

FROM ALL OVER THE MARITIME PROVINCES

REXTON

REXTON, N. B., March 21.—A great quantity of lumber has been gotten out during the present season by different parties and many are still hauling logs. The weather conditions of this season have been excellent for lumbering operations. It is expected that during the coming summer the saw mills will be kept busy and a good business done by the different firms.

HAVELOCK

HAVELOCK, March 20.—Benjamin Perry, of this place, died on the 4th inst. after an illness of several months, aged 74. Mr. Perry was the eldest brother of the late X. Perry, who for many years conducted a commission business in St. John. He leaves three brothers—Samuel (postmaster), Asa and Lewis, all of Havelock; also four sisters—Mrs. Jesse Clark, Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. L. W. Corey, all of Havelock, and Mrs. Aseath Keith, of Kinnear Settlement. Deceased was a kind-hearted, industrious citizen and quite popular.

HARCOURT

HARCOURT, March 20.—Mr. and Mrs. John McLeod, of Smith's Corner, have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the death of their daughter, May, which occurred on Wednesday last after an illness extending over several years. The event was particularly sad as at the time the house was quarantined with a case of smallpox and the only one to render assistance was the attendant doctor, R. G. Girvan. The body was taken to Bass River for interment.

MONCTON

MONCTON, N. B., March 20.—The city council met again tonight to arrange details in connection with the transfer of the lighting department March 28th. It was decided to meet Saturday night to complete the final details. The company of the old one which was erected in King street for its tramway.

FREDERICTON

FREDERICTON, N. B., March 22.—The most serious fire the local firemen have had to contend with in several years, occurred on Waterloo Row tonight, when the house owned by Joseph Millican and occupied by him and his family and by Miss Sarah Waycott, was badly gutted. The damage to the building amounted to upwards of $2,000 and furniture, valued at several hundred dollars, was also destroyed.

DON'T TAKE OLD-TIME PHYSIC "Fruit-a-tives" Brings Natural Results in a Natural Way

"I am a seventy-nine-year-old man and a great believer in, and user of, 'Fruit-a-tives'." "Stricture of the Bowels was the complaint I suffered from and I found that 'Fruit-a-tives' did me more good than any other remedy. My doctor advised me to stick to 'Fruit-a-tives' and I have done so with best result."

There had been a hole cut, it is said, and carelessly left unmarked. Francis Woods has been confined to his bed for some days. James Haines, of Campbellton, spent a few days of last week in town the guest of his father, Allan Haines, and his sister, Miss J. Haines.

WILSON'S BEACH

Wilson's Beach, March 20.—As a result of the special meetings held here lately by the pastor, Mr. Vallis, two were baptized yesterday, the Misses Julia and Lena Newman. The rite was administered by Rev. Mr. Brown, of Deer Isle, who also in the afternoon preached a very eloquent sermon to the members of Riverside L. O. G. and their friends, taking as his text Consider the Former Days.

EX-ALD. LEWIS IS DEAD AT THE AGE OF EIGHTY-THREE

End Came Suddenly—Walked Here from North Shore in Youth and Became an Esteemed Citizen—Long While in Common Council.

Wednesday, March 22. The city sustained a great loss yesterday morning in the death of ex-Alderman William Lewis, whose life ended at his home in St. James street about 7 o'clock, after an illness of comparatively short duration.

Mr. Lewis, who was in the 83rd year of his age, had been complaining of his heart for some time, but was confined to the house for only about a week. All Monday night he was quite low, but early yesterday morning he was able to be up, but soon after was stricken.

He was one of the city's most respected citizens and took a very active part in civic politics. He was a life-long Conservative.

Up to the time of his retirement from the council he was one of the oldest members at the board. He was born in Esquimaux, New Brunswick, in 1828, and came to St. John in 1849, starting a blacksmith shop in British street, and there he conducted business ever since.

After being in the city a couple of years, he married Miss Mary Mahoney of Charlottetown, who died thirty years ago. Four sons and three daughters survive.

He was one of the oldest members of the German street Baptist church, and held the position of deacon. In former years he was also connected with the Brussels street Baptist church, but not for long. He was a very ardent church worker and was always ready to help in the work of charity.

All his life Mr. Lewis was a strong advocate of temperance, and was a staunch member of the Sons of Temperance and also of the Temple of Honor, having held offices in both.

As an alderman he had an upright career. He entered the common council in 1889, the year of the union, and held office until 1894. He retired then, but was re-elected in 1902, and remained at the board until 1910, when he was succeeded by Alderman J. B. Jones. He acted as deputy mayor in 1903-04, and was, up till last June, chairman of the prison squad committee. At all times he did his best to further the interests of the city and was as popular as any who ever sat at the board.

He was a man of sterling character, well liked by all who came in contact with him, and always willing to lend a helping hand to the needy. His business career was in keeping with the rest of his life. The funeral will take place on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock from his late residence 98 St. James street.

Newcastle, March 21.—Dr. F. L. Pedolin, local manager of the N. B. Telephone Co., and who was once an alderman for three successive years, has issued his card as a candidate for the mayoralty.

