CHAPTER LXV.
THE UNMASKING.

Reginald Dartmouth nodded; but Mr. Reeves, seemingly provoked beyond endurance by his cool insolence, exclaimed:

"Not! How dare you say 'Yes,' sir? Hugh Darrell, the dale is yours and has been yours since the moment the breath left your father's body. This is no time for explanation; but you see before you a villain, who, by a series of daring crimes, has usurped your estate and squandered your property! Silence!" he continued, his swarthy, calm face working with passion as Reginald Dartmouth made a step forward and seemed about to speak. "At the moment of your entrance," he continued, turning to Hugh, who looked from one to the other with a bewildered but stern expression of interrogation—"at the moment of your entrance I was taxing him with his crimes. Here beside you are the witnesses who can and will hang him; here beneath my hand lies the last will of your father, which the villain made way with for an earlier one leaving the estate to him. This one, the last and valid one, bequeaths all to you save a small sum to him. Read it—read it."

And he held it out.
Hugh took it and glanced at the heading; then, with his eyes full of tears, shook his head and returned it.

"I can not read it," he said, simply; "my brain is in a whirl. Rebecca, what is all this I hear?"
Rebecca could only sob, at first, and murmur:
"It's all true, Hugh; all true."
Then Hugh turned to Reginald Dartmouth.

"And what say you to this accusation, sir?" he demanded, sternly.
Reginald Dartmouth, who had been watching the faces around him with keen attention and noting every tone as well as every word of each speaker, replied, with a coolness that his face and livid lips belied:

"What have I to say, Mr. Darrell—for I presume you are the long-lost Hugh Darrell? Simply this, and this only: that I do not deign to answer such absurd and groundless accusations as this person has made."

And as he spoke he drew himself up with an air of defiance.
Hugh regarded him with a long and piercing gaze.

"So that is your reply, sir?" he said, with slow distinctness. "It sounds to me somewhat guilty. But we will hear what Mr. Reeves has to say. And you, sir; may I beg the honor of your name?"

And he looked at Sir Charles.
"This gentleman," said Mr. Reeves, "is Sir Charles Anderson, a cousin of Miss Goodman. He has been a true friend, although an unknown one. He it was who discovered this will, and through his means we have been able to lay a still greater crime at this man's door."

Hugh held out his hand with a grave courtesy. Sir Charles took it and pressed it eagerly, glancing at Rebecca as he did so.

"Now, sir," said Hugh, turning to the lawyer, "let us hear your statement."

Mr. Reeves, with his hand on the table and his eyes fixed upon Reginald Dartmouth, commenced to speak; but the accused interrupted him with a scornful gesture.

"Pardon me," he said; "I have listened to a long tirade once before this evening. I have traveled far—beguiled hither by a false and dishonorable ruse—I refuse to submit to further indignity. Your absurd romance, sir, can be recited in my absence, I presume. Whether it can or not, I must beg to be allowed to depart. Business of an important nature compels my immediate return to town," he continued, with calm nonchalance, addressing Hugh. "If you wish to communicate with me, either through this person, your solicitor, or personally, Mr. Darrell, here is my London address."

And with a scornful air he threw his enameled card upon the table and made a movement toward the door.
Mr. Reeves stepped before him.

"Softly, sir!" he exclaimed, in his hard dry tones. "Your presence can not be so easily dispensed with. You will please consider yourself our prisoner!"

"Your prisoner?" repeated Reginald Dartmouth, with a dark sneer. "Pray, sir, how long have you held the office of parish constable?—nay, do not trouble to answer, but first produce your warrant."

Mr. Reeves's face darkened.
"You wish to drive me to extremities?" he said, significantly.
"I do," retorted Reginald Dartmouth, defiantly. "Produce your warrant, or let me pass."

Mr. Reeves stood aside.

"Go!" he said; "and make good your start. Before an hour has passed the warrant you desire shall follow you."
With another sneer the wily villain turned to shoot a glance of hate around and left the room.

Hugh passed his hand across his brow and, with a heavy sigh, sank into the chair Reginald Dartmouth had vacated.

Was it for this he had returned? To find his father dead—dead? To unmask a villain?

No—he had come post-haste to meet Cecil, the fair, sweet-faced lad that had crept into his heart.
Where was he?

As he lifted his eyes and looked upon the clutter of herse's Libby's thoughts, he rose and crossed over to where Rebecca and Sir Charles were conferring in an agitated under-tone with the lawyer. Mrs. Lucas and Doctor Toddy had left the room.

Mr. Reeves turned as Hugh approached and held out his hand.
Hugh shook it, but spoke to Rebecca, who had risen and now stood with downcast eyes before him.

"Rebecca," he said—"I must call you by the old name—we shall all awake directly. Tell me; are you glad to see me?"

"Oh, so glad; so very glad!" answered Rebecca, with a burst of emotion.
"Hugh, Hugh, why have you stayed away so long? Why did you leave your father to that sinful man?"
Hugh's face darkened.

"Because—"
There he broke off.
"We will have no more explanation to-night. Sir Charles, you will comprehend my utter ignorance when I tell you that I know not if I am safe in offering you the hospitality of the Dale. Nay," he continued, turning sadly to Mr. Reeves, "I scarcely know that I am not wrong in calling it the Dale, it is so changed."

Mr. Reeves groaned.
"Changed, indeed," he said. "What I have to tell you—But, there; as you say, there must be no explanation to-night. You have ridden far and fast, and—glancing at his rough, workman's clothes—were in unsuitable and uncomfortable garments. Miss Goodman has been begging me to offer you shelter beneath the roof of the Warren until the Dale can be made ready."

"Come, Hugh; do come!" pleaded Rebecca. "Mr. Reeves and all of you come and help me to bear all this, or I shall give way. Oh, Hugh, Hugh, why did you stay away?"
She seemed so excited and overwhelmed by a combination of feelings that Sir Charles judged it best to gently remove her from the apartment, and, aided by Mrs. Lucas and Dr. Toddy, got her to the carriage, which was waiting.

Leaving her in their charge, and whispering some soothing words, Sir Charles returned to the library, where, notwithstanding his decision not to enter into explanations, Mr. Reeves was telling the newly-arrived heir the story of the hidden will; the still darker suspicion of foul play in connection with the squire's death he had wisely determined not to communicate until a more fitting time.

Hugh listened with his face concealed by his hand, but the two could see that he was weeping, and that the story of his father's death was affecting him more than anything, and leaving no room in his mind for the recital of Reginald Dartmouth's evil deeds.

Mr. Reeves traced the course of events—with the before-mentioned omission—up to Hugh's sudden and opportune arrival, then broke off with:

"But, there, I've done what I had sternly decided not to do, harassed and tortured you, already wearied, much wearied, by the story of the whole affair. Now, sir, ere I am silent let me ask you one question: How came you—was it chance or design that brought you here at this critical moment?"

Hugh looked up with a strange expression and a dash of color that was almost a blush.

"Not chance, certainly," he said, with hesitation.

"You have only just arrived in England, of course?" said Sir Charles.

"No," said Hugh; "I have been in England some time."

"Indeed!" echoed the lawyer, staring at him over his spectacles as he rose and paced the room, and muttering inwardly:

"Just the same as ever—reserved and eccentric."

"Yes," said Hugh, with a strange smile. "I have been in England, a prisoner in the docks."

Mr. Reeves glanced at his clothes. "Prisoner—docks! Good Heavens!" he exclaimed.

The idea of the heir of Dale being a prisoner and in the docks seemed incredible.

Hugh smiled sadly.

"The story is too long or I'd tell you," he said, wearily. "As to how I came upon the scene at this late hour I may say that I came—by appointment."

"By appointment?" exclaimed Sir Charles.

The lawyer was too astounded to speak, but rang the bell.
"I'm forgetting everything in my astonishment," he said. "Here, in your own house, may I presume to order you some refreshment, Mr. Darrell?"
Hugh shook his head.
(To be continued.)

Could Not Sleep

Mr. Ernest Clark, Police Officer, 338 King St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

"For three years I suffered from nervousness and sleeplessness. I believe my condition was brought about by overwork. I had frequent headaches, neuralgic pains and twitching of nerves and muscles. I had indigestion, was short of breath and easily tired. I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and seven boxes of this medicine cured me of all my symptoms. I am now feeling one hundred per cent. better than I was, and have to thank Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the good health I am now enjoying."

These may be taken through the St. Lawrence Canal to the Great Lakes. It is possible, however, that the submarines may draw too much water to go further inland than Montreal. The ships will be kept a good deal of the time at sea in order that their officers and crews may be thoroughly trained in their duties. The squadron may prove to be the "nucleus of a Canadian Navy," although a permanent naval policy will not be formulated until after the subject has been discussed at the Imperial Conference in 1921.

MISS AMERICA'S WIN.

COWES, Aug. 11. The motor boat, Miss America, representing the Detroit Yacht Club, won the first race for the Harnsworth Trophy yesterday. The average speed was 51.45 knots an hour and the fastest lap was covered at 56.83.

PONZI SENSATION.

