BLAME GREEDY BANKS FOR CURRENCY SCARCITY

Charged With Hoarding Funds and Acquiring Securities at Panic Prices

Ready Cash at 3 1-2 Per Cent. Premium in Wall Street—Government's Lavish Help Hasn't Afforded Relief to Honest Business, as Intended—A Christless Christmas in New York Schools Ordered—Hearst Faces Prison for Criminal Libel.

(From Our Own Correspondent.) New York, Nov. 21.—The Hebrewization of the Metropolis receives no more striking illustration than the fact that the children of New York are to have a Christless Christmas, so far as the public schools are concerned.

Frank R. Rix, the board's superintendent of music, sent out positive orders yesterday to strictly enforce the new rule "that the singing in the public schools of hymns or songs of a sectarian character shall be prohibited," and called their attention especially to the coming Christmas season.

The order I issued to music teachers not to teach or allow singing by their pupils any hymn, carol or song which treated of Christ or Christmas, said Mr. Rix today, "was not on my own initiative, but following the action of the board of superintendents. As I understand it, the board adopted the committee's report and there was nothing for me to do except issue the instructions."

Teachers are not permitted to use their discretion. They must follow the rule to the letter.

Attendance in the schools, especially on the lower East Side, fell off on December 24th last 50 or 60 per cent, following the decision of the elimination of the Christmas festival from the schools, and "strikes" of Hebrew children were declared in several instances.

Ready Cash Very Scarce. The need of ready cash continues to be most acute, and causes distressing situations. A check is becoming almost universal, and the banks are holding tightly to their money.

Whether the government measures will afford any immediate relief is a question. According to one view, the president and the secretary of the treasury believe that certain bankers, instead of utilizing the funds released by the government to relieve business stress, have diverted the

BOTH PROMISE PURE CAMPAIGN

Colchester Liberal and Conservative Candidates Agree

A WRITTEN PLEDGE One Hundred Men of Each Party to Guarantee That Election Act Will Not Be Violated—Geo. W. Fowler, M. P., Spoke for Stanfield at Big Rally.

(Special to The Telegraph.) Truro, N. S., Nov. 21.—This was nomination day in Colchester county and both parties held meetings, considerably larger being held in the Metropolitan Rink by the Conservatives. John Stanfield was nominated by the Conservatives and Charles Hill by the Liberals.

The Conservatives are said to have a force of detectives on the lookout for violations of the election law. A novel feature of the proceedings was a letter sent by the Liberal candidate to John Stanfield a few minutes before the Conservative meeting opened, in which Mr. Hill asserted his desire to preserve the purity of the election, and in order to give effect to this he made the suggestion that Mr. Stanfield select 100 men from the ranks of the Conservative party and he like number from among the Liberal party and that these men should pledge themselves in writing to take every possible precaution to secure the purity of the election in the strictest conformity with the act.

Mr. Stanfield unreservedly accepted the proposal and stated that the platform was a letter sent by the Liberal candidate to John Stanfield a few minutes before the Conservative meeting opened, in which Mr. Hill asserted his desire to preserve the purity of the election, and in order to give effect to this he made the suggestion that Mr. Stanfield select 100 men from the ranks of the Conservative party and he like number from among the Liberal party and that these men should pledge themselves in writing to take every possible precaution to secure the purity of the election in the strictest conformity with the act.

LAURIER WANTS EARLY ELECTION

If Session Ends in May Contest Will Be Brought on in June

FEARS HARD TIMES Sessional Programme Will Avoid, as Far as Possible, All Controversial Matters so as to Rush Work—If Struggle is Postponed Premier Will Stump Borden's Route.

(Special to The Telegraph.) Montreal, Nov. 21.—Advices from Ottawa state an authority hitherto regarded as unimpeachable, that definite arrangements have been completed with regard to the general elections.

If the session at Ottawa comes to an end by the middle of May, the writ will be issued immediately and the election will take place in June. In this event Sir Wilfrid will not take his projected tour of the west. Should the session be prolonged beyond May, however, the federal elections will not be held until the latter half of October or early in November, in which case the premier will make a tour of the dominion, following fairly close the itinerary of the Conservative leader during his recent tour.

It is believed by those said to know that it is the desire of Sir Wilfrid that the elections should be brought off before the financial depression makes itself felt with greater acuteness, and if it is possible he will force the appeal to the country in June next. With this object in view, the programme for the coming session is being prepared, so as to, as far as possible, avoid controversial matters, while the departments are now busy getting everything in shape to help on the work of the government, once the house meets.

TELEGRAPHS TO BE UNDER CONTROL

Government to Introduce Legislation to Regulate Companies

MORE FAT JOBS Two or Three Members to Be Added to Railway Commission to Look After the Additional Work—Light Engines Likely to Be Prohibited from Running Without Written Orders.

(Special to The Telegraph.) Ottawa, Nov. 21.—The government has under consideration a bill for the purpose of increasing the membership of the Railway Commission by either two or three commissioners. There will also be added to the work of the board full control of telegraph and telephone companies.

The board of railway commissioners on account of the investigation into the railway wreck at Moore Lake will likely issue an order making railway companies cease permitting light engines to run from station to station under charge of an engineer who is merely asked to avoid regulars. A somewhat similar accident took place about two months ago. Engineers' light engines will, in all probability, be made to get orders the same as other trains.

MRS. BRADLEY IN CHEERFUL MOOD

Friend of Her Victim Testifies in Her Favor

Senator Brown's Love Letters to Woman Who Killed Him Read in Court.

Washington, Nov. 21.—The story of former United States Senator Brown's acknowledgment of the paternity of the two youngest of Mrs. Bradley's children was told today in Judge Stafford's court by other lips than her own.

Colonel Kaighn related many interesting facts concerning his association with both Senator Brown and Mrs. Bradley, and upon the whole made by far the best witness for the little woman that has yet taken the stand, herself excepted. He told in simple but forcible language of many dramatic interviews with Mrs. Bradley and closed with the expression of opinion that she had become a monomaniac on the subject of her relationship to the ex-senator. He said he believed her mind to have been unbalanced.

"I hated to do it," he said after he left the stand, "for Senator Brown was one of my most intimate friends; but one cannot trifle with one's conscience."

