

WITHDREW UNDER ANNIHILATING FIRE IN ORZYC VALLEY' BUT HAVE POSSESSION OF DNEISTER

Russian Armies, Battling Against Heavy Odds of Artillery, Have Evacuated at One Point, While the Austro-Germans Have Been Thrown Over Dneister.

By Special Wire to the Courier. Petrograd, June 26.—The following Russian official statement regarding the progress of hostilities was given out here to-day: "During the course of the night of June 24 and the whole of the following day, in the Shavli region, an artillery duel preceded with advance guard encounters on the front of Patkovo-Pobeliary and along the right bank of the Niemen River. To the west of the middle Niemen, the German offensive during the night between the Kovno-Wirballin railway and the Amalva marshes was repulsed by our fire.

Pilica, the enemy yesterday thrice attempted to make headway with weak effectiveness west of Coeliff, but were repulsed with great losses. On the Tanef front, in the direction of Zolkiew and Lemberg, there was no important change. The enemy attempted to attack us along the railway leading from Lemberg to Kamienka and Brzezany. On the Dniester River, during the night of the 23rd we drove back beyond the river the remainder of the Germans who crossed the previous day in the Kozany district. In the direction of Martynoffstavn, on the evening of the 23rd, we captured the remnants of the enemy who had crossed the Dniester, altogether 15 officers and about 700 men. Notwithstanding the disastrous results of these crossings, the Germans and Austrians attempted the very same night to throw their forces across the Dniester by bridges constructed south of Bukasowice, they having previously only crossed near the village of Kousedyvany. The fighting continues. On the rest of the Dniester front, below the points mentioned, there is no change.

CYCLONE IN ALBERTA CAUSES HALF MILLION DOLLAR LOSSES

No Lives Known to be Lost—Town of Redcliffe Blown Down, Buildings Up-rooted and Several People Injured.

By Special Wire to the Courier. Redcliffe, Alberta, June 26.—Damage estimated at half a million dollars was done here early last evening by a cyclone which wrecked a large part of the town. No lives are known to have been lost. The cyclone seemed to strike the whole town, and in all directions buildings were blown down, roofs lifted, telephone poles blown over and when the storm had subsided the town was almost a total wreck. The most every large building was more or less damaged and a number of private houses wrecked. So far no deaths are reported, but about a dozen people were seriously injured. In one two-story frame building, owned by Mr. Rosin, his mother and brother were caught in the wrecked building and it was with some difficulty the firemen succeeded in getting them out from under the debris. Mrs. Rosin had her collarbone broken and her son suffered a broken leg. Among the most important buildings damaged were the ornamental Iron Works, a planing mill, a cigar factory, Spaulding's warehouse, the Overland Departmental store, the Redcliffe Club, a knitting mill, the Laurel Hotel, the Goodie block, O'Fallen's green house, Crew's block and Dr. Brown's block. All these buildings are three storey brick and in most cases roofs and top storeys are a total wreck. Among the private dwellings damaged were some of the finest in the town. Almost every house in the residential part was more or less badly hit. Some only had the chimneys blown off, while others had their kitchens, porches and verandahs blown away. The private residence of the manager of the Royal Bank, the finest here, had the roof completely blown off, and the city stand-pipe close by, had the top carried 100 yards out onto the prairie. One residence, occupied by Mrs. Ross and two grandchildren, was completely demolished and the old lady had just reached the street a few seconds before the building disappeared. Scarcely any of the smaller buildings are left standing. The streets are literally covered with broken timbers, tin roofing and shingles.

WOUNDED FROM THE RECENT FIGHT, NOW SAFE IN ENGLAND

Heroism of Canadian Lieutenant Who Supported a Machine Gun on His Back While Corporal Fired It.

London, June 26.—A party of 46 wounded Canadians has just arrived at the Duchess of Connaught Hospital, Cliveden, mostly victims of the latest fight in the last week of May. This time they are not quite so badly used up as the men who came through the Ypres engagements. Private D. S. W. Best, of the 1st Battalion of Toronto, had a narrow escape of being shot fatally, as the bullet which struck him lodged in the top of his skull. He is doing well, however. Private Best took part in a big action about the middle of June, in which he thinks the Queen's Own suffered heavily later. Among several of the party who had been poisoned by gas was James Burke, of Vancouver, a member of the Princess Patricia's. Burke had been put hors de combat on May 27. He says the men have a new type of respirator served out, but that they occasionally neglect to use it. All are unanimous in emphasizing the need for high explosives.

STORMING THE TRENCHES. The Canadian Associated Press correspondent has gleaned further particulars of the gallant work achieved by the Western Ontario battalion in last week's fighting. The battalion was subjected to a heavy fire on the left when they went forward and captured for the time being three trenches. The charge was led by Major Smith, the battalion having been reinforced by men from the 101st Edmonton Fusiliers, a number of Edmonton men being among the wounded. If the division on the left had been able to advance with the same rapidity the trenches would undoubtedly have been held, but in the face of the terrific German fire the Canadians were obliged to relinquish them. CHAINED TO GUNS. The first forward movement was made by mine explosions leading to the enemy trench. The dust and

LIEUT. A. BISHOP MENTIONED IN DESPATCHES

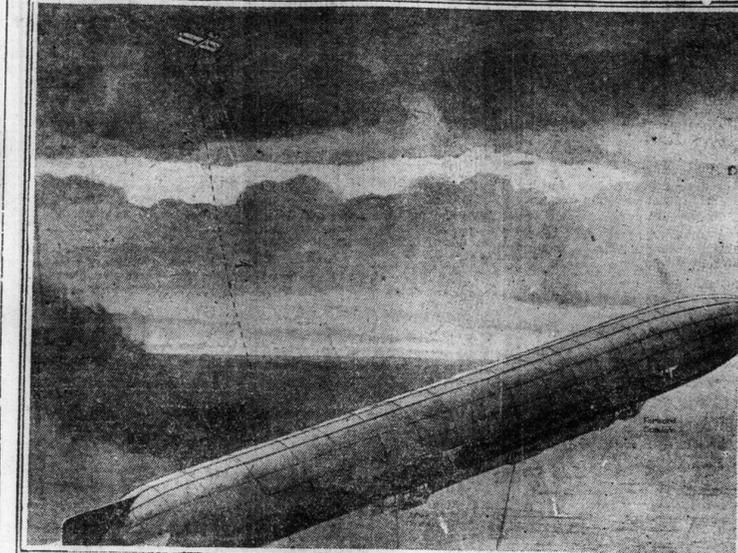

Gallant Officer a Local Boy—Came Under Gen. French's Notice.

The British army list contains the fact that Lieut. Leonard Arthur Bishop of the 2nd Battalion Middlesex Regiment is mentioned in despatches by Field Marshal French for "bravery in action." He has served continuously since November and was wounded at Fromelles on May 9, where he lost his right eye and is now convalescing in London. Not long ago The Courier quoted from The London Times a report of how he had distinguished himself under circumstances of great danger, and it is for this no doubt that he has now received special official mention. Lieut. Bishop is a Brantford boy and son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bishop, St. Paul's Avenue. He was educated at Ridley College, St. Catharines, and at the R.M.C., Kingston, where he resigned his rank of sergeant-major at the outbreak of the war to accept a commission in the Middlesex Regiment. Hosts of Brantford friends will join in hearty congratulations to himself and the family upon the honor which he has not alone earned for himself but also brought upon the place of his birth.

He Cannot Recommend Acceptance

The following letter was received from Manager Todd: A. K. Bunnell, Esq., Brantford, Ontario. Dear Sir—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 23rd inst., advising me that the railway committee of the council at a meeting held the evening of the 22nd, adopted a resolution to the effect that they would recommend the acceptance of $30,000 for the Grand Valley line between Paris and Galt. As I told you at our interview on Monday last, I could not recommend our Company to pay more than $26,000, you to keep the power plant at Galt, which you have charged up in your books at $4,000. I am still of the same opinion, but will pass the proposition on to our board to take any steps they may deem fit, and will advise you at as early a date as possible. Yours truly, MARTIN N. TODD, General Manager. Galt, June 24th, 1915. Western Maryland experts predict a big peach crop this year.

THE FIRST FIGHT BETWEEN AEROPLANES AND A ZEPPELIN

The picture shows how the first bomb from an aeroplane was dropped upon a Zeppelin in actual warfare. The Zeppelin is shown in the front of the picture, proceeding rapidly to the right. In addition to her forward speed she is at the same time rapidly rising at no less a speed than 33 1/2 feet a second. The attacking aeroplane is seen above at a distance of 200 feet, and the dotted lines show the course of the bombs as they were dropped on the big airship. The machine which thus had the honor of first stabbing a Zeppelin in the ribs was not a seaplane—it carried no floats—but was an "Avro" biplane.

HUNS DEFEND USE OF GASES AS QUITE HUMANE

Is no Better or Worse Than Flooding, They Maintain, and Only Requires the Enemy to Withdraw in Order to Avoid its Fumes.

By Special Wire to the Courier. Berlin, June 25.—Via London, June 26.—A semi-official statement has been issued here explaining and defending the German use of asphyxiating gases. The first point made is that the British and French employed such gases before the Germans, and in addition to the earlier statements of the German official war reports concerning such, the statement now cites the text of a communication said to have been issued by the French ministry of war, describing two sorts of projectiles designed to produce a stifling gas and the mode of their usage. This communication is said to have been dated February 21, before the Germans employed gas in their attack upon Ypres. THE PROJECTILES. This circular, which it is claimed emanated from the French war ministry, is headed "Remarks upon projectiles with stifling gases," and says, among other things: "So-called projectiles with stifling gases produced in our central workshop contain a fluid which pours out after explosion, gases which inflame the eyes, nose and throat. There are two sorts thereof—hand grenades and cartridges."

The circular then purports to describe both kinds of the projectiles, remarking "the purpose of the hand grenade is to make the vicinity and place where it is exploded untenable. Its effectiveness is materially decreased by a strong wind. The cartridges are intended for use at a greater distance than the grenades. They can be thrown or fired from a pocket pistol. They have the same purposes as the grenades, but owing to the small amount of fluid, they should be fired in considerable numbers simultaneously." PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES. Under the heading "Precautionary measures to be employed in attacks in which such projectiles with stifling gases are thrown," the circular says the vapors caused by such projectiles will not prove fatal, at least in small quantities and that their effects will be only of temporary duration, depending on atmospheric conditions. The attacking troops, it adds, should be provided with protective glasses and instructed that unpleasant sensations in the nose and throat are not dangerous and will not be permanent. ANOTHER ASSERTION. The German statement refers to alleged reports published in American newspapers that the Lusitania carried 250,000 pounds of tetra-chloride of tin consigned to the French Government and intended for the production of asphyxiating gases. Speaking of alleged efforts to arouse American sympathies against Germany for her use of gas, the statement says the proviso against the use of gas in The Hague convention, adopted against the votes of the American delegates, was added to the protocol of the meeting, that it had not been proven that shells with asphyxiating gases were an inhuman or unnecessarily cruel method of war. Germany finally compares the use of gas with the inundation of fighting areas, instancing the flooding of the region of Neuport by the Belgians some time ago and argues that both methods are equally humane and that an enemy merely needs to withdraw to escape their efforts.

EDITOR OF DAILY MIRROR HAS DIED

Alexander Kinealy, a Distinguished Correspondent.