BOSTON, Aug. 11. Sensation followed sensation in the Ponzi case to-day. Charles Ponzi, who recently jumped into notoriety as a spectacular financier admitted that he was the Charles Ponzi who served a term of imprisonment in Montreal and Atlanta some years ago. At the moment that he was making his formal confession of his past, the Hanover Trust Company, in which Ponzi was a director was closed by Commissioner Joseph Allen. Allen declared that reports of his agents indicate that the bank was doing business in an unsafe manner. Ponzi resigned from the directorate of the bank this afternoon. The admission of Ponzi and the closing of the Trust Company were quickly associated in the minds of hundreds, who had been waiting anxiously in downtown streets for developments that had been hourly expected. The crowd soon gathered in front of the Hanover Trust Company at the corner of Washington and Water Streets and presently the street was filled almost to the exclusion of traffic. Ponzi, who organized the securities Exchange Company and took in millions for investment from thousands of clients said, in his statement to-day, that he took blame for another person in Montreal. He also insisted that he was still solvent and could pay all notes now outstanding against him.

A FICKLE FAIR.

LONDON, Aug. 11. Capt. Paul Miller to whom Helen Butler, the Manchester tylist transferred her affections, while on the way to Canada to marry a Canadian officer, has been arrested in Edinburgh charged with false pretences. Miss Butler was re-shipped to England by the Canadian Immigration authorities from Halifax, where she declined to marry her original fiancé. She endeavored to obtain admittance to the United States at New York but was refused. Captain Miller returned with her to England.

HUNS STAB FRENCHMEN.

PARIS, Aug. 11. Two French non commissioned officers were stabbed at Mayence last night by Germans, who were intoxicated, according to a despatch to the Petit Parisien from that city. The injured men were taken to hospital, it is said.

THE "GRUB" PEST.

To prevent damage to plants and shrubs a simple remedy is a weak solution of Sulphate of Ammonia. Use ¼ oz. of Sulphate to one gallon of water. On no account use a stronger solution or you may "burn" the plants.

We have a limited quantity of Sulphate of Ammonia at our Showroom, Oke Building. Full instructions given with each package. ST. JOHN'S GAS LIGHT CO. jne11, 6m.t.h.

GRATITUDE WONT PERMIT HIM TO STAY SILENT

St. John's Man Says His Digestion Seemed To Be Hopelessly Ruined But Tanlac Brought Back His Health.

F. Martret, of 25 Princes Street, St. John's, N.F., is still another World War Veteran, whose deep sense of gratitude and desire to help others will not allow him to remain silent regarding the great benefit which he has derived from Tanlac. In a recent statement telling his experience with the medicine this is what he says: "Before I joined the army I used to suffer a good deal with indigestion, but while in France I was gassed and after that my stomach became so upset I couldn't eat a thing without having awful pains in the pit of my stomach afterwards, and often could not retain a thing. I became so bad at last I had to be sent to the hospital and was there for eighteen months. I got so weak I had to be helped in and out of bed and never thought I would pull through. When at last I did get about again, my digestion seemed to be ruined. I also suffered a great deal from constipation and had such terrible headaches they almost drove me distracted. I tried many kinds of medicine but none of them did me any good and I almost despaired of ever being a well man again.

"My father was wonderfully helped by Tanlac after he had been a sick man for twenty-six years, and he urged me to try it. I'm mighty glad I took his advice for it made a new man of me. It gave me such an appetite that I can now eat like a horse and the beauty of it is my stomach is as good as a new one, and I am never troubled in the least with indigestion. I have gained several pounds in weight and feel as strong and well as I ever did. I no longer suffer with constipation, am never bothered with headache or dizzy spells and I sleep like a log every night. Both my father and I think Tanlac is the best medicine on earth and can't say too much in praise of it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors; by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avondale; J. J. O'Brien, Cape Broyle; J. W. Smith, Baine Harbor; W. A. Burdock, Belleoram; John Morey, Fermeuse; Mrs. Jos. Quinn, Renew's--adv't

Snakes and Suicide.

The only time the viper commits suicide is when endeavouring to save its life. The hedgehog is the enemy of the viper, and attacks it in rather a peculiar manner. It creeps quietly up to it from behind, and getting a grip of the viper's tail with its teeth, rolls itself up into a ball of prickles.

The viper, in order to release itself, turns and attacks the hedgehog; but instead of reaching, as it is intended, a vital part, it dashes its head with considerable force against the prickles of the hedgehog, which naturally inflict serious wounds. Time after time the snake attacks its captor, and each time its condition becomes worse, until finally it dies from wounds of its own making. The hedgehog then unrolls itself, and proceeds to devour its prey. Before doing this it goes carefully along the body, cracking all the bones in it. It commences its meals at the tail-end.

It is said that the porcupine captures snakes in the same way. Only, instead of waiting for the snake to kill itself before commencing its meal, the porcupine begins to eat the tail while the viper is dashing its head to pieces on the prickles in its endeavours to escape.

Household Notes.

Popular summer materials are organdy, georgette surah and tafeta. Run a thread through the picots along the edge of taffeta before washing it; pull thread out after it is ironed and the picots will all be in place.

DIAMOND DUST
Nothing But the Truth—Without Fear or Favour.

Whatever hopes Harvey had of the Downing Cup they were suddenly dashed to the ground in the first game at the Garden Party yesterday, when the warrior Lions batted in 14 runs in their first inning.

Worse than that, Walter refused to let them get even one measly little run, and thwarted each strenuous effort of the C.E.I. to do so.

'Fears to us that using a straight fast ball 'gainst the Lions is just about as effective as using peablowers on the Hindenburg line.

(Yes, Ducky, we know all about the latter.)

Cocky Munn had a nice evening's work with three two baggers to his credit. He'll certainly have to be fitted in on the All Star lineup.

The Institute outfield was terribly lax on trajectory, and most of the heavy hitting could have been grabbed up by an adroit fielder.

In the remaining 4 innings, the Lions put over 6 runs more, giving them a 20 to 0 victory.

14 runs in one inning looks pretty bad or good, (according to whichever team you're fanning) in an amateur game, but will it surprise you to know that the same thing happened to Washington in the fifth inning the other day when they used three pitchers in an effort to stop the slaughter. The game eventually finished with a 17 to 0 victory over them. So it's not so bludantel, Harvey.

A once Big Leaguer slid in home at 3 a.m. one morn
With a perfect fielding average in the League of Barleycorn; you to He had pulled away fifteen highballs, every one quite warm and hot. And at every chance presented he was Wagner on the spot;
But as he tumbled at the key his wife was waiting there
With his favorite ash furniture suspended in the air.
And as he tried to curve across, she Bakered at his head,
And slammed a triple on his neck as viciously she said:
"You uster hit 300—Oh, your batting was immense;
You uster slam 'em every day against the left-field fence;
But now you're in a bush league, for there ain't no-riv in sight,
Can bat around 300, Bo, who bats around all night.
You used to hit 300—Oh, your batting it was great;
The pitchers used to jump the League when you came to the plate;
But now they've got you faded, for there ain't no bloke in sight
Can bat around 300, Kid, who bats around all night."

Coal Shortage Affects Gas. Co'y.

The Gas Company, we learn, are greatly hampered for lack of coal, and unless something is done promptly to help matters along the plant will have to be closed down. The company has enough to keep the machinery running until the last of September, but after which date, if supplies are not forthcoming, the inevitable will happen. This indeed would be a calamity as the clothing factories and other industries would also be compelled to shut down, they being dependent on gas. The Government has promised that the first coal taken from St. George's Fields would be available for the Gas Co., but when such a stock will be ready for delivery is not yet known. The line from Reid's track to the mines has been surveyed and it is hoped that every effort will be made to get out an adequate supply as speedily as possible.

Broad Cove Regatta.

The Broad Cove Regatta, held yesterday afternoon, was a very interesting affair, a large number of visitors from the city and surrounding settlements being present. Amongst those from the city were Hon. W. F. Coaker, Hon. W. W. Halyard and wife, and Mr. J. R. Bennett, wife and son. The races were well contested and proved exciting. The Broad Cove men won the 4-oared race, which was rowed in black punts, beating the Horse Cove and Portugal Cove crews. The motor boat race was won by H. Earle. Four boats competed in this race over a course two miles long, the winning boat being a quarter of a mile in advance of its nearest competitor at the finish. The owners of the boats were H. Earle, W. Rees, A. Rees, A. Cull. In the single cross-handed race, Lawlor of Horse Cove was the winner. Three boats competed in this race. In the 2-oared three boats competed. It was won by P. Pender and partner of Horse Cove; Broad Cove coming second. A farmers' race was won by the men from Horse Cove.

"Oh, very well!" said the insurance agent; and he wrote in his book: "Sarah Stokes as old as the hills."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE DOCTOR WHO KNOWS.

RUTH CAMERON

"A man ends that he has been wrong at every stage of his career, only to deduce the astonishing conclusion that he is at last entirely right. Mankind, after centuries of failure, is still upon the eve of a thoroughly constitutional millennium. Since we have explored the maze so long without result, it follows, for poor human reason, that we cannot have to explore much longer; close by must be the centre with a champagne luncheon and a piece of ornamental water."

—R.L.S.

I asked a new doctor about a certain simple medicine in which my family physician has great faith.

"That doesn't do any good," he said. "It does harm instead."

"Oh," said I, "that's one of my standbys. I'm sorry you feel that way about it."

"I don't feel that way," he said at once. "I know."

And thereby I also, knew some thing—and that was the measure of the man.

Any doctor who is constantly saying that he knows this or that (especially when half the medical profession disagrees with him) always amuses me.

