London, Saturday, Sept. 17.

Sir John Abbott is only 112 days older than Sir Charles Tupper.

Citizens should be cautious but not panicky in these days of cholera outbreaks.

About 770,000 Canadian paper quarter dollar "shipplasters" are in circulation. More could be used with advantage.

At length, the Dominion Government has decided to prohibit the importation of rags. Considering the danger of cholera being brought from Europe by this agency, action has been too long delayed. But it is better late than never.

A LARGELY-ATTENDED meeting of Canadians, recently held in Boston, over which Mr. D. A. McDonald, formerly M. P. P., in Prince Edward Island, presided, resolved to form an association to promote free commerce between the United States and Canada. They could not engage in a more worthy project.

Hon. Edward Blake has accepted the banquet tendered to him under the auspices of the Toronto Young Men's Liberal Club, and has acquiesced in the suggestion of the executive committee of the club that it be held on the eve of his leaving again for the old country. The date will be fixed as soon as Mr. Blake ascertains when he will sail.

The River Thames should undoubtedly be stocked with pickerel, bass and perch fry, and fishing of all kinds should be suspended from the sources to the mouth of the stream until such time as fish life gets a new and better start. We are afraid, however, that unless means are taken to purify the stream and to keep it free from impurities, the fish will never be very palatable as an article of diet.

A REPORT from Algona, Mich., says that large quantities of butter, eggs and chickens have been smuggled into that State from Canada, and several arrests of traders have been made. It is hard to prevent smuggling when there is so great temptation. What the two countries need is freedom to buy and sell to the best advantage, then the smuggler's occupation would be gone, and honest people would get full value for their labor and their labor's product.

One day the high tax organ sets forth the view that the foreigner pays the duty to get his wares into Canada; the next, it is gravely set forth that the consumer pays the duty, and that he is relieved of a great burden when a United States tariff change compels the Dominion authorities to remove it. Both explanations cannot be correct, but not being offered on the same day, the clumsy reasoner hopes that they will go down with the average reader!

MR. FOSTER, Finance Minister, is about to visit England on financial matters. When Sir Charles Tupper was appointed Lord High Commissioner the taxpayers were told that all junketings across the Atlantic would cease and that Sir Charles would do the work hitherto undertaken by Ministerial pilgrims. "It will be a large saving," said the promoters of the job. Tupper gets his $15,000 to $20,000 a year, but the trips of Ministers continue. How little faith can be reposed in the promises of these men!

CARON may be whitewashed as a result of the so-called investigation into charges trumped up to replace the serious accusations made upon the floor of the House of Commons by Mr. J. D. Edgar, M.P., who still expresses willingness to prove them if he is given the opportunity. But no verdict which may be rendered on this emaciated indictment, drawn up by the accused himself, will convince the public of Caron's innocence. Even such a newspaper as the Hamilton Herald, which has hitherto supported the Dominion Government, of which Caron is a member, says it is puzzled to see why. "If Caron were innocent, Mr. Edgar's accusations should not be investigated just as they were made, and the fact that a roundabout method of investigation was adopted after the charges had been carefully pruned and fixed up was prima facie evidence with most people that Caron's skirts were not as clean as they might be. If everything was all right why was it necessary to do any tuckering?"

There is an old East Indian fable that happily illustrates the yearning of some of our politicians to "protect" the struggling workmen of the country by increasing the taxes which they have to pay. Once upon a time a great-hearted elephant went out for a stroll in the jungle, and as he wandered about he came upon a herd of young partridges left by a heartless mother to die of hunger, thirst, and exposure. The elephant's mighty sympathy went out to the wretched partridges, and he said: "You need protection." And he sat down on them.

MR. BLAKE'S RECEPTION.

By the way, how comes it that the men who most loudly proclaim that the British Empire is indivisibly one are the first to assert that Canadians have no concern with Ireland, and that it is a great wrong to honor a Canadian who has been called on to aid in the solution of the proper method of government for that island?

The Conservative papers in Toronto which most bitterly traduce Hon. Edward Blake because he has been elected an Irish M. P., and has in England consistently maintained the views on the subject of Ireland which he expressed while in Canadian public life, allege that Ireland is a foreign country, and that the people of Canada have absolutely no right to interest themselves in the welfare of the island.

What kind of a unity would that be which demanded that one part must be absolutely divorced from another part of the whole?

