TUESDAY MORNING, MARCH 14, 1882.

CANADA MAKING HER OWN TREATY.

The independence of Canada de jure may be still in the distance, but in de facto it is certainly progressing to some extent. Sir John Macdonald, though he much dislikes the name, appears to be doing a good deal for the thing itself. He gave us a national policy, which is virtually commercial independence, and next he sent an ambassador to represent us in London; then in a manner getting recognition for Canada as one of the "Powers." Not in our ambassadorial likely to play the part of a merely ornamental figure-head, as the reports of the debates in the house of commons Thursday, 9th inst. fills only a column or two, but in a few lines something of immeasurable importance to Canada is conveyed. We quote from the Montreal Gazette:

Mr. Valin moved for correspondence between the government of Canada and that of France, respecting the entry of vessels built in Canada. Hon. Mr. Blake—Is there any such correspondence? Sir John Macdonald—There is not any. The negotiations that have taken place through her majesty's ministers in England, Sir Alex. Galt, accompanied by an officer of the foreign office, and the contents are not of a confidential nature, but the limited and regular form they are able to procure, and are not specially staffed to exclude undrawn poultry from market can be enforced successfully or not, I do not know, but I am not specially staffed to judge of chemistry and of the decomposition of vegetable matter, that the decompositions of the soil will go on more rapidly if it is removed, and every step it makes in decomposition renders it more and more unproductive for man.

THE OLD and oft-quoted maxim, de mortuis nil nisi bonum, is conspicuously set aside at present in the neighboring republic. An attack upon the character of the late President Garfield commenced some weeks ago, and is noticeably increasing in bitterness every day. It comes from the Conkling wing of the republican party, on one hand, and from the democrats on the other. To any one familiar with American politics this result will appear inevitable—that the result will be to attack all along the line, and that other reputations besides Garfield's will have to suffer. It looks as if we were on the eve of a perfect deluge of undesirable relations of the personal characters of many prominent men on both sides of politics.

ORONQUERS. Where would Mr. Blake get a finance minister if he threw Sir John Cartwright overboard? How would Sir Alexander Galt do? He is bound to come forward when Sir John retires, but it does not follow as a conservative. Mr. Charlton will never be a finance minister. Mr. James Young has prior claims.

PIOUS DEFAULTERS. American papers are making sharp comment on the fact that so many defaulters in banks and other financial concerns are found to be prominent men in church and Sunday school, and religious workers generally. It is remarked that to gain such a reputation appears now to be a necessary part of the prospective bank defaulter's equipment. Any one counted a business man and of reputation may be trusted with other people's money, provided he has enough capital of his own to create a feeling of security. But a religious reputation supplies to a large extent the want of capital, and places the man who has it, but no capital, on a level with the possessor of thousands—no more. The case of Richard Cornell, loan clerk in the Fourth National bank at Plainfield, New Jersey, is the latest in the catalogue of such cases. The stock broker's office, his name about twenty-four years ago. After going through two years' imprisonment, he still managed to secure admission to the stock exchange for the third attempt, and the third failure followed; after which his re-election any more to that body became impossible. But, though excluded from the temple of Mammon he was still in with the church, and rather under a cloud, however. In one of the Brooklyn churches he was a leading church and Sunday school man, and had been entrusted by the wealthiest member of the congregation with some $80,000 worth of bonds, the proceeds of which he took for himself and lost in speculation. Ten years ago he removed to Plainfield, joined a church there and at once took prominent place as a religious worker which has just resulted in a loss of $70,000 at least through his speculations. His wealthy old friend, who started him in business and lost $80,000 in him, says that he was the cause of great losses to many other besides. "People came to him and gave him their money for investment, so great was their confidence in him. He worked so hard in religious matters that he won many friends." As for "bad habits" he had none, and he did not live extravagantly either, for a man in his position. In the New Jersey bank his salary and perquisites amounted to about $6000 per annum. The Brooklyn Eagle asks whether it is a mere coincidence—or accidental circumstance, and no more—that bank cashiers and clerks who rob their employers are all pious. The number of defaulters of this class who are always turning up, in the States, at all events, is certainly a great discredit to the cause of religion.

THEY HAVE NOT yet settled the poultry question in New York, but some progress appears to be making towards a solution of the great problem. The large hotel keepers decidedly favor the plan of sending "drawn" fowls to market, though, as we mentioned the other day, the majority of chief cooks take the other side. At a meeting of the hotel keepers' association, Dr. Sayre, being asked to give his opinion, took what seems to be a good position, as well as a common sense view of the matter, to the following effect: "I have no practical experience in the keeping of dead poultry, and therefore can only speak on this subject from the grounds of science and common sense. What we want is healthful food, and in that respect the question of price does not enter into this matter, as you have seen to-night. Out of less than thirteen pounds of all-gilt turkey, sold in our markets, you pay for one pound thirteen ounces of offal, the same as you would if it was good meat. But that is a small question beside the question of health. The turkey with its carcases and their contents in it were undoubtedly undergoing decomposition more rapidly than it would had they been removed from the fermenting acids and gases. Those things would certainly taint it and make it unfit for food sooner than it would be if it were subject to atmospheric influences which tend towards its decomposition, but if it is thoroughly dried, then stuffed so as to keep the water apart, and then closed to exclude the air, it will undoubtedly keep sweet and free from rotteness longer than it is left with its fermenting vegetable contents in it. It seems to me that the proper way to bring poultry to the market would be to draw, clean, and uncooked, it might be difficult to enforce that regulation in wild game, but even at the worst, wild birds have the limited and regular form they are able to procure, and are not specially staffed to exclude undrawn poultry from market can be enforced successfully or not, I do not know, but I am not specially staffed to judge of chemistry and of the decomposition of vegetable matter, that the decompositions of the soil will go on more rapidly if it is removed, and every step it makes in decomposition renders it more and more unproductive for man.

