Aerial Navigation.

All the world will be at one in congratulating the young Brazilian on his success in winning the Deutsch prize. On Saturday he went from the park at St. Cloud round the Eiffel Tower in thirty minutes. The Times correspondent in Paris proclaimed the 19th of October as a red-letter day in the annals of human progress, and thus describes what he saw: "We looked towards the slopes of St. Cloud. Suddenly, at 2.43, we saw the Santos Dumont emerge from the verdure of those slopes and mount straight upwards, the propellers turned towards us. After a few minutes' hesitation it took its direction in an almost straight line, and, leaning a little to the left, appeared in the space within our view, of which the Eiffel Tower formed the extreme point. Never have I seen a finer spectacle. The balloon was then at right angles to us, the slight and almost transparent air hanging steadily from the centre. In the free space, and lit up by a radiant sun, the fantastic creature advanced as in a dream, apparently without motion, and yet moving through space with striking rapidity. At this moment, 64 minutes after its first appearance on the horizon, the balloon, moving at the rate of thirty miles an hour, was rapidly approaching one of the angles of the third platform of the tower. We felt a thrill of terror. At the distance at which we were stationed we were convinced that it would dash against the tower, but with amazing docility it veered slightly to the left, almost grazing the side of the tower, and then, through the interstices of the tower, we saw it, with a grand movement, turn towards the centre of the Champ de Mars. There, with graceful hesitation, it sought its mathematical line, retraced its steps, and this time slowly and with certain efforts passed into the exact axis of the Trocadero towers, and resumed the route to St. Cloud." Unfortunately at first there was some disposition to dispute M. Santos Dumont's title to the prize of 24,000 francs which he has staked so much to win. The original conditions of the competition required that the winner should go from St. Cloud to the Eiffel Tower and back in half an hour. Afterwards the Deutsch Committee thought that the words "aller, contourner, et revenir" required some further explanation. They therefore decided that the departure should be reckoned from the moment of the balloon's being let loose, and the return from the moment of the guide-rope's being seized in the shed. M. Santos Dumont protested against this retrospective alteration. Moreover, it was inadmissible that the claimant of some man in letting go of or grasping the rope should prejudice the victory. He urged that it should be enough for the balloon to have come back above its starting point. This contention was unanswerable. As it turned out on Saturday, M. Santos Dumont's claim to the prize depended upon whether his return was to count from the moment he arrived in his air-ship above the point of departure, or from the moment when someone caught the guide-rope. At first the members of the Committee took the latter view, and M. Deutch, saying M. Santos Dumont had won a moral victory, offered him a sum of 21,000 francs. The Brazilian declined the gift, and simply saying he believed he had fairly won the prize announced that he would not compete for it again. Public feeling at once declared itself against the opinions of the Committee, and M. Deutch subsequently explained that his offer of 21,000 francs was not in the nature of a compromise, but was to be regarded as an additional gift. Writing from Amiens he says: "I can only confirm to you the opinion which I expressed on Saturday about your reaching the grounds. I am convinced that the Committee will approve and ratify it. But I shall be obliged if you will have the misunderstanding about the 25,000 francs reproduced by the Press rectified. In my enthusiasm I told you that I should, if your success was disputed, place this sum at your disposal for the Paris poor, but this sum had nothing to do with the great prize to which, in my opinion, you are entitled. Friendly and sincere congratulations." As both the President and the Vice-President of the Committee have since expressed themselves in favour of M. Santos Dumont's claim to the prize, there seems little doubt that he will receive it. The problem of steering in the air is solved.—London Tablet.

Commenting on the progress of Catholicity in Scotland, the Monitor and New Era, of London, says: "In England the proportion of Catholics to the population may be roughly put at one-twentieth; in Scotland the proportion is a fraction under one-tenth."

It is a touching spectacle, writes a Rome correspondent, to see the blind children of the Asilo of S. Alessio on the Aventine Hill, attending the functions of the festival of their special Patron, the Archangel Raphael. On this day it is the blind children themselves who, under able direction, are the musicians and singers at all the devotions which take place in the church of S. Alessio annexed to the Asylum; and both music and singing do immense credit not alone to the little performers, but to the masters and mistresses whose loving patience has been the cause of such success.

A cablegram received by the Augustinian Fathers, John Street, Dublin, announced the death of the Most Rev. Dr. Crane, Bishop of Sandhurst, who was a distinguished member of that Order. The deceased Prelate was born in 1818, at Carrick-on-Barrow, in the parish of Ballymilly, Co. Wexford. At an early age he joined the Novitiate House which was established in his own parish. From there he went to Rome, and later on was appointed to the Augustinian House in his native parish. He was next transferred to Dublin, and mainly through his efforts and those of the late Dr. Walsh, a former Prior of the Order, the money was collected for the erection of the beautiful Church of SS. Augustine and John. He was attached to the Augustinian Convent in John Street until 1874, and while he was engaged in collecting funds in America to liquidate the debt on that magnificent edifice, the announcement came of his appointment as first Bishop of Sandhurst, Victoria. A splendid cathedral is one of the many works which remain as the evidence of his labors in Australia, during the twenty-six years of a fruitful missionary career, which saw the power and influence of the Catholic Church increase almost every day in the Victoria Colony.