Even if Canada were an independent nation, her people would still have a right to interest themselves in the welfare of other parts of the world. Southern European is not a portion of Great Britain, but the sympathy and counsel of British statesmen in the hour of need did much to advance the cause of common humanity and of right principles of government in those lands.

DISCUSSING CANADA'S FUTURE.

Like their comrades in Great Britain and in the United States, the workingmen's organizations of Canada hold an annual representative congress, at which all sorts of questions are discussed. For some reason or other, workingmen—we use a word imperfectly descriptive for lack of a better—are more radical in opinion than most other classes of the community. They are more outspoken. What they think to-day other classes are apt to think to-morrow, so that their opinions are a sort of barometer of the tendencies of coming politics—using the word politics in its large, not in its partisan sense.

The labor congress was held this year at Toronto.

One of the most interesting debates of the congress arose out of a resolution moved by one of the French-Canadian delegates, Mr. St. Pierre, in favor of the independence of Canada. Finally, an amendment was carried to the effect:

That, owing to the great conflict of opinion as to the political future of this country, this congress petition the Dominion Government to submit to a popular vote the following questions:

1. The maintenance of our present colonial status.
2. Imperial federation.
3. Canadian independence.
4. Political union with the United States.

In support of this the mover of the amendment pointed to the spirit of unrest all over the Dominion, to the constant discussion of these questions in the press, and to the stagnation of the country and its slow progress as reasons for a plebiscite as to the future of the Dominion. Canada never could develop her great natural resources, perhaps the greatest in the world, until she was either independent or a part of the greatest republic in the world.

It was further unanimously resolved that the various local unions be asked to discuss the whole four questions and give a vote upon them.

No subject is at this moment being more earnestly discussed conversationally than the question of the future of Canada, and it is being discussed in an outspoken and radical fashion.

No doubt all four of the alternatives presented have their advocates.

For example, there are well-meaning persons, not ordinarily native-born, however, who honestly espouse what they understand by Imperial Federation. In addition to sentiment they put forward material considerations, and speak of the contiguity or similarity of European and Canadian interests. But in reply it is asked if contiguity or similarity of interests are to be made a motive-ground, would it not seem more in the line of the reasonable to promote an American Confederation, embracing the whole North American continent?

The Bishop of Durham, in his recent notable deliverance, took the ground that the only way of welding the different States of Europe into a lasting peace was by uniting them all into the United States of Europe. It is contended by many that our Federation experiment is well enough as far as it goes, but that it should embrace the whole of the North American continent in order to give those opportunities and that future security so necessary to anything like a hopeful or permanent outlook. It is pointed out, not without force, that at present Canada's action is virtually ruled by whatever the United States may decide to do on any given subject. Practically, it is held, we are a part of the United States-governed continent, but without the financial advantages of continental union.

If the United States decides to quarantine for cholera, Canada has of necessity to follow, otherwise the diseased scum of Europe (denied admittance at United States ports) flows in at Canadian ports. The United States decides to throw off the sugar duties; Canada is compelled to follow suit.

The United States indicates a certain line respecting, say canal tolls; Canada is practically compelled to adopt it. And, on the whole, prudently and properly. Her position of 1 to 13 reasonably compels it. She is about to fight the United States. It is almost to talk of England fighting the United States. Canada has no desire to fight the United States. One-third of the total number of Canadians in the world reside in the United States, are well treated there, are fond of the country, and amalgamate themselves naturally and readily. In short, in the opinion of a growing number, there can be only one permanent method of settling all the numerous questions otherwise likely to cause friction in the future, while at the same time widening the area of freedom of trading. There is no logical reason, it is contended by the workmen, for keeping the North American continent in a state of division. The system of government, like the people, it is argued, is fundamentally the same on both sides of the great lakes. We are not unaware, say the workingmen, that these views are not shared by a considerable number of office-holders; but after all, they ask, to the great mass of us what can it matter what set of office-holders we carry on our backs?

Then, there are the advocates of Canada's independence, who may no doubt be trusted to give a good account of themselves when the further discussions arranged for take place.

Nor must we forget those who believe that "Canada is all right" in her present Colonial position, and consider that things exactly as they are will at least outlast their own time of activity. There are prominent men on both sides of politics who are quite contented with things as they are, and though we are not in sympathy with their mood, we have no reason to doubt the sincerity of their beliefs.

PROHIBITION COMMISSION'S REPORT.