Other testimony in Mrs. Bradley's behalf was given by Major Samuel A. King, who related many incidents going to show that Mrs. Bradley was in a very nervous condition for some time before coming to Washington, and Arthur Barnes, assistant attorney-general of Utah. An effort was made to find a Mr. Shrewsbury, an uncle of Mrs. Bradley, who has been brought to Washington to testify concerning the insanity in Mrs. Bradley's family but he had disappeared and could not be found. Judge Powers explained that Mr. Shrewsbury was not used to courts and confidence was expressed that he will make his appearance tomorrow.

Mrs. Bradley Cheerful.

More placid, more capable of asserting control over herself and more resourceful, apparently than when she took the witness-stand on Tuesday, Mrs. Bradley left it at noon today after monopolizing the attention of the court for two days and a half. She was more composed than at any time, and her counsel expressed confidence that she would have been able to go on longer if called on to do so. They were satisfied with her testimony and believe that it will result to her advantage. There were very few tears today, but on the other hand smiles were more frequent on the face of the prisoner than heretofore. There were some references to occurrences in connection with herself and Senator Brown which evidently touched her and aroused agreeable memories.

She was especially pleased when Colonel Kaighn told the story of her presentation to him of Senator Brown's acknowledgment of the paternity of her children and she would today have almost justified his characterization of her manner at the time of the original happening.

Again the court was crowded to suffocation and it was necessary to keep all the windows open in order to satisfy Judge Stafford's demands for fresh air. Many of the spectators were ladies.

Brown's Love Letters.

The year 1901 was crowded with letters from Senator Brown to Mrs. Bradley, according to Mrs. Bradley's statement, but those she preserved began with December of that year. On the fifth of that month he wrote to her:

"Your letter full of buoyancy, hope and courage at hand. It gives me new light. I shall indeed be able to accomplish all we desire if you stand at my side and help in such magnificent fashion. Every word is a trumpet call for battle. We will get there. You have nothing to regret. If your life were wrecked, as you said last night, it was not by me. I will resurrect it, and you shall begin anew, something in life that you will be proud of, something that will please you."

On the sixth of the same month, he wrote:

"Dollie M. Brown, sweetheart: I talked to me and help us through thick and thin. He was astonished at the ultimatum, but said all right, it ought to be adjusted and he would help. I feel much encouraged. The talk was shorter than I hoped. I feel that we will win; let us love and be true and trust. In a letter dated Dec. 4, he said: 'I have heard nothing from the enemy. I am still determined to go on through life with you. We cannot turn back. We have set our hands to the plow and neither you nor I can falter or fail. Our love will be a beacon light and lead us to the end of life and happiness that will be ours. Pat your hand and life in mine and I will never fail you. I regret we did not get that divorce long ago. If Madame should see she will bring in your name and Clarence might think that would protect him. But of course you will take no action until you see me and I talk to you. Don't forget that I love you and will love you all my life and yours—that you are mine and I yours forever. I am homesick to see you. It seems as if I cannot stay away from you for twenty-four hours at a time.'

December 10, he wrote her a short letter, saying: "Dearest you—our love must overcome all else," and on the 12th, said: "I only think of the duty I owe you—the wrong I have done you and yours. I (Continued on page 7, sixth column.)"

CORRUPTION RAMPANT IN ONTARIO ELECTIONS

One Witness in London Case Says He Was Forced to Commit Crimes or Lose License

Another Tells of Switching Thirteen Ballots—Another Man Promised a Job by Grit Government and He Didn't Get It, Which Made Him Reveal Their Corruption.

(Special to The Telegraph.) Toronto, Nov. 21.—In the London bribery trial today Jerry Collins swore that he, O'Gorman and Wiley discussed the handling of ballots so that voters could be kept track of. The money, Collins said, came from Reid and Sifton.

"It was understood all along that I was to get a government job, with $1,000 a year. I didn't get it and wrote to O'Gorman."

A reply from O'Gorman advising Collins to look for other work was given.

"You didn't start this prosecution?"

"No, sir."

"Did you see Gibbons?"

"Yes, and he abused me."

"Gibbons told you to go to a very warm place?"

"Yes, Mr. Johnston's first question in the cross-examination."

"And a government job. I've got that coming."

"When did you begin to get sore?"

"When they didn't carry out their agreement."

"Yes, from the other government."

"I was forced to it. I held a license in order to hold my job."

"You were willing to commit crimes in order to hold your job?"

In the general election Collins said he got $100.

"So you did all this for the large sum of $100?"

"And a government job. I've got that coming."

"When did you begin to get sore?"

"When they didn't carry out their agreement."

"Yes, from the other government."

STATHCONA HOPES TO RESIGN SOON

High Commissioner at London Presentation to Him Says He Wants the All-Red Route a Fact First.

London, Nov. 31.—The Duke of Argyll, who was governor-general of Canada in 1893, today, in behalf of the Anglo-Canadians in London presented Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the Canadian high commissioner, with a large silver centerpiece, illustrative of the various phases of Lord Strathcona's life. Replying to the presentation address, the high commissioner said he hoped soon to resign his office into younger hands, but before so doing he desired to see the proposed "All-Red" route by way of Canada to the Far East an accomplished fact.

TORONTO MURDERER SENTENCED TO DEATH

(Special to The Telegraph.) Toronto, Nov. 21.—Justice MacMahon in the assizes court this morning sentenced John Boyd to death for the murder of E. A. Wandle in a York street boarding house in June last.

The jury, who were out four and a half hours considering their verdict, recommended the unhappy man to the mercy of the court. The judge, in pronouncing sentence, said it was a cruel murder, the victim being for his life, and chased from room to room by Boyd and shot down without mercy. The execution was set for January 8.

MOVE TO WIND-UP MONARCH BANK

Had an Authorized Capital of $2,000,000, but Never Started Business.

(Special to The Telegraph.) Toronto, Nov. 21.—Monarch Bank will be wound up. Its nominal capital was $2,000,000, but very little was subscribed. A writ was issued today at Osgoode Hall for the winding up proceedings.

The bank was organized more than two years ago with a capital authorized at $2,000,000. A year was given for the new company to put up the government deposit but this expired in July last. A year's extension was then granted. When this expired the deposit of $250,000 was gathered a day or so too late. The promoters felt somewhat disappointed then but they expressed satisfaction at the new turn affairs had taken, because of the present money stringency. A. L. Dewar has been managing director. Senator Kerr and Gordon and Ostrom were provisional directors. The head office of the bank is on Church street and agencies had been established in Vancouver and Halifax.