By Special Wire to the Courier. London, June 26.—Alexander Kinealy, editor of The London Daily Mirror, died to-day at the age of 51 years. Mr. Kinealy, who was born in Sussex, England, devoted all his life to journalism. He joined the staff of The New York Herald in 1883, and represented that paper on Rear Admiral Peary's first Arctic expedition. He became a member of the New York World staff in 1895 and was its correspondent with the American fleet in the Spanish war. Mr. Kinealy began newspaper work in London as news editor of The Daily Express in 1901. Three years later he went with The Daily Mirror. Under the nom de plume of Montagu Vernon Ponsonby he wrote "The Preposterous Yankee," and he also was the author of "The Letters of Alphonse Le Mouton."

SOCIALISTS CALL FOR PEACE IN GERMANY

By Special Wire to the Courier. Berlin, June 26, via London.—The board of directors, or managing committee, of the Social Democratic party in Germany has caused to be published in the Vorwaerts a full-page appeal for peace. This interesting page calls for a peace which will make possible friendships with neighboring nations, and it sets forth most clearly the opposition of the party to territorial conquest and annexation. The people want peace, it declares, and the government is called upon, in the name of humanity, to make known its readiness to enter peace negotiations.

GREATER ACTIVITY EVIDENT

Austrians are Reinforcing Their Armies

Rome, June 25, via Paris, June 26.—The official statement issued to-night at the headquarters of the Italian general staff was as follows: "Our reconnaissances, extended beyond the front in the Tyrol-Trentino region, in Cadore and Carniola, indicate increased activity on the part of the enemy in the work of reinforcing and placing new batteries. We are frustrating this work by the efficacious fire of our artillery and the bold operations of small detachments. "In Carniola on the night of June 24-25, the enemy vainly renewed his attacks against our line from Val Grande to Val Piccolo. "Our operations along the Isonzo are developing methodically in spite of the manifold natural difficulties of the ground and the many artificial obstacles skillfully accumulated for a long period and placed by the enemy. Our infantry, supported by the fire of field and heavy batteries, advances bravely and tenaciously, however. "An Austrian battery which for some days has been disturbing our troops by its fire, causing especially serious damage to villages with injury to their inhabitants was located to-day and became the object of a well directed fire from our artillery. Immediately afterward a large white flag with a red cross was hoisted from a villa near the location of the battery with the evident purpose of deceiving us and stopping our fire.

HAMMER WAY TO WARSAW

Big Guns are Now Being Shipped to Bzura River.

By Special Wire to the Courier. London, June 26.—A Central News despatch from Amsterdam says several trains loaded with heavy guns have left Essen for the German front on the Bzura River in Poland, where it is believed they will be used in an advance against Warsaw. Since the fall of Lebew, military experts in London have expressed the belief that the Austro-German allies would not be content with forcing the Russians beyond the borders of Galicia, but would attempt to continue their terrific drive and capture Warsaw, the capital of Poland. On previous occasions the Germans have hammered their way to a point almost within artillery range of Warsaw, but have been driven back by the forces under the direction of Grand Duke Nicholas. The success of the Teutonic allies in the Galician campaign was due largely to a preponderance of artillery and the expenditure of an overwhelming number of shells. If additional heavy guns have been sent from Essen, where the famous Krupp Works are located, it would seem to indicate an intention to continue in Poland operations of a similar nature.

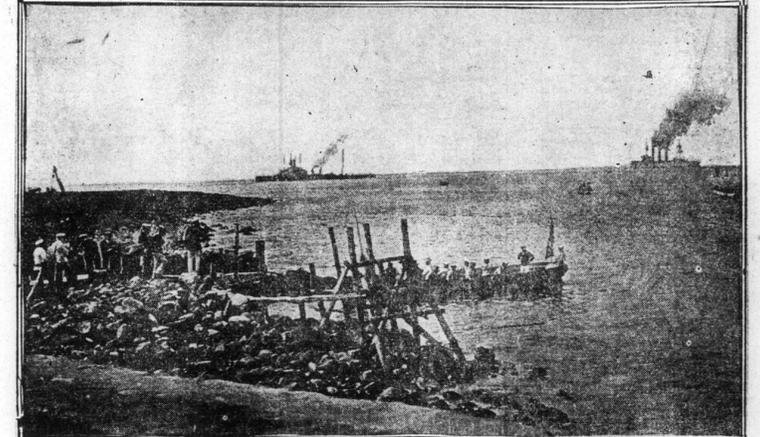

RELEASED PORTLAND

By Special Wire to the Courier. Los Angeles, June 26.—A prize court at Blythe, England, has released the American steamship, Portland, owned by the Globe Grain and Milling Co. of this city, according to word received here to-day by the owners. The vessel with a cargo of barley, beans and dried fruit was en route from San Francisco to Sweden when captured by a British warship.

Ministers Held Farewell Night

Last Monday evening a farewell supper was served in the Y. W. C. A. in honor of Rev. R. R. Hamilton, T. E. Holling and A. I. Snyder, who are leaving the city at the end of the conference year. The supper was most daintily served and was greatly enjoyed by all present. Some fifty-five of the ministers and their wives attended to honor and God-speed their parting guests. The occasion also marked the end of the official year of the Alliance, and Rev. A. E. Lavell, the new president occupied the chair, which was vacated during the evening by the retiring president, Rev. M. Kelly.

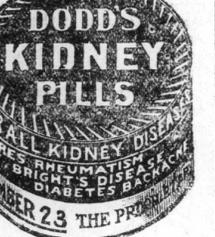

A resolution of appreciation of the guests of the evening was presented and supported by Rev. W. Gordon and Rural Dean Saunders. Rev. A. E. Lavell sang, "Father O'Flynn," and Rev. Mr. Hamilton, and Rev. Mr. Holling sang a duet.

A very pleasant hour was spent. The resolution was as follows: "That we express our appreciation of the Christian character and ministerial ability of Rev. R. D. Hamilton, T. E. Holling and A. I. Snyder, that we gratefully acknowledge from the privilege of their companionship and mention with earnest commendation the splendid influence for good which they have exercised upon this community. We exceedingly regret their departure, and join our prayers for a continuation upon them of the bountiful blessing of God."

WAGE WAR ON THE GRASS-HOPPER. This pest which annually causes much damage to farm crops, will soon make its annual appearance. The life history of the grasshopper, though differing slightly, depending on the species, is briefly as follows. The female, by means of her ovipositor bores a tiny hole in the earth in late summer in which she deposits an egg mass. Each female may deposit from one to four such masses, which usually contain from fifteen to twenty-five eggs. These hatch the following spring when the grasshoppers again appear, the adults usually dying when winter approaches. As these insects have biting mouth parts, and are greedy foragers, they can quite easily be destroyed. The most effective remedy is as follows:

- Bran..... 20 lbs. Molasses..... 1 gal. Water..... About 2 gal. Lemons..... 2 or 3 fruits

Mix thoroughly the bran and Paris green in any large receptacle the night before using. In the morning squeeze the juice of the lemons into the water, run pulp and rind through a meat chopper, add this and also molasses to the water, stir well, then pour the liquid upon the poisoned bran, and mix so thoroughly that every part is moist and will fall like sawdust through the fingers. Apply in the morning between 5 and 7 o'clock by scattering so thinly over the infested field, fence corners and roadsides, that the above amount will cover 4 or 5 acres. Sometimes a second application about three days later is necessary. Use as soon as the pest is abundant. Do not look for results for two or three days. This mixture applied in the evening will also kill cutworms and army worms. For further information write R. Schuyler, Dept. of Agric., Paris.

COMMITTED HARA-KIRI

By Special Wire to the Courier. Tokio, Japan, June 26—Major Makajima and Captain Hashimoto, Japanese officers fighting with the Russian army at Lembing, committed Hara-kiri in the Galician capital, rather than suffer what they considered the dishonor of being made prisoners of war, according to official advices received from Petrograd. Hara-kiri is a Japanese method of committing suicide, formerly widely practiced by military officers. In the days of the old Samurai system, officers usually killed themselves when it became necessary to surrender the troops under them.

A WOMAN IN HYDE PARK

By W. A. Willison

Marble Arch, Hyde Park, June 9, time 9.30 p.m.—Denunciations of the Harmsworth Press, enthusiastic praise of Lord Kitchener, fervent appeals for recruits marked the utterances of the man of the hour. We had heard him before without being thrown into any particular ecstasy of spirit. But to-night he was stirred to the soul—stirred to the point of asking a six foot man in his audience why he did not enlist.

We waited for the answer, it came: "Lloyd George is a liar."

The speaker called the six-footer to the platform, whispered conversation took place. Then the itinerant seeker of recruits announced, in stentorian tones, the reasons which kept the six-footer from enlisting. "He says Lloyd George is a liar and he won't join the army until he is tired out of the Government"—Jeers from the crowd. The big man walked back from the platform, assailed by a multitude of questions. As he walked he argued you only give your men a shilling a day. Your government is made up of men enjoying $20,000 a year. It's robbery. Pay the man in the ranks decently. Until then I won't enlist. Lloyd George is rotten. He didn't get any further. Protesting Tommies defended Kitchener. Voices were heard arguing that as Finance Minister, Lloyd George has done remarkably well.

Now I was with two friends, one a man, the other a woman, young and excitable. She was acing to get in a word for the opportunity came when the six-footer exclaimed dramatically, "What if Stonehenge stand if I fall." The misquotation was too much for the female of the species. Before we say, "What if Stonehenge stand if I fall," I was in the thick of the wordy warfare, "I don't care about your Stonehenge," she declared, "But you're an Englishman. What do you think of Scarborough? With an elaborate bow the six-footer shirker answered the question with a low indignant word concerning Lloyd George. We were men filled with the spirit of compromise, and too self-conscious to invest debate in Hyde Park circles, endeavored to persuade our companion that a haughty departure from the troubled scene would be more becoming than continued speech. Our remonstrance availed nothing.

The flash of a searchlight swept over the park. "Think of the women and babies murdered by enemy aeroplanes, of the sinking of the Falaba, of the Lusitania slaughter. You say, 'What if Stonehenge stand if I fall,' I say 'Who dies if England live?'"

It was a woman's last word. It was a word well spoken. The six-footer had no answer. We succeeded in getting our fair Canadian away from the corner.

But the moral of this is that no two men are a match for any one woman, and that it is not good to take any woman—particularly a Canadian—to Hyde Park in war time.

THE SITUATION.

The Russians are fighting with characteristic desperation along the Dnieper River, and not only holding their own, but advancing at more than one point. Their ability to come back so often demonstrated during this war, is receiving still further confirmation.

It is officially reported that the Italian army has advanced more than thirteen miles into Austrian territory, and their reports are of a reassuring nature, although the hardest portion of their work is now ahead of them.

The French reports indicate that there has not recently been such furious fighting as that of previous days.

Unofficial reports state that Spain is now preparing to enter the war on behalf of the allies, that Roumania will be with them inside of a week, and that Bulgaria and Greece will then be expected to follow suit.

On the Courier's leased wire comes the announcement that the German Socialists in their paper have published a full-page appeal for peace. This may be the commencement of internal trouble in the Fatherland.

STORY OF THE PATRICIAS

The story told in unvarnished terms of what the Patricias have suffered and achieved at the front makes so interesting reading. There is no attempt to enlarge upon the tragic material, but simply a plain recital of facts which show how bravely and unflinchingly these men battled with odds and met with losses beyond compare.

No more thrilling story of unafflicted heroism has ever been told and it is one which will bring a grip to the throat of the average reader.

CHURCHILL'S SPEECH

Elsewhere in this issue there appears in full the first speech delivered by Hon. Winston Churchill after he left the position of First Sea Lord in order to make way in the position for Hon. A. J. Balfour. Churchill is undoubtedly a most brilliant man and also, like his father, Lord Randolph, inclined to be erratic, with a large-sized desire to have his own way at any cost.

His closing words, "We are the grand reserve of the allied cause, and that grand reserve must march forward as one man," will strike a re-echoing chord throughout the Empire.