Richibucto, March 20.—The concert held in the Temperance hall on the evening of St. Patrick's day was a very successful affair.

Would Like to See Increased British Influence—Construction of Est

Continues.

Ottawa, March 21. The west is making itself heard and heeded on the reconstruction of the Conservative capital is beginning to see R. S. Lake's Qu'Appelle conservative member from Saskatchewan, led the retorts this afternoon. Mr. Lake's question of privilege, in the address in the reciprocity, Kenzie had declared that single individual in the west province who was opposing reconstruction proposals with the member for Qu'Appelle.

Mr. Lake challenged Liberal to say he was opposed to the reconstruction of the British provinces. Mr. Lake said that this him in a peculiar position, the prime minister's declaration that the proposed reconstruction proposals were not furthered by the government would not be a proposal of the United States. The proposed duty in agricultural implements was so small as to be of no advantage.

Mr. MacDonald—Do I understand that the policy of the opposition is to reduce the duty on agricultural products?

Mr. Lake was unable to answer being greeted by laughter and applause. "I firmly believe," the member proceeded, "that the advantages will accrue to the west from the proposed reconstruction of the tariff and the government would not be a proposal of the United States. The proposed duty in agricultural implements was so small as to be of no advantage."

R. S. Lake Defines Position

Tells Parliament of the Benefits Under Freer Trade

Would Like to See Manufactured Goods Reduced and Increased British Preference—Conservative Obstruction of Estimates Continues.

Ottawa, March 21.—The voice of the west is making itself emphatically heard and heard on the reciprocity trade arrangement.

Mr. Lake, who is a member of the Conservative party, in the House of Commons, said that the Conservative government would not even listen to the proposals of the United States towards the reduction in agricultural duties.

Mr. Lake said that the situation placed him in a peculiar position as the result of the prime minister's declaration that manufactured products were going to be further dealt with, and that the Canadian government would not even listen to the proposals of the United States towards the reduction in agricultural duties.

HAZEN GOVERNMENT PANICKY ABOUT YORK

Frantic Appeals Being Made

Their 1300 Majority at the Last Election is Fading Away Fast Under the Vigorous Campaign of the Opposition—Great Meeting Last Night in Liberal Interests.

Fredericton, March 21.—There is a wonderful change in political sentiment in York county. Three years ago Solicitor-General McLeod and his colleagues were the dominant force in the Liberal party.

Mr. King read letters from the leaders of the men and from boards of trade and municipalities congratulating the government and himself upon their successful efforts in bringing about a settlement.

The amendment was declared lost on division at 10.35 tonight and the house finally got into supply on the fisheries estimates.

Hon. MacKenzie King, in his reply, pointed out that the government had no power to compel arbitration, but had kept a standing offer before the parties. In fact, he maintained, the government had used the "s's stick" effectively, as Mr. Hays had no intention of settling the strike and wanted to fight it to the bitter end.

C. B. TRAINMEN Satisfied With NEW SCHEDULE

Sackville Hockey Rooters Fined $10 Each for Disorderly Conduct at Dorchester—Moncton Store Burglarized.

Moncton, N. B., March 22.—Abram B. Leblanc, Legere's Corner, was arrested and charged in the police court this afternoon with the Sackville trainmen with funds given him by the complainant to pay an account at E. J. Smith & Co., Shediac.

It appears the complainant and accused were partners in contract work in Shediac and the complainant alleges the accused used the amount stated for personal bills when it was intended to pay the firm's account. This was denied by the accused, and after hearing the evidence, Police Magistrate Kay dismissed the charges.

Last Friday night Sackville and Dorchester played a hockey match at the latter place, and after the game some Sackville rooters made "rough houses" at Dorchester I. C. R. station. The result was six hockey fouls, including one member of the Sackville team who was arrested by I. C. R. Officer Jones and taken before Magistrate W. H. Chapman, Dorchester, on the charge, and were each fined $10.

A. M. Belliveau, who keeps a store on Union street, reported to the police today that his place had been burglarized some time Tuesday night, and a few dollars in change and articles in the form of tobacco, etc., stolen. The police believe it is the work of the same party.

The committee of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen concluded their conference today with F. P. Brady in reference to some minor details of the schedule. The men report tonight that the increase of pay arranged at the meeting with Deputy Minister Campbell last week, and other details, were today settled to their satisfaction. The delegates will return to their homes tonight and tomorrow.

Thursday, March 23. Nearly every newspaper of the province was constantly referring to the arrangements of the present administration. The provincial government has its revenues through a few different sources, the most important being the federal government, which is a fixed amount, and it will probably be a great many years before it will be increased.

Mr. Carvell, in dealing with the school book policy, said that taking into consideration the cost of operating the school, the province was indirectly cost the people of the county more.

In regard to money spent on bridges, he drew attention to the fact that in 1907 the old government was defeated, and it was chiefly through the efforts of the Hon. Mr. Pugh that the province was able to obtain a $130,000 subsidy. This the Hon. Mr. Carvell said was a great deal of money.

