Fee Method of Remuneration Looked Upon as Inequitable and Unsatisfactory.

Toronto, Oct. 10 .- The Globe this norning says: The Globe understands that Sir James Whitney has under consideration important recommendaions to the Provincial Government, having in view certain improvements in the system under which the civil service is regulated and remunerated. No official announcement has yet been nade as to the Premier's plans, but does not seem improbable that nanges, incorporating his views, will made in the civil servce act when Fee System May Go. The general abolition of the fee sysem of remuneration will, however likely involve the attention of the Government. The Premier himself is understood to look with distinct disfavor of this mode of recompensing officials, both as inequitable and unsatisfactory, and there are well-informed predictions that it will have

In this connection, an important step may be predicted. The general conception is that the abolition of the ee system would involve the payment of the present fees into the respective treasuries of the province and municipalities. It is probable that when the matter is dealt with Sir posal to submit. In the case of materially reduced. Nearly all the fish caught near the coast of Pari contained the specific vibrion of Asiatic cholera, and Prof. Gosio's studies are now directed to learn whether such microbes Windsor and Walkerville Foresters are apt to multiply inside of fishes. He is also trying to discover whether migratory fishes caught far out at sea contain cholera microbes, and a torpedo boat has been placed at his disposal in order that he may continue his researches. If his theory is confirmed it will be necessary to have all fish caught in times of epidemics boiled before they are sold, as the mere handling of fish containing cholera microbes would be sufficient to communicate the disease.

AN ELOQUENT APPEAL FOR CHRISTIAN UNITY

Archdeacon Madden, of Liverpool in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Sunday morning in St. Paul's Cathedral, Archdeacon T. J. Madden, of Liverpool, England, delivered an eloquent appeal for Christian unity. The text of his sermon was the third verse of the fourth chapter of Ephesians, "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."
"Christian unity." declared the archdeacon, "is probably the most popular religious topic in England today.' The English movement for the reunion of the divided sects of Christianity may be said to have had its beginning in the meeting of the Pan-Anglican Congress three years ago, At the Lambeth Coference, which followed, Dean Robinson, of Westminster, spoke in favor of the movement, and further developments took place. Since then all over England, churchmen and non-conformists have met together to discuss the points which they agree or disagree, and negotiations have also been made with the Lutheran church in Germany and the Presbyterian movement in Australia. But unity is not to be arrived at today or tomorrow. Three things are first required, namely, penitence (for the intolerance and errors of the past), and patience and prayer. God in his own time will bring about the consummation of unity in the churches and in the hearts and lives of men. The Evangelical Alliance aims the alliance of Christian peoples, the federation of Christian churches, and ultimately their reunion into one great Let Catholic church.

The alliance is also one of Christian faith and evangelical truth. "The Let deity of Christ is today being attacked by the followers of the new theology and other bizarre beliefs," said Archdeacon Madden. "If we eliminate the Godhead in Christ we have a body without a soul. Christ was very God and very man, and we believe in the Set atonement which he made for our sins. We stand for one common belief, one orthodox faith to social conditions, the archdeacon declared that "Change of Let heart and change of life are the bedof all social improvement. Mere philanthropy only touches the body. For permanent change and real good we must reach the soul first." "Christendom has long been divided because men will remember Cromwell and the death of Charles I., the martyrdom of Laud and the imprisonment of John Bunyan. But the controversies of the past are dead, and soon a united church shall go forward to con-

Toronto, Oct. 10.-To appear for many years in Anglican hymn books, including Hymns, Ancient and Modern, and the new Canadian Hymn Book, with the word "anonymous" beneath it because the authorship was unknown, to become endeared to the hearts of scores of thousands thought the name of the man or woman who wrote it would never be known and to prove so popular that several composers have set it to music as a sacred song, only to have its real authorship disclosed through a letter from a convict in Kingston Penitentiary, may develop to be the fate of the beautiful hymn, "Just for Today." The Archbishop of Ottawa received a letter a few days ago which was of such a character and made such claims that the matter will be investigated by the committee which compiled the new Anglican hymn book.

