Northwest Surely Liberal.
Winnipeg, April 16.—News of the appointment of Frank Oliver to the vacant portfolio of the Interior was not, under the circumstances, received with any great surprise here, for it is no-torious that Edmonton is the only western Liberal seat the Government could hope to carry now. Sixty per cent, of the electorate are Roman Cathof foreign voters, whose affiliations go of foreign voters, whose amiliations go with their pockets. Also the registration in that constituency is perhaps more lax than anywhere else in the Dominion, and it is common knowledge that there was a tremendous amount of plugging done at the last election.

Controlled by French Half-Breede.
As a plain matter of fact, the result of the election is controlled entirely by French half-breeds, who vote on any ground but that of conviction and conscience. Therefore, so far as the election may be taken as testing western opinion, it may be regarded right now as a solemn farce to be played for the benefit of the gallery in Ontario. In no other constituency in the west. French or English, could the Government hope at the present time to obtain a decisive majority. As it is, Conservatives will put up the best fight possible and have even some confidence se far as can be gathered from headquarters here of happy results. But it it is to be a question of the longest purse, then the Government will assuredly win. Controlled by French Half-Breeds.

Announces Bye-Election in Greenway's Old Constituency, Meuntain.

Winnipeg, April 10.—After giving the statement that he had made a proposition to the Dominion Government through Mgr. Sharretti and Archbishop Langevin, of St. Boniface, that he would modify the school laws of the Province on condition that the school lands, held by the Dominion Government for the Province, be vested in or transferred to the Provincial Government, "an explicit, categorical and emphatic denial, in the plainest language possible," Premier Roblin on Saturday said he should take an opportunity in addressing the electors of Mountain at Baldur on April 14 to give his views on the boundary question.

In referring to the coming meeting at Baldur, Premier Roblin announced that the writ has been issued and signed for the election for the vacant constituency of Mountain, with nominations April 26 and polling April 27.

Editor of the Farmer's Weekly Sun Discusses the member for East

In an editorial in the Farmer's Weekly Sun, discussing the members of the new Legislature, the editor passes the following comment on the member for East Kent:-

"Among the overflow from the Government side is Bowyer, the new man from East Kent. The latter has, by the way, been well placed. He was born a Radical, but by some accident at the political christening he was named a oal christening he was named a Tory, and the name, but not the character, has stuck ever since. Bowyer, I have said, is well placed. He occupies the seat formerly held by J. S. Macdonald, one of the best of the Patron contingent of the early nineties, and he is within easy reach of the tin sword of the Sergeant-at-Arms, which he will probably rip off when one of his radical fits somes on."

The doc tor said that it was a source of great regret that any such Autonomy Bill as proposed should be passed especially as regarded the educational question. He disliked to import politics into the pulpit. The subject of the Autonomy Bill had caused a great deal of excitement and the Government at Ottawa ought to be Government at Ottawa ought to be utterly ashamed to impose on the new provinces a bill with such educational provisions as are contained in the Autonomy Bill. Why should the Roman Catholics have Separate schools when the Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians and Episcopalians have equal right to them yet don't ask for them and don't need them? The Government and all true Canadians ought to be thoroughly ashamed that any such bill should pass, It was a plece of impertinence for any representative of a foreign power to attempt to distate the policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Had Sir Wilfrid gone to the country with this policy at the last election his detent would have been assured.

She was earrying the babe and the latter dropped a bottle on the lamp, smashing it to pleces. She attempted to stamp out the blaze, and failing, turned her attention to saying the children. The elder ones ran terrified to the back door, and returning again to the front entrance the mother selzed them and pushed them out to a place of safety. How she saved the babe is a mystery, for when Blaine first observed Mrs. McQuigge, both she and the child seemed to be envolped in fire, but the babe was not in the least injured. LIGHT FROM RUSSIA.

most remarkable news that come out of Russia is that there is a movement for the separamade more remarkable by the fact that it originates among the St. Petersburg clergy and is urged as a necessary means of increasing the spiritual power of the church. The clergy of a State church are never very readily persuaded that disestablishment would be a wise move. Almost invariably they look upon it as the destruction of religion. In Canada the Roman Catholic church comes nearest to being the State church, and it is ever on the lookout to increase its privileges and authority, as now instanced by the autonomy bills. The memorial of the Russian separatists, which has been published in the semi-official church organ,

"If the spread of indifference and irreligion is to be checked and if the church is to realize its high, God-given calling, only a church free from external influence in the direction of all its affairs, by avoiding the liability of being considered a force of action under the influence of, and obligations to, the State, can hope to check the spread of other faiths and creeds in Russia and retain the nation in the faith of the fathers."

All that sounds familiar enough to us, but it could not have been expected from a group of Russian priests. It is a frank statement that the people distrust the Government and therefore distrust the church which is a part of it.-Stratford Herald.

aries Killed by Fall of Mission.