The charge against the old government was going to be a large one, and there is not any public work anywhere to show for it.

son, of Marysville, now in the 91st year of his age, the founder and builder of the town wherein he lives, and the commercial genius that started the wheels of industry in that thriving place, has been elected to give the railway that has been secured and is operated by the Intercolonial Railway, signed a political nomination paper for the Liberal candidate, Mr. Alexander Gibson, for the riding of York county.

Mr. Gibson, who is hale and hearty, and steady, "to sign Mr. Burden's nomination paper, I will go and vote for him and wish him every success."

Friends of Mr. Gibson will be glad to learn that he is enjoying good health. He is as straight as an arrow, his eye as keen and his hand-clasp as firm as a man in his prime.

One could not but be impressed with the vigor of this pioneer of industry who has set an example of courage and enterprise such as New Brunswick has never, and Canada seldom, seen.

When asked as to his health, he smiled as he stretched his arms quickly to their full length above his head, and said, "I am well," he said, "but I don't exercise enough, still," "it would take quite a man to equal me."

Then he spoke enthusiastically of the reciprocity proposition and said he hoped to see it put through. Why, he asked, should there be any objection to the interchange of products between Canada and the United States?

English politics, business, social affairs and local politics all seemed to interest him. He spoke of the reciprocity proposition and said he hoped to see it put through. Why, he asked, should there be any objection to the interchange of products between Canada and the United States?

CLAIMS TO BE PAID IN FULL

Thursday, March 23. Nearly every newspaper of the province was constantly referring to the arrangements of the present administration.

The provincial government has its revenues through a few different sources, the most important being the federal government, which is a fixed amount, and it will probably be a great many years before it will be increased.

Mr. Carvell, in dealing with the school book policy, said that taking into consideration the cost of operating the school, the province was indirectly cost the people of the county more.

In regard to money spent on bridges, he drew attention to the fact that in 1907 the old government was defeated, and it was chiefly through the efforts of the Hon. Mr. Pugh that the province was able to obtain a $130,000 subsidy. This the Hon. Mr. Carvell said was a great deal of money.

The charge against the old government was going to be a large one, and there is not any public work anywhere to show for it.

On the other hand, chafing dish suppers in the big living room for their camping guests were a common happening, at which times Daylight allotted them their chores and saw that they were performed. For one who stopped only for the night it was different. Likewise it was different with her brother, back from Germany and again able to sit a horse. On his vacations he became the third in the family, and to him were given the building of the fires, the sweeping and the washing of the dishes.

Daylight devoted himself to the lightening of Dede's labors, and it was her brother who incited him to utilize the splendid water power of the ranch that was running to waste. It required Daylight's brooking of extra horses to pay for the materials, and the brother devoted a three weeks' vacation to assist him, and together they installed a Pelton wheel. Besides sawing wood and turning his lathe and grindstone, Daylight connected the power with the churn, but his great triumph was when he put his arm around Dede's waist and led her out to inspect a washing machine, run by the Pelton wheel, which really worked and really washed clothes.

Dede and Ferguson between them, after a patient struggle, taught Daylight poetry, so that in the end he might have been often seen sitting slack in the saddle and dropping down the mountain trails through the sun flecked woods chanting aloud Kipling's "Tomlinson," or when sharpening his axe, singing into the whirling grindstone Henley's "Song of the Sword." Not that he ever became consummately literary in the way his two teachers were. Beyond "Fra Lippo Lippi" and "Caliban and Setebos" he found nothing in Browning, while George Meredith was ever his despair. It was of his own initiative, however, that he invested in a violin and practised so assiduously that in time he and Dede beguiled many a happy hour playing together after night had fallen.

So all went well with this well-mated pair. Time never dragged. There were always new wonderful mornings and still cool twilights at the end of day; and ever a thousand interests claimed him, and his interests were shared by her. More thoroughly than he knew had he come to a comprehension of the relativity of things. In this new game he played he found in little things all the intensities of gratification and desire that he had found in the frenzied big things when he was a power and rocked half a continent with the fury of the blows he struck. With head and hand, at risk of life and limb, to hit and break a wild colt and win it to the service of man was to him no less great an achievement. And this new game on which he played the game was clean. Neither lying nor cheating nor hypocrisy was here. The other game had made for decay and death, while this new one made for clean strength and life. And so he was content, with Dede at his side, to watch the procession of the days and seasons from the farmhouse perched on the canyon lip; to ride through crisp, frosty mornings or under burning summer suns, and to shelter in the big room where blazed the logs in the fireplace he had built, while outside the world thundered and struggled in the storm clasp of a southeaster.

Once only Dede asked him if he ever regretted, and his answer was to crush her in his arms and smother her lips with his. His answer a minute later took speech.

"Little woman, even if you did cost thirty millions, you are the cheapest necessity of life I ever indulged in." And then he added: "Yes, I do have one regret, and a monstrous big one, too. I'd sure like to have the winning of you all over again. I'd like to go sneaking around the Piedmont hills looking for you. I'd like to meander into those rooms of yours at Berkeley for the first time. And, there's no use talking. I'm plumb soaking with regret that I can't put my arms around you again that time you leaned your head on my breast and cried in the wind and rain."

