CHAPTER XV.
"MY HEART IS BROKEN."

Her voice, so pleading, so pitiful in its purity and modesty, would have turned a heart of stone; but, unfortunately, the marquis did not possess a heart of any sort.

"Very nice, very—very—charming," he said, patting his hand almost as if he had patted hers. "I am sure you do, and your faith does you great credit. And you utterly decline to believe that he would do you any harm?"

"Oh, most utterly!"
"Well, then, let us assume that, like the young gentleman in the ballad, he weds—and weds: you will be the Viscountess Fane, and soon, I trust, the Marchioness of Parintosh."

She did not start or look dazed by her future magnificence, but her dark eyes dwelt upon his face with a faint dread. His unnatural calmness, the sweet, placid voice that was as smooth—and as cold—as a running stream, smote her with apprehension.

It seemed so self-assured, so full of conviction and power, cold, deadly power, that it fascinated and froze her.

"You will be the Marchioness of Parintosh, the mistress of what the slang of the day calls 'immense wealth,' the wife of a man who wielded an enormous influence. Now, as a rule, such men choose for their partners some young lady who is their equal in birth, not because they are not powerful enough to stand alone—oh, no!—but because there are certain duties which their wives have to perform that require a preparatory training; certain ladies, ladies of noble family, are trained for the position, just as a lawyer or a doctor is trained for his profession. Do you follow me?"

She raised her hand and let it fall upon her lap as a token of assent, and with a slight, courtly bow he went on:

"They fill the position to the satisfaction of their husbands and the world at large, and all goes well; but supposing that a young man in Lord Edgar's situation marries a girl who is not so fitted, who has not received this special training, what happens? Can you not guess?"

"Tell me," she murmured, with dry lips, her eyes fixed on his pale, impassive face, as a dove's might be enchained by a serpent's.

He inclined his head again.
"This happens: The young wife finds herself in a strange sphere, she finds herself suddenly flung, as it were, into the society of what the world calls grand people, her husband's equals but not her own; she is strange, nervous, shy. Poor thing! how could she be otherwise? She commits little breaches of good manners; she is not accustomed to the state and form and ceremony of his position, and she feels awkward and out of place. But for the time the young husband does not mind; he loves her, you see, so fondly, she is so pretty and delicious, that he overlooks it; but presently she begins to be unhappy, the great ladies sneer at her, and whisper among themselves and they let her see that they do so."

He paused and wiped his dry lips with the white cobwebby handkerchief, and she watched him as if the action had been part and parcel of the blow he was slowly, gracefully dealing her.

"But worse than this, they begin to pity him. They whisper that he has thrown himself away—that he has married beneath him—"

"Ah!" she drew a long breath. It was breaking in upon her, this subtle, devilish logic that was crushing her young, innocent heart.

"And their whisper is not so low but that it reaches his ears; their looks are so eloquent that he sees them, and he begins to see it as they see it; and at first he is irritated; then he grows unhappy; his wife sees this and becomes paler and less pretty; the love that flourished so promisingly begins to fade, and at last he observes that it is quite true and that he should have plucked the stately rose who would have lived and flourished by his side, and not the little lily of the valley who can only wither and die in this uncongenial atmosphere."

A pause. She did not speak, but her face had grown fearfully white, and her little hand was pressed hard against her throbbing heart.

"So at last there grows up a barrier between them, and one day he tells her to her face that he has made a mistake, that he no longer loves her, and she knows that the best thing she can do for both is to die. But before this can happen, my lord has found the woman he ought to have married, and one day he leaves this young and wretched wife and—'are you faint? I have tired you!'—of she had swayed toward him and then fallen back; but at his words she sat upright and put up her hand.

"No, no! Go on!"
He smiled beneath his handkerchief. He had won the game, he knew; but he would finish his stroke and complete the score.

"I don't think there is much more, except that the poor lily does die, or, worse still, lives on—a broken, crushed, and altogether withered flower, the innocent cause of her own ruin and that of the man she loved, not wisely, but too well. 'Too well!' Not well enough to save him from his own folly! Do you think I have been drawing upon my imagination? Do not flatter me! My dear child, I have not. I am the most practical of individuals, and my little sketch is taken from the life of some half a dozen cases within my experience and it is not overcolored."

Silence for a moment. Her face was turned from his, one hand clasping the back of the seat, the other closed tightly in her lap, the graceful figure bent sideways.

He looked at her, as a surgeon might look at an interesting case upon which he had been operating, then smiled again with cold satisfaction.

"Of course," he said, "I do not wish to convince you against your will. I merely give you the benefit of my advice and experience. If you choose to run the risk—many girls would—"

Then she turned, and the lovely face was almost saint-like in its deathly pallor of self-sacrifice and love martyrdom.

"I am—not one of them, my lord!" she said, in a piteous voice, so still, and low, and clear, and full of misery and resolution. No! I love your son, Lord Edgar, too well—to ruin him. I ruin him! I would rather die here at your feet! And, ah, my lord, you have nearly killed me!" and her lips quivered as if she had received a mental blow.

"Spoken like a heroine!" he murmured, sweetly.

"Like a poor girl, who loves with all her heart and soul, and would give her life for his she loves!" she breathed, the tears running down her child-like face. "I see now why you were so assured of getting your way! I know that what you say is true, for—I feel it! Lord Edgar shall not marry me, no, oh, no! I will never see him again, never! I will not ruin him, let who will. But—and her hands clasped in piteous misery—"It is hard, so very, very hard! I was happy and content until he came! I did not know what love meant until he taught me! I would not have dared even then to have loved him, if he had not made me! And now you tell me, and I know, that my love would ruin him! Oh, why have I ever lived to be so unhappy!" and with a moan she covered her face with her hands.

"My poor child," murmured the marquis, "I am very sorry for you! My heart bleeds for you." It must have been, as the Spaniards say, a very white kind of blood: "It does indeed! If I had known that this little romance had gone so far, I think—but no! duty must be performed! and, though it is hard for you to believe it, let me whisper this consolation: 'Better that you should suffer for a few weeks—it will be no longer—'"

"Shall I die in a few weeks?" she murmured, and it was the one word of bitterness that escaped her.

"For a few weeks than to be miserable for years, and to know that you, all innocently, have made him wretched also! Think of that, my child, and be—comforted."

A bishop could not have spoken with greater tenderness or solemnity, and the cold, impassive face grew quite gentle.

"And you are quite resolved?"

"Resolved!" she shuddered.