London Under The War Cloud

London, June 25.—Radical dislike of an arrangement which divides the Government of the country with leaders of the Parliamentary Opposition is developing. The malcontents are not numerically strong or personally important. But their organization is ominous of trouble ahead for the Prime Minister.

LANSDOWNE AND BALFOUR

Another consideration that weighs heavily with Liberals in the House of Commons is the sacrifice of Lord Haldane. It is generally known that it was brought about by the machinations of the band of conspirators who later combined in an effort to drive Lord Kitchener from the War Office. What remains yet to be told is how the Prime Minister, whose fidelity to his friends has been proven through more than nine years of office, was brought to submit to such a condition. Consequent restlessness below the Gangway, whilst temporarily irritating and harmful as buoying up the enemy with hope of serious dissension, is not likely to be a per-turbed fire," he writes, "one boat sank

A CONTRAST IN TREATMENT

President Wilson was made a Union bricklayer by a Washington local, debris assisted in obscuring the Canadians, who advanced shouting, "Gas Devils," which it appears has been agreed upon as the battle-cry. On arrival at the first trench a number of Germans were found chained by the waist and padlocked to the machine guns. "The majority of the Germans had already gone," said an Edmonton man who took part in the engagement, "but some remained, pumping lead into us as long as they could. When we reached them they threw up their hands crying, 'Comrades.'"

RIGHTEOUS INDIGNATION

It is positively flabbergasting to learn that the churches of Germany regard the war as a German religious crusade. The explanation of course is that the explanation of their inspiration from their pastors and the pastors get theirs from Kaiser and the Kaiser gets his from the devil. The Rev. D. J. Brousch, of Bamberg, who is reported to be an influential pastor in the Prussian in the Berlin Reformation entitled "In a Hopeful Struggle." In this he says: "We have the best equipped armies under the ablest leaders, under the leadership of the best of Emperors; and above all we have a good conscience and the certainty that we are in the hands of a Righteous and just Judge."

LEAVING THE ARSENAL

Philadelphia, June 25.—Scores of skilled workmen are leaving the arsenal of the government arsenal at Frankford to accept positions with private concerns, who are supplying orders for munitions of war for the European belligerents. For the first time in years the arsenal is suffering from a shortage of employes, and officials fear the situation may become serious. Twenty men in the machine shops and 25 in the fuse department resigned yesterday. A number of others gave up their positions last week, and it was said that nearly every department has been more or less affected. The defections have occurred not only among the workmen, but among officials as well. The men declare they have been given three year contracts with the private firms at wages far in excess of those paid by the government.

debris assisted in obscuring the Canadians, who advanced shouting, "Gas Devils," which it appears has been agreed upon as the battle-cry. On arrival at the first trench a number of Germans were found chained by the waist and padlocked to the machine guns. "The majority of the Germans had already gone," said an Edmonton man who took part in the engagement, "but some remained, pumping lead into us as long as they could. When we reached them they threw up their hands crying, 'Comrades.'"

LEAVING THE ARSENAL

Philadelphia, June 25.—Scores of skilled workmen are leaving the arsenal of the government arsenal at Frankford to accept positions with private concerns, who are supplying orders for munitions of war for the European belligerents. For the first time in years the arsenal is suffering from a shortage of employes, and officials fear the situation may become serious. Twenty men in the machine shops and 25 in the fuse department resigned yesterday. A number of others gave up their positions last week, and it was said that nearly every department has been more or less affected. The defections have occurred not only among the workmen, but among officials as well. The men declare they have been given three year contracts with the private firms at wages far in excess of those paid by the government.

A SHORT MIX-UP

Directly after the game, a short mix-up was staged between a local man and a St. Thomas visitor. It appeared that the visitor had lost money on the game, and was considerably peeved about it. He insulted a Brantfordite who wouldn't stand for it, and a scrap ensued, and the Saint's one got a cut lip. Umpire Deneau stopped the mimic war.

BEAVERS V. BRANTS

The game played yesterday between the Beavers and Brants was a good one up to the seventh inning. Both teams, especially the young Brants, played good ball up to that time. Then the Beavers forged ahead and at the end of the ninth had brought the score up to 12-7 in their favor. Fleming's arm became weak after the 7th, and perhaps accounted for the score. It was the first time his arm has weakened and he allowed three walks yesterday, a thing he has never done before. The batteries were: Beavers—Simmons, Stewart; Brants—Fleming and Robbins. Umpires, Rutherford and Harley.

OLD WORLD NEWS

A deer which had evidently escaped from some park, jumped through the window of a private house in Hither Green Lane, Lewisham, early the other morning, and before it could be secured the animal did considerable damage. Chairs and tables were smashed, and a good deal of glass and china was broken to atoms. The police were notified, and after barricading the window a police sergeant and a constable and two other men entered the room. The animal appeared to be absolutely mad with fright, and dashed about the room, kicking out at its would-be captors, who had narrow escapes before they were able to secure it with a rope.

Breezy Letter From Pte. Prouse to His Brother

The following breezy epistle comes from Pte. Arthur Prouse, to his brother, Mr. Geo. Prouse, 262 Darling street. It is a bit of realism that will amuse Brantfordites.

Dear Brother, While being in the hospital, I thought I would drop you a few lines to let you know I am getting along nicely. I have been in the trenches to try to do my little bit. I was there going on my fifth day when I had to leave, owing to having my arm grazed by a piece of shrapnel and my nerves breaking down. Tell you, kid, it certainly is a living hell, and the Canadians are losing pretty heavily, but the Germans look when they see us after them. After we left the place where we were stationed till the draft for the trenches, we travelled on the train all night and part of the next day, and when we got off the train at this little station there were Canadian lorries took us up within eight miles of the firing line, and we got off and we marched with all our kit, blankets, ammunition and rifles. My load that I carried was 100 pounds if not more, and the officers we had lost us. God knows where we were, for I tell you what, we marched mostly all that night, and it seemed a hundred miles to us, and we at last got up to a farm house and we slept in the barns from about 2 o'clock until daylight. Then we fell in and marched until we found a guide to lead us to the brigade headquarters staff, and before we got there we marched until about four o'clock that afternoon. Then one of the staff took us to the road that led us to the trenches and met the other part of the Canadians, and then we all marched on the first line. That's the nearest trenches to the Germans. I was on sentry the first hour we were in, and I was on about 15 minutes when a sniper was after me. The first two shots went past my ears, pretty near getting me, and the third took off my hat over the parapet. It is the same one I had when I was home, so I have no other now but my Ballacava. But I will get another when I get out of the hospital. Well, the next day we were bombed pretty heavily, but we lost few, so when they stopped, our artillery did give it to them. It was awful the way they got it, and our artillery kept it up all night. About the middle of the night, a wounded German crawled into our trenches, and he said it was awful the men they lost. That night, the 8th Highlanders and the 9th Battalion made a great charge, and it happened to be the Prussian army guards they were up against. You know they are the flower of the German army. But they won't show fight any better than the rest. It is only an odd German that will stick it in a bayonet charge. The rest either get on their knees for mercy, or else run like the devil. Well, they took a big orchard and house full of machine guns, but we lost pretty heavy taking it. But you ought to have seen the way the German dead was piled up around there; you would have thought it a slaughter house. That night was certainly full of excitement. There was a little short Canadian. I don't believe he was more than 5ft. 2in., and he saw a big fat Prussian when we were charging, and he said "Watch me get this big fat devil hat!" He left our ranks, and went right after him and when he was about 12 feet away from the German, the German got on his hands and knees for mercy.

Well, kid, when we got in the trenches there was dead up to two and three feet deep and their helmets were strewn along the trenches with wires attached to them, that led to the mine to blow us up, but we got wise and cut them. I had a German and a Prussian helmet and they were dandies. I also had a Prussian bayonet and belt, but I left them behind when coming out of the trench in a hurry. I meant to have sent them home, but I will get another when I go back, for I will try hard. I will bring the scalp and all, ha! ha! Guess by the time you receive this letter I will be in the firing line again; but for my part I don't want to see any more. Well, I have said more to say this time, so I guess I will have to close now. Keep a sharp look out for the 8th Batt. casualty list of the Canadians. Hope this will find you well, also the rest of the home. Best wishes to Mrs. Bowers and their family. With best love to all. Bye-bye. From your loving brother

Special Service Was Held in the Zion Church

Rev. G. A. Woodside conducted a special service in his church last evening; a preparatory service to communion Sunday. His remarks were based on the tragedy of the indistinct life. The speaker pointed out that the ordinary business man is continually studying his business, trying to find and analyse its weak points. If people should study their religion more and find out the places which were unfamiliar to them, this country would be greatly improved. Our religious life lacks seriousness; it lacks the outward manifestation of seriousness. But by seriousness, having long faces all the time is not what is meant. A man's heart is mirthful and free as he stands calmly in God. It is not right for people to think that when they become Christians, all pleasures must cease. People should ask themselves positively what the distinctive feature of their faith is in Jesus Christ. Because our Christian life lacks the distinctive feature, Life under Billy Sunday is a distinctive one. It is hard to-day to distinguish a church member and church-goer, from a non-church member. It is hard to distinguish a Christian man from a non-Christian man. Christian life of many consists merely in going to church.

Consider the huge effort that is being put forth by the whole of the nation for the stability and success of the British Empire. There is no doubt about this effort, being correct in every detail, but if all this energy is expended in the establishment of a worldly empire, which is bound to pass away in time, how much better it would be if we directed all our life, zeal and energy in establishing a place for ourselves in the eternal world. It is impossible for any man to follow God, who sacrificed his life for lowly men, unless that man also lays down his life as a real Christ. Our general interpretation of the religious life is, generally speaking, a favor towards Almighty God. This interpretation should be changed, and we should consider it a favor to ourselves, the nation will not be a great one. This is the opportunity which has given us and we should grasp it.

Our Christianity lacks the reality, which it should possess. It is because Christ was a real Christ that we are here to-day, and we should try to develop that reality.

SUSPECT IS ARRESTED IN DYNAMITE CASE

Night Watchman of Factory at Ford Being Held by the Police.

Windsor, June 26.—While Chief of Police Morand, or Ford, was making investigations early this morning in connection with the attempt to blow up the Peabody factory at Walkerville he discovered 60 sticks of dynamite hidden among weeds at the rear of the Gramm motor truck factory, Walker Road. Shortly after the discovery William Lafler, 45 years old, was arrested at the plant of the Tate Electric Auto Company, Ford. He was employed there as a watchman, and said he lived in Detroit, but refused to give the police his address. Lafler has been employed in Ford for some months. He declared he was a Canadian of Dutch parentage. The police gave this statement little credence, because he speaks with a strong German accent, and declines to say anything about himself. It is the belief of the police that the dynamite found by Chief Morand was not placed near the Gramm factory with the intent of destroying it, but with the idea of hiding it until it was wanted.

The markings on the wrappers of the explosive found yesterday correspond with those found at the Windsor armories Monday, and the police are emphatic in their declaration that it was manufactured in or near Detroit. Although they would not admit it definitely, the police hint that the dynamite was purchased in the vicinity of Wyandotte, a suburb of Detroit, and taken across to the Canadian side in a gasoline launch.

Extraordinary precautions are being taken at all factories in Windsor and adjacent towns. Oliver J. Wilcox, M.P. for North Essex, declared yesterday afternoon that the situation was becoming serious. "I know that the Government intends to take every precaution to prevent a recurrence of the outrages perpetrated early Monday morning," he said. "I do not know whether a guard will be placed along the river, but it is certain that Windsor and other towns must be given protection." Reeve Charles Montrail, of Ford, was very emphatic in his declaration that the Government should at once recruit a guard to patrol the river. "We are not worrying about trouble from sane people in Detroit," he said,

"but there is danger from fanatics, and we should guard against attempts by that class of men."

