joined St. Paul at Troas, and shared his journey into Macedonia. As to his age and death, there is the utmost uncertainty. He probably died a martyr, between A. D. 75 and A. D. 100.

Luke, Gospel of. The third Gospel is ascribed, by the general consent of ancient Christendom, to "the beloved physician," Luke, the friend and companion of the Apostle Paul.

Lunatic. This word is used twice in the N. T. (Matt. lv. 24, xvii. 15). It is evident that the word itself refers to some disease. By the description of Mark ix. 17-26, it is concluded that this disease was epilepsy.

Lycæonia. A district of Asai Minor. It is evident that the inhabitants of the district, in St. Paul's day, spoke something very different from ordinary Greek. Lycæonia is for the most part a dreary plain, bare of trees, destitute of fresh water, and with several salt lakes.

MYRRH BRANCH.

when Jesus and His disciples met together to eat the Passover (Matt. xxvi. 19).

Lot. The son of Haran, and therefore the nephew of Abraham (Gen. xi. 27, 31). Haran died before the emigration of Terah and his family from Ur of the peninsula of Asia Minor which is immediately opposite the island of Rhodes, and is bounded to the west of Asia Minor. It is enumerated among the districts which the Romans took away from Antiochus the Great after the battle of Magnesia in B. C. 190, and transferred to Eumenes II, king of Pergamum.

Lydia (from king Lydus). A maritime province in the west of Asia Minor. It is enumerated among the districts which the Romans took away from Antiochus the Great after the battle of Magnesia in B. C. 190, and transferred to Eumenes II, king of Pergamum.

Lydia (from Lydia). The first European convert of St. Paul (Acts xvi, 14, 15). She was a Jewish proselyte at the time of the Apostles coming; and it was at the Jewish Sabbath-worship by the side of a stream (ver. 13) that the preaching of the Gospel reached her heart. We infer that she was a person of considerable wealth.

Lycaonia (ending sorrow). Tetrarch of Antioch in the 13th year of Tiberius.

Lycaon. A nobleman of the blood-royal (1 Macc. iii, 32; 2 Macc. xi, 1), who was entrusted by Antiochus Epiphanes (cir. B. C. 166) with the government of southern Syria.

Lycaonides (ending strife). (1.) "A son of Ptolemæus of Jerusalem," the Greek translator of the book of Esther (comp. Esth. ix, 20). (2.) Mag'lah. A proper name in Exe. ii, 30, but whether of a man or of a place is doubtful; probably the latter, as all the names from Exe. ii, 30 to 34, except Eliam and Hasim, are names of places.

MOSQUE OF OMAR.

Mag'dala (tower). The name Magdala does not really exist in the Bible. It is found in the received Greek text and the A. V. of Matt. xv, 39 only; but the chief MSS. and versions exhibit the name as "Magadan." Into the limits of Magadan Christ came by boat, over the lake of Gennesareth, after His miracle of feeding the four thousand on the mountain of the eastern side (Matt. xv, 39).

Magi (A. V. "wise men"). Historically the Magi are conspicuous chiefly as a Persian religious caste. Herodotus connects them with another people by recognizing them among the six tribes of the Medes (i, 101).

Magie, Magicians. The magical arts spoken of in the Bible are those practised by the Egyptians, the Canaanites, and their neighbors, the Hebrews, the Chaldeans, and probably the Greeks. With the lowest race magic is the chief part of religion. The Nigritians, or blacks of this race, show this in their extreme use of amulets and their worship of objects which have no other value in their eyes but as having a supposed magical character through the influence of supernatural agents. With the Turanians, or corresponding whites of the same great family; leucantisms and witchcraft occupy the same place, shamanism characterizing their tribes in both hemispheres. The magical practices which obtained among the Hebrews were borrowed from the nations around. From the first entrance into the Land of Promise until the destruction of Jerusalem we have constant glimpses of magic practised in secret, or resorted to, not alone by the common, but also by the great.

M.

CROCODILE OF THE NILE, THE SUPPOSED LEVIATHAN.

Macedonia. The first part of Europe which received the Gospel directly from St. Paul, and an important scene of his subsequent missionary labors and those of his companions in the ministry. The character of the Macedonian Christians is set before us in a very favorable light.

Maahir. (1.) The eldest son (Josh. xvii, 1) of the patriarch Manasseh by an Arabian or Syrian concubine (1 Chr. vii, 14). (2.) The son of Ammiel, a powerful sheikh of one of the trans-Jordanic tribes (2 Sam. ix, 4, 5).

Mad'al (Gen. x, 2) the third son of Japheth, and the progenitor of the Medes.

Madman'nah. A town in south Judah.

Madness. In Scripture "madness" is recognized as a derangement, proceeding either from weakness

Lystra has two points of interest in connection respectively with St. Paul's first and second missionary journeys, (1.) as the place where divine honors were offered to him, and where he was presently stoned (Acts xiv.); (2.) as the home of his chosen

FOX OF THE NILE.

Ma'gog. In Gen. x, 2 Magog appears as the second son of Japheth.

Mahana'im. A town on the east of the Jordan, signifying two hosts or two camps, a name given to it by Jacob, because he there met "the angels of God," (Gen. xxxii, 1, 2).

Makko'dah. A place memorable in the annals of the conquest of Canaan as the scene of the execution by Joshua of the five confederate kings (Josh. x, 10-30).

Mak'teah (mortar). A place evidently in Jerusalem, the inhabitants of which are denoted by Zephaniah (i, 11).

Mal'achi (that is, the angel or messenger of Jehovah) is the last, and therefore called "the seal" of the prophets, and his prophecies constitute the closing book of canon. Of his personal history nothing is known.

Mam'mon. It is used in St. Matthew as a personification of riches.

Mam're (fruitfulness). An ancient Amorite, who with his brothers, Eshcol and Aner, was in alliance with Abram (Gen. xiv, 13, 24), and under the shade of whose oak-grove the patriarch dwelt in the interval between his residence at Bethel and at Beersheba (xiii, 18, xviii, 1).

Manasseh (that is forgetting). The eldest son of Joseph, by his wife Asenath (Gen. xli, 51, xlv, 20), so called by Joseph because "God hath made me forget all my toil and all my father's house." Both he and Ephraim were born before the commencement of the famine.

Manasseh I. The thirteenth king of Judah, son of Hezekiah and Hephzibah (2 K. xxi, 1), ascended the throne at the age of 12. The king was made prisoner and carried off to Babylon in the 22d year of his reign, according to a Jewish tradition.

Mandrakes (Heb. dudaim) are mentioned in Gen. xxx, 14, 15, 16, and in Cant. vii, 13. From the former passage we learn that they were found in the fields of Mesopotamia, and that the fruit was gathered "in the days of wheat-harvest," i. e. in May.

Manger. The word in classical Greek undoubtedly means a manger, crib, or feeding trough; but according to Schlessner its real signification in the N. T. is the open courtyard, attached to the inn or khan, into which the cattle would be shut at night, and where the poorer travellers might unpack their animals and take up their lodging.

Manna (Heb. man). The most important passages of the O. T. on this topic are the following: Ex. xvi, 14-36; Num. xi, 7-9; Deut. viii, 3, 16; Josh. v, 12; Ps. lxxviii, 24, 25; Wisd. xvi, 20, 21. From these passages we learn that the manna came every morning except the Sabbath, in the form of a small round seed resembling hard frost; that it must be gathered early, before the sun became so hot as to melt it; that it must be gathered every day except the Sabbath; that the attempt to lay aside for a succeeding day, except ly from God, and not as a product of nature.

Manoah. The father of Samson; a Danite, native of the town of Zorah (Judg. xiii, 2). [SAMSON.]

Ma'ach. The father of Achish, king of Gath, with whom David took refuge (1 Sam. xxvii, 2).

Ma'on. One of the cities of the tribe of Judah, in the district of the mountains (Josh. xv, 55).

Ma'onites. The. A people mentioned in one of the addresses of Jehovah to the repentant Israelites (Judg. x, 12).

Ma'ra. The name which NAOMI adopted in the exclamation forced from her by the recognition of her fellow-citizens at Bethlehem (Ruth i, 20).

Marenath'a. An expression used by St. Paul at the conclusion of his First Epistle to the Corinthians (xvi, 22).

mans, was adopted afterwards, and gradually superseded the other. John Mark was the son of a certain Mary, who dwelt at Jerusalem, and was converted by Peter. The report that Mark was the companion of Peter at Rome, is no doubt, of great antiquity. Sent on a mission to Egypt by Peter, Mark there founded the church of Alexandria, and preached in various places, then returned to Alexandria, of which church he was bishop, and suffered a martyr's death.

Marriage. Its origin.—The institution of marriage dates from the time of man's original creation. Our Lord and His Apostles re-established the integrity and sanctity of the marriage-bond.

Martha. The sister of Lazarus and Mary. She comes before us in Luke x, 38, as careful and troubled about many things. But her love, though imperfect in its form, is yet recognized as true, and she too, no less than Lazarus and Mary, has the distinction of being one whom Jesus loved (John xi, 3).

Mary of Clophas was probably the elder sister of the Lord's mother.

Mary, Sister of Lazarus. She and her sister Martha appear in Luke x, 40, as receiving Christ in their house. Mary sat listening eagerly for every word that fell from the Divine Teacher.

Mary, the Virgin. The mother of our Lord. There is no person, perhaps, in sacred or profane literature around whom so many legends have been grouped as the Virgin Mary. We are wholly ignorant of the name and occupation of St. Mary's parents. She was, like Joseph, of the tribe of Judah, and of the lineage of David (Ps. cxxxi, 11; Luke i, 32; Rom. i, 3). She was connected by marriage (Luke i, 36) with Elizabeth. This is all we know of her antecedents. Her betrothal to Joseph, and the circumstances connected with her becoming the mother of our Lord, are related elsewhere.

Her faith and humility exhibit themselves in her immediate surrender of herself to the Divine will, though ignorant how that will should be accomplished (Luke i, 38); journey from Nazareth to Hebron (Luke i, 39); her happy thankfulness in her song of joy (Luke i, 48); her silent musing, thoughtfulness, in her pondering over the shepherd's visit (Luke ii, 19), and in her keeping her Son's words in her heart (Luke ii, 51). In a word, so far as St. Mary is portrayed to us in Scripture, she is, as we should have expected, the most tender, the most faithful, humble, patient, and loving of women, but a woman still.

Mastic-tree. The fragrant resin known in the arts as "mastic," and which is obtained by incisions made in the trunk in the month of August, is the produce of this tree.

Mat'thew. Matthew the Apostle and Evangelist is the son of a certain Alphæus (Mark ii, 14). His call to be an apostle is related by all three Evangelists.

Matthi'as. The Apostle elected to fill the place of the traitor Judas (Acts, i, 26).

Meus/sim (fortis). There can be little doubt that "Maunzim" is to be taken in its literal sense of "fortresses," just as in Dan, xi, 19, 39; "the god of fortresses" being then the deity who presided over strongholds.

Meals. Our information on this subject is but scanty: the early Hebrews do not seem to have given special names to their several meals. There is some uncertainty as to the hours at which the meals were taken. The posture at meals varied at various periods; the old Hebrews were in the habit of sitting (Gen. xxvii, 19; Judg. xix, 6; 1 Sam. xx, 5, 24; 1 K. xiii, 20), but it does not of one of the kings whom Joshua defeated on the west of the Jordan. The song of Deborah brings the place vividly before us, as the scene of the great conflict between Sisera and Barak.

Melchisedek (king of righteousness). King of Salem and priest of the Most High God, who met Abram in the valley of Shaveh (Gen. xiv. 18-20).

of the most noted structures of Memphis. Mephibosheth. The name borne by two members of the family of Saul—his son and his grandson. (1) Saul's son by Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, his concubine (2 Sam. xxi. 8). He and his brother Armoni were among the seven victims who were surrendered by David to the Gibeonites, (2.)

The son of Jonathan, grandson of Saul, and nephew of the preceding. His life seems to have been, from beginning to end, one of trial and discomfort.

Merab (increase), the eldest daughter of king Saul (1 Sam. xiv. 49). In accordance with the promise which he made before the engagement with Goliath (xvii. 25), Saul betrothed Merab to David (xviii. 17).

Merryari (unhappy). Third son of Levi, and head of the third great division of the Levites. THE MERRYARITES. He was born before the descent of Jacob into Egypt, and was one of the seventy who food. The latter is denoted uniformly by "flesh." Medes, Media. Media lay north-west of Persia Proper, south and south-west of the Caspian, east of Armenia and Assyria, west and north-west of the great salt desert of Iram.

Medicine. Egypt was the earliest home of medical and other skill for the region of the Mediterranean basin, and every Egyptian mummy of the more extensive and elaborate sort involved a process of anatomy. Medicine in Egypt was a mere art or profession. Representations of early Egyptian surgery, apparently occurs on some of the monuments of Beni-Hassan. The physicians had salaries from the public treasury, and treated al-

There is something surprising and mysterious in the first appearance of Melchizedek, and in the subsequent reference to him. Bearing a title which Jews in after ages would recognize as designating their own sovereign, hearing gifts which recall to Christians the Lord's Supper, this Canaanite crosses for a moment the path of Abram, and is unhesitatingly recognized as a person of higher spiritual rank than the friend of God. Disappearing as suddenly as he came in, he is lost to the sacred writings for a thousand years.

Mel'ita, the modern Malta. This island has an illustrious place in Scripture, as the scene of that shipwreck of St. Paul which is described in such minute detail in the Acts of the Apostles (Acts xxvii). The wreck probably happened at the place traditionally known as St. Paul's Bay.

Melons (Heb. abattichim) are mentioned only in Num. xi. 5. The water-melon, which is now extensively cultivated in all hot countries, is a fruit not unlike the common melon, but the leaves are deeply lobed and gashed, the flesh is pink or white, and contains a large quantity of cold watery juice without much flavor; the seeds are black.

Memphis (the abode of the good one). A city of ancient Egypt, situated on the western bank of the Nile, in latitude 30° 6' N. Though some regard Thebes as the more ancient city, the monuments of Memphis are of higher antiquity than those of Thebes. Herodotus dates its foundation from Menes, the first king of Egypt. The city is said to have had a circumference of about 19 miles. The temple of Apis was one accompanied Jacob thither (Gen. xvi. 8, 11). Merry-seat. (Ex. xxv. 17, xxxvii. 6, Heb. ix. 5). This appears to have been the lid of the Ark of the Covenant. It was that whereon the blood of yearly atonement was sprinkled by the high-priest.

Merodach is mentioned once only in Scripture, namely, in Jer. l. 2, and was really identical with the famous Babylonian Bel or Belus, the word being probably at first a mere epithet of the god, which by degrees superseded his proper appellation.

MILL. The mills of the ancient Hebrews probably differed but little from those at present in use in the East. These consist of two circular stones, about 18 inches or two feet in diameter, the lower through which the grain passes, immediately above a pivot or shaft which rises from the centre of the lower stone, and about which the upper stone is turned by means of an upright handle fixed near the edge. It is worked by women, sometimes singly and sometimes two together, who are usually seated on the bare ground (Is. xlvii. 1, 2) facing each other; both have hold of the handle by which the upper is turned round on the 'nether' millstone.

Millo (fullness). A place in ancient Jerusalem. Both name and place seem to have been already in existence when the city was taken from the Jebusites by David (2 Sam. v. 9; 1 Chr. xi. 8).

Min'ister (Heb. meshareth). This term is used in the A. V. to describe various officials of a religious and civil character. It is used of the attendant in the synagogue, the charan of the Talmudists (Luke iv. 20), whose duty it was to open and close the building, to produce and replace the books employed in the service, and generally to wait on the officiating priest or teacher.

Min'ni (division). A country mentioned in connection with Ararat and Ashchenaz (Jer. li. 27).

Min'nith (given). A place on the east of the Jordan, named as the point to which Jephthah's slaughter of the Ammonites extended (Judg. xi. 33).

Min occurs only in Matt. xxiii. 23, and Luke xi. 42, as one of those herbs, the title of which the Jews were most scrupulously exact in paying.

Miracles. The habitual use of the term "miracle" was tended to fix attention too much on the physical strangeness of the facts thus described, and to divert attention from what may be called their signality. A miracle may be defined to be a plain and manifest exercise by man, or by God at the call of a man, of those powers which belong only to the Creator and Lord of nature; and this for the declared object of attesting that a divine mission is given to that man.

Miriam (bitter), the sister of Moses, was the eldest mother as a nurse (ib. 7). The independent and high position given by her superiority of age she never lost. "The sister of Aaron" is her Biblical distinction (Ex. xv. 20). In Num. xii. 1 she is placed before Aaron; and in Mic. vi. 4 reckoned as amongst the Three Deliverers. She is the first personage in that household to whom the prophetic gifts are directly ascribed—"Miriam the prophetess" is her acknowledged title (Ex. xv. 20).

SYRIAN OX.

Mirror. The Hebrew women on coming out of Egypt probably brought with them mirrors like those which were used by the Egyptians, and were made of a mixed metal, chiefly copper, wrought with admirable skill, and susceptible of a bright lustre.

Mite. A coin current in Palestine in the time of our Lord (Mark xii. 41-44; Luke xxi. 1-4). It seems in Palestine to have been the smallest piece of money, being the half of the farthing, which was a coin of very low value.

Mitylæne. The chief town of Lesbos; the intermediate place where St. Paul stopped for the night between Assos and Cytos (Acts xx. 14, 15). The town itself was celebrated in Roman times for the beauty of its buildings.

Mis'pah, and Mis'peh. "A watch-tower," the name of several places in Palestine. (1.) The earliest of all, in order of the narrative, is the heap of stones piled up by Jacob and Laban (Gen. xxxi.

A second Mizpah, on the east of Jordan, was the Mizpah MOAH where the king of that nation was living when David committed his parents to his care (1 Sam. xxi. 3). (3.) A third was THE LAND OF MIZPAH, or more accurately "OZ MIZPAH," the residence of the Hivites who joined the northern confederacy against Israel (Josh. xi. 3). (4.) After the destruction of Jerusalem it became the residence of the superintendent appointed by the king of Babylon (Jer. xl, 7, xc).

Mis'par. Properly MISPAR, as in the A. V. of 1611 and the Geneva version; the name as MISPERETH (Ezr. ii, 2).

Mis'pah. [MIZPAH]

PALM-DOVE.

Mis'raim. (the two Egypts). The usual name of Egypt in the O. T., the dual of Mazar, which is less frequently employed.

Mo'ab, Mo'abites (from father). Moab was the son of Lot's eldest daughter, the progenitor of the Moabites, and the elder brother of Ben-Ammi, the progenitor of the Ammonites (Gen. xix, 37). Zoar was the cradle of the race of Lot. From this centre the brother-tribes spread themselves. The Moabites inhabited the rich highlands which crown the eastern side of the Dead Sea.

Mo'teah (melek). The fire-god Molech was the tutelary deity of the children of Ammon, and essentially identical with the Moabitish Chemosh. Fire-gods appear to have been common to all the Canaanite, Syrian, and Arab tribes, who worshipped the destructive element under an outward symbol, with the most inhuman rites.

Money. I. UNCOINED MONEY. (1.) Uncoined Money in general.—It is well known that ancient nations that were without a coinage weighed the precious metals, a practice represented in the Egyptian monuments. (2.) The antiquity of Coined Money.—Respecting the origin of coinage there are two accounts seemingly at variance; some saying that Phidon king of Argos first struck money, Herodotus ascribing its invention to the Lydians. The former statement probably refers to the origin of the coinage of European Greece, the latter to that of the oldest Jewish silver coins belong to this period. They are shekels and half-shekels of the weight of 220 and 110 grains.

Money-changers (Matt. xii, 12; Mark xi, 15; John ii, 15). According to Ex. xxx, 13-15, every Israelite who had reached or passed the age of twenty must pay into the sacred treasury, whenever the nation was numbered, a half-shekel as an offering to Jehovah. The money-changers whom Christ, for their impiety, avarice and fraudulent dealing, expelled from the Temple, were the dealers who supplied half-shekels, for such a premium as they might be able to exact, to the Jews from all parts of the world, who assembled at Jerusalem during the great festivals, and were required to pay their tribute or ransom money in the Hebrew coin. Moon. The moon held an important place in the of Asiatic Greece. (3.) Notices of Uncoined Money in the O. T.—We have no evidence of the use of coined money before the return from the Babylonian captivity; but silver was used for money, in quantities determined by weight. II. COINED MONEY. (1.) The Principal Monetary Systems of Antiquity.—The earliest Greek coins are of three talents or standards; the Attic, the Aeginetan, and the Macedonian or earlier Phoenician. The oldest coins of Athens, of Aegina, and of Macedon and Thrace, we should select as typical respectively of these standards. (2.) Coined Money mentioned in the Bible. After the Captivity we have the earliest mention of coined money (Ezra. ii, 69, viii, 27; Neh. vii, 70, 71, 72). No native Jewish coinage appears to have existed till Antiochus VII. Sidetes granted Simon Maccabæus the license to coin money (B. C. 140); and it is now generally agreed that kingdom of nature, as known to the Hebrews. In the history of the creation (Gen. i, 14-16), it appears simultaneously with the sun. Conjointly with the sun, it was appointed "for signs and for seasons, and for days and years." Besides this, it had its special office in the distribution of light; it was appointed "to rule over the night," as the sun over the day. The worship of the moon was extensively practised by the nations of the East, and under a variety of aspects. In Egypt it was honored under the form of Isis, and was one of the only two deities which commanded the reverence of all the Egyptians.

- Mor'docai, the deliverer, under Divine Providence, of the Jews from destruction plotted against them by Haman the chief minister of Xerxes.
- Mo'rah (teacher). THE PLAIN, or PLAINS (or as it should rather be rendered, the OAK or OAKS), OF MORAH. The Oak of Morah was the first recorded halting-place of Abram after his entrance into the land of Canaan (Gen. xii. 6).
- Mori'ah. THE LAND OF MORIAH. On "one of the mountains" in this district took place the sacrifice of Isaac (Gen. xxii. 2). What the name of the mountain was we are not told; but it was a conspicuous one, visible from "afar off" (ver. 4).

PALM TREE.

Mo'ses (Heb. Mosheh—"drawn"), the legislator of the Jewish people, and in a certain sense the founder of the Jewish religion. His birth and education. The immediate pedigree of Moses is as follows:—

The fact that he was of the tribe of Levi no doubt contributed to the selection of that tribe as the sacred caste. The story of his birth is thoroughly Egyptian in its scene. His mother placed him in a small boat or basket of papyrus. This was placed among the aquatic vegetation of the Nile. The Egyptian princess came down to bathe in the sacred river. She saw the basket in the flags, one of the female slaves brought it. It was opened, and the cry of the child moved the princess to compassion. She determined to rear it as her own. The child was brought up as the princess's son. For many years Moses must be considered as an Egyptian. But the time at last arrived when he was resolved to reclaim his nationality (Heb. xi. 24-26). Seeing an Israelite suffering the bastinado from an Egyptian, and thinking that they were alone, he slew the Egyptian, and buried the corpse in the sand. He fled into Midian. It was in the seclusion and simplicity of this shepherd life that he received his call as a prophet. The mission was given to Moses to deliver his people. He returns to Egypt from his exile. His Arabian wife and her two infant sons are with him. Aaron spoke and acted for Moses, and was the permanent inheritor of the sacred staff of power. But Moses was the inspiring soul behind. The history of Moses henceforth is the history of Israel for forty years. The Book of Deuteronomy describes the long, last farewell of the prophet to his people. It takes place on the first day of the eleventh month of the fortieth year of the wanderings, in the plains of Moab (Deut. i. 3, 5). He is described as 120 years of age, but with his sight and his freshness of strength unabated (Deut. xxxiv. 7). Joshua is appointed his successor. The song and the blessing of the tribes conclude the farewell (ch. xxxii., xxxiii.). And then comes the mysterious close. As if to carry out to the last the idea that the prophet was to live, not for himself, but for his people, he is told that he is to see the good land beyond the Jordan, but not to possess it himself. He ascends a mountain in the range which rises above the Jordan valley. On one of these, consecrated to Nebo, Moses took his stand, and surveyed the four great masses of Palestine west of the Jordan—so far as it could be discerned from that height. The view has passed into a proverb for all nations. "So Moses the servant of Jehovah died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of Jehovah, and He buried him in a 'ravine' in the land of Moab, 'before' Beth-peor—but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day. . . . And the children of Israel wept for Moses in the plain of Moab thirty days" (Deut. xxxiv. 5, 8).

Mo'sah. One of the cities in the allotment of Benjamin (Josh. xviii. 26).

Mulberry-trees (Heb. bedim) occur only in 2 Sam. v. 23 and 24, and 1 Chr. xiv. 14. We are quite unable to determine what kind of tree is denoted by the Hebrew word. Rosenmüller follows the LXX. of 1 Chr. xiv. 14, and believes "pear-trees" are signified.

Mule. It is an interesting fact that we do not read of mules till the time of David, just at the time when the Israelites were becoming well acquainted with horses. In Solomon's time it is possible that mules from Egypt occasionally accompanied the horses which we know the king of Israel obtained from that country; for though the mule is not of frequent occurrence in the monuments of Egypt, yet it is not easy to believe that the Egyptians were not well acquainted with this animal.