"It is well," he said, nodding his head. "Then let me impress upon you the importance of keeping to your resolution not to see Lord Edgar. Love is strong, and duty grows weak when put to so severe a test as his presence and persuasion would be. Do not see him, but leave here at once—I will arrange things for you. As for him—Leave him to me!"

"You will not—My lord, it was my fault!" she breathed, turning swiftly, woman-like, rousing to defend her loved one.

He smiled.
"Lord Edgar is not a boy, to be punished, my child. Besides, he has done no wrong! He would have been less than human not to have loved you! I should have done the same if I had been in his place. No, no; when I say leave him to me, I mean leave me to contrive some means of keeping him out of your way. A few weeks and he—both of you—will have recovered from this little episode, and—"

She arose, tearless now, lovely in her pallor and misery.

"Are you going?" he said, rising and extending his hand. "My poor child, you have suffered much! If it were not that I am conscious of having acted only for your good I should feel greatly, very greatly. Will you not shake hands? You do not bear me any enmity, I trust?"

Slowly she put out her hand and he took it. As he did so it seemed to strike like ice to her quivering heart and she shuddered. He held it and looked at her. The last blow, while the iron is hot.

"If by chance Lord Edgar should insist upon seeing you—he is quite capable of it—you will be firm, my child?"

She did not speak, but looked at him with a sorrowful intensity.

"Yes—yes! Be firm. Remember that if you yield harm will come of it. As certainly as that you and I are standing here—both very wretched—if you yield, and let him have his way, ruin will follow!"

She remembered it, only too well, then; and in the bitter hereafter also.

Slowly she drew her hand away, and slowly and with evident, painful effort moved to the door.

As she did so, Mr. Temple emerged from it.

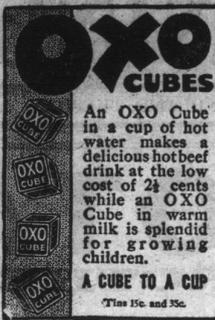

"Why Lela! Out so late? It is too chilly. Why, child, what is the matter?"

For, with a low sob, she had fallen upon his breast.

"Oh, grandpapa—grandpapa!" she sobbed. "My heart is broken—broken!"

Mr. Temple stood with troubled eyes and wrinkled brow, patting her and caressing her, all unconscious of the awful presence of the marquis.

"Lela, Lela! What is it? Come, tell me! What is it?"

Then the marquis moved into the moonlight, and the old man started and stared amazedly at him.

"My—lord!" he faltered; and, as his grasp relaxed in his astonishment, Lela slipped from him and glided slowly and pitifully into the house. The marquis stood stern and cold; there was no smile upon his courtly face now, only a pitiless impatience and contempt.

"I—I hope your lordship is better," said Mr. Temple, with a bewildered air.

"Mr. Temple," said the marquis, "I have not had the pleasure of meeting you for some years, but I have always understood you to be a learned man. I regret that a learned man is not synonymous with a wise man."

"My lord!"
"I should have been for better satisfied if I could have thought that you had been a rogue, but I find that you are only a fool!"

At this insult, uttered in a voice as cold as ice, as hard as steel, the gentle old man started and turned white, and his thin hand closed over the handle of his stick convulsively. Then the thought struck him that what had been prognosticated so long had happened at last—the great marquis had gone mad!

"My lord, this language—" he faltered.
"Is no stronger than you deserve. I said fool, not rogue. And who but a fool, buried in his miserable books, would have been blind to the fact that the child committed to his charge was in deadly peril!"

"Lela!" exclaimed the old man, amazedly. "Deadly peril! My lord, there is some mistake!"

Yes, certainly he had gone mad.
"There would have been some mistake, and worse, but for the chance which led me here to-night to discover that my son, Lord Edgar, and Miss Temple are in the habit of meeting here in this garden at night, and alone!"

"Lord Edgar here!" echoed the poor old man, looking around as if he expected to see the stalwart form among the shadows.
The marquis struck his stick sharply on the ground.

"Yes, and not for the first time. Man, you have been blind!—he has been here often."

"Only twice, my lord marquis."

"With what object I presume you are not too insensately ignorant to surmise. Enough that, beyond persuading the poor child to love him, he has done no further mischief. But they owe no thanks to you in that—"

"Stop, my lord!" exclaimed the old man, drawing himself to his full height, and looking as much like a marquis as the marquis himself. "Your son is a gentleman, and an honest one."

The marquis' sneer was fine to behold.

"You talk like the girl," he said, with icy scorn. "Did you ever yet know a Fane honest?"

"Until this one, no!" was the stern retort.
The marquis laughed, an unpleasant laugh.

AD HIT FOR BOLSHEVIKI.

HELSINGFORS, April 28. Newspapers to-day report that fish volunteers on Saturday captured the town of Lotinapello on the White Sea. BIG FIRE AT YOKOHAMA.

YOKOHAMA, April 28. A large section of Yokohama was ravaged by fire to-day, two thousand buildings, including a part of the business section being burned. Firemen from Tokio aided in checking the flames before they reached the foreign residential section.

BRITISH SECRETARY TO LEAGUE.

PARIS, April 28. The revised covenant of the League of Nations was adopted by the plenary session of the Peace Conference this afternoon without division and without amendment. The Covenant had been moved by President Wilson. In his speech explaining the revised covenant of the League of Nations, the President said that Sir Eric Drummond, of Great Britain, had been named as the first Secretary-General of the League. Sir Eric James Drummond has been Private Secretary to A. J. Balfour, the British Foreign Secretary, since December, 1916. Previously he had served Sir Edward (now Viscount) Grey in the same capacity while Sir Edward was Foreign Secretary. From March, 1912, to June, 1915, he was Private Secretary to Herbert H. Asquith, then the British Premier.

THE CHARGE AGAINST THE KAISER.

PARIS, April 28. At to-day's plenary session of the Peace Conference the Council of Four presented the text of a peace treaty provision for the prosecution of former Emperor William by a court of five judges "for a supreme offence against international mor-

PARIS, April 28. Baron Makino, the head of the Japanese delegation, in a speech at the plenary sessions said he regretted the omission from the Covenant of the League of Nations of a racial equality clause. Japan, he added, was obliged to revert to her original position on this question.

House of Assembly.

Yesterday.

The House met at 3:30 p.m.