Calcutta, April 7.—It now appears that 400 members of the 7th Gurkhas were killed at the Dharmsala cantonment by the collapse of a stone barrack building in consequence of the recent earthquake. In addition twenty members of the first battallon and fifty members of the second battallon of the 1st Gurkhas were killed, while it is roughly calculated that from twenty to thirty per cent. of the native population of the surrounding villages were killed. In addition to the Europeans already reported killed at Dharmsala, seven children of Europeans are said to have per ished.

The Kangra Valley is believed to have been devastated, and it is reported that the Town of Kangra was razed to ruins with great loss of life. No confirmation is obtainable as the telegraph station at Kangra is wrecked.

It is situated in the Kangradistrict, and is the centre of tea plantations of the Palam Valley.

There is little doubt that when the complete extent of the disaster is known the death roll will reach into the thousands. As an indication of the tremendous force of the shock the exceptionally solid new court house at Dharmsala was destroyed. Refugees from Dharmsala have arrived at Lahore in a condition of mental collapse and unable to give any coherent story.

Hey Gurkhas Died.

The disaster to the Gurkhas was due to the sudden collapse of the stone built British barracks. The men had only just reached the station and other troops ordered there fortunately had not arrived.

The road to Dharmsala, a mere cut or shelf oh the mountain slope, has crumbled away and one of the bridges over the river has collapsed; hence the difficulty of restoring communication. According to one report, about 200 Gurkhas weer extricated alive from the ruins of the barracks, but many were so terribly crushed that there is little hope that they can survive.

The satiated dramatic appetite The satisted dramatic appetite of the amusement going public is experiencing a most delightful novelty, this season, a most appetizing morsel in the way of a play called "Dora Thorne." "Something new and doing" is the cry, and in 'Dora Thorne' that want is supplied with remarkable originality, and while there may be "nothing new under the sum". able originality, and while there may be "nothing new under the sun" a change of combination of circumstances is bound to make a change in effect, and effect plays a most important part in dramatic offerings, "Dora Thorne" will be seen at the Grand Tuesday, April 1tth, and a superb seem production is assured.

At a recent meeting of the American Managers' Association a brisk conference was held regarding the conference was held regarding the relative merits, and qualifications which go to make a play an assured and lasting success. From all sides could be heard the theme of heart interest, and the most casual patron of the drama will surely agree to this. Heart interest we must have, something that goes straight home to the heart and proves its truth there. A new play of this season, "Dora Thorne" was cited as an instance of this particular quality. "Dora Thorne" certainly does contain this self-same heart interest with all its variations, humor and pathos combined with delightful originality.

April 8.—In the case of Watterworth vs. Waddell, an action for $5,000 for false arrest in connection with the farmer's sale of refrigerators here a couple of years ago, called last week at St. Thomas assizes, the case was settled cut of court by Mr. Waddell paying $150 damages and each side paying his own costs. This was much better for Mr. Waddell than allowing the costs to accumulate, which had already amounted to about $500 as his share.

J. R. McCoy, of Hagersville, was in town yesterday in connection with the sale of Joseph Clark's chattels. General regret over the necessity of the sale of the chattels of Jos. W. The Nancy B, was not a trim yacht. There were gaudy pictures upon her sides, and altogether she looked like anything but the stanch little river craft that slid by her in the stream. "Best little theater on the two rivers," declared her owner proudly.

Why, she can seat 700 and stand up 300. Got a good company, too; cleverest little soubrette. Why, say!" "Good morning, Mr. Branscome," said a pleasant voice at his elbow. Branscome jumped and turned, but the girl passed on, with a smile that was pleasant, but not too familiar. She was the ingenue, Blanche Montague. There were a dozen in Branscome' the easy work of a floating theater to the more strenuous life of "the road," but to the manager personally only one member of the company counted, the dainty little woman who played the ingenue roles in the rather lurid plays which formed the repertory of the Branscome stock company.

Being a strict disciplinarian, Brans come gave no outward evidence of his love, and none of the company, with the exception of Miss Montague, whose real name was Blanche Blake, ever dreamed that the hard hearted, brusque manager had fallen a victim to Cupid's

As for Miss Montague, the philosophy of life was summed up in the quotation, "Men were deceivers ever," and she had heard that the Nancy B. was named after Branscome's wife. Some-how she could not help being attracted now she comin nor neip being attracted to the big hearted, outspoken giant, but there ever rankled the memory of his letter—the only love letter he had ever written—and the side comments of the players about his wife. They had come almost simultaneously.

Branscome soon saw that his attentions were unwelcome, and, being at heart a gentleman, he desisted from any further attempt to woo her. He had no idea of the rumor that the boat was named after his wife, and, being keenly aware of his lack of polish, he support that his rejection was due to this cause.