Murder. The law of Moses, while it protected the accidental homicide, defined with additional strictness the crime of murder. It prohibited compensation or reprieve of the murderer, or his protection if he took refuge in the refuge city, or even at the altar of Jehovah (Ex. xxi. 12, 14; Lev. xxiv. 17, 21).

Musio. The inventor of musical instruments, like the first poet and the first forger of metals, was a Canaanite. The first mention of music in the times after the Deluge is in the narrative of Lahan's interview with Jacob (Gen. xxxi. 27). On the banks of the Red Sea, Moses and the children sang their triumphal song of deliverance. David seems to have gathered round him "singing men and singing women" (2 Sam. xix. 35). Solomon did the same (Ecc. ii. 8), adding to the luxury of his court by his patronage of art, and obtaining a reputation himself as no mean composer (1 K. iv. 32). But the Temple was the great school of music, and it was consecrated to its highest service in the worship of Jehovah.

Mustard occurs in Matt. xiii. 31, xvii. 20; Mark iv. 31; Luke xiii. 19, xvii. 6. This tree is found all along the banks of the Jordan, near the lake of Tiberias, and near Damascus.

Myrrh (mor) is mentioned in Ex. xxx. 23, as one of the ingredients of the "oil of holy ointment;" in Esth. ii. 12, as one of the substances of Nebo returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 29, x. 43; Neh. vii. 31). (3.) Nebo, which occurs both in Isaiah (xlvii. 1) and Jeremiah (xlviii. 1) as the name of a Chaldean god, is a well-known deity of the Babylonians and Assyrians. He was the god who presided over learning and letters.

was sent upon him which the Greeks called Ly-can-thropy, wherein the sufferer imagines himself a beast, and quitting the haunts of men, insists on leading the life of a beast (Dan. iv. 33). He died in the year n. c. 561, at an advanced age (eighty-three or eighty-four), having reigned forty-three years.

Nebuchadnes'sar, or Nebuchadres'sar. The greatest and most powerful of the Babylonian kings. His name is explained to mean "Nebo is the protector against misfortune." He was the son and successor of Nabopolassar, the founder of the Babylonian Empire. The wealth, greatness, and was observed as a holy day. In addition to the daily sacrifice there were offered two young bullocks, a ram, and several lambs of the first year as a burnt offering (Numb. xxviii. 11-15).

Nicodem'us (nakdimon, innocent of blood). A Pharisee, a ruler of the Jews, and teacher of Israel (John iii. 1, 10), whose secret visit to our Lord was the occasion of the discourse recorded only in St. John.

Nic'ias (Acts vi. 5). A native of Antioch, and a proselyte to the Jewish faith. Being a man of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and of wisdom, he was chosen by the whole multitude of the disciples to be one of the first seven deacons, and he was ordained by the apostles.

Nirey'olis (city of victory) is mentioned in Tit. iii. 12, as the place where St. Paul was intending to pass the coming winter.

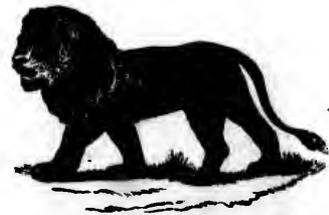

THE FLOOD CAME.

Ni'ger is the additional or distinctive name given to the Simeon who was one of the teachers and prophets in the Church at Antioch (Acts xiii. 1).

Nile. The great river of Egypt. The Nile is constantly before us in the history of Israel in Egypt. Into it the male children were cast; in it was the ark of Moses put, and found by Pharaoh's daughter when she went down to bathe. When the plagues were sent the sacred river—a main support of the people—and its waters everywhere were turned into blood.

Nim'rim, The Waters of. A stream or brook within the country of Moab, which is mentioned in the denunciations of that nation by Isalah (xv. 6) and Jeremiah (xlviii. 34).

PERSIAN LION.

Nim'rod (the extremely impious rebel). A son of Cush and grandson of Ham. The events of his life are recorded in Gen. x. 8, ff., from which we learn (1) that he was a Cushite; (2) that he established an empire in Shinar, the chief towns being Babel, Erech, Accad, and Calneh; and (3) that he extended this empire northwards over Assyria, where he founded a second group of capitals, Nineveh, Rehoboth, Calah, and Resen.

Ni'aroh. The capital of the ancient kingdom and empire of Assyria. Sennacherib was slain there when worshipping in the temple of Nisroch his god. The destruction of Nineveh occurred B. C. 606. The city was then laid waste, its monuments destroyed, and its inhabitants scattered or carried away into captivity. It never rose again from its ruins.

by his sons, Adrammelech and Sharezer (2 K. xix. 37; Is. xxxvii. 38).

Noadi'ah. (1.) A Levite, son of Binnui, who with Meremoth, Eleazar, and Jozabad, weighed the vessels of gold and silver belonging to the Temple which were brought back from Babylon (Ezr. viii. 33). (2.) The prophetess Noadiah (Neh. vi. 14).

No'ah (NOACH, to rest or give comfort). The tenth in descent from Adam, in the line of Seth, was the son of Lamech, and grandson of Methuselah.

THE TEN VIRGINS.

Of Noah himself we hear nothing till he is 500 years old, when it is said he begot three sons, Shem, Ham and Japhet. In consequence of the grievous and hopeless wickedness of the world at this time, God resolved to destroy it. After having given Noah the necessary instruction for the building of the ark, God tells him the purpose for which it was designed. The ark is to be destroyed by water. The ark was finished, and all its living freight was gathered into it as in a place of safety. The waters of the Flood increased for a period of 150 days (40+150, comparing vii. 12 and 24). And then "God remembered Noah," and made a wind to pass over the earth, so that the waters were assuaged. The ark rested on the seventeenth day of the seventh month on the mountains of Ararat. The truth of the Biblical narrative is confirmed by the numerous traditions of other nations, which have preserved the memory of a great and destructive flood, from which but a small part of mankind escaped. Noah is clearly the head of a new human family, the representative of the whole race.

Nob (high) (1 Sam. xxiii. 11; Neh. xi. 32). A sacerdotal city in the tribe of Benjamin. It was one of the places where the tabernacle was kept for

Nose-Jewel (Gen. xxiv. 22; Ex. xxxv. 22, "earring;" Is. iii. 21; Ez. xvi. 12, "jewel on the forehead"). A ring of metal, sometimes of gold or silver, passed usually through the right nostril, and worn by way of ornament by women in the East.

Nua. The father of the Jewish captain Joshua (Ex. xxxiii. 11, &c.).

Nurse. It is clear, both from Scripture and Greek and Roman writers, that in ancient times the position of the nurse, wherever one was maintained, was one of much honor and importance. (See Gen. xxiv. 59, xxxv. 8).

Nuts are mentioned among the good things of the land which the sons of Israel were to take as a present to Joseph in Egypt (Gen. xliii. 11).

O.

Oath. The principle on which an oath is held to be binding is incidentally laid down in Heb. vi. 16, viz. as an ultimate appeal to divine authority to ratify an assertion.

O'ah. A son of Joktan, and, like the rest of his family, apparently the founder of an Arab tribe (Gen. x. 28), which has not yet been identified.

O'bed (servant). (1.) Son of Boaz and Ruth the Moabitess (Ruth iv. 17). The circumstances of his birth, which make up all that we know about him, are given with much beauty in the book of Ruth.

(2.) A descendant of Jarha. (3.) One of David's mighty men (1 Chr. xi. 47). (4.) One of the gate-keepers of the Temple; (5.)

Father of Azariah.

O'bil (chief of the camels), An Ishmaelite who was appointed keeper of the herds of camels in the reign of David (1 Chr. xxvii. 30).

O'both (bottles). One of the encampments of the Israelites, east of Moab (Num. xxi. 10, xxxiii. 43).

O'bed (erecting). (1.) The father of Azariah the prophet in the reign of Asa (2 Chr. xv. 1). (2.) A prophet of Jehovah in Samaria (2 Chr. xxxiii. 9).

Og (crooked). An Amorite king of Bashan, whose rule extended over sixty cities (Josh. xiii. 12).

OIL. Of the numerous substances which were known

The prophet Isaiah (l. 6) alludes to the use of oil as ointment in medical treatment. The oil for "the light" was expressly ordered to be olive-oil, beaten. Oil was poured on, or mixed with the flour or meal used in offerings. As oil is indicative of gladness, so its absence denoted sorrow or hu-

On. The son of Peleth, and one of the chiefs of the tribe of Reuben.

On. A town of Lower Egypt, which is better known under its Greek name Helopolis.

Onesimus is the name of the servant or slave in whose behalf Paul wrote the Epistle to Philemon.

O'phir. (t.) The eleventh in order of the sons of Joktan (Gen. x. 29; 1 Chr. i. 23).

(2.) A seaport or region from which the Hebrews in the time of Solomon obtained gold.

Ornaments, Personal. The monuments of ancient Egypt exhibit the hands of ladies loaded with rings, earrings of very great size, anklets, armlets, bracelets of the most varied character, richly ornamented necklaces, and chains of various kinds. There is sufficient evidence in the Bible that the inhabitants of Palestine were equally devoted to finery.

Ostrich. Bird of the desert. The loud crying of the ostrich seems to be referred to in Mic. i. 8.

Owl (Yanshûph, or Yanshûph), occurs in Lev. xi. 17, Deut. xiv. 16, as the name of some unclean bird, and in Is. xxxiv. 14, in the description of desolate Edom, "the yanshûph and the raven shall dwell in it." This miliation (Is. lxi. 3; Joel ii. 19; Rev. vi. 6). Kings, priests, and prophets were anointed with oil or ointment.

Ol'iva (Heb. zayith, or ait). No tree is more closely associated with the history and civilization of man. Its foliage is the earliest that is mentioned by name, when the waters of the flood began to retire (Gen. viii. 11). With David it is the emblem of prosperity and the divine blessing (Ps. lii. 8, cxviii. 3). So with the latter prophets it is the symbol of beauty, luxuriance and strength.

Olives, Mount of. It is the well-known eminence on the east of Jerusalem, intimately connected with some of the gravest events of the history of the Old Testament and New Testament, the scene of the flight of David and the triumphal progress of

Ox. There was no animal in rural economy of the Israelites, that was held in higher esteem than the ox; and deservedly so, for the ox was the animal upon whose patient labors depended all the ordinary operations of farming. Connected with the importance of oxen in the rural economy of the Jews is the strict code of laws which was mercifully enacted by God for their protection and preservation. The ox that threshed the corn was by no means to be muzzled; he was to enjoy rest on the Sabbath as well as his master (Ex. xxiii. 12; Deut. v. 14). The law which prohibited the slaughter of any clean animal, excepting as an offering unto the Lord before the tabernacle," during the time that the Israelites abode in the wilderness (Lev. xvii. 1-6), no doubt contributed to the preservation of their oxen and sheep. It seems clear from Prov. xv. 17, and 1 K. iv. 23, that cattle were sometimes stalled, though as a general rule it is probable that they fed in the plains or on the hills of Palestine. The cattle that grazed at large in the open country would no doubt often become fierce and wild, for the most momentous events in the world's history. It is but a strip of country about the size of Wales, less than 140 miles in length, and barely 40 in average breadth, on the very frontier of the East, hemmed in between the Mediterranean Sea on the one hand, and the enormous trench of the Jordan valley on the other.

Palm-tree (Heb. tamar). While this tree was abundant generally in the Levant, it was regarded by the ancients as peculiarly characteristic of Palestine and the neighboring regions. The Jewish historian mentioned the luxuriance of these trees again and again. Palm-branches were used by Jews in token of victory and peace (1 Macc. xiii. 5; 2 Macc. x. 7, xiv. 4). As to the industrial and domestic uses of the palm, it is well known that they are very numerous; but there is no clear allusion to them in the Bible.

Parable. By the Jewish Rabbis the parable was made the instrument for teaching the young disciple to discern the treasures of wisdom, of which the "accursed" multitude were ignorant. The worth of parables, as instruments of teaching, lies in their being at once a test of character, and in their presenting each form of character, with that which, as a penalty of blessing, is adapted to it.

Paradise is a word of Persian origin, and is used in the Septuagint as the translation of Eden. The Rabbis, in the time of our Saviour, taught that there was a region of the world of the dead, of Sheol, in the heart of the earth. Gehenna was on one side, with its flames and torments; Paradise on the other, the intermediate home of the blessed.

Pa'rah. One of the cities in the territory allotted to Benjamin (Josh. xviii. 23).

Par'menas. One of the seven deacons, "men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom" (Acts vi. 5).

Par'nach. Father or ancestor of Eliza-phan, prince of the tribe of Zebulun (Num. xxxiv. 25).

Pat'ara. A Lycian city situated on the south-western shore of Lycia, not far from the left bank of the river Xanthus.

Pat'mos (Rev. i. 9). A rugged and bare island, is one of the Sporades, and in that part of the Aegean which is called the Icarian Sea. On the hill to the south, crowning a commanding height, is the celebrated monastery, which bears the name of "John the Divine." Half way up the ascent is the cave or grotto where tradition says that St. John received the Revelation.

Patriarchs. The name Patriarch is applied in the N. T. to Abraham (Heb. vii. 4), to the sons of Jacob (Acts vii. 8, 9), and to David (Acts ii. 29); and is apparently intended to be equivalent to the phrase, the "head" or "prince of a tribe," so often found in the O. T. It is used in this sense by the LXX. in 1 Chr. xxiv. 31, xxvii. 22; 2 Chr. xxiii. 20, xxvi. 12. In common usage the title of patriarch is assigned especially to those whose lives are recorded in Scripture previous to the time of Moses.

Paul. The Apostle of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles.

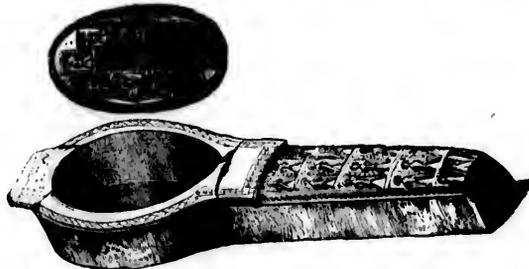

know nothing, except that his father was of the tribe of Benjamin (Phil. iii. 5), and a Pharisee (Acts xxiii. 6). At Tarsus he learnt that trade of "tent-maker" (Acts xviii. 3), at which he afterwards occasionally wrought with his own hands. When St. Paul makes his defence before his countrymen at Jerusalem (Acts xxi), he tells them that though born in Tarsus, he had been "brought up" in Jerusalem. He learnt, he says "at the feet of Gamaliel." He who was to resist so stoutly the usurpations of the law, had for his teacher one of the most eminent of all the doctors of the law. Having undertaken to follow up the believers "unto strange cities," Saul naturally turned his thoughts to Damascus. What befell him as he journeyed thither is related in detail three times in the Acts.

Having escaped from Damascus, Saul betook himself to Jerusalem, and there "assayed to join himself to the disciples; but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple." Barnabas became his sponsor to the Apostles and church at Jerusalem, assuring them of the facts of Saul's conversion and subsequent behavior at Damascus. Barnabas's introduction removed the fears of the Apostles, and Saul "was with them coming in and going out at Jerusalem. There are two principal events which serve as fixed dates for determining the Pauline chronology—the death of Herod Agrippa, and the accession of Festus. Now it has been proved almost to certainty that Felix was recalled from Judaea, and succeeded by Festus in the year 60. In the autumn, then, of A. D. 60 St. Paul left Caesarea. In the spring of 61 he arrived at Rome. There he lived two years, that is, till the spring of 63, with much freedom in his own hired house. Pastoral Epistles give us reasons for condition to "a Adath in the wilderness" (Ps. cii. 6). As a mark of the desolation that was to come upon Edom, it is said that "the Adath and the bitter should possess it" (Is. xxxiv. 11).

Pentateuch. The Greek name given to the five books commonly called the "Five Books of Moses." In the time of Ezra and Nehemiah it was called "the Law of Moses" (Ezr. vii. 6); or "the book of the Law of Moses" (Neh. viii. 11) or simply "the book of Moses" (Ezr. vi. 18; Neh. xiii. 1; 2 Chron. xxx. 4, xxxv. 12). This was beyond all reasonable doubt our existing Pentateuch.

Pentecost, that is, the fiftieth day, or HARVEST FEAST, or FEAST OF WEEKS, may be regarded as a supplement to the Passover. It lasted only for one day; but the modern Jews extend it over two. The people, having at the Passover presented before God the first sheaf of the harvest, departed to their homes to gather it in, and then returned to keep the harvest-feast before Jehovah.

Pe'or. A mountain in Moab, from whence, after having ascended the lower or less sacred summits of Bamoth-Baal and Pisgah, the prophet Balaam was conducted by Balak for his final conjuration (Num. xxiii. 28 only).

Perfumes. The free use of perfumes was peculiarly grateful to the Orientals (Prov. xxvii. 9), whose olfactory nerves are more than usually sensitive to the offensive smells engendered by the heat of their climate. Perfumes entered largely into the Temple service, in the two forms of incense and ointment (Ex. xxx. 22-38).

Per'gamos. A city of Mysia, about 3 miles to the N. of the river Caicus, and 20 miles from its present mouth. The name was originally given to

Persep'olis, mentioned only in 2 Macc. ix. 2, was the capital of Persia Proper, and the occasional residence of the Persian court from the time of Darius Hystaspis, to the invasion of Alexander.

Persia, Persians (pure). Persia Proper was a tract of no very large dimensions on the Persian Gulf. This tract was bounded, on the west, by Susiana or Elam, on the north by Media, on the south by the Persian Gulf, and on the east by Carmania.

The Persians were a people of lively and impressive minds, brave and impetuous in war, witty, passionate, for Orientals, truthful; not without some spirit of generosity, and of more intellectual capacity than the generality of Asiatics.

Peter. His original name was Simon, i. e. "hearer." He was the son of a man named Jonas (Matt. xvi. 17; John i. 43, xxi. 16), and was brought up in his father's occupation, a fisherman on the sea of Tiberias. He and his brother Andrew were partners of John and James, the sons of Zebedee, who had hired servants. The Apostle did not live, as mere laboring man, in a hut by the sea-side, but first at Bethsaida, and afterwards in a house at Capernaum, belonging to himself or his mother-in-law, which must have been rather a large one, since he received in it not only our Lord and his fellow-disciples, but multitudes who were attracted by the miracles and preaching of Jesus. It is not probable that he and his brother were wholly uneducated. The statement in Acts iv. 13, that "the council perceived they (i. e. Peter and John) were unlearned and ignorant men," is not incompatible with this assumption. The translation of the passage in the A. V. is rather exaggerated, the word rendered "unlearned" being nearly equivalent to "laymen," i. e. men of ordinary education, as contrasted with those who were specially trained in the schools of the Rabbis. It is doubtful whether our Apostle was acquainted with Greek in early life. Within a few years after his call he seems to have conversed fluently in Greek with Cornelius. The style of both of Peter's Epistles indicates a considerable knowledge of Greek—it is pure and accurate, and in grammatical structure equal to that of Paul. That may, however, be accounted for by the fact, for which there is very ancient authority, that Peter employed an interpreter in the composi-

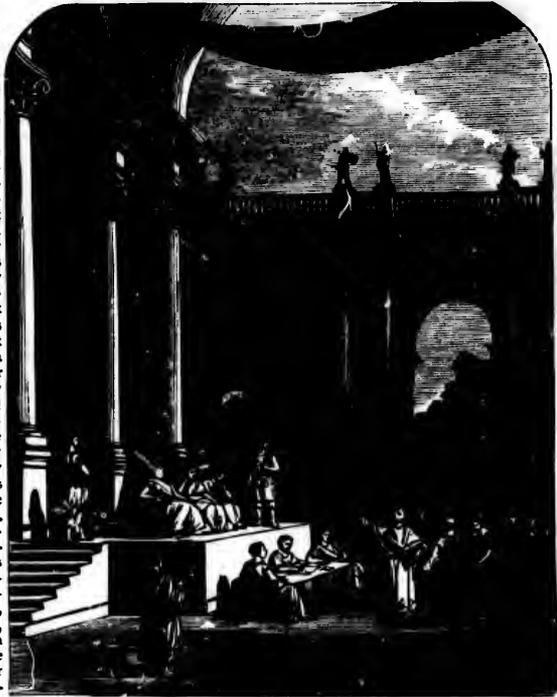

It is on the whole probable that he had some rudimentary knowledge of Greek in early life, which may have been afterwards extended when the need was felt. That he was an affectionate husband, married in early life to a wife who accompanied him in his Apostolic journeys, are facts inferred from Scripture while very ancient traditions, recorded by Clement of Alexandria and by other early but less trustworthy writers, inform us that her name was Perpetua, that she bore a daughter, or perhaps other children, and suffered martyrdom. He was probably between thirty and forty years of age at the date of his call.

That call was preceded by a special preparation. Peter and his brother Andrew, together with their partners, James and John, the sons of Zebedee, were disciples of John the Baptist, when he was first called by our Lord. The particulars of this call are related with graphic minuteness by St. John. It was upon this occasion that Jesus gave Peter the name CEPHAS, a Syriac word answering to the Greek PETER, external position. He and his fellow-disciples looked henceforth upon our Lord as their teacher, but were not commanded to follow him as regular disciples. They returned to Capernaum, where they pursued their usual business, waiting for a further intimation of His will. The second call is recorded by the other three Evangelists; the narrative of Luke being apparently supplementary to the brief, and, so to speak, official account given by Matthew and Mark. It took place on the Sea of Galilee near Capernaum—where the four disciples, Peter and Andrew, James and John were fishing. Peter and Andrew were first called. Our Lord then entered Simon Peter's boat and addressed the multitude on the shore. Immediately after that call our Lord went to the house of Peter, where he wrought the miracle of healing on Peter's wife's mother. Some time was passed afterwards in attendance upon our Lord's public ministrations in Galilee, Decapolis, Perea, and Judaea. The special designation of Peter and his eleven fellow-disciples took place some time afterwards, when they were set apart as our Lord's immediate attendants (see Matt. x. 2-4; Mark iii. 13-19—the most detailed account,—Luke vi. 13). They appear then first to have received formally the name of the founders of that Church, and suffered death in that city. The time and manner of the Apostle's martyrdom are less certain. According to the early writers, he suffered at or about the same time with Paul, and in the Neronian persecution. All agree that he was crucified.

Papyrus. Paper Reed.

Pharaoh's Daughter. Three Egyptian princesses, daughters of Pharaohs, are mentioned in the Bible. (1.) The preserver of Moses (Ex. ii, 5-10). (2.) Bithiah, wife of Mered, an Israelite (1 Chr. iv. 18). (3.) A wife of Solomon (1 K. iii. 1).

Phar'par. The second of the "two rivers of Damascus" alluded to by Naaman (2 K. v. 12).

Philadel'phia. A town on the confines of Lydia, built by Attalus II, king of Pergamus.

Phile'mon (Gr. affectionate). The name of the Christian to whom Paul addressed his Epistle in behalf of Onesimus. He was a native probably of Colossae, or at all events lived in that city when the Apostle wrote to him.

Phillip the Apostle was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter (John i. 44), and apparently was among the Galilean peasants of that district who flocked to hear the preaching of the Baptist. In the list of the twelve Apostles, in the Synoptic Gospels, his name is as uniformly at the head of the second group of four, as the name of Peter is at that of the first (Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 18; Luke vi. 14); and the facts recorded by St. John give the reason of this priority.

Phillip'pi. A city of Macedonia, about nine miles from the sea.

Phili'tines (Heb. pelesheth, wandering). The origin of the Philistines is nowhere expressly stated in the Bible, but the prophets describe them as "the remnant of the maritime district of Caph-tor" (Jer. xlvii. 4).

Phin'eas. Son of Eleazar and grandson of Aaron (Ex. vi. 25). He is memorable for having while quite a youth, by his zeal and energy at the critical moment of the licentious idolatry of Shittim, appeased the divine wrath, and put a stop to the plague which was destroying the nation (Num. xxv. 7).

Phoen'oe. A tract of country, of which Tyre and Sidon were the principal cities, to the north of Palestine, along the coast of the Mediterranean Sea; bounded by that sea on the west, and by the mountain range of Lebanon on the east.

Pi'late, Pan'tinus. He was the sixth Roman procurator of Judaea, and under him our Lord worked, suffered, and died.

Pil'dash. One of the eight sons of Nahor, Abraham's brother, by his wife and niece, Milcah (Gen. xxii. 22).

Pinnacle of the Temple (Matt. iv. 5; Luke iv. 9). The only part of the Temple which answered to the modern sense of pinnacle was the golden spikes erected on the roof to prevent birds from settling there.

EGYPTIAN SIGNET-RINGS WITH IMPRESSIONS FROM THEM.

Pon'tus. A large district in the north of Asia Minor, extending along the coast of the Pontus Euxinus, from which circumstances the name was derived.

Roman Banners.

Poor. The general kindly spirit of the law towards the poor is sufficiently shown by such passages as Deut. xv. 7, for the reason that (ver. 11) "the poor shall never cease out of the land."

EAR AND NOSE RINGS.

Poti'phar. An Egyptian name, also written POTHIRAH, signifies "belonging to the Son." Poti-phar, with whom the history of Joseph is connected, is described as "an officer of Pharaoh, chief of the executioners, an Egyptian" (Gen. xxxi. 1; comp. xxxvii. 36).