Petitions were presented by Messrs. Hon. J. C. Crosbie, J. Abbott, J. Stone and T. LeFevre. In answer to a question by Mr. Piccott, Mr. Bennett read a statement to the House re the dispute of last December between himself and Messrs. Montgomerie, Macpherson, Paterson and Parsons in connection with the Military Hospital. The following questions were then asked:

(1)—To ask the Hon. Minister of Finance and Customs to lay on the table of the House a detailed statement of the sum of $4,061 paid to Mr. T. A. Hall, the Government Engineer, during 1917-18, for vote and sundries;

(4)—To ask the Minister of Finance and Customs to lay on the table of the House a detailed statement of the amount of $73,622.08 paid to the Reid-Nid. Company during 1917-18 for construction work on railway;

(4)—To ask the Minister of Militia to lay on the table of the House a detailed statement of his expenses while on his trip to England and France, also the amount he has received as salary for acting as Deputy Chief Censor during 1918 and 1919;

(5)—To ask the Hon. Minister of Public Works to lay on the table of the House a detailed account showing the cost of reconstructing the bridge over Roman's Brook in the District of St. George's, and all expenses in connection therewith;

(6)—To ask the Hon. Minister of Finance and Customs to lay on the table of the House a detailed statement of the following amounts, which were paid in 1917-18, Public Accounts, Sir E. P. Morris, $3,000 for services; Sir P. T. McGrath, $750 for services; Tonnage Committee, $1,000 for expenses;

(7)—To ask the Hon. the Finance Minister to lay on the table of the House a statement showing the amount of money paid to the Newfoundland Produce Company for the use of the steamer Cabot, for the years 1917 and 1918, giving the nature of the work performed by said steamer and length of time employed.

The House then went into Committee on Supply.

Mr. Currie (Burin), leader of the opposition, raised the question of hospital accommodation, pointing out that present methods of dealing with outpatients seeking entrance to the institution, called for improvement. He also took up the question of the large payments being made the doctors for special services, and suggested that it would be much more economical were the Government to employ a physician or two solely for this special work.

The Premier replied that they had the various matters referred to by Mr. Currie, under consideration. A vote was being given to the Twillingate hospital, and further aid extended to the Grenfell Hospital. Mr. Grace was also contemplating the erection of a hospital, and that would be helped.

Referring to the vote for Marine and Fisheries, Mr. Currie quoted some extracts from the report of the Minister, Mr. Stone, and asked if the Government intended to act upon the suggestions of the Board of Trade regarding scientific investigation. He pointed out that if the country was to undertake any reconstruction it should be in connection with the development and cure of our fishery. This was necessary of we hoped to maintain our position in the world marts.

Mr. J. G. Stone (Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Trinity), made a bold and strong speech on the fishery question, condemning political interference with the fishery laws, and asserting that his recommendations had not received any consideration from the Government. He also dealt with the work of his Department since he took charge almost two years ago, eulogizing the work of the late Minister, Mr. A. W. Piccott. He first touched on the cure of fish, condemning it root and branch; it was obsolete and would, if persisted in, bring ruin to our great industry. He urged the necessity of appointing a scientific man to educate the fishermen in curing our staple article. He would like to see grades made for the curing of fish, say, Nos. 1, 2 and 3. The Department did not receive the consideration its importance demanded. He could not be expected to institute reforms when he could not get authority from the Government, when even letters sent by him were never answered. He had read letters from Professor Dunstan, showing that our oil would favourably compare with any oil on the market for medicinal purposes. The herring market was in a bad way to-day, largely through our own fault. To his knowledge the District of Twillingate had lost a quarter of a million dollars this past winter owing to certain individuals boosting the prices to a prohibitive figure, and driving the buyers away. As far as his department was concerned there was too much politics mixed up with the conducting of it to be a real benefit to the country. He saw a great future for the herring industry if it were properly looked after. He told of the troubles with the Inspectors, several of whom were dismissed, and of the bad packing by dealers, from whom fines had been collected. During the past two years the industry had grown to the value of $2,000,000, and he believed it could easily reach $5,000,000. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries held the closest attention of the House during the delivery of his address.

Mr. A. W. Piccott (Hr. Grace), endorsed the remarks of Mr. Stone, thanking him for his kindly references to himself.

He could sympathize with him in his troubles with the Government, as he had passed through the same thing himself. Party politics played altogether too important a part in the running of the Department over which he and Mr. Stone had to preside, and until eliminated from its conduct, it will not be successfully run. There is always too much jealousy between the Government and the Department. He then traced the development of the herring fishery in Green Bay and agreed with the Minister in everything he had said, especially with the statement that quite a lot of money had been lost to the people of that bay on account of certain individuals. His firm alone had taken away two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars from these people on account of the price going so high that they could not afford to buy. He told of the visit of Mr. Duff, who had been brought here through his instrumentality, and of the tremendous value the introduction of the Scotch cure had been.

Mr. Duff estimated that our herring industry could reach twenty-five millions a year, but he would put it in at fifteen millions. Mr. Piccott pointed out the danger of demanding unreasonable prices. British Columbia had taken up the Scotch cure after we had, but thought it had to ship its fish across the continent, was able to undersell us. He condemned the cure and cull of fish in no uncertain way and said that our fathers in curing fish forty years ago knew more about it than we did now. People curing fish had to be taught that they were curing food, and not an article of commerce. That was our great trouble, the fishermen forget that the fish they are curing are to be used for human consumption.

Reference to the Florizal disaster and the need for a tug and other safeguards around the coast, was also made.

Mr. Currie asked the Minister of Marine & Fisheries to have the dredge sent to St. Lawrence, where her services were badly needed. The Minister promised to have her sent there on her way from Grand Bank, where she was going to do necessary work.

Mr. Walsh also asked that consideration be given his district, as he had been asking for the dredge for some years, and Mr. Stone promised to do his best in the matter. Mr. Walsh also discussed some matters in connection with roads and ferries, and made a special plea in the interest of his constituents.

On the vote for Agriculture and Mines being taken up, Mr. Piccott asked that same be deferred until the Minister of that Department was in his place in the House. Not once this session have we seen the hon. gentleman, said Mr. Piccott, and now that the vote for his department is to be taken up he protested against its passage until he was present. The Rt. Hon. the Premier replied that Mr. Clift having accepted the position of Commissioner of Pensions, he had forfeited his seat in the House and therefore could not sit.

The committee rose until to-day. The bill to amend the Weights and Measures Act was read a second time, and the Colonial Secretary tabled the report of the Agricultural Board.

The House adjourned until to-day at 3 o'clock.

THE CURE OF FISH.