The man who seeks step into the breach heretofore bridged by the word "anonymous" is Wil-Huckle, formerly of London, England, later of Hamilton, Ontario and now in the penitentiary at Kings-

Huckle urges as his reason for writing that if the composition is worthy of a place in the sacred book the authorship should be acknowledged when that authorship is or can be known. But the convict does not end with a mere claim to the fathering of the stanzas, for he knew that scant attention would be paid to unsubstantiated claims. He has supplied dates on which editions of the hymn were printed, the cities they were printed in and discloses the name of one who is said to possess copies of

A Seven-Year Sentence. The sentence William Huckle is erving is one of seven years, more than two of which he has already put in. He was arrested and tried at Hamilton under the charge of obtaining money under false pretences. With him there was a man named Tierney convicted of the same offence. Tierney got a lighter sentence. Huckle had been proved guilty of posing as a private detective, in which guise he threatened to disclose information he possessed if the parties in-volved did not hand over various sums of money to induce him to maintain silence. The sums were usually of generous proportions. At the time he was tried to appeared to be about 40 or 50 years of age, according to people who were present. CONAN DOYLE QUITS WRITING OF PLAYS

Decides That Author Producer Job Is Too Much.

London, Oct. 8.-Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has decided to give up playwright-"I have no intention of ever again writing for the stage," said Sir Arthur, as he was leaving for his country place "Don't think I am leaving stage work because it does not interest me. It interests me too much. It is so absorbing that it draws one's mind away from the deeper to lay the following facts before you, to lay the following facts before you, feeling assured they will receive the dramatically it is different, but I recogconsideration due them at your nize my own limitations in that respect, and so I made an absolute vow that I terrible catastrophe "Lately I have been very busy with stage work," continued Sir Arthur. "You see, I have produced three plays in a little more than a year. That means giving the theatre pretty close attention. All three I produced entirely myself, and at my own expense, simply because I could not find a manager who would accept them or undertake the cost of producing them on his own account.

"King Edward's death eventually knocked the life out of my play, 'The House of That made an awkward Temperly.' situation, for I had signed a contract to take the Adelphi Theatre until the end to replace 'Temperly,' I was compelled commenced it. By the way, what I would will be to take 'The House of Temperly' and its prize fight to Paris. I think they might like to see it there.'

SEND LIVERIES ABROAD

What Becomes of the Gorgeous Raiment of London's Lord Mayors.

London that their brief period of glory and $9 a week. is nearly over and that a new set of civic dignitaries will soon take their places. But what about the gorgeous liveries of the servants of these functionaries, compelled to retire into the semi-obscurity of private life? Bowdlerized versions of them duty on the stage sometimes, but it is usually found more profitable by the servants, whose perquisites the liveries become, to send them abroad. An exsheriff is said to have recognized one of his old liveries behind him in a New York mansion. Many go to Africa and end their existence lending lustre to the courts of savage kings.

People generally believe that the civic liveries are of a traditional cut and color and that they are as un-changeable as Gog and Magog and turtle soup, but this is not the professional view. The general style of the coat and breeches may be Queen Anne. the high cocked hat may be Regency.

CURE FOR DISEASE

Suspended By Neck at End of Rope.

London, Oct. 10.-Hanging from the neck by a rope has become a recognized form of treatment for certain nervous diseases at the National Hospital for the paralyzed and epileptic in Bloomsbury. In wryneck, in particular, this hanging is said to have given results, certain cases totally unrelieved by other more conservative methods of treatment responding well to this strenuous cure. The apparatus used consists of a metal ripod eight feet in height, with a pulley at the top. Over this pullex is passed a rope attached to two large metal stirrups, well padded with leather, one of which fits beneath the patient's chin and the other beneath the protruding part of the head. The principle of the treatment is that the weight of the patient's body is used to stretch the contracted neck and muscles, which cause the head to be

"We begin the treatment," said one of the hospital staff in explaining it, "by gently pulling the free end of the rope until the patient is raised on his toes. After being kept in this position for a few seconds he is given a few moments' young victim, who succumbed to his

est. The second time he is raised a little higher, so that more strain falls on the neck's muscles. The process is continued every morning for a fortnight, the dose being gradually increased until toward the end of the treatment the patient can stand being suspended clear of the ground for twenty or thirty seconds.

'Immediately after each morning's treatment the patient is at once put back to bed, where he stays until the next morning's treatment. While this hanging cure has given good results in certain cases, it must not be understood that we treat all wrynecks in this way."

LONDON, MONDAY, OCT. 10.