Meanwhile Miss Montague showed a preference for the society of the leading man, Jim Burrows, and Branscome passed sleepless nights wondering how he could warn her of the actor's real character without making it appear that jealousy was the motive of his reionstrance.

So they drifted down the Ohio, pass-ing into the Mississippi at Cairo just as the days began to turn cool. Branscome the days began to turn cool. Branscome had played the route a dozen seasons in an old boat and knew just how to time his tour. They reached the lower river just as the cotton, sugar and rice began to weigh the down boats, and money was plentiful.

Branscome would gladly have discharged Burrowes to save Blanche, but Burrowes had an ironclad two years' contract without a canceling clause.

contract without a canceling clause. Usually two weeks' notice might be given on either side, and Branscome groaned when he remembered that it was he, thinking only of the leading man's popularity, who had urged and finally had carried the omission of the cancellation chause. ellation clause.

Branscome strove to win Blanche's confidence, with the result that she cul-ivated Burrowes all the more assidu-

They were about thirty miles below yicksburg, and Branscome had about lecided to let Burrowes go, no matter decided to let Burrowes go, no matter what the consequences, when fate solved the problem for him. It was their custom to fie up at a town for several days, avoiding the cities where there were permanent theaters. The company could then play to a profit three or four plebts.

At this particular landing a professional gambler had been driving a brisk business, and, with well lined pockets, sought to attract Miss Montague's attention when she made little trips to the postoffice and general store. Her disdain had been noted by the townspeople, and, with the memory of their poker losses still fresh, they were disposed to twit him upon his lack of

Stung by their taunts, he bet heavily that the little actress would give him a kiss before the boat dropped down the river, and by the last night of the engagement he stood to lose several hundred dollars more than he had tak-en from the local gamesters.

Desperate at his lack of success, he began drinking and arrived at the boat just sober enough to pass the door. During the first act the fumes of the liquor mounted to his head, and when in the second act Blanche Montague came out in short skirts to do her imitation of a child he sprang to his feet and loudly commanded her to come and kiss him.

Paralyzed by fear, she was unable to move. The gambler, before the at-tendants could interfere, sprang upon the stage, wildly waving a huge bowle knife. At sight of it Burrowea re-treated to the back of the stage and slipped into the darkness of the deck.

The audience was in a wild commo tion and, panic stricken, made for the doors, preventing the boat people from reaching the stage. Suddenly Branscombe darted from the wings and without a moment's hesitation grap-pled with the gambler, now crazed with excitement. Several times the knife slashed viciously, but at last with one desperate effort Branscombe turned the arm back, there was a snap, and the knife fell from the nerveless hand, which dropped limply to the expland, Sobered by the pain of a broken arm, the gambler suffered himself to be led away, and Branscombe fell to the stage exhausted from loss of blood, which poured from the ugly but not dangerous wounds he had sustained. When he regained consciousness he was in the bunk of his swn cabin, neatly handaged, and Blanche was Preferred Jaff to Scales. A burglar who entered a Harlem acuse recently suffered a unique form of punishment. It happened that the family he had come to rob were incon-veniently early risers, and before he had half finished his work he heard a step on the stairs. Quickly gathering up his booty, he slipped behind the plano, intending to make good his escape as soon as opportunity offered.

But opportunity did not offer, for it appeared that the step he had heard was that of one of the daughters of the house, who had come down to the par-lor for a couple of hours' piano practice before breakfast. When she had finished another daughter was standother two hours. Next followed the music lesson of each of the young ladies in turn. After these lessons were over their brother's violin teacher appeared and, seating herself at the plane, began his accompaniment. But this was too much. The burglar rushed from his hiding place.

"For heaven's sake, have me arrested!" he implored. "At least there are no pianos in jail!"—New York Press.

HUGO AND HIS WIFE.

Vehemence of the Author and His Better Half's Placidity. M. Paul Stapfer in the Mercure de France quotes a fragment of Victor Hugo's after dinner monologues. The oose of the man accustomed to an expectation of big utterances, of metaphysical suggestions, is well conveyed in the quotations. Victor Hugo, it is hardly necessary to observe, was dis tinctly a prophet in his own country as well as abroad. By 9 in the evening, says M. Stanfer, Victor Hugo had warmed to his work. He burst forth:

"How poor, how small, how absurd atheism is! God exists, I am more sure of his existence than I am of my own. If God lends me sufficient length of life I want to write a book showing how necessary to the soul prayer is— how necessary and how efficacious. how necessary and how efficacious. Personally I never pass four hours without prayer. I pray regularly ev ery morning and evening. If I wake in the night I pray. What do I pray for? Strength. I know what is right and what is wrong, but I realize my imperfections and that of myself have not the strength to resist evil God surrounds and upholds us. We are in him. From him we have life. movement, being. All is created by him. But it is not true to say that he has created the world. He creates it unceasingly. He is the soul of the uni-verse. He is the infinite I. He isyou are asleep, Adele!"