SEBASTIE, THE ANCIENT SAMARIA.

Pottery. The art of pottery is one of the most common and most ancient of all manufactures. It is abundantly evident, both that the Hebrews used earthen-ware vessels in the wilderness, and that the potter's trade was afterwards carried on in Palestine.

Procurator. The Greek word is rendered "governor" in A. V., is applied in the N. T. to the officer who presided over the imperial province of Judaea.

Prophet. The ordinary Hebrew word for prophet is nabi, derived from the word signifying "to bubble forth" like a fountain. Hence the word means one who announces or pours forth the declarations of God.

Pu'lean. The class designated this word in the N. T. were employed as collectors of Roman revenue.

Q.

Publius. The chief man—probably the governor—of Melita, who received and lodged St. Paul and his companions on the occasion of their being shipwrecked off that island (Acts xxviii. 7).

Pul (king). An Assyrian king, and the first of those monarchs mentioned in Scripture. His probable date is B. C. 800-750. The Hebrew name Pul is undoubtedly curtailed; for no Assyrian name consists of a single element.

Purification. In its legal and technical sense, is applied to the ritual observances whereby an Israelite was formally absolved from the taint of uncleanness. The essence of purification in all cases, consisted in the use of water, whether by way of ablution of aspersion; but in the majora delicta of legal uncleanness, sacrifices of various kinds were added, and the ceremonies throughout bore an expiatory character.

Puteoli. The great landing-place of travellers to Italy from the Levant, and the harbor to which the Alexandrian corn-ships brought their cargoes (Acts xxvii. 13). The celebrated bay which is now "the bay of Naples," was then called "Sinus Puteolanus." The city was at the north-eastern angle of the bay. The name Puteoli arose from the strong mineral springs which are characteristic of the place. It is now a fourth-rate Italian town, still retaining the name of Positano.

are known to arrive at places sometimes so completely exhausted by their flight as to be readily taken, not in net only, but by the hand.

Queen. This title is probably applied to the queen-mother, since, in an Oriental household, it is not the wife but the mother of the master who exercises the highest authority.

Rah'shakh (2 K. xviii, xix; Is. xxxvi, xxxvii.), one of the officers of the king of Assyria sent against Jerusalem in the reign of Hezekiah.

Raca. A term of reproach used by the Jews of our Saviour's age (Matt. v. 22), derived from the Chaldee ra'ka, "worthless."

Ra'chel. The younger of the daughters of Laban, the wife of Jacob, and mother of Joseph and Benjamin.

Rahab, or Ra'ohab. A celebrated woman of Jericho, who received the spies sent by Joshua to spy out the land, hid them in her house from the pursuit of her countrymen, was saved

Rahab (enslaver). Daughter of Be'huel (Gen. xxii. 23) and sister of Laban, married to Isaac, her father's cousin.

Red Sea. The sea known to us as the Red Sea, was by the Israelites called "the sea" (Ex. xiv. 2, 9, 16, 21; Josh. xxiv. 6, 7). This word signifies a seaweed resembling wool, and such seaweed is thrown up abundantly on the shores of the Red Sea.

Refiner. The refiners art was essential to the working of the precious metals. It consisted in the separation of the dross from the pure ore, which was effected by reducing the metal to a fluid state by the application of heat, and by the aid of solvents, such as alkali (Is. i. 25) or lead (Jer. vi. 29), which, amalgamating with the dross, permitted the extraction of the unalloyed metal.

Rehobo'am (he enlarges the people). Son of Solomon, by the Ammonite princess Naamah (1 K. xiv. 21, 31), and his successor (1 K. xi. 43). He died B. ANCIENT SHOES.

Rab'bi (my master). A title of respect, signifying Master, Teacher, given by the Jews to their doctors and teachers, and often addressed to our Lord (Matt. xxiii. 7, 8, xxvi. 25, 49; Mark ix. 5, xi. 21, xiv. 45). Another form of the title was Rabboni (Mark x. 51; John x. 16).

weed is thrown up abundantly on the shores of the Red Sea.

SAMSON SLAYING THE LION.

Rome. The famous capital of the ancient world, is situated on the Tiber at a distance of about 15 miles from its mouth. The "seven hills" (Rev. xvii. 9) which formed the nucleus of the ancient city stand on the left bank. Modern Rome lies to the N. of the ancient city, covering the plain to the Se'lah. This word, which is only found in the poetical books of the O. T., occurs seventy-one times in the Psalms, and three times in Habakkuk. What the meaning may have been is now a matter of pure conjecture.

Sennacherib was the son and successor of Sargon. He mounted the throne B. C. 702. Sennacherib was one of the most magnificent of the Assyrian kings. He seems to have been the first who fixed the seat of government permanently at Nineveh, which he carefully repaired and adorned with splendid buildings.

Sepharva'im is mentioned by Sennacherib in his letter to Hezekiah, as a city whose king had been unable to resist the Assyrians (2 K. xix. 13).

Ser'aphim. An order of celestial beings, whom Isaiah beheld in vision standing above Jehovah as He sat upon His throne (Is. vi. 2). The meaning of the word "seraph" is doubtful, it is perhaps connected with an Arabic term signifying high or exalted; and this may be regarded as the generally received etymology.

SERPENT-CHARMING IN THE EAST.

Ser'gias Pan'ius was the proconsul of Cyprus when the Apostle Paul visited that island with Barnabas on his first missionary tour (Acts xiii. 7, sq.).

Serpent. The following are the principal Biblical allusions to this animal: Its subtlety is mentioned in Gen. iii. 1; its wisdom is alluded to by our Lord in Matt. x. 16; the poisonous properties of some species are often mentioned (see Ps. lviii. 4; Prov. xxiii. 32); the sharp tongue of the serpent is mentioned in Ps. cxl. 3, Job xx. 16, "the serpent's tongue of Adam and father of Enos. Adam handed down to Seth and his descendants the promise of mercy, faith in which became the distinction of God's children.

IMPRESSIONS OF SIGNETS OF THE KINGS OF ASSYRIA AND EGYPT.

Se'thur. The Asherite spy, son of Michael (Num. xiii. 13).

Seven. The frequent recurrence of certain numbers in the sacred literature of the Hebrews is obvious to the most superficial reader. The influence of the number seven was not restricted to the Hebrews, it prevailed among the Persians (Est. i. 10, 14), among the ancient Indians, among the Greeks and Romans to a great extent, and probably among all nations where the week of seven days was established, as in China, Egypt, Arabia, &c. The peculiarity of the Hebrew view consists in the special dignity of the seventh, and not simply in that of seven.

She'ron. A district of the Holy Land occasionally referred to in the Bible (1 Chr. v. 16, xxvii. 29; Is. xxxiii. 9, xxxv. 2, lxx. 10; Cant. ii. 1). It is that broad, rich tract of land which lies between the mountains of the central part of the Holy Land and the Mediterranean—the northern continuation of the SHEFELAH.

She'ba. The son of Itiel, a Benjamite from the mountains of Ephraim (2 Sam. xx. 1-22); the last chief of the Absalom insurrection of Bethai.

She'ba. One of the towns of the allotment of Simeon (Josh. xix. 2).

She'bah. The famous well which gave its name to the city of Beersheba (Gen. xvi. 33).

Sheb'arim. A place named in Josh. vii. 5, only, as one of the points in the flight from Ai.

She'ber. Son of Caleb ben-Hezron by his concubine Maachah (1 Chr. ii. 48).

Sheb'na. A person of high position in Hezekiah's court, holding at one time the office of prefect of the palace (Is. xxii. 15), but subsequently the subordinate office of secretary (Is. xxxvii. 3; 2 K. xix. 2).

She'uel. A descendant of Gershom (1 Chr. xxiii. 16, xxvi. 24), who was ruler of the treasures of the house of God; called also SITHRAEL (1 Chr. xxiv. 20).

She'chem (hick or shoul-der). An important city in Central Palestine. The situation of the town is one of surpassing beauty. It lies in a sheltered valley, protected by Gerizim on the south, and She'chemites. The family of Shechem, son of Gilead (Num. xxvi. 31; comp. Josh. xvii. 2).

Sheeh'nah. This term is not found in the Bible. It was used by the later Jews, and borrowed by Christians from them, to express the visible majesty of the Divine Presence, especially when resting, or dwelling, between the Cherubim on the mercy-seat in the Tabernacle, and in the temple of Solomon; but not in Zerubbabel's temple, for it was one of the five particulars which the Jews reckon to have been wanting in the second temple.

Sheep. Sheep were an important part of the possessions of the ancient Hebrews and of Eastern nations generally. They were used in the sacrificial offerings, both the adult animal (Ex. xx. 24; 1 K. viii. 63; 2 Chr. xxix. 33) and the lamb, i. e. "a male from one to three years old," but young lambs of the first year were more generally used in the offerings (see Ex. xxix. 38; Lev. ix. 3, xii. 6; Num. xxviii. 9, &c.). Sheep and lambs formed an important article of food (1 Sam. xiv. 18; 1 K. ii. 19, iv. 23; Ps. xlv. 11, &c.). The wool was used as clothing (Lev. xiii. 47; Deut. xxii. 11; Prov. xxxi. 13; Job xxxi. 20, &c.). "Rams' skins dyed red" were used as a covering for the tabernacle (Ex. xxv. 5). Sheep and lambs were sometimes paid as tribute (2 K. iii. 4). It is very striking to notice the immense numbers of sheep that were reared in Palestine in Biblical times. Sheep-shearing is alluded to Gen. xxxi. 19, xxxviii. 13; Deut. xv. 19; 1 Sam. xxv. 4; Is. liii. 7, &c. Sheep-dogs were employed in Biblical times, as is evident from Job xxx. 1. The con-sheep of Syria and Palestine are the broad-tailed. As the sheep is an emblem of meekness, patience, and submission, it is expressly mentioned as typifying these qualities in the person of our blessed Lord (Is. liii. 7; Acts viii. 32, &c.).

ROMAN SLINGER.

ANCIENT BABYLONIAN SEALS.

Sheep-gate. The. One of the gates of Jerusalem as rebuilt by Nehemiah (Neh. iii. 1, 32, xii. 39). It stood between the tower of Meah and the chamber of the corner (iii. 32, 1) or gate of the guard-house (xii. 39, A. N. "prison-gate.")

Shem. The eldest son of Noah, born (Gen. v. 32) when his father had attained the age of 500 years. He was 98 years old, married, and childless, at the time of the Flood. After it, he, with his father, brothers, sisters-in-law, and wife, received the blessing of God (ix. 1), and entered into the covenant.

Shema'ah. A prophet in the reign of Rehoboam. When the king had assembled 180,000 men of Benjamin and Judah to reconquer the northern kingdom after its revolt, Shema'ah was commissioned to charge them to return to their homes, and not to war against their brethren (1 K. xii. 22).

Shem'ith. The title of Ps. vi. is: "To the chief Musician on Neginoth upon Sheminith," or "the eighth," as the margin of the A. V. has it. A similar direction is found in the title of Ps. xii. (comp. 1 Chr. xv. 21). It seems most probable that Sheminith denotes a certain air known as the eighth, or a certain key in which the Psalm was to be sung.

Shew-bread (Ex. xiv. 30, xxv. 13, xxxix. 36, &c.), literally "bread of the face" or "faces." Within the Ark it was directed that there should be a table of shittim wood, i. e. acacia, two cubits in length, a cubit in breadth, and a cubit and a half in height, not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him shall the gathering of the people be." Supposing that the translation is correct, the meaning of the word is Peaceable or Pacific, and the allusion is must not be confounded with the tree popularly known by this name in England, which is a North American plant and belongs to a different genus and sub-order.

Shittim. The place of Israel's encampment between the conquest of the trans-Jordanic highlands and the passage of the Jordan (Num. xxxiii. 49, xxv. 1; Josh. ii. 1, iii. 1; Mic. vi. 5).

Shu'neim. One of the cities allotted to the tribe of Issachar (Josh. xix. 18). It is mentioned on two occasions (1 Sam. xxviii. 4; 2 K. iv. 8). It was beside the native place of Abishag (1 K. i. 3). It is mentioned by Eusebius as 5 miles south of Mount Tabor, and then known as Sulem. This agrees with the position of the present Sulam, a village 3 miles N. of Jezreel, and five from Gilboa.

Shur. A place just without the eastern border of Egypt. Shur is first mentioned in the narrative of Hagar's flight from Sarah (Gen. xvi. 7). The wilderness of Shur was entered by the Israelites after they had crossed the Red Sea, (Ex. xv. 22, 23.)

Shu'han, or Su'ha. It was originally the capital of the country called in Scripture Elam, and by the classical writers

Susis or Susiana. The conquest of Babylon by Cyrus transferred Susa to the Persian dominion; and it was not long before the Achaemenian princes determined to make it the capital of their whole empire, and the chief place of their own residence.

Sh'don. The Greek form of the Phoenician name Sidon. [ZITON.]

Sh'hon. King of the Amorites when Israel arrived on the borders of the Promised Land (Num. xxi. 21.)

Sh'lae. An eminent member of the early Christian Church, described under that name in the Acts, but as Sylvanus in St. Paul's Epistles. He appears as one of the leaders of the Church at Jerusalem (Acts xv. 22), holding the office of an inspired teacher (xv. 32.)

Silk. The only undoubted notice of silk in the Bible occurs in Rev. xviii. 12, where it is mentioned among the treasures of the typical Babylon. It is, however, probable that the texture was known to the Hebrews from the time that their commercial relations were extended by Solomon.

Sh'loah, The Pool of, properly "the Pool of Shelach" (Neh. iii. 15). [SILOAM.]

Sh'loam is one of the two misapposed localities in the topography of Jerusalem; still retaining its old name while every other pool has lost its Bible des-overlaid with pure gold, "and having a golden crown to the border thereof round about." The further description of this table will be found in Ex. xxv. 23-30. The Table stood in the sanctuary together with the seven-branched candlestick and the altar of incense. Every Sabbath twelve newly-baked loaves were put on it in two rows, six in each, and sprinkled with incense, where they remained till the following Sabbath.

Shield. The ordinary shield consisted of a framework of wood covered with leather; it thus admitted of being burnt (Ez. xxxix. 9). It was frequently case'd with metal, either brass or copper. The surface of the shield was kept bright by the application of oil, as implied in Is. xxi. 5. The shield was worn on the left arm, to which it was attached by a strap, either to Solomon, whose name has a similar signification, or to the expected Messiah, who, in Is. ix. 6, is expressly called the Prince of Peace. [MESSIAH p. 405, b.]

Sh'lah. A city of Ephraim.

Sh'nar (country of the two rivers). The ancient name of the great alluvial tract through which the Tigris and Euphrates pass before reaching the sea. It was a plain country where brick had to be used for stone, and slime for mortar (Gen. xi. 3).

Ship (Heb. oniyah, schuh; Gr. plion). No one writer in the whole range of Greek and Roman literature has supplied us with so much information concerning the merchant-ships of the ancients as St. Luke in the narrative of St. Paul's voyage to Rome (Acts xxvii. xxviii). The first century of the Christian era was a time of immense traffic in the Mediterranean; and there must have been many vessels lost there every year by shipwreck, and (perhaps) as many by foundering. Besides this, we must remember that the ancients had no compass, and very imperfect charts and instruments, if any at all. With the large population round the Lake of Tiberias, there must have been a vast number both of fishing-boats and pleasure-boats, and boat building must have been an active trade on its shores.

Sh'ohak King of Egypt, the sheshenk I. of the monuments, first sovereign of the Thubastide xxiid dynasty. Shishak has left a record sculptured on the wall of the great temple of El-Karnak. It is a list of the countries, cities, and tribes conquered or ruled by him or tributary to him.

Shittah-tree, Shittim (Heb. shittah). The wood of this tree was extensively employed in the construction of the tabernacle (see Ex. xxv. xxvi, xxvii, xxxvii, xxxviii). It yields the well-known substance called gum arabic, which is obtained by incisions in the bark, but it is impossible to say whether the ancient Jews were acquainted with its use. This ignation. Siloam is a sacred spot, even to the Moslems; much more to the Jews. It was to Siloam that the Levite was sent with the golden pitcher on the "last and great day of the feast" of tabernacles; it was to Siloam water that the Lord pointed when He stood in the Temple and cried, "If any man thirst, let him come up to me and drink."

Silver. In very early times, silver was used for ornaments (Gen. xxiv, 53) and for vessels of various kinds.

Sin-offering. The sin-offering among the Jews was the sacrifice, in which the ideas of propitiation and of atonement for sin were most distinctly marked. The ceremonial of the sin offering is described in Lev. iv, and vi.

Sinai. Nearly in the centre of the peninsula which stretches between the horns of the Red Sea lies a wedge of granite, grüstein, and porphyry rocks rising to between 8000 and 9000 feet above the sea, the central group denoted by the general name of Sinai.

Slave. (Heb. עַבְד; Gr. sonotē). The institution of slavery was recognized, though not established, by the Mosaic Law with a view to mitigate its harshness and to secure to every man his ordinary rights, 1. Hebrew Slaves. 1. The circumstance under which a Hebrew might be reduced to servitude were—(1) poverty; (2) the commission of theft; and (3) the exercise of paternal authority. 2. The servitude of a Hebrew might be terminated in three ways: (1) by the satisfaction or the remission of all claims against him; (2) by the recurrence of the year of Jubilee (Lev. xxv, 40); and (3) the expiration of six years from the time that his servitude had commenced (Ex. xxi, 3; Deut. xv, 12). (4) To the above modes of obtaining liberty the Rabbinites added as a fourth, the death of a master without leaving a son, their being no power of claiming the slave on the part of any heir except a son. The position of the slave in regard to religious privileges was favorable. He was to be circumcised (Gen. xvii, 12), and hence was entitled to partake of the Paschal sacrifice (Ex. xii, 44) as well as of the other religious festivals (Deut. xii, 12, 18, xvi, 11, 14).

Smyrna. The city to which allusion is made in Revelation ii, 8-11, was founded by Alexander the Great, and was situated twenty stades from the city of the same name, which after a long series of wars with the Lydians, had been finally taken and sacked by Halyattes. The streets were laid out as near as might be at right angles. There was a large public library there, and also a handsome building surrounded with porticos which served as a museum.

Sod'om. (vineyard or burning). One of the most ancient cities of Syria. It is commonly mentioned in connection with Gomorrah, but also with Admah and Zebaim. The mention of Sodom (Gen. xiii, 10-13) gives the position of the city Abram and Lot are standing between Bethel and Ai (ver. 3).

the four cities of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah and Zebaim. The catastrophe by which they were destroyed is described in Gen. xix, as a shower of brimstone and fire from Jehovah. However we may interpret the words of the earliest narrative, one thing is certain—that the lake was not one of the agents in the catastrophe. Nor is it implied in any of the later passages in which the destruction of the cities is referred to throughout the scriptures. Quite the contrary. Those passages always speak of the district on which the cities once stood, not as submerged, but as still visible, though desolate and uninhabitable. The name Sodom has been interpreted to mean "burning." The miserable fate of Sodom and Gomorrah is held up as a warning in numerous passages of the Old and New Testaments (2 Pet. ii, 6; Jude 4-7; Mark vi, 11).

Sol'omon. (1.) Early Life and Accession.—He was the child of David's old age, the last-born of all his sons (1 Chr. iii, 5). The yearnings of the "man of war" now led him to give to the new-born infant the name of Solomon (Shelomoh—the peaceful one). Nathan, with a marked reference to the meaning of the king's own name David—the darling, the beloved one, calls the infant Jedidiah (Jedid-yah), that is, the "darling of the Lord" (2 Sam. xii, 24, 25). He was placed under the care of Nathan from his earliest infancy. The death of Absalom, when Solomon was ten years old, left the place vacant, and David pledged his word that he, and no other, should be the heir (1 K. i, 13). The glorious visions of Ps. lxxii, may be looked on as the prophetic expansion of those hopes of his old age. The feebleness of David's old age led to an attempt which might have deprived Solomon of the throne his father destined for him. The king was reminded of his oath. Solomon went down to GITHON, and was proclaimed and anointed king. A few months more, and Solomon found himself, by his father's death, the sole occupant of the throne. Never before and never after, did the kingdom of Israel take its place among the great monarchies of the East. Large treasures accumulated through many years were at his disposal. Of Solomon's personal appearance we have no direct description, as we have of the earlier kings. Ps. xlv, tells us of one who was, in the eyes of the men of his own time, "fairer than the children of men." Add to this all gifts of a noble, far-reaching intellect, large and ready sympathies, a playful and genial humor, the lips "full of grace," the soul "anointed" as "with the oil of gladness" (Ps. xlv.), and we may form some notion of what the king was like in that dawn of his golden prime. (2.) A description of the TEMPLE erected by Solomon is given elsewhere. From him came the lofty prayer, the noblest utterance of the creed of Israel, setting forth the distance and the nearness of the Eternal God, One, incomprehensible, dwelling not in temples made with hands, yet ruling men, hearing their prayers, giving them all good things, wisdom, peace, righteousness. The teaching of the N. T. adds nothing to the materials for a life of Solomon. It enables us to take the truest measure of it. The teaching of the Son of Man passes sentence on all that kingly pomp (Matt. vi. 29). It was reserved for the true, the later son of David to fulfil the prophetic yearnings which had gathered round the birth of the earlier. He was the true Shalomoh, the Prince of Peace, the true Jedd-jah, the well-beloved of the father.

Spain. The mere intention of St. Paul to visit Spain implies two interesting facts, viz: the establishment of a Christian community in that country, and this by means of Hellenistic Jews resident there. The early introduction of Christianity into that country is attested by Irenæus and Tertullian.

Sparrow. (Heb. tsippor). This Heb. word occurs upwards of forty times in the O. T. In all passages excepting two it is rendered by A. V. indifferently "bird" or "fowl." Our English tree sparrow (Passer montanus, L. is very common, and may be seen in numbers on Mount Ovet, and also about the sacred of the mosque of Omar.

Spice, Spices. The words refer generally to sweet aromatic odors, the principal of which was that of the balsam or balsam of Gilead. The balsam of Gilead tree grows in some parts of Arabia and Africa, and is seldom more than fifteen feet high, with straggling branches and scanty foliage. The spices mentioned as being used by Nicodemus for the preparation of our Lord's body (John xix. 39, 40) are "myrrh and aloes," by which latter word must be understood not the aloes of medicine (Aloe), but the highly-scented wood of the Apularia agallochum.

Spikenard (Heb. shard) is mentioned twice in the O. T., viz: in Cant. i. 12, iv. 13, 14. The ointment with which our Lord was anointed as He sat at meat in Simon's house at Bethany, consisted of this precious substance, the costliness of which may be inferred from the indignant surprise manifested by some of the witnesses of the transaction (see Mark xiv. 3-5; John xii. 3-5).

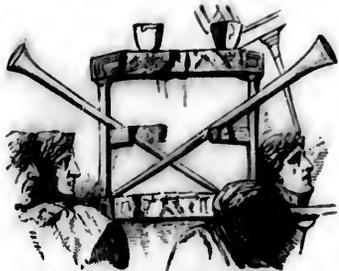

TABLE OF SHEW-BREAD. (FROM RA-BELLIF ON ARCH OF TITUS).

Spinning. The notices of spinning in the Bible are confined to Ex. xxxv. 25, 26; Matt. vi. 28; and Prov. xxxi. 19. The latter passage implies (according to the A. V.) the use of the same instruments which have been in vogue for hand-spinning down to the present day, viz: the distaff and spindle.

Steel. In all cases where the word "steel" occurs in the A. V. the true rendering of the Hebrew is "copper." Whether the ancient Hebrews were acquainted with steel is not perfectly certain.

Stephanas. A Christian convert of Corinth whose household Paul baptized as the "first fruits of Achaia" (1 Cor. i. 16, xvi. 15).

Stephan. the First Christian Martyr was the chief of the Seven (commonly called DEACONS) appointed to rectify the complaints in the early Church of Jerusalem, made by the Hellenistic against the Hebrew Christians. His importance is stamped on the narrative by a reiteration of emphatic, almost superlative phrases: "full of faith and of the Holy Ghost" (Acts vi. 5); "full of grace and power" (ib. 8); "irresistible. He was the first great Christian ecclesiastic," "the Archdeacon," as he is called in the Eastern Church. He is the first martyr. He is the forerunner of St. Paul.

Sticks. (Heb. mahpkech). The term "sticks" is applied in the A. V. to two different articles, one of which answers rather to our palfrey; while the other answers to our "sticks," the feet alone being confined in it. The prophet Jeremiah was confined in the first sort (Jer. xx. 2.)

Stoics. The Stoics and Epicureans, who are mentioned together in Acts xvii, represent the two opposite schools of practical philosophy which survived the fall of higher speculation in Greece. The ethical system of the Stoics has been commonly supposed to have a close connection with Christian morality. But the morality of Stoicism is essentially based on pride; that of Christianity on humility.

Stones, Precious. Precious stones are frequently alluded to in the Holy Scriptures; they were known the account of the homeward journey of Jacob from Padan-aram (Gen. xxxiii. 17), (2). The first camping place of it: "scarcely when they left Egypt (Ex. xii. 37, xiii. 20; Num. xxxiii. 5, 6). This place was apparently reached at the close of the first day's march.