THE CHOLERA MENACE. Once more the dreadful plague of cholera menaces America. Two welldeveloped cases have been discovered at New York on a liner from Naples, necessitating the quarantining of a number of prominent Americans returning from abroad. Several times the scourge has found its way to the United States, but in each instance has been overcome before making much headway. The quarantine department noted Dr. Doty. The London Lancet, est remains and is invested abroad. however, warns against the insidiousness of cholera as follows:

It has been shown that the bacilligerms without knowing it or suffering from cholera symptoms), is one of the greatest dangers to be detected by the usual methods nor be debarred by anything short of an entire discontinuation of commerce neighbors.

The British Medical Journal, commenting on the present outbreak, points out that although man has fought the scourge for ages little has accomplished; amongst well marked cases the percentage of recovery being but two per cent.

Asia is the hotbed of cholera, and for that reason the possibility of ridding the world of the disease appears remote. It thrives on filth, poverty and uncleanliness. The congestion of India, China and some parts of Southern Russia lends itself to the pror gation, and spread of the bacilli. THE NEW MODEL.

When challenged last spring in the House of Commons to prove his election statements about the "black bread and offal" eaten in German cities Mr. Lloyd George had no difficulty in giving full proof from German statistics. THE BANKER OF THE WORLD. The financial editor of the London Daily Telegraph comments on the marvelous increase in the income from investments of British capital outside the United Kingdom. He estimates that this annual income has risen from £66,000,000 in 1904-5 to £89,000.

000 in 1908-9. That is to say the annual sum of money flowing into the pockets of British capitalists from the outside world, as interest on their investments, is $115,000,000 greater than in 1905 There is not the least doubt that the report of the commissioners of inland revenue will show a further big advance in 1909-10.

Much of this increase has come from investments in Canada, chiefly in Government and railway securities. Great Britain's investments abroad, which can be identified by the income tax returns, have increased $2,300,000. 000 in the past five years. During the period following the civil war, the banking firm of John C. Seitz & Brother, in the Seitz block on Griswold street, was a financial power in the city. Then he went to his palatial home on Jefferson avenue with the blue-stockings of the city Now after his day's work he wends his way to the city with a stream of Poles, Italians, other poor foreigners and some of the bent, broken_down old men who have "influence" enough to have their names on the city's pay

John C. Seitz in the hey-day of his youth could not count his dollars in a day's time, nor the smiles of the ladies of the city, nor the handshakes of the prominent citizens which they were proud to bestow upon him. Mr Seitz at the age of 80 has learned the value of money, and it was with no diffidence that he tried to break his wife's will in Judge Mandell's court during the past week. She had left all to her grandson, and nothing to him. And that's the way it still stands, for Judge Mandell held the will valid. Seitz will make further attempts to get some of the money.

John Randall Lewis Has Had a Remarkable History Since Leaving Church.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 8.-From the pulpit to wood chopping and carpetbeating in an industrial home, and a prospect of a course in a theological seminary, is the remarkable story of which John Randall Lewis, a former Canadian clergyman, for the last ten months an inmate of the J. Clement French Industrial Home, is the principa.

Through the efforts of Ernest Grant Randall, superintendent of the home, Lewis will have the opportunity of going back to the ministry, which he left four years ago to engage in commercial pursuits. He leaves tomorrow for the Atlantic Theological Seminary, where he expects to remain a year The money to defray his expenses was raised by a popular subscription by the superintendent.

"I was born in Wales," said Lewis, "37 years ago. I studied at the Gwinfryn Academy in Wales, and at Nottingham, in England. Then I went to Canada. After a year's study in Montreal I got a church at Tilbury, Ont., My salary there was $400 a year, out of which I had to pay my living ex-

CHILD'S REAL INHERITANCE

[By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.] .

I heard a mother discuss her daughter's faults and weaknesses once for an hour and bemoan her ingratitude unfortunate "inheritance" of the father's traits. I wonder how many times she had impressed this idea on the young girl's mind.

Whenever I hear a parent talking in that vein about a child I know where all the trouble began-not with the "bad inheritance," but with bad breeding.

All the education and all the opportunities in the world will not bring good results if the young mind is compelled to believe itself branded with some evil inheritance. There is no inheritance the persistent, patient love and wise sympathy and guidance of a mother cannot overcome.

THE IMMORTALS

Author of "The Stowaway," "The Message," "The Wings of the Morning," Etc.