CHAPTER XL.

But there came the day, one year, in early April, when Dede sat in an easy chair on the porch, sewing on certain small garments, while Daylight read aloud to her. It was on a world of new green. Along the irrigation channels of the vegetable garden streams of water were flowing, and now and again Daylight broke off from his reading to run out and change the flow of water. Also he was teasingly interested in the certain small garments which Dede worked, while she was radiantly happy over them, though at times, when his tender fun was too insistent, she was rosy confused or affectionately resentful.

From where they sat they could look out over this world. Like the curve of a scimeter blade the Valley of the Moon stretched before them, dotted with farmhouses and varied by pasture lands, bay fields and vineyards. Beyond rose the wall of the valley, every crease and wrinkle of which Dede and Daylight knew, and at one place, where the sun struck squarely, the white dump of the abandoned mine burned like a jewel. In the foreground, in the paddock by the barn, was Mab, full of pretty anxieties for the early spring foal that staggered about her on tottery legs. The air shimmered with heat, and altogether it was a lazy, baking day. Quail whistled to their young from the thicketed hillside behind the house. There was a gentle cooling of pigeons and from the green depths of the big canyon arose the sobbing woe note of a mourning dove. Once there was a warning chorus from the foraging hens and a wild rush for cover as a hawk, high in the blue, cast its drifting shadow along the ground.

It was this, perhaps, that aroused old hunting memories in Wolf. At any rate Dede and Daylight became aware of excitement in the paddock, and saw harnesses re-enacted a grim old tragedy of the Younger World. Curiously eager, velvet footed and silent as a ghost, sliding and gliding and crouching, the dog that was a mere domesticated wolf stalked the enticing bit of young life that Mab had brought so recently into the world. And the mare, her own ancient instincts aroused and quivering, circled ever between the foal and this menace of the wild young days when all her ancestry had known fear of him and his hunting brethren. Once she whistled and tried to kick him, but usually she strove to strike him with her forehoofs, or rushed upon him with open mouth and ears laid back in an effort to crunch his backbone between her teeth. And the wolf-dog, with ears flattened down and crouching, would slide sulkily away, only to circle up to the foal from the other side and give chase to the mare for new alarm. Then Daylight, urged on by Dede's solicitude, uttered a low, threatening cry, and Wolf, drooping and sagging in all the body of him in token of his instant return to man's allegiance, slunk off behind the barn.

It was a few minutes later that Daylight, breaking off from his reading to change the streams of irrigation, found that the water had ceased flowing. He shouldered a pick and shovel, took a hammer and a pipe wrench from the tool house, and returned to Dede on the porch.

"I reckon I'll have to go down and dig the pipe out," he told her. "It's that slide that's threatened all winter. I guess she's come down at last."

"Don't you read ahead, now," he warned as he passed around the house and took the trail that led down the wall of the cañon.

Half way down the trail he came upon the slide. It was a small affair, only a few tons of earth and crumbling rock, but starting from fifty feet above, it had struck the water pipe with force sufficient to break it at a connection. Before proceeding to work he glanced up the path of the slide, and he glanced with the eye of the earth trained miner. And he saw what made his eyes startle and cease for the moment from questing further.

"Hello," he commended aloud, "look who's here!" His glance moved on up the steep broken surface and across it from side to side. Here and there in places small twisted manzanitas were rooted precariously, but in the main, save for weeds and grass, that portion of the cañon was bare. There were signs of a surface that had shifted often as the rains poured a bow of rich eroded soil from above over the lip of the cañon.

"A true assure vein, or I never saw one," he proclaimed softly.

And as the old hunting instincts had aroused that day in the wolf-dog, so in him recurred all the old hot desires of gold hunting. Dropping the hammer and pipe wrench, but retaining pick and shovel, he climbed up the slide to where a vague line of out-cropping, but mostly soil covered, rock could be seen. It was all but indiscernible, but his quick practiced eye had sketched the hidden formation which it signified. Here and there along this wall of the vein he attacked the crumbling rock with the pick and shoveled the encumbering soil away. Several times he examined this rock. So soft was some of it that he could break it in his fingers. Shifting a dozen feet higher up, he again attacked with pick and shovel. And this time, when he rubbed the soil from a chunk of rock and looked he straightened up suddenly, gasping with delight. And then, like a deer at a drinking pool in fear of its enemies, he flung a quick glance around to see if any eye were gazing upon him. He gripped at his own foolishness and returned to his examination of the chunk. A slant of sunlight fell on it and it was all aglitter with tiny specks of unmistakable free gold.

"From the grass roots down," he muttered in an awe-stricken voice, as he swung his pick into the yielding surface.

He seemed to undergo a transformation. No quart of cocktails had ever put such a flame in his cheeks or such a fire in his eyes. As he worked he was caught up in the old passion that had ruled most of his life. A frenzy seized him that markedly increased from moment to moment. He worked like a madman til he panted from his exertions and the sweat dripped from his face to the ground. He questioned across the face of the slide to the opposite wall of the vein and back again. "And, midway, he dug down through the red volcanic earth that had washed from the disintegrating hill above until he uncovered quartz, rotten quartz, that broke and crumbled in his hands and showed to be alive with free gold.