The abrupt accusation was hurled at Mrs. Hugo. Since dinner she had been sitting silently in an armchair, rather huddled and drawn up in attitude, her chin resting on her chest her hands folded on her stomach and her eyelids closed. Her regular breathing had been pleasantly interrupted. Roused abrupt-ly, injured innocence protested vigorously in her manner, "You dear great thing, how could you possibly imagine I should go to sleep while you were talking?

TRAVELING IN RUSSIA.

The Sleeping Cars and the Steamers on the Volga. The sofas of our staterooms on the Volga river steamer, while pleasant enough to sit on, were devoid of the other trappings which in these degenerate days are thought necessary to a night's rest, and we had not yet learn-

A place to sleep on is provided. The rest he brings. On the Russian sleeping cars those who have not their own bed-clothes and who wish to undress and go to bed in the American fashion can have all that is requisite for 50 cents. The porter on demand brings a linen sack, whose seal he cuts in your presence with considerable ceremony and from which he produces a pillow, blankets and sheets of beautiful fine linen. This was the system on our boat, and our minds were soon at rest.

I afterward inspected the lower decks of the ship and saw the way the third class passengers were cared for. It was primitive, but clean and wholly suited to the customs of the people. Each person was provided with a spoi-less board shelf to sleep on by night and sit on by day, and he made himself as happy or as uncomfortable as he chose. Most of the passengers seemed o take traveling as a migration, to judge by the pots and kettles, furni-ture, blankets and clothing stowed about them—"everything but the kitchen stove," that important but dan-zerous article being replaced by the bip's galley, with its bountiful hot water always ready for the eternal camaking—Captain T. ### OCCOSCOSCOSCOSCOSCOS | CALL PUBLIC MEETING

Rev. Mr. Hoyt, pastor of the Wiliam St. Baptist Church, made a trong address against Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the much-talked-of Autonomy Bill at the Temperance neeting in the Auditorium yesterday afternoon. During the course of his remarks he said:

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier was elected in 1896 to uphold provincial rights, and I did all I could to elect him, but I am strongly opposed to the bill he has now before the house. I have been approached by several citizens suggesting the calling of a public accting to advise our representative n Parliament."

Mr. Hoyt went on to say that the calling of a public meeting would be good idea. It was the place of the people to instruct their representative, Mr. Clements, as to what they onsidered right in the matter. There seemed to be a strong feel-ng at the meeting in this direction and several men spoke in favor of it. There was, as usual, a good attendance at the meeting. A. D. Westman acted as chairman. R. W. Angus sang a solo and the orchestra gave several selections, which were much enjoyed.

Its first recorded use was in prospecting for mineral lodes. The first mention of the use of the The first mention of the use of the modern rod was in the latter part of the afteenth century. the hands of an expert. German miners brought the forked rod into England toward the end of the sixteenth century for the exploitation of the Cornish mines. Professor Bar-rett points out that the drooping character of the willow was probably be-lieved to have something to do with the minerals concealed in the ground and that "it was but natural to cut a light branch from one of the trees and to see if it drooped in prospecting for ores." Thus the "dowsing rod" came late universal use among the miners of Surope, although it was soon believed Europe, although it was soon believed that only certain persons had the gift of using the rod.

THE HUDSON RIVER.

Who Was the Real Discoverer of

No Dutch or English man can affirm the discovery of the Hudson river. Verrazzano must have distanced Hud-son's archives by nearly a hundred years. However, the Dutch and English liaison in the matter is close. Hudson is appropriated by Dutch minds and has a Holland tradition round him. He came in a Dutch yacht called the Haif Moon in 1609. His sailors were Hollanders and Englishmen. He represented a Dutch East India company on its way to find the much sought for northeast passage to India. He explored the Hudson, going as far as the little town that bears his name, and he himself has been transmitted to posterity with such blended and mixed traditions as to constitute him well nigh a half breed in people's

The names of the river are varied. It has been called Manhattan, the North river, the Great river, the Mauritas and in the year 1616 bore legally for some length of time the name Riviere Van den Vorst Moritias.

The Licerice Plant.
The licerice plant resembles a rose with a single green stem, reaches a height of about three feet and bears a small purple star shaped flower. The first year's root growth resembles a loosely twisted string of tow and may run to twenty feet in length. The sec ond year it assumes a woody substance when dry, and the third year it acquires its commercial value. The time for digging the root is the winter, when it is dried and crushed under heavy stones drawn round on it by mules, much as olives are crushed to extract their oil.

