THIRTY-NINTH ANNUAL REPORT.

To the Members of the Hamilton and Gore Mechanics' Institute:—

The Agricultural and Arts Act, passed by the Ontario Legislature in 1877, having enacted that the business years of Mechanics' Institutes, claiming a Legislative Grant under that Act, should end on the 1st May in each year, and that the annual meeting should be held during that month, it will be found that the accounts and statements now submitted to the members have been made up to that date, thus covering a period of fifteen months, from the 1st February, 1877, on which day the last annual meeting of the members of this Institute was held.

In what must necessarily be but a brief review of these accounts, the Board have much satisfaction in reporting a steady progress towards an improved condition of matters, so far as the financial interests of the Institute are concerned, than existed at the date of the last report.

In this respect the anticipations of the Directors, then expressed, have been fully verified by facts, as a careful comparison of figures in the last and in the present abstract of receipts and expenditure will fully evidence. The Directors also notice with pleasure the extended and constantly increasing use of the advantages offered both in the reading room and the library, now made by all classes of the public—the number of members having increased from 946 to over 1,006 bona fide subscribers, a larger number than is to be found on the roll of any other Institute in Ontario, if not in the Dominion. A full list of papers and periodicals will be found appended to this report, comprising the leading British, American and Canadian papers, and all magazines and periodicals of general interest. The crowded room shows how thoroughly it is appreciated.

LIBRARY.

As usual, this most important branch of the Institute has been a special object of care with the Board. During the past month all the outstanding volumes have been called in and inspected, and of the large number issued during the past fifteen months,—over 33,000,—but a very small proportion have been found to be lost or not restored. This is a favorable result when compared with the experience of other Institutes. The admirable system, probably as perfect as could be devised, under which the issuing and return of books is managed, in a great measure accounts for this, but it also speaks well for the free access to the shelves of the library which is afforded to the members, showing that the privilege is enjoyed without being abused.

Five hundred and twenty-six volumes were added during the past term. With respect to the choice of works, so favorable are the circumstances and temper of the times to the diffusion of knowledge, and so abundant are now the productions of the press, that books written in our own language, upon all subjects whatever, whether of general literature, science, taste or art, are constantly being published and quickly circulated throughout the whole empire.

From amongst these the most deliberate and mature consideration of the Board has been exercised in making a selection, and none have been omitted which were esteemed as likely to add to the standard excellence of the collection. As for novels, as few as possible appear on our lists, and such as were absolutely necessary to maintain this department, they will be found to be of the best character, and generally by the best English authors, to the exclusion of French and German romance. If we take the most superficial survey of circulating libraries, we may observe that the ingenuity of our own authors is sufficiently fertile in these flimsy and short-lived publications, and yet Germany and France contribute their aid to satisfy the craving appetite of the British public with such success, that some of their productions are as popular as our own. Of this latter class of fiction,—filled, as it is, with licentious descriptions, improbable incidents, false sentiments, and such sophistical arguments as serve to justify the most improper actions, excite a romantic sensibility, pervert the judgment of the young and inexperienced, influence the passions and corrupt the heart,—your Board have been careful to exclude all, excepting those of admitted moral excellence.

Reference to the very prevalent taste for novel reading, especially among the young, was made in the last report, with a few words of earnest advice to parents and guardians of such frequenting the library; but from the fact that of the number of works issued last year over 23,000 were fiction, but little fruit seems to have been borne by the remarks then made. The Board think it their duty to repeat these strictures. The objects of Mechanics' Institutes are of a higher and nobler nature than that of their being converted into mere circulating libraries for the indulgence of a perverted taste, and the Directors conceive that they would fail in their duties and responsibilities, did they not seriously urge upon those having the charge of very young persons, the propriety of, in some measure, guiding and directing their taste in the selection of books.

With regard to the

but little has to be said in this Report. During the past year, the old scenery has been repainted, and several new and attractive scenes added; the stage decorations being now fairly acceptable to most companies engaging it. A new system has sprung up of late which seems to be in vogue generally with travelling companies, i. e., instead of renting the Hall for the night, giving a percentage of their receipts. This involves very considerable additional work on the superintendent to make the performance a financial success, and the necessity of additional assistance to that official will probably become a question for the incoming Board, as at present he has been much overworked.

CLASSES.

In this department, another branch of usefulness has been opened to the Institute, and your Board have peculiar satisfaction in finding that their efforts in past years to establish a course of class instruction during the winter season have at length been crowned with complete success.

Classes under efficient teachers in book-keeping, writing and arithmetic, with a large attendance in each branch, were opened early in the winter and have been successfully carried out. In fact the space afforded for the use of the classes was not sufficient for the accommodation of those desiring to enter, and many had to be dismissed on that account. Now that these classes have been successfully inaugurated, the Board doubt not but that their advantages will be eagerly sought for by the many not able to attend the Public Schools during the day. The prize money offered by the Mechanics' Association was duly paid and the amount divided into nine prizes, given to the successful competitors, the examinations being conducted, at the request of the Directors, by Messrs. Macallum and Dickson.

The Mechanics' Institute Association have presented to this Institute a handsomely bound copy of Ures' Mechanical Dictionary, in 3 vols., with an appropriate inscription; a similar donation having been made to every institute in affiliation with them.

GENERAL REMARKS.

The necessity for increased space in which to carry on the work of the Institute is becoming year by year more apparent, and the question as to how this is to be provided will be a serious one for the incoming Board.

The Superintendent has already availed himself of every possible means to furnish additional room for the library, and the Board take this opportunity of acknowledging his great efficiency and untiring zeal in the discharge of duties which have become many, various and onerous.

The Board of Directors being personally liable for a considerable amount of floating liability, respectfully suggest that the gentlemen who succeed them should relieve them of this liability by assuming it themselves.

All which, together with accompanying statements and accounts, is respectfully submitted.

J. KNEESHAW,

Secretary.

JOHN R. HOLDEN,

President.