"It might be. I have no head for those big words, m'sieu'."
Alec gave her a five-franc piece. It was the first coin he found in his pocket, and the sight of it caused a frown. Confound those Montmartre playwrights! Why was their stupid travesty constant. Why was their stupid travesty constantly recurring to his mind? He frowned again, this time at Auguste Comte's smugness, and looked at his watch Twenty-five minutes to seven! It was too late now to do other than write—if he succeeded. If not—ah, well! "Some of them are slain in the flower of their youth." At least, she would remember, and those glorious eyes of hers would glisten with tears, and the belief helped to console him. Still, he was saddened, disappointed, almost dulled. Doubt came darkly with the dispelling of the dream that he might commence his Odyssey with Joan's first and farewell kiss on his lips. Love and ambition seemed to be at ips. Love and ambition seemed to be at variance; but love had flown, whereas ambition remained.

ambition remained.

Back, then, to the Rus Boissiere, to an uproar of visitors, sightseers, journalists. Prince Michael had become Monseigneur again. He was holding a reception. Alec, pressing through the throng, was waylaid by a servant.

"This way, monsieur," whispered the man, drawing him into a passage and thence to the room of Princess Delgrado. Alec was soothing his mother's grief when his father entered secretly on tiptoe with the hushed voice and stealthy

"What is it?" inquired Alec.
"My father's sword, your grandfather's "My father's sword, your grandfather's sword. I have kept it bright for you." Alec squirmed. He knew the weapon a curved simitar inlaid with gold, and reposing in a scabbard of gilt metal and purple velvet. In its wrapping of brown paper and twine it suspiciously resembled a child's toy, and Prince Michael's grandiloquent manner added a touch of buffoonery to a farewell scene made. to a farewell scene made poignant by a woman's tears,

Owing the paternal watchfulness that French Government exercises over its subjects, he was obliged to pass the concierge; but none paid heed to him. If it came to that, all Paris would guffaw at the notion of dear Alec becoming a filibuster. He hailed a passing cab. If he would catch his train, they must drive furiously, which is nothing new in Paris. Climbing the Rue La Fayette, he passed Count Julius Marulitch and Constantine Belaini coming the other way in an open Victoria. They were so deeply engaged in conversation that they did not see him. Julius was talking and the Greek listening. It flashed into Alec's mind that the presence in Paris of the Greek on the very day of the Delgratz regicide offered a most remarkable coincidence. Beliani was no stranger to him, since he and General Stampoff, the one as Finance Minister and the other as Commander-in-Chief, were exiled from Kosnovia after an

But Bellani usually lived in Vienna, indeed, he was sometimes regarded as an active agent in Austria's steady advance on Salonica—whereas dear old Paul Stampoff hated Austria, was a frequent to the Delgrado receptions, and it was largely to his constant urging and tuition that Alec owed his familiarity with the Slav language. The Greek was evident, heard of the murders Greek. It the earliest possible moment; Julius, too was singularly well informed, though his interest in Kosnovian affairs had long eemed dormant; even the flery Stampoff was no laggard once the news was bruited. Alec went so far as to fix the exact time at which Julius appeared in the Rue Boissiere. He knew something of the ways of newspapers, and was well aware that no private person could hope to obtain such important intelligence be-fore the press. He himself had unwittingly heard the first public announce ment of the tragedy, and the three men had certainly lost no time in hurrying to greet their new sovereign.

What a madly inconsequent jumble i all was! Little more than two hours ago he was driving through the Bois with no other notion in his brain who has believed herself to be his wife for 20 years, some question of the legality of her marriage having been aroused by neighbors.

So, on the whole, it was a resigned, if not light-hearted adventurer who disposed himself and his belongings in the Orient Express, after experiencing the singular good luck of securing a section in the sleeping car returned by a Vien-nese banker at the last moment. He went about the business of buying his ed in his outburst of family pride, Monseigneur became practical. "What of Dumont?" said he. Dumont?" said he.

"He is taking an extraordinary interest in me. Of course, if I pull through, he becomes heir-presumptive."

"Parbleu! That is so. But—you will marry. Bide your time, though. Choose a queen who——" his shifty eyes fell on the trembling form of his wife, who had ed out of the station.