Sometimes he started small slides of earth that covered up his work and compelled him to dig again. Once he was swept fifty feet down the canyon side, but he floundered and scrambled up again without pausing for breath. He hit upon quartz that was so rotten that it was almost like clay, and here the gold was richer than ever. It was a veritable treasure chamber. For a hundred feet up and down he traced the walls of the vein. He even climbed over the canyon lip to look along the brow of the hill for signs of the outcrop. But that could wait, and he hurried back to his find.

He toiled on in the same mad haste, until exhaustion and an intolerable ache in his back compelled him to pause. He straightened up with even a richer piece of gold laden quartz. Stooping, the sweat from his forehead had fallen to the ground. It now ran into his eyes, blinding him. He wiped it from him with the back of his hand and returned to a scrutiny of the gold. It would run thirty thousand to the ton, fifty thousand, anything—he knew that. And as he gazed upon the yellow lure and panted for air, and wiped the sweat away, his quick vision leaped and set to work. He saw the spur track that must run up from the valley and across the upland pastures, and he ran the grades and built the bridge that would span the canyon, until it was real before his eyes. Across the canyon was the place for the mill, and there he erected it, and he erected also the endless chain of buckets, suspended from a cable and operated by gravity, that would carry the ore across the canyon to the quartz crusher. Likewise, the whole mine grew before him and beneath him—tunnels, shafts and galleries and hoisting plants. The blasts of the miners were in his ears and from across the canyon he could hear the roar of the stamps. The hand that held the lump of quartz was trembling and there was a tired, nervous palpitation apparently in the pit of his stomach. It came to him abruptly that what he wanted was a drink—whiskey, cocktails, anything, a drink. And even then, with this new hot yearning for alcohol upon him, he heard, faint and far, drifting down the green abyss of the canyon, Dede's voice, crying—

"Here, chick, chick, chick, chick, chick! Here, chick, chick, chick!"

He was astounded at the lapse of time. She had left her sewing on the porch and was feeding the chickens preparatory to getting supper. The afternoon was gone. He could not conceive that he had been away that long.

Again came the call—"Here, chick, chick, chick, chick, chick! Here, chick, chick, chick!"

It was the way she always called—first five and then three. He had long since noticed it. And from these thoughts of her arose other thoughts that caused a great fear slowly to grow in his face. For it seemed to him that he had almost lost her. Not once had he thought of her in those frenzied hours, and for that much, at least, had she truly been lost to him.

He dropped the piece of quartz, slid down the slide, and started up the trail, running heavily. At the edge of the clearing he eased down and almost crept to a point of vantage, whence he could peer out, himself unseen. She was feeding the chickens, tossing to them handfuls of grain and laughing at their antics.

The sight of her seemed to relieve the panic fear into which he had been flung, and he turned and ran back down the trail. Again he climbed the slide, but this time he climbed higher, carrying the pick and shovel with him. And again he toiled frenziedly, but this time with a different purpose. He worked artfully, losing slide after slide of the red earth and sending it streaming down and covered up all he had uncovered, hiding from the light of day the treasure he had discovered. He even went into the woods and scooped armfuls of last year's fallen leaves, which he scattered over the slide. But this he gave up as a vain task, and he sent more whiffs of soil down upon the scene of his labor until no sign remained of the outcropping walls of the vein.

Next he repaired the broken pipe, gathered his tools together and started up the trail. He walked slowly, feeling a great weariness, as of a man who had passed through a frightful crisis. He put the tools away, took a great drink of water that again flowed through the pipes, and sat down on the bench by the open kitchen door. Dede was inside, preparing supper, and the sound of her footsteps gave him a vast content.

He breathed the balmy mountain air in great gulps, like a diver fresh risen from the sea. And, as he drank in the air, he gazed with all his eyes at the clouds and sky and valley, as if he were drinking in that, too, along with the air.

Dede did not know he had come back, and at times he turned his head and stole glances in at her—at her efficient hands, at the bronze of her brown hair that smoldered with fire when she crossed the path of sunshine that streamed through the window, at the promise of her figure that shot through him a pang most strangely sweet and sweetly dear. He heard her approaching the door, and kept his head resolutely toward the valley. And next, he thrilled, as he had always thrilled, when he felt the caressing gentleness of her fingers through his hair.

"I didn't know you were back," she said. "Was it serious?"

"Pretty bad, that slide," he answered, still gazing away and thrilling to her touch. "More serious than I reckoned. But I've got the plan. Do you know what I'm going to do? I'm going to plant eucalyptus all over it. They'll hold it out. I'll plant them thick as grass, so that even a hungry rabbit can't squeeze between them, and when they get their roots a-going nothing in creation will ever move that dirt again."

"Why, is it as bad as that?"