A Witness' Retort. Curran once so far forgot himself as to tell a witness whose evidence be wished to discredit that there was coundrelism reflected in his face. "T was never before aware that my face made such a good mirror," retorted the other. The answer was all the more pointed from the fact that Curran, despite his unrivaled forensic qualities, had a somewhat evil visage.

BABY RATTLESNAKES.

The fallacies surrounding the rattle-snake begin with the very coming of the reptile. Many suppose that, like the garter snake, the bull snake, the members of the "racer" family and our other nonpoisonous snakes, the rat-tlesnake is hatched in broods numbering from forty to eighty. Not so, Rat-tiesnakes are born into the world, as are all members of the viperoid family, in litters numbering from seven to Motionless, eyes gleaming, the long mother lies extended across the back of a sand hummock beneath the fan-like leaf of a dwarf palmetto, glaring coldly at her active, squirming ba-bies. For a brief half hour she tar-ries; then she drags herself away, for from the first moment a young rattler enters the world he is independent of his mother and eminently able to shift for himself. Each young snake is a full fledged rattler, ready to hunt and ready to defend himself with the sting of death. Each flat, triangular little head is provided with the long, sharp poison faugs containing the identical venom of the mother snake.

W. R. Phillimore, Wellington St., said that he never before appreciated the new pavements in this city as he did this spring. In other years when the frost came out of the ground there were mud holes in the distreets large enough to bury an ox. This year it was a pleasure to live on the paved streets. Mr. Phillimore says that pavements are something that Chatham cannot afford to be without, no matter what the cost.

City Engineer Jones having prepared maps of the sewer system, the waterworks mains and the electric light lines and lamps in the city, is now busy on a map of the pavements in the city. ### LT.-GENERAL LINEVITCH

CAREER OF THE SUCCESSOR TO KUROPATKIN IN MANCHURIA.

Years Old-Friend and Ally of Vice roy Alexieff-Wanted to Fight Japanese in the Mountains but Kuro patkin Favored "Luring Them On."

Lt.-Gen. Linevitch, who has been ap-ainted commander-in-chief of the pointed commander-in-chief of the Russian forces in Manchuria as suc-cessor to Gen. Kuropatkin, is sixty-six years old, has been a fighter since his twenty-first year and has seen service in every section of the Russian Em-pire from the Caucasus to Viadivos-tock. At the outbreak of the war with pire from the Caucasus to Viadivos-tock. At the outbreak of the war with Japan he was Governer of Amur. He was a friend and ally of Viceroy Alex-ieff and before Kuropatkin's arrival in Manchuria had been in command of the Russian forces which were in the Province at that time. He took hold of the situation at Liaoyang, establish ed the military supply stations there, worked out the Yalu river campaign worked out the Talu river campaign and was in general command until Kuropatkin relieved him.

The latter changed all his plans for the defense of Liaoyang. Linevitch wanted to fight the Japanese in the mountains east, southeast and south, but Kuropatkin believed in "luring them on." In the battle of the Sha Linevitch had Kuroki's army in jeopardy twice, and success for the Japanese was won on each occasion with re-enforcements from Gen. Nodzu's centre army. It was Linevitch who kept Kuroki out of Fushun for two days, and Kuroki out of Fushun for two days, and it was the left of his army, with Ren-nenkampf's cavalry, that forestalled Kuroki's rush farther east. This, if carried out, would have cut off the Russian retreat.

Linevitch as commander-in-chief of the Russian forces is now fighting men who fought under him in 1990. He led the 22,000 allies in the march for the the 22,000 allies in the march for the relief of Pekin, and in his command as the senier officer of the allied forces were 12,000 Japanese under Generals Yamsguchi and Fukushima. In the Russo-Turkish war Kurepatkin and Linevitch quarreled bitterly, being of equal rank. When Kurepatkin became the head of the Transbalkal army Linevitch was one of his division compation. vitch was one of his division com-manders, and the quarrel was renew-ed. Linevitch challenged Kuropatkin, who refused to fight a duel on the ground that it would not be proper for him to take the field with an officer of inferior rank.

THE HALIFAX DOCKYARDS

Their History as Set Forth Authorita tively by the Dominion Statistician, Mr. Geo. Johnson.

tiolan, Mr. Geo, Johnson.

Mr. George Johnson, Dominion Statistician, recently contributed an article to. The Halifax Herald, in which the history of the Halifax Herald, in which the history of the Halifax docks is authoritatively set forth. The beginning of the story takes us back to the days when the English and French struggled for the mestery of the New World The Halifax dockyards and fortifications were begun in 1788, in order to furnish a base from which Wolfe might operate against Louisburg. This powerful French fortress had been built at great cost, as part of the plan which designed to keep the English colonists hemmed in New England. Other forts, each links in the same huge shackles which France hoped to place on the English, were at New Orleans on the Ohio River, at Niagara, and at Quebec. For lorg it appeared that the chain would hold. At last it was snapped, after years of desperate struggling, and in the result which has had its effect on each one of us Halifax and its dockyards played no inconspicuous part.