Then he read an account of the Del-gratz crime—for it was only a crime, a brutal and callous murder, not worthy to be dignified by the mantle of political hate. The unhappy King and Queen of Knosnovia were dining in company with the Queen's brother and the minister of while endeavoring to protect the Queen. She too fell riddled with bullets, and both corpses were flung into a courtyard. The unhappy guests were wounded, and still remained prisoners in the hands of the regicides, who vaunted that they had "saved" the country, and meant to restore the ancient sovereignty.

Beliani's summary of subsequent events was accurate; but it struck Alec at once that he had said nothing of the minister nor of Sergius Vottisch, Queen Helena's brother, who was mainly instrumental in defeating Beliani's half-forgotten revolt. Did he know of their presence? How peculiar that he should utter no word of triumph concerning Vottisch Alec threw aside the paper. He was sick at heart. He loathed the thought that the first step toward his throne lay across the body of a woman.

"Nice guards, the noble Seventh Regiment!" he muttered. "Now, when I am King—"
Then he realized that during the few minutes that had elapsed since the train started the whole aspect of the adventure had changed completely. It was no longer a snatch of opera bouffe, a fantastic conceit engendered in the brain of tastic conceit engendered in the brain of that elderly beau whom he had left in the Rue Boissiere, a bit of stage trifling happily typified by the property sword. It had become real, grim, menacing. It reeked of blood. Its first battle was there, recorded in the newspaper. He pictured those brutal soldiers mauling the warm bodies, thrusting them through an onen window and procedurative. an open window and proclaiming their loyalty-to him! The train was rushing through an estate noted for its game, and he had been one of a party of guns in its coverts last October. He remembered shooting a pheasant of glorious plumage, and saying: "Ah! There were few French or English or board, and not one American. A couple of Turks, a Bul-garian, a sprinkling of Russians and Levantines, and a crowd of Teutons, either German or Austrian, made up the company. Stampoff remained invisible, and Alec shared a table with an Armenian, who insisted on speaking execrable English, though he understood

DIET DISSOLVED New Elections Ordered in Finland as

[Associated Press.] Helsingfors, Oct. 8.-The Finnish Diet was dissolved today, and new elections in January ordered.

Result of Political Troubles.

The dissolution of the Finnish Diet by imperial decree has appeared inevitable since Sept. 23, when President Svinhufvud declined to submit two imperial bills on the ground that they were the direct proposals of the Russian ministerial council, instead of the Emperor. The measures concerned the rights of Russian subjects in Finland, and the establishment of a tax in lieu of personal military service. The attitude of the Diet was decided upon at a conference of the eaders, and followed the adoption by the Russian Duma of legislation, giving that body legislative authority over the Diet.

London, Oct. 10.-Still another theory of life has been given to a waiting world by the International Physiological Congress now sitting at Vienna. It is all a matter of chemistry, but a chemistry such as science has never before dreamed of.

Professor Charles Richet, of Paris, president of the congress, in his opening address, discoursed upon this new chemistry of "inponderableness." This chemistry determines the whole question of the physiology of individualthe individuality of physiology. In other words, every individual possesses an absolutely different chemical constitution from all other individuals. Every illness, every form of poisoning produces in the blood definite substances, leaving traces which no lapse of time altogether effaces. The study of this infinite chemical problem would bring the world ever nearer to the solution of the mystery of

When he mounts the platform to address his fellow members all lights will be extinguished. and he will begin his speech in the dark. Gradually the lights will be turned on.

In regard to ambitious beginners who are nervous another method will be used. They will memorialize a certain passage or speech, and then deliver it from the platform together with a dozen other men. The number of men will be reduced until finally the bashful beginner is left alone or the platform to make his short speech by himself. By that time he has acquired a certain confidence and ease. For the man who rises to make a speech and really has something to say, but is long-winded and rambling, there is a bell which will ring to show him he is beginning to bore his audience. This may be painful, but it is expected to have salutary results in teaching him just how long the average audience can bear digressions from the subject they wish to hear about.

Watch Was Pawned.

Joseph Fox, a pawnbroker, evidence that on Aug. 8, Lacadero had sold him the watch for $9, although he the supporters of amalgamation with had at first asked $10, which, he said, he needed to enter a poker game. Placed on the stand in his own behalf, Lacadero stated that he was 23 years of age, that he left Italy eight or nine years ago, and had come to London about three months ago from At first he worked in the Tecumseh

House, and later for about one week in the Parisian cafe. On the evening of Evans' arrest he gave him a cup of tea outside the kitchen of the cafe about 7 o'clock. Going home about an hour later, he found the watch, but said nothing about it to anyone, until he sold it on Monday. Then he went to New York to see his cousin, and remained there about one and a half months. When he returned to Toronto he was arrested by Detective Nickle.