ILLUSTRATED WAR ISSUE SHOWS FORD CARS ACTIVE AT THE FRONT

Ford, Ont., June 26, 1915.—A special war issue, handsomely illustrated in colors, has just been published by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, in place of the regular June issue of the Ford Times, and the book is attracting wide attention all over the Dominion, where it has been circulated. Fifty thousand copies were printed to cover the regular issue of Times readers, but the special edition has made such a hit that the company is making arrangements to print a second edition. By way of contrast it may be added that the largest other magazine circulation in Canada is figured at 40,000.

Every British colony which sent an expeditionary force to the battle front in Europe carried with it an equipment of Canadian-made Ford cars. The machines are working mainly in Red Cross and rescue work; and being light and so easy to handle, they are proving exceedingly useful under all sorts and conditions in connection with the field hospitals.

The contingents from Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, East Africa, Hong Kong, and many smaller places all carried along with them a number of Ford cars. Some of these were purchased by the respective governments, some were bought and donated by private citizens, and a few were given gratis by Ford dealers and distributors. Nearly a hundred men from the factory and branches of the Ford Company left with the Canadian contingents as officers, privates, hospital men, chauffeurs and engineers, and a few of them have died for their King and country. Several hundred Ford employes in England are at the front. Material and photographs for the war issue were obtained from every British colony, and in fact from all the continents of the world except South America. Some of the articles were written by the Ford boys at the front while under fire. In view of the fact that the Ford is vastly in the majority among the motor driven vehicles in this "gasoline war," there was an abundance of interesting material.

Triumph of Ships

What sixty or seventy years ago would have been regarded as a miracle is being performed before our eyes, writes Archibald Hurd in the London Telegraph. How surprised Lord Palmerston and the soldiers and sailors of the middle of last century, whose minds were obsessed with the superiority of forts over ships, would be at the success of the Anglo-French squadron under Vice-Admiral Sackville Carden in destroying all the outer forts of the Dardanelles after only a few days' bombardment, and with hardly any losses on the side of the Allies.

The forts defending the narrow entrance to the Dardanelles have been carried and mainly by the fire of obsolescent and obsolete battleships. These fortifications were well placed and they mounted fourteen big guns—10 2 and 9 2 in guns—besides smaller weapons. They were believed to be modern—the best, so it was said, that Krupp could manufacture. These fortifications contained only four ships laid down in the present century—the Triumph, small and lightly armed and armored, the Agamemnon, the Dreadnought battleship cruiser Inflexible, and the Dread-nought battleship Queen Elizabeth.
In the main, old ships with guns, which, far from representing the last word in naval ordnance, fired at forts with, so far as is known, comparatively new guns and as well protected as they could be. At any rate these outer defences had always been considered impregnable.

The consideration which has usually been rather overlooked is that in the Dardanelles the belief in forts took root, the ships were not very different from those which fought at Trafalgar, and many changes have since occurred. The development of men of war, the improvement of the steam engine, and the comparative lightness of the modern high-powered wire-wound gun has changed the conditions. In land warfare mechanical science has added immensely to the power of the defensive, and the conditions on the continent continually remind us, but whenever naval power, strong and mobile, can be employed, there are now good chances of success. Why? It was an axiom of the olden time that the power of which could be carried afloat was limited, whereas the weight bearing capacity of a fortress was practically unrestricted.

That is still true. But during the recent competition between the Dardanelles and the British and French Admiralties could spare from their powerful fleets, represents a remarkable triumph. This work is being carried out without weakening to any appreciable extent the "containing" forces in the North Sea and Adriatic. The Inflexible was in the South Atlantic; the Queen Elizabeth has only just been completed. The other ships are pre-Dreadnoughts—
the Majestic over twenty years old.
The watch and war over the main fleets of Germany and Austria-Hungary still continues to be maintained, and with ships which could easily be sprung into service, the effort is out in the Dardanelles against the obiter dicta of many students of war which will completely change the naval and military situation in Europe.

Baseball

Three thousand soldiers and others were the guests of the London club yesterday and witnessed the Canadian League game between London and Guelph. Which the home team won, 5 to 2.

The Toronto Leafs moved up yesterday from seventh place to fifth.
Rochester and Richmond slipped from fourth to sixth and fifth to seventh, respectively. Clymer says that once the Leafs reach the .500 mark they will immediately set out for the top.

Weaver's single and Eddie Collins' double with two out in the nineteenth inning gave Chicago a victory over Cleveland yesterday, the White Sox's sixth straight win from Cleveland.

BURRILL SAVED GAME FOR BRANTS IN EIGHTH

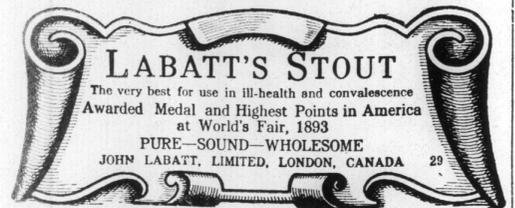

IVERS' FINE HITTING WAS A FEATURE OF GAME—SCORE JUST REVERSE OF THURSDAY'S—DOUGLAS OF SAINTS REPLACED BY RILEY IN SECOND—KOPP WAS AGAIN FAST IN BASE-RUNNING.

The score was just reversed from what it was on Thursday, but this time in favor of the Brants. At the end of the third innings, the score was two nothing for Brantford, but in the fourth and fifth frames the Saints tied the score. No runs were scored until the Brants' eighth, when Mullen brought in one. The Saints failed to tie in their last innings, so the score ended 3-2 for the Brants. The game was a rather mixed up affair, as far as St. Thomas was concerned. Manager Stewart pulled Douglas out of the box in the middle of the second innings, and Riley occupied the mound for the rest of the game. Also in the second, Catcher Harris injured a finger and had to be replaced by Inker, who had been playing in right field. Then Howick was put out to take care of the position inker had vacated. No changes were made by the Brants during the game, although before it started, Foran was called in from right and Dunn sent out. This change was probably made because Foran could not hit a southpaw with anything like regularity. It was not thought that Douglas would be hooked in the second, though. "Gabby" Ivers did the most hitting, for in three times at bat, he made a double and single. Both of these were very well placed, and both were rapped to the same spot, between centre and right field. He drove the ball out over the second baseman's head, right out to the fence the first time and very near the fence the next. His double in the third allowed Cooper to score, and his single in the eighth made the winning run of the game possible. It was Mullen who brought in this run. He had made the initial sack by being hit by a pitched ball, and when Cooper sacrificed, he made second. Then Gabby's single allowed

Plucky Footballer Died Bravely

An English artilleryman, who before the war was a professional footballer in the North of England, has died in hospital after the amputation of both legs. Up to the end he chatted with visitors, one of them a well-known football trainer, and the other a scion of a noble English house famous for the part it has played in the turf life of Great Britain. The dying man, who in his time had been a great centre forward, told them he did not care to live without his legs, while all the other "boys" were out playing, but declared he would not have missed the excitement of the last battle for anything. He took a cigar, and then said: "Have you any newspapers with you? I should like a glance over the football news before I pass out." Death took place at the moment when a Belgian vocalist was singing, and almost with his last breath the footballer criticized the singer for not giving the patients "a bit of ragtime or Harry Lauder."

HOW "PRINCESS PATRICIA'S OWN" HAVE FOUGHT AND DIED FOR THE EMPIRE AND CANADA

Sir Max Aitken's Simple Narrative of an Undying Series of Events in Which Canadians Participated With Glory and Honor.

General Headquarters of the British Army in France, June 22, 1914. London—"Few, indeed, are left of the men who met in Lansdowne Park, Ottawa, to receive the regimental colors nearly a year ago, but those who survive and the friends of those who have died may draw solace from the thought that, never in the history of arms have soldiers more valiantly sustained the gift and trust of a lady."

In this manner, Sir Max Aitken, the Canadian record officer serving with the army in France, concludes a thrilling account of the exploits of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, who, prior to their departure for the front were presented with regimental colors worked by the hands of Her Royal Highness the Princess Patricia, daughter of their Royal Highnesses, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught after whom the valorous regiment was named.

DEPARTURE FROM OTTAWA.

On Sunday, August 23rd, 1914, on a gray and gloomy day immense numbers of people assembled in Lansdowne Park, in the city of Ottawa, to attend Divine service with the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, and to witness the presentation of the colors which Princess Patricia had worked with her own hands. The regiment, composed largely of South African veterans and reservists, paraded with bands and pipers, and then formed three sides of a square in front of the grand stand between the regiment and the stand were the Duchess of Connaught, Princess Patricia and the ladies-in-waiting. The Princess Patricia, in presenting the colors to Col. Farquhar, the commanding officer of the regiment, said: "I have great pleasure in presenting you with these colors, which I have worked myself. I hope they will be associated with what I believe will be a distinguished corps, I shall follow the fortunes of you all with deepest interest, and I heartily wish every man good luck and a safe return."

Not even the good wishes of this beautiful and gracious princess have availed to safeguard the lives of the ground to be traversed was short enough for the sappers, the nearest point being only 15 yards from the Canadian trench. The attacking party rushed this space and threw themselves into the sap. Corp. Ross, who was first there, was killed immediately. Lieut. Crabbe then led the detachment down the trench, while Lt. Papineau ran down the outside of the parapet throwing bombs into the trench. Lieut. Crabbe made his way through the trench followed by his men until his progress was arrested by a barrier which the Germans had constructed.

ST. ELOI MOUND

While it was in this position, reports were received in large numbers towards the eastern end of Voormezele. The battalion, therefore, as a precaution against surprise, detailed a company of the battalion to occupy the position on the hill in front of the Voormezele-Costavern Road. The actual situation in the front line was still obscure. It was known that the mound and certain trenches to the west of the Voormezele were held by the Germans. It was also known that towards the east we had lost certain trenches known to our intelligence staff as "P" and "A."

It was uncertain whether the trench was still held by our troops. It was decided in a matter of minutes that the trench was to be proceeded towards a certain easily recognized objective. This course at least promised information, for if the trench was still held by our troops, that battalion would at once be heavily attacked. If it was still intact, the battalion would, it was hoped, cover the commencement of an assault along the German line against the trench.

MAJOR GAULT WOUNDED

About 7 a.m. Major Gault, who had sustained his men by his coolness and example, was severely hit by a shell in the left arm and thigh. It was impossible to move him and he lay in the trench, as did any of his wounded companions, in great anguish, but without a murmur, for over ten hours. The command was taken over by Lieut. Niven, the next senior officer, who still held a piece of stretcher.

COULD NOT BE FORCED

It was ascertained in St. Eloi that trench "A" had been retaken by British troops. This knowledge modified the plan provisionally adopted. The battalion altered its objective from that principally taken to the breastwork 200 yards to the west of it. The point was reached about 20 minutes before daylight, and the trench was immediately organized by No. 2 company against trench "P." Approaching it from the back of trench "A," the attack was made in three parties. The advance was made with coolness and resolution, but the attackers were met by heavy machine gun fire from the mound. No soldiers in the world could have forced their way through, for the fire swept every thing before it.

It was clear that no hope of a surprise existed, and to have spent another company upon reinforcements would have been a useless and bloody sacrifice. Three platoons were therefore detailed to the right of the breastworks in immediate proximity to the mound and the rest of the battalion was withdrawn to Voormezele, reaching Dikchesh about 8 a.m.

COL. FARQUHAR'S DEATH

On March 20, the battalion sustained a severe loss in the death by a stray bullet of its commanding officer, Col. Farquhar. He had been formerly military secretary to the Duke of Connaught. This distinguished officer had done more for the battalion than it would be possible in a short article to record. A strict disciplinarian, he was nevertheless deeply beloved in an army not always patient of discipline. Tacitly asserted; he was always cheerful, always unflinching and always resourceful. Lieut.-Col. Buller succeeded him in command of the regiment.