Pitt Renews Struggle.

The years 1775-6-7 were disastrous ones for British arms in America, but in 1778 there was a renewal of the struggle under more hopeful circumstruggle under more hopeful circumstances. Pitt was again in command of England's political destinies, and he planned an attack on Quebec and Louisburg. A large fleet was to assemble at Halifax, and this made a dockyard necessary. At tract of swampy ground was selected. Since 1743 the settlers had been dumping into it the rocks and superfluous earth from the rocks and superfluous earth from their five-acre clearings, and in 1758 It seemed to the naval authorities that it seemed to the naval authorities that they could turn the dumping place into a dockyard with great advantage. Ac-cordingly Col. Charles Laurence, the Governor of the Province, deeded to Admiral Lord Colville, commander of the fleet, and two trustees, the old swamp and the hill to the north.

Construction of the Dock. Some of London's army, writes Mr. Johnson, waiting in Halifax since the Johnsen, waiting in Halifax since the previous year, were put to work, and by the middle of May Boscawen's fleet from England anchored off the just begun but even then useful yard. Boscawen's men giving a hand during the fortnight they had to wait for Gen. Amberst, the works made brave progress, and the dockyards were increasingly useful during the short stay of the 157 ships and 12,000 men destined to reduce Louisburg. Wolfe was there, and on the unequal ground of the dockyards spent most of his time training a corps of light infentry in new tactics similar to those the Japs have been using—tactics which he employed with using—tactics which he employed with good effect before Louisburg a month later. Guy Carleton was there, and no doubt both men, being Imperially mand-ed men, discussed plans for making the dockyards suitable in every respect as Britain's great depot in our North Atlantic waters; for be it remembered that the settlement founded in Halifax is the first (and only) instance of a "British colony of free men founded by the Imperial Government for definite and Imperial purpose"; and both Wolfe and Carleton knew that purpose, and appreciated it, too.

After Louisburg Had Fallen.

Mr. Johnson also notes that at the inauguration of the dockyards were Fraser's Highlanders, one of the first Highland regiments in the British army, for it was only the year previous that Scotchmen began to serve in the English army.

After the successful siege of Louisburg, the fleet and army returned to Halifax, and remained there some time to refit. The little town became a camp for the troops and was hard put to it to provide three meals a day for the forces. The dockyards were piled up with summinition and stores and private. forces. The dockyards were piled up with ammunition and stores and private property removed from Louisburg, and in every available corner the men were bivouscking. The next year Halifax was the rendezvous for the army and navy on their way to Quebec, and the dockyard, now fairly furnished with masthouse and other needed buildings, filled an important place in most important and far-reaching movements. For some years after it was the centre of attraction, the harbor being the conof attraction, the harbor being the constant resort of squadrons under Lord Colville and others till the close of the war in 1763. Twenty years after the inaugural services in 1758 the military authorities resolved upon the transforming the hill behind the town into a citadel, and in carrying out their purpose they cut eighty feet off the top and used the materials to fill in the south end of the dockyard, which in 1770 had been surrounded with a highway, by whose gates sentries have passed night and day for 125 years.

The Great Explosion.

passed night and day for 125 years.

The Great Explosion.

Coming down to later years, Mr. Johnson notes as the most sensational incident in the dockyards' modern history the terrific explosion which wrecked the powder magazine. This occurred while the Americal Civil War was in progress, and was caused presumably by blockade runners, who, while attempting to rob the stores, accidentally dropped a match in some powder. They paid dearly for their rashness, however, as they must have been blown to atoms. Since then the Halifax dockyards have witnessed other stirring scenes, which have strengthened their claim to being one of the "sights" of the Maritime Provinces.

Ryerson, the Pioneer.

In the School Review for last month, issued by the University Press, Chicago, there is an article on the Educational Museum of Paris, in which the following statement occurs: "In the City of Toronto, more than half a century ago, there was established the first educational museum in history, while it is nearly thirty years since progressive fittle Japan added this feature to het system of education; and even the South American countries have now been represented for several years by museums at Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, and Buenos Ayres. Until recently the only attempt in the United States was made at Washington, in 1868, and was soon abandoned for want of support from Congress or any other source. Although a special appeal has often been made by the Commissioner of Education, the museum has never been revived." It is worthy of note that this museum was organized under the auspices of Dr. Egerton Ryerson,

This is the brave and pathetic letter she wrote to her publisher from her bed of sickness: "I am sorry I cannot finish 'Zeph.' Perhaps it is not worth publishing in its unfinished state, as the chief lesson for which I state, as the chief lesson for which I wrote it was to be forcibly told at the end. I suppose there will be some in-terest in it as the last thing I wrote. I will make a short outline of the plot of the story."