All the meetings and consultations that have been held in St. John's during past years to discuss methods for an improved cure of codfish have failed of accomplishment, and the reason is not far to seek. All the meetings and deliberations that may take place in the future having for their purpose the same worthy object are likewise foredoomed to failure, because the situation cannot be met by a few men gathering together at a talkfest and propounding theories which never get beyond the report in the newspapers. The crux of the whole matter is that no concerted action has been, so far, taken by our large purchasers and shippers of Newfoundland's staple. Anything has been deemed good enough for export, and the man who makes bad fish is put upon the same basis of payment as he who turns out a No. 1 article of cure. Ill-advised competition has killed the proper cure of fish, and particularly is this the case on Labrador, where cargoes have been hurriedly loaded and sent to market without proper supervision or care taken to see that the quality is in fit condition to ship. The rush to get away the first shipments and to be the first in the European market has, in the past, been responsible for the inferior cargoes leaving our shores, cargoes which upon arrival across had been found absolutely unfit for food and ordered destroyed by port authorities. The race to be first has been the means of causing the falling off in the cure of Newfoundland fish, and the unfair practice of paying the price for the poorly made equally with the prime cured, "picture" fish, has been the chief sin of the trade, and that sin has had its aftermath. Competition from other fish producing countries has entered into against Newfoundland in the overseas markets; and we are faced with a condition of things, which might have been anticipated had a little forethought been used. Our indiscretions and carelessness in curing our produce have brought us face to face with the realisation that a quick change of method is immediately necessary. The present is no time to bewail our sins of omission in the past, and appeal to science to help us out. Dependent on the sun as we are for the cure of our fish, it is obvious that more care only is required to turn out the superior quality for which Newfoundland was held famous. But unless that care is recognized by the buyers, and the makers of ill-conditioned fish penalised in price, there will not be any visible improvement all round, and our foreign competitors will, with their superior cure, have an advantage over us which we will never surmount.

The fish merchants must cooperate with each other and the Government to institute a standard of cure, which shall be observed and carried out, prices to be graded accordingly. Standard inspection must also be provided in order that the quality of the fish exported will be beyond criticism. All our experience has apparently gone for naught, as instead of improving our produce we are falling behind, so much so, that unless a decided change takes place both in the quality and cure of our foreign fish shipments we shall be relegated to a position far below that due to our importance as the purveyor of fish to the nations.

Preparing for Flight.

The work of fencing, clearing and grading the aeroplane ground at the East End of town has been completed, and the men engaged in the work put off last evening. Some men with horses and rollers are to-day rolling the ground. It presents a fine appearance, arising with a gentle slope from east to west of a half mile or so in length. Mr. Reid thinks it would be hard to find anywhere a more ideal site.

The Handley-Page machine, weighing over 33,000 lb. and moved by an engine of 1600 horse power which was reported last week packed ready for shipment is expected to leave Liverpool to-morrow for here via St. John's or possibly direct.—Hr. Grace Standard.

St. Andrew's Ladies' Auxiliary.

All persons wishing to forget carking care for a few hours are recommended to attend the combination function, under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of St. Andrew's Society, which will be held in the Club Rooms, Duckworth Street, to-morrow evening. There will be a Sale of Work, during which afternoon Teas will be served. The really pleasant hour will however be spent at the Card Party and Dance and as every preparation has been made to make this combination the most enjoyable and a record breaker, those who avail of the opportunity to attend will not regret their decision.

Steamed to Port.

With reference to the item in yesterday's Telegram stating that the s.s. Mary was towed in by the s.s. Euphrates, the chief engineer of the Mary, Mr. C. Dahl, desires us to say that though the Euphrates stood by while a slight injury to the Mary's engine was being temporarily repaired, the latter boat was not towed to port but came in under her own steam.

CAPT. J. H. CAMPBELL, A.D.C.

A Word of Farewell.

A Soldier? Yea, a soldier, one who fought In freedom's quarrel, 'gainst the sullen might
Of Hunland battling against God and right;
A Songster? One whose voice has often brought Tears to the eyes, or glory to the thought,
Or happy looks, or tender memories bright,
By its clear notes; a genial Friend? At sight
Of him, smiles come to many lips unthought.

Yea, more than these: this Isle of Avalon Sees him depart with sorrows, for his fame
Amongst us is—that he, in sympathy
With those in need, and truest charity,
Spent his best talents for their help alone;
And fatherless and orphans bless his name.

ROBERT GEAR MACDONALD.

Legislative Council.

The Council met at 4 o'clock yesterday.

The third reading of the Election Act was again deferred.

The committee stage of the Compensation to Workmen Bill for Injuries suffered, was taken up, but deferred on the suggestion of Hon. Mr. Ellis.

The Tenancy Bill was read a second time, and Hon. Mr. Anderson, the introducer, explained that the Bill was not for the purpose of affecting prospective builders or the owners of houses in course of erection but was for the protection of those living in houses now and unable to get any other tenement. The operation of the Bill would be for 3 years or until the housing problem was solved.

Mr. Anderson referred to other countries and said the Government should come forward and help, but that the worker should interest himself in the move. The co-operation of the Government and City Council was needed, and that money could be saved by a proper system of housing. Hon. Mr. Goodridge admitted that the housing problem was acute but thought the city labourers could protect themselves without a public grant as was evidenced by out-portsmen who came here and built houses for themselves.

Hon. Mr. Harvey denied that he on a previous occasion had said the bill was "far fetched." He considered, however, that if passed it should not continue in force longer than one year. It should not be forgotten that all commodities had gone up and consequently house rent. In St. John's many widows owned houses and were unable to make repairs, unless they received higher rents. Money did not represent the rent paid, it was the actual value of the money that counted.

Mr. Harvey also stated that no restrictions should be placed on contractors for carrying of freight as it might hit the export carrier; and he also referred to the neglect of the Government in not putting signal stations on the Southern Shore, as suggested by the Florist disaster enquiry.

Hon. Mr. Ellis in reply said the Government was awaiting the approval of the Marconi system of announcing from buoyed places dangers to approaching ships. Hon. Mr. McNamara referred to the hardship entailed on the widow and others who rented houses if the Bill as introduced by Mr. Anderson was passed.

The bill was read a second time, without opposition, and goes to committee next meeting. The other bills on the order paper were read a second time, and at 5:30 adjournment was taken until four o'clock Wednesday.