IN SECOND YPRES BATTLE

The battalion presently moved into billets in the neighborhood of Ypres, Belgium, during the heavy and bombardment of that unhappy town, which preceded the immortal stand of the Canadian division, it was ordered to leave billets, and on the evening of that day moved once again into the trenches. From April 21 and through the following days of the second Battle of Ypres, the regiment remained in trenches some distance south and west of the trenches occupied by the Canadian division. They were constantly shelled with varying intensity and all through those critical days waited, with ever-growing impatience, for the order that never came to take part in the battle north where their kinsmen were undergoing so cruel an ordeal.

On May 3rd, after the modification of the line to the north, the battalion was ordered to withdraw to a subsidiary line some distance in the rear. From 8 o'clock in the evening until midnight small parties were silently withdrawn until at midnight the trenches were held with a rear-guard of fifteen men commanded by Lieut. Lane. Rapid fire was maintained for more than an hour and the rear-guard then withdrawn without casualties.

On May 4th the regiment occupied the trench. On the morning of that day a strong enemy attack developed. This was repulsed with considerable loss to the assailants, and was followed throughout the day, by a heavy bombardment which demolished several of the trenches. At night the regiment was relieved by the King's Shropshire Light Infantry and withdrawn to reserve trenches.

COL. BULLER WOUNDED

In this unhealthy neighborhood no place by this time was safe, and on the fifth of May Lt. Col. Buller was unfortunately enough to lose an eye by the splinter of a shell which exploded 100 yards away. Major Gault arrived during the day and took over command. The battalion was still in high spirits and cheered the arrival of an officer to whom all ranks were attached.

Just after dark on the night of May 6th the battalion returned to the trenches and relieved the King's Shropshire Light Infantry.

Throughout the night and the following day it was assailed by a constant and heavy bombardment. The roll on the night of the 7th showed the strength of the battalion as 635. The day that followed was at once the most critical and the most costly in the history of the battalion. Early in the morning particularly heavy shelling began on the right flank, soon engulfing the trenches. At 5.30 it grew in intensity and gas shells began to fall. At the same time a number of Germans were observed coming out of the trench. This movement was arrested by a heavy rifle fire. By 6 a.m. every telephone wire, both to the brigade headquarters and also to the trenches had been cut. All signallers, platoon sergeants and servants were ordered into the support trenches, for the needs of the moment left no place for supernumeraries, every single Canadian upon the strength was from that time forward in one or other of the trenches. A short and fierce struggle decided the issue for the time being, the advance of the Germans was checked and those of the enemy who were not either shelled or killed, dead or wounded, crawled back over the crest of the bridge to their own trenches. By this time the enemy had two, and perhaps three, machine guns in adjacent buildings and were sweeping the parapets of both fire and support trenches.

An orderly took a note to brigade headquarters, informing exactly of the situation of the battalion.

On May 4th the regiment occupied the trench. On the morning of that day a strong enemy attack developed. This was repulsed with considerable loss to the assailants, and was followed throughout the day, by a heavy bombardment which demolished several of the trenches. At night the work was most dangerous, for the ground which had to be covered was continually and most heavily shelled. From 12 to 1.30 p.m. the battalion held on under the most desperate difficulties, until a detachment of the Rifle Brigade was sent up in reinforcements.

FRENCH IN NEED

The battered defenders of the support trenches recognized old friends coming to their aid, in their moment of extreme trial and gave them a loud cheer as they advanced in support. Lieut. Niven placed them upon the extreme right, in order to protect the battalion flank. They remained in line with the Canadian support trenches, protected by trees and hedges. They also sent a machine gun section, which rendered invaluable service.

At 2 p.m. Lieut. Niven went with an orderly to the headquarters, in obedience to brigade orders, to telephone to the general officer commanding the brigade, complete details of the situation. He returned at 2.30 p.m. The orderlies who accompanied him both going and coming were hit by high explosive shells. At 3 p.m. a detachment of the King's Shropshire Light Infantry, who were also comrades-in-arms of the Princess Pats, reached the support line with twenty boxes of small arms ammunition. These were distributed into line as a reinforcement, occupying the left end of the support trench.

A FIFTY-YARD GAP

At 4 o'clock the support trenches were inspected, and it was found that contact was no longer maintained with the regiment on the left, the gap extending for 100 yards. A few men (as many as could be spared) were placed in the gap to do the best they could. Shortly afterwards news was brought that battalions on the left had been compelled to withdraw, after a stubborn resistance, to a line of trenches a short distance in the rear.

At this moment the Germans made their third and last attack. It was arrested by rifle fire, although some individuals penetrated into the fire trenches on the right. At this point all the Princess Patricias had been killed, so that this part of the trench was actually tenanted. Those who established a footing were few in number and they were gradually dislodged and so the third and last attack was routed as successfully as those which had preceded it.

The afternoon dragged on, the rate of casualties constantly growing. At 10 o'clock at night the company commanders being all dead or wounded, Lieut. Niven and Papineau took a roll call. It disclosed a strength of 150 rifles and some stretcher bearers.

At 11.30 at night the battalion was relieved by the King's Royal Rifle Corps. The relieving unit helped those whom they replaced in this last sorrowful duty of burying these of their dead, who lay in the support and communicating trenches. Behind the damaged trenches by the light of the German flames and amid the heaving and rattling of musketry, the last service which one soldier can render another.

ALL THAT WAS LEFT OF THEM

Beside the open graves, with heads uncovered, all that was left of the regiment stood while Lieut. Niven, holding the colors of the Princess Patricia, battered, bloody, but still intact, tightly in his hand, recalled all he could remember of the Church of England service for the dead. Long after the service was over the remnant of the battalion stood in solemn reverie, unable, it seemed, to leave their comrades until the colonel of the Third King's Royal Rifle Corps gave them positive orders to retire. When, led by Lieut. Papineau, they marched back 150 strong, to reserve trenches.

In the evening of the 10th the battalion furnished a carrying party of fifty men and one officer for small arms and ammunition; and delivered twenty-five boxes at Bellewaerde, where the Rifle Brigade, their old and trusty comrades in arms, was being desperately pressed. Asked to go to the relief the Princess Pats formed a composite battalion with the King's Royal Rifle Corps and successfully made the last exertion which was asked of them at this period of the war.

THEIR LAST EXERTION

On May 13 the regiment was in bivouac at the rear. The news arrived that the last exertion which was being desperately pressed. Asked to go to the relief the Princess Pats formed a composite battalion with the King's Royal Rifle Corps and successfully made the last exertion which was asked of them at this period of the war.

NERVE-RACKED CHILDREN

Made Bright and Well by Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

Used to Scream Terribly for no reason whatever.

Just a bundle of Nerves.

Weak, Wasting away, and Digestive Troubles.

Thought she could never recover.

Now cured and happy through DR. CASSELL'S TABLETS.

Canadian mothers of little weak or nervous children should read the testimony to Dr. Cassell's Tablets, given out of a simple gratitude by Mrs. Worrall, 32, Alfreestone, Liverpool, England. She writes: "I have seen what a valuable health-bringer they have in this great remedy. My little girl, Gladys, was quite cured of her little girl's troubles, of extreme nervousness and digestive troubles, and I think it only fair to you should publish the story for the benefit of other mothers whose children may be delicate. Gladys began to ill when she was only two years old, and steadily grew weaker, though we did all we could to get her well. She was very peevish, and cried dreadfully. Sometimes she would scream for no reason at all that we could discover, and nothing would pacify her but just a little of the story of nerves. Her appetite was very poor, and naturally she got quite thin and weak, and her little cheeks fell in dreadfully. We indeed she hardly ate anything, and seemed just wasting away. We tried a lot of different things that did no good at all. Then we had advice and treatment for Gladys, but that, too, was of very little use. We were told she was suffering from nervous headache, and was almost at once she relapsed into the old weak state. For four years this had gone on, and which caused the poor little thing terrible pain. He cried a lot, and his sleep was very disturbed. He would wake up suddenly with violent attacks of sickness, and evidently in great pain, and I was at his side to know what to do. Poor baby had wasted until he was only a frame of bones, and he looked almost as though he would fall to pieces. He was so appealingly thin. We could do nothing but just a little of the story of nerves. Her appetite was very poor, and naturally she got quite thin and weak, and her little cheeks fell in dreadfully. We indeed she hardly ate anything, and seemed just wasting away. We tried a lot of different things that did no good at all. Then we had advice and treatment for Gladys, but that, too, was of very little use. We were told she was suffering from nervous headache, and was almost at once she relapsed into the old weak state. For four years this had gone on, and the child was as far from health as ever. In fact, she was so ill that we thought she could never recover. One day, however, I was advised to give her Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and then, what an improvement! The child became stronger and not nearly so nervous. Her appetite returned, she brightened up wonderfully, and rapidly put on flesh. Now, in her twentieth year, she is completely cured, and goes to school, and is just as well and happy as any child could be.

A SUNDAY SERMON BY PASTOR RUSSELL

SAVING OF CHRIST AND HIS BRETHREN

Those Who Truly Belong to the Lord Are Brethren of Christ.

God Desires Sincerity of Heart—Repentance an Evidence of Honesty—Consecration of Life a Further Evidence—How We Become Brethren of Christ—Walking in His Steps—Careful Training—Bestowed Upon the Members of God's Family—Transformation Work—Character-Likeness to Our Elder Brother, the Lord Jesus.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Denver, Colo., June 20.—Pastor Russell is here to-day. We remember his name from the text, "He that despiseth you despiseth Me; and he that despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me." (Luke 10:16.) He said in part:

By nature we are all children of wrath; sinners under sentence of death. God indeed tells us that He purposes to bless the world and by, through the great mediatorial Kingdom that will rule the world for a thousand years, to help mankind up out of degradation, sin and death, to full perfection of human nature; and that He has appointed Jesus Christ to be the Mediator between Himself and the world during those thousand years. Meantime, He has also purposed to take out of the world some who will have the same mind as was in Christ Jesus, and to associate this class with our Lord in the work of blessing the world. Jesus Himself will be the Head over this company, and they will be the Body of Christ. Whoever desires to become a member of this Body which God is selecting must comply with the required conditions. Evidently the one quality for which God is looking is honesty, sincerity; He desires really true and really loyal hearts. One might be very careful to keep his lips from making oaths, and yet not be strictly and thoroughly honest. He might overestimate himself and underestimate others. Some people are born with an honest disposition. All whom God is now receiving are of this honest-hearted kind. If He has thus favored us with the Truth, it is for us to maintain this honesty; for unless honesty enters into the affairs of life, it will be impossible to maintain our relationship with the Lord.

We cannot be too careful with our conscience; we cannot be too honest. We cannot think of the Lord Jesus as being dishonest or as being as giving misinformation. Therefore it is evident that they did not believe in Hell fire and eternal torment; for we cannot think that they would have omitted preaching about eternal torment if they had believed it. We love to think of St. Paul as being honest men, in favor with God.

There is a tendency on the part of all mankind to say, "I am all right." But whoever who is not an honest man, who is not a sincere, righteous, no, not one. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God.—about that glorious condition which God approved when He created our first parents. As who-ever associates with cultured people is sure to absorb their ways, no matter what the nature of the culture in which he has been brought up, so whoever is associated with the Lord Jesus Christ is sure to be blessed.

The point we desire to make is that whoever who is in company with God must be right in heart. No matter how imperfect that person may be by nature, there is something right about him; else God would never have recognized him as being a member of His Body. No man ever received you received Me, and whosoever despiseth Me, despiseth Him that sent Me.