He shook his head. "Nothing exciting. But I'd sure like to see any blamed old slide get the best of me, that's all. I'm going to seal that slide down so that it'll stay there for a million years. And when the last trump sounds and Sonoma Mountain and all the other mountains pass into nothingness that old slide will be still a-standing there, held up by the roots."

He passed his arm around her and pulled her down on his knees.

"Say, little woman, you sure miss a lot by living here on the ranch—music and theatres, and such things. Don't you ever have a hankering to drop it all and go back?"

So great was his anxiety that he dared not look at her, and when she laughed and shook her head he was aware of a great relief. Also, he noted the undiminished youth that rang through that same old-time boyish laugh of hers.

"Say," he said, with sudden fierceness, "don't you go fooling around that slide until after I get the trees in and rooted. It's mighty dangerous and I sure can't afford to lose you now."

He drew her lips to his and kissed her hungrily and passionately.

"What a lover!" she said, and pride in him and in her own womanhood was in her voice.

"Look at that, Dede." He removed one encircling arm and swept it in a wide gesture over the valley and the mountains beyond. "The Valley of the Moon—a good name, a good name. Do you know, when I look out over it all, and think of you and of all it means, it kind of makes me ache in the throat, and I have things in my heart I can't find the words to say, and I have a feeling that I can almost understand Browning and those other high flying poet fellows. Look at Hood Mountain there, just where the sun's striking. It was down in that crease that we found the spring."

"And that was the night you didn't milk the cows till ten o'clock," she laughed. "And if you keep me here much longer, supper won't be any earlier than it was that night."

Both arose from the bench, and Daylight caught the milk pail from the wall by the door. He paused a moment longer to look out over the valley.

"It's sure grand," she echoed, laughing joyously at him, and with him and herself and all the world as she passed in through the door.

And Daylight, like the old man he once had been, himself went down the hill through the trees of sunset with a milk pail on his arm.

she said, and pride in him and in her. "It's removed one encircling in a wide gesture over the valley beyond." "The Valley of the Moon road name. Do you know, when I think of you and of all it makes me ache in the throat, and I heart I can't find the words to say, that I can almost understand me other high dying poet fellows, sustain there, just where the sun's down in that crease that we found."

he might you didn't milk the cows he laughed. "And if you keep me supper won't be any earlier than the bench, and Daylight caught up the mill by the door. He paused a moment over the valley." "He said, she echoed, laughing joyously at and inhaled and all the world, as high the door. "He said, she echoed, laughing joyously at and inhaled and all the world, as high the door."

BAD MANAGEMENT OF CENTRAL RAILWAY

Mr. Byrne Exposes the Extravagance

Revenue Increased But Deficit Grew Larger

Debate on the Address Listened to by a Slim House—Hon. Mr. Maxwell Stronger on Abuse Than on Arithmetic.

Fredericton, March 21.—The business of the legislature is much disorganized by the campaign in York. Many members of the government and house are absent during the sessions and the committees are poorly attended. The public accounts committee held no meeting today. Mr. Pinder, chairman, and Mr. Woods both being absent. The budget debate was resumed tonight, and when Mr. Byrne, of Gloucester, who had made a long and admirable address, sat down, no government member rose to follow, and Mr. Wilson, who was in the Speaker's chair, began to put the motion. C. M. Legge rose on his left trying to gain the attention of the chair, when the motion was put and even carried. Then Mr. Wilson saw what had been done and told Mr. Legge to go ahead, which the member for Westmorland did, and the debate continued.

Maxwell's Attack on Bentley

Hon. Mr. Maxwell's attack upon Mr. Bentley in his speech last night created much talk in the galleries today. Mr. Bentley is a man who is considered by all as a Christian gentleman, who has won universal respect since he was elected to the legislature by his modest, unassuming manner, his desire to acquaint himself with public business, and his unflinching and unvarying courage. Mr. Maxwell's attack, therefore, as a surprise to all. He pictured him in dramatic fashion as holding his hands in the attitude of prayer and thanking God that he was not as other men were. His other references were in such bad taste as to cause much resentment on the part of the members of the house. At the same time there is quite a laugh at Maxwell's arithmetic. Mr. Bentley's argument, that while the present government had twenty-nine per cent. greater revenue they only increased the agricultural grant fourteen per cent. and educational twenty per cent. was answered, Mr. Maxwell considered, by adding twenty and fourteen together and this making it appear that the government had given a thirty-four per cent. increase out of revenue that had only increased twenty-nine per cent.

Notices of Inquiry

Fredericton, N.B., March 21.—The house met at 3 o'clock. Hon. Mr. Grimmer, in the absence of Hon. Mr. Morrisey, in answer to Mr. Tweeddale's enquiry, gave the amounts paid for work on the roads between Grand Falls and Plaster Rock. Mr. Copp gave notice of enquiry respecting unpaid stampage. Mr. Leger (Westmorland) gave notice of enquiry regarding expenditure in the parish of Dorchester and Westmorland county. Hon. Mr. Hart presented a petition from the town of St. Andrews in favor of a bill relating to the alms house farm at St. Andrews. Hon. Mr. Hazen introduced a bill to amend the act respecting the local courts. Mr. Robinson gave notice of enquiry re-

Mr. Byrne, on rising to resume the debate on the budget, said that he wished to make himself clearly understood as to some statements he had made regarding the Central Railway. The president of the central had stated, when in opposition, that if the (Maxwell) and his friends were given control of the Central Railway they would run the road at half of what it was then paying. But the figures did not bear out his statements, as the figures which were sworn to and made for the railway department of Canada and declared by the royal commission to be correct showed that from June 30, 1908 to March 31, 1909, the receipts of the road were $125,490 and expenditures $123,287, while from April 1, 1909, to June 30, 1910, the receipts amounted to $148,265 and the expenditures $169,211, making a deficit of slightly over $20,000 in the latter period.