It seems probable that the majority report of the Commission on Prohibition appointed by the Dominion Government will be something as follows:

"We, the majority of the Commission, beg to report that we have carefully studied the question of Prohibition and the Liquor Traffic generally, and come to the following conclusions:

"1. That the liquor traffic is not at all evil in its influence or results, therefore we oppose Prohibition and every form of restriction."

"2. That unrestricted trade in liquor is more in accordance with our views."

"3. That in our opinion ministers of the gospel and others make too much fuss about the excellent liquor traffic."

"4. That the liquor traffic is, in fact, an elevating agency, wherefore every church should have its own saloon in the basement."

"5. That it seems from statistics that "Canada spends about $35,000,000 a year in intoxicating liquors, and about $9,000,000 a year on tea and sugar. We respectfully but strongly submit that more money should be spent on liquor and less on tea and sugar."

"6. That nothing so much promotes the happiness of homes, the success of young men, the safety of the public, or the prudent oversight of business, as the lavish use of liquor; therefore we recommend that associations be formed everywhere, under the auspices of the best men and the best women of each community, to devise steps to promote its increased consumption."

"All of which is respectfully submitted."

JOHN WAS INJUDICIOUS.

Singular Sequel to the Arnoldi Trial.

The Charges of Fraud, Conspiracy and Malfeasance Toned Down to "Misbehavior!"

OTTAWA, Sept. 16.—John R. Arnoldi, the suspended chief mechanical engineer of the Public Works Department, was arraigned before Justice Armour, at the assizes to-day, charged with fraud, conspiracy and malfeasance while in the department. B. B. Osler, Q.C., and J. K. Kerr, Q.C., prosecuted for the Government, and the defense was sustained by G. Blackstock, Q.C., and F. H. Chrysler, Q.C.

W. A. Allan, Ottawa, and J. R. Wilson, Montreal, each testified to having the steamer Joe, owned by Arnoldi, registered in their names at the request of Arnoldi, the former charging the Government $80 a month and the latter $100. These accounts were certified correct by Arnoldi, who paid their checks and they handed Arnoldi the money, which he pocketed.

Similar evidence was given by Fred Merritt, nephew of the accused, who deposed that a stove shed belonging to Arnoldi was entered in the Public Works books as owned by witness, who was supposed to charge the department $80 per annum. Arnoldi likewise certified to this amount, and gave his nephew a check, who handed back the amount, which he kept.

At the conclusion of the evidence for the Crown the judge brought matters to a halt by raising the question on which the prosecution could make a conviction. His opinion was that the accused was guilty of misbehavior while in office, as contained in the first three counts of the indictment, but the more serious charges in the latter three counts he held could not be proved. If the defense thought so and accepted this advice they would close the case then and there and he would instruct the jury to bring in a verdict of "Misbehavior in office" and not guilty of fraud.

Counsel for defense consulted and resolved to put in no evidence. Accordingly Arnoldi stands guilty as mentioned. Judgment is reserved and sentence will be delivered in Toronto. Bail of two sureties of $1,000 each and himself in $2,000 was accepted.

Lord Stanley and Premier Abbott. MONTREAL, Sept. 17.—The Governor-General has arrived in town from Quebec in his private car, which he made his headquarters. Sir John Abbott came in from St. Anne's and had a long conference, lasting an hour and a half, with him. Lord Stanley will return to Quebec this evening.

The Bonus Priest. GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 17.—Patrick J. Ryan, the bonus priest who swindled several local merchants with forged checks on the strength of his clerical appearance, pleaded guilty in the Superior Court yesterday and was sentenced to eighteen months in State prison. Ryan also operated successfully in Windsor, Sarnia and other Ontario towns.

Supposed to Have Been Lost. ASHLAND, Mich., Sept. 17.—Considerable concern is felt over the safety of the steamer Osceola and consort Isia Corning and Donaldson. They should have arrived at Ashland Tuesday, but nothing has been seen or heard of them. The owners at Cleveland have telegraphed to Ashland parties concerning the boats several times, but no information could be given. It is feared that they are lost. They were chartered to load timber at Ashland by Martin, Sillman & Davis. Nothing has been heard of them since they were loaded through the Soo Canal Monday.

THE DUQUESNE RIOTERS.