Whoever who is in company with the flesh—the flesh of His consecrated members; and the world still despises Him as at first and as He foretold, saying, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you; if ye were of the world, the world would love its own." (John 15:18, 19.) The world is still ashamed of Christ, nominal Christians, nominal spiritual Christians, are ashamed of Him to-day, as were the Natural Israelites eighteen centuries ago.

When we consider that our Lord is represented in the flesh by the members of His Body, in the flesh, we see that love for the brethren means love for the Lord. Hence the Apostle declares that love of the brethren is one of the great tests of our relationship to our Lord and to the Father. "He who loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God, whom he hath not seen?" (1 John 4:20.) "Love one another as I have loved you," is therefore the recognized test of discipleship; and whosoever is ashamed of the brethren who counts all his younger brethren as himself.

It did not take our Lord long to count the cost; for He had such a high appreciation of the privilege that He delighted to give Himself to God. He manifested loyalty to that concern throughout His life-time, even unto the death of the Cross. "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him and given Him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."—Philippians 2:9, 10.

The Church are to be joint-heirs with Christ. "If we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him. If we be dead with Him, we shall live with Him." (2 Timothy 2:11, 12.) It is no wonder that there are terms attached to so high a calling! These terms we have in Jesus own words: "If any man will take up his cross and follow Me."—Matthew 16:24.

The first step is to will to be Christ's disciple. The next step is to deny himself—to give up his own will and to take the Lord's will instead of his own. The will represents the man. If we deny ourselves, if we give up our own will, it carries everything else with it. We possess. But do not give up your will to anybody except the Lord. This does not mean that we shall not be considerate of others and not try to shield to others. The people of God should be ready to favor our preferences in matters of no importance. But it is another thing to give over what we shall think and what we shall do. Whoever does so would not thereafter have control of his body.

This is exactly what the evil spirits endeavor to have us do. They desire to get control of the human will, and thus to have control over the human mind. But if a person becomes a possessor, the evil spirits get control of his mind and he cannot think for himself, because his will is gone. This is also true of a person who has come under the power of hypnotism. But it is not the will of the members of that Body must give up their wills to their Head. The Spirit of the Head, the mind of Christ, must operate in every member.

From the time one becomes a member of the family of God, a great work of transformation is in progress. As members of the Adamic race all are imperfect—mentally, morally and physically. But those who are in the condition and are honest about the matter come meekly to the Lord and accept the riches of His grace in Christ Jesus. When they receive their change in the glorious First Resurrection there will be nothing ignoble about them, as there is now. Just as surely as they are seeking to know and to do the will of the Lord, they will be transformed into the image of His Son, and they will be blessed in their minds and their bodies. The peace of God, that passes all human understanding, will rule in their hearts and in their lives.

Fear and worry constitute a great part of the trouble that is upon the world, bringing all kinds of disease and mental and physical suffering. It is all the result of the wrong spirit which he has brought upon himself, who is associated with the Lord Jesus Christ is sure to be blessed.

Whoever would be found worthy to be forever with the Lord to share His glory and be associated with Him in His future work must be transformed in character, must be renewed in heart, must become not only pure in heart intention, but so far as possible pure in word and deed.

Oh, how much the true followers of Jesus should seek to impress upon themselves the great lesson that love does no ill to his neighbor, that love is sympathetic, suffereth long and is kind, is not puffed up, vaunteth not itself, seeketh not its own interest and welfare merely, but the interest and welfare of others!

The supreme test of our loyalty to God is our love for Him; and this love is manifested by our desire to do those things acceptable to Him. (1 John 2:3.) There is little that we can do for the Almighty. He is so great and we are so small! But if we have His Spirit of love, then we shall love all those who love Him, and our conduct toward them will demonstrate the real sentiments of our hearts. Thus, then, we are daily making our record in the Lord's sight, daily showing Him to what degree we are worthy or unworthy of His great reward, which will go only to those in whom love abounds—in whom the Spirit of Christ abounds.

Let us then be more and more on guard against the encroachments of the Adversary upon us as New Creatures! Let us more and more show forth the praises of Him who has called us out of darkness into His marvelous light! And in no way can we better show forth these praises than by exemplifying in our daily conduct the lessons which we have learned of Him. "Let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap. If we faint not." According to the riches of His grace He will "do exceedingly abundantly above all that we can ask or think."

The Kaiser of Course. An Alsatian has just been sentenced to imprisonment, it is reported, for "lese Majeste," the accusation being that he had disgraced the Kaiser's portrait. Perhaps the best instance of that terrible crime on record is that of an Englishman who expressed his views rather freely in a Berlin cafe, and was punished immediately by a police spy. He pleaded that he had been referring to the Emperor of Austria. "No, no, that won't do," said the spy. "In this country, when anyone says 'the Emperor' it is a 'd' fool,' we know he means our Emperor."

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XIII.—Second Quarter, For June 27, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Ps. lxxviii, 65-72. Quarterly Review—Golden Text, Ezek. xxxiv, 15.—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

LESSON I.—The resurrection, Matt. xxviii, 1-10. Golden Text, 1 Cor. xv, 15-20. "Now hath Christ been raised from the dead." In some respects the resurrection of Christ is the greatest event in all history, for had He not risen from the dead His life and death would have been no benefit to us (1 Cor. xv, 14-18). The kingdom promised to David needs an immortal man as king, one alive from the dead.

LESSON II.—David anointed king, 1 Sam. xvi, 4-13. Golden Text, 1 Sam. xvi, 7. "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but Jehovah looketh on the heart." In the case of Saul God gave the people a man after their heart, but now He chooses a man after His own heart (chapter xiii, 14; Acts xiii, 22), the most unlikely, humanly speaking, of all the eight sons, but the Lord's own choice, and He is still looking for hearts that are whole toward Him.

LESSON III.—The shepherd psalm, Ps. xxiii, Golden Text, Ps. xxiii, 1. "Jehovah is my shepherd." Consider all the shepherd and shepherdess stories and then see the Lord Jesus as the good shepherd, the great shepherd, the chief shepherd and the shepherd who shall yet gather all Israel and feed them in a good pasture (John x; Heb. xiii; 1 Pet. v; Ezek. xxxiv, 14, 15). Such a shepherd can never let His sheep lack any good thing.

LESSON IV.—David and Goliath, 1 Sam. xvii, 38-51. Golden Text, Rom. viii, 31. "If God is for us, who is against us?" Truly a fearless shepherd, to whom the living God, though invisible, was more real than the visible mass of flesh and blood in the form of Goliath, His great desire being that all the earth should know that the God of Israel was the true God and that His name might be honored and not reproached.

LESSON V.—Saul tries to kill David, 1 Sam. xix, 1-12. Golden Text, Prov. xxix, 25. "Whoso putteth his trust in Jehovah shall be safe." From the day that the women ascribed more glory to David than to Saul, Saul was jealous of him and sought to kill him, but God delivered him not into his hand (chapter xviii, 7-9; xxiii, 14). Back of it all the reason is seen in Saul's disobedience and in his allowing an evil spirit to take possession of him (xvi, 14).

LESSON VI.—Friendship of David and Jonathan, 1 Sam. xxi, 32-42. Golden Text, Prov. xvii, 17. "A friend loveth at all times." Consider how their souls were knit together from the day of David's victory over Goliath until David said after Jonathan's death, "Thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of woman" (1 Sam. i, 26). Yet such friendship was but a faint type of the love of Jesus Christ to us.

LESSON VII.—David spares Saul, 1 Sam. xxvi, 5-11. Golden Text, Luke vi, 27. "Love your enemies; do good to them that hate you." At least twice David had Saul wholly in his power, but refused to lay a finger on him to harm him. It was just the same on David's part when he was cursed and stoned by Shimei; he would allow no one to harm him, but just left him to God.

LESSON VIII.—David king over Judah and Israel, 11 Sam. ii, 1-7; v, 1-5. Golden Text, Ps. xxvii, 7. "Jehovah is my strength and shield, My heart hath trusted in Him and I am helped." In the time the Lord accomplishes every purpose of His, according to Jer. ii, 29; Ps. xxxiii, 11; Eph. i, 11, and so David became king over all Israel and went on and grew great, and the Lord God of hosts was with him (v, 5, 10). Just as surely Jesus Christ shall sit on David's throne in due time.

LESSON IX.—David brings the ark to Jerusalem, 11 Sam. vi, 12-15. Golden Text, Ps. xxiii, 1. "I was glad when they said to me, 'Bring us good news, O God.'" A sad lesson on the selfishness and desperate wickedness of the human heart even in such a chosen vessel as David. There is no perfect man in all the Bible story but Jesus of Nazareth, the Lamb of God with out blemish and without spot, holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners.

LESSON X.—Nathan rebukes David, 11 Sam. xii, 22-xiii, 7a. Golden Text, Ps. ii, 10. "Create in me a clean heart, O God." A sad lesson on the selfishness and desperate wickedness of the human heart even in such a chosen vessel as David. There is no perfect man in all the Bible story but Jesus of Nazareth, the Lamb of God with out blemish and without spot, holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners.

LESSON XI.—The blessedness of forgiveness, Ps. xxxii, Golden Text, Ps. xxxii, 1. "Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered." How great and all sufficient is the sacrifice on Calvary which can put away transgression, sin, iniquity and guilt. Then He becomes our home to dwell in, where we are safe from all enemies and our guide through all the wilderness of this world.

LESSON XII.—A prayer for the tempted, Ps. cxli, Golden Text, Ps. cxli, 9. "Keep me from the snare which they have laid for me, etc." He who forgives and saves is able also to keep and to guard even from stumbling. He is able to control the tongue which no man can tame. He is high to all who call upon Him in truth.

Labor Saving Devices. All the labor saving devices ever invented have failed to make the laborer popular.

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S FIRST PUBLIC SPEECH AFTER LEAVING THE ADMIRALTY

Firm and Expressive Appeal For a Great Patriotism in Britain's Critical Hour—His Personal Feelings Ignored—He Spoke Quite Frankly.

The following is a verbatim report of the extremely interesting speech delivered by the Right Hon. Winston Churchill at the meeting of his constituents in Dundee on June 25th, brief cables extracts of which have already been published in Canada. Churchill said: "I thought it right to take an opportunity of coming here, to my constituency, in view of the events which have recently taken place, and also of the fact that considerably more than a year has passed since I have had the opportunity of speaking in Dundee. I have not come here to trouble you with personal matters (hear, hear) or embark on explanations, or to indulge in reproaches or recriminations. (Hear, hear.) In war time a man must do his duty as he sees it and take his luck as it comes or goes. (Hear, hear and cheers.) I will not say a word here or in parliament which I cannot truly feel will have a useful bearing on the only thing that matters, the only thing I care about, and the only thing I want you to think about, namely, the waging of victorious war upon the enemy. (Cheers.) I was sent to the Admiralty in 1911 after the Agadir crisis had nearly brought us into war, and I was sent with the express duty laid upon me by the Prime Minister to put the fleet in a state of instant and constant readiness for war in case we were attacked by Germany. (Cheers.) Since then, for nearly four years, I have borne the heavy burden of being, according to the time-honored language of my patent, "responsible to the crown and Parliament for the business of the admiralty," and when I say responsible, I have been responsible in this real sense, that I have had the blame for everything that has gone wrong. (Laughter and Cheers.) PREPARATION FOR WAR. Those years have comprised the most important period in our naval history—a period of preparation for war, a period of vigilance and mobilization and a period of actual warfare under conditions of which no man had any experience. I look to my best (prolonged cheers) and the archives of the admiralty will show in the utmost detail the part I have played in all the great transactions of my life. It is to them I look for my defence. I look also to the general naval situation. The terrible dangers of the beginning of the war are over; the seas have been swept clear (hear, hear), the submarines, our strength has greatly increased, our situation now stands safely from what it was in the beginning of the war, and it grows continually every day by leaps and bounds in all the classes of vessels needed for the special purpose of the war. Between now and the end of the year the British navy will receive reinforcements which would be incredible if they were not actual facts. In that achievement I shall always be proud to have had a share. BALFOUR THE MAN. My charge now passes to another hand, and it is my duty to do everything in my power to give to my successor loyal support in act, in word, and in thought. (Cheers.) I am very glad, indeed, that Mr. Balfour (cheers) has been able to undertake this great task. (Cheers.) The operations which are now proceeding at the Dardanelles will give him the opportunity of using that quality of cool, calm courage and inflexibility which fifteen years ago prevented Ladysmith from being left to its fate and surrendered to the enemy. I have two things to say to you about the Dardanelles. First you must expect losses both by land and sea. But the fleet you are employing there is your surplus fleet; after all other needs are provided for, had it not been used in this great enterprise it would have been lying idle in your southern ports. A large number of the old vessels, of which it is composed, have to be laid up in any case before the end of the year, because their crews are wanted for the enormous reinforcements of new ships which the industry of your workshops is hurrying into the water. Losses of ships, therefore, so long as the precious lives of the officers and men are saved—which in nearly every case they have been—losses of that kind, I say, may easily be exaggerated in the minds both of friend and foe. Military operations will also be costly, but that need not be considered by the men as an evident prelude to further enlistment. Since the commencement of the war crime in Sheffield has become almost negligible.