I can't help wondering what entirely different facts he would have known 10 years ago, and what else as different he will know if he is practicing 20 years from now.

Medicine is not an Exact Science. Surgery is an exact science. Medicine is not, and presumably never will be.

I suppose doctors feel that if they say they know, they will win the confidence of their patients. But I cannot see how any intelligent person who has consulted doctors and seen how they differ, can trust a man who is over-positive.

For myself (you see how I flatter myself) if a doctor says to me, "we feel, or we believe, that such-and-such is the best medicine for such a condition, or that this is the best line of treatment to follow," I feel confidence in him. If he says "I know such-and-such," I feel afraid of him, just as one is always afraid of the judgment of the cocksure person.

You'd Think They'd Begin to Suspect.

Mind you, none of this is aimed at the medical profession as a whole. I am an ardent admirer of doctors and think that more devotion and unselfishness is shown in this profession than in any other. But I do wonder that more of them do not learn a lesson from the way medical theories are discovered, acclaimed as the whole and only truth, then modified and discarded year after year (why, even fresh air, it's quite such a cure-all as it used to be!).

I wonder that they do not suspect that the medical profession is a bad place for positiveness, and that a cure-all is almost as unlikely a thing to come by as the "constitutional millennium" of which Mr. Stevenson speaks.

SUPERFLUITIES.

WALT MARSH

I am always making payment on the things I do not need, furbelows and gorgeous raiment, rubber tires on which to speed; to the village shops I'm going, every day, with eager tread, useful, shining kopecks blowing for all kinds of gingerbread. And as round the town I'm flitting, throwing money to the birds, I denounce the cost of living in exhorting words. Nothing cheap in price will suit me, costly things I must demand, or I fear my friends would hoot me, as they prance in garments grand. For all kinds of gems and rubies they have blown the minted bones, and they look on folks as boobies who don't clank with precious stones. We are all blamed fools together, buying junk whose price is high, heedless of the rainy weather that will hit us by and by. And while daily, hourly giving exhibitions of the kind, I denounce the cost of living as a graft that's most unkind. When we all regain our sen-

Fads and Fashions.

Pajamas show a strong Egyptian influence, motifs of carved turquoise and silk fringe being used as buckles. Veilings in war brown shades have metal patterns in rich bronze color. Black silk gloves have been revived and are worn with navy tailored suits.

White satin is very effectively trimmed with bands of dark blue serge. Draped veils have bindings and neck bandings of narrow gros-grain ribbon.

Steel buttons are used on a black tricot suit embroidered in gray chenille.

A chemise dress of French linen is of a light Holland color with cerise pipings.

Clusters of fruit are placed at the right of the belt and are very effective.

A skirt of light tan cheviot is worn with a knee-length jacket in brown cheviot.

One interesting suit has applique trimming of leather and silk with wool pompons.

Soft, fine laces finish the short sleeves and soften the meeting of sleeve and arm.

Broad sashes of black faille brocaded in silver are worn with gowns of brocaded silver cloths.

Nine narrow gores, each ending in a point at the hem, make a cape of black serge a success.

A CREED.

To live as one designed to be a man!
 To ask no favors from the hand of life.
 But glad to share the struggle and the strife;
 To know that toil is written in the plan.
 To rest when I am weary, but to spurn
 The wished-for joys I could not truly earn.

I would go forth each morning to my task
 And spend my strength each hour in useful deeds.
 Paying the price for all my daily needs;
 The chance to serve is all that I would ask.

This I would breathe each morning as my prayer:
 "God, make me strong for what I am to bear!"

I could not ask for level ways to tread
 And days that are forever bright and clear;
 I would know sorrow, hurt and doubt and fear,
 And pay the common price for wine and bread;
 Winning by toil what joy of life I can.
 Living as one designed to be a man.

When Tennis Was Sickly.

The forerunner of our lawn tennis, Sphairistike, was, when it was first introduced by Major Wingfield, very irreverently known as "Sticky."

The inventor described it as a "new and probable court for playing the ancient game of tennis." At right angles to the centre net were two wing nets, along the side of the court, to keep the ball within bounds!

During its early days efforts were made to popularise lawn tennis as a game to be played on ice. Needless to say, it did not catch on.

In 1875 the Marylebone Cricket Club held a meeting at Lord's for the purpose of drawing up a set of rules. This was the first regular code of rules framed.

Lawn tennis was adopted by the All England Croquet Club who, in 1877, changed their description to the "All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club." Soon croquet was omitted, and the club became the All England Lawn Tennis Club.

It was not until 1888 that the Lawn Tennis Association was formed.

Commander Eva Booth.

Commander Eva Booth.

"An organising genius and the greatest orator of her sex."

So Commander Eva Booth, leader of the Salvation Army in the United States, who arrived in London recently, has been described.

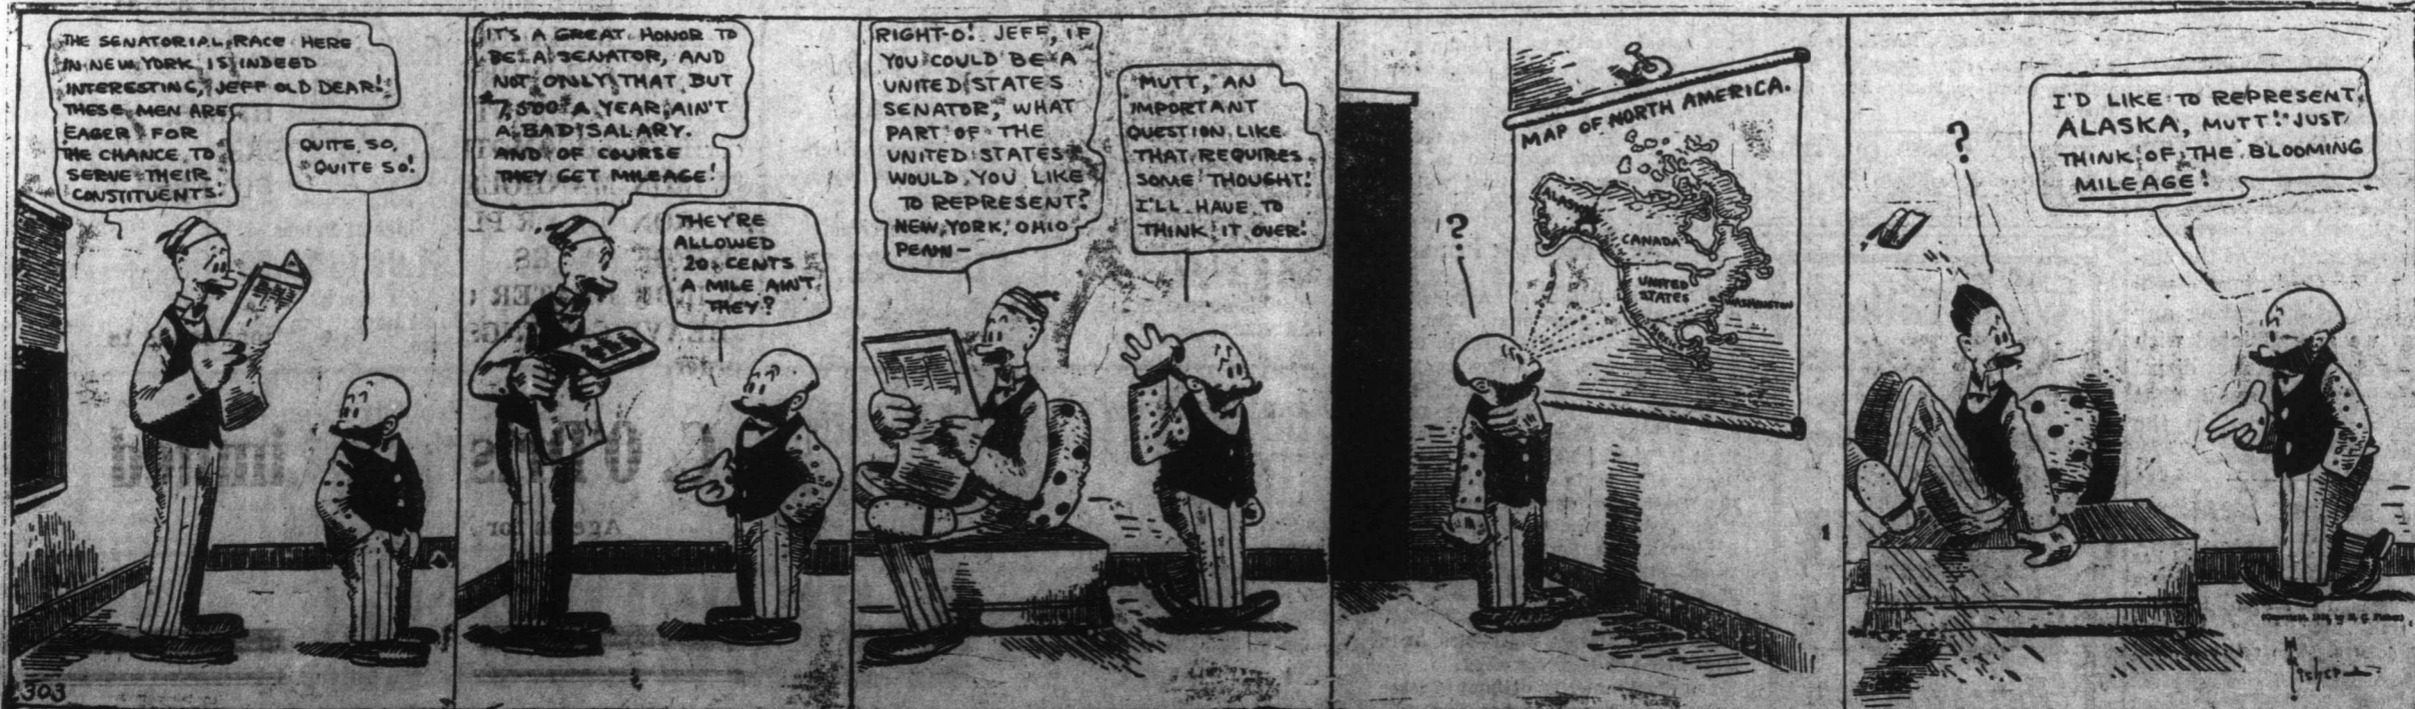

Everybody admires Commander Eva in America. "The greatest man I ever met," said the Vice-President of the States recently, "was not a man—he was a woman, and her name is Evangelina Booth."