WHEN WILL THE BOOM STRIKE BRITISH COLUMBIA. To THE WORLD: Why do you so persistently write up Manitoba and neglect the rest of the Dominion? All cannot go there, and if they would not, they would like to go to the States. The British are agreed as to its fertility and future greatness. Many of your readers would like to know the extent of that vast country lying west of the Rockies and forming part of our Dominion; such information as refers to its resources, climate, prospects, and what the P. R. will reach the coast, the cost of going, the best route, the number of inhabitants it contains; also as to its present and its immediate settlement by emigration. SPECULATOR.

THE INVALID NATURE OF GRAIN "FUTURES." Judge Moran's recent decision in the case of Foots against Hooker, to which I allude in a recent issue of the "World," is a decision of great importance to the grain trade. It is a decision which will be of great value to the grain trader, and it is a decision which will be of great value to the grain trader. It is a decision which will be of great value to the grain trader, and it is a decision which will be of great value to the grain trader.

HOW FALLEN WOMEN ARE CARED FOR. To THE WORLD: Some friend sent me this morning your paper of the 10th inst., by which I see that the social evil question is still exciting the public mind, and parties are still venturing in the press their conflicting opinions on the vexed subject. I do not intend to enter into the discussion, but as from time to time it is charged, first by one and then by another, now indirectly and then directly, that no efforts are made to rescue the unfortunate objects of all these communications and lift them up out of the terrible slough of degradation and vice, except by setting the law in motion against them, I desire once more to show, as I have done again and again through the press, that very great injustice has been done by these assertions. Efforts have been made for years past and are now being made earnestly and energetically by more than one association in Toronto, to assist these fallen ones and help them up, and call the attention of all who appear to be ignorant of the fact, to this cause, the Magdalen on Yonge street, and the Haven on Seaton street, and with regard to the latter I will answer "Justitia" in his own words: At 206 Seaton street there is a shelter "open day and night to take in without question any woman who comes asking for help to lead a better life, and willing from her own heart to strive to free herself from the evil," and more than that the ladies who manage the Haven do not hesitate to visit the houses where these poor creatures herd and seek to bring them out—and many have come out—and taken shelter in christian homes. I send a copy of the last annual report of the Prisoners' Aid Society, which will thank you to address to "Justitia," and I beg that he will, at an early day, visit the Haven, when the excellent superintendent will be most happy to receive him, and give him every information with regard to the work carried on quietly, but with the blessing of God, most successfully under her care.

ANTI-LOQUACIOUS POWDERS. Make a tonic drink that removes the effect of bad liquor and over-drinking. Also check the craving for liquor, remove biliousness, headache, nervous depression, improve digestion and regulate the action of the liver. 8 Powders in packet, 25 cents. For sample, send a stamped envelope. W. HEARN, Druggist, Toronto.

TO THE WORLD: No article ever attained so unbounded popularity as that in a time at Burdock's Blood Bitters, and that too during the existence of countless numbers of widely advertised bitters and blood purifiers, and which will thank you to address to "Justitia," and I beg that he will, at an early day, visit the Haven, when the excellent superintendent will be most happy to receive him, and give him every information with regard to the work carried on quietly, but with the blessing of God, most successfully under her care.

GIVE WOMEN JUSTICE.

To THE WORLD: The important decision given by Mr. Justice Henry at Ottawa, in the case of Polly Hamilton, is a great step in the case of British law. The lady's husband states "that although the city authorities should be assisted in rooting out crime, yet under all cases to be respected." There is no doubt that if many like cases in Toronto where lengthened terms of imprisonment are inflicted on the women, were examined into and appealed, the same justice would be given here. The plea may be urged that it is for the good of these women and for the hope of their ultimate return to a better life, that they are sentenced to prison and reformatory, and that there is no other way to be tried. But there is a better way, and that is to let the same law apply. I believe, to the same who frequent houses of ill-fame, and though in their case it is generally justified, but, after all, it is beyond a doubt that no legal measures can do away with the social evil. The former mode of dealing with it seems no other way to conquer it and root it out, than to enforce that regulation of the boys and girls of our land in habits of respect and self-control, and honor to their parents, and to the community. A man demands purity in the woman he makes his wife. Let women demand the same in the man who proposes to honor and fight and conquer in the cause of woman's rights; because it is man's rights and not woman's, that is the goal of all coming generations. JUSTITIA.

TO THE WORLD: As newspaper editors are anxious to know the extent of that vast country lying west of the Rockies and forming part of our Dominion; such information as refers to its resources, climate, prospects, and what the P. R. will reach the coast, the cost of going, the best route, the number of inhabitants it contains; also as to its present and its immediate settlement by emigration. SPECULATOR.