Twenty-Nine of Them Indicted by the Grand Jury.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 17.—The grand jury handed down true bills against the Duquesne rioters yesterday. They are 29 in number. The defendants are charged with unlawful assembly in connection with the riots at Duquesne on Aug. 4. The informations were all made by Secretary Lovejoy, of the Carnegie Company, before Ald. McMahers. The men were arrested at various times, and most of them have been admitted to bail.

The cases against the Homestead strikers were before the grand jury yesterday morning, but there will be no returns until next week. The cases taken up were for conspiracy, and were about 40 in number. Several witnesses from Homestead were before the grand jury, which adjourned at 4 o'clock until Monday morning. Superintendent John Campbell was sent for by the grand jury and asked to produce the originals of certain messages that had been sent through the Postal Telegraph Company, and especially one sent from Pittsburgh to Homestead on the morning of July 6. This is the message, it is said, that warned the strikers of the approach of the Pinkerton barges. Superintendent Campbell refused to produce the message before the grand jury, which adjourned at 4 o'clock until Monday morning. He explained to the court that the company forbade its officials from making public private messages and he would not violate the rules unless the court made such an order. The court thought it would be best if Mr. Campbell furnished copies of the original messages and made an order to that effect at the request of Mr. Campbell.

The trial of Hugh O'Donnell, the strike leader, for murder, will open on Monday. Nearly all the correspondents from this city who were at Homestead have been subpoenaed as witnesses.

Mr. Blake's Reception.

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—The reception to Hon. Edward Blake will take place in the Horticultural pavilion on Monday night, and Hon. F. Smith will preside.

Something Like a Lawsuit.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Among the passengers on the Alaska who arrived Wednesday were Nicholas Moody, a London solicitor, and Henry Bouchette, of London. Their errand here is to consult with American claimants to the estate of Tart Howe. Litigation over the estate has been in progress for nearly a year.

It is probably the most famous lawsuit in history. Dickens made it the basis of Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce in "Bleak House." The amount involved is now estimated variously from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000.

Recovered from Her Year's Slavery.

JACKSON, Mich., Sept. 16.—May White, the school teacher of Stockholm who has puzzled the medical fraternity of the State with a very peculiar disease, at last shows signs of recovery. For over a year she has slept day and night, and could only be aroused for a few minutes at a time, when nourishment was given her. For a month past the stupor which she has lain in has been less profound, and last week she was able to open her eyes and recognize her parents. Monday, for the first time in twelve months, she sat up in bed and partook of solid food. Heretofore she has subsisted on liquid alone. The attending physician now believes she is on the road to recovery. When first attacked with her strange malady Miss White weighed 148 pounds; now she weighs 58. With the exception that all her senses have become dull she seems in good health. Her memory is almost a blank.

DREADFUL PSORIASIS.

Covering Entire Body with White Scales. Suffering Fearful. Cured by CUTICURA.

My disease (psoriasis) first broke out on my left cheek, spreading across my nose, and almost covering my face. It ran into my eyes, and the physician was afraid I would lose my eyesight altogether. It spread all over my head, and my hair all fell out. I was entirely bald-headed; it then broke out on my arms and shoulders, until my arms were just one sore. It covered my entire body, my face, head and shoulders being the worst. The white scales fell constantly from my head, shoulders and arms; the skin would thicken and be red and very itchy, and would crack and bleed scratched. After spending many hundreds of dollars I was pronounced incurable.

I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDY, and after using two bottles CUTICURA RESOLVENT, I could see a change; and after I had taken four bottles I was almost cured; and when I had used six bottles of CUTICURA and one box of CUTICURA SOAP, I was cured of the dreadful disease from which I had suffered for five years. I cannot say too much for what I suffered before using the REMEDY. They saved my life, and I feel it my duty to recommend them. My life is restored as good as ever, and so is my eyesight.

Adam Graeme, of Mossgrays.

By Mrs. Oliphant.

She sat in another elbow-chair opposite her husband. She was a sensible, kindly, good house-mother, and had been noticeable in any other connection, but the fervent, strong, passionate old man threw his gentle wife into the shade; and even her own son, whose name through all these weary months she could mention under her own roof only in prayers, were dimmed in the presence of the intense and terrible love of the father. She looked very old and tremulous as she sat there shaking in her chair, and wiping her withered cheek with her apron. Saunders, a so-and-so heavy moisture veiling the almost force light that burned in his eye, and the old man trembled too with the wild earnestness of his passionate appeal to God.