IOWA'S GOVERNOR STOPS PRIZE FIGHT

Wouldn't Trust Local Officials to Prevent McFarland-Harman Bout, So Called Out the Militia.

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 21.—Governor Cummins took a hand in Davenport's widely advertised McFarland-Harman prize fight this evening, and with the aid of a company of Iowa national guards, ordered it stopped before it began.

Four thousand seats had been sold for the occasion, and a thousand people came in special trains from Chicago for the occasion.

Today Governor Cummins satisfied himself that the fight was not to be a mere "scientific" sparring exhibition, as it had been advertised and he feared that if left to local officers there might be a liberal construction of the statute prohibiting prize fights. Late this afternoon the governor called out the militia at Davenport and ordered them to take possession at the Coliseum, where the fight was to take place.

ACTRESS FRIEND OF MRS. HOWARD GOULD TESTIFIES AGAINST HER

New York, Nov. 21.—Helen Mer, an English actress, appeared before Referee McClure today to give testimony in connection with the suit for separation instituted by Mrs. Catherine C. Clummond Gould against her husband, Howard Gould. Miss Mer's appearance was the result of a decision rendered by Justice O'Grady in the supreme court a few days ago that her testimony be taken before the actual opening of the trial, as she is about to sail for England.

It alleged by Mr. Gould in an affidavit that he had married her, Howard Gould, Miss Mer's appearance was the result of a decision rendered by Justice O'Grady in the supreme court a few days ago that her testimony be taken before the actual opening of the trial, as she is about to sail for England.

Coates offered to settle but the government refused.

The conversion of Mr. Balfour to the doctrine preached by Mr. Chamberlain has gone slowly on, for Mr. Balfour is notable not for deliberation, but for haste.

This advance he made in spite of the solemn warning of the London Times, and in the face of violent opposition from the free trade wing of the Unionist party.

President Eliot and Canada President Eliot of Harvard, one of the foremost men of the Republic, in a speech before the Harvard Canadian Club last Saturday, made extended comments upon Canadian institutions.

LOCH LOMOND CLAIMS

There is a suggestion afloat that an approaching local election may increase the chance for a liberal settlement of claims by holders of property on Loch Lomond.

ers believe the approach of an election should have any influence upon the Loch Lomond damage claims? If the city, in securing a plentiful supply of good water, caused damage to lands by raising the water of the lake above its normal level, it should pay reasonable damages.

WE HAVE THE WOOD

"We have the pulpwood; why should we not have the pulp and paper industry as well?" This, in brief, is the attitude of Canadians who are now examining the pulpwood situation to learn what pressures are best calculated to promote the manufacture of the wood here instead of in foreign mills.

of the proceedings that much fighting energy which will be needed at election time was foolishly employed in strife within the party. The powers that be had selected Mr. Whitehead before the convention was called; but as many friends of Mr. Gibson, who formerly sat in the Commons for York, objected to the proposal to throw him overboard, and as Mr. E. H. Allen, I. C. R. claims agent, was said to have a strong following, it was necessary to have a show-down.

Germany's formidable naval programme will not be reduced unless hard times replace the present rate of expansion and will feel that the great margin of advantage they now have over Germany in the matter of sea power must not be sensibly diminished.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The highway act is to be abolished. Desperate cases call for desperate remedies. If the local government liked the political signs of the times better it would bring on the bye-elections.

Collier's Weekly quotes from Lecky's "Democracy and Liberty"

Collier's Weekly quotes from Lecky's "Democracy and Liberty" a suggestive passage, on conditions in the United States, which sounds like prophecy in view of recent happenings in the Republic.

States, which sounds like prophecy in view of recent happenings in the Republic. This is the quotation: "The colossal fortunes built up by the railroad-wrecker, by the railway-monopolizer, by the fraudulent manipulator of municipal taxation, by unjust favors extorted from bribed legislators, by great commercial frauds and commercial monopolies, must one day bring a terrible Nemesis. These are the things that do most to sap the respect for property in a nation, and they are especially dangerous where no aristocracy or established territorial influence exists to restrict the empire and overshadow the ostentation of ill-got wealth. The vast development of the protective system, and of the system of subsidizing great multitudes from the pension list, can scarcely fail to weaken the spirit of self-reliance, and to teach the American people to look more and more to government for their artificial conditions of well-being."

A Tale of the Brave

(Montreal Witness) There is an episode in the annals of British more replete with heroic incident than the siege of Lucknow, the relief of which city by Sir Colin Campbell took place fifty years ago today (Nov. 16, 1857), flamed up all over northwestern India and on the night of May 30 swept the majority of the Sepoys of Lucknow into the town and the light of burning buildings shone through the windows, Sir Lawrence and his staff came out to the steps of the residency. The Sepoy guard, on the verge of revolt, but outwardly loyal, came up at the double. "Shall I order the men to load the second officer. 'Yes, let them load,' answered Lawrence quietly. The charges were rammed home, there was a moment's pause, and then, at the word of command, the men swung round and marched into the darkness, awed for the moment by the fine courage of the great commander. The fore morning, however, was an open nutting. On the last day of June came the disaster at Chitnut, not far from Lucknow, and immediately after the fight of Lucknow, when the first fore-sight of Lawrence had gathered the Europeans, was an irregular cluster of houses and gardens, covering something more than 3,000 human beings. More than 600 were European women and children, nearly 700 more were native servants, 700 more were Sepoys, the majority secretly disloyal, but some nobly faithful. The real garrison consisted of 900 British, 700 being soldiers and the rest civilians. They had to defend about 2,500 yards of front. The strength of the mutineers was difficult to compute, but one of the besieged garrisons that it ranged from 30,000 to nearly 100,000.

THE FLAG WAS SHOT DOWN

The flag was shot down time and time again, but the damage was instantly repaired, so that it never failed to tell the besieging host of the story of the able courage that burned in the hearts of the defenders. "During the whole siege," says one who went through it, "I never heard of a man among the British who doubted his courage. Some cracked, no doubt; many were despondent; yet others grew sorely desperate during those terrible days." "The courage of the British was not broken, and how jokes were bandied about beneath the storm of the Sepoy bullets, and how the men were brave, the women were braver, and to their courage the spirit in which the defence was conducted was largely due. The first stage of the battle of Plassey, and that now when his little force, after their wonderful fighting march to Cawnpore and thence across the Ganges and to Lucknow, it was still impossible to bring the women and children and wounded men through the swarming hosts of the mutineers, so fourteen days afterwards, when Sir Colin Campbell with his own 93rd, and other reinforcements, and after prodigies of valor the sick, wounded and helpless were conveyed out in safety. The brave Havlock ended as he was being carried through the defenses he had so gallantly held. Four months afterwards Sir Colin returned to recapture the city and suppress the mutiny.