The "toughs" take of their hate to her, and on one occasion severely mauled a man who made some disparaging remark about her. "There is gold and loyalty in every man," says "Our Eva." "To find it you have only to be a good sister."

Linking The Empire.

The tour of the Imperial Press Conference through the Maritime and Upper Canadian Provinces, has been one continued success. Everywhere the members have been received with the greatest enthusiasm, and their mission has been the sole topic of press and people. Such an assemblage of journalists cannot but fail to leave an impression upon all with whom it comes in contact, and the ties of Imperialism, the links of the chain binding the Empire together will be more firmly strengthened. The keynote of every function given in honor of the delegates, is Unity—the greater unity of the Dominions with the home land: a more comprehensive knowledge of the needs of the far-flung possessions by the people of the British Isles, and a better understanding between the statesmen of the political aspects of the various situations which crop up for discussion between Parliaments. For years uncounted there has been but little cohesion, politically, between the Legislatures of the Dominions and the Imperial House of Commons. Part of the work of the Press Conference will be to tighten the cords, and bring the whole Empire into a better and more thorough understanding of the needs of the hour.

Newfoundland has had too many painful experiences in the past to desire a recurrence of the many misunderstandings which produced conditions that made her position almost intolerable, but being so well represented at the present second Imperial Conference of Pressmen, there is hope that better things are in store for the oldest colony, which is not so well known as it might be. Even yet people in the old country, who should know better, persist in addressing letters and newspapers to Newfoundland, Canada. Were this an isolated case or two it would scarcely be worth noting, but when such ignorance is displayed and practiced by business firms, newspaper offices and others no less important, the lack of knowledge becomes almost criminal. Geographically, Newfoundland may be termed a portion of Canada, but not any less so than it is part of the North American Continent. Politically this dominion has nothing whatever of connection with Canada—though there are rumors abroad that this may not be long so. Be that as it will it is to be hoped that Newfoundland's representatives at the Imperial Press Conference will lose no time in dissipating any idea that we are affiliated with Canada—yet, and thus dispel the growing impression that Terra Nova is included in the Confederation.

Big Timber Deal.

We learn that a big timber deal has recently been completed between certain parties, the amount involved running well over three hundred thousand dollars. The seller is well known in Newfoundland, though not a resident, the purchasers being a pulp company who have large interests in the Dominion.

St. Andrew's Outing.

The St. Andrew's Club outing held yesterday proved a splendid success. The party left here by train at 2:15 and on arriving at Donovan's proceeded to the spacious field at that famous resort. Sports were indulged in and keenly contested. The day was ideal and all enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent. The following events were run off:—

A game of football was played between two teams from the club was also played. At 4:15 the members repaired to the Banquet Hall where an excellent repast was partaken of, after which the prizes were presented by Mrs. H. D. Reid, wife of the president of the club. Dancing was started and a jolly time was spent until 11:30 when the return home was made.

C. of E. Orphanage Garden Party.

A SPLENDID SUCCESS.

The Garden Party in aid of the C. of E. Orphanage, which was held at Shannon Munn grounds yesterday afternoon, attracted over 4,000 people. Shortly after 2 o'clock carriages and motors began to arrive and from that hour until late in the evening a continuous stream of traffic passed in Allandale and out the Long Pond Roads. The ground, always beautiful, were enhanced in scenic effect by the white bell tents set in a semi circle, with beautiful shade trees forming a background. Flags were flying in all directions and at night the place was a fairyland with its numerous electric lights, which were strung in front of the tents. The fancy work tables, in charge of the Managers of the Orphanage, the Flower and Market Stall, in charge of Mrs. Bell and Miss Horwood, were well worth a visit, the beautiful work and gorgeous flowers attracting many purchasers. The gathering included His Excellency the Governor and Capt. Saltmarsh, A.D.C., Col. R. G. Rendell, Lieut.-Col. R. F. Goodridge, Rev. Canon Bolt, Sir E. R. Bowring, Sir M. P. Cashin, Hon. T. Cook, Hon. W. F. Coaker and many other prominent men.

The sports programme was splendidly carried out under the direction of the C.L.B. Athletic Council, Rev. E. H. Fletcher and Mr. B. Colton, Messrs. W. J. Higgins, N. J. Vinnicombe, J. R. Bennett, Rev. Bro. O'Regan and Mr. M. O'Regan. The various events were keenly contested and excited the greatest interest among the spectators. The program was:—
¼ mile (15 yrs. and under)—1st, H. W. Smith; 2nd, E. Coaker.
100 yards (open)—1st, T. Butler; 2nd, W. Skinner.
Cavalry Tournament (C.L.B.)—1st, Sergt. Feaver and Pte. Feaver; 2nd, C.S.M. Rendell and Pte. Hennebury; ¼ mile, (open)—1st, T. Butler; 2nd, W. Skinner.
1 mile—1st, T. Butler; 2nd, R. Barnes.
Semi-Final Football Sixes—C.E.I. vs. B.I.S.—won by C.E.I., 2 goals to 1.
Feldians vs. Star—won by Feldians, 2 goals and a corner to nil.
½ mile—1st, T. Butler; 2nd, J. Crocker.
Pony Race—(1st heat) 1st, Goss; 2nd, Kelly; (2nd heat)—1st, Kirby; 2nd, Wall; Final—1st, Goss; 2nd, Kirby, 3rd, Wall.
Baseball—Red Lions vs. C. E. I. Won by Red Lions, 20 to 0.
Final Football—C.E.I. vs. Feldians. Won by C.E.I., 1 goal to 0.

The Red Lions won the "Sir Edgar Bowring Challenge Cup" for the first year. It will arrive by the Schem today. They also received medals, the first presented with a baseball trophy. The team consisted of Cahill, C. Callahan, P. Hiltz, W. Callahan, 2H. Quick, 3B, Munn, ss, O'Keefe, rf, Ellis, lf, Jenkins, cf, and Cooney, spare. The football final was hard fought, no scoring being done when time was up. Shortly after the start of the play-off, however, E. Churchill succeeded in landing the leather in the net. The C.E.I. team were: E. Churchill, M. Churchill, T. Noseworthy, W. Drover, N. Hunt and Adams. They were awarded gold medals and the Feldians silver. The pony race was the big attraction of the day and the different heats were well contested, particularly the final, which Goss's pacer won by a short lead. The prize was $20 offered by Mr. M. O'Regan. The races were run on an excellent course in the large field west of the Orphanage. The prizes were graciously presented by Mrs. J. S. Munn and Sir J. R. Bowring, the winners being announced by Mr. Reg. Dowden. During the afternoon various amusements were provided and after supper the dancing gallery was well patronized, Mr. T. Fleming providing accordion music. The C.L.B. Band under the ground under charge of Lieut.-Col. Goodridge and in the course of the day the lads gave valuable assistance in many ways. They also did splendidly in erecting the tents under the direction of Mr. J. Coaker and Lieut. F. Reid. Following the presentation of prizes, the articles left from the sale were auctioned by Mr. Reg. Dowden, who secured excellent prices and thus helped greatly to swell the general proceeds. The C.L.B. Band under Capt. A. Morris, added much to the pleasure of the gathering all through the day by rendering excellent music. The gate receipts amounted to $727 and it is expected the total will be about $7,000, which is well in excess of last year.

Following is the list of stall holders:—

Fr. Coady's Garden Party at Tor's Cove.

Rev. Father Coady has made great preparations for the Garden Party which will be held in his parish at Tor's Cove on Sunday next, August 15th. This year's programme is somewhat of an improvement on previous ones. A band comprising some well known musicians, will be in attendance during the day to discourse sweet music. The Truckmen's winning crew at Quidi Vidi, on Regatta Day, will compete against a picked team from Tor's Cove. The Mobile men have also been chosen for the race, so that this item alone is a guarantee of the day's enjoyment and ought to bring crowds from the city. The men of the Parish are determined to put up a strong fight, so that the contest will be very interesting. The Ladies of the Parish have left nothing undone to make everyone happy on that day. Dinners, teas, refreshments, etc., will be daintily served up at a reasonable cost. At the close of the day's sports a grand dance will come off and the St. John's people will be able to participate, as the train arrangements will admit of this. The train leaves St. John's at 11:30 a.m. arriving at 1 p.m. at Tor's Cove in time for dinner. Leaving Tor's Cove at 11 p.m. the train will arrive in St. John's about midnight. There will be an interesting programme of sports to suit various tastes. Needless to say Tor's Cove Garden Party this year will come up to all expectations. The locality itself is well worthy of a visit. Our foremost artists annually spend their holidays there, as he regards the scenery around the little village as rivalling the best in Newfoundland. This excursion train each Sunday brings large numbers of pleasure seekers to Tor's Cove and the surrounding settlements, and all go away thoroughly willing to come back again.