SILOAM FROM ABOVE.

Sun. In the history of the creation the sun is described as the "greater light," in contradistinction to the moon or "lesser light." The joint influence assigned to the sun and moon in deciding the "seasons," both for agricultural operations and for religious festivals, and also in regulating the length and subdivisions of the "years," correctly describes the combination of the lunar and solar year, which prevailed at all events subsequently in the Mosaic and very highly valued in the earliest times. The twelve stones of the breastplate were engraved each one with the name of one of the tribes (Ex. xxviii. 17-21).

Stealing. [PUNISHMENTS.]

Stork. (Heb. shadidim). The White Stork (Ciconia alba, L.) is one of the largest and most conspicuous of land birds, standing nearly four feet high, the jet black of its wings and its bright red beak and legs, contrasting finely with the pure white of its plumage (Zech. v. 9).

Succoth. (1). An ancient town first heard of in period. The worship of the sun as the most prominent and powerful agent in the kingdom of nature, was widely diffused throughout the countries adjacent to Palestine.

Swallow. (Heb. shor and agur, swallow, crane). The characters ascribed in the passages where the name occur, are strictly applicable to the swallow, viz: its swiftness of flight, its nesting in the buildings of the Temple, its mournful, garrulous note, and its regular migration, shared indeed in common with several others. Many species of swallow occur in Palestine. All those common in England are found,

Swan (Heb. tinshemeth), thus rendered by A. V. in Lev. xi. 18; Deut. xiv. 16, where it occurs in the list of unclean birds. But the renderings of the LXX., "porphyrio" (purple water-hen) and "ibis" are either of them more probable. It frequents marshes and the sea by the banks of rivers in all the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, and is abundant in Lower Egypt.

Swine (Heb. chazir). (1.) The flesh of swine was forbidden as food by the Levitical law (Lev. xi. 7; Deut. xiv. 8). Although the Jews did not breed swine, during the greater period of their existence as a nation, there can be little doubt that the heathen nations of Palestine used the flesh as food.

Sycamine-tree (Gr. Sukaminos) is mentioned only in Luke xvii. 6. There is no reason to doubt that the sycamore is distinct from the sycamore of the them in his kingdom a special overseer, as he did for the olives (1 Chr. xxvii. 28); and it is mentioned as one of the heaviest of Egypt's calamities, that her sycamores were destroyed by hailstones (Ps. lxxviii. 47).

Sya'ne, properly SEVENET, a town of Egypt, on the frontier of Cush or Ethiopia.

Synagogue. (1.) History.—The word Synagogue, which means a "congregation," is used in the New Testament to signify a recognized place of worship. We cannot separate them from the most intimate connection with our Lord's life and ministry. In them, he worshipped in his youth and in his manhood. They were the scenes, too, of no small portion of his work.

(2.) Structure.—The size of a synagogue varied with the population. Its position was, however, determinate. It stood, if possible, on the highest ground, in or near the city to which it belonged. And its direction, too, was fixed. Jerusalem was the Stable of Jewish devotion. The synagogue was so constructed, that the worshippers as they entered, and as they prayed, looked towards it. (3.) Officers.—In smaller towns there was

Syr'aense, the celebrated city on the eastern coast of Sicily. St. Paul arrived thither in an Alexandrian ship from Melitz, on his voyage to Rome (Acts xxviii. 12).

Syr'ia. Syria Proper was bounded by Amanus and Taurus on the N., by the Euphrates and the Arabian desert on the E., by Palestine on the S., by the Mediterranean near the mouth of the Orontes, and then by Phoenicia on the W. This tract is about 300 miles long from North to South, and from 50 to 150 miles broad. It contains an area of about 30,000 square miles. History. The first occupants of Syria appear to have been of Hamitic descent. These tribes occupied not Palestine only, but also Lower Syria in very early times, as we may gather from the fact that Hamath is assigned to them in Genesis (x. 18). The only Syrian town whose ex-same evangelist (ix. 4). The sycamine is the mulberry tree (Morus). Both black and white mulberry trees are common in Syria and Palestine.

Sycamore (Heb. SHUKMATH, Gr. Sukaminos). The Sycamore, or Fig mulberry, is in Egypt and Palestine a tree of great importance and very extensive use. It attains the size of a walnut tree, has wide-often but one Rabbi. Where a fuller organization was possible, there was a college of Elders (Luke vii. 3), presided over by one who was the chief of the synagogue" (Luke viii. 41, 49, xiii. 14; Acts xviii. 8, 17).

Synagogue, The Great. On the return of the Jews from Babylon, a great council was appointed, accordistence we find distinctly marked at this time is Damascus (Gen. xiv. 15, xv. 2). Upon the death of Alexander, Syria became, for the first time, the head of a great kingdom. The country grew rich with the wealth which now flowed into it on all sides. The history of Syria under the Seleucid princes has been already given in the articles treating of each monarch. Syria holds an important place, not only in the Old Testament, but in the New. In A. D. 44-47 it was the scene of a severe famine. A little earlier, Christianity had begun to spread into it, partly by means of those who "were scattered" at the time of Stephen's persecution, (Acts xi, 19), partly by the exertions of St. Paul, (Gal. i, 21). The Syrian Church soon grew to be one of the most flourishing (Acts xiii. 1, xv. 23, 35, 41; &c.

Ta'anaach. An ancient canaanitish city whose king is enumerated amongst the thirty-one conquered by Joshua (Josh. xii, 21).

Tabernacls. The Tabernacle was the tent of Jehovah called by the same name as the tents of the people, in the midst of which it stood. It was also called the sanctuary, and the tabernacle of the congregation. The first ordinances given to Moses, after the proclamation of the outline of the law from Sinai, related to the ordering of the Tabernacle, its furniture and its service, as the type which was to be followed when the people came to their own home, vii. 44; Heb. viii, 5). The materials were:—(a) Metals: gold, silver and brass. (b) Textile fabrics: blue, purple, scarlet, and fine (white) linen, for the production of which Egypt was celebrated; also a fabric of goat's hair, the produce of their own flocks.

(c) Skins: of the ram, dyed red, and of the badger. (d) Wood: the shittim wood, the timber of the wild acacia of the desert itself, the tree of the "burning bush." (e) Oil, spices and incense, for anointing the priests and burning in the tabernacle. (f) Gems: onyx stones and the precious stones for the breastplate of the High-Priest. The people gave jewels, and plates of gold, and silver, and brass; wood, skins, hair, and linen; the women wove; the rulers offered precious stones, oils, spices, and incense; and the artists soon had more than they needed (Ex. xxv, 1-8; xxxv, 4-29; xxxvi, 5-7).

Tabernacles. The Feast of (Ex. xxiii, 16, "the feast of ingathering"), the third of the three great festivals of the Hebrews, which lasted from the 15th till the 22d of Tisri. The time of the festival fell in the Autumn, when the whole of the chief fruits of the ground, the corn, the wine and the oil were gathered in (Ex. xxiii, 16; Lev. xxiii, 39; Deut. xv, 13-15). Its duration was strictly only seven days (Deut. xvi, 13; Ex. xiv, 25). The main purposes of the feast of Tabernacles are plainly set forth (Ex. xxiii, 16 and Lev. xxiii, 43). It was to be at once a thanksgiving for the harvest, and a commemoration of the time when the Israelites dwelt in tents during their passage through the wilderness.

Tab'itha, also called Dorcas by St. Luke. A female disciple of Joppa, "full of good works," among beautiful appearance, being so symmetrical in its proportions, and rounded off like a hemisphere or the segment of a circle, yet varying somewhat as viewed from different directions.

Tad'mor, called "Tadmor in the wilderness," is the same as the city known to the Greeks and Romans under the name of Palmyra. It was built by Solomon after his conquest of Hamath Zotah (2 Chr. viii, 4).

Smyrna, Asia Minor.

Talmud (i. e. doctrine) is a large collection of writings, containing a full account of the civil and religious laws of the Jews. The classical passage in the Mishna on this subject is the following: "Moses received the (oral) law from Sinai, and delivered it to Joshua, and Joshua to the elders, and the elders to the prophets, and the prophets to the men of the Great Synagogue." This oral law, with the numerous commentaries upon it, forms the Talmud.

Haran. The account given of him in the O. T. narrative is very brief. We learn from it that he was an idolater (Josh. xxiv. 2), that he dwelt beyond the Euphrates in Ur, of the Chaldees (Gen. xi. 28).

Teraphim, only in plural, images connected with magical rites. In one case a single statue seems to be intended by the plural (1 Sam. xix. 13, 16). The teraphim, translated "images" in A. V., carried away from Laban by Rachel, were regarded by Laban as gods, and it would therefore appear that they were used by those who added corrupt practices to the patriarchal religion.

Tertullus, "a certain orator" (Acts xxiv. 1) who was retained by the High-Priest and Sanhedrim to accuse the Apostle Paul at Caesarea before the Roman Procurator Antonius Felix.

Tetrarch, properly the sovereign or governor of the fourth part of a country.

CINNAMON.

Thaddaeus. A name in Mark's catalogue of the twelve Apostles (Mark iii. 18).

Thebes. A chief city of ancient Egypt, long the capital of the upper country, and the seat of the Diospolitan dynasties, that ruled over all Egypt at the era of its highest splendor.

Theophilus. The person to whom St. Luke inscribes his Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles (Luke i. 3; Acts. i. 1). From the honorable epithet applied to him in Luke i. 3, it has been argued with much probability that he was a person in high official position.

Thessalonians, First Epistle to the, was written by the Apostle Paul at Corinth, a few months after he had founded the church at Thessalonica, at the close of the year 52 or the beginning of 53.

Thessalonians, Second Epistle to the, appears to have been written from Corinth not very long after the First, for Silvanus and Timothy were still with St. Paul (i. 1).

Thessalonica. The original name of this city was Therma; and that part of the Macedonian shore on which it was situated retained through the Roman period the designation of the Thermaic Gulf. Cassander the son of Antipater rebuilt and enlarged Therma, and named it after his wife, Thessalonica, the sister of Alexander the Great. Strabo in the first century speaks of Thessalonica as the most populous city in Macedonia.

Thieves, The two. The men who under this name appear in the history of the crucifixion, were robbers rather than thieves, belonging to the lawless bands by which Palestine was at that time and afterwards infested.

Thomas, one of the Apostles. According to Eusebius, his real name was Judas. He is said to have been born at Antioch. In the catalogue of the Apostles he is coupled with Matthew in Matt. x. 3; Mark iii. 13; Luke vi. 15; and with Philip in Acts i. 13. All that we know of him is derived from the Gospel of St. John.

Thorns and Thistles. There appear to be eighteen or twenty Hebrew words which point to different kinds of prickly or thorny shrubs. These words are variously rendered in the A. V. by "thorns," "briers," "thistles," &c.

Throne (Heb. KISSI; Gr. thronos). The Hebrew word, so translated, applies to any elevated seat occupied by a person in authority, whether a high-priest (1 Sam. i. 9), a judge (Ps. cxxii. 5), or a military chief (Jer. i. 15).

Thyatira. A city on the Lycus, founded by Seleucus Nicator, lay to the left of the road from Pergamus to Sardis, on the very confines of Mysia and Ionia, so as to be sometimes reckoned within the one, and sometimes within the other.

Tiberias, a city in the time of Christ, on the sea of Galilee, first mentioned in the New Testament (John vi. 1, 23, xxi. 1), and then by Josephus, who states that it was built by Herod Antipas, and was named by him in honor of the emperor Tiberius.

Tiberias, The Sea of (John xxi. 1). GENNESARET, SEA OF.

Tiberius (in full, Tiberius Claudius Nero), the 2d Roman emperor, successor of Augustus, who began to reign A. D. 14, and reigned until A. D. 37.

Tiglath-pileser. In 1 Chr. v. 26, and again in 2 Chr. xxviii. 20, the name of this king is written

"Tilgath-pileser." Tiglath-Pileser is the second Assyrian king mentioned in Scripture as having come into contact with the Israelites.

Tigris. The Tigris, like the Euphrates, rises from two principal sources in the Armenian mountains, and flows into the Euphrates.

Timnah. (1.) A place which formed one of the landmarks on the north boundary of the allotment of Judah (Josh. xv. 10). (2.) A town in the mountain district of Judah (Josh. xv. 57). (3.) The scene of the adventure of Judah with his daughter-in-law Tamar (Gen. xxxviii. 12, 13, 14).

Solomon's Porch of Herod's Temple.

Timothy. The disciple, whose name was the son of one of those mixed marriages which were not uncommon in the later periods of Jewish history. "From a child" he learnt to "know the Holy Scriptures" daily. Those who had the deepest insight into character pointed to him (1 Tim. i. 18, iv. 14), as specially fit for the missionary work in which the Apostle was engaged. Personal feeling led St. Paul to the same conclusion (Acts xvi. 3), and he was solemnly set apart to do the work, and possibly to bear the title of Evangelist (1 Tim. iv. 14; 2 Tim. i. 6, iv. 5).

THE ROCK SPARROW.

Tir'hakah (exalt.) King of Ethiopia, (Cush), the opponent of Sennacherib (2 K. xix. 9; Is. xxxviii. 9).

Tirzah, youngest of the five daughter of Zelophehad (Num. xxvi. 33).

Tirzah, an ancient Canaanite city whose king is enumerated amongst those overthrown in the conquest of the country (Josh. xii. 24).

Titha (Heb. MA'ASER; Gr. decate, a tenth.) Instances was undoubtedly the largest city which he is known to have visited. At the time of the crusades Tyre was still a flourishing city, when it surrendered to the Christians on the 27th of June, 1144. It continued more than a century and a half in the hands of Christians, but was deserted by its inhabitants in A. D. 1291, upon the conquest of Acre (Ptolemais) by the Sultan of Egypt and Damascus. This was the turning point in the history of Tyre, which has not recovered from the blow. Since the beginning of the present century there has been a partial revival of prosperity.

U.

U'lai is mentioned by Daniel (viii. 2, 16) as a river near to Susa, where he saw his vision of the man and the he-goat. It has been generally identified with the Eulaeus of the Greek and Roman geographers, a large stream in the immediate neighborhood of that city.

COMMON EUROPEAN SWIFT.—"SWALLOW" OF SCRIPTURE.

Unclean Meats. These were things strangled, or dead of themselves, or through beasts or birds of prey; whatever beast did not both part the hoof and chew the cud; and certain other smaller animals rated as "creeping things;" certain classes of birds mentioned in Lev. xi, and Deut. xiv., twenty or twenty-one in all; whatever in the waters had not both fins and scales; whatever winged insect had not besides four legs the two hind legs for leaping; besides things offered in sacrifice to idols; and all blood or whatever contained it (save perhaps the blood of fish, as would appear from that only of beast and bird being forbidden, Lev. vii. 26), and therefore flesh cut from the live animal; as also all fat, at any rate that disposed in masses among the intestines, and probably wherever discernible and separable among the flesh (Lev. iii. 14-17, vii. 23).

Uncleanness. The distinctive idea attached to ceremonial uncleanness among the Hebrews was, that it cut a person off for the time from social privileges, and left his citizenship among God's people for the while in abeyance.

Unicorn. The rendering of the A. V. of the Hebrew Re'em, a word which occurs seven times in the O. T. as the name of some large wild animal. We think there can be no doubt that some species of wild ox is intended. But it is impossible to determine what particular species is signified. Probably some gigantic Urus is intended.

WILD BOAR.

Ur was the land of Haran's nativity (Gen. xi. 28), the place from which Terah and Abraham started "to go into the land of Canaan" (Gen. xi. 31). It is called in Genesis "Ur of the Chaldaees," while in the Acts St. Stephen places it by implication, in Mesopotamia (vii. 2, 4).

U'ri'ah. (1.) One of the thirty commanders of the thirty bands into which the Israelite army of David was divided (1 Chr. xi. 41; 2 Sam. xxiii. 39). He married Bathsheba, a woman of extraordinary beauty, the daughter of Eliam. It may be inferred from Nathan's parable (2 Sam. xii. 3) that he was passionately devoted to his wife, and that their union was celebrated in Jerusalem as one of peculiar tenderness. (2.) High-priest in the reign of Ahaz (Is. viii. 5; 2 K. xvi. 10-16). He is probably the same as Urijah the priest, who built the altar for Ahaz (2 K. xvi. 10). (3.) A priest of the family of Hakkoz, the head of the seventh course of priests (Ezr. viii. 33; Neh. iii. 4, 21).

SWORDS—ASSYRIAN, PERSIAN, ROMAN AND GREEK.

U'rim and Thum'mim. When the Jewish exiles were met on their return from Babylon by a question which they had no data for answering, they agreed to postpone the settlement of the difficulty till there should rise up "a priest with Urim and Thum'mim" (Ezr. ii. 63; Neh. vii. 65). The inquiry, what those Urim and Thum'mim themselves were, seems likely to wait as long for a final and satisfying answer. On every side we meet with confessions of ignorance. Urim means "light," and Thum'mim "perfection."

Scriptural Statements.

Uzary (Heb. NESEK). It need only be remarked here that the practice of mortgaging land, sometimes at exorbitant interest, grew up among the Jews during the captivity, in direct violation of the law (Lev. xxv. 36, 37; Ez. xviii. 8, 13, 17).

Uz'ah. (1.) King of Judah (n. c. 808-9-756-7). After the murder of Amaziah, his son Uziah was chosen by the people to occupy the vacant throne at the age of 16, and for the greater part of his long reign of 52 years he lived in the fear of God, and showed himself a wise, active and pious ruler.

Uz'el. (1.) Fourth son of Kohath, father of Misha'el, Elzaphan or Elizaphan, and Zithri, and uncle to Aaron (Ex. vi. 18, 22; Lev. x. 4). (2.) A Simeonite captain, son of Ishi, in the days of Hezekiah (1 Chr. iv. 42). (3.) Head of a Benjaminite house, of the sons of Bela (1 Chr. vii. 7). (4.) A musician, of the sons of Heman, in David's reign (1 Chr. xxv. 4). (5.) A Levite, of the sons of Jeduthan, in the days of Hezekiah (2 Chr. xxix. 14, 19). (6.) Son of Harhath, probably a priest, in the days of Nehemiah, who took part in repairing the wall (Neh. iii. 8).

V.

Vale, Valloy. It is hardly necessary to state that these words signify a hollow sweep of ground between two more or less parallel ridges of high land. The structure of the greater part of the Holy Land does not lend itself to the formation of valleys in one sense of the word. The abrupt transitions of crowded rocky hills preclude the existence of any extended sweep of valley.

Vash'ti, the "queen" of Ahasuerus, who, for refusing to show herself to the king's guests at the royal banquet when sent for by the king, was repudiated and deposed (Esth. i).

Village. This word, in addition to its ordinary sense, is often used, especially in the enumeration of towns, in Josh. xiii., xv., xix., to imply unvalled suburbs outside the walled towns.

Vine. The well-known valuable plant (vitis vinifera) very frequently referred to in the Old and New Testaments, and cultivated from the earliest times. That it was abundantly cultivated in Egypt is evident from the frequent representations on the monuments, as well as from the Scriptural allusions (Gen. xl. 9-11; Ps. lxxviii. 47). The vines of Palestine were celebrated both for luxuriant growth and for the immense clusters of grapes which they produced. When the spies were sent forth to view the promised land, we are told that on their arrival at the valley of Eshcol they cut down a branch with one cluster of grapes, and bare it between two on a staff (Num. xiii. 23). Especial mention is made in the Bible of the vines of Eshcol Num. xiii. 24, xxxii. 9, of Silemah, Heshbon and Elcalch (Is. xvi. 8, 9, 10; Jer. xlviii. 32). From the abundance and excellence of the vines it may readily be understood how frequently this plant is the subject of metaphor in the Holy Scriptures. To dwell under the vine and fig-tree is an emblem of domestic happiness and peace (1

K. iv. 25; Mic. iv. 4; Ps. cxviii. 3); the rebellious people of Israel are compared to "wild grapes" "an empty vine," "the degenerate plant of a strange vine," &c. (Is. v. 2, 4; Hos. x. 1; Jer. ii. 21). It is a vine which our Lord selects to show the spiritual union which subsists between himself and his members (John xv. 1-6).

Vinegar. The Hebrew word translated "vinegar" was applied to a beverage consisting generally of wine or strong drink turned sour, but sometimes artificially made by an admixture of barley and wine, and thus liable to fermentation.

Vows (Heb. NEVER, vow of devotion; Heb. ESAR, vow of abstinence; and HEREM, vow of destruction). The earliest mention of a vow is that of Jacob (Gen. xxviii. 18-22, xxxi. 13). Vows in general are also mentioned in the Book of Job (xxii. 27). The Law therefore did not introduce, but regulated the pracbly to the method adopted at Nineveh of incrusting or veneering a wall of brick or stone with slabs of a more costly material, as marble or alabaster.

Wall. The rendering in the A. V. of the Heb. duh, dayyah, and also in Job. xxviii. 7, of ayyah. There seems no doubt but that the A. V. translation is incorrect, and that the original words refer to some of the smaller species of raptorial birds, as kites or buzzards.

Wages. The law was very strict in requiring daily payment of wages (Lev. xix. 13; Deut. xxiv. 14, 15). The employer who refused to give his laborers sufficient victuals is censured (Job. xxiv. 11), and the iniquity of withholding wages is denounced (Jer. xxii. 13; Mal. iii. 5; James v. 4).

Wagon. The Oriental wagon, or arabah, is a vehicle composed of two or three planks fixed on two solid circular blocks of wood, from two to five feet in diameter, which serve as wheels. For the conveyance of passengers, mattresses or cloths are laid in the bottom, and the vehicle is drawn by buffaloes or oxen. [CART and CHARIOT.]

Walls. The practice was common in Palestine of carrying foundations down to the solid rock, as in the case of the Temple, with structures intended to be permanent (Luke vi. 48). A feature of some parts of Solomon's buildings, corresponds remarka-

Washing the Hands and Feet. As knives and forks were dispensed with in eating, it was absolutely necessary that the hand which was thrust into the common dish, should be scrupulously clean; and again, as sandals were ineffectual against the dust and heat of an Eastern climate, washing the feet on entering a house was an act both of respect to the company and of refreshment to the traveller. The former of these usages was transformed by the Pharisees of the New Testament into a matter of ritual observance (Mark vii. 3), and special rules were laid down as to the times and manner of its performance. Washing the feet did not rise to the dignity of a ritual observance except in connection with the services of the sanctuary (Ex. xxx. 19, 21). It held a high place, however, among the rites of hospitality. Immediately that a guest presented himself at the tent-door, it was usual to offer the necessary materials for washing the feet (Gen. xviii. 4, xix. 2, xxiv. 32, xliii. 24; Judg. xix. 21). It was a yet more complimentary act, betokening equally humility and affection, if the host actually performed the office for his guest (1 Sam. xxv. 41; Luke vii. 38, 44; John xiii. 5-14; 1 Tim. v. 10).

Such a token of hospitality is still occasionally exhibited in the East.

Watches of Night. The Jews, like the Greeks and Romans, divided the night into military watches instead of hours, each watch representing the period for which sentinels or pickets remained on duty. The proper Jewish reckoning recognized only three such watches, entitled the first or "beginning of the watches" (Lam. ii. 19), the middle watch (Judg. vii. 19), and the morning watch (Ex. xiv. 24; 1 Sam. xi. 11). These would last respectively from sunset to 10 P. M.; from 10 P. M. to 2 A. M.; and from 2 A. M. to sunrise.

Water of Jealousy. (Num. v. 11-31). The ritual prescribed consisted in the husband's bringing the woman before the priest, and the essential part of it is unquestionably the oath, to which the "water" was subsidiary, symbolical and ministerial. With her he was to bring the tenth part of an ephah of barley-meal as an offering.

Wave-offering. This rite, together with that of "heaving" or "raising" the offering, was an inseparable accompaniment of peace-offerings. In such, the right shoulder, considered the choicest part of the victim was to be "heaved," and viewed as holy to the Lord, only eaten therefore by the priest; the breast was to be "waved," and eaten by the worshipper.

Weapons. [ARMS.]

Wessel (chilled) occurs only in Lev. xi. 29, in the list of unclean animals.

Weaving. The art of weaving appears to be coeval with the first dawning of civilization. We find it practiced with great skill by the Egyptians at a very early period. The "vestures of fine linen" such as Joseph wore (Gen. xli.

42) were the product of Egyptian looms. The Israelites were probably acquainted with the process before their sojourn in Egypt; but it was undoubtedly edly there that they attained the proficiency which enabled them to execute the hangings of the Tabernacle (Ex. xxxv. 35; 1 Chr. iv. 21), and other artistic textures. The textures produced by the Jewish weavers were very various. The coarser kinds, such as tent-cloth, sack-cloth, and the "hairy garments" of the poor were made of goat's or camel's hair (Ex. xxvi. 7; Matt. iii. 4). Wool was extensively used for ordinary clothing (Lev. xiii. 47;

Gen. viii. 10, xxix. 27). The origin of this division of time is a matter which has given birth to much speculation. Its antiquity is so great, its observance so wide-spread, and it occupies so important a place in sacred things, that it must probably be thrown back as far as the creation of man. The week and the Sabbath are thus as old as man himself. A purely theological ground is thus established for the week. They who embrace this view support it by a reference to the six days' creation and the divine rest on the seventh.