IT IS A NOTABLE FACT THAT THE TWO LAWRENCE HAVLOCK AND MANY OF THE OTHER BRITISH LEADERS DURING THE MUTINY WERE MEN OF UNASSUMING BUT GENUINE PRIDE, AND THAT IT WAS THEIR LONELY FAITH WHICH KEPT THEIR COURAGE HIGH DURING THE FEARFUL TEST.

IT IS A REMARKABLE COINCIDENCE THAT THE REVOLT TOOK PLACE EXACTLY 50 YEARS AFTER THE BATTLE OF PLASSEY, AND THAT NOW WHEN EXACTLY FIVE DECADES HAVE GONE BY THERE SHOULD BE A RECURRENCE OF UNREST IN INDIA.

THE AUTHORITIES HAVE LEARNED MANY LESSONS AND THERE IS LITTLE FEAR OF THE TERRIBLE EVENTS OF 1857 EVER BEING REPEATED.

IT IS WELL TO REMEMBER, HOWEVER, THAT OUR TRUE STRENGTH IN INDIA LIES IN THE GENERAL HIGH CHARACTER OF OUR ADMINISTRATORS.

STORMY SESSION AT YORK CONVENTION

W. T. Whitehead Chosen Liberal Candidate After Bitter Wrangling

First Ballot Thrown Away Because Everyone Voted as Often as He Pleas—E. H. Allen a Close Second, and Alex. Gibson, Jr. a Poor Third—Dr. Pugsley Hitches His Towline to the Local Government, and Will Sink or Swim With It—St. John Valley Road to Figure Prominently in Next Campaign.

Fredericton, Nov. 20—After a stormy and confused session, involving charges of ballot-box stuffing and the retirement of the chairman, the York county Liberal convention here this afternoon nominated W. T. Whitehead for Ottawa over E. H. Allen and Alex. Gibson, ex-M. P., of Marysville. Less than 100 voters were present, but it is said that 400 ballots were placed in the box when the first vote was taken, and at least one man was said to have voted four times. The high old time in the convention is the talk of the town tonight, and it is thought the fight over the nomination between Whitehead and Allen forces will greatly weaken the party at a fighting force. On motion of R. W. McLellan, Mr. Whitehead's nomination was made unanimous. Senator Thompson accepted on behalf of the successful candidate, and expressed the opinion that York county at the next election would be brought back within the Liberal fold. Dr. Pugsley. Dr. Pugsley, in response to a call from the chairman, made a vigorous campaign address, which was warmly received. He expressed pleasure at seeing such a large and representative gathering and hoped that when the elections were called on they would fight as vigorously for the nominee of the convention as they had during the afternoon. He paid a graceful tribute to Messrs. Blair and Emmerson, his predecessors in the government from New Brunswick, and made a strong bid for Liberal support for the local government. He expressed his confidence in the Liberal party and the local government, and said that he would be fighting side by side with Premier Robinson when the battle came on. After paying a glowing tribute to Sir Wilfrid Laurier he remarked that he was close enough to public sentiment to know that whenever the elections were brought on the people will support the present government by a large majority. He hoped the province of New Brunswick would be in line with the other provinces of Canada, and that the county of York would be ranged under the Liberal banner. During eleven years of Liberal rule Canada has gone forward by leaps and bounds, and manufacturers have increased their output, population has increased, workmen are receiving better wages and farmers higher prices for their produce. He strongly urged young men to come forward and range themselves under the banner of the Liberal party. Referring to the charge in his speech at Fairville that a campaign fund of $500,000 had been raised in Montreal to help Conservatives in the election of 1904, the minister said that he had taken occasion to express his disapproval of the conduct of Mr. Borden in claiming that all the political corruption is practiced on the side of the Liberals. He had stated that Borden, instead of adopting a hypocritical course, should use his influence to bring about a better state of affairs. He also stated that the half million dollars subscribed by influential members of parliament in Montreal, $200,000 had been sent into a single county in this province to help elect a lieutenant-governor. Repeats Corruption Charges. Mr. Borden's reply to this was that he, Pugsley, did not prosecute the man who stuffed the Robesley lists, and that he was a Conservative prior to 1886. People had repeatedly passed on his conduct since that date, and therefore it was hardly necessary for him to enter upon a discussion of that matter now. He noticed that Mr. Borden was anxious to have a royal commission appointed to find out how much money his friends expended in the election of 1904. He would say to Mr. Borden that he would go to Montreal and consult three or four of his political friends in that city who would have no difficulty in ascertaining the truth of his, Pugsley's, statements, and if he is a truthful man he will be able to tell his friends in Ottawa on the night of Nov. 27, that his, Pugsley's, figures were one or two hundred thousand dollars within the mark. He wished it understood distinctly that he had not taken back one single statement made in his Fairville speech, and when opportunity offers he is prepared to prove what he said right up to the hilt. He deplored the illegal expenditure of money by both parties, but he did not propose to allow the impression to be created that Conservatives were all saints and Liberals all sinners. The minister spoke of the great need of a railway along the valley of the St. John, and assured the convention that subject was very dear to his heart. Before he passed away he hoped to see a railway traversing this beautiful valley, and he promised to do everything in his power in conjunction with the local government to bring about this important work. On motion of Ald. Hooper a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the minister of public works for his address. F. B. Carvell, M. P., delivered an address of fifteen minutes' duration, which was frequently applauded. He gave many reasons why he thought the government should win, and predicted a great victory for Sir Wilfrid Laurier when next he appealed to the people. He promised to do his utmost to bring about the construction of the St. John Valley Railway. Premier Robinson, who spoke briefly, assured the convention that the local government was deeply interested in the St. John Valley Railway proposal and would render every assistance in their power. Attorney-General McKewen, who spoke next, referred to Premier Robinson as one of the brightest young men in the province, and said he felt sure that when he appealed to the people his government would be returned to power with as great a majority as the governments of Tweedie and Emmerson had received. On motion of J. D. Finney, it was decided to send a telegram to Sir Wilfrid Laurier congratulating him on his sixtieth birthday. After a few remarks by Alex. Gibson, Jr., in which he pledged hearty support to the Whitehead candidate, the convention adjourned.

