ABOUT 175 excursionists, members of the C. M. B. A. and others, from Pic-tou, Stellarton and New Glasgow, N. S., arrived in this city by the steamer Jacques Carter, at 2 o'clock, on Monday. On arrival here they took a special train for St. Dunstan's College grounds, where the lawn party, in aid May 18, 1898, of St. Joseph's Convent, was in progress. They were accompanied by the Stellarton Band. They left for home at six o'clock,

M. P. for Montmagny, is about to be ppointed, if he has not already been appointed, if he has not already been appointed, Judge for the district of Arthabasca. It was necessary to create this new judgeship, in order to satisfy Mr. Chcquette's ambition. Mr. Choquette will be remembered as the long haired gentleman, who accompanied and offensive Grit members in the Commons, who represented West Lambton, Ont. has also been appointed to a judgeship in the Ontario Court of Appeals. This is also a new judgeship, created during the last session. Here are two cases of members sitting and are two cases of members sitting and voting in the House with the promise of office in their pockets. Even the surpicion of such a thing as this, when the Conservatives were in power would almost cause such purists as Sir Richard and Mr. Mulock to take a fit. Thus the evidences of Grit hypocrisy go on increasing.

MR. HENRY BURKE, a well - known nurseryman of Southport, died very sud-denly on Friday evening last. He had crossed to Southport in the 4.30 boat, He had his bioycle with him, and after crossing, rode to his home on the Lot 48 road His wife and daughter were away in the States, and Mr. Burke took his meals at a neighboring house about 200 yards from his house. About seven o'clock Mrs. Henry, the lady who keeps the house where he took his meals, seeing he was not soming to his tea, sent a little girl to sum mon him, Wnen she entered the house she found him lying on the floor beside a chair, as though he had fallen from a sitting position. She gave the alarm. When Conroy, Coroner, was notified, and an in quest being held, the verdict was " death quest being held, the verdict was "death from natural causes." Deceased was about 5g years of age, and was well and favourably known throughout the province. He had been troubled with an affection of the heart for some time, and it is thought that the exertion of riding hurriedly from the boat to his home had a fatal effect.

Protestants, and they all give as the motive of their writing the groundless and unjust opinions, impressions and prejudices generally prevalent among English-speaking people in regard to the true character of the Spanish people. Mrs. Woolson gives a clue to the origin of this unavorable estimate of the Spanish character. After alluding to the universal agreement in denouncing the Spaniard as a "cruel, blood hirsty and treacherous being, and his na-tion as a corrupt, fast decaying power," she says :-"It is a view embalmed in the Ist class, (Fren judice, but, thank God, there are always some honest, independent souls who are willing to do justice ven in the face of hostile prejudice. Mrs. Woolson's testimony in favor of the Spanish character is very emphatic. A luding to the popular, opinion she says:— "Yet, observation has taught me that, so far from being correct, this prevalent opinion regarding the people of Spain is the exact opposite of the truth. Judging orly from what I have seen for myself, I am compelled to believe that the Spaniards at home are a singulary hones', quiet, sunny-natured race, corning meaness, and honorable for onor's sake. With great sobriety of demeanor, especially in the north they have kindness of heart and generosity of spirit, and maintain a frank, sincere bearing in all their in ercourse. I am aware how incredible this will sound; yet allegiance to truth and justice makes any othe testimony on my part impossible."

Speaking of the invariable courtesy and kindness with which she was everywhere treated she continues :-"Nowhere did I behold any violence of demeanor or speechsuch as one often sees in Italy, if not honorable mention, Bernard McDon- evidence of a passionate and revengeful temperament, Everywhere was order, quiet, good-humor. Two officers from the national civil guard made every road and railway station absolutely safe even in the lonliest mountain passes."

Space will not allow us to quote further from this interesting letter.

The testimony of Mr. Guernsey, he Herald's regular Mexican cor respondent, is similar to that of Mrs. Woolson:—
"I say this," he writes, "about the Spaniards. I know and have been among them for years. I am aware of their national defects, but they are a brave, a religious and a kindly people." "The Spanish residents right in our shop, where customers can see what they are who regard the Spaniards as Don Quixotes, or as fire-exters, do not know them. The north-country Spaniard is a trans-Atlantic Yankee cute and hard-working."

He says the Spaniard is frank, a

England Puritanism. The refining, purifying, elevating influence of the Catholic religion, as developed in Mexico especially among the women, young and cld, is a favorite topic with him.