Well. The special necessity of a supply of water (Judg. i. 15) in a hot climate has always involved among Eastern nations questions of property of the highest importance, and sometimes given rise to serious contention. Thus the well Beersheba was opened, and its possession attested with special formality by Abraham (Gen. xxi. 30, 31). To acquire wells which they had not themselves dug, was one of the marks of favor foretold to the Hebrews on their entrance into Canaan (Deut. vi. 11). To possess one is noticed as a mark of independence (Prov. v. 15), and to abstain from the use of wells belonging to others a disclaimer of interference with their property (Num. xx. 17, 19, xxi. 22). Similar rights of possession, actual and hereditary, exist among the Arabs of the present day. It is thus easy to understand how wells have become in many cases, links in the history and landmarks in the topography both of Palestine and of the Arabian Peninsula. Wells in Palestine are usually excavated from the solid limestone rock, sometimes with steps to descend into them (Gen. xxiv. 16). The brims are furnished with a curb or low wall of stone, bearing marks of high antiquity in the furrows worn by the ropes used in drawing water. It was on a curb of this sort that our Lord sat when He conversed with the woman of Samaria (John iv. 6), and it was this, the usual stone cover, which the woman placed on the mouth of the well at Bahurim (2 Sam. xvii. 19).

Wheat. The well-known valuable cereal, cultivated from the earliest times, is first mentioned in Gen. xxx. 14, in the account of Jacob's sojourn with Laban in Mesopotamia. Egypt in ancient times was celebrated for the growth of its wheat; the best quality was all bearded; and the same varieties existed in ancient as in modern times, among which may be mentioned the seven-eared quality described in Pharaoh's dream (Gen. xli. 22). Babylonia was also noted for the excellence of its wheat and other cereals. Syria and Palestine produced wheat of fine quality and in large quantities (Ps. cxlvii. 14, xxxi. 16, &c.) There appear to be two or three kinds of wheat at present grown in Palestine.

Widow. Under the Mosaic dispensation no legal provision was made for the maintenance of widows. They were left dependent partly on the attention of relations, and partly on the privileges accorded to other distressed classes, such as a participation in the triennial third tithe (Deut. xiv. 29, xxvi. 12), in leasing (Deut. xxiv. 19-21), and in religious feasts (Deut. xvi. 11, 14). With regard to the remarriage of widows, the only restriction imposed by the Mosaic law had reference to the contingency of one being left childless, in which case the brother of the deceased husband had a right to marry the widow (Deut. xxv. 5, 6; Matt. xxii. 23-30). In the Apostolic Church the widows were sustained at the public expense, the relief being daily administered in kind, under the superintendence of officers appointed for this special purpose (Acts vi. 1-6).

Wilderness of the Wandering. With all the material for fixing the localities of the Exodus, the evidence for many of them is so slight that the whole question is involved in much obscurity. The uncertainties commence from the very starting point of the route of the Wandering. It is impossible to fix the point at which in "the wilderness of Etham" (Num. xxxiii. 6, 7) Israel, now a nation of freemen, emerged from that sea into which they had passed as a nation of slaves. The fact that from "Etham in the edge of the wilderness," their path struck across the sea (Ex. xiii. 20), and from the sea into the same wilderness of Etham, seems to indicate the upper end of the farthest tongue of the Gulf of Suez as the point of crossing. There seems reason also to think that this Gulf had then, as also at

Ezion-Geber, a farther extension northward than at present, owing to the land having upheaved its level. After the rout in Hiramah, the people "abode in Kadesh many days" (Deut. i. 46). This phrase may possibly cover the whole period of the wandering; and Kadesh may very well be taken for a

Wills. Under a system of close inheritance like that of the Jews, the scope for bequest in respect of land was limited by the right of redemption and general re-entry in the Jubilee year. But the law does not mean, and are hence expressively termed by the Arabs the "fathers of the rain." Westerly winds prevail in Palestine from November to February.

Wine. The manufacture of wine is carried back in the Bible to the age of Noah (Gen. ix. 20, 21), to whom the discovery of the process is apparently, general name of the wilderness (see Ps. xxix. 8). The direction in which the people started on their wanderings is defined "by the way of the Red Sea" (Num. xiv. 25; Deut. i. 40), which seems clearly to mean down the Arabah to the head of the Euxine Gulf. Now it seems that the passage in Deut. ii. 1 must be referred to the same "turning into the wilderness by way of the Red Sea," and not to the final march, the signal for which is recorded at v. 3, and this is confirmed by the computation of the thirty-eight years of wandering from the time they left Kadesh-barnea (Num. xiv. 14). If this be so, we have a clue to the direction of the wandering in the words, "and we compassed Mount Seir many days;" words which point to the Arabah. With this agrees their notice of their last march back to Kadesh, being from Ezion-geber at the head of the Gulf of Akabah (Num. xxxiii. 36).

ALTAR OF BURNT-OFFERING.

Willows (Heb. ARABIM; Arabic, gharob and sustaf) are mentioned in Lev. xxiii. 40; Job. xl. 22; Is. xlv. 4; Ps. cxxxvii. 2. This tree grows abundantly farbid bequests by will of such limited interest in land as was consistent with those rights. The case of houses in walled towns was different, and there can be no doubt that they must, in fact, have frequently been bequeathed by will (Lev. xxv. 30).

Window. The window of an Oriental house consists generally of an aperture closed in with lattice work, (Ecc. xii. 3, A. V. "window;" Hos. xiii. 3, A. V. "chimney;" Cant. ii. 9; Judg. v. 28; Prov. vii. 6, A. V. "casement"). Glass has been introduced into Egypt in modern times as a protection against the cold of winter, but lattice-work is still the usual, and with the poor the only contrivance for closing the window.

Winds. That the Hebrews recognized the existence of four prevailing winds as issuing, broadly speaking, from the four cardinal points, north, south, east and west, may be inferred from their custom of using the expression "four winds" as equivalent to the "four quarters" of the hemisphere (Ez. xxxvii. 9, Dan. viii. 8; Zech. ii. 6; Matt. xxiv. 31). The North wind, or, as it was usually called, "the north," was naturally the coldest of the four (Ecc. i. 10; Job. xliii. 20), and its presence is hence invoked as favorable to vegetation in Cant. iv. 16). The north-west wind prevails from the autumnal equinox to the beginning of November, and the north wind from June to the equinox. The east wind crosses the sandy wastes of Arabia Deserta before reaching Palestine, and was hence termed "the wind of the wilderness" Job. i. 19; Jer. xliii. 24). It blows with violence, and is hence supposed to be used generally for any violent wind (Job. xxvii. 21, xxxviii. 24; Ps. xlviii. 7; Is. xxvii. 8; Ez. xxvii. 26). In Palestine the east wind prevails from February to June. The south wind which traverses the Arabian Peninsula before reaching Palestine, must necessarily be extremely hot (Job. xxxviii. 17; Luke xii. 55). The west and south-west winds reach Palestine loaded with moisture gathered from the Mediterranathough not explicitly, attributed. The natural history and culture of the vine are described under a separate head. [VINE.] The only other plant whose fruit is noticed as having been converted into wine was the pomegranate (Cant. viii. 2). In Palestine the vintage takes place in September, and is celebrated with great rejoicings. The ripe fruit was gathered in baskets (Jer. vi. 9), as represented in Egyptian paintings, and was carried to the wine-press. It was then placed in the upper one of the two vats or receptacles of which the wine-press was formed, and was subjected to the process of "treading," which has prevailed in all ages in Oriental and South-European countries (Neh. xii. 15;

SOWING SEED.

Job. xxiv. 11; Is. xvi. 10; Jer. xxv. 30, xlvi. 33; Am. ix. 13; Rev. xix. 15). As to the subsequent treatment of the wine, we have had but little information. Sometimes it was preserved in its unfermented state, and drunk as must, but more generally it was bottled off after fermentation, and, if it were designed to be kept for some time, a certain amount of lees was added to give it body (Is. xxv. 6). It has been disputed whether the Hebrew wine was fermented, but the impression produced on the mind is, that the Hebrew words indicating wine refer to fermented, intoxicating wine. The notices of fermentation are not very decisive. A certain amount of fermentation is implied in the distension of the leather bottles when new wine was placed in them, and which was liable to burst old bottles. It is very likely that new wine was preserved in the state of must by placing it in jars or bottles, and then burying it in the earth. The mingling that we read of in conjunction with wine may have been designed either to increase or to diminish the strength of the wine, according as spices or water formed the ingredient that was added. Mingled liquor was prepared for high festivals (Prov. ix. 2, 5), and occasions of excess (Prov. xxiii. 30; Is. v. 22). At the same time strength was not the sole object sought; the wine "mingled with myrrh," given to Jesus, was designed to deaden pain (Mark xv. 23), and the spiced pomgranate wine prepared by the bride (Cant. viii. 2) may well have been of a mild character. Wine-presses. From the scanty notices contained in the Bible, we gather that the wine-presses of the Jews consisted of two receptacles or vats placed at different elevations, in the upper one of which the grapes were trodden, while the lower one received the expressed juice. Ancient wine-presses, so constructed, are still to be seen in Palestine. Winnowing. [AGRICULTURE.]

Tarsus, Asia Minor.

Wisdom, The, of Solomon, a book of the Apocrypha, may be divided into two parts, the first (ch. 1-ix.) containing the doctrine of Wisdom in its moral and intellectual aspects; the second the doctrine of Wisdom as shown in history (ch. x-xix.). The first part contains the praise of Wisdom as the source of immortality, in contrast with the teaching of sensualists; and next, the praise of wisdom as the guide of practical and intellectual life, the stay of princes, and the interpreter of the universe.

The second part, again, follows the action of Wisdom summarily, as preserving God's servants, from Adam to Moses, and more particularly, in the punishment of the Egyptians Canaanites. Style and Language.—The literary character of the book is most remarkable and interesting. In the richness and freedom of its vocabulary it most closely resembles the Fourth Book of Maccabees, but it is superior to that fine declamation, both in power and variety of diction. The magnificent description of Wisdom (vii. 22-viii. 1) must rank among the noblest passages of human eloquence, and it would be perhaps impossible to point out any piece of equal length in the remains of classical antiquity more pregnant with noble thought, or more rich in expressive phraseology. Doctrinal Character. The theological teaching of the book offers in many respects, the nearest approach to the language and doctrines of Greek philosophy which is found in any Jewish writing up to the time of Philo. There is much in the views which it gives of the world, of man, and of the Divine Nature which springs rather from the combination or conflict of the Hebrew and Greek thought than from the independent development of Hebrew thought alone.

Wissard. Among people with whom writing is not common, the evidence of a transaction is given by some tangible memorial or significant ceremony.

Wissard. [DIVINATION; MAGIC.]

Wolf. There can be little doubt that the wolf of Palestine is the common Canis lupus, and that this is the animal so frequently mentioned in the Bible. Wolves were doubtless far more common in Biblical times than they are now, though they are occasionally seen by modern travelers.

Womans (Heb. isithan, female; Gr. gume, theia, female), (Rom. i. 26, 27). The position of women in the Hebrew commonwealth contrasts favorably with that which in the present day is assigned to them generally in Eastern countries. The most salient point of contrast in the usages of ancient as compared with modern Oriental society was the large amount of liberty enjoyed by women. Instead of imputed in a harem, or appearing in public with the face covered, the wives and maidens in ancient times mingled freely and openly with the other sex in the duties and amenities of ordinary life. Rebe-kah travelled on a camel with her face unveiled, until she came into the presence of her affianced (Gen. xxiv. 64, 65). Jacob saluted Rachel with a kiss in the presence of the shepherds (Gen. xxix. 11). Women played no inconsiderable part in public celebrations (Ex. xv. 20, 21; Judg. xi. 34). The odes of Deborah (Judg. v.) and of Hannah (1 Sam. ii. 1, &c.) exhibit a degree of intellectual cultivation which is in itself a proof of the position of the sex in that period. Women also occasionally held public offices, particularly that of prophetess or inspired teacher (Ex. xv. 20; 2 K. xxii. 14; Neh. vi. 14; Luke ii. 36; Judg. iv. 4). The management of household affairs devolved mainly on the women. The value of an active and virtuous housewife forms a frequent topic in the Book of Proverbs (xi. 16, xii. 4, xiv. 1, xxxi. 10, &c.) Her influence was of course proportionately great.

Wood. [FOREST.]

Wood was an article of the highest value among the Jews as the staple material for the manufacture of clothing (Lev. xiii. 47; Deut. xxii. 11; Job. xxxi. 20; Prov. xxxi. 13; Ez. xxxiv. 3; Hos. ii. 5). The importance of wool is incidentally shown by the notice that Meshah's tribute was paid in a certain number of rams "with the wool" (2 K. iii. 4). The wool of Damascus was highly prized in the mart of Tyre (Ez. xxvii. 18).

Woolen, Linen sad. The Israelites were forbidden to wear a garment mingled of woolen and linen. "A garment of mixtures [shaatnez] shall not come upon thee" (Lev. xix. 19); or, as it is expressed in Deut. xxii. 11, "Thou shalt not wear shaatnez, wool and flax together." The reason given by Josephus for the law which prohibited the wearing a garment woven of linen and woolen is, that such were worn by the priests alone.

Worm. The representative in the A. V. of several Hebrew words. Sar, which occurs Is. li. 8, probably denotes some particular species of moth, whose larva is injurious to wool. Kinnah (Ex. xvi. 20) points evidently to various kinds of maggots, and the larvae of insects which feed on putrefying animal matter, rather than to earth-worms. Tob' ah is applied in Deut. xxviii. 39 to some kinds of larvae destructive to the vines.

Wormwood occurs frequently in the Bible, and generally in a metaphorical sense, as in Deut. xxix. 18, where of the idolatrous Israelites, it is said, "Lest there be among you a root that beareth wormwood" (see also Prov. v. 4). In Jer. ix. 15, xxiii. 13; Lam. iii. 15, 19, wormwood is symbolical of bitter calamity and sorrow; unrighteous judges are said to "turn judgment into wormwood" (Am. v. 7). The Orientals typified sorrows, cruelties, and calamities of any kind by plants of a poisonous or bitter nature. The name of the star which at the sound of the "third angel's trumpet fell upon the rivers, was called Wormwood (Rev. iii. 11).

their other acquirements, the use of papyrus from the Egyptians, but of this we have no positive evidence. In the Bible, the only allusions to the use of papyrus are in 2 John 12, where chartes (A. V. "paper") occurs, which refers especially to papyrus paper, and 3 Macc. iv. 20, where chartaria is found in the same sense. Herodotus, after telling us that the Ionians learnt the art of writing from the Phoenicians, adds that they called their books skins, be-volumes. They were written upon with a pointed style (Job. xix. 24), sometimes of iron (Ps. xlv. 2; Jer. viii. 8, xvii. 1). For harder materials, a graver (Ex. xxxii. 4; Is. viii. 1) was employed. For parchment or skins a reed was used (3 John 13; 3 Macc. v. 20). The ink (Jer. xxxvi. 18), literally "black," (2 Cor. iii. 3; 2 John 12; 3 John 13), was of lamp-black dissolved in gall-juice. It was carried in an ink-stand, which was suspended at the girdle (Ez. ix. 2, 3), as is done at the present day in the East. To professional scribes there are allusions in Ps. xlv. 1; Ez. vii. 6; 2 Esdr. xiv. 24.

cause they made use of sheep-skins and goat-skins when short of paper. Parchment was used for the MSS. of the Pentateuch in the time of Josephus, and the membranae of 2 Tim. iv. 13, were skins of parchment. It was one of the provisions in the Talmud that the Law should be written on the skins of clean animals, tame or wild, or even of clean birds. The skins when written upon were formed into rolls (megilloth; Ps. xl. 8; comp. Is. xxxiv. 4; Jer. xxxv. 14; Ez. ii. 9; Zech. v. 1). They were rolled upon one or two sticks and fastened with a thread, the ends of which were sealed (Is. xix. 11; Dan. xii. 4; Rev. v. 1, &c.) The rolls were written on one side only, except in Ez. ii. 9; Rev. v. 1. They were divided into columns (A. V. "leaves," Jer. xxxvi. 23); the upper margin was to be not less than three fingers broad, the lower not less than four; and a space of two fingers' breadth was to be left between every two columns. But besides skins, which were used for the more permanent kinds of

Y. Yarn (Heb. מִקְוֵה, מִקְוֵה). The notice of yarn is contained in an extremely obscure passage in 1 K. x. 28 (2 Chr. i. 16). Year. The highest ordinary division of time. Two years were known to, and apparently used by, the Hebrews. (1.) A year of 360 days appears to have been in use in Noah's time, or at least in the time of the writer of the Flood, for in that narrative the interval from the 17th day of the 2d month to the 17th day of the 7th of the same year appears to be stated to be a period of 150 days (Gen. vii. 11, 24, viii. 3, 4, comp. 13), and as the 1st, 2d, 7th and 10th months of one year are mentioned (viii. 13, 14, vii. 11, vii. 4, 5), the first day of the 10th month of this year being separated from the 1st day of the 1st month of the next year by an interval of at least 54 days (vii. 5, 6, 10, 12, 13), we can only infer a year of 12 months. A year of 360 days is the rudest known. It is formed of 12 spurious lunar months, and was probably the parent of the lunar year of 354 days, and the Vague year of 365. The Hebrew year from the time of the Exodus was evidently lunar, though in some manner rendered virtually solar, and we may therefore infer that the lunar year is as old as the date of the Exodus. As the Hebrew year was not an Egyptian year and as nothing is said of its being new, save in its time of commencement, it was perhaps earlier in use among the Israelites, and either brought into Egypt by them, or borrowed from Shemitic settlers. (2.) The year used by the Hebrews from the time of the Exodus may be said to have been then instituted, since a current month, Abib, on the 14th day of which the first passover was kept, was then made the first day of the year. The essential characteristics of this year can be clearly determined, though we cannot fix those of any single year. It was essentially solar, for the offering of the productions of the earth, first-fruits, harvest-produce, and in-gathered fruits, was fixed to certain days of the year, two of tion of a thirteenth month whenever the twelfth ended too long before the equinox for the offering of the first-fruits to be made at the time fixed. The latter Jews had two commencements of the year, whence it is commonly but inaccurately said that they had two years, the sacred year and the civil. We prefer to speak of the sacred and civil reckonings. The sacred reckoning was that instituted at was that instituted at the Exodus, according to which the first month was Abib; by the civil reckoning, writing, tablets of wood covered with wax (Luke i. 63) served for the ordinary purposes of life. Several of these were fastened together, and formed which were in the periods of great feasts, the third itself a feast reckoned from one of the former days. But it is certain that the months were lunar, each commencing with the new moon. There must therefore have been some method of adjustment. The first point to be decided is how the commencement of each year was fixed. Probably the Hebrews determined their new year's day by the observation of heliacal or other star-risings or settings known to mark the right time of the solar year. It follows from the determination of the proper new moon of the first month, whether by observation of the first month was the seventh. The interval between the two commencements was just exactly half a year. The year was divided into—(1.) Seasons. Two seasons are mentioned in the Bible, "summer" and "winter." The former properly means the time for cutting fruits, the latter, that of gathering fruits; they are therefore originally rather summer and autumn than summer and winter. But that they signify ordinarily the two grand divisions of the year, the warm and cold seasons, it is evident from their use for the whole year in the expression "summer and winter" (Ps. lxxiv. 17; Zech. xiv. 8). The Hebrew term is also applied to asses (Judg. xix. 10) and mules (2 K. v. 17), and even to a couple of riders (Is. xxi. 7). (3.) The term is also applied to must have been a lucrative one in such a region, and it is not strange that Zacchaeus is mentioned by the Evangelists as a rich man. Son of Barachias, who, our Lord says, was slain by the Jews between the altar and the temple (Matt. xxiii. 35; Luke xi. 51). There has been much dispute who this Zacharias was. Many of the Greek Fathers have maintained that the father of John the Baptist is the person to whom our Lord alludes; but there can be little or no doubt that the allusion is to Zachariah, the son of Jehoiada (2 Chr. xxiv. 20, 21).

Zamsom'mima, the Ammonite name for the people who by others were called REPHTAIM (Deut. ii. 20 only). They are described as having originally been a powerful and numerous nation of giants.

Zano'ah. (1.) A town of Judah in the Shefelah or plain (Josh. xv. 34; Neh. iii. 13, xl. 30), possibly identical with Zanah. (2.) A town of Judah in the highland district (Josh. xv. 56).

Za'phon, a place mentioned in the enumeration of the allotment of the tribe of Gad (Josh. xiii. 27).

Zareathites, The, the inhabitants of Zareah or Zorah (1 Chr. ii. 53).

Zar'ephath, the residence of the prophet Elijah during the latter part of the drought (1 K. xvii. 9, 10). Beyond stating that it was near to, or dependent on Zidon, the Bible gives no clue to its position. It is mentioned by Obadiah (ver. 20), but merely as a Canaanite (that is, Phoenician) city. It is represented by the modern village of Sura-fud. Of the old town considerable indications remain.

Za'resh-sha'har, a place mentioned only in Josh. xiii. 19, in the catalogue of the town allotted to Reuben.

Zar'than. (1.) A place in the circle of Jordan, mentioned with Succoth (1 K. vii. 46). (2.) It is also named in the account of the passage of the Jordan by the Israelites (Josh. iii. 16). (3.) A place with the similar name of Zatanah (1 K. iv. 12). (4.) Further, Zerethah, named in 2 Chr. iv. 17 only in specifying the situation of the foundries for the brass-work of Solomon's Temple, is substituted for Zar'than; and this again is not possibly identical with the Zereth of the story of Gideon (Judg. vii. 24).

Zat'tu. The sons of Zattu were a family of laymen of Israel who returned with Zerubbabel (Ezr. ii. 8; Neh. viii. 13).

Za'na, one of the sons of Jonathan, a descendant of Jerahmeel (1 Chr. ii. 33).

Ze'bah and Zalmun'na, the two "kings" of Midian who commanded the great invasion of Palestine, and who finally fell by the hand of Gideon himself (Judg. vii. 5-21; Ps. lxxxiii. 11). While Oreb and Zeeb, two of the inferior leaders of the incursion had been slain, with a vast number of their people, by the Ephraimites, at the central fogs of the Jordan, the Jordan, the two kings had succeeded in making their escape by a passage farther to the north (probably the ford near Bedsheem), and thence by the Wady Yifti, through Gilead to Karkar a place which is not fixed, but which lay, doubtless, high up on the Hauran. Here they were reposing with 15,000 men, a mere remnant of their huge horde, when Gideon overtook them. The name of Gideon was still full of terror, and the Bedouins were entirely unprepared for his attack; they fled in dismay, and the two kings were taken. Such was the third act of the great tragedy. Two more remain: first the return down the long defiles leading to the Jordan, Gideon probably strode on foot by the side of his captives. They passed Penuel, where Jacob had seen the vision of the face of God; they crossed the rapid stream of the Jordan; they ascended the highlands west of the river, and at length reached Ophrah, the native village of their captor. Then at last the question which must have been on Gideon's tongue during the whole of the return found a vent: "What manner of men were they which ye slew at Tabor?" Up to this time the sheikhs may have believed that they were reserved for ransom; but these words once spoken, there could have been no doubt what their fate was to be. They met it like noble children of the desert, without fear or weakness. One request alone they make—that they may die by the sure blow of the hero himself; "and king and Hushai the Archite (2 Sam. xv. xvii.) When Absalom was dead, Zadok and Abiathar were the persons who persuaded the elders of Judah to invite David to return (2 Sam. xix. 11). When Adonijah, in David's old age, set up for king, and had persuaded Joab, and Abiathar the priest to join his party, Zadok was unmoved, and was employed by David to anoint Solomon to be king in his room (1 K. i.). And for this fidelity he was rewarded by Solomon, who "thrust out Abiathar from being priest unto the Lord," and "put in Zadok the priest" in his room (1 K. ii. 27, 35). From this time, however, we hear little of him. It is said in general terms, in the enumeration of Solomon's officers of state, that Zadok was the priest (1 K. iv. 4; 1 Chr. xxii. 22), but no single act of his is mentioned. Zadok and Abiathar were of nearly equal dignity (2 Sam. xv. 35, 36, xix. 11). The duties of the office were divided. Zadok administered before the Tabernacle at Gibeon (1 Chr. xvi. 39). Abiathar had the care of the Ark at Jerusalem; not, however, exclusively, as appears from 1 Chr. xv. 11; 2 Sam. xv. 24, 25, 29. (2.) According to the Genealogy of the high-priests in 1 Chr. vi. 12, there was a second Zadok, son of a second Ahitub, son of Amariah, about the time of king Ahaziah. (3.) are omitted. It has been conjectured that Zair has been identical with Zair.

He probably lived either at Bethsaida or in its immediate neighborhood. He appears only once in the Gospel narrative, namely in Matt. iv. 21, 22; Mark i. 19, 20, where he is seen in his boat with his two sons mending their nets.