Mr. Oswald entered with a shy inquiry after Saunders' health. "Well enough, well enough—better than I deserve," said Saunders, rising with a haste which showed still more vividly his gaunt sinewy frame shook with his emotion. The visit was greatly esteemed and felt an honor, though Saunders scarcely thought it right after concluding the day in his Master's presence, as he had just done, to enter again into intercourse with men; they shut out the outer world when they closed their cottage door reverently upon the waiting daylight, and laid the book upon the table; but the old man rose to offer the banker his chair.

Mr. Oswald sat down upon a high stool near the table, and Hope got a low one, and drew it in to the hearth, where she could look up with those young fearless eyes, whose boldness was as intrusive to the old man's face. The banker was embarrassed; he desired to sympathize, but felt himself an intruder.

"I hear you have been ill, Saunders," he said. "Na, no to be ill," said Saunders, clearing his voice with an effort. "In an old man, and I get fairly but I have muckle mair than I deserve—mair than I deserve—mair than I have hagin to say and that did evil in my sight."

"Oh, Saunders, man!" It was the only remembrance his wife ever made. "And I'm no ill," continued Saunders, spasmodic shrillness in his voice. "I'm no strong in my bodily health, Mr. Oswald, it's no that, I gae to ye ane when my heart was turning—ye ken it's no that."

To no other man would Saunders have said so much, but he said it to the old man, who had been his friend, and he thought him possessed of his stern unselfish nature, without his miseries to bring out his harsher points.

"Oh, Master Oswald," said the wife, "say something till I speak to the auld man; bid him no be hard on himself."

"Whist, Margaret," said the old man, laboring to steady himself. "I have never—ye'll say you that diana ken. What would it become me to be hard on myself? I was hard on ane—aye—the auld man returned, the voice became hoarse and thick, and then broke out peremptorily shrill and high, "Ane that canna ken now how I have waited for him, yearned for him—oh, woman, ye diana ken!"

And the mother drew back into the darkness and hid her face; she too had yearned and travelled—but before this agony she was still.

"And gin we win up yonder where we have nae right to win," continued the unsteady, broken, excited voice, and seek for him among the blessed, and find him never—ye'll say I have nae wye o't? Me that avenged his sin upon him, and shut him out of my heart with a vow? The Lord might have saved him; it might have pleased him to have saved him; who can fathom the Almighty? but I vanished him away. I put him out of sight and of sound and sight of the word that says, 'I will be true to you.' Margaret, I hid ye hand your peace—ye have nae guilt o' his bluid—but for me."

The old man's head shook with a palsied vehement motion; the wild fire shot out in gleams from under his heavy eyebrows; the hard hand with its knotted sinews distinct upon it was clinched in bitter pain.

The banker sat beside him, awed, embarrassed, incapable; the small motives—the little endeavors of his own worldly existence, shrank away ashamed and convicted meanness in his presence. He could not act as comforter—he felt a mortal inability to speak at all to presume to intrude his own indifferent feelings before this stern avenging wrath of love.

And Hope sat looking up with her fearless, reverent, youthful eyes into the old man's harshly agitated face. She laid her soft girlish hand upon those swollen veins of his.

"Saunders, I think he's not dead."

The young face was quite clear, brave, un-doubting—the girl's heart, in which the first breath of the rising woman and the sympathy of childhood still met and blended, could tread in awe, but without fear, where the worldly man dared not enter. Peter Devis's mother threw her apron over her head and went alone; and after a convulsive struggle to restrain them, one or two heavy tears ran down the cheek of Saunders.

"Na, na, ye dinna ken—ye're but a bairn—ho's mine, and I cannae hope."

Oh, secret, hoarded, precious hope, to which the wrung heart clung with such passionate tenacity! He could not bear that a stranger's eye should glance upon it. He whispered it never in any ear but God's. His wife, the mother of the lost, knew it not except as she heard it in his daily prayer; and he denied it. Jealous of this spark of light which still was in his heart, he denied it rather than make its presence known; and yet—the light leaped up in its socket—the precious gem quickened and moved within him. He could not resist the quivering thrill, almost of expectation, with which he heard those words—the softening tears that followed them.

"Saunders, God let the prodigal come back that his father might forgive him. I think He will let Peter come back to hear ye; and ye'll be his friends with him now. There was a gentleman—Miss Maxwell knows him at Mossgrays—and they sent him word that he was dead; but he was not dead—he is coming home—and I think, Saunders, that Peter did not die."