BUFFALO BILL IS NAMED IN THE GOULD SUIT

New York, Nov. 18—Through a motion before Justice O'Gorman in the supreme court the name of William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," was drawn into the suit of Katherine Clemens Gould, who is suing her husband, Howard Gould, for a separation. Helen Mar, an actress and reader, has made an affidavit in which she declares that Mrs. Gould confessed to her twelve years ago regarding Colonel Cody. The document is in the hands of Nicol, Anable & Lindsay, attorneys for Mr. Gould, who recently obtained an order from Justice Fitzgerald for the examination of Miss Mar. (Charles J. Shearn, counsel for Mrs. Gould, appeared before Justice O'Gorman yesterday with a motion to have the order of Justice Fitzgerald vacated. "Mr. Gould's declaration is that 'on information and belief the plaintiff herein has confessed to the said Helen Mar the nature of her relations with the said William F. Cody.' The papers inform the court that at the time of the marriage on March 20, 1888, the plaintiff declared to

TAMPERED WITH BALLOT BOX IN ONTARIO ELECTION

Deputy Returning Officer Tells of Opening It to See "If Goods Were Delivered." Toronto, Nov. 20.—A considerable portion of the evidence in the London bribery cases before Judge Winchester today was devoted to the opening of ballot boxes at the Beck-Rumball election. W. Spence, who acted as deputy returning officer, testified that he was persuaded by E. L. Sifton to return with Servino to the latter's house, where the boxes lay sealed, and there they were opened and ballots counted. The reason advanced by Sifton for having the boxes opened, according to Spence, was to ascertain the names of the voters who, it was supposed, had gone back on their promise to vote for Rumball. Spence declared that Sifton was responsible for the proceedings. "Who opening the box when you went back?" asked Staunton. "I had the key, but I don't know who unlocked it," said Spence. "How do you know he took out the voters' list and ballots. Their inspection showed 'two had gone wrong.'" "What do you mean?" inquired the crown counsel. "Two who promised to vote for the Liberal candidate did not do so." "Who were they?" "George Gibson and Stephen Collins." "How do you know they were voters?" "I understood they were promised some sort of consideration." Spence said Sifton spoke of the dollars these men were to get. "You might as well have said suggested Sifton, who handed over the money." Spence said, so far as possible, he had covered up his tracks by resealing the ballot box and the envelopes containing the ballot papers. The box he afterwards carried home. Johnston, K. C.—"Have you told us if you know about the by-election of 1905?" "Yes." "All the trouble about the ballot boxes in Beck-Rumball election arose out of the fact that the vote had proved disappointing." "Yes." "There was no thought about the returns or opening the ballot boxes until you met Sifton?" "No." "The whole thing was done at the direction of Sifton?" "Yes." At the by-election in June, 1905, Spence acted as outside scrutineer for a division of Ward 2. He had been nominated as deputy returning officer, but the appointment was not confirmed. On that occasion Jerry Collins acted as deputy returning officer. After the election Collins gave Sifton $15. Witness asked what it was for and Collins' reply was: "Never mind what it is for it is my own money and I can do what I like with it." Witness at first refused to take money, but on advice of his son he accepted. He did not know what the money was for. The only conclusion he could come to was that it had some connection with the election. He felt disappointed at not having been appointed a deputy returning officer, and he had complained to the chairman of the Liberal committee.

ORDERS BOYCOTT OF DRUG STORES

American Federation of Labor Puts Ban on Those Selling Objectionable Cigars.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 19—The American Federation of Labor today rejected an amendment to its by-laws proposing that in the future no decision upon a jurisdictional dispute between two or more national international unions shall be decided by the federal convention or by legislative council between sessions, unless all parties interested by convention, referendum or in some other proper way agree before the question is taken up to be bound by the decision given. The view was taken after long discussion in which it was held that to adopt this new proposition would work to the advantage of the stronger body as against the weaker organization in all disputes. The proposition required a two-thirds vote to pass. The federation adopted cautions-resolutions against the American and Continental Tobacco Companies and calling for the boycott of drug stores all over the country having certain kinds of cigar brands which were ordered on the "we don't patronize" list. The legislative council was given authority to remove from the "we don't patronize" list the names of concerns and goods thereon where international unions that these are not found to be properly phrasing the boycotts. The convention ratified the appointment of two special committees to confer with the farmers of the country represented by the affiliated American Society of Equity with the view to having the farmers cooperate with the trades union by refusing to buy boycotted farm supplies. The federation rejected a resolution providing for a committee to recommend to the 1908 convention ways and means for the establishment of a national sanitarium to be owned and operated by the federation particularly for the treatment of consumptives. A resolution was introduced by J. W. Hawker, of the United Mine Workers, providing that the executive council prepare a document setting forth resolutions for the inauguration of a united political movement by the working people of the country, and the document to be signed by all affiliated bodies and other bona fide organizations and the general result to be reported to the 1908 convention. This came to an end here today. Two fragments and one private who had destroyed a picture of Emperor Nicholas, were sentenced to death and one shot; nine other men were sent out to the mines for life, twelve were sent to the mines for ten years and the others were acquitted. The proceedings were secret.

PANIC AT FUNERAL OF VICTIMS OF DOUBLE MURDER

One Man Fatally Injured and Eight Others Badly Hurt in Rush from Church. York, Pa., Nov. 20—One man was probably fatally injured and eight other persons were hurt in a panic in Quickels church, six miles north of this city, today. While the funeral of William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," was being held in the church, the victims of last Saturday night's double murder were in progress, a report gained currency that the building was falling. The church was crowded to its doors. To aggravate the rumor, the heating stove was accidentally pushed over. The congregation of men, women and children fought to get out of the windows and doors. Those who received injuries were hurt by being strangled or crushed in the struggle. The injuries of the victims consist principally of broken limbs and cuts and bruises. In the crush the caskets were thrown to the floor. The funeral services were postponed and the bodies were buried in the cemetery. The injured were removed and cared for.