Dickens' Sudden Call.

When death came to Charles Dickens with such tragic suddenness at Gadshill on the 8th of June, 1870, he was in the middle of "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," the first chapters of which had appeared in serial form but two months earlier. How the story would have proceeded had he been spared to finish it must always remain a subject for speculation. His friend and biographer, John Foster, made a painstaking effort to supply the conclusion; but it must always be a matter for regret that the hand of the master was not allowed to finish his last work.

IS THE SUN COOLING?

Professor Langley Thinks It Is-His Reasons Therefor-Some Delicate Measurements of Radiant.

That the total amount of heat in the sun tends to be constantly lessened by radiation is believed by all astronomers. That its temperature remains practically the same from age to age is almost equally certain. What it is that restores or maintains this temperature is perhaps the fundamental problem of solar physics. Whatever its solution may be, exact measurements of the sun's radiation show that this fluctuates considerably, and it is probable that these changes have an influence on the earth's weather. The most delicate measurements of radiant heat are those made with Professor Langley's bolometer, an instrument now so perfected that it will indicate the heat given out by a human face one-third of a mile distant. The results of some measurements of solar radiation made by Langley with this device are thus stated by C. W. Saleeby in the Academy and Literature, London. Says this writer:

"He (Langley) believes that at the end of March, 1903, contemporaneous-ly with a marked increase in sun sents. That the total amount of heat in the end of March, 1903, contemporaneous-ly with a marked increase in sun spots, end of March, 1903, contemporaneously with a marked increase in sun spots, something happened in the sun that caused a rapid fall in the solar radiation, which subsequently has continued to be about 10 per cent. less than before. What the cause of this fall may have been we cannot conjecture, but it is interesting to inquire what consequences it had for the earth. According to Professor Langley, such a change in the sun would reduce the temperature of the earth's surface by something less than 7.5 degrees C.—18.5 degrees F. Now, when attention is directed to the exact observations made at eighty-nine stations in the north temperate zone and when these are compared with the results of many previous years it is found that a definite fall of more than 2 degrees did actually occur, nor is it possible to conceive 'what influence, not solar, could have produced this rapid and simultaneous reduction of temperatures over the whole north temperate zone and continued operative for so long a period.' While we remain ignorant of the cause of this solar change we cannot make any predictions as to its persistence or possible accentration. All we can conclude is that our tenure persistence or possible accentuation.

All we can conclude is that our tenure of this 'lukewarm bullet' is perhaps not so certain as some of us have thought."

It looked as though Nogl had an easy job at Port Arthur, simply cleaning up what the navy left behind, and the world turned to more spectacular figures like Togo and Kuroki, while the gray-haired veteran divided away at the "impregnable fortrees." DREADS DOCTOR'S QUESTIONS isands Write to Mrs.Pinkham, Lynn, ss., and Receive Valuable Advice solutely Confidential and Free

There can be no more terrible ordeal to a delicate, sensitive, refined woman than to be obliged to answer certain questions in regard to her private ills, even when those questions are asked by her family physician, and many

This is also the reason why thousands upon thousands of women are corrected.

This is also the reason why thousands upon thousands of women are corresponding with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. To her they can confide every detail of their illness, and from her great knowledge, obtained from years of experience in treating female ills, Mrs. Pinkham can advise women more wisely than the local physician. Delle Emerentienne Montreuil, of 114 Latourelle St., Quebec, Que., writes:

Latourelle St., Quebec, Que., writes:
Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"I suffered for eight months with what the doctors called prolapsus, which caused great weakness all over my system, with faint dizzy spells. I kept growing weaker and weaker. I tried several medicines which they claimed would cure my trouble, but nothing was of the least benefit until I tried Lydis. E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and this helped me so rapidly that I could hardly believe my good fortume. I would gladly have paid $25.00 for that first bottle, for it started me on the road to health, and five bottles cured me. "I am most grateful for my splendid, robust health, and shall certainly recommend the Vegetable Compound in glowing terms to all my friends and acquaintances, for it is deserving of all the praise I can give it."

down in a cloud rain will surely come the next day.

If it clears off in the night look for rain the next day. If smoke from the chimney settles instead of rising there is a storm at hand. When sound travels a long distance there is also a storm near. Never expect much storm in the old of the moon. The absence of dew and an unusually heavy dew are alike forerunners of rain. Not much frost need be expected in the light of the moon. An owl hooting in the hollow is a sign of a cold storm; on the hill it foretels a thaw.

Animal life seems, according to the popular notion, to have peculiar warnings regarding the weather changes. Some of these are explainable by natural causes. It is a fact recognized by all intelligent stockmen that cattle have an intimation of an approaching storm some hours before it is visible to the human eye. There is a certain restlessness which the cowboy has learned to interpret at once. When you see a pig pasturing in the all you see a pig pasturing in the field build for itself a nest you may look for a storm.