The annual session of the Grand Lodge of the Society of United Fishermen opened at Burin on the 17th April at 8 p.m. The Worthy Grand Master and Brethren received a cordial welcome from Burin Lodge, No. 13, the brethren of that Lodge assembling in good numbers for that purpose. The general public of Burin also made the visitors welcome and did all possible for their comfort and convenience during their stay. Pass the Charter.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In yesterday morning's News I saw a reference in its editorial "That it isn't likely the Government will recognize and make law, The Charter of the Municipal Council, framed three years ago, this session." This cannot be true, as the Government pledged their word last November to that body that they would pass the measure at their next sitting, and the public of St. John's are watching that this promise be adhered to. This a measure that should have been attended to, and passed immediately on its representation. This a measure which will benefit the present and coming generation more than is seen on the surface. And if the public of the city are wise and take into consideration all that "Charter" means for them in days to come, and for their children who are to come after them, they will demand, through the public "press" and by other means, that the Government attend to this matter during the present sitting and carry out faithfully their pledged promise to men who are handicapped and debarred from having this city and its environments all themselves and the inhabitants expect and look for it to be. Hoping other citizens will take up this matter in time and press its adoption, and believing that the Government will pass this Charter before retiring this session, and thereby gain the goodwill of the thousands whom 'twill benefit. I remain,

Yours truly,
April 29, 1919. OBSERVER.

Fire Averted.

On Sunday morning, at one o'clock, some young boys visited the workshop of Mr. George Lilly, Quidi Vidi Road, and set fire to a quantity of shavings near about the shop. Mr. Williar, who lives about two hundred yards further east, coming from his house, discovered the smoke issuing from the blaze. But for this the entire range may have been razed to the ground. The men living around did all possible to extinguish the fire, succeeding after some little trouble.

His Parting Thrust.

The new butler was most attentive to the visitor. He waited upon him most assiduously at dinner, brushed his clothes with the care of a mother, and finally saw him to the waiting car, hovering around him like a shadow.

The visitor, who was rather inclined towards miserliness, made no attempt to recompense these delicate attentions by means of the usual tip, so as the car started stationwards the butler remarked: "Shure, sorr, if ye lose yer purse on the way remember ye didn't pull it out of yer pocket here!"

Let Us Have Peace.

Let us have peace, O mighty Four! Sweet Spring is here, 'tis at the door. And nature cries for swift succour— To all this hate—let us have peace!

"Let us have peace," while Belgium bleeds. Her wounds unstanched, her glorious deeds forgot, and o'er her ruined towers The screech owl reigns the passing hours?

"Let us have peace," while France alone Must guard the gate, her helpers gone! Shall her fair breast forever be bared to the sword to keep you free?

"Let us have peace," would ye thus feed The ravenous brute whose lot dead Drenched falfrest lands in seas of blood While he himself escaped the rod?

"Let us have peace," though gaunt-eyed stalks The Terror Red that, leering, mocks At man's restraint; though freedom die By its own hand the while ye lie.

Supine, inert, nor heed the call To save her from so great a fall, Or homeward turn with spreading sail Content an ye but miss the gale?

Ere this shame come, the brave who fight, Their warfare past, their deeds confessed, Shall from the humbled tomb arise; For freedom lives, though all else dies.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—I beg to forward herewith copy of letter sent to the Editor of the "Daily Star," and I shall be glad if you will kindly publish same in your paper.

Yours truly, J. G. STONE, Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

Dept. of Marine and Fisheries, St. John's, Nfld., April 29, 1918.

Sir,—Referring to your Editorial in yesterday's "Daily Star," in which you presume that I signed a cheque for the sum of one thousand dollars in favor of the Hon. Sir P. T. McGrath for "investigating fishery problems" I beg to state that your presumption is entirely wrong.

I never signed any such cheque. For your information I may add that the whole subject of these services rendered by Sir P. T. McGrath to the Fishery Commission and the payment for same never came under my jurisdiction or notice at any time or in any way.

I have the honor to be, Sir, Your obedient servant, J. G. STONE, Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

Hr. Grace Notes.

All last week our harbor was filled with ice, but yesterday's high westerly wind soon cleared the harbor and to-day we are enjoying a delightful weather, which we hope will continue as we have had a lot of unfavorable weather lately.

Our father people are now busily engaged in getting their boats, twine, etc. in readiness for the summer's work, and the sound of the caulking mallet can be heard in all directions.

Mrs. Wm. Walsh of Carboner Road, who has been a sufferer for the past 12 years owing to injuries received by a fall, is now very sick and was prepared for death a few days ago.

The funeral of the late Mr. Wm. Ward took place on Friday last and was very largely attended. Practically the whole business of the town was suspended while the funeral was being held. The brethren of Lodge "Harbor Grace," A. F. & A. M., preceded the hearse, thus paying the last tribute of respect to their deceased brother. As a man, and as a Mason, Past Master Ward was loved and admired by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. Our town is truly in mourning over the sudden death of this good citizen.

The sch. Peerslee, owned by Mr. E. Simmonds, is being repaired at his premises here. The work is being done by Messrs. S. and J. Tafford, and will be a good piece of work when finished.

Mrs. Margaret Quilty, who was just recovered from a serious illness, is desirous of thanking the kind friends who did so much for her during her illness. They are:—Dr. Boyle, Fr. Finlay, Misses A. Groke, M. Ross, A. Foley, A. Coombes, L. Madigan and F. Parsons, Mrs. Theo. Ross, Mrs. W. A. McKay, Mrs. Watts and Mrs. C. D. Garland. Overwork was the cause of the illness.

PRETTY SERIOUS.—"What's the matter now?" asked the leading actor, as the manager tore a letter to shreds and stamped his feet. "Matter? That performance of yours is so infernally bad that this person demands that his name be stricken from the free list."

SURE DEAD MEN CAN TALK.—Cy Robinson, of Vineland, N.Y., a colored teamster, is positive dead men can talk. While unloading several coffins a ventriloquist happened by and, throwing his voice into the coffin said: "Let me down easy, please." Cy let go of the coffin and the supposed corpse landed on the ground, while the colored man raced out the alley at a furious pace.

Furlough Money.

Here are some of the means used by marines at the barracks at Quantico, Va., to earn extra money for furloughs. One man spent his time picking up coins dropped by passengers at the railroad station. He collected $15. Another wore pillow covers and fashioned bead necklaces out of the multi-colored magazine covers. He made $100 in a month.

Many were impromptu tailors and barbers. Others sold postcards and pictures on commission. Many collected tinoli and sold it for a tidy sum per pound.

PATRIOTISM THAT PAYS.—Mr. Vanderlip's powerful statement that the war made a change of at least $12,500,000,000 in favor of the United States, is one way of putting the startling fact that so far as money goes the war was the best thing that ever happened to us; that from a purely money standpoint it has been a vast profitable operation.

Economical—
Because It Covers More

EVEN if this paint were sold at a price half as high again as any other—it would still be the economical paint to use on your house. In sheer covering capacity it has no equal. A gallon of it goes so far that you'll buy less of it and yet do more with it.