BANKS NOW ADVANCING MONEY TO HANDLE WESTERN GRAIN CROP

Ottawa, Nov. 20—On the subject of the handling of the western grain trade, Mr. Fielding stated today that since he took up the matter with bankers some days ago, there has been a noticeable improvement in the situation. Considerable additional capital has been furnished to western buyers, who he assured are now taking all the grain that is offered at current prices. A telegram received by him on Tuesday stated that grain was being bought on that day in the Winnipeg market at higher prices than in any similar market in America. Mr. Fielding's attention having been called to a report from Winnipeg that the banks were not aware of any arrangements made by the government, he replied that almost all the banks at Winnipeg are branches of the institutions having their headquarters elsewhere. The government, of course, communicates with the headquarters of such banks and not with their branches at Winnipeg. Any bank engaged in the grain trade which feels its resources unequal to the business which it is disposed to do, in the immediate transportation of grain, is aware of the fact, if it wishes additional funds for that purpose, it can obtain them through arrangements made by the government. Some of the banks, however, say that such arrangements are now unnecessary, and therefore they are not disposed to avail themselves of them. They think that all legitimate business is now being handled and that the difficulties of the situation will be overcome without any further special effort. Many of the farmers, it is stated are disposed to hold back their grain for better prices.

SCOTT ACT APPEALS HEARD AT HAMPTON

Hampton, N. B., Nov. 19—(Special)—At the adjourned sitting of the county court of Kings, held in the probate court room this morning, three Scott Act appeals were before his honor Judge Wetherburn. In the King, on complaint of Harris T. Cusack, against Andrew Carr, A. A. Wilson submitted the evidence taken before Magistrates Biggar and Little, which was accepted on file. At the preliminary trial Carr did not appear and was convicted of a first offence. Mr. Wilson also submitted the magistrates' certificate of previous conviction, which convicted him of second offence. Mr. W. B. Jona for the applicant put in no rebuttal evidence, but asked that the conviction be quashed on the grounds that the evidence is insufficient, that being a second offence the certificate of a previous offence has not been produced according to law, and that the act was not in force at the time in Kings county, under the amendment. The court considers. The King et al against Daniel Ross, the evidence in the preliminary trial was submitted. A witness, John Morrow, was called, but did not respond. Mr. Jona called the same witness as in the previous case, and on the grounds one and three in that case. The court considers. The King et al against Hugh J. McCormick, William Robinson and John Cleat, two witnesses in jail, were brought into court, but their memory of previous testimony and occurrences as charged, seemed to be very hazy, although they admitted getting liquor at McCormick's hotel. Jeremiah McGinley, another witness, subpoenaed, was also called, but did not respond, and Mr. Wilson moved to read the evidence at the preliminary trial. Mr. Jona opposed this, and his honor concurring, Mr. Wilson asked for a warrant, which his honor granted, returnable on the third Tuesday in January, 1908, upon which the court adjourned sine die. His honor notified the lawyers present that he would be in St. John on and after November 30th, and would hear any motions in chambers at the Victoria Hotel.

BROOKLYN BANK OFFICIALS INDICTED

New York, Nov. 20—Three indictments are said to have been ordered today by the Kings county grand jury which has been investigating the affairs of the suspended Borough Bank of Brooklyn. The grand jury has not completed its labors and are more intimations tonight that there might be other indictments. While no official statement was forthcoming of the action of the jury, it is understood that more than one indictment may be returned against individuals. The grand jury, it is expected, will hand down indictments tomorrow or Friday. All of the directors of the Borough Bank, with four exceptions, have been subpoenaed and nearly all have testified before the grand jury. The four directors who had not been summoned today are Howard Maxwell, former president of the bank; Arthur D. Campbell, former cashier; Wm. S. Huntley, vice-president; and Wm. Gow, a director, who is credited with a controlling interest in the institution. Maxwell and Campbell resigned their position about a year ago. Daniel Brewster Hayes of Worcester observed his 83rd birthday recently. Mr. Hayes has the record of having read portions of his Bible every day for 70 years. He says he has used up six Bibles in that time.

The doctor searched carefully and quietly. There were no more papers on the corpse. Then the doctor took the watch from his pocket and opened it.

From this we conclude that the doctor we know, Mrs. Weston's husband, who sits by at the table, is not the Weston to whom these letters are addressed.

Barney, the Millionaire Suicide, Wife and New York Residence

CHARLES T. BARNEY.

RESIDENCE OF CHARLES T. BARNEY, 100 WEST 42ND STREET.

New York, Nov. 19.—The will of Charles T. Barney, banker, who committed suicide last Thursday, was made public today.

The will, written on a sheet of paper while the banker was lying in his home, mortally wounded, by the bullet he had fired into his body, the will contains scarcely more than a hundred words.

Under the will the entire estate is bequeathed to Lily W. Barney, the widow, and Mrs. Barney and her two sons, Ashel H. and James W., are named as executrix and executors.

It is estimated that the estate, at present, amounts to about $2,000,000.

South Kensington—manages my affairs." "Ah," said Nielsen. "It did not surprise him. Then the best thing will be to telegraph to him that your brother has lost his life."

Mr. Weston shook her head. "If that was all I should not need you, Mr. Nielsen."

No doubt there was something in that. Nielsen already regretted his letter to Miss Derry. He asked cautiously:

"What am I to do, then?" "You must contrive to keep Mr. Weston here and lend him a small sum—much less than fifty pounds—to get home with."

"And then?" "Then you must represent me before the authorities here. As soon as I get home, I shall send you the money and the necessary papers. Will you do that?"

"Of course," said Nielsen. "Only I must know about your relation to the deceased and about the home of which you speak. It would be the most natural thing for you to apply to Mr. Armstrong, and if you do not do so, you must have other reasons; and these reasons I must know."

"Then you don't trust me," she said sadly.

"Indeed, you're mistaken—but I must be able to justify my position before the authorities and before Mr. Armstrong. If you have reasons for going past that gentleman, I shall, of course, respect them, but I must have sufficient reasons. We lawyers, that is the honorable one among us, are a good deal of a body, and we do not go behind one another's backs. Therefore, dear madam, however inconvenient it may be to you, you must tell me why you will not take up with Mr. Armstrong."

"I do not trust Mr. Armstrong. He was my brother's man of business; my brother had great faults—unhappily nothing but faults. Mr. Armstrong allowed my brother to make use of him, and although I do not believe he is dishonest in himself, I have no confidence in him. Absolutely none. That is my reason."

"But you have some family at home?" "No," she answered. "My father was a doctor in the colonies; he is dead; my mother died when I was a child. I have no relations in England—none at all."