English exchanges announce the death of the Very Rev. John Barn and Canon Bagshawe, D. D., at Brighton. The deceased was born in London, December 26, 1837, and was therefore in the 74th year of his age. He served as a chaplain in the Crimean War. He was a brother to Archbishop Bagshawe, who recently resigned the See of Nottingham, and the late Judge Bagshawe.

Pope Leo XIII. is approaching the close of the 24th year of his Pontificate. His reign has thus risen very high in the scale of duration, being now the sixth in order, and it is spared until the octave of the Epiphany, it will be the fifth longest of Papal reigns. The Popes who have reigned longer than Leo XIII. are: St. Peter (33-37), with a reign of thirty-four years six months; Pius IX (1846-78), thirty-one years several months and twenty-two days; Pius VI (1775-99), twenty-four years six months and fourteen days; Adrian I. (771-95), twenty-three years ten months and twenty-seven days; and Sylvester I. (314-37), twenty-three years ten months and twenty-four days. Should his Holiness reign for another year only two of his predecessors shall have reigned longer than he in the See of Peter, namely, St. Peter himself and Pius IX.

Dyspepsia

From foreign words meaning bad food, has come rather to signify bad stomach; for the most common cause of the disease is a predisposing want of vigor and tone in that organ. No disease makes life more miserable, its sufferer certainly do not live to see; they sometimes wonder if they should not die. W. A. Bryant, Belleville, Ont., was greatly troubled with it for years; and Peter H. Casey, San Diego, Wis., who was so afflicted with it that he was nervous, sleepless, and actually sick most of the time, obtained no relief from medicine professionally prescribed. They were completely cured, as others have been, by Hood's Sarsaparilla according to their own statements voluntarily made. This great medicine strengthens the stomach and the whole digestive system. Be sure to get Hood's.

Academy, on his return after a long holiday visit to Rome, addresses a pastoral to his clergy. He writes in sadness of heart and patriotic gloom:—"Frenchmen and Frenchwomen whose only crime is to have devoted themselves exclusively to the service of God and their fellow creatures are disturbed in the enjoyment of their most inoffensive rights, of rights guaranteed by the fundamental principles of a Constitution which promises to all citizens, without exception, liberty, equality, fraternity." The wreck of so many religious establishments, says the Cardinal Bishop, must further be attended with a notable diminution of the Pope's income. France, up to a recent date, had the place of honor in contributing most largely to the needs of the Holy Father and of the Pontifical Government. Cardinal Perraud beseeches his diocese to remember its long and glorious connection with the head of the Catholic Church, and to be worthy of the mission that was for so long the title of eldest daughter of the Church. Cardinal Perraud as a scholar stands at the head of the French Episcopacy.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 5th, 1901. Moved by P. O'Brien, Secorded by J. Schmidt: Whereas it has pleased Almighty God to remove by death from our midst one of the most esteemed members of our Branch No. 183 of the O. M. B. A., in the person of brother John A. McInnis; Whereas in his life time brother John A. McInnis had been in every respect a model Christian and a model member of the congregation of the Immaculate Conception of Winnipeg, Manitoba, having at all times proved himself most dutiful Catholic and a most indefatigable and zealous promoter of the interests of the parish;

Whereas as a member of our Branch of the O. M. B. A. he had won the most sincere admiration of all the brothers by his regular attendance at our meetings, his unalterable kindness to all, his wise counsels in difficult matters, and his manifestations of great learning and deep convictions in our discussions; Whereas as a member of the Civil Community at large he had always given us reason to be proud of him as a brother member of our Association member of our congregation; If it be resolved that we, the members of Branch No. 183 of the O. M. B. A. in meeting assembled, cannot adequately express our profound sorrow at the loss we have sustained in the death of our brother, J. A. McInnis, and that as an expression of true sympathy for the bereaved family of the said John A. McInnis and of brotherly love and respect for the memory of our deceased friend and brother $10.00 be put at the disposal of our Spiritual Advisor to have a Requiem High Mass offered for the repose of his soul, and that our charter be draped in mourning during three months.

The Government and Prohibition.