B-H PAINT

This paint is guaranteed to possess as its important basis the above formula which we inscribe on every can.
The result of such a formula is all that you could ask in brilliance of color and in proper "body"—a paint which gives a fine lasting finish, excelling all others in "covering capacity" and in durability. Paint with B-H "Easa coat of ordinary paint will last but a few months.

The Third "Shift."

People sometimes speak as if the new world were to be a creation of only two main forces—Capital and Labor. But a third force intends to have a hand in the business. The social fabric is to be reconstructed by Capital, Labor and the Masses. And when you come to think of why not?
Man is agitating to reduce his wage-earning hours to eight. He also proposes to continue taking eight hours sleep. What is he going to do with the other eight hours? This is a domestic, and therefore a National question. Is the reduction of hours to be in the interest of the home, or only of booze and bookmakers? Amidst this triumphant assertion of the claims of the working man, will ANY laborer be afforded to the most sweated toiler in the world—THE WORKINGMAN'S WIFE!

In the old days John's reply, when asked by his wife to take a definite share in home duties, was this: No, our lives are different. I can't look after the cooking and the kids and the housework, any more than you can do my job, which brings in the dollars.

The logic of that argument has now been blown to the winds. Factory work, bus driving, farming, bill sticking, police duties—woman has proved that she can do them all. So nothing remains but for man to learn how to make beds, bath the baby, and bake rice puddings.

John is pulling wry faces over the prospect—saying he can't, and doesn't want to, and wasn't brought up that way by his mother. But thoughtful women are paying the opposite sex the compliment of saying they don't see why, with a little encouragement, the average man should not acquire efficiency at the wash-tub, say, as quickly as his daughter learnt how to collect fares in a crowded tramcar.

"At present," said Mrs. Will Crooks, wife of the Labor M. P., "the average married woman's working day is a fragrant contradiction of all trade union ideals. Just think of it—getting breakfast and seeing the children off to school; doing the housework, and the washing, and the cooking; getting the other meals for the children and for her husband on his return; putting the children to bed; doing the mending and the making—why, the poor thing is slaving all the time!

"What she needs—what she longs for—is just a little break or change now and again; an opportunity to get her mind off her work and its worries.
If her husbands hours are reduced to eight, well, that gives her a chance doesn't it? The home and the children, after all, are as much his as hers.
With his enlarged leisure he will now be able to take a fair share in home duties. "I suggest that they take it turn and turn about—one night he goes out and she looks after the children; the next night she goes out and he takes charge of things at home.
She can sometimes go to the cinema —sometimes call on friends. Then, say, once a week, they can both go out together, talking with the children with them. That will be a little change and treat for everybody."—Halifax

MADE BY SCOTT & BOWNE
MAKERS OF SCOTT'S EMULSION

Stunts Done by Man

WITH TWO ARTIFICIAL LIMBS.
Hitherto it has been regarded as quite sufficient for an artificial limb that it should look the part in repose and be resistant enough to support weight when called upon so to do.
says a writer in "Technical World."
That it should be capable of motion at the will of the wearer, like a real flesh-and-blood member, has never appeared to be within the possibilities. Yet a New York maker of artificial arms has achieved the well-nigh impossible.

Offhand, most people would say that a man with no arms at all, or, rather, with two artificial limbs, would have a hard time dressing himself. But a young New Yorker has not only accomplished this amazing feat, but is doing many other remarkable things with the two artificial arms which for a number of years he has worn in place of those first given him by nature. In fact, he goes through the paces of everyday life without the slightest fuss or effort, and yet he has found for flesh, steel for joints and rawhide cords for muscles in place of the real fingers and wrists.

The arms are made of willow fiber, with rawhide cords as muscles, each one attached to suspenders stretched across the back and chest to give tension. Forward movement of the stump raises the elbow. A downward movement of the shoulder pulls the finger cord, bending the hand backward from the wrist joint and opening the fingers. Another shrug of the shoulder closes the fingers and locks them so that they can hold whatever object is being handled.

NURSERY HYGIENE.

The nursery is the most important room in the house; therefore its hygiene must be above suspicion. Many parents fall into a fallacy regarding modern heating methods, and while admitting the comfort, cleanliness and convenience of the Gas Fire, call its suitability for nursery use into question on the grounds of hygiene.

This idea is wrong. The modern Gas Fire is more hygienic than the coal fire, has all its good points without its bad ones. The Gas Fire gives radiant heat and assists ventilation.
All the products of combustion are carried off by the fine connection to the chimney. There is no smoke, dust or ashes, and for a sick room
it is invaluable.

The modern ventilated Gas Fire produces radiant heat, a natural heat similar to that given by the sun, and adds hygiene to its many other advantages.

Fires, phone 97 or call at the Gas

April Drops.

"April" is from "Aprilis" and that from the Latin asperire—to open; a reference to the opening of the earth for cultivation, or to the buds.

April's precious stone is the sapphire, which symbolises "repentance."

April 23rd is the day of England's Patron Saint, St. George.

There was an old belief that any child born in the last seven days of April would "dye a wickeded Deth."

April brides are of mercurial temperament and make good mothers but trying wives.

All Fools' Day was formerly on January 1st, and not April 1st.

Of the days in April the 16th and 21st are the unlucky ones.

Despite April showers, there is less rain in April than in July.

April is one of the healthiest months of the year, holding none of the rigours of March nor the treacherous changes of May.

The French equivalent of our "April fool" is a "silly fish"—
Poisson d'Avril.

To dream that you are caught in an April shower indicates the loss of a friend's affection.

Thought it Was a Drink.

A private on war service in Palestine had news of the arrival of a son and heir. He therefore asked his wife to could himself be present and provide

John Orth's Love Story.

(Pearson's Weekly.)

A generation ago there was no more enviable Prince in Europe than John Salvator. Strikingly handsome, a profound scholar, ligist and poet, this gifted kinsman of half the world's Royalties was one of the most brilliant soldiers of his day, with a genius for war which made a Field-Marshal of him in his early thirties.

But to his great gifts were allied an autocratic will and a passion for reform and intrigue that were to prove his undoing.

At the very zenith of his dazzling career his scathing criticism of the Austrian military system and his hot-headed interference in foreign politics so incensed his cousin, the Emperor Franz Josef, that he dismissed him from the army and banished him to his country estate near Gmunden. Here he spent long months of solitude, "eating out of his heart"—a solitude broken only by very rare visits to a Vienna theatre.

One night in the Imperial Theatre there floated on to the stage a vision of radiant young beauty, which was a revelation to him of female loveliness.