Police Magistrate Love pointed out to him that his conduct had been dishonest in concealing the finding of the watch, and having found guilty, remanded him one week for sentence.

The watch was returned to Evans, who values it at $30. Two drunks were produced in court, one of whom was discharged, and the other remanded.

SHOW BIG DECREASE

Distinct Improvement Noticeable Everywhere and Conditions Are Very Satisfactory.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—Commercial failures in the Dominion of Canada for the third quarter of 1910, reported by R. G. Dun & Co., numbered 277 defaulted liabilities amounting to $2,-246,071. This is distinct improvement as to number when compared with the 307 of the same period last year, but there is a slight increase in liabilities over the corresponding three months a year ago, when they aggregated only Compared with earlier years, however, the exhibit is extremely satisfactory in all respects, failures in the same period in 1908 numbering 340 for $3,492,661, while in 1907 they were 297 and involved $2,573,695. The number of defaults in the manufacturing division was exactly the same as year, 69, but liabilities increased to $775,438 from $457,973. While this CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Cattle—Receipts estimated at 30,000; market steady to 10c lower; beeves, 475 to $8; Texas steers, $4 25 to $5 65; western steers, $4 15 to $6 75; stockers and feeders, $3 40 to $5 75; cows and heifers, $2 25 to $6 50; calves, $7 50 to $10. Sheep—Receipts estimated at 65,000; market steady; natives, $2 50 to $4 35; westerns, $2 75. showing is somewhat unfavorable, it is a marked improvement in comparison with the 85 for $1,365,112 of 1908, or the 97 for $1,354,536 in 1907. Lumber and clothing are the only classes in this division which show any considerable increase over last year; in the former 12 for $227.800. comparing with 5 for $40,016, and in the latter 24 for $213,202, against 18 for $38,993.

In the trading division there is marked improvement over last year and 1908, but the comparison with 1907 is indifferent, there being 203 suspensions in the third quarter this year indebtedness of $1.379.990. against 233 for $1,694,542 last year; 245 for $1,710,199 in 1908, and 196 for $1,195,459 in 1907. lantic City, where they will attend

Almost eyery class makes a more satisfactory exhibit than last year, notably general stores with 44 for $274,541, against 50 for $445,909, and miscellaneous with 19 for $171,030, against 40 for $531,698, while only drygoods shows any significant increase, this being largely due to a single failure in that class for upwards of $100,-

In addition to the above there wer five failures in the division embracing brokers and transporters involving $90,643, against five last year for $18,-000; ten in 1908 for $417,350, and four in 1907 for $23,700. The report as a whole indicates very satisfactory business conditions and well-maintained commercial progress, and but for the increased amount involved in manufacturing, the returns for the latest quarter would have been exceptionally

REV. GEO. H. HANSON ON RESURRECTION

Large Congregation Heard Distinguished Speaker in First Methodist Church.

Rev. George H. Hanson, of Belfast, reland, deacon Madden, of Liverpool, is touring Canada, spoke to an audience that ompletely filled the First Methodist Church last night. He based his sermon on the text, I. Corinthians, xv., 12: "Now if Christ be preached that He rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection from the dead?"

"How could they be Christians and say there was no resurrection from the dead?" asked the speaker. "The answer is that the ancients regarded the body as the seat of sin, and longed for its dissolution. They were wrong in their idea. The absolute certainty of the resurrection of Jesus Christ is what I want to speak to you about. It has a practical bearing on our lives. He who can say and believe beyond any shadow of a doubt that Christ is risen has the most sublime thing in the world to live for. Does Christ live to you just as your nearest and dearest lives to you? Is He present to your heart and realized by you as a near and dear one always at your side willing to help and guide you, or is He a mere shadowy something away in the dim background? Is it all true to you or is it an illusion? "Were the men who say they walked with Jesus Christ true, or were they deceivers? It was the easiest thing in the world for His enemies to put an end to any fraud or false-They had His body and they put sentinels to guard it. When the disciples gave out to the world that Christ was alive, if it was not so they could easily have made it manifest.

Plainly the sepulchre was empty. The that any soldier who slept while on less complications set in. guard was instantly executed, and it They were men just as you or I.