Nielsen looked at her with compassion, but his eyes rested on him harshly; they were moist. Nielsen thought of Dr. Koldby. No, he would find out how things were.

"You ask about your home—or didn't I understand you rightly?" he continued, mercifully. "The sun had just disappeared below the horizon, and the stars were shining."

"Shall we walk a little?" she said, with a movement as though she felt cold. Nielsen got up.

At the same moment he caught sight of the tall Englishman up the gap. Mrs. Weston saw him, too.

"Come," she said, "this way." They walked in silence for a few moments, then Nielsen repeated his question.

"You spoke of a home?" "Yes," she said. "I have a house in London; it is let at present, but it is mine. Mr. Armstrong looks after it. He manages it for my brother."

Nielsen thought she hesitated in saying "brother." It struck him that she seldom spoke of her brother directly. Her words about him just now were bold and open.

"Where is the house situated?" asked Nielsen. "In South Kensington—well, you don't know it, so it is no use mentioning the street."

Nielsen knew where it was. He could not avoid knowing who had taken the house, and he had seen it. Mr. Armstrong called it Major Johnson's home. If she went to London now, she must find out, and then Nielsen felt that then it would be all over. His first impulse was to tell her that he was her tenant. But—

The doctor came towards them. "Mr. Nielsen," she said hurriedly, "have you full confidence in your friend?" "Absolutely," answered Nielsen.

"You tell me everything?" "As a rule." "Will you tell him what I have asked you to do?"

"That depends upon you." "She stopped; then said: 'You may tell him.' Nielsen smiled.

"When you are confident in me, might be told to anyone. We both have eyes, and your relation to Mr. Weston has been quite apparent to us. That you and your brother were in no adjectival terms we have both remarked. In short, Mr. Weston, I have not your confidence. Nevertheless, I shall do what you have asked me to do."

"And if he dissuades you?" "He will not do that. Dr. Koldby is a sensible man, and he admires you. I am to put off Mr. Weston, then?"

She nodded. The doctor then came up to them. "Good evening," he said. "They all went home together. Mr. Weston stood in the hotel doorway and followed Nielsen with his gaze."

And, as Nielsen expected, he came after him and said he hoped Mrs. Weston agreed with him. Nielsen hoped so, too; he would write the same evening for the money. Thereupon Mr. Weston went to his room reassured.

CHAPTER XXI.

"Well, Nielsen," said the doctor, late that night, as they were smoking their cigars and the doctor was smoking his pipe. "Near," answered Nielsen.

"When a man says that he nearly held his own, it means that he gave in. That's an inflexible rule. So it was with your friend the winner?"

"Perhaps," replied Nielsen; "he was not quite willing to admit it. In any case, she was cheaper than Mr. Weston. She warned me against lending him money. It sounded very honest. She wants to get rid of him, that's plain."

"Come on with your report," said the doctor briefly. Nielsen recounted all that had passed. "Hum," said the doctor, when he had heard it—walking up and down and uttering no word. "So you haven't yet done anything foolish. By so doing you would only cause trouble to me, and that is not what I want. You would never see the money again."

"It's a good lot," thought Nielsen, but he did not betray himself. "It's a good lot," thought Nielsen, but he did not betray himself. "It's a good lot," thought Nielsen, but he did not betray himself.

"Not at all," Nielsen repeated. "You won't be able to do with less, I understand very well. But to cover any contingency, I shall have to ask you to give me a formal power of attorney to represent you at the probate court. From what I understand, Mrs. Weston, your wife, is not a party to the estate. She will therefore come to you, or to her, if she has a separate estate. All you have to do is get legitimation from England, and the affair will be in order. That can be done in the course of a few days, can it not?"

Nielsen looked at Weston. "It was evident that the thing would not go so smoothly, Nielsen was not very well satisfied."

He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied.

He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied.

He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied.

He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied.

He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied.

He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied. He was not very well satisfied.

therefore ask you: what will happen now?" "An examination of the body," said Nielsen. "A perfectly simple business, by which the chief of police, or his deputy, constituted as sheriff, in conjunction with the district doctor, will establish the fact that Mr. Throgmorton is dead, and the cause of death. Probably the crew of the boat will be examined, to find out whether anyone was to blame. Obviously, no one was to blame—and so the thing is done."

"But how about Mrs. Weston and me?" "You will probably be called upon to give your explanation. As to Throgmorton's question of course there can be no question. You know him, and Mrs. Weston is his sister, isn't she?"

Nielsen stole a glance at the Englishman. He thought Mr. Weston was rather nervous, so he added:

"The question of identity will be of no importance here, where you and Mrs. Weston will simply say that you know who the deceased is."

"Don't they require an oath or written statement?" asked Nielsen. "Choose a local officer of justice, of the home-made Danish type, and let him loose on the mystery!"

In other words, cause the arrest of Mrs. Weston and Major Johnson just at the moment when they were to be exposed as those who were innocent, and when the murderer, as you remarked on the beach, has received his punishment."

"I never remarked anything so stupid," said the doctor coolly. "If you will remember, I said the reverse. But I agree with you: it will be an unpleasant business for Mrs. Weston, for the major, and for Amy. Amy of the cat, who is the one I am most partial to—though you, being a young man, seem inclined to favor Mrs. Weston. For as two it can't be such an expensive entertainment, but in any case it will not be very handsome of us to take refuge among our home authorities. Nielsen smiled. "That is a redeeming feature, doctor. But we ought to exclude the police, all the same. Let us set to work at once. Let us write to Miss Derry and instruct her over home."

"When you have had your first silly ideas washed off by a friendly douche from the undersigned, you turn out to be quite an intelligent young man, Nielsen."

"Thus the doctor accepted the idea, and next morning the post card conveyed from Nielsen to Hjorting a letter written in Nielsen's hand, addressed to Miss A. Derry, London, as follows:

"Dear Madam, For reasons which you will learn later, I have been looking for Major Johnson, and have found him here with Mrs. Weston. It is all more serious than you think. You must come. It would be advisable for Mr. Sydney Armstrong to come too. You may tell him from my tenants at 48 Cranbourne Grove that Mr. Throgmorton has been drowned in a boating accident in the Skagerrak, and that the best thing he can do is to come to Løkken with me as soon as he can. I cannot write more, but you promised to trust me. Yours faithfully, HOLGER NIELSEN."