There was a subtle witchery in every glance of her bright eyes, and every undulation of her exquisitely-fashioned body which intoxicated him; and before he left the theatre he realised that he would know no peace until he had made this alluring creature his own.

Pretended He Was a Student.

Before he was a day older he had discovered that the girl who had cast such a potent spell over his heart was Emilie Stubel, daughter of a small Viennese tradesman; and a few days later he had made her acquaintance in the guise of a student.

Between the handsome "student" and the lovely lady of the ballet there soon sprang up an affection as mutual as it was strong. But the course of their love was not fated to run smoothly; for Emilie's parents, when they discovered by accident that their would-be son-in-law was none other than an Imperial Prince, shut their door against the Royal fraud who, they thought, could have no honourable intentions towards their daughter.

But love laughs at parents' frowns, as at locksmiths; and thus it came to pass that one day the Stubels awoke to find that their bird had flown and that the Prince had flown with her. Nor did they again set eyes on her until, a few weeks later, she invited them to the Prince's Gmunden estate as his legally-wedded wife.

A few happy months passed for the young lovers in their retreat until John Salvator, unable to bear his disgrace and inactivity any longer, determined to fare forth into the world to earn his livelihood as plain "John Orth," divested of all his Royal trappings.

Vanished Completely.

Then followed a period of wandering, during which we catch glimpses of the vagrant Prince as, now a waiter in Boston, now a reporter in New York, and again as a common labourer in Italy. Then, equipped with a master's license, we find him setting sail with his wife, the faithful companion of all his roaming, from Liverpool on board the Santa Margherita—a vessel of 1,800 tons which he had purchased—on a voyage to South America with a cargo of cement.

We know that she arrived safely at La Plata; but from the moment the Santa Margherita's masts dipped below the horizon on her perilous voyage around Cape Horn to Valparaiso, she vanished as completely as if the sea had swallowed her.

From that moment not a trace of the ship or any soul on board has been seen to this day. Expeditions sent to explore the South American coast failed to discover a solitary survivor or even a vestige of wreckage.

But although it seemed humanly certain that the vessel had foundered and had carried her ill-fated crew to the bottom of the sea, there has scarcely been a year since that John Orth still lives. He has been recognised as a soldier in the Japanese Army; in Chili fighting against Balboa; in Argentina, masquerading as Don Ramon, a recluse; on board an Atlantic liner; and in the streets of London.

And although not one of these rumours has been proved true, there are many who still believe that he will be true to his promise made to his niece, Princess Luise of Tuscany, shortly before his mysterious voyage: "I am about to disappear; but never believe that I am dead; for I will return one day and we shall meet again and talk of this sad parting."

Geneva as a World Capital.

(From the Toronto Star.)

The report that Geneva has been selected as the permanent seat of the League of Nations seems to be authentic. A more imaginative and impressive choice would have been Jerusalem or Constantinople. Either would have carried a vast historical significance. But Geneva has the merit of convenience, and there are other arguments for locating the new Capital of the nations in a neutral country. Certainly of all the neutrals Switzerland has the highest claim. Among the Allies there has been no suspicion that the Swiss Government leaned toward Germany, and all the belligerents are indebted to it for its services in caring for war prisoners and in helping to maintain the international character and work of the Red Cross. The central position of the country, surrounded by France, Italy, Germany, and Austria, its cosmopolitan or polyglot population, and its stalwart democracy, are also points in its favor.

More than any other neutral city of Europe, Geneva will appeal to the sentiment of the Allies. It is the heart of French Switzerland, a heart that beat in sympathy with the cause of freedom throughout the war. The city is sublimely situated, with a view of lake, river, and mountain unsurpassed on earth. Although called since the middle of the sixteenth century the Protestant Rome, its population is evenly divided between Catholics and Protestants, and is almost wholly French-speaking. It is bathed in the splendor of history, with a tradition of freedom as the refuge or retreat of some of the greatest men of all countries—writers, artists, scientists, and philosophers. The city is worthy of the new honor and dignity about to be bestowed upon it, and it may become the light of the nations as it was of the literary world during a portion of the eighteenth century.

Lengthy Law Suits.

A lawsuit regarding Rhodesian mining rights, which has reached the House of Lords in its fourth year, is quite a legal infant when compared with some that have preceded it. The Thellusson will case for example, dragged out in the courts from 1797 to 1857. Another similar action-at-law, known as the Bishop-Demeter will case, lasted 122 years. Even this however, is not a record. For in 1908 there was settled at Priemar a lawsuit that had been in progress since 1439. The raising of a dam some few feet was the point at issue, and it occupied the courts for exactly 478 years.

Obeying Orders.

"Now Jane," said the mistress to the new maid, whose first job it was, "open the window, sit outside on the window-sill, and wash the windows with this lather, and then rub well with the soft duster to give them a nice polish. When you have done the outside you must do the inside in the same way. I am going round to the butcher's, and shall expect to find the windows all done when I come back."

On returning from shopping she found a crowd of men and boys gazing up at her house. She hurried home with all sorts of dread visions in her mind, but on reaching her gateway was surprised to see two legs in gaudy stockings protruding from her bedroom window.

She let herself in with her latchkey and hastened upstairs.

"Oh, Jane," she wailed, "how could you do such a thing? I am quite ashamed of you."

"Well, ma'am," said Jane, "you told me I was to do the inside of the windows in the same way, and I was doing as you told me."

Girls Thicken and Beautify Your Hair and Stop Dandruff.

Try this! your hair gets wavy, glossy and abundant at once.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

A Remarkable Flight.

Information regarding a remarkable flight of a German Zeppelin has recently been reported by a British correspondent who learned the facts since the coming of peace. A German airship, it is said, left Bulgaria carrying a crew of twenty-two men, tons of munitions, and medical supplies, bound for German East Africa, which is approximately 3,000 miles from Bulgaria. According to the account, while the ship was flying over Khartoum, it received a wireless message ordering it to return, the Germans having learned that the majority of their troops in their African territory had surrendered.—Popular Mechanics.

Nerves That Tire.

The most easily tired nerves in the body are the nerves of smell. As you pass a rose in the garden the quantity of perfume that gets into your nostrils must be many millions of billions of times smaller than the finest grain of sand. But rub the strongest perfume on your upper lip, and in a few seconds you fail to notice it, the nerves of smell is so quickly fatigued.

which are quite distinct from the nerves of ordinary sensation, also give over working very quickly. A bath that seems quite hot when you get into it very soon ceases to cause any particular feeling of heat.

Nerves of hearing and sight can go through an enormous amount of work. For sixteen hours a day they work hard, and are still willing to do more.