Chickens take extra pains in oiling their feathers just before a rain. Pea fowl send forth their shrill cries as a warning, and when the quail cries "more wet" from the meadows, the farmer works briskly to get his hay under shelter. If the chickweed and scarlet pimpernel expand their tiny petals, rain need not be expected for a few hours. Bees work with redoubled energy just before a rain. If the files are unusually persistent either in the house or around stock, there is rain in the air. The cricket sings at the approach of cold weather. Squirrels store a large supply of nuts, the husks of corn are unusually thick, and the buds of deciduous threes have a firmer protecting conf if a severe winter is protecting coaf if a severe winter is at hand. Second Time M. Bouvier Ha. Been Premier of the Republic in His Long Public Career.

M. Rouvier, the new Premier M. Rouvier, the new Premier of France, has had a long public career. This is the second time he has been Premier of the Republic. He was first elected to the National Assembly in 1870, and six years later was elected secretary of the Chamber of Deputles. Under the Premiership of Leon Gam-betta and Jules Ferry, he held office as Minister of Commerce. Finally, in 1887 the turn of the political wheel brough M. Rouvier himself to the top, and he succeeded in forming a ministry, ir which he held the two posts of President of the Ministers, or Premier, and Minister of Finances; he will hold the same positions in the present Ministry. During the six months of his former Initiatry, Mr. Rouvier won distinction by his firm and courageous stand against Boulanger, who as head of the military party, was a prominent factor in French politics of the time. M. Rouvier pricked the Boulanger bubble and Gen. Boulanger himself shortly after committed suicide.

M. Rouvier was born in the south of France, began as a clerk in a bank in Marseinites, and is a self-made man; he has a characteristic Gallic face—the pointed moustache, the keen eye, the touch of baldness so common among intellectual Frenchmen. He carries the atmosphere of a man of affairs berhaps more than a statesman; but today, when business interests are 20 great, the statesman must be something of a man of affairs, and the man of affairs who succeeds on a great scale must be something of a statesman. The ministry of M. Rouvier is likely to be identified prominently with a measure which has so far been as unpopular in France as in other countries—the momentax, which will have the first place in the program of the new Cabinet.

A new butter is now being made from the milk of the coccanut. This milk when subjected to a temperature of over 28 C. runs into a yellow olk which is imported in great quantities from India and Africa. The better qualities of it are obtained from Ceyton, Cochin China and Australia. The aut produces 50 per cent. of oil, and the acre of land planted with coccanut trees would produce over 400 pounds of oil. This has hitherto been used for lats for soap of for machinery oil and he better qualities employed in the manufacture of textile goods. Patch, one of Henry VIII's fools, once sought permission to demand an egg from every husband who was dissatisfied with his wife. A man talks about owning his business. But, as a matter of fact, his business owns him. His whole life is regulated by the demands of the business. The time at which he rises, his breakfast hear, the time given to meata, are all determined by business obligations. He rushes through tunoh because he 'can't spare the time from business' to eat leisurely. He won't take a rest because he is needed at the store or office. He is in fact an absolute slave to business. The results which follow this slavery are to be seen on every hand. Men dyspeptic, irritable, nervous, with drawn faces, and hollow eyes, sit at the desk or stand behind the counter until they collapse in a fit of sickness, or are taken away by heart failure. Those who cannot escape the exactions of business will find a friend in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stemach, increases the action of the blood-making glands, increasing the vitality and physical yigor. It makes men strong and prevents those business break-downs which so often terminate fatally. which so often terminate fatally.

Saturday a charming and well-known Maple City young lady and an equally well-known and popular young cricketer were walking up the avenue, when a steer leading a farmer by a rope came along. The girl had a fierce red tie on and that made the animal wild. He rushed at the girl and the man valiantly intervened. The steer wasn't a bit atraid of him, however, and kept a-coming, leading the man by the rope. The cricketer looked hurt at this less majestie, but didn't wait to argue the point. Between Two Fires.

There is reason to believe that Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's entrance into the China Sea has been followed by orders for the cruisers Gromobol, Rossia and Bogatyr, which have been ready for some time at Vladivostock, to put to sea. Their appearance outside the roadstead of Vladivostock would constitute a potential threat against Admiral Togo's rear, which will compel the retention in despatch of a number of heavy fighting ships to Japanese waters. It was a very unusual thing for a man to come into court and say that he had gotten a very inferior wife to the one he might have got. He had claimed that she was not able to work as hard as a woman of 39, his present wife being over 60. His lordship came down heavily upon the plaintiff for his action in making his betrothed's letters a laughing matter at the Brown House.