Zeb'ulun (a habitation), the tenth of the sons of Jacob, according to the order in which their births are enumerated; the sixth and last of Leah (Gen. xxx. 20, xxxv. 23, xvi. 14; 1 Chr. ii. 1). His birth is recorded in Gen. xxx. 19, 20. Of the individual Zebulun nothing is recorded. The list of Gen. xvi. ascribes to him three sons, founders of the chief families of the tribe (comp. Num. xxvi. 26) at the time of the migration to Egypt. The head of the tribe at Sinai was Eliab son of Helon (Num. vii. 24); Shiloh, Elizaphan son of Parnach ib. xxiv. 25). Its representative amongst the spies was Gaddiel son of Zodi (xiii. 10). The tribe is not recorded to have taken part for evil or good, in any of the events of the wandering or the conquest. Judah, Joseph, Benjamin, had acquired the south and the centre of the country. To Zebulun fell one of the fairest of the remaining portions.

It is perhaps impossible, in the present state of our knowledge, exactly to define its limits; but the statement of Josephus is probably in the main correct, that it reached on the one side to the lake of Gennesareth, and on the other to Carmel and the Mediterranean. On the south it was bounded by Issachar, who lay in the great plain or valley of the Kishon; on the north it had Naphtali and Asher. The fact recognized by Josephus that Zebulun extended to the Mediterranean, though not mentioned or implied, as far as we can discern, in the lists of Joshua and Judges, is alluded to in the Blessing of Jacob (Gen. xlix. 13). Situated so far from the centre of government, Zebulun remains throughout the history, with one exception, in the obscurity which envelops the whole of the northern tribes. That exception, however, is a remarkable one. The conduct of the tribe during the struggle with Sisera, when they fought with desperate valor side by side with their brethren of Naphtali, was such as to draw down the especial praise of Deborah, who singles them out from all the other tribes (Judg. v. 18). A similar reputation is alluded to in the mention of the tribes among those who attended the inauguration of David's reign at Hebron (1 Chr. xii. 33). The same passage, however, shows that they did not neglect the arts of peace (ver. 40). We are nowhere directly told that the people of Zebulun were carried off to Assyria.

Zechari'ah. (1.) The eleventh in order of the twelve minor prophets. He is called in his prophecy the son of Berechiah and the grandson of Iddo, whereas in the Book of Ezra v. 1, vi. 14) he is said to have been the son of Iddo. He seems to have entered upon his office while yet young (Zech. ii. 4), and must have been born in Babylon, whence he returned with the first caravan of Exiles under Zerubbabel and Jeshua. It was in the eighth month, in the second year of Darius that he first publicly discharged his office. In this he acted in concert with Haggai. Both prophets had the same great object before them; both directed all their energies to the building of the Second Temple. To their influence we find the rebuilding of the Temple in a great measure ascribed. It is impossible not to see of how great moment, under such circumstances, and for the discharge of the special duty with which he was intrusted, would be the priestly origin of Zechariah. The foundations of the Temple had indeed been laid, but that was all (Ezr. v. 16). Discouraged by the opposition which they had encountered at first, the Jewish colony had begun to build, and were not able to finish; and even when the letter came from Darius sanctioning the work, and promising his protection, they showed no hearty disposition to engage in it. At such a time, no more fitting instrument could be found to rouse the people, whose hearts had grown cold, than one who united to the authority of the Prophet the zeal and the traditions of a sacerdotal family. "And the elders of the Jews builded," it is said, "and they prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah the son of Iddo" (Ezr. vi. 14). If the later Jewish accounts may be trusted Zechariah, as well as Haggai, was a member of the Great Synagogue. The genuine writings of Zechariah help us but little in our estimation of his character. Some faint traces, however, we may observe in them of his education in Babylon. He leans avowedly on the authority of the older prophets, and copies their expressions. Jeremiah especially seems to have been his favorite; and hence the Jewish saying, that "the spirit of Jeremiah dwelt in Zedekiah." But in what may be called the peculiarities of his prophecy, he approaches more nearly to Ezekiel and Daniel. Like them he delights in visions; like them he uses symbols and allegories, rather than the bold figures and metaphors which lend so much force and beauty to the writings of the earlier prophets; like them he beholds angels ministering before Jehovah, and fulfilling his behests on the earth. He is the only one of the prophets who speaks of Satan. That some of these peculiarities are owing to his Chaldaean education can hardly be doubted. Even in the form of the visions a careful criticism might perhaps discover some traces of the Prophets early training. Generally speaking, Zechariah's style is pure, and remarkably free from Chaldaisms. The Book or Zechariah, in its existing form, consists of three principal parts, chs. i.-viii., chs. ix.-xi., chs. xii.-xiv. (1.) The first of these divisions is allowed by all critics to be the genuine work of Zechariah the son of Iddo. It consists first of a short introduction or preface, in which the prophet announces his commission; then of a series of visions, descriptive of all those hopes and anticipations of which the building of the Temple was the pledge and sure foundation; and finally of a discourse delivered two years later, in reply to questions respecting the observance of certain established fast. (1.) The short introductory oracle (ch. i. 1-6) is a warning voice from the past, and manifestly rests upon the former warnings of Haggai. (2.) In the dream of the night there passed before the eyes of the prophet a series of visions (ch. i. 7-vi. 15). These visions are obscure, and accordingly the prophet asks their meaning. The interpretation is given by an angel who knows the mind and will of Jehovah. (1.) In the first vision (ch. i. 7-15) the prophet sees in a valley of myrtles a rider upon a roan horse, accompanied by others who, having been sent forth to the four quarters of the earth, had returned with the tidings that the whole earth was at rest (with reference to Hag. ii. 20). Hereupon the angel asks how long this state of things shall last, and is assured that the indifference of the heathen shall cease, and that the Temple shall be built in Jerusalem. (2.) The second vision (ch. ii. 1-17, A. V. i. 18-ii. 13) explains how the promise of the first is to be fulfilled. The old prophets, in foretelling the happiness and glory of the times which should succeed the Captivity in Babylon, had made a great part of that happiness and glory to consist in the gathering together again of the whole dispersed nation in the land given to their fathers. This vision was designed to teach that the expectation thus raised—the return of the dispersed of Israel—should be fulfilled. (3.) The next two visions (iii., iv.) are occupied with the Temple, and with the principal persons on whom the hopes of the returned exiles rested. The permission granted for the rebuilding of the Temple had no doubt stirred afresh the malice and animosity of the enemies of the Jews. Joshua the high-priest had been singled out, it would seem, as the special object of attack, and perhaps formal accusations had already laid against him before the Persian court. The prophet in vision, sees him summoned before a higher tribunal, and solemnly acquitted, despite the charges of the Satan or Adversary. This is done with the forms still usual in an Eastern court. (4.) The last vision (v.) supposes that all opposition to the building of the Temple shall be removed. This sees the completion of the work. The two next visions (v. 1-11) signify that the land in which the sanctuary has just been erected, shall be purged of all its pollutions. (5.) First, the curse is recorded against wickedness in the whole land (v. 3). (6.)

CATAPULTA PREPARED FOR THE DISCHARGE OF AN ARROW.

Next, he unclean thing, whether in the form of idolatry or any other abomination, shall be utterly removed. (7.) And now the night is waning fast, and the morning is about to dawn; chriots and horses appear, issuing from between two brazen mountains, the horses like those in the first vision; and these receive their several commands, and are sent forth to execute the will of Jehovah in the four quarters of the earth. Thus, then, the cycle of visions is completed. Scene after scene is unrolled till the whole glowing picture is presented to the eye. All enemies crushed; the land re-peopled, and Jerusalem girt as with a wall of fire; the Temple rebuilt, more truly splendid than of old, because more abundantly filled with a divine presence; the leaders of the people assured in the most signal manner of the divine protection; all wickedness solemnly sentenced, and the land forever purified of it. Such is the magnificent panorama of hope which the Prophet displays to his countrymen. Immediately on these visions there follows a symbolical act. Three Israelites had just returned from Babylon, bring with them rich gifts to Jerusalem, apparently as contributions to the Temple, and had been received in the house of Josiah the son of Zephaniah. Thither the Prophet is commanded to go—whether still in a dream or not, is not very clear—and to employ the silver and gold of their offerings for the service of Jehovah. He is to make of them two crowns, and to place these on the head of Joshua the high-priest—a sign that in the Messiah who should build the Temple, the kingly and priestly offices should be united. (3.) From this time, for a space of nearly two years, the Prophet's voice was silent, or his words have not been recorded. But in the fourth year of king Darius, in the fourth day of the ninth month, there came a deputation of Jews to his Temple, anxious to know whether the fast-days which had been instituted during the seventy years' captivity were still to be observed. It is remarkable that this question should have been addressed to priests and prophets conjointly in the Temple. This close alliance between two classes hitherto so separate, and often so antagonistic, was one of the most hopeful circumstances of the times. Still Zechariah, as chief of the Prophets, has the decision of this question. In language worthy of his position and his office—language which reminds us of one of the most striking passages of his great predecessor (Is. lviii. 5-7), he lays down the same principle, that God loves mercy rather than fasting and truth and righteousness rather than sackcloth and a sad countenance. Again he foretells, but not now in vision, the glorious times that are near at hand when Jehovah shall dwell in the midst of them, and Jerusalem he called a city of truth viii. 1-15). Again he declares that "truth and peace" (vers. 16, 19) are the bulwarks of national prosperity. And he announces, in obedience to the

His prophecy concludes with a prediction that Jerusalem shall be the centre of religious worship to all nations of the earth (viii, 16-23). 11. The remainder of the Book consists of two sections of about equal length, ix.-xv., xvi.-xviii., each of which has an inscription. (1.) In the first section he threatens Damascus and the sea-coast of Palestine with misfortune, but declares that Jerusalem shall be protected. The Jews who are still in captivity shall return to their land. The Termaphim and false closes with a grand and stirring picture. All nations are gathered together against Jerusalem, and seem already sure of their prey. Half of their cruel work has been accomplished, when Jehovah himself appears on behalf of his people. He goes forth to war against the adversaries of his people. He establishes his kingdom over all the earth. All nations that are still left shall come up to Jerusalem, as the great centre of religious worship, and the city from that day forward shall be a holy city. Such prophets may indeed have spoken lies, but upon these will the Lord execute judgment, and then he will look with favor upon his people, and bring back both Judah and Ephraim from their captivity. The possession of Gilead and Lebanon is again promised as the special portion of Ephraim; and both Egypt and Assyria shall be broken and humbled. (2.) thew. He rests his opinion partly on the authority of St. Matthew, and partly on the contents of the later chapters, which he considers require a date earlier than the exile. And he was the first to advocate the theory that the last six chapters of Zechariah are the work of two distinct prophets. (2.) times, when Jerusalem should be hard pressed by enemies. But in that day Jehovah shall come to save them, and all the nations which gather themselves against Jerusalem shall be destroyed. Many modern critics maintain that the later chapters from the 9th to the 14th, were written by some other prophet, who lived before the exile. The prophecy formed against him by the king, and was stoned in the court of the Temple. He is probably the same as the "Zacharias son of Barachias," who was slain between the Temple and the altar (Matt. xxiii. 35).

He stood at Ezra's left and when he expounded the law to the people (Neh. viii. 4). (11.) One of the family of Elam who had married a foreign wife, after the Captivity (Ezr. x. 26). (12.) Ancestor of Athabath, or Uthai (Neh. xi. 4). (13.)

Possibly the same as Zechariah the Prophet, the son of Iddo. (16.) One of the priests, son of Jonathan, who blew the trumpets at the dedication of the city wall by Ezra and Nehemiah (Neh. xii. 35, 41). (17.) A

One of the sons of Jehoshaphat (2 Chr. xxi. 2). (24.) A prophet in the reign of Uzziab, who appears to have acted as the king's counsellor, but of whom nothing is known (2 Chr. xxvi. 5). (25.) The father of Abijah, or Abi, Hezekiah's mother (2 Chr. xxix. 1). (26.) One of the family of Asaph in the reign of Hezekiah (2 Chr. xxix. 13). (27.) One of the rulers of the Temple in the reign of Josiah (2 Chr. xxxv. 8). (28.) The son of Jeberchiah who was taken by the Prophet Isaiah as one of the "faithful witnesses to record," when he wrote concerning Maher-shallah-hash-baz (Is. viii. 2). He may have been the Levite of the same name, who in the reign of Hezekiah assisted in the purification of the Temple (2 Chr. xxxix. 13). Another conjecture is, that he is the same as Zechariah, the father of Abijah, the queen of Ahaz.

THE OSTRICH OF THE DESERT.

Ze'dad, one of the landmarks on the north border of the land of Israel, as promised by Moses (Num. xxiv. 8), and as restored by Ezekiel (xlvii. 15). A place named Siddai exists to the east of the northern extremity of the chain of Antilibanus, about 50 miles E. N. E. of Baalbec. This may be identical with Zedad.

Zedekiah. (1.) The last king of Judah and Jerusalem. He was the son of Josiah by his wife Hamutal, and therefore own brother to Jehoahaz (2 K. xxiv. 18; comp. xxiii. 31). His original name was MATTANIAH, which was changed to Zedekiah by Nebuchadnezzar, when he carried off his nephew Jehoiachin to Babylon and left him on the throne of Jerusalem. Zedekiah was but 21 years old when he was thus placed in charge of an impoverished kingdom (N. C. 597). His history is contained in a short sketch of the events of his reign given 2 K. xxiv. 17-xxv. 7, and, with some trifling variations, in Jer. xxxix. 1-7, lii. 1-11, together with the still shorter summary in 2 Chr. xxxvi. 10, &c.; and also in Jer. xxi. xxiv., xxvii., xxviii., xxix., xxxii., xxxiii., xxxiv.

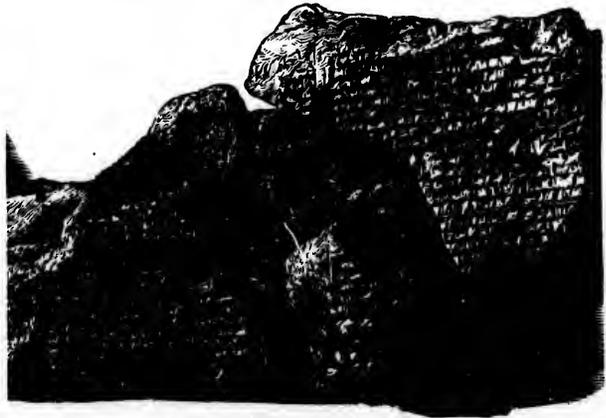

xxxvii., xxxviii., and Ez. xvi. 11-21. From these it is evident that Zedekiah was a man not so much bad at heart as weak in will. It is evident from Jer. xxvii. and xxviii. that the earlier portion of Zedekiah's reign was marked by an agitation throughout the whole of Syria against the Babylonian yoke. Jerusalem seems to have taken the lead, since in the fourth year of Zedekiah's reign, we find ambassadors from all the neighboring kingdoms—Tyre, Sidon, Edom, and Moab—at his court to consult as to the steps to be taken. This happened either during the king's absence or immediately after his return from Babylon, whether he went on some errand, the nature of which is not named, but which may have been an attempt to blind the eyes of Nebuchadnezzar to his contemplated revolt (Jer. li. 59). The first act of overt rebellion of which any record survives was the formation of an alliance with Egypt of itself, equivalent to a declaration of enmity with Babylon. As a natural consequence it brought on Jerusalem an immediate invasion of the Chaldeans. The mention of this event in the Bible, though sure, is extremely slight, and occurs only in Jer. xxxvii. 5-11, xxxviii. 21, and Ez. xvii. 15-20; but Josephus (x. 7, § 3) relates it more fully, and gives the date of its occurrence, namely, the eighth year of Zedekiah. It appears that Nebuchadnezzar, being made aware of Zedekiah's defection, either by the non-payment of the tribute or by other means, at once set an army to ravage Judaea. This was done, and the whole country reduced, except Jerusalem and two strong places in the western plain, Lachish and Azekah, which still held out (Jer. xxiv. 7. In the mean time Pharaoh had moved to the assistance of his ally. On hearing of his approach, the Chaldeans at once raised the siege and advanced to meet him. The nobles seized the moment of respite to reassert their power over the king. How long the Babylonians were absent from Jerusalem we are not told. All we certainly know is, that on the tenth day of the tenth month of Zedekiah's ninth year, the Chaldeans were again before the walls (Jer. lii. 4). From ferred to preserve the life of Jeremiah from the vengeance of the princes (xxxviii. 7-13), and then occurred the interview between the king and the prophet, which affords so good a clew to the condition of abject dependence into which a long course of opposition had brought the weak-minded monarch. While the king was hesitating the end was rapidly coming nearer. The city was indeed reduced to the last extremity. The bread had for long been consumed (Jer. xxxviii. 9), and all the terrible expedients had been tried to which the wretched inhabitants of a besieged town are forced to resort in such cases. At last, after sixteen dreadful months, the catastrophe arrived. It was on the ninth day of the fourth month, about the middle of July, about mid-night, as Josephus with careful minuteness informs us, that the breach in those stout and venerable walls was effected. The moon, nine days old, had gone down below the hills which form the western edge of the basin of Jerusalem, and was at any rate too low to illuminate the utter darkness which reigns in the narrow lanes of an eastern town, where the inhabitants retire early to rest, and where there are but few windows to emit light from the interior of the houses. The wretched remnants of the army quitted the city in the dead of night; and as the Chaldaean army entered the city at one end, the king and his wives fled from it by the opposite gate. They took the road towards the Jordan. On the way they were met and recognized by some of the Jews who had formerly deserted to the Chaldeans. By them the intelligence was communicated, and, as often as the dawn of day permitted it, swift pursuit was made. The king's party were overtaken near Jericho, and carried to Nebuchadnezzar, who was then at Riblah, at the upper end of the Valley of Lebanon. Nebuchadnezzar, with a refinement of cruelty characteristic of those cruel times, ordered the sons of Zedekiah to be killed before him, and lastly his own eyes to be thrust out (B. C. 586). He was then loaded with Brazen fetters, and at a later period taken to Babylon, where he died. (2) Son of Chenaanah, a prophet at the court of Ahab, head, or if not head, virtual leader of the college. He appears but once, viz: as spokesman when the prophets as consulted by Ahab on the result of his proposed expedition to Ramoth-Gilead (1 K. xxii.; 2 Chr. xviii.) Zedekiah had prepared himself for the interview with a pair of iron horns, after the symbolic custom of the prophets (comp. Jer. xlii., xix.), the horns of the reem, or buffalo, which was the recognized emblem of the tribe of Ephraim (Deut. xxxiii. 17). With these, in the interval before Micaiah's arrival, he illustrated the manner in which Ahab should drive the Syrians before him. When Micaiah appeared, and had delivered his prophecy, Zedekiah sprang forward and struck him a blow on the face, accompanying it with a taunting sneer. For this he is threatened by Micaiah in terms which are hardly intelligible to us, but which evidently allude to some personal danger to Zedekiah. Josephus relates that after Micaiah had spoken, Zedekiah again came forward and denounced him as false, on the ground that his prophecy contradicted the prediction of Elijah, that Ahab's blood should be licked up by the dogs in the field of Naboth of Jezreel; and as a further proof that he was an impostor, he struck him, daring him to do what Iddo, in somewhat similar circumstances, had done to Jeroboam—viz: wither his hand. As to the question of Zedekiah and his fellows were, whether prophets of Jehovah or of some false deity, it seems hardly possible to entertain any doubt. (3.) The son of Maaseiah, a false prophet in Babylon (Jer. xxix. 21, 22). He was denounced in the letter of Jeremiah for having, with Ahab the son of Kolaiah, buoyed up the people with false hopes, and for profane and flagitious conduct. Their names were to become a by-word, and their terrible fate a warning. (4.) The son of Hananlah, one of the princes of Judah in the time of Jeremiah (Jer. xxxvi. 12).

Zeeb, one of the two "princes" of Midian in the great invasion of Israel. He is always named with OREB (Judg. vii. 25, viii. 3; Ps. lxxxiii. 11). Zeeb and Oreb were not slain at the first rout of the Arabs, but at a later stage of the struggle, probably in crossing the Jordan at a ford farther down the river.

Ze'lah, a city in the allotment of Benjamin (Josh. xviii. 28), contained the family tomb of Kish, the father of Saul (2 Sam. xxi. 14).

Ze'lek, an Ammonite, one of David's guard (2 Sam. u c i xxiii. 37; 1 Chr. xi. 39).

Zelo'phehad, son of Hephher, son of Gilead, son of Machir, son of Manasseh (Josh. xvii. 3). He was apparently the second son of his father Hephher (1 Chr. vii. 15). Zelophehad came out of Egypt with Moses, but died in the wilderness, as did the whole of that generation (Num. xiv. 35, xxvii. 3). On his death, without male heirs, his five daughters, just after the second numbering in the wilderness, came before Moses and Eleazar to claim the inheritance of their father in the tribe of Manasseh. The claim was admitted by divine direction (Num. xxvi. 33, xxvi. 1-11).

Zelo'tes, the epithet given to the Apostle Simon to distinguish him from Simon Peter (Luke vi. 15). [CANAANITE; SIMON 5.]

Zel'sah, a place named once only (1 Sam. x. 2), as within the boundary of Benjamin, close to Rachel's sepulchre.

Zemara'ia, a town in the allotment of Benjamin (Josh. xviii. 22), perhaps identical with Mount Zemaraim (mentioned in 2 Chr. xlii. 4 only), which was "in Mount Ephraim," that is to say, within the general district of the highlands of that great tract (2 Chr. xlii. 4).

Zem'arito, The, one of the Hamite tribes who, in the genealogical table of Gen. x. (ver. 18) and 1 Chron. i. (ver. 16), are represented as "sons of Canaan."

Nothing is certainly known of this ancient tribe. The old interpreters place them at Emessa, the modern Huns.

Zem'ra, one of the sons of Becher, the son of Benjamin (1 Chr. vii. 8).

Ze'naa, a town in the allotment of Judah, situated in the district of the Shefelah (Josh. xv. 37). It is probably identical with Zaanan (Mic. i. 11).

Ze'nas, a believer, and, as may be inferred from the context a preacher of the Gospel, who is mentioned in Tit. iii. 13 in connection with Apollos. He is further described as "the lawyer." It is impossible to determine whether Zenas was a Roman juriconsult or a Jewish doctor.

Zephant'ah. (1.) The ninth in order of the twelve minor prophets. His pedigree is traced to his fourth ancestor, Hezekiah (i. 1), supposed to be the celebrated king of that name. In chap. i. the utter desolation of Judaea is predicted as a judgment for idolatry and neglect of the Lord, the luxury of the princes, and the violence and deceit of their dependants (3-9). The prosperity, security and insolence of the people are contrasted with the horrors of the day of wrath (10-18). Ch. ii. contains a call to reformation and to implore him to intercede for the people (Jer. xxxvii. 3). On the capture of Jerusalem he was taken and slain at Riblah (Jer. lii. 24, 27; 2 K. xxv. 18, 21). (3.) Father of Josiah 2 (Zech. vi. 10), and of Hnan, according to the reading of the received text of Zech. vi. 14.

pentance (1-3), with prediction of the ruin of the cities of the Philistines, and the restoration of the house of Judah after the visitation (4-7). Other enemies of Judah, Mo'ab, Ammon, are threatened with perpetual destruction (5-15). In ch. iii. the prophet addresses Jerusalem, which he reproves for its sinfulness and threatens to punish the issue of the city by the Chaldeans (Jer. xxi. 1).

sharply for vice and disobedience (1-7). He then concludes with a series of promises (8-20). The chief Characteristics of this book are the unity and harmony of the composition, the grace, energy and dignity of its style, and the rapid and effective alternations of threats and promises. The general tone of the last portion is Messianic, but without any specific reference to the person of our Lord. The date of the book is given in the inscription; viz: the reign of Josiah, from 642 to 611 B. C. It is most probable, moreover, that the prophecy was delivered before the 18th year of Josiah. (2.) The son of Maaseiah (Jer. xxi. 1) and sagan or second priest in the reign of Zedekiah. He succeeded Jehoiada (Jer. xxix. 25, 26), and was probably a ruler of the temple whose office it was, among others, to punish the pretenders to the gift of prophecy. In this capacity he was appealed to by Shenniah the Ne-

Zerah. (1.) A son of Reuel, son of Esau (Gen. xxxvi. 13; 1 Chr. i. 37), and one of the "dukes," phylarchs, of the Edomites (Gen. xxxvi. 17). (2.) Less properly, ZARAÏT, twin son, with his elder brother Pharez, of Judah and Tamar (Gen. xxxviii. 30; 1 Chr. ii. 6; Matt. i. 3). (3.) Son of Simeon (1 Chr. iv. 24). (4.) A Gershonite Levite, son of Iddo or Adaiah (1 Chr. vi. 21, 41 [1Eh. vi. 26]). (5.) The Ethiopian or Cushite, an invader of Judah, defeated by Asa about B. C. 941. In the 14th year of Asa, Zerah, the Ethiopian with a mighty army of a million, invaded his kingdom, and advanced unopposed in the field as far as Maresah.