In the estimates for 1911 he noted that there was an amount of $47,000 estimated receipts from taxes on incorporated companies, and it seemed to him that this was rather a large estimate, as in 1909 the receipts from this source amounted to $34,148, and in 1910 $36,948. The provincial secretary made no explanation as to the reason for this large increase, but he saw an explanation in the bill lately presented to the house calling for increased taxation on certain incorporated companies. Although he was willing to admit that there had been an increase in the revenue of the province, the credit was not due to this government. The increase of $19,000 in the dominion subsidies was due to Hon. Mr. Pugsley, whom the provincial secretary and his friends were all so willing to assail, but to whom the people of this province were indebted, and should feel grateful.

When this government came into power, the province was indebted, and should feel grateful. When this government came into power, the province was indebted, and should feel grateful. When this government came into power, the province was indebted, and should feel grateful.

CURED OF CONSTIPATION

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes: "For many years I have been troubled with chronic constipation. This ailment never comes single-headed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in vain to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet all I read about was the Indian Root Pills. That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial. They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments that result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box.

WHICH WAY ARE YOU PAYING FOR AN I H C GASOLINE ENGINE?

THERE are two ways—a quick, easy way and a long, costly way. The first way is to go to the I H C local dealer, pick out the style and size suited to your needs—pay for it—take it home and set it to work. It will operate your cream separator, feed grinder, thrasher, fanning mill, turn your grindstone, saw wood, etc. The other way is to get along as best you can without it, and pay for it over and over again in the time and money you lose by not having it. "Procrastination is the thief of time," and time is money. An I H C Engine saves time—saves money. It's an investment that pays big dividends, day after day, year in and year out, through its capacity for doing work at less cost than any other power.

I H C Gasoline Engines

are made in all styles and sizes, 1 to 45 H. P., vertical and horizontal—stationary, portable, fan and tractor. Their efficiency, economy, and dependability have been proved by years of service. Thousands of owners consider an I H C Gasoline Engine one of the best paying investments they ever made. If you want to know more about what an I H C Gasoline Engine will do for you, and why it is that I H C construction insures more power on less gasoline consumption than any other engine, you should call at once on the I H C local dealer, or write for a copy of the I H C Gasoline Engine catalogue. While you're delaying you are paying, so why not have what you're paying for.

SCALP TORN FROM CHILD'S HEAD IN SHOCKING ACCIDENT

Four-year-old Ruby Morehouse now lies in hospital at Point of Death—Little Hope for Her Recovery—Mother heard her screams first.

Ruby, the four-year old daughter of Mrs. J. B. Morehouse, who lives at 106 Queen street, was the victim of a shocking accident which took place in the morning.

Speaking to The Telegraph last evening Mr. Cohen said the accident could not very well have been averted.

At the hospital everything is being done to save her. Last evening she underwent a delicate operation in which the scalp was replaced. It is not known as yet, however, whether she will recover.

MARRIED NEARLY TWO YEARS; FIRST ANNOUNCEMENT IS MADE

For many years the young man and woman, Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Pearson, formerly of Kings county, announced their marriage to the public for the first time today through the columns of The Telegraph.

TORY OBSTRUCTION

The western Conservatives who are taking part in obstruction are doing very serious injustice to their constituents. Were a general election to be held before the results of the census in June are known, and the redistribution bill following upon the census adopted, the people of the West would be represented in the House of Commons by far fewer members than they ought to have.

KENT COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT

Only Two Criminal Cases—Man, Convicted of Assault on Officer, Gets One Month in Jail.

Richibucto, N. B., March 21.—(Special.) A semi-annual session of the Supreme Court opened this morning, Judge McKewen presiding.

The following were the grand jurors: Thomas J. LeBlanc, Arthur T. Hatcher, Alexander J. Girvan, Hugh M. Ferguson, Arthur E. O'Leary, J. Fred MacDonnell, Fred Ferguson, Edward Melaney, Adolphe T. LeBlanc, Zach Legere, John D. McEmin, Auguste Legere, Malcolm McKinnon, David I. Mundle, Odier J. Black, Placide Robitaille, Joseph J. Fidele Vautour, Clifford Atkinson, Melem Daigle, Fred Davis, Pierre Labin.