Forest Fire on Thorburn Road.

Yesterday afternoon, a forest fire supposed to have been started by careless berry pickers, was reported to be in progress on the Thorburn Road, inside of Baird's premises. Sergt. Bennett and Constable Burke were dispatched to the scene and engaging some 50 men, succeeded in confining the blaze to a small area. Trenches were cut and trees felled, the men working hard until 9:30, when the fire was subdued. A number of watchers were kept on the scene until daylight fearing that the smouldering turf would again ignite the woods.

Narrow Escape.

Yesterday evening, at Smithville, a little fellow, named Thomas, had a narrow escape from being killed in a smashup. Mr. Thomas, son of Contractor Thomas, had tied a horse owned by his uncle to a tree, while he was assembling some children who were at the Congregational picnic, preparatory to driving them home. A football, being kicked by someone in a field nearby struck the horse, which became frightened dashed through the grounds and out the road. The little chap Thomas was in the wagon at the time and the driver, who was nearby, failing to stop the runaway, shouted to the frightened child to lie down, which he fortunately did. Just outside of Smithville gate the wagon struck an electric light pole and was practically demolished, and the child was picked up uninjured, except for a slight bump on his head.

Gipsies Strike Oil.

CROWDS BESIEGE THEIR CAMP. Camped on Thompson's Field, near Sundry Street, are two families of Serbian Gipsies. They arrived here about one week ago from Grand Falls where it is said they intended to start a "ranch," but finding conditions not up to expectations they moved to more lucrative fields. These people—2 men, their wives and 6 or 7 children—came to the country from Western Canada. On Water Street, yesterday forenoon, the girls in their pink and blue check, cotton frocks, with ray ribbons, and the boys with striped stockings and sweaters, were the centre of attraction. It is claimed that these people intend to settle here, finding it a bonanza. They have opened a booth on New Gower Street, and ever since have simply been "counting it." So eager are the crowds that visit the place to gain admission that it is with difficulty the police can keep the sidewalk clear. Professional men, mariners, grass widows, old maids, disappointed lovers, young and ancient, all crowd in to have their fortunes told. The cost of the operation is anywhere from fifty cents to two dollars, varying according to circumstances, and naturally the "fortune" depends on the amount paid the "teller."

Careless Campers.

Little or no regard has been paid to the notice re Forest Fires—at least that's how it appeared yesterday—when a party, the members of which were enjoying a nice cup of tea at the Bulls Big Pond, decamped and left their fire still blazing. The timely arrival of a motor from Bay Bulls probably saved a conflagration which might have meant much loss of property if not of life.

Cochrane Street Children's Outing.

The Sunday School children of Cochrane Street Methodist Church held their annual picnic yesterday, which proved the most enjoyable of a long time. The children and teachers, numbering more than 450, left by special train at 11 o'clock for Lester's Field, where they arrived half an hour later. On reaching the field brief sports were engaged in and a lunch, which was heartily enjoyed, was partaken of during the afternoon. The usual children's games were indulged in and at 5 o'clock all sat down to supper, the children showing their appreciation of the many good things set before them. Return was made to the city at 8 o'clock after a most pleasant outing.

Outing at Smithville.

The children of the Congregational Sunday School had a delightful outing at Smithville yesterday. Early in the day the little ones, accompanied by their teachers, assembled at the school room and were taken out by motor and other conveyances to the beautiful grounds. Various games were indulged in, the teachers joining in the sports. The catering by the Misses Furlong was all that could be desired. The children enjoyed their outing to the fullest extent and returned to town at dusk.

Firemen Called Out.

At 7:50 last evening the Central and East End Fire Companies responded to a call from W. H. Hynes' Wharf, Hoytestown, where a case containing a motor engine was on fire. Their services were not required, however, as a few pails of water thrown by the watchman, had quenched the blaze. Very little damage was done.

The Umbrella's Pedigree

The umbrella, as a sunshade and as a symbol, is found in Assyrian bas-reliefs; it is of immense Hindu antiquity; it is found in the carvings of Persepolis; it appears in the comedies of Aristophanes; it was a sign of his brotherhood with the Sun claimed by the King of Ava, who was hailed as "lord of the ebbing and flowing of the sea, King of the White Elephants, and Lord of the twenty-four Umbrellas." According to a story mentioned by Mr. Hine, China might have celebrated her two-thousandth anniversary of the umbrella last year—very likely she did. The inventor is said to have been a Chinese lady who, on showing her handiwork to an architect, chafed him thus: "Sire, you make with extreme cleverness houses for men, but it is impossible to make them move, whereas the object I am framing can be carried a thousand leagues." Even the modern "brolly" has not lacked a symbolic character, and Mr. Hine aptly quotes George Borrow's tribute to it as a weapon and as a badge of respectability: "O a tent, a shield, a lance, and a voucher for character is an umbrella!"

Cargoes That Kill.

Quite recently a steamer, the Bastia, which was conveying a cargo of mineral oil and benzine to Tripoli, exploded whilst in the Mediterranean. Fortunately on this occasion no lives were lost, though several of the crew were badly injured and the ship destroyed.

Oil is the most dangerous cargo a ship is called upon to carry. Even with the utmost care there is always the chance of a disastrous fire occurring owing to the vapour that rises from the oil. Should this vapour exceed a certain amount an explosion is almost inevitable, and is often attended with loss of life.

Indian corn is another dangerous cargo. When closed down in a hold the grain withdraws all the oxygen from the air there. Many deaths have been caused by seamen and others going into these holds too soon after they were opened up and before the bad air has had time to disperse.

One might not expect danger from a cargo of potatoes: nor is there any danger so long as the holds in which they are packed are kept entirely free from sea-water; but should the salt water reach the potatoes a gas results which has deadly properties. Quite recently two men met their deaths through this form of poisoning.

Strawberries and dates are sometimes awkward, though not exactly dangerous cargoes. The sugar in the fruit has been known to ferment and give off fumes that induce a state similar to intoxication.

The Failure of Force.

Most people will probably agree today that war as a means of ending war is a failure, just as, except immediately and for a limited purpose, force is no remedy. Nearly two years have gone by since the Great War ended, and what are its legacies? Incessant fighting and bloodshed, here and there and everywhere—in Eastern Europe, in Russia, in the Asia Minor region, in Egypt, in India and in Ireland. Owing to greed of conquest and territory (not confined to one side), big-scale intervention by the Allies may be necessary to save Poland, the independence of which is regarded as necessary to permanent peace in Europe. Apparently war can end war only by ending humanity first.

The fault for the present chaos belongs largely to the Allied statesmen, who, instead of tackling outstanding questions vigorously and unselfishly, and in the interest of the people concerned, applied themselves to intrigue and reckless adventure. History, we think, will blame Mr. Lloyd George and his French and Italian colleagues for having failed to summon the League of Nations to review the peace terms and deal with the aftermath of war as it appeared. Great Britain, says Lord Curzon, is not the guardian of the League. Of course not, but there must be leadership, and what nobler role for Britain, the most powerful nation in the world to-day, than a leading part in the great drama of world peace? If our foreign policy is a just and honest one, why should our statesmen fear the verdict of the sister nations? From the point of view of peace is it not reasonable to think that the League could have done no worse, at any rate, than the Supreme Council of the Allies?

If British statesmanship cannot govern Ireland, is it any surprise that it cannot successfully manage a couple of continents? We would suggest that our Government should now invite the League of Nations to shoulder the bigger burden, so that whatever political wisdom may remain to us should be applied mainly to home and empire problems. One thing is certain as regards Ireland, Egypt and India—force as a permanent remedy will fail. The way to peace is through freedom and justice, and the consent of the governed. The precise character of the measures to be taken is the business of statesmen, and if our present rulers are unequal to it they should make way for others with wider vision and greater courage.—Liverpool Weekly Post.

Boy Scouts.

The growth of the Boy Scout movement in foreign countries has been remarkable. Only recently a greeting from six thousand Armenian Scouts was received at headquarters, while in France, Serbia, Scandinavia and Greece, the traditions of Scout-hood have been upheld with a wonderful record of national service. The work of the Scouts in the late war is embalmed in their roll of honor, on which appears the names of ten thousand comrades who gave their lives for their country. But the ideals of the movement are primarily pacific, for albeit the boys are trained to make the best defenders of their country in time of need, their moral training is directed towards winning the war against war by the free and full use of brotherhood and good-will towards all.—London Daily Chronicle.

Naval Sailors.

WILL SOON BE SEEING THE WORLD AGAIN.

When it was realized that Germany was a very real menace to our supremacy as a Naval Power, our fleets were concentrated, to a great extent, in home waters.