The invading army had swarmed across the border and devoured the Philistine fields before Asa could meet it. "In the Valley of Zephathah at Maresah," the two armies met. We cannot perfectly determine the site of the battle. From the prayer of Asa we may judge that, when he came upon the invading army, he saw its hugeness, and so that, as he descended through a valley, it lay spread out beneath him. The Egyptian monuments enable us to picture the general disposition of Zerah's army. The chariots formed the first corps in a single or double line; behind them, massed in phalanxes, were heavy-armed troops: probably on the flanks stood archers and horsemen in lighter formations. No doubt the Ethiopian, confident in his numbers, disdained to attack the Hebrews or clear the heights, but waited in the broad valley, or the plain. Asa's prayer before the battle is full of the noble faith of the age of the Judges. The chariots, broken by the charge and with horses made unmanageable by flights of arrows, must have been forced back upon the cumbersome host behind. "So the Lord smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah; and the Ethiopians fled. And Asa and the people that [were] with him pursued them into Gerar; and [or 'for'] the Ethiopians were overthrown, that could not recover themselves." So complete was the overthrow, that the Hebrews could capture and spoil the cities around Gerah, which must have been in alliance with Zerah. The defeat of the Egyptian army is without parallel in the history of the Jews. On no other occasion did an Israelite army meet an army of one of the great powers and defeat it. Ze'rad (Deut. ii. 13, 14), or Za'rad (Num. xxi. 12), a brook or valley running into the Dead Sea near its S. in the first year of Cyrus. The history of Zerubbabel in the Scriptures is as follows: In the first of Cyrus he was living at Babylon, and was the recognized prince of Judah in the Captivity, what in later times was called "the Prince of the Captivity," or "the Prince." On the issuing of Cyrus's decree he immediately availed himself of it, and placed himself at the head of those of his countrymen "whose spirit God had raised to go up to build the house of the Lord which is in Jerusalem." It is probable that he was in the king of Babylon's service, both from his having, like Daniel and the three children, received a Chaldee name [SHESTIBAZZAR], and from the fact that he was appointed by the Persian king to the office of governor of Judaea. On arriving at Jerusalem, Zerubbabel's great work, which he set about immediately, was the rebuilding of the Temple. In the second month of the second year of their return, the foundation was laid with all the pomp which they could command. The Samaritans or Cutheans put in a claim to join with the Jews in rebuilding the Carmel and Juttah (Josh. xv. 55). The place is immortalized by its connection with David (1 Sam. xxvi. 14, 15, 24, xxvi. 2).

Zi'phah. Another son of Jehaleleel (1 Chr. iv. 16). Zi'phites. The. 1 Sam. xxiii. 19; xxvi. 1.

Ziph'on. A point in the north boundary of the Promised Land as specified by Moses (Num. xxxiv. 9).

Zip'or. Father of Balak king of Moab (Num. xxii. 2, 4, 10, 16, xxxiii. 18; Josh. xxiv. 9; Judg. xi. 25). Whether he was the "former king of Moab" alluded to in Num. xxi. 26, we are not told.

Zippo'rah. Daughter of Reuel or Jethro, the priest of Midian, wife of Moses, and mother of his two sons Gershom and Eliezer (Ex. ii. 21, iv. 25, xviii. 2; comp. 6). The only incident recorded in her life is that of the circumcision of Gershom (iv. 24-26).

Zith'ri, properly "Sithri;" one of the sons of Uziel, the son of Kohath (Ex. vi. 22). In Ex. vi. 21, "Zithri" should be "Zichri," as in the A. V. of 1611.

Zis, The Cliff of. The pass by which the horde of Moabites, Ammonites, and Mehunim, made their way up from the shores of the Dead Sea to the wilderness of Judah near Tekoa (2 Chr. xx. 16 only; comp. 20). It was the pass of Ain Jaly—the very same route which is taken by the Arabs in their marauding expeditions at the present day.

Zi'za. (1.) Son of Shippi, a chief of the Simeonites in the reign of Hezekiah (1 Chr. iv. 37). (2.) Son of Rehoboam by Maachah the granddaughter of Absalom (2 Chr. xl. 20).

Zi'zah, a Gershonite Levite, second son of Shimei (1 Chr. xxiii. 11); called ZINA in ver. 10.

Zo'an (departure). An ancient city of Lower Egypt, called Tanis by the Greeks. It stood on the eastern bank of the Tropic branch of the Nile. Its name indicates a place of departure from a country, and hence it has been identified with Avaris, the capital of the Shepherd dynasty in Egypt. We read in the book of Numbers that "Hebron was built seven years before Zoan in Egypt" (xiii. 22), which tends to establish the identity of Avaris and Zoan, since we know that Hebron was already built in Abraham's time, and the Shepherd-invasion may be dated about the same period. Supposing that the Pharaoh who oppressed the Israelites belonged to the Shepherds, it would be natural for him to reside at Zoan; and this city is mentioned in connection with the Plagues in such a manner as to leave no doubt that it is the city spoken of in the narrative in Exodus as that where Pharaoh dwelt (Ps. lxxviii. 42, 43). Tanis gave its name to the xxist and xxliid dynasties, and hence its mention in Isaiah (xix. 13, xxx. 4), "I will set fire in Zoan" (xxx. 14), where it occurs among the cities to be in the account of the death of Moses as one of the landmarks which bounded his view from Pisgah (Deut. xxxiv. 3), and it appears to have been known in the time both of Isaiah (xv. 5) and Jeremiah (xlviii. 34).

tended thence north-east and east, towards, if not even to, the Euphrates. We first hear of Zobah in the time of Saul, when we find it mentioned as a separate country, governed apparently by a number of kings who owned no common head or chief (1 Sam. xiv. 47).

A COMPLETE HISTORY OF THE COINS AND DENOMINATIONS OF MONEY

USED IN THE BIBLE.

WITH TABLES OF THEIR VALUE REDUCED TO MONEY OF THE UNITED STATES, COMPILED FROM THE LATEST AND BEST ENGLISH AND AMERICAN AUTHORITIES.

THE first mention we find of the use of silver in the Bible is in Genesis xx. 16; and in Genesis xxiii. 16 we find distinct mention not only of the metal, but of its use as money, and also the denomi-

Throughout the Old Testament we find the money of Egypt and of Canaan mentioned without distinction, and hence may infer that the currency of the two countries was interchangeable, if not the same. In old Egyptian inscriptions we find representations of money in the form of rings. This was probably its earliest form; but as in every transaction mention is made of weighing it, we may reasonably conclude that the rings did not represent any fixed amount, and were not properly pieces of silver of the weight of the shekel, with certain marks to indicate its denomination and value, followed. The first allusion to Jewish coinage is found in the Apocrypha, where it is related, in 1 Maccabees xv. 6, that Simon was granted permission to coin money with his own stamp; and it is probable that he was the first to issue a distinctive Jewish coin—the silver shekel and half-shekel, called the beka, though this point is disputed. The standard or sacred shekel was kept in the sanctuary, and by this the coinage was regulated.

Afterward followed the subdivision of the shekel, and we find mentioned the fourth part, to which the name susah has been given; and the twentieth part, called the gerah, which last was of copper.

For large amounts, the maneh, equal to sixty shekels, was used; and the talent, equal to three thousand shekels.

The shekel and its multiples, the maneh and talent, were also used to denominate gold value, which, during the time they were in use, was ten times that of silver.

The above are the only distinctively Jewish coins and money terms.

The following table gives their weights in Troy grains and values in United States money:

In addition to the Jewish coins, we find those of other nations with whom the Jews held commercial relations, were current among them, and are mentioned in the Bible. The chief of these are the Greek and the Roman.

The drachm in Greek coinage is the unit of calculation, though the standard of value is the talent. As there is some diversity in the use of the term talent, we will explain that in the Old Testament it is universally used to indicate the Jewish talent of 3000 shekels. Among the Greeks were three standard talents—the Attic, the Æginetan, and the Macedonian, or earlier Phœnician. The Attic was the one in most common use, as it was adopted by the two influential cities, Athens and Corinth.

The talent equalled six thousand drachms in value; the mina, one hundred drachms; the stater, or tetradrachm, four drachms; and the didrachm, two drachms. Besides these, there were the small copper coins—the obolus, and the lepton or mite.

The annexed table gives the weight and the value of each:

Roman coinage was used very extensively in Palestine after the subjugation to the Roman Empire, and we find it mentioned frequently in the New Testament. The Romans themselves usually reckoned by sestertii up to one thousand. They, too, used the term talent, though not very exactly as applied to money. Besides these, there were the denarius, of which frequent mention is made in the New Testament; the quinarius, one-half denarius; and the assarius, one-tenth denarius; the sestertius being about one-fourth the assarius. It is evident that the

Besides these systems of coinage, we find mention of some other denominations which were current among the Jews at different periods. In several passages of both the Old and New Testaments we find the NOTE.—A coin, if genuine, is often the very best evidence concerning ancient persons and places, which cannot be denied or explained away. Even if they were forged, in some age near the true date, they have still a value according to their antiquity. It is often found that ancient records are confirmed by coins, as for instance in the case of the port of Cenchrea, where the coin of Corinth confirms the text in Acts xviii. 18, and Rom. xvi. 1.

The frequent allusions to burying money and treasure was confirmed as true records a few years ago by the discovery of some earthen jars in a garden at Sidon, containing nearly 8000 pieces of gold, the coinage of Philip of Macedon, and Alexander, his son. There were no banks or places of secure deposit, and the only safety was in burying money or treasure in some secret place, as alluded to in Prov. ii. 4; and also in Jer. xli. 8, where the treasures hid were produced.

BIOGRAPHIES OF THE WRITERS

AND OF

SOME OF THE PROMINENT MEN AND WOMEN OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

JOHN THE BAPTIST.

This most distinguished personage was the last of the prophets. His mission was to herald the coming of "Jesus Christ, the Son of God." His mother's name was Elizabeth, and she was of the lineage of Aaron. His father's name was Zacharias, and he was a priest, of the course of Abia. He was by six months the senior of the Messiah. He grew to manhood in the mountains of Judea, was clad in the coarse camel's-cloth mantle of the old Hebrew prophets, and, like them, he wore the hide girdle, and ate locusts and wild honey for his daily food. He drank "neither wine nor strong drink," and was "filled with the Holy Ghost," from his birth.

John's home was the wilderness, and he broke forth upon the world as "the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of Jehovah." All his manners were a contrast to the degenerate priesthood of his time. Anointed Royalty was to come among men, and this stern, rough messenger came to make the announcement. There was no mistaking his meaning, for he was fearless, and his discourses were like the heavy strokes of the midnight alarm-bell. For Pharisee or Sadducee, soldier or publican, he had the same ponderous sledge-hammer blows, and there was no escaping them. He came in "the spirit and power of Elias." Many mistook John for the Messiah, but he steadily affirmed, "I am not the Christ."

In John, "the Law and the Prophets" ended. His dispensation was the vestibule of the great Christian temple, and his "baptism was from heaven," and lay just before the open door. He was the "friend of the Bridegroom, and rejoiced greatly because of the Bridegroom's voice." The valley shall be exalted, and the mountain shall be made low, because "the glory of Jehovah shall be revealed."

The Baptist was decapitated in prison, by the artifice of false and cruel women. The rebukes of John had stung the two adulterers to the heart, and Herodias was capable of stooping to anything that she might gratify her revenge. A prison and fetters are familiar arguments of kings when their vices are exposed and their crimes reproved by the heralds of God. He had lived, a shining light, and now is required to die by the edge of the persecuting sword. He had been the morning-star, and now must pale before the rising Sun, for Christ had already begun his public ministry. Twelve months closed his life and his ministry together. He had baptized Jesus Christ, at the fords of the Jordan, just below the ruins of ancient Jericho. His hands had baptized the disciples of Jesus, at Baon's waters, at the personal request of their Master and Saviour. Now he pays the debt of his fidelity to public morals, by giving his life to the truth; his body to the earth, by the hands of his own mourning disciples; and his head to the dainty keeping of that beautiful adulteress, who was not content with the blood of Herod, with the ruin of her own daughter, the sacrifice of Philip, her lawful husband, but must lay up in keeping the righteous blood of the Baptist, to meet it in the day of account. Our Saviour gives us the most exalted testimony ever given to any living worthy, in the following words; "Among them that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of God, is greater than he. If ye will receive it, this is Elias which was for to come. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

MATTHEW, THE TAX-GATHERER.

MATTHEW was of Galilee, and exercised his calling of customs-gathering at Capernaum, on the western shore of Genesareth. The tax-gatherer was in the service of the Romans; he was a genuine Hebrew. The Saviour was walking on the shore of the Galilee sea, whence he called this man from his vocation, and he followed Him, to become a gatherer of tribute in the kingdom of the Prince of Peace. Doubtless rich, and engaged in a profitable employment, he laid by all for this divine call. For a time he preached the gospel in Judea, and parts adjacent, and then went abroad among the Gentiles, and thus spent the evening of his days, going far into Africa, even as far south as Ethiopia. Here he suffered death for the truth, in a city called Naddabar, being slain by a halbert. He was prudent and wise in his work, accurate in method, careful and laborious in the details of his Master's biography, and specially unanswerable in his genealogy of Christ.

The Gospel by Matthew is a monument of genius. It is, beyond question, a legal document. The report of facts is cautious to a scruple. Had our Saviour directly provided this man as His biographer, it could not have been more in harmony with the events, as they occurred. For his account was drawn up probably about the year of our Lord 38, a full generation after the birth of Christ, yet, as if in direct view of all—making the most unanswerable document extant. Scarcely forty pages in extent, only a little tract, making no appearance on the bookseller's shelf, it is yet the most momentous piece of composition now in the keeping of mankind. There are three parts to the book; the early life of Jesus, up to the opening of His public ministry; then, His ministry and its field; and lastly, His suffering, death, resurrection, and ascension. By what appears among writers as common consent, this Gospel is the rule by which the other Gospels are judged. Compact, careful, luminous, modest, complete, full of the words of Christ, it demonstrates two propositions: beyond dispute; first, plenary inspiration; second, the highest type of a witness's testimony.

PETER, THE FISHERMAN.

The Apostle Peter was born at Bethsaida, of Galilee. He is thought to have been some ten years the senior of his Lord. His father's name was Jonas, who brought up his son in his own occupation, which was that of a fisherman, on the Sea of Tiberias. His speech was that corrupted Hebrew spoken in Galilee, and he is regarded as among the least educated of the Apostles; yet has he wielded a scepter of moral and religious power over the mind of the Christian era, and has left a name which is on the lips of over three hundred millions of the world more frequently than the name of a Caesar or an Alexander, and in more documents than any two names of the great for two thousand years.

We note in Peter what is common to those who capture the finny tribe and bring them forth for the food of man—a certain freedom and boldness of soul, and a generosity and self-forgetfulness, which rarely stops at the largest sacrifices and the richest outlay for others. All the nobler features of his character Peter retained to the last, and this fact is the index to the conspicuous position which he fills in the incidents of the next forty years after our Saviour's ascension. Christianity evidently did a vast work for Peter, raising all that was low, and strengthening all that was weak, till he became "as another man."

Peter evidently delivered some of his discourses to the Hebrews in their own vernacular, while to the Roman centurion, Cornelius, and his family, he spoke in the Greek language. He, with his brother Andrew, and the two sons of Zebedee, was a disciple of the Baptist. The acts of his life, as on record in the New Testament, are quite varied. He rebuked his Master in a hasty reply to His announcement of his passion at Jerusalem; he drew out in earnest protestation his loyalty to Christ, as the traitor was announced; he resorted to the sword, on the first appearance of the midnight throng sent from the temple to apprehend the Saviour; he denied that he knew his Master, and fortified his shameless conduct with swearing; he repented the same night, shedding bitter tears of penitency; he had one of the first interviews with Christ after His resurrection; he preached the leading sermon on the day of Pentecost; he performed a notable miracle at the beautiful gate of the temple on the cripple, and preached again; he saw, by the intuitions of the Holy Ghost, the perfidy of Ananias and his wife, and pronounced the quick retribution of death upon both; he raised Tabitha from the dead; he opened the kingdom of Grace to the Gentile world in the house of Cornelius; he was delivered by miracle from Herod's incarceration at Philippi; he preached far and near the blessed gospel; he wrote two Epistles; he at last fell under the persecuting hand of the Roman emperor, on the same day when Paul was beheaded by the same bloody tyrant. The date of Peter's crucifixion was somewhere between A. D. 64 and A. D. 70.

PAUL OF TARSUS.

THE first scene of Paul is at the death of Stephen. Here he was a witness, and at his feet those who stoned him put down their garments. He looked on with a grim satisfaction, to see that it was legally done, and then went back to his confères in guilt and blood, little knowing what the providence of God had laid up in its secret bosom for him in the great future.

Next he enters on the sacred record as a persecutor. He was on his way to the city of Damascus, to punish the followers of Jesus. Talents were not wanting, nor was intrepidity, nor indomitable perseverance, in the character of this young Cilician. He acts under the authority of the leaders at Jerusalem, and must return to them, having executed his commission in the scattering of the disciples of the Nazarene. A miracle is the means of his awakening to a sense of his condition. He is led by the hand into Damascus, a penitent and praying man. By another miracle he is restored to sight, and becomes a true Christian hero. Now he seeks baptism, and begins his career of apostleship. Preaching was his legitimate work, and he began here where he came to persecute. His mind was stored with the choicest of Grecian learning, in his boyhood, in the noble schools of Tarsus. Afterward, in the care of Gamaliel, he was deeply cultured in the Hebrew learning of his times. Nor can we sufficiently admire the wisdom of that Divine ruling, which brought the schools of the Greeks and of the Hebrews under revenue to the Christian work, by giving their united strength and polish in this remarkable orator and writer. Perhaps no case has ever come before us, in the long line of the greatly good and useful, where so many qualifications concentrate to make a great mind and a distinguished career. He is, from this capital of Syria, about taking his departure for a journey, whose rich achievements will return into the city of God, bearing a freight unequalled and alone for grandeur and heroism.

Worldly-wise men have conceded in their testimony his nobleness, as they have perused his history. Temporal interest was all on the side of his taking up the hatred of his countrymen against the despised sect, and following it to the bitterest sequel. Wealth was with them. Empire was in the hands of the Roman. The highest positions were none of them in the gift of the disciples of Jesus. What could he expect, but a life-conflict of trial, and want, and betrayal, and at last, death by the hands of persecutors.

Few persons, without the fullest consideration, can enter into the conditions of success as laid out in the life of Paul, and as met by him in the development of that wonderful career. For what we have in Luke's account in the Acts of the Apostles, and in Paul's Epistles, is but an epitomized presentment of more than thirty years of labor, and suffering, and writing, and speaking, such as rarely or never come into the limit of one life, however long or enterprising.

The writings of Luke, in the Acts of the Apostles, form one of the most brilliant pictures of miracle, of imprisonment, of persecution, of preaching, of traveling, of church-founding, of evangelizing, possible, even to the first century, in the conflict with ignorance, and superstition, and ignoble power. Here the highest type of the Apostle is made to appear, in the busy fieldwork of labors and sufferings—having one object perpetually before him, the pulling men out of the fire—carrying everything into one system, that of the Saviour Jesus. He is never out of his proper place; for we see him in the capital of Syria, or in the metropolitan city of the Holy Land, among its bigoted doctors of the Hebrew law; or in the polite and learned center of Grecian greatness, at Athens; or in Ephesus, the place of rendezvous to all Asia in the worship of Diana; or in Rome, the center of civil and military government of the world; invading the markets, the theaters, the parks of pleasure, the synagogues of the Jews, the river-side resorts of heathen worship, and all places where men might be reached by the tidings of salvation—and he is ever equal to his lofty purpose and theme.

MARK.

MARK was honored with being one of the authors of a book of the New Testament canon. He was not one of the Apostles. He was nephew to Barnabas, and his mother's name was Mary, of the tribe of Levi, a lady of standing and competence, to whose house Peter repaired, on being set free from prison by the angel of the Lord. He appears on the record of evangelistic labor in the year 44, accompanying Paul and Barnabas from Jerusalem to Antioch. John, whose surname was Mark, set forth with them from Antioch, and went with them as far as Perga, in Pamphylia, and there turned back to Jerusalem, leaving Paul and his fellow-laborer, Barnabas, to go on with the work. Afterward, when his uncle would have taken him with them, Paul objected, for the reason that he left them at Perga on the former journey. The difference between the two caused them to separate, and Barnabas took his nephew and went to Cyprus. Paul afterward restored his confidence to John, and directed Timothy to "take Mark, and bring him with thee; for he is profitable to me for the ministry." No after mention of Mark occurs in the New Testament.

Strong and united testimony places Mark's subsequent labors in a light very honorable to himself, and wholly redeems his reputation for zeal and self-denying labor for Christ. He was with Peter in Rome, and is said to have written his Gospel at the earnest request of the Church at Rome, as the life of Christ by Peter. This book was read there by the authority of Peter, as the assent and good-will of Roman disciples made it the leading authority in the West.

John labored mostly, during his later life, in Egypt, where he was successful to an eminent degree. His position was first in Egypt, and his labors contributed largely to the dissemination of the gospel in Northern Africa, where the seeds fruited for centuries into the largest and best returns. He suffered martyrdom in Egypt, about the end of Nero's reign, and his remains were said to have been removed to Venice with great pomp. The Gospel by Mark has the repute of having been written at Rome by the counsel of Peter, between A. D. 60 and 65. There are those who deny Peter's connection with John, and the incident of the Gospel being written at Rome, but candor compels us to accord to both our cordial belief.

LUKE.

LUKE was a physician. He had not the honor of being an Apostle, nor of being one of the original disciples of Christ. There has been considerable conjecture respecting many things connected with his introduction into the small band who together undertook the work of the early ministry of the Christian religion. He was long a traveling companion of Paul, and was called by him "the beloved physician." We know but little of the tangled web of this man's biography, but his works are before us. These have given him a distinguished place in the Christian world. More than a fourth part of the New Testament is from his hands. The noblest biography is in the Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. These books were the records of a man familiar with the offices to the sick, a physician to the body, presenting the greatest of all works, that of the Great Physician of the Soul. We wonder at the fact, that the sacred annals, which form the basis of Christian belief, came from a physician, a tax-gatherer, and three fishermen.

This man presents a Gospel to the world which puts forth the Saviour's life in order; that is, it is one of the most thorough pieces of composition in all the vast range of literature. Whoever affects to despise this work is an ignorant and foolish man, or acts the part of a knave. A tract is full of wisdom, and contains enough for a library of volumes. Every incident is brief as it could be—every important fact is incorporated. All periods are alive with interest. There is a chain of proof, running through the entire work, too strong to be broken, and so high that heaven alone could have bestowed it upon the writer, for the elevation of mankind, by the almighty hand of truth. Thus God and man appear together, working for the world's safety. A short epitome of its themes will demonstrate this to the reflecting mind; the birth of Christ, the infancy and youth of Christ; the preaching of John; the genealogy of Christ, and His baptism; the ministry of Christ; the last journey to Jerusalem; the crucifixion; the resurrection; and the ascension of Christ to heaven. Taste is everywhere gratified. The severest criticism is incapable of aught but approbation. Christian reverence follows the unfolding of the life of Christ, with all that devotion which should characterize the mental studies of a being who is preparing to join the company of the redeemed in heaven, under the guidance of the truths contained in this book. Mental homage passes by natural and easy stages into affection, and this passion grows up into those nobler proportions which make the matured Christian disciple. It is an easy lesson to the pious parent, imbued with such a spirit, to give these sacred paragraphs to the minds of children, in the Christian home. Plenary inspiration is one of the most pleasing and graceful inductions of the reasoning faculty, when associated with evangelized affection.

As to the Acts of the Apostles, the second book from the pen of Luke, active and successful Christian philanthropy would have no true portraiture without it. This book of over thirty years' evangelization is a complete image of Christ, as seen reflected in his disciples, and a justification of all that is taught in the Epistles to the Churches which follow it.

JOHN.

We now take up the name of John, son of Zebedee, whose home was at Bethsaida, on the Sea of Galilee. He was several years younger than our Lord, and the youngest disciple. His was a strong, robust nature, and, with his brother James, he was called by a name which indicates a rough and impetuous disposition. They were surnamed Boanerges, sons of thunder. Jesus manifested a special affection for John, and he says of himself, that "he was that disciple whom Jesus loved." Most of our best authorities say that he was a disciple of John the Baptist, and that he was called of Jesus when in the company of John.

A part of John's life was spent in Jerusalem, where he preached the gospel. Twice he was imprisoned: in company with Peter once, and again with the other Apostles. He was sent to Samaria with Peter, that the converts under the ministry of Philip, the deacon, might receive the Holy Ghost. Domitian banished John to the Isle of Patmos, in the Ægean Sea, where he wrote the Revelation. After his return from banishment, he went into Asia Minor, not far from the year 66. He occupied himself in preaching the gospel, principally at Ephesus, where the great temple of Diana was built, and to which vast wealth was sent in votive offerings by the princes of all Asia. He planted churches at Smyrna and Pergamos, and at many other places. His success and his bold preaching displeased Domitian, and many others of the chief men of the Roman Empire. On the coming of Nerva to the empire, in A. D. 96, John came to Ephesus, where he died at a good old age, in the third year of Trajan's reign, A. D. 100.