SCROFULA AND ALL HUMORS GIVE WAY

There are many things learned from experience and observation that the older generation should impress upon the younger. Among them is the fact that scrofula and other humors are most successfully treated with Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine is a peculiar combination of remarkably effective blood-purifying and health-giving roots, barks and herbs, and has been tested for forty years. Get it today.

which we put in the field were the products of Lord Haldane's organization—(cheers)—and in the fateful and convulsive days before Great Britain drew the sword of honor, when the chill of doubt struck into so many hearts whether we should attack the responsible leaders of the nation—(Loud cheers, again and again renewed)—whether in the field or at home, or to write in a manner which was calculated to spread doubts and want of confidence in them or in particular operations, or to write anything which is calculated to make bad blood between them. (Hear, hear.) I apply this not only to the Admirals and Generals, but to the Ministers at home, and especially the heads of the great fighting departments. No other nation now at war would allow the newspapers such a license in the present time—(hear, hear)—and if there is to be criticism, if there must be criticism, first it should be only the loyal criticism of earnest intention, but if there is to be criticism let it be in Parliament. If the speech of a man such as I cannot allow the enemy to be a party to our discussions, then let Parliament, as is its right, sit for the time being with closed doors—(cheers)—but it seems imperative in the interests of the country for the future, and for the safety and success of our arms, that irresponsible or malicious carping should not continue. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) We in this country are ever supporters of a free Press. A free Press is a natural and healthy feature in national life so long as we have also a free Parliament and a free platform; but when, owing to war conditions, Parliament observes a temporary suspension of its duties, and when many of the subjects cannot be freely discussed without giving information to the enemy, then the balance of society is no longer true, and grave injury results from the irresponsible carping of the newspapers. (Hear, hear, and cheers.)

THE PRESS. Now, I would like to say something which will get me into trouble. (Laughter.) I don't think that the newspapers ought to be allowed to attack the responsible leaders of the nation—(Loud cheers, again and again renewed)—whether in the field or at home, or to write in a manner which was calculated to spread doubts and want of confidence in them or in particular operations, or to write anything which is calculated to make bad blood between them. BOTH STRONG CASES. I have very much regretted that the Liberal Government which is now no more, had the opportunity of stating its case in Parliament. It would, I think, have been found that Lord Kitchener had a very strong case to unfold on behalf of the War Office, and I think we have had something to say on behalf of the Admiralty. (Cheers.) But the Government has perished. Its long career so memorable in our home affairs is ended; its work, whether in South Africa or Ireland, has passed into history. I know that there are gathered here this afternoon many of those who were its opponents, and that we are going to work together on a common basis now. (Laughter and cheers.) But before I come to the new Government and its prospects I must ask your leave and your courtesy to say a few words in justice to the old. (Laughter and cheers.) There was a Government which sought peace, but which, nevertheless, maintained our naval defence so that all the needs and dangers were provided for. That was a Government which who placed in the field six times as many divisions of soldiers as had ever been contemplated by any party in the State at any time in our history. There was a Government which fulfilled in your name, in the name of the nation, every obligation of duty and of honour to France and to Belgium. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) There was a Government which brought into the war a united people, and with such a record that in future times, when the wounded world looks back with its searching scrutiny upon all the events which have led up to this great catastrophe, will have such a record as will show to all time that Britain was absolutely guiltless of the slightest stain. (Loud cheers.) I thought you would permit me to say these few words in your name. I think that one of the most wonderful and inspiring facts in the whole history of this wonderful island, and in later days, depend upon it will be taken as a splendid sign of the manhood of our race and of the soundness of our institutions. (Cheers.) Having got so far—being now on the high road to three millions of men in the service of the Crown as volunteers—having gone so far, to cast away this great moral advantage which adds to the honor of our arms and to the dignity of our State, simply for the purpose of hustling into the firing line a comparatively small proportion of persons, that selves not perhaps the best suited to the job, who even when taken could not be for many months equipped to do that, after all that has happened, would it seem to me, be unwise in the extreme. (Cheers.)

SERVICE AT HOME. But service at home, service for home defence, and to keep our fighting men abroad properly supplied and maintained, that seems to me to stand on a different footing. (Hear, hear.) Remember, we are confronted with a foe who would without the slightest scruple extirpate us, man, woman and child, by any method open to him if he had the opportunity. (Hear, hear.) We are fighting a foe who would not hesitate one moment to obliterate every single soul in this great country this afternoon if it could be done by pressing a button. We are fighting a foe who would think as little of that as a gardener would think of smoking out a wasp's nest. Let us recognize that this is a new fact in the history of the world. (Loud cheers.) MASQUERADER

By Katherine Cecil Thurston,
Author of "The Circle," Etc.
Copyright, 1904, by Harper & Brothers

Loder dined with Lakeley at Chilton's club, and so absorbing were the political interests of the hour—the resignation of Sir Robert Selborne, the king's summoning of Frailie, the probable features of the new ministry—that it was after 9 o'clock when at last he read himself and drove to the Arcadian theater.

The sound of music came to him as he entered the theater—light, measured music suggestive of tiny streams, toy bells and painted shepherdesses. It sounded singularly inappropriate to his mood—as inappropriate as the theater itself with its gay gliding, its pale ones of pink and blue. It was the setting of a different world—a world of laughter, light thoughts and shallow impulses, in which he had no part.

It was the interval between the first and second acts. The box was in shadow, and Loder's first impression was of voices and rustling skirts, broken in upon by the murmur of frequent amused laughter. Later, as his eyes grew accustomed to the light, he distinguished the occupants, two women and a man. The man was speaking as he entered, and the story he was relating was evidently interesting from the faint exclamations of question and delight that punctuated it in the listeners' higher, softer voices.

"Ah, here comes the legislator!" exclaimed Leonard Kaine, for it was he who formed the male element in the party.

"The revolutionary, Lennie," Lillian corrected softly. "Bramfel says he has changed the whole frame of things." She laughed softly and meaningfully as she closed her fan. "So good of you to come, Jack," she added. "Let me introduce you to Miss Esseltyn. I don't think you two have met. This is Mr. Chilcote, Mary—the great, new Mr. Chilcote." Again she laughed.

Loder bowed and moved to the front of the box, nodding to Kaine as he passed.

"It's only for an hour," he explained to Lillian. "I have an appointment for 11."

"Only an hour! Oh, how unkind! How should I punish him, Lennie?" Lillian looked round at Kaine with a lingering, caressing glance.

He bent toward her in quick response and answered in a whisper. She laughed and replied in an equally low tone.

Loder, to whom both remarks had been inaudible, dropped into the vacant seat beside Mary Esseltyn. He had the unsettled feeling that things were not falling out exactly as he had calculated.

"What is the play like?" he hazarded as he looked toward his companion. At all times social trivialities bored him. Tonight they were intolerable. He had come to fight, but all at once it seemed that there was no opponent. Lillian's attitude disturbed him; her careless gracefulness, her evident ignoring of him for Kaine, might mean nothing, but also it might mean much.

"It is a good play," she responded. "I like it better than the book. You've read the book, of course?"

"No," Loder tried hard to fix his thoughts. "It's amusing, but far fetched."

"Indeed?" He picked up the programme lying on the edge of the box. His ears were strained to catch the tone of Lillian's voice as she laughed and whispered with Kaine.

"Yes; men exchanging identities, you know."

He looked up and caught the girl's self possessed glance. "Oh?" he said. "Indeed?" Then again he looked away. It was intolerable, this feeling of being caged up! A sense of anger crept through his mind. It almost seemed that Lillian had brought him there to prove that she had finished with him, had cast him aside, having used him for the day's excitement as she had used her poodles, her Persian cats, her crystal gazing. All at once the impotency and uncertainty of his position goaded him. Turning swiftly in his seat, he glanced back to where she sat slowly swaying her fan, her pale, golden hair and her pale colored gown delicately silhouetted against the background of the box.

"What's your idea of the play, Lillian?" he said abruptly. To his own ears there was a note of challenge in his voice.

She looked around languidly. "Oh, it's quite amusing," she said. "It makes a delicious farce—absolutely French."

"French?"

"Quite. Don't you think so, Lennie?" "Oh, quite," Kaine agreed.

"They mean that it's so very light and yet so very subtle, Mr. Chilcote," Mary Esseltyn explained.

"Indeed?" he said. "Then my imagination was at fault. I thought the piece was serious."

"Serious?" Lillian smiled again. "Why, where's your sense of humor? The motive of the play debars all seriousness."

Loder looked down at the programme still between his hands. "What is the motive?" he asked.

Lillian waved her fan once or twice, then closed it softly. "Love is the motive," she said.

Now, the balancing—the adjusting of impression and inspiration—is, of all processes in life, the most delicately fine. The simple sound of the word "love" coming at that precise juncture changed the whole current of Lo-thought. It fell like a seed, and like a seed in ultraproductive soil, it bore fruit with amazing rapidity.

The word itself was small and the manner in which it was spoken trivial, but Loder's mind was attracted and held by it. The last time it had met his ears his environment had been vastly different, and this echo of it in an uncongenial atmosphere stung him to resentment. The vision of Eve, the thought of Eve, became suddenly dominant.

"Love?" he repeated coldly. "So love is the motive?"

"Yes." This time it was Kaine who responded in his methodical, contented voice. "The motive of the play is love, as Lillian says, which was love ever serious in a three act comedy—on or off the stage?" He leaned forward in his seat, screwed in his eyeglass and lazily scanned the stalls.

The orchestra was playing a Hungarian dance, its erratic harmonies falling abruptly across the plinks and blues, the gliding and lights of the pretty, conventional theater. Something in the suggestion of unfitsness appealed to Loder. It was the force of the real as opposed to the ideal. With a new expression on his face, he turned again to Kaine.

"And how does it work?" he said. "This treatment that you find so—French?"

His voice as well as his expression had changed. He still spoke quietly, but he spoke with interest. He was no longer conscious of his vague uneasiness; a fresh chord had been struck in his mind, and his curiosity had responded to it. For the first time it occurred to him that love—the dangerous, mysterious garden whose paths had so suddenly stretched out before his own feet—was a pleasure ground that possessed many doors and an infinite number of keys. He was stirred by the desire to peer through another entrance than his own, to see the secret, alibiing byways from another standpoint. He waited with interest for the answer to his question.