Only a necessary minimum of ships were maintained abroad, which meant that the present generation of sailors had little chance of seeing the world.

Now, however, that the German menace has been finally and definitely removed, it is more than probable that our fleets will visit foreign waters again, and our sailors will be looking forward to some "hurrah" cruises.

When ships pay a series of visits to foreign ports, for the purpose of letting the inhabitants know there is still a British Navy in existence, these ships are said to be making "show the flag" calls.

Naturally, there is always a lot of entertaining done on these voyages, and this, together with the ceremonial business that has to be gone through, have inspired our tars (never backward in finding nicknames) to dub them "hurrah" cruises. Jack enjoys a good "hurrah" cruise—looks forward to it as a pleasure trip, in fact. The entertaining of the crew is always made a very great point, and in addition to concerts and similar affairs given on board, the town authorities usually arrange to make the crews of the visiting ships their guests for a day, and give them a right royal time.

Breathe Deeply and Feel Fit.

Warm weather tends to cause drowsiness, and most people resort to stimulants to keep themselves awake. But this method is quite wrong, for such things as drugs, tea and coffee are only temporarily, and after a short period leave the partaker worse than ever.

The cause of drowsiness is the lack of oxygen in the blood and the lack of blood flowing through the brain. These are directly due to the sluggish action of the heart and the slower number of respiratory movements, and can be overcome by natural means without such practices as stimulant drinking being adopted.

Heat makes the blood thinner, consequently the brain gets less of it on a hot day. To increase the circulation and to thicken the blood more pure air must be inhaled, and slight exercises must be performed continually. If these be done the blood will constantly be flowing through the brain, and that sleepy feeling which is so prevalent on warm afternoons and on rising in the mornings will be avoided. The action of the heart always becomes slower when a person sleeps, as also does the breathing.

In order to rise fresh in the morning, it is necessary to take about a dozen deep breaths without drawing in the stomach, so that the pure air inhaled will reach the abdomen. A few arm and leg exercises immediately after will produce perfect freshness in the riser, and if these are done regularly for several days in succession they will become an unconscious and healthy habit, and that drowsy feeling on waking and during the daytime will entirely disappear.

More Likely.

Pushing his broken-down handcart in front of him, the man made the sweet suburban air hideous with his howls.

"Any rags!" he shrieked. "Any old iron!"

Stopping before the door of the neat little house, he knocked and waited till a careworn man answered his summons.

"Go away!" he snapped. "There's nothing for you; my wife is away."

The merchant of cast-off property looked at his victim and noted the tired lines round the eyes and mouth and the trembling hands. Then he asked meekly: "Any old bottles, guv'nor?"

Airman's Ordeal.

The French airman, Lieutenant Casale, is anxious to beat his own world's height record of nearly six miles.

Recently he went through an ordeal in order to ascertain if he was physically capable of maintaining consciousness provided he could pilot his machine to a height of seven and a half miles.

He was shut into the pneumatic cell at the Aerial Institute at Saint-Cyr, with two cylinders of compressed oxygen within reach, and glass placed opposite his face so that those watching him outside could bring the experiment to an end if it was evident that to proceed would be dangerous.

The atmosphere within the cell was then reduced until, after forty-seven minutes thirty seconds and a half mile above the earth's surface; another twenty minutes brought the atmosphere back to that of the level ground.

At the closing stages of the experiment it was noticed that Casale began to move with difficulty, but he was able to stand the strain until an atmosphere equivalent to seven and a half miles above the earth was reached.

A Fortune for a Drink.

Can you think of a really "good" "soft" drink?

All the temperance organizations are looking for the ideal drink. They are spending thousands of pounds—in vain. All temperance advocates admit that the greatest argument against Prohibition is the average temperance drink. Ginger-beer, ginger-ale, grape-juice and all the other "soft" drinks don't encourage anyone to become a teetotaler. To offer them to the average man as a substitute for beer or whisky is about as hopeful as offering a monkey-nut to a lion.

What is wanted is a drink which combines in one glass the qualities of a pint of clear, cool bitter (pre-war), a double Scotch (also pre-war), a half-bottle of wine, and the harmless of distilled water.

The trouble is to find it. The man who really "delivers the goods" will make a record fortune in record time!

Testing His Love.

During the honeymoon they had been sitting and sighing and talking poetry on the balcony of the hotel for three solid hours, all of which time he had both her hands tightly clasped in his. Finally she broke forth:

"Algernon, dearest, I want to ask you something."

"Ask me a hundred—a thousand—a million things!" he exclaimed in reply.

"Well, Algie, a fly is tickling my nose," she continued, "and if I let go of one of my hands from yours so as to drive it away would you think it unkind of me?"

"I say, Harry," said a miner to his mate, "what's a Cosmopolitan?"

Harry thought for a moment before he replied:—

"Suppose there were a Russian Jew living in England with an Italian wife, smoking Egyptian cigarettes near a French window in a room with a Turkey carpet on the floor. If this man drank American cream sodas while listening to a German band playin' 'Come Back to Erin,' after a supper of Dutch cheese made up as a Welsh rarebit, then you might be quite safe in saying that he were a Cosmopolitan."

BISHOP, SONS & CO., Ltd. . . . St. John's.

Cutting a Cork.

JOB IN WHICH THE HUMAN HAND IS STILL SUPREME.

There are still a few jobs in which machinery has not displaced the hand of man, and one of these is the cutting and shaping of corks. It would, of course, be a simple matter to make machinery for the purpose, but the trouble is that corks are not of uniform size, and they must be cut to fit the neck of a bottle. A Spanish firm spent an immense sum on a complete outfit of cork-cutting machinery, and in the end was forced to go back to the old-fashioned method of hand work. Cork is, of course, the bark of the cork-oak, which grows in Spain. It comes to London in big sheets, each of which is first roasted in a "burning" shed. Then they are cleaned off with brush and water and sent to the cutting rooms. Here they come into the hands of the specialist. One cuts oblongs, another corks, and so on. The shavings, of which there are heaps, are sold to the manufacturers of cork caskets and bath mats, while the cork is finished in sorting and stamping machines. After being cut by hand, the corks are finished in sorting and stamping machines. Corks are cut in Spain as well as in England. There, however, they are cut by machine. Each cutter has on his hip a specially prepared board sharpening his blade, and he bends almost as much time over this in the actual process of cutting. While the cutters work a man specially engaged for the purpose reads to them.

Tattooed by Lightning.

In the Press recently there have appeared some interesting accounts of two stories—one occurring in Paris, the other in London. The downpour in the Paris district was the worst that the French capital has yet experienced. At Beauvais, the hall-stones were as large as hens' eggs, persons were badly injured, animals were killed, crops damaged, and the railways were cut in several places. The London deluge, which took place the following day (May 26th) was a mysterious affair. The west of London and greater London "had the greatest thunderstorm ever experienced," and yet people barely half a mile away could scarcely believe it, for the dust wanted laying! A thunderbolt was supposed to have fallen in Chiswick, a hole in the ground being made 5ft. long, 2½ ft. wide, and 5ft. deep! These instances serve to recall other storm stories on record, and perhaps one of the most interesting is that which a French newspaper told concerning "living pictures" made on a human being by lightning during a violent thunderstorm. Two labourers had sought shelter in a cabin-constructed of reeds, which was built near some trees. Standing in the doorway of the hut, a sudden flash of lightning threw him to the ground. They were taken to hospital, where it was found that one was badly burned, but the other was suffering from the effects of "electric fluid." The lightning had cut open one of the man's boots, ripped his trousers, and, what is more surprising, had tattooed on his body a picture of a pine-tree, a poplar, and the handle of his watch!

When Thunder Storms.

When caught in a thunder-storm, don't rush for any shelter. Remember that any tall, isolated object, such as a tree or a flag-staff, or even a tall building, is liable to attract lightning, and for that reason should be avoided. If trees are chosen as shelters during a storm, select a group in preference to one standing by itself, and avoid the highest. Never run to escape the rain, as a flash is likely to be diverted to the vicinity of the air thus set in rapid motion. In a house, keep away from open windows—it is best to shut them—and fireplaces. It is safer to be soaked by the rain than dry under an umbrella; wet clothes will be chosen by the lightning in preference to the wearer, and the wearer in preference to his dry clothes.

Professional Etiquette

HAS SOME CURIOUS RULES.

During the hearing of a law-suit recently it was mentioned that it is regarded as the height of "bad form" for a doctor to take his account-books into a law court. That fact is not laid down in any professional or other book; it is only one of the many unwritten laws which hold sway, particularly among professional men. Doctors, lawyers, "qualified" dentists and members of Lloyd's may not advertise. The matter, so far as it concerns dentists, at any rate, was fought out in court some few years back, when a surgeon-dentist appealed against the erosion of his name from the Register by the General Medical Council, because he had advertised. The unwritten law was upheld and the case was lost. Again, medical men may not mention any discoveries that might be made during an examination except where such examination be held for the information of a third person, such as the representative of an insurance company. The law is full of these unwritten laws; a barrister must wear a tie-wig, not a flowing one, and it would be fatal to take into court any but a red bag. Among professional teachers of dancing it is a great crime for one teacher to go to a public class held by another exponent for the purpose of learning a new dance. The correct procedure is to go only to a teacher's instructor.

Odd or Even?