The nerves of the heart are the most untiring of all. From the first dawn of life until the last gasp they work without stopping for one instant.

Weight: 145 lbs.
Face: Thin
Features: Prominent

Description: When last seen was on his way to hospital. U.S. to weigh 135, had florid complexion, good appetite and enthusiasm for work. Six months ago began to have irregular bowel movements. Took pills. Lost weight—still irregular. Took salts—violent results. Had medical examination; doctor diagnosed case as self-poisoning, due to clogged, decaying food-waste in large intestine; said pills and purges had weakened the intestinal muscles so they would not function. Man protested violently that he was not sick. Doctor replied that he had been sick since first bowel irregularity. Prescribed complete rest and the Nujol treatment. Said if he had cultivated regular habits with Nujol he would have had no more trouble—now, however, he was an easy mark for the poisoning he was allowing in his own body.

REWARD: For restoration of this man to regularity, Nature offers reward of health and return to normal weight and keenness.

Observed at the House.

The address of Mr. Stone, yesterday, was one that reflected no credit upon the interference of the Government on marine questions. We can endorse the words of the speaker that party politics are too rife. The Minister's able speech yesterday was worthy of attention, but some of the Government members did not like the tenor of all his remarks, and figuratively some were shaking in their shoes.

The shower of questions still continues, but it takes some time to answer them all. Archives have to be searched, and no doubt, some correspondence is mislaid, so that we do not wonder that very often the time of waiting for the required information is indefinitely extended.

The Minister of Mines still absents himself. It is amusing to note the contradictory remarks of the Premier. He says, Mr. Clift is not eligible to sit in his seat in the House, but he is able to retain his ministryship and also his pensioner-sitting as well as his Executive seat. Surely in our "Silent Doctor" we have found the miracle of the age, and more honor is yet to come to our native Isle.

It is quite in accord with the doings of the Government to note that no signals or life-saving apparatus have yet been arranged for the protection of ships along the Southern Shore. Are they waiting for another repetition of the "Florist disaster"? It is but another instance of that lack of respect which the Government shows to sensible recommendations. "Consideration is needed," is the invariable reply, but the answer now is being prepared by the voters of the country. "We have considered and out you go!" So be it.—M.P.

A five passenger touring car, electrically lighted and started, and fully equipped, will cost you only $1,375.00 delivered.—ap25,41

Sydney Hotel Burned.

The Anglo-American Telegraph Co. advises receipt of a message from Sydney, Cape Breton, stating that the Sydney Hotel was destroyed by fire last night, and that the manager, John I. Robinson, is missing, he being supposed to have perished in the flames. The financial loss is estimated at $150,000. No other particulars are to hand.

Railway Notes.

The express which left St. John's last Tuesday was held up at Clarendville, owing to the storm of Wednesday referred to by the St. John's press as a mid-winter snowstorm. It is not correct, however, as stated by a section of the press of the capital, that like conditions "extended from the city to Port aux Basques." Spring-like weather prevailed at this part of the line.

The railway contract calls for a fifty pound rail, and the heaviest engine to weigh thirty tons exclusive of tender. The axle load in daily practice on the Newfoundland railway, says Engineer Hall, is eleven tons, while that of the rotary snow plow is seventeen tons; English practice for similar roadbed would be eight tons. Engineer Hall in his evidence at the Mount Moriah railway accident enquiry, recommended the laying of an eighty pound rail, the widening of the roadbed, better ditching and more ballast.

On the 8th inst., we received official assurance that the regular cross-country express and mail service would be resumed the following day. Since then, however, we have averaged something like a train a week, while the Kyle is still making Placentia a port of call, and the latest mail we have received from Canada is a week old. Passengers from the coast for Canada and United States have been delayed over a week at a time and some have had to abandon their proposed trip and return to their homes from Port aux Basques. Every effort, however, seems to be made to facilitate the foreign mail and passenger traffic for the capital.—Western Star April 23.

The Harkins Co.

"Broken Threads" as played by the Harkins Company in the Casino Theatre last night, was greeted with a packed house. "Broken Threads" is a drama in a prologue and three acts. The play concerns the lives of one Dorothy Danell, a cabaret singer, and Harry Wynn a proprietor, and contains plenty of comedy relief for the pathos and tense situations, in a highly entertaining manner. Miss Dalton, as the cabaret singer, sang and acted with equal grace the difficult role throughout. Keith Ross, as Harry Wynn, won his audience with a certain manliness. Mr. Cody was excellent in a comedy role, and Mr. Harvey, Mr. Mann, Mr. Hanlon and Huber, all gave excellent performances of their several roles. "Broken Threads" will be repeated to-night for the last time. Wednesday and Thursday nights "A Stitch in Time"; Friday and Saturday nights, the world-famous "Crock" play, "Cheating Cheaters." Matinee Saturday, at 2.30. Seats now on sale.

Newsy Items.

(From the Western Star.)

We hear that the Standard Oil Company will start building at Hind's Cove shortly. The contract has been awarded to W. Ellis of St. John's.

At the Imperial Oil operations at Spruce Point, a large number of men are engaged in excavation work. The charges are being set off by battery. There is a danger zone in that vicinity at the present, and by notice elsewhere in this issue, boats passing are requested to give it a wide berth by keeping well off shore, as some of the stones go a long distance.

The tea and sale on behalf of the new Presbytery was opened in St. Patrick's Hall on Monday night. The stalls showed a good display of very choice needlework, while the tea tables were heavily laden with all manner of good things for the inner man. The tea accompanied by a dance was continued last night.

To be absolutely sure that a carbolic solution will not burn, use one part of acid to twenty parts of water. When opening a bottle of oil, pour oil brine and add a little olive oil, cork and shake well; let stand a while.

MOTOR CARS
Make your Motoring season an enjoyable one by owning the Car that all other motorists look upon with envy—the Buick Six is the most envied car in St. John's.
The Buick is always ready to take you anywhere you desire to go—it never falters.
When you press the starting pedal of the Buick, you are assured immediate response—the Delco starter is always on the job to turn over your engine every time you require it.
Buick Cars are luxuriously equipped, and upholstered in genuine black leather—no imitation. Strength of construction is an inherent quality of all Buicks. With the new Sixty Horsepower Valve in Head engine sixty miles an hour is easily accomplished, besides hills are made short work of.
A new and valuable feature is the entirely enclosed valves and engine, thus keeping out all grit and dust and giving longer life to the car, consequently the Engine is noiseless.
We shall be happy to let you look over our 1919 Buick Six which recently arrived—you will be convinced why it is the most envied car once you have examined it.