On Friday last intelligence was received here that the Law Lords of the Imperial Privy Council, the highest Court of Appeal in the realm, had unanimously decided that the Manitoba Liquor Act was constitutional, that is to say that it was quite within the powers of the Provincial Legislature to pass such an act. The act in question is a stringent prohibition act passed by the Government of Hon. Hugh John McDonald. Hugh John himself said when he introduced the bill in the Legislature that he was not particularly desirous of passing a prohibition act; but such legislation had been asked for by a large number—a majority of the electors, and to meet their wishes he introduced the bill and pushed it through the different stages until it became law. As some doubt existed as to whether or not Provincial Legislatures were competent to enact prohibitory statutes, or whether such power was the exclusive privilege of the Dominion Parliament, Premier McDonald stated that the act, as soon as passed, would be submitted to the courts to determine its constitutionality. Accordingly a test case was submitted to the Supreme Court of Manitoba, and after hearing argument the judges of that court unanimously decided that the act was ultra vires, that is beyond the powers of the Provincial Legislature. An appeal was taken from this decision to the Imperial Privy Council, with the result that the first decision was reversed, and the unanimous judgment of the Privy Council given in favor of the act. All the Law Lords of this highest court of appeal, before whom the case was argued, decided the act was intra vires, or within the powers of the Provincial Legislature. This decision of the Privy Council will be further reaching in its effects than the Manitoba act; for it establishes the principle that Provincial Legislatures have the power to pass prohibitory laws. How is it going to effect prohibition in this Province? Premier Farquharson, with a great flourish of trumpets, passed a prohibition act in our Legislature during the session before last, and last session he made some amendments to this act. In this legislation he was backed up by the Attorney General and other members and followers of the Government. Great things in favor of temperance were promised by the Leader of the Government whenever this act would be brought into operation; but there is no evidence to prove that there has been less intemperance in Charlottetown since that time. Drinking places seem to be quite as numerous as ever, and liquor sellers appear to be doing as much business as formerly. Some have been up for breach of the law; some have been acquitted, and others who have been convicted have applied for certiorari. Lately the constitutionality of the act has been argued pro and con before the Supreme Court, but the judges have not yet given their decision. The decision in the Manitoba case has established the general principle that Provincial Legislatures may pass such acts, and if the Farquharson act is otherwise defective it can be annulled by the Provincial Legislature.

ment have been for political purposes; have been with a view of securing and retaining votes for their party. What great things in the cause of temperance may be expected from such a hypocritical Government and party!

LATE advices from Ottawa indicate that the Imperial Government have decided to accept from Canada six hundred mounted men to go to South Africa. According to all the information available on the subject, the Government of Canada are to bear no portion of the expense of fitting out or paying these troops. The Imperial Government, it appears, are to pay all the bills while the authorities at Ottawa are to name the officers and permit the enlistment of the men. Under these circumstances, the whole matter will scarcely be anything more than a permission to the Imperial Government to recruit six hundred mounted troops in Canada. This question of additional troops from Canada for South Africa has been receiving some attention for several months. Early in the summer Major Merritt intimated to the Imperial authorities that he was quite prepared to raise a Canadian contingent and proceed with them to South Africa. The Imperial war office seems to have accepted this offer under certain conditions as to the appointment of officers etc. Just then the Dominion Government stepped in and declared that the offer of troops from Canada otherwise than through the militia department was irregular. Some correspondence on the matter passed between the Imperial and Federal Governments and there the matter hung until the present time, when a renewal of negotiations has taken place. It is pointed out that the Dominion Government is showing no enthusiasm in this matter and that its present action of merely permitting recruiting in Canada is the least it could be expected to do, and even to this it has to be driven by public opinion. In this respect Canada is disadvantageously compared with Australia, which colony has had troops in South Africa ever since the commencement of the war while all the Canadian troops returned home more than a year ago. In the matter of the contingents the Laurier Government have always been slow waddlers.