We are pleased to term thirteen an unlucky number, but in Japan the unlucky number is four, and in Burma even numbers are all considered less lucky than odd ones. Our lucky numbers, or what are generally considered so by superstitious folk, are three and seven. If you ask the reason, you are told that God is Three in One, and that God made holy the seventh day. As for seven, this number is supposed to be lucky either by itself or in its multiples. As an old writer says, a boy sheds his teeth at seven years old; at fourteen he becomes a youth; at twenty-one a man; while he reaches his grand climacteric at nine times seven—that is sixty-three. The figure three is extraordinarily prominent in the Bible. Noah had three sons, and Job three friends. There were three patriarchs. Daniel's three companions were thrown into the fiery furnace, and he himself was three days in the lions' den.

Initial "Howlers".

The errand-boy who inquired for the offices of "The Society for the Prevention of Christian Knowledge," and another who referred to the R. T.S. as "The Religious Tramp Society," have had many imitators. The Busted Missionary Society might suggest the Baptist Missionary Society, with a difference, and it was perfectly natural for a little girl who sent a pudding to the Y.M.C.A. for Tommy at the Front to imagine the letters stood for the Young Men's Christian Association. A messenger asked a policeman to direct him to the offices of the Cynical Reserve Society when he really sought the Psychical Research Society, but it was far less excusable when an inspector demanded of a class what the letters "W.H.S.R." stood for, and got the answer, "Wot Ho! She Rumps!" instead of West Ham School Board. Probably the boy who asked for the "Fill Our Stomach Society" thought he was going to a soup kitchen instead of the Philharmonic Society. When Thackeray was in Ireland he saw along the road at intervals the letters G.P.O.—not so common then as now—and he asked a peasant what they stood for. "Shure, yer honour," said the man, "they do stand for God Preserve O'Connell."

Lipton Received Flag of New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—A civic reception was held in Central Park last night in honor of Sir Thomas Lipton, owner of the defeated America's Cup challenger, Shamrock IV. Mayor Hylan praised Sir Thomas for his sportsmanship and presented him with the flag of the city.

The mayor said the gathering was to demonstrate that while the Shamrock was unable to capture the America's Cup, its owner succeeded in winning a "cup of love and admiration from the people of the city."

Sir Thomas, in reply, said the only fault he found with Americans was "they built a better boat than mine." He said he did not know which was the more difficult—making a speech or trying to lift the America's Cup. He expressed his gratitude for the honor conferred upon him.

Sir Thomas reiterated his intention to issue another challenge next year for the cup.

After the reception, Sir Thomas was tendered a dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, which was attended by city officials and friends of the yachtsman.

It became known late yesterday that Sir Thomas Lipton had cancelled his passage on the Olympic to-day and will probably leave on her next voyage from New York. His guests, Lord Dewar and Sir John and Lady Ferguson will sail.

The Curse of War.

When Armageddon sounded in 1914 England had 7,000 hospital beds. When Armageddon was stilled in 1918 England had 700,000 hospital beds.

This is the grim story of war, the stark truth of slaughter. Let us measure our desires for warfare by the number of hospital beds in which the maimed and the suffering and the crippled lie.

We talk of "helping the Poles" and of "cleaning out the Bolsheviks once for all."

Talk is cheap, but hospital beds are costly. Not costly in the dollars and cents required for their upkeep, but in the ruined lives and the maimed cripples they give to the world.

It is time to cease talking about war in terms of chivalrous adventure in sentences that thrill. War is ghastly and cruel and barbaric. We are ready for it, if needs must, but we will employ every means to prevent it.

It is time to think of war in terms of suffering and sorrow, and not in terms of victory.—Montreal Daily Star.

As Clear as Mud.

They had visited a yachting district, and though they knew next to nothing about yachts, they endeavored to hide their ignorance as best they could. While Gussie, in striped flannels, gazed out upon the white-sailed vessels, Helen flopped upon the cliffs beside him, and did her best to understand a nautical novel which she had borrowed from the library.

"What does this mean, Gussie?" she asked, after a brief struggle. "The author says that the boat was sailing 'wing and wing.'"

"That means," answered Gussie, carefully, "that the—er—schooner had her mains' out to port, you know, and her what-d' you-call-it—fores'—out to starboard—or the other way about."

"How interesting!" she cried. "Just like a chicken—wing on each side. I see, now, why they call those little sails in the middle 'jibs.'"

"Why do they?" asked Gussie.

"Well, anybody could see that," she replied. "Short for jiblets, of course!"

The Latest Fish Story.

A few months ago, in the marketplace of Zanzibar, a fish was sold for one halfpenny.

The Arab who bought the fish cut off the tail and threw it away.

An Indian, a Mohammedan, saw the tail lying in the sand, and noticed that there were some peculiar marks upon it, which, upon closer inspection, he found to be an Arabic inscription, which he translated as a message from the Prophet. His natural excitement made him race round the market shouting the message, and soon the whole town was in a religious ferment over the fish and its strange mission.

The news soon reached the ears of the Sultan, who sent for the owner of the fish. Amidst great pomp and ceremony, the Sultan and his priests analysed the inscription, and the faithful were duly informed that it was indeed a message from the Prophet!

Naturally the general public of Arabs and Indians were keen to see the remarkable fish. The owner promptly set up a tent in the marketplace, charging sixpence, an enormous sum for that part of the world, for the satisfaction of being allowed to view the fish, and incidentally made a great deal of money by the ingenious combination of religion and business.

The fish is now preserved as a holy relic.

(Antiseptic)
An ideal antiseptic foot powder for hot, tender perspiring feet. Dr. Scholl's Foot Powder is sprinkled on the feet and in the stockings and shoes, giving a cool, restful feeling. Takes away the friction of the shoe and stocking upon the foot and has truly antiseptic, deodorizing qualities. Put up in an original shaped attractive can which makes it convenient for reaching either the tip of the toe of the shoe or the foot of the stocking. Dr. Scholl's Foot Powder should be used by all. It is a true medicinal and toilet necessity of great merit. Price per can, 25c.

DR. SCHOLL'S PEDICO FOOT BALM.

This is a soothing, cooling and healing cream-like preparation which should be rubbed well into the skin. It is refreshing and penetrating and relieves various foot discomforts and keeps the feet in good condition. It tones up the foot muscles, making them respond more freely, and leaves the feet as smooth and soft as nature intended. Prior to this treatment we strongly recommend bathing the feet, using Pedico Granulated Foot Soap to cleanse the pores of all impurities. Price 35c. per jar.

DR. SCHOLL'S PEDICO FOOT SOAP.

Blood circulation is slowest at extremities and careful attention to the feet is absolutely necessary, particularly regular washing with a real cleanser. Washing with ordinary soap and water is not sufficient to deodorize, purify and thoroughly cleanse the feet. Dr. Scholl's Pedico Foot Soap is chemically compounded in granular form in order that the rubbing massages the tissue and increases blood circulation thereby. Cleanses the pores of the skin of all impurities, leaving the feet soft, smooth and healthy. After this bath, feet should be dried and a little Dr. Scholl's Pedico Foot Balm applied. Price 35c. per can.

Burnt Offerings to Our Lady Nicotine.

The man who boasts of smoking fifty cigarettes a day may well envy the record of Mr. Theophilus Thompson, a merchant of New York, who celebrated his seventieth birthday by converting a hundred cigarettes into smoke within twenty-four hours.

He confessed to the guests whom he entertained at his birthday banquet that for fifty years he had smoked on an average 500 cigarettes weekly, and that his aggregate number exceeded 1,300,000.

Mr. Thompson further informed his guests that his "burnt offering" to Lady Nicotine represented a cigarette sixty-one miles long, costing nearly $4,000; and that it had yielded him twenty years of "undiluted pleasure," assuming that he had smoked all night as well as all day.

No less remarkable was the record of a Frenchman named M. Voiron, who died a few months ago at the age of seventy-two. M. Voiron began to smoke cigars at the age of eighteen, and on an average smoked thirty daily for the remainder of his life. He died in his chair with one between his lips.

During this period he disposed of more than $61,000 cigars, the equivalent of a cigar forty-two miles long; and the time occupied in smoking was less than 200,000 hours. When M. Voiron was asked in his seventieth year why he had never married, he removed his cigar from his lips, gazed lovingly at the smoke curling gracefully and fragrantly from it, and said, "This is my wife! She has given me fifty years of delight with not a solitary moment of unhappiness. Show me the woman who could do that, and I will marry her even now—it she will have me."

10,000 Cigars a Year.

But even M. Voiron had a formidable rival in M. Lenoir, a Swiss lawyer, who when he died two years ago was credited with having smoked 500,000 cigars in fifty years—an astonishing average of 10,000 a year. On his fiftieth birthday he exceeded all his previous records by finishing his fifty-first cigar as the clock struck the hour of midnight; and ten years later he surpassed even this feat by smoking

Origin of Flute

The origin of the flute is lost in antiquity. The Greeks, who were nearer the first movements of civilization than we to-day, assigned its invention to their god Pan. The heart of Greek legends is generally sound, and we may presume that whenever the great god Pan—the gayest Lothario of Olympus—comes prominently forward as an actor in the human drama, we are on the verge of an amour.