The following were the petit jurors: John Morton, Michael Hebert, Murray Murray, Joseph Bell, Maurice Bell, Dominique Babineau, Adolphe Barbeau, Joseph Gallant, Albert Dvart, Joseph J. Miller, Hippolite T. Dugite, Charles Barron, Selkirk Murray, Sylvain Barbeau, Marcel Poirrier, Bonaventure Goguen, Philbert Dupuis, William Warman, Albert Goguen.

H. M. Ferguson was elected foreman of the grand jury. There was two cases on the docket. The King on the complaint of Queuxie R. Cormier vs. Honore Cormier.

A charge of the theft of sheep. The plaintiff being a shepherd, he alleged that he had lost in destitute circumstances. She had gotten the defendant to sell her four sheep, about the ownership of which there had been a dispute between the plaintiff and his wife.

The second case was the King on the complaint of Cyril B. Legere vs. Dennis V. LeBlanc, a charge concerning an officer in the discharge of his duty and common assault. H. H. James, prosecutor for the crown; F. J. Robidoux appeared for the defence. In this case the grand jury found that the defendant was guilty of the offence.

The proposed legislation was undoubtedly meant for the betterment of conditions in Canada. It would be nothing short of political suicide for a politician to advance the theory that annexation was aimed at.

The time has come, however, when we must take steps to develop our unlimited resources. You hear the argument advanced that our lumber supply is getting exhausted. Suppose it is, what are our lumbermen doing at present?

Under the proposed arrangements, it will be encouraged in putting a finish on those deals, and our people will have the benefit of the labor involved.

MR. POWELL ASKS FOR APPOINTMENT OF EXPERT

To Get Information He Has Been Unable to Reach—Inquiry Into Complaint Against Excessive Rates of New Brunswick Telephone Company Resumed Yesterday—Accountant on Stand—Adjourned Until Today.

Thursday, March 23. The much delayed inquiry into the complaint against the New Brunswick Telephone Company regarding excessive rates was resumed before the public utilities commission yesterday in the admiralty court chambers.

Mr. Powell was proceeding to ask the witness about cash dividends paid over the years when Mr. Teed objected to going into transactions, so many years ago.

Mr. Powell returned that he would show before he left through that the figures did have an important bearing on the case.

A statement of the cash dividends, percentages and total amounts was then submitted by the witness. The statement covered a period from 1889 to October 31, 1906, and showed dividends varying from 4 to 8 per cent, per half year. The witness also presented, this afternoon, a statement showing the total amount received. He also asked to prepare a statement of the depreciation account.

Mr. Barnhill interrupted the examination to ask Mr. Powell for some time ago, and Mr. Powell said the statement covered only three years and was not as complete as he wanted.

Asks for Books. Mr. Powell said he would first call attention to the schedule of rates affixed to the company's charter granting an increase in rates.

Mr. Barnhill said that while the company was ready to produce all accounts and books, they wished it understood that they did not have any right to see them, they might have under the acts previous to the public utilities act.

The chairman accepted the statement. Mr. Fraser quoted from an amendment to the company's charter granting an increase in capital stock from $800,000 to $2,000,000 and contended that his clients should not be compelled to submit to a search of their books for the purpose of ascertaining the total amount carried into the rest or contingent account since the incorporation of the company. Commencing with May 12, 1892, the account of entries made each year to 1906 were examined and the total amount entered was $190,857.19.

A similar examination into accounts carried out of the rest account was made and the total was found to be $199,787.23, leaving a balance of $99.96 in favor of amounts carried into the rest or contingent account. In the course of the examination considerable difficulty was met with in locating an apparent shortage of $22,400 in the contingent account. It was pointed out by Mr. Fraser that this amount was entered into the plant account and later transferred to the contingent account.

Mr. Powell read from the minutes of a meeting of the board of directors held on May 12, 1892, in which it was resolved to do away with the system of writing off depreciation.

Dividends. Witness next submitted a statement of cash or stock dividends issued annually, commencing with the year 1883. They are as follows: 1893, $4,728; 1894, $5,148; 1895, $5,468; 1896, $5,788; 1897, $6,108; 1898, $6,428; 1899, $6,748; 1900, $7,068; 1901, $7,388; 1902, $7,708; 1903, $8,028; 1904, $8,348; 1905, $8,668; 1906, $8,988.

Continuing Mr. Powell questioned the witness about subsequent issues of stock of varying amounts from 1889 through the years following.

They were as follows:— May, 31, 1889, 5,000; June, 30, 1889, 5,000; July, 31, 1889, 5,000; Aug. 31, 1889, 5,000; Sept. 30, 1889, 5,000; Oct. 31, 1889, 5,000; Nov. 30, 1889, 5,000; Dec. 31, 1889, 5,000; The chairman accepted the statement. Mr. Fraser quoted from an amendment to the company's charter granting an increase in capital stock from $800,000 to $2,000,000 and contended that his clients should not be compelled to submit to a search of their books for the purpose of ascertaining the total amount carried into the rest or contingent account since the incorporation of the company. Commencing with May 12, 1892, the account of entries made each year to 1906 were examined and the total amount entered was $190,857.19.

A similar examination into accounts carried out of the rest account was made and the total was found to be $199,787.23, leaving