It was a good day's work the two men had done. The same evening the report spread that the body of the drowned Englishman had been found half way between Furby Beck and Løngby church, by his brother-in-law and the local custom house officer, accompanied by the mounted policemen of the district.

The Englishman was, of course, a lone dead. The district magistrate came himself to see the body, on account of possible negotiations with the English authorities.

CHAPTER XIII.

"Mr. Nielsen," said Weston, next day after lunch, as he politely accented Nielsen in his way to the beach, "you are a lawyer, and you speak English. You will allow me a question, which I am obliged to ask, and which is excusable under the circumstances?"

"Of course," said Nielsen. "I am ready to give you all the guidance I can."

"Ah," he thought, "it's the police." The Englishman went on: "Have you any objection to going up to my room, where we can talk undisturbed?"

"Certainly not," answered Nielsen. They went up to Weston's room, and then it came.

"You are a lawyer, Mr. Nielsen. I am a stranger in this country. The fishermen do not understand affairs of this kind, and the police official who was with me yesterday is evidently only a subordinate. I misunderstand me; it is only what I expected of you, but it's funny, all the same, isn't it?"

"I have never asserted that the oath might not be used in certain cases to get at the truth—it would be foolish to deny it simply inasmuch as all compulsion of the truth is irreconcilable with sound principles of justice."

"Of course," laughed the doctor. "The police principle is unjust, the criminal has all the rights on their side. And that's what this whole affair is based on. I don't mind; long live Progress and modern criminology! The madder the better!"

Nielsen was a little nettled. "There is no question of criminal rights. If Mrs. Weston has reasons for concealing the dead man's name, she should not be compelled to disclose it with threats of eternal damnation."

"She may have sense enough not to believe in eternal damnation, my friend. If you ask me, I don't believe she does."

"Well, penal servitude, then," said Nielsen impatiently. "It comes to the same thing."

"No, stop a bit, young man. I'd risk eternal damnation any day, especially now that the bishops in agreement with the Church of Rome have arranged a comfortable purgatory for repentant deceased persons. Anyhow, we don't know anything about that. But penal servitude is decidedly preferable to the alternative."

Nielsen seemed relieved. Mr. Weston asked: "However, it will be necessary for you or Mrs. Weston, or both of you, to appear, not before the police court, but before the registrar of the local court. From the point of view of the private individual this is more practical, but the English arrangement gives more work to the members of my profession. You will have to see the registrar at Hjorting one day and make a statement as to the deceased's estate. The affair will then be referred through the Danish Foreign Office to the English authorities concerned."

"Will an oath be required here?" "An oath will be required here."

"Certainly they will require an oath. That is, that you and Mrs. Weston know Mr. Throgmorton for so many years, and can speak as to his identity. That is what I should require, if I were registrar. Whether it is necessary, I don't know, but in any case it can make no difference to you or Mrs. Weston."

"Of course not," said the Englishman—and added: "So it won't be to-day."

"Certainly not," said Nielsen. "But if you will insist, I am willing to help you with the question of inheritance, but you may dispose of me in any way."

"Thanks," said the Englishman. "I'll talk to Mr. Weston about it."

Nielsen then left him. Koldby was doing in Dr. Madsen's bench chair. The weather was warm and still; all traces of the storm had disappeared from the sea and the sands, but Belle Jent's body lay with three holes in her side and her most gone. The lobsterbox had gone to sea, and the insurance people were making difficulties about it. And the dead Englishman lay up at the fire engine house.

"Doctor," said Nielsen—they were alone among the beach chairs, "he's a priest about the oath of identity. Now the armistice."

"And the watch?" "He said nothing about it."

"Ah," he thought, "it's the custom house man either. That excellent official has just described the finding of the body to me—with all details. But he said nothing of the watch. Funny, isn't it? What is he doing now?"

"Mr. Weston is holding a conference with Mrs. Weston. I have given him to understand that he will get off easily to-day. It will be worse when the probate court has its turn."

"Then they'll be?" "He will, perhaps, but what will she do?"

"She will lie, too, said the doctor. "What else should they do?"

"My dear Nielsen, you are one of the most determined opponents of the oath as an institution, and you have lectured me on the Workingmen's Institute on the impropriety of requiring an oath, a lecture which hit the mark like all your others—and now you stand here insisting on the excellence of the oath. You must not man was created in imperfection, as we are told, the Lie was placed by the side of man to screen his imperfection. By means of the Lie man became like his prototype; the Lie conceals that which shall be revealed. The Lie became everything, it became truth itself. We simply cannot dispense with the Lie; only confessing it daily, could we be rid of it; but then the world would come to an end, and the last man would die!"

To those doctrines Koldby made no comment, but settled himself comfortably in his chair to resume his duty; and his friend took the hint and returned to the hotel.

CHAPTER XX.

The viewing of the body was conducted with solemn stillness. Mr. Throgmorton was dead, he could not come to life again. No blame could attach to the skipper of the boat; the North Sea and adjacent waters have their whims and humors; it sometimes pleases them to treat their guests so that they die of the treatment. Nevertheless, the North Sea continues to be plowed, and the medical faculty occasionally has to attest a case of Mrs. while the authorities of the dry land write their official reports. The landings, however, it was assumed that there was no doubt as to Mr. Throgmorton's identity; and, of course, there was some other."

After a light lunch at the coast guard's quarters, the chief of police informed Mr. Weston, through the interpreter, that his deputy would present himself and register the property found on the body. There were only a few articles, but a considerable sum of money, and this necessitated the action of the court.

The chief of police took charge of the cash found on the deceased, after deducting 200 crowns for funeral expenses; it amounted to about 1200 crowns in Danish money. Mr. Weston, in his ignorance, could neither say polite to the authorities; he could neither say no do anything.

After dinner he went to see Nielsen, and he said: "You are a lawyer, and you have been of great assistance to me during the last few days, more than you think. It is a matter of form, I shall ask you just for a receipt for the amount. And as I said before, I will assist you with what you want."

Weston was perceptibly embarrassed. Nielsen was still standing with his pocket book in his hand.

"Weston looked up rather shyly—"Would you mind asking too much?" he said. "Mrs. Weston—"

"It's a good lot," thought Nielsen, but he did not betray himself. "It's a good lot," thought Nielsen, but he did not betray himself. "It's a good lot," thought Nielsen, but he did not betray himself.