"Is't true—bairn, bairn, are ye sure it's true?" cried Peter Devis's mother, "is he coming home—is he living that we've dead? Why telled ye it was true? If it happened wi' aye it might happen wi' twa—and my laddie! my ain bairn!"

"It is quite true, for Helen Buchanan told me," said Hope.

The old man trembled strangely. He held his head supported in his hands and was silent. He said the mother who spoke now; the secret treasure of hope in the old man's vehement breast would not bear the light.

"And she's true and afeard, but she's wiser than the like of ye," said the mother through her tears, "I see what she meant now; but she wadna tell me this, for fear I did hope, and my hope was vain. Oh, wile ken—wile ken but the Lord? but if it happened to aye, it might happen to twa, and His mercy has nae measure. It wadna be marvellous to send him to his grave wi' his father's wrath upon him."

The old man's harsh, stern voice was broken at every word, by the convulsive sob which he could not restrain.

"Haud your peace, Margaret, say only ill o' me, but if he slew your dearest ten times over dinna dur to malign the Lord."

Then they left those old, agitated, sorrowful people alone with their grief and their hope; the banker did not venture to reproach his child for her want of wisdom. His own mind was full of this youthful faith and boldness—this clear up-looking to the heavens—rash as it might be, and inconsistent with worldly prudence, was a higher wisdom than his. He felt that the girl at his side had met, in her simplicity, difficulties with which he dared not measure his strength—that the grand, sublime, original faith in the Father for the handling of the child than for the man. It made him humble and it made him proud; for the fearless girl's voice of Hope speaking to the desolate heart touched him to the heart.

"Should I not have said it, father?" said Hope, after a considerable silence. "Ye think it was wrong?"

"I cannot tell, Hope," said the subdued strong man. "It may turn out the wisest thing. It may—I cannot tell, Hope—ye have got beyond the regions of expediency."

He was not able with these things—he confessed it involuntarily.

"Because Helen did not tell them, father," said Hope. "If Helen had thought it was right, she would have told them."

"Does Helen visit them, Hope?"

Hope had forgotten for the moment the antagonism of Helen and her father.

"She goes sometimes—sometimes since poor Peter went away."

"And what does Helen say about Saunders, Hope?"

"I don't know, father, except that she is sorry; but I mind once what Mossgrays said, Mossgrays said it was a good thing that folk were able to change, and that it was a little late that Saunders did not change till it was too late—very miserable—that was what Mossgrays said, but Mossgrays should have told Saunders, father, about the gentleman."

"Mossgrays is wise; we are all wiser than you are, Hope," said the banker; "even your Helen. And that was what Mossgrays said, too late—he did not change till it was too late."

Too late—too late to keep the due honor of a wise father; too late to gratify the approve and sanction the righteous purpose of a good son. Too late! The words rang into his ear as the musical air of night swept by in its waving circles, and the moon rose in a haze mild and silvery. The gentle warmth of change was loosing the chains about his heart.

Mr. J. R. Allen, apothecary, Toronto sends us the following: "For six or seven years my wife suffered with Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Inward Piles and Kidney Complaint. We tried two physicians and any number of medicines without getting any relief, until we got a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. This was the first relief she got, and before one bottle was used the benefit she derived from it was beyond our expectation."

Three almost infallible ingredients for the development of cholera are vags, rage and jigs.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband; but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot make her body like a man's, and her husband's say so too.

A great many ways to act the prodigal find too late that they acted the call instead.

Piles: Piles: Itching Piles. SYMPTOMS—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia, Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents.

ROBBED BY HIS ERRAND BOY.

Jeweler Johnston Recovers the stolen Goods—The Youth Discovered Living "in Style."

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—For over a year Jeweler J. H. Johnston, of 17 Union Square, has been missing diamond rings and solid silver ornaments from his showcase. Albert Adett, 15 years old, has been employed as errand boy since January, a year ago. On Aug. 18 he was sent to collect some bills, and when he returned he handed in an account for a pair of bracelets amounting to $4.95. The trinkets had been purchased of W. H. Ball & Co., of John street, and charged to Johnston & Co. When Adett was asked where the bracelets were he could not tell. Mr. Johnston sent a clerk down town to find out, but when the clerk got there the bill had been paid by Adett. Mr. Johnston subsequently learned that Adett had sent the bracelets to a girl at Westcote Park, Pa. Adett was discharged.