For a second or two Kaine continued to survey the house; then his eyeglass dropped from his eye, and he turned round.

"To understand the thing," he said pleasantly, "you must have read the book. Have you read the book?"

"No, Mr. Kaine," Mary Esseltyn interrupted. "Mr. Chilcote hasn't read the book."

Lillian laughed. "Outline the story for him, Lennie," she said. "I love to see other people taking pains."

Kaine glanced at her admiringly. "Well, to begin with," he said amiably, "two men, an artist and a millionaire, exchange lives. See?"

"You may presume that he does see, Lennie."

"Right! Well, then, as I say, these beggars change identities. They're as like as pins, and to all appearances one chap's the other chap—and the other chap's the first chap. See?"

Loder laughed. The newly quickened interest was enhanced by treading on dangerous ground.

"Well, they change for a lark, of course, but there's one fact they both overlooked. They're men, you know, and they forget these little things!" He laughed delightedly. "They overlook the fact that one of 'em has got a wife!"

WHERE THE LANDINGS HAVE TAKEN PLACE ON THE GALLIPLI PENINSULA

"Tommy's" Good Spirits Survive All His Trials

Cheery Optimism Persists Despite Wounds and Thirst and Hardships of March—Men Sing and Joke Although They May Be Dirt Covered and Exhausted.

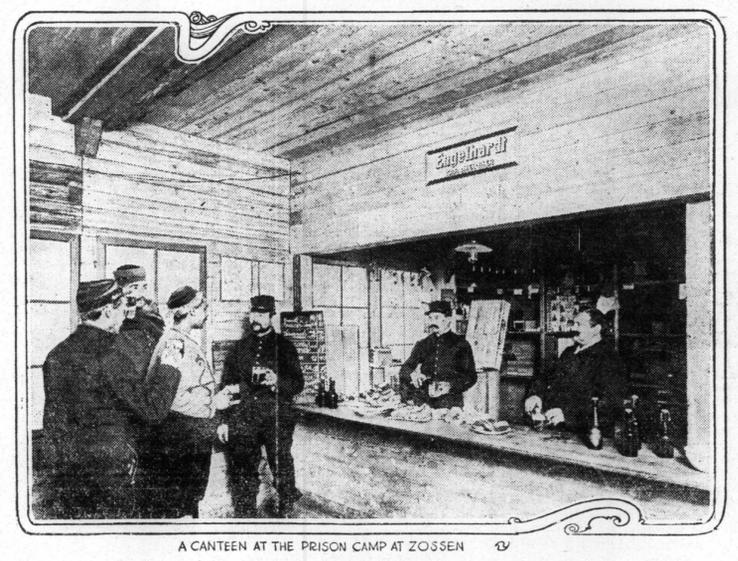

(SPECIAL DESPATCH.) LONDON, June 26. The more one sees of the British army in the field the more is one impressed by its cheery optimism and good spirits. It works and plays with the same good humored zest, nothing can dishearten it. See that battalion marching past to the trenches? All the men are singing. See that other returning, tired and dirty? They, too, are singing. Until the gas poisoners began their work it was an army that regarded the foe as a nuisance to be killed, but killing without malice. Now the business of killing is full of bitterness. Yet even the menace of the new death has not choked the spirit of cheerfulness. Men take their turn in the gas zone with a grim resolve to swell the enemy's casualty list with their own, but they can jest even when they are gasping for breath. "Another pea soup fog," said a North Somerset lad to a comrade in the trenches when he saw the wall of gas vapor stealing toward him. "It isn't safe to be out in the night air."

Going Back to "Do" Some Germans. "Nonsense," retorted an orderly who was passing. "You'll be right as rain in a week." "Then I'll wait before I write," said the soldier. "There's no use waiting the card. Besides it says I am wounded. I'm not wounded—I'm full of this bloody gas, and as soon as the chest is clear I'm going back to 'do' for some of those Germans. Give us a drink!" The cheerfulness of the wounded is very marked. A man who has been shot in the leg or arm after several shelling, and then carted for perhaps twenty miles in a slow moving ambulance, could be forgiven if he took a somewhat gloomy view of the immediate future. Ten to one he arrives at his destination finding his suffering behind a mask of gaiety. Sit in the grounds of a casualty clearing station and watch the endless procession of Red Cross automobiles discharging their dutiful burdens under the trees. You will hear very few cries of pain. These men have been brought direct from the battlefields, with only a halt at the dressing station, where first aid is given to them. They remind one of schoolboys waiting for the headmaster, as they sit in rows, silent, rather dazed, with their thoughts still fixed on the battlefields they have just left. You can see they are in doubt about themselves. A boy with a

British Officer Describes Difficulties of Trench Warfare

(SPECIAL DESPATCH.) LONDON, June 26. It is no easy thing to charge across 150 yards of open ground with two machine guns adding their deadly hail to the rain of bullets directly from the trenches ahead. An officer whose work in the charge won him a decoration writes vividly of the incident in a letter which appeared recently in the London Times. How he managed to escape without a scratch is a mystery to the man, who says in his letter:— "We were in the big show which started last Wednesday and had a rather hard time. We were five days in action. C and D companies were given an order to take a part of the enemy's trench, and we did, capturing sixty-three Prussians. We occupied a trench with a Highland regiment on our left and an Indian regiment on our right. "We built a parapet on the other side when darkness came on and made it quite bullet proof. We were working most of that night, so had no sleep. The next day was pretty easy, because the enemy were some way back. That night we again spent in strengthening our position with sand bags. I worked pretty hard until two in the morning and then started again at four working outside filling the sand bags. "About half-past four an engagement started on our left, so we quickly jumped back into the trench and stood at arms. It was still dark, so, fearing attack, we opened fire where we supposed the enemy to be, not being able to see anything. At daybreak we were very surprised to find heavy trenchments all across our front about forty yards away, when the day before they had been fully 250 yards back. We had never heard them digging, in spite of having a listening patrol out every hour. "Evidently the enemy started the attack

Tiny States of Europe Are Hard Hit by the War

San Marino, Monaco and the Isle of Man Are Affected by Loss of Their Tourist Traffic—Luxemburg Is Under the Invader's Heel.

(SPECIAL DESPATCH.) ROME, June 26. When San Marino, with its thirty-two square miles of territory in Northern Italy, declared war on Austria-Hungary and assured the King of Italy that its thirty-nine officers and 60 soldiers desired nothing better than to march to Vienna in the van of a victorious Italian army, public attention was drawn to the fact that many small peoples have been cast into the present European maelstrom. Here and there about the map of Europe these petty countries may be seen. If one looks very hard, but despite their size many of them have glorious traditions and histories and can point with pride to some records which the large Powers might well envy. Among the more interesting of these independent and semi-independent territories are Luxembourg, Monaco, Lichtenstein, the Isle of Man, the Isle of Herm and the smallest republic, San Marino. Each of them has sent men to war; all of them have suffered. Inhabitants of the Isle of Man, for instance, are reported to be in a state bordering on starvation because the tourist traffic on which they have lived has been stopped, while Monte Carlo and its vicinity is said to resemble a large hospital, the wonderful hotels and pleasure palaces being filled with wounded soldiers. Luxembourg was the first to know the terrors of war, for the German soldiers swarmed into the little Grand Duchy at the outbreak of hostilities. San Marino has a population of about nine thousand five hundred people, and the entry of the tiny republic into the war is in reality of great assistance to Italy despite the smallness of its army. Had San Marino declared its neutrality it would have afforded a haven for Austro-Italian territory could have flown in the republic and claimed immunity from capture. Curiously enough, San Marino, it is said, has been in a state of war with the Italians and Austrians in 1860 fought with each other. The republic at that time declared war, and when peace was concluded failed to ratify it. It is said, and the matter was entirely overlooked by all concerned. According to tradition, the republic was founded by St. Marinus during the persecutions under Diocletian while his companion, St. Leo, founded the village of that name. The written history of the little republic begins with the ninth century, the monarchy of St. Marino having existed since 885. In 1503 San Marino fell into the hands of Caesar Borgia. It regained its liberty and long preserved it, and in 1831 was formally recognized. Napoleon respected its liberty. Garibaldi entered it in 1848 and disbanded his army. The supreme power of the republic resides in a General Assembly, which meets semi-annually. It is governed by two captains, selected twice a year from sixty-five members of the Great Council, which is composed of twenty representatives of the nobility, twenty of the landowners and twenty of the citizens. In time of great stress it is estimated that San Marino could raise an army of 1,200 men. Its treaty of friendship with Italy was renewed last year, and extradition treaties were renewed at the same time with England, Belgium, Holland and the United States. The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, southeast of Belgium, felt the iron heel of the German invader at the outbreak of the present war. The army of the Grand Duke consists of 150 gentlemen volunteers, while the Council consists of fifteen members. The government, however, is almost entirely in the hands of the Grand Duke, who must introduce all bills into the Chamber of Deputies, which is elective and consists of forty-eight members. In connection with Germany's invasion it is interesting to note that Prussian troops had not been in the grand duchy since 1872. By modifications of the treaty of Vienna the garrisoning of the fortress of Luxembourg had passed to the Prussians, an arrangement which lasted until 1867. The treaty of London, signed May 11, 1867, decided that the Prussian garrison must be withdrawn, and the fortress dismantled. That was done in 1872. At the same time the great Powers guaranteed the neutrality of the grand duchy, and although a member of the German Zollverein, Luxembourg formed a sovereign and independent state. The grand duchy had no opportunity to declare neutrality in the present war, it was said. With the exception of San Marino and Monaco, the smallest independent State in Europe is Lichtenstein. The little principality lies south of Lake Constance and extends along the right bank of the Rhine, opposite Swiss territory. It covers about sixty-two square miles and has a population of 2,477 people. Austria-Hungary had declared the neutrality of its country, which brought down upon him the wrath of Emperor Francis Joseph, who, it is said, threatened dire consequences to the little principality unless it should cast its influence for Austria-Hungary. Compulsory military service in the principality was abolished in 1868, the army until then having been ninety-one strong. Monaco, in southeastern France, is the smallest of the sovereign principalities of Europe. It has an area of about eight square miles. The population is more than 15,000. The Prince is an absolute monarch, and there is no Parliament. He is advised by a small Council of State, the members of which he appoints himself. The Mayor and other municipal authorities are also appointed by the Prince, a Governor General presiding over the general administration of affairs. The little principality passed under French protection in 1860. As a result of the war and the absence of tourists the revenues of Monte Carlo have been greatly curtailed. Scores of the able bodied citizens have taken refuge in France, and the French colors and now are at the front.

New Devices for Soldiers' Protection.

(SPECIAL DESPATCH.) PARIS, June 26. From the laboratories of Robert & Carrere, in Paris, France, many novelties have emanated, which have proved of great usefulness to the soldiers now in the field. Among these are individual masks, which the soldier uses to keep his face from approaching the gas which he slips the hood over his head. After first soaking the muslin padding of the mask in a special solution, which is carried in a little tin in the mask. Even in the thick dealing gases used by the German troops, the soldier can breathe without the slightest difficulty, because while air can pass through the padding the deleterious or less improved means of protection now employed. The mask consists of a airtight hood equipped with unbreakable eyeglasses. In order to enable the wearer to breathe freely the hood is provided with an opening, which is covered with a very thick padding of muslin. When the soldier uses the apparatus, vapors and condensed fumes in capsules, which are attached to the hood, approach him and the hood over his head. The latest article for military use turned out by this firm is a mask for the protection of the soldier against the destruction of the soldier's eyes.