The first book attributed to John is the Gospel bearing his name. It is formed upon a plan peculiarly his own, being wholly unlike the other Gospels. In all parts of it John has introduced much of the conversations of Jesus. The Saviour appears in this book in so personal a mode that he stands before us as "very man." John exhibits this divine manhood, by opening the door into that intimate friendship which he was permitted so highly and exclusively to enjoy. We, no doubt, can here behold that image of God, so nobly put forth in Genesis, which God intended to glorify in the first man, and was hindered by the fall.

The Revelation was written by John, while in the Isle of Patmos. Though written prior to his Gospel, it sustains and teaches the same high doctrine, the Jehovah, in Jesus of Nazareth. Here, therefore, we, and all coming ages, must find the mysterious nature of the divine incarnate, laid away as the keepsake of nations.

LAZARUS, OF BETHANY.

This man appears in the sacred history in the most remarkable of attitudes, that of one loved of Christ. Two men are placed in this most exalted of attitudes—Lazarus, of Bethany, and John, the beloved disciple. This intimate relation was admitted by the Saviour, and the part noted by Lazarus was modest and becoming.

The resurrection of Lazarus is the crowning miracle of all the mighty acts of Jesus. No one could say aught against it, either as a miracle, or as an act toward a family at once valued and much admired by the leading men at Jerusalem. There is room to believe that Lazarus was well known at Jerusalem, and highly connected. Therefore his death caused much attention to be excited in Jerusalem, and his being raised from the dead made Jesus to be exceedingly popular, till the leaders turned the people's will against Him. Lazarus was in public daily after his restoration to life, and his testimony was truth itself, and most remarkable in its incidents.

MARY, OF CLEOPHAS.

This was Mary, the mother of James. Cleophas and Alpheus are the same person. It is thought she was the sister of the Virgin Mary, and had four sons, mentioned in the New Testament, James the less, James, Simon, and Judas, who are termed brethren of Jesus Christ, that is, His cousin-germans. Mary early embraced faith in Christ, was an attendant on His ministry, and ministered to His wants of her substance. She was at Jerusalem at the time of the last Passover, and at the time of His crucifixion followed Him to Calvary: she was with His mother at the foot of the cross, while He suffered. At His burial she was present, and, on the third day before, had in the labor of others borne her part in preparing the perfumes to embalm His body. Going to His tomb very early on the morning of His resurrection, she there learned from the mouth of an angel that He truly had risen from the dead, and was one of those who carried the news of this fact to His disciples. On the way to bear these tidings to the disciples, Jesus appeared in person to them, and they held Him by the feet and worshiped Him. From what we thus learn of this Mary, she was a sincere, benevolent, and devout disciple of her Saviour.

MARY, OF MAGDALA.

This Mary is so called from Magdala, in Galilee, from whence she was. Luke tells us that Christ cast seven demons out of Mary, as she had been possessed of them. Few names have been associated with so many coarse jibes and reflections as this one. There is no proof whatever that she was a coarse or vulgar woman.

There is no doubt but that Mary Magdalene was, both in character and in circumstances, a woman of good reputation, and of high standing in society. The sacred writers mention her with honor always, as a constant attendant upon the ministry of Jesus, and as doing things in the highest degree becoming to a pious and intelligent female. In Christ's last journey to Jerusalem, Mary of Magdala was with His disciples in company, and the third Mary, standing at the foot of the cross as Jesus was crucified. She stayed in Jerusalem over the sad interval to the resurrection, preparing, with others, the things needed for embalming the body of the crucified.

Early on the morning of His resurrection—very early—she came to the sepulcher, with Mary, the mother of James, and Salome, to look after the resting-place of the dead; but she was told by the angel that He had risen. She asks where the gardener had laid Him, little knowing, at the instant, to whom she was addressing herself. Jesus speaks her name, and she knows Him. She is made the bearer of a message to the disciples to meet Him in Galilee.

Mysterious are the facts of obloquy and reproach associated with this spotless name, so that her very nativity is a synonym of shame and an epithet of sin, by which an entire class of outcasts must be known, probably in most languages, to the end of time. Whereas, if we will re-peruse the Evangelists with this in mind, her name is the sum of womanly virtues.

MARY, OF BETHANY.

This Mary was the younger sister of Martha and Lazarus, and lived at the village of Bethany, just over the Mount of Olives from Jerusalem. The home of these pious persons was a frequent retreat for the Saviour, after the toil and noise of daily teaching in the near city. They were objects of holy regard by our blessed Lord, and the most intimate and sacred relations subsisted between them. Lazarus died and was buried, and Jesus raised Him from the tomb, and restored him to the bosom of his family. His home was kept by the two sisters, and after this noted miracle, was the center of almost universal interest to the Jewish people, and especially to their rulers.

Mary and Martha appear to have been devoted Christians, and Mary was addicted to sitting at the Saviour's feet as He was engaged in teaching. This was a very natural position for her to take, as His custom was to hold His discourses in the court of the old Jewish house, where large numbers, several hundreds at once in the larger sort, and seventy-five and one hundred in the smaller, were assembled.

This Mary also has been confounded with that "sinner" mentioned by the Evangelists. Yet there is no evidence in this effect. It has been the effort of infidels to fasten something on the intimate friends of the Saviour, and thus by inference on Him. This Mary has been ignorantly pointed out as a person of shame, and thus Christ was a friend of publicans and sinners. Every act of this Mary, as told in the New Testament, is an honor to her, a praise to her sex, and a full satisfaction to the noblest Christian character. This family had their possession at Bethany, and lived in a manner worthy of Jesus, who was known everywhere as their personal friend, and worthy of His cause. Probably no other home, outside the homes of Mary, His mother, and Simon, was so honored as was that of Mary, Martha, and their brother Lazarus.

MARY, MOTHER OF MARK.

This Mary was the one to whose house Peter went when the angel of God liberated him from prison, and foiled the intentions of the persecuting Herod. She was a person of competency, owned a house in the city of Jerusalem, and there a prayer-assembly was being held when Peter was in prison. It is thought by many that the disciples were gathered here when the Holy Ghost was given.

ANNA, THE PROPHETESS.

ANNA was the prophetess who came into the temple, led there by the Holy Ghost, when the infant Saviour was taken there to do for Him as the law of Moses required. She came in just as the venerable Simon was praising God for the child Jesus, and joined in praise. She also spoke of the Messiah to all who waited for the redemption of Israel, in Jerusalem.

This holy woman had been married early, and her husband had died after seven years, leaving her a widow. She remained in this state through her life. She thought only of pleasing the Lord, and was a constant, daily attendant on the temple, serving the Lord with fasting and prayer. Here we find her greeting the Redeemer, at the advanced age of eighty years, full of faith and patient waiting for the Great Redeemer.

MARY, THE PRINCESS.

This remarkable woman was chosen by Divine Providence to be the mother of Jesus. She was of the royal house of David, as was also her husband, Joseph. Early espoused to Joseph, she was under his lawful protection when informed by the angel Gabriel that, by a miracle of divine power, she was to be a mother, and give Messiah to her people. Mary was convinced that the message was from God, by being told that Elizabeth, who was old and barren, was already six months gone of a child; therefore her reply: "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word."

Infidels have made much ado about the facts of Mary's history, and have done themselves no honor, besides doing the Christian cause no injury, in their base conjectures, malignant misrepresentations, and heartless slanders. The Evangelists have each approached this subject with becoming simplicity and truthfulness. The infant is presented to the world in the most remarkable manner. The visit of the shepherds was of divine ordering. The presentation of the child in the temple was by inspiration, in act and in salutation. The coming of the magi was a miracle of wisdom. The flight into Egypt was God's mode of evading the violent and murderous will of a wicked ruler.

Mary was a perpetual observer of the life and deeds of her divine son. She was at the marriage in Cana of Galilee, at Jerusalem, at the last Passover celebrated by Jesus; she was not at the Supper. She followed Him to Calvary, and stood at the foot of the cross at His crucifixion, while the sword spoken of by Simon pierced through her own heart. Her later days were made comfortable by the express direction of the Saviour, who committed her to the keeping of John, the "beloved disciple." Mary was one of the witnesses of her son's resurrection. After this she was among the disciples at the descent of the Holy Ghost, and shared in the blessedness of that august event.

This remarkable woman now disappears from the Sacred History. A veil is drawn over her and her acts. No cause is given for that superstitious devotion which Romanists are wont to accord to her. She was not conceived by miracle, nor have any miracles attended her memory. She was accompanied by a miracle-working Providence, but that power never was in her hands. All merits in her intercession for others are suppositions and uncertain. All we know of her might as well have occurred in the life of any other prudent, good woman, of the royal line of David. Besides, none of this foolish stuff appears in regard to the Princess Mary until Christianity was inundated by a deluge of pagan myths.

ELIZABETH.

ELIZABETH was of the lineage of the priests of the house of Aaron. She is distinguished in Scripture as the mother of John the Baptist. This person was highly honored of God in two respects: she was past the time of child-bearing, and God permitted her to have a son; she was chosen to give to the world the harbinger of our Lord.

Her husband was Zachariah, of the house of Abia. He was in the temple of God, at Jerusalem, offering incense, when the angel Gabriel was sent to him, and announced that he was to have a son, who was to fulfill the words of the Prophet, in "preparing the way of the Lord." He was slow to believe, and was afflicted with dumbness until the son was born, when his speech returned to him again.

When the Princess Mary was to have her son, the Redeemer, she paid a visit to Elizabeth, who was her cousin, residing in the city of Hebron. Her object was one of congratulation, because of their mutual blessing, as chosen of God for great and yet unequal honors. After three months' visit, the princess returned home. Soon after her departure, Elizabeth gave birth to John the Baptist.

HEROD, THE INFANT-SLAYER.

Herod was king in the land of Judea when Jesus Christ came. He had then been sovereign in Judea for thirty-three years. We look back on the memory of that period, consigning his name to the detestation to which his contemporaries assigned it, while we admire his great talents, and the remarkable enterprises and public monuments of his greatness, and place him in the first rank of kings. He was very properly surnamed the Great.

This king was the second son of Antipater, the Idumean, and was born B. C. 71. At twenty-five his father made him governor of Galilee, where he distinguished himself by the suppression of robbers, and the execution of their leader, Hezekiah. In the civil war between the Roman republican leaders and Caesar, he took sides with Cassius, and was made governor of Coelo-Syria. When Mark Antony arrived victorious in Syria, Herod, by some means, was favored by him, who made Herod and his brother tetrarchs in Judea.

Soon after, Antigonus and the Jews joined against him, and were too strong for him; hence he retired first into his native land, Idumea, and then into Egypt. From thence he departed for Rome to seek better fortunes. On a difference arising in the Asmodean family, Herod obtained the crown of Judea, returned to Jerusalem, and in three years got possession of the country. Then he became guilty of many extortions and cruelties, while he made haste to be rich, and he put the Asmodean race of kings out of his way.

When Antony and Octavian quarreled, and it was necessary for Herod to make choice between them, he raised an army with which to help the former, while, by the determining hand of Providence, Octavian was victor at the battle of Actium. Now it was necessary to make peace with the sole master of the Roman world, and, to prepare his way to it, he put Hyrcanus, the last of the Asmodeans, to death. Then he embarked for Rhodes, where Augustus then was. To make his appearance the more impressive, and to flatter his master, he arrayed himself in royal vestments and ornaments, but left off his crown, and thus came into the presence of Caesar. He confessed his attachment to Antony, recapitulated his acts of devotion to him, and did not hesitate to refer to his attachment to his former friend and benefactor. But he was ready to be as true to another friend and benefactor, and delicately intimated that he could be as grateful to Augustus, should he reconfer his crown and kingdom upon him. Struck with Herod's defence, and admiring his ingenious confession, the crown and kingdom were restored, and a large share of Caesar's confidence and many favors were bestowed upon the re-established king of Judea.

But amidst all his prosperity, Herod's domestic felicity was poisoned, his peace was destroyed, and his greatness as a king was discolored by his vices and deeds as a man. His wife, Mariamne, hated him, and was brought to trial, convicted, and executed. She submitted to her fate with all the intrepidity of innocency and heroism, and thus stands on the historian's page an honored and an injured woman. Herod was struck with remorse, and never afterward enjoyed a tranquil hour. Now flying the society of his fellow-men, now ferocious and vindictive, and then frenzied to the last degree, he lost all the distinctions of the well-balanced mind, and sacrificed, with brute vengeance, both friends and foes to his momentary fits of rage and hate.

In a season of self-possession he built Sebaste and Caesarea, erected many strong fortresses, constructed and ornamented a stately theater and amphitheater, in which he celebrated games in honor of Augustus. The statuary used as ornaments in these structures displeased the Jews, who made them the occasion of a deep-laid conspiracy against his life, which they had long sought, because of his being a native Idumean, and a murderer of their own Asmonean princes and their families, and the usurper of their throne and kingdom, and above all, a slavish admirer of the hated Roman emperor.

To cause himself to be viewed as their benefactor, and to be regarded as an object of veneration, Herod rebuilt the temple of Jehovah, at Jerusalem, in a style at once so magnificent and so costly, that the Jews long spoke of him as devoted to their religion, and as a model king. While thus engaged he made a visit to Rome, the metropolis and mistress of the world, and returned with his two sons, who had been educated there under the patronage of Cæsar, furnished with every means of magnificence and luxury by a dotting father. They had not long been in Jerusalem ere they aspired to sovereignty, conspired against their father, were apprehended, tried, convicted, and executed. This summary treatment of conspiracies did not secure him against them, for, through life, every little while he would detect and punish a fresh conspiracy by some of his family relations.

The deed which, above all others, covers the name of Herod the Great with infamy is the slaughter of the innocents of Bethlehem, in order to make way with our Saviour, whose advent had been announced to him by the coming of the wise men to Jerusalem. A dreadful visitation followed this deed. A son, Antipater, named from his grandfather, who had but lately returned from Rome, was arrested by his father's orders, convicted of conspiring against the life of his father, and was cast into prison, where he was soon after slain by the command of the king. The judgments of heaven seemed now to thicken over him: he was seized with a fatal malady. Tormented by a guilty conscience, hazed by fears of conspiracy on all sides, the most loathsome object imaginable, he not only decreed conspirators to death while on his dying-bed, but planned murders for others to perpetrate when he should be no longer able to shed human blood.

After having bequeathed his kingdom to Archelaus, and two tetrarchies to his other two sons, he called together the chief Jews to Jericho, and bound his sister by an oath to have them all put to death on his demise. But she broke this wicked oath, and, with her husband Alexis, set the Jews at liberty. This bloody tyrant died at sixty-eight years of age, dreaded by his subjects, loathed by his relatives, detested by mankind, and held up as a symbol of infamy on every historian's page who records his name.

HEROD ANTIPAS.

This Herod was son of Herod the Great. His mother was Cleopatra, of Jerusalem. His father at first intended Antipas to succeed him as king, but afterward changed his will, and made Archelaus his heir and successor. But both of these princes went to Rome, and Augustus changed the portions to each, giving to Antipas Galilee and Perea.

Herod Antipas returned to his dominions, and there built fortresses, and adorned the chief places in his dominions. About A. D. 33 he was allied to Aretas, king of Arabia, by the marriage of his daughter, whom he soon divorced, that he might marry Herodias, the wife of his brother Philip, who was still living.

This incestuous marriage was denounced by John the Baptist in deservedly severe terms, and caused Herod much anxiety. Herod often heard this truly wonderful man, and did many things taught by him, but Herodias held him in the coils of vicious indulgence so strongly that he would not give her up. Therefore, a conspiracy was formed against his teacher's life, by Herodias and her daughter. They watched their opportunity, and finally chose a fair opportunity. A birthday, from immemorial usage, was a day of great hilarity and festive day in the palace. The guests would be full of wine, and therefore easily pleased. This was the auspicious day to the artful plot of vengeance against the Baptist, who then lay in prison, for his plain dealing with the adulterous king. The daughter of Herodias entered the festive assembly of wine-drinkers, and danced before them. They were delighted, and Herod pledged, by an oath, that he would give the damsel what she might desire. She retired to the apartments of her mother, and was there advised what to ask. She returned, and proffered her request in these remarkable words: "Give me here John the Baptist's head in a charger." Revenge against John for his truthfulness, was sweeter to Herodias than anything else could be. Herod was and at this unexpected turn of affairs, and would gladly have delivered John. His oath, and his honorable guests, who had all joined in the pledge to the daughter, decided the matter against the life of a good and great man. A guard was dispatched to the prison, who there beheaded John, and brought the head into the guest-hall of Herod, and it was there given to the damsel, who took it to her mother.

Aretas, king of Arabia, was deeply affronted at the treatment which his daughter had received at the hands of Herod, and went against him with a strong force. After an obstinate battle, in which the fortunes of the conflict were with the avenger of the injured princess of Arabia, Antipas made terms with Aretas, highly honorable to the victor. In A. D. 39 Herodias persuaded Antipas to visit Rome, and desire of Caius, who was emperor, that he might be a king, at least equal to her own brother Agrippa. She, hoping to add to his application the weight of her own presence, decided to accompany him to Rome. When he had arrived at Baie, where the emperor then was, and was having his first audience with him, Agrippa's messenger arrived, and presented letters against the cause of Antipas, accusing him of designing a conspiracy against the Roman Empire. In proof of this accusation, he stated that Antipas had fortified the chief cities of his government, and was then in correspondence with the old-time enemies of Rome, the Parthians. Besides, he had no other use for seventy stand of arms, than in the arsenals of Galilee. Not being able to answer these things, he was banished to Lyons, in Gaul.

The emperor offered to forgive Herodias, for the sake of Agrippa, her brother; but she preferred to share the banishment of her husband. This Antipas is the Herod mentioned in the Gospel, who was made a friend to Pilate by his act of deference in sending Jesus to him, when he knew that Jesus belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction. Herod's men of war were permitted to array the person of the Saviour in the tawdry cast-off clothes of royalty, and in this condition he was returned to Pilate, as a full answer to the question whether he need fear the pretensions of such an individual. How little the mocking Herod knew that he was then filling a cup of bitterness to the very brim, whose overflowing he would soon drink, away on the banks of a little river in Gaul, just beneath the overhanging Cevennes, and in sight of the ever-memorable Mont Blanc.

PILATE.

PILATE was sent to govern Judea, in the room of Gratus, A. D. 26 or 27. His term of ten years' official position in Judea closed in the twenty-second year of Tiberius. He was a man of an impetuous and obstinate temper, and sold justice for money. He has a fearful name on the page of history, credited with rapine and injuries, and tortures of the innocent, and murders. His cruelty has amounted to a proverb of reproach. During the whole time of his government of Judea the country was in continual disquiet, and his conduct was the occasion of the troubles and revolt which followed.

Luke says that Pilate mingled the blood of Galileans with their sacrifices. The reason why he so treated them is unknown. When on trial before him, he made some faint attempts to release Jesus from the hands of the Jews, for he was not ignorant of the reasons for their enmity against him. His wife sent a message to him, while Jesus was in the judgment hall, warning him not to injure that just person. He was alarmed by the seeming import of this message, as if it might portend evil to him. He proposed to release Jesus, or Barabbas, taking advantage of the day of the Passover, because of an ancient custom. But this did not please the Jews; therefore they threatened him, by intimating that he was friendly to Jesus, as king, to the prejudice of the Roman authority in Judea. They understood how much trouble the province of Syria had been to the Roman emperors immediately before him, and that the Jews were perpetually on the eve of a revolt.

This threat was enough to end the whole matter. Pilate took water and washed his hands, in token of his innocence of Jesus' blood, and they took the blood-fund to themselves. He then gave Jesus to their will. Pilate was deposed by Vitellus, the pro-consul of Syria, and sent to Rome, to give an account of his conduct to the emperor. Tiberius died ere he arrived. But Caligula sentenced him to banishment, and he passed a brief period at Vienna, in Gaul, where, at last, weary of life, and hated by his fellow-men, he laid violent hands upon himself. Pilate acted as judge, not because it was legally his place, but because Judea was under him as procurator, and it had fallen to this office in the absence of the pro-consul, who resided at Damascus, the then capital of the pro-consular province of Syria.

FELIX.

CLAUDIUS FELIX came to the government of Judea after Cumanus, in the days of the Apostles. He was a man of infamous character, and a plague to the land over which he presided. What brings this man's name into the sacred history is its connection with Paul, who was frequently brought before him during the space of two years, as under trial for his life under three charges: sedition, heresy, and profanation of the temple. Felix was so oppressive that Tacitus leaves the following record of him: "he exercised the authority committed to him with all manner of cruelty and lawlessness." His residence was at the city of Cæsarea, where Paul was brought for safe keeping, by an escort of Roman soldiers, provided and sent by Claudius Lysias, the tribune at Jerusalem. Cæsarea was near seventy miles from Jerusalem, and Antipatris thirty-eight, to the northwest from that city.

Paul makes his defence before Felix, who was attended by his wife, Drusilla. This defence was a bold and just rendering of the gospel, in regard to righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come. Its effect upon Felix was deep, but momentary, for he trembled under the appeals of the Apostle, but put the whole matter off, and clung to his paramour and his vices.

Among this man's vices we notice avarice, for he frequently sent for Paul, hoping that the prisoner's friends would pay him largesses for his freedom. Money stood before justice, adultery before chastity, and popular esteem with the Jews before good government, while Felix held the government of Judea in his hands.

Felix was recalled to Rome A. D. 60, and was followed thither by many of the Jews, whose object was to complain of his extortion and various acts by which his government in Judea had been disgraced. Had not his own brother, Pallas, interceded for him, the indignation of the emperor would have been fatal to him. As it was, Felix was no more intrusted with the confidence of the emperor, but lived the remainder of his life in seclusion.

FESTUS.

PORTIUS FESTUS succeeded Felix in the government of Judea. He suppressed robbers, put down a magician who drew away many people after him into the desert, and restored the land to order and good government. In regard to the case of Paul, Festus intended to have him safe at Cæsarea, and to hear him on the subject matters of his accusation by the Jews.

In the meantime, Paul, a partial hearing or examination being had, appealed unto the tribunal of the emperor, as this was his right because of his citizenship, and because the Jews were a party against a Roman citizen. Before, however, he was sent to Rome, Herod Agrippa desired Festus to have a hearing of Paul, that he might both see and hear so distinguished a man. Festus so decided.

When Paul was permitted to answer for himself, he did so in the most masterly manner. The tribunal was one before which he had never before spoken; for Festus was seated that day in royal state, with Agrippa, and his wife, Bernice, with the tribunes and chief men of the city. How his distinguished auditors were affected may be read in the twenty-sixth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. For nothing can be more suitable, or more graceful, than this entire discourse of Paul before Agrippa. The Christian is dignified, earnest, and serious; the Apostle is bold, strong, and even grand; the gentleman is polite; and the scholar is faultless in his erudition. Such a union of great qualities they never heard from another man of that age, for no other was so capable.

DRUSILLA.

HEROD AGRIPPA, who put the Apostle James to death, and imprisoned Peter, and was himself delivered by the just judgment of God to a most horrible death, by being eaten of worms, had a third daughter, Drusilla. She was renowned for her beauty, but was a stranger both to piety and chastity. She was promised to Epiphanes, son of Antiochus, king of Commagene, upon assurance from this prince that he would espouse Judaism and be circumcised. But subsequently he refused to fulfill the condition, and the marriage was broken off, and Drusilla was afterward married to Azizus, king of Emesa.

This beautiful woman was persuaded by Felix, when governor of Judea, to forsake her lawful husband, the king of Emesa, and become his wife, returning thus to her own people, though wedded to a heathen. Her life was brief and troubled. After her husband had fallen under the displeasure of the emperor, and had retired to seclusion, Drusilla, attended by a son by him, went to reside in that delightful country about the Bay of Naples. The last we know of Drusilla is that she and her son both perished by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius.

BERNICE.

THIS name is Berenice, but is shortened to Bernice. She was daughter of Agrippa the Great, and sister of Agrippa the younger. She was a woman of remarkable beauty and varied fortunes. Betrothed to Mark, son of Alexander Lysimachus, alabarch of Alexandria, she did not go to him, but was married to her own uncle on her father's side, Herod, king of Chalcis. After the death of Herod, she proposed to Polemon, king of Pontus and part of Cilicia, that, if he would be circumcised, she would marry him. Polemon complied with her proposal, but she did not remain long with him.

Berenice returned to her own brother, Agrippa, with whom she lived on terms of scandalous intimacy; that is, she was credited with being his paramour. Here it may be proper to say that no class of persons in the world has been more infected with the libidinous passions than has the class which includes royal families: virtuous domestic life has been the exception, and not the rule.

CHRONOLOGICAL AND OTHER VALUABLE TABLES,

DESIGNED TO PROMOTE AND FACILITATE THE STUDY OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

TO READ THE BIBLE THROUGH IN A YEAR.

Read three chapters daily, and five on the Sabbath; that is, two chapters in the Old Testament, and one daily in Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Solomon's Song, and the New Testament—three on the Sabbath.

The Old Testament, without these four books, contains two chapters a day for the year; and the New Testament, with the four books, has one chapter a day, and three for Sabbath days, less eight chapters.

Read Psalm 119 as eleven chapters, of two divisions each, and connect the short Psalms, 117 and 131, with the next, and 133 and 134 together—thus adding eight chapters to complete the year. February 29, in leap year, is left out, so as not to derange the list.