Subsequently a former clerk of Mr. Johnston's called at the store and said that young Adett, while spending his vacation at Westcote Park, had been seen to have several diamond rings.

Mr. Johnston started for that place. He found his discharged errand boy living in style at the best hotel. He found in the boy's clothing and in his trunk three silver match safes, a cigar case, a silver-mounted wallet, a silver-mounted hair brush, comb and tooth brush, and five diamond rings. He also found in the boy's pockets $460 in money and a bank book showing a deposit of $500 in the Bleecker Street Savings Bank.

Mr. Johnston brought Adett back to this city and took him to police headquarters, whence he was taken to Jefferson Market Court and remanded for further examination.

Mr. Johnston says that in all Adett stole about $2,500, of which he has now recovered almost all.

Fire Hazard. Prof. Charles B. Gibson, of Chicago, in his special report to the insurance companies on the "Hazard of Steam Pipes" and upon "Coverings for Steam Pipes," says: "All organic matter, such as hair felt, becomes more or less charred by constant contact with hot steam pipes, even though the temperature be but a little above the boiling point of water; and by steam of 300° F. and above, so thoroughly scorched after a time as to become very fragile and to crumble away rapidly. It is noticeable that the dust formed from this charred material is very combustible and will flash like gunpowder when thrown into the fire. When steam of high temperature is used it is by far the safest to employ a covering wholly incombustible."

Church, of which he is a prominent member.

advantage.

of friends will be pleased to see him in the Forest City again.

cattle breeder of Delaware, has been at the Industrial Exhibition during the week

the Josie Mills Company, was given his first break by Myrtle Lodge, K. of P., last night. A large number of local brethren and the Pythian members of the company were on hand to see him ride

—The Josie Mills Company played to another sold-out audience at the Grand Opera House last night. "Condemned to Death" was again produced. The orchestra gave two musical specialties: "The Dance of Goblins" and "A Hunting Scene" with its usual ability. The management closes tonight with "The Ticket of Leave Man." A family matinee will be given this afternoon.

—A "North End" writes to show the necessity of a walk across the C. P. R. track, at George street. He says: "A great many school children cross the tracks on this street, and having no watchman, surely the least the company should do is to put a plank walk across the track, and the council to make decent approaches to same and avoid possible accidents and court expenses, whilst the present cost would not exceed $10."

—At Quagga Hall on Friday, in the case of Jackson vs. Huron and Middlesex Mutual Fire Insurance Company, W. W.
Fitzgerald (London), for the defendants, appealed from the report of the master at Goderich. The chief question raised by the appeal was as to the costs of certain garbure proceedings, which are referred to the master for disposition. The master reported that they should be paid by the appellants. Reserved.

—On Monday evening, Sept. 10, there came to the Grand Opera House a comedy called "Starlight." Jarbeau and her play come here heralded with words of praise from all over the land. This lady has been in London before, and upon the occasion of her former visit was well received here.
This time she has surrounded herself with a troupe of artists and specialists, each one of whom is said to be clever in his and her line. There is singing and dancing in "Starlight," all of which is bright, and Jarbeau throughout her tour. Jarbeau is a fascinating little lady herself and finds immediate favor with her audience.

years, living in Delaware township, about a mile east of Delaware village, committed suicide yesterday morning between 5 and 6 o'clock. Deceased lived on the first concession of Delaware township and was well-to-do. He was considered to be slightly demented during the last six months. He was found hanging in his barn about 6 o'clock in the morning. He leaves a wife and family of six children. A jury was empaneled and the inquest was adjourned until Monday.

—No Fear of Cholera.
Mr. Wm. McClary writes: "There can be no doubt that the cholera is now in New York city, and we may reasonably expect that it will pay us a visit this year or next.
I do not think it can be stopped in its western march, but it may be so circumvented and checked as to be under easy medical control. I may tell you that I have lived in this city to see three visitations of cholera, and the scare to some was worse than the disease. The death rate was small. Should it come our citizens should not fear it, but live temperate in both eating and drinking, and look well to the digestive organs and laxation of the bowels. I think it very unwise to get up a sore and depress business. I have no fear of it myself."

—The Parson Got as Good as He Gave.
A clergyman in the neighborhood of Nottingham was complimenting a tailor in his parish on repairs which he had done for him. In the course of the conversation he, however, incautiously observed:
"When I want a good coat, I go to London—
they make them there."