The flute is not only the darling instrument of those savage nations who are renowned for their gallantry, but there are also cases of the original use of the instrument surviving in all its purity. Among the North American Indians we find what is called The Winnebago courting-flute. "In the vicinity of the Upper Mississippi" says Catlin, a historian of that section of country, "a young man will serenade his mistress with it for days together—they sit on a rock near the wigwam and blow without intermission—until she accedes to his wishes, and gives him her hand and heart."

The ancient Peruvians had a regular love-language for the flute, and so powerful an appeal could it make to the female heart that there are stories of girls being drawn from a distance by the sound of the flute, and throwing themselves into the arms of the man who played it.

The Love Call.

The mere fact that the love-call, to borrow an expression of Darwin's, is the only definite purpose for which the flute is employed among savage races, outside of its later employment as a musical instrument is sufficient to communicate a peculiar character to the instrument, and there need be no hesitation in assigning its origin to the love-call. Darwin finds the origin of all instrumental music in the love-call. We content ourselves with referring the flute and the pipe to that origin.

It is highly probable that the flute was first played by the nose. This, at least, is the manner of playing which prevails in the Society Islands, the Friendly Islands, the islands of the Samoan group, the Marquesas, and generally throughout Polynesia, which is par excellence the home of the flute. That idiotic grimace of the sculptured face of the flute-player is because the player was compelled to contort his features, and for this reason Greek sculptors were afraid to represent their flute-players in the act of playing. Long practice is necessary before the art of blowing the flute with the mouth can be even tolerably acquired, but it can be played easily at the first attempt by blowing with the nostrils, as the breath comes from that at the precise angle necessary to produce the tone.

sixty, one for each year he had lived. M. Lenoir, though he declared that he had never smoked a pipe in his life, would have been sportsman enough to take off his hat to Jonkheer Yan Rees, a Dutchman, who put his pipe down for the last time a few months ago at the age of eighty-three. The Jonkheer began to smoke seriously on leaving school at the age of eighteen, and for sixty-five years is said to have consumed on an average a pound and a half of tobacco every week.

Every year he reduced 78 lbs. of the weed (more than half his own weight) to ashes; and before he exhaled his last cloud of smoke he had consumed more than two and a quarter tons of tobacco.

These are feats of "long-distance" smoking which may well challenge rivalry; but it is doubtful whether any of these devotees could rival some of the following records of rapid smoking. Not long ago Thomas Hanson, a Texas gold-miner, wagered a hundred dollars that he would smoke six cigars, twelve cigarettes and six pipefuls of tobacco in a hundred minutes; and he won his bet with three minutes to spare.

Not to be outdone, a rival miner, Alec Donaldson, undertook to smoke 100 cigarettes in six consecutive hours, a feat he easily accomplished.

Among feats of slow smoking, the following would be hard to beat: that of M. Devos, of Lille, who, a few years ago, beat nearly 300 rivals by keeping his pipe light for one hour and fifty-three minutes; of M. Chataignon, of Lyons, who occupied sixty-three minutes in smoking a cigarette three inches long; and of Signor Arditi, an Italian, who drew his first whiff of a cigar at six o'clock and the last at five minutes to eight—115 minutes later.—T.H.Bits.

Trouble With the Nag.

"You are charged with permitting your horse to stand unattended for over an hour," said the magistrate.

"Well, I defy anybody to teach the brute to sit down," protested the prisoner before being dragged away.

Onward, Christian Soldiers.

There are over a hundred books to the credit of the Rev. S. Baring-Gould, who recently entered his eighty-seventh year. But one of his most popular achievements was the writing of that famous hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers." When Mr. Baring-Gould wanted to have it sung in his own church his Bishop objected, owing to the last lines, "With the cross of Jesus Going on before."

Mr. Baring-Gould changed the last line to "Left behind the door," which made the Bishop so angry that he dismissed the vicar. But Mr. Gladstone made it up by presenting him with a better living.

In the early days Mr. Baring-Gould fell in love with a mill-girl. With her parents' permission he sent her to York to be educated, and then married her, the union being an ideally happy one.

Dead or Alive?

There is a story told concerning a careful mother whose three children horrified her one day by producing for her inspection three exceedingly bilious-looking toffee apples.

"They're very pretty, dears," she lied, bravely, "but you really mustn't eat them. I've heard of little children dying through eating coloured toffee apples."

Then she took the sweets away and put them out of reach—as she thought—on a shelf in her dressing-room.

She imagined that would do the trick, but early next morning she heard a sound out on the landing, and, going to see who was 'astir so early, found Elsie trotting along the passage.

"Where are you going?" she asked. "It's not six o'clock yet."

"Going to see if Dick and Arthur are dead yet," replied the eight-year-old miss. "I'm not."

Whose Nose Was It?

"How cold your nose is!" These words came from the daughter of the house, who was sitting in the drawing-room.

"Is Towser in the drawing-room again?" demanded her mother from the next room.

There was a long pause.

"No, mother; Towser isn't in the drawing-room."

And then silence resumed its reign.

Tried It First.

It was a hot day, and there were two men in a bar drinking lager beer. One man said to the other, "Isn't this beer good? My goodness, I could drink twenty-five glasses of it without stopping!"

The other fellow said, "I'll bet you a sovereign you can't."

"Now, just wait a moment," said the first man. "I'll go round the corner for five minutes; then I'll come back and let you know if the bet's on or off."

Away he went, and came back in five minutes saying, "It's all right. The bet's on."

They put twenty-five glasses of beer in a row in front of him, and he drank every drop out of them without stopping.

The fellow who had made the bet said, "Well, here's your sovereign. I didn't think you could do it!"

"Neither did I," replied the winner. "I'll go next door and try it!"

Holding the Mirror Up to Bolshevism

Much has been written during the last two or three years about the Bolsheviks, their aims and their policies, their methods and their follies, and still the picture remains strangely blurred. The confusion that exists is largely due to the fact that much of the literature concerning them is written from secondhand knowledge or else dictated as a part of the propaganda which Soviet Russia has employed so widely and so efficiently.

The latest issue of the London Nation contains an article from the pen of Bertrand Russell on "Soviet Russia in 1920," which deserves a wide circle of readers. Mr. Russell is a noted scholar who has devoted his life to the study of mathematics and philosophy. He has written on the Social Democracy of Germany and on philosophy, and during the war he dared the opprobrium which attached to the pacifist and served a term in prison as an objector. When the British Labor delegation went to Russia last May Mr. Russell was given permission to travel with them and his article throws many interesting sidelights on that journey.

The party was conveyed in a special train de luxe and they were received everywhere by guards of honor and soldiers at the salute. Orations were continually drummed into their ears and there were innumerable banquets and military reviews.

"The assumption was," he writes, "that we had come to testify to the solidarity of British Labor with Russian Communism; and on that assumption the utmost possible use was made of us for Bolshevik purposes." Fortunately Mr. Russell did not feel bound to accept all the invitations and he was given many opportunities of seeing the working of the Bolshevik system at first hand. His summing up of his impressions is of the highest interest.

"Friends of Russia here think of the dictatorship of the proletariat as merely a new form of representative government in which only working men and women have votes. They think that the proletariat means the proletariat, but dictatorship does not quite mean dictatorship. This is the opposite of the truth. When a Russian Communist speaks of dictatorship he means the word literally, but when he speaks of the proletariat he uses the word in a Pickwickian sense. He means the class-conscious part of the proletariat—the Communist party."

Mr. Russell tells how opposition is crushed without mercy and without shrinking from the methods of the Czarist police, many of whom are still employed at their old work. The baser side of the present Russian Government he parallels to the Directory of France, but on its better side it is closely analogous to the rule of Cromwell. It is externally militant and internally aristocratic. Only people of some political importance obtain motor cars and telephones. Mr. Russell says he went to Russia believing that he would see an interesting experiment in a new form of representative government, but he found that the Bolsheviks were industrialists in their aims, "loving everything in modern industry except the rewards of the capitalists." He met Lenin, Trotsky, Kameneff and all the leaders of the movement, and he sums up his impressions in the following words: "I went to Russia believing myself a Communist; but contact with those who have no doubts has intensified a thousandfold my own doubts not only of Communism, but of every creed so firmly held that for its sake men are willing to inflict widespread misery."

This is strong condemnation of the Bolshevik and his methods from one whose sympathies are with them rather than against, whose powers of observation have been scientifically trained and who had a splendid opportunity to gain first hand knowledge of his subject.—Montreal Daily Star.

Swat That Fly.

With the warmer weather, the problem presents itself: "How can we best rid ourselves of 'humanity's pest'—the fearful flies?"

The British Ministry of Health has suggested that, in order to trap these terrible disease distributors, tapes or wires be suspended in houses. On these tapes and wires a mixture, made of castor-oil and crushed resin, should be smeared. Fly-papers, and various other patented fly-traps, however, seem to leave us just as many flies year after year, and truly the problem of stamping out these dangerous insects is a great problem.

The word "fly" is the popular name given to a large number of insects, all of which are distinguished by having a proboscis terminating in a sucker, through which they draw up fluids. There are said to be some 10,000 different kinds of insects in Britain, but the best known species of fly are (1) the house fly, (2) the "bluebottle," and (3) the blow-fly. When we realize that flies in the larval form are maggots, and feed on decaying substances, it makes us instantly declare war on them.

The terrible bacteria contained in each fly's body is sufficient to warn us of the danger when they settle on our food. So let us have no armistice with flies, but keep fighting them with all the weapons at our disposal—fly-paper.