—Before leaving the shop he inquired:
"By-the-by, do you attend my church?"
"No," was the reply. "When I want to hear a good sermon, I go to London—they make them there."

WHO DID THE DEED?

Interesting Local Case at the Elgin As-sises — A London Man Says That Farmer Steele Crushed His Overs Head.

Among the London witnesses in the case of Steele vs. the Canadian Mutual Aid Association, now going on at St. Thomas, are: Mrs. Turnbull, nurse at the General Hospital; Thos. Webb, No. 6 Hamilton road; E. S. Winnett, Hamilton road; Geo.
Collins, hotel-keeper, Edward Wilson, accountant; Robert Black, G. T. R. operator; Dr. McCallum, and Dr. Balfour, hospital superintendent. Steele is a farmer living near St. Thomas, and claims to have been robbed and assaulted by two men and thrown under a moving M. C. R. train at the corner of Maitland and Bathurst streets, in this city, on the night of Sept.
21, 1891. His right hand was crushed, and he is suing the association for accident damages. His claim is disputed on the ground that the wounds were self-inflicted.
In this connection the following evidence,
as taken from a report of the court proceedings, is interesting:

Edward Wilson is an accountant in London and lives at the corner of Maitland and Bathurst streets with his father. On the night of Sept. 21, 1891, he reached home from the Fair before 6 p.m. Between 8:30 and 9 o'clock he saw an alleged accident.
He was standing about 150 to 200 feet from the spot where the man was thrown, and he saw that night was, he heard afterwards, Mr. Steele. He identified Mr. Steele at the solicitor's table as the man he saw. He first saw him on the south side of the Hamilton road. He crossed to the north side (shown in plan). Then he walked easterly for some distance till he passed a portion of a high board fence. He loitered there for a minute or two. The freight car train then came along. The five passenger cars had passed when the man walked towards the train, and witness thought he was going to get on the train.
But the man stooped down behind the side of the car. Witness saw no more of him till the train passed and the man got up and shouted, "Murder! Help!" Witness went up and asked Mr. Steele what was the matter, and he said, "My hands are cut off." No one else was about at the time. Though Mr. Steele was sworn that he was assaulted, choked and robbed, and thrown onto the track, it was not true.
No one assaulted Mr. Steele, and his injuries were received as witness had already described.

The verdict had not been given at last reports.

St. THOMAS, Sept. 17.—The Elgin Assises closed last night. In the case of Steele vs.
Canadian Mutual Aid Association—an action to recover $850 for total disability—
the plaintiff, Steele, insured with the defendants for $1,700, in the Provincial Provident for $5,000, and in the Independent Foresters for $3,000, half of which insurance he would receive upon total disability. A few days before his injuries he took out an accident policy in the Western Fair, and the day he was thrown he left the city he took a $3,000 accident policy in the British North America Company. He was to receive the whole of the Hartford policy on the loss of both hands. This company settled their claim for $1,600. The jury retired at 2 p.m.
and at 7:30 p.m. came into court and said they were evenly divided and could not agree and were discharged.

THE TORONTO INDUSTRIAL
Doherty Organs.

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—Yesterday was American visitors' day at the exhibition, and it was one of the most successful days of the fair. The attendance was very large and the receipts at the gate were $14,951, an increase of $1,168. The total receipts are over $3,000 ahead of last year.

To-day is review day. The weather is fine and attendance large. During the afternoon the horses and cattle that have won prizes will be passed in review before the grand stand. The exhibition directors had among their guests at to-day's luncheon Hon. Messrs. Hardy and Gibson, of the Ontario Government; Messrs. Reid and Bigelow, members for Toronto, and Mr.
Awrey, provincial commissioner to the World's Fair at Chicago, who all spoke favorably of making the Industrial a Dominion affair.

At the Toronto Exhibition the famous Doherty Organs attracted universal attention. The excellent appearance of these celebrated instruments, the elaborate new designs in cases and the well known rich and powerful tones of the Doherty Organ were the chief attractions for those who love music. Messrs. Doherty & Co. were greatly complimented on their fine exhibit.
These organs are exhibited at the London Fair by R. S. Williams & Co., and are for sale at their stand on the Exhibition grounds, at the Williams' piano ware-rooms, 229 Dundas street.