CONDUCTED BY TOM A. HAWKE.
Said a physician to a friend, "Of all the patients I attend None say my method fails."
Replied the friend, "I'm not led To doubt it, for 'tis often said That dead men tell no tales."
A couple of young men were out fishing the other day, and on returning were going past a farmhouse and felt hungry. They yelled to the farmer's daughters, "Girls, have you any buttermilk?" The reply was gently wafted back to their ears, "Yes, but we keep it for our own calves." The boys calculated that they had business away—and they went.
On one of the inside doors of the Charlottetown Post Office is fastened a sign with the word "Push" enamelled upon it. Some mischievous person has gone to work with a knife and changed the letter "P" into an "R" with the result that the word reads "Rush." By the way some people propel themselves through the Post Office it would seem to indicate that they think the word "Rush" is just what it ought to be.
Talking about the Post Office reminds us that the gate on the North side of the Square, opposite the Guardian Office is in a disgraceful state and should be put on its hinges at once. Some people think such a state of affairs is unimportant, but we can assure them that it is a hanging matter.
The Patriot is advocating shorter working hours for employees. Everybody will be pleased to hear this, especially when it is known that not so very long ago, the Patriot gave its employees no understanding that they must come to work at 7 a.m. instead of 8, or less their job. But, it's never too late to do good!
The Yale Record reports that "an unassuming friend" has lately presented some choice specimens to the Peabody Museum. A few of them are as follows: A was from the "Tale of Two Cities," some water from "all's well," the rollers from the "shades of evening," a drink from a "sand-bar," a rooker from the "cradle of the deep," a free lunch from the Sandwich Islands.
A teacher in a Dallas County, Texas school has received the following letter:— "Sir,—Will you in the future give my son easier some to do at night. This is what he's brought home two or three times back. 'If few gallons of beer will fill thirty to forty bottles, how many plates and half bottles will nine gallons of beer fill?"
Well, we tried and could make nothing of it at all, and my boy cried and laughed, and said he didn't dare to go back in the morning without doing it. So I had to go and fill the nine gallons of beer, which could fill thirty to forty bottles, and borrowed a lot of wine and brandy bottles; we filled them, and my boy put the number down for an answer. 'I don't know whether it is right or not,' as we split some while doing it.
P. S.—Please let the next some be in water, as I am not able to buy more here.
An editor up in Ontario printed an item that the man who was hugging the hired girl had better stop or his name would be published. In a few days about 25 citizens paid up their subscriptions, and told the editor to pay no attention to foolish stories going around.

A FILLER.
These modest remarks were not written to sway the minds of nations, Nor yet to help a little bit. The ad. man can't see his reason. No bright ideas are concealed Within their gentle phrasing, And no fair flowers from fancy's field With radiant rhyme here mingle. The poet gully of it all Felt neither gay nor solemn; He just obeyed the printer's call And tried to fill this column.

Obituary.
At Bear River Line Road, on Sunday Nov. 10th, Mary Matilda McCormack, beloved wife of Allan Meadman in the 31st year of her age. The deceased was a model of virtue, a good and sincere Christian, a kind and peaceable neighbor, a kind and loving wife and mother. The deceased was born at St. George's and at an early age she was taken by her uncle the late Rev. R. P. McPhoe, who was then parish priest at St. George's, and those who were present received a convent training and entered P. W. College where she received a license as teacher. She taught school at Tarentum for a few years, also at Launching and Armada. She was a very successful teacher highly esteemed by both parents and pupils. She leaves to mourn a husband two sons and two daughters also three brothers and one sister, one of the brothers is a Doctor in Denver, Colorado. The very large number of friends that made up the funeral cortege to St. Margaret's Church on the 12th, testified the esteem in which the deceased was held.

A Requiem High Mass was sung by the Pastor Rev. Father Carruthers, in which her remains were interred in the adjoining cemetery there to await the final summons. R. I. P. (Other papers please copy.)

Died at China Point, on Nov. 18th, of pneumonia, Alice, the beloved child of William and Louisa Carey in the 15th year of her age. The deceased was a very amiable and intelligent child, and was greatly beloved, not only by her parents and family but by all who knew her. Great sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. Carey in the great affliction that has befallen their family.
Being made perfect in a short space she fulfilled a long time. She pleased God; therefore He hastened to bring her out of the midst of iniquities.
Eternal rest grant her, O Lord, and may perpetual light shine upon her. Amen.

In our ordinary column today will be found notice of the demise of Edward Power, which took place at his home at Farmington, on the 21st inst. He was born in Mullingook parish, County Tipperary, Ireland in 1798, and consequently had reached the patriarchal age of 103 years at the time of his death. He emigrated to this country many years ago and settled on a farm at Farmington, where he continued to dwell till his death. He leaves to mourn one son, Edward, in the home-town, and one daughter, Mrs. Michael Walsh, St. John's, who has six grandchildren and a large circle of friends. He enjoyed excellent health all his life and was quite active up to the last. His illness was very brief, he being only one day confined to his bed. Deceased was a quiet, industrious, honest and honorable man, who had the good will and esteem of all his neighbors and acquaintances. He was a true Liberal Conservative and was the oldest elector in this Province to poll his vote at the general Provincial election in December, 1878. He went all the way to Monticello and recorded his vote for the Conservative candidates. He will be much missed in the community in which he lived and his death is deeply mourned. His funeral to St. Peter's was very largely attended. The Rev. Father Carruthers and the pastor Rev. R. J. Gillis, R. I. P.

Ordination Service in the West.

Rev. Thos. E. Cullen Elevated to the Holy Priesthood.

On Friday, Nov. 8th a special ordination service was held at St. Paul Seminary, St. Paul, Minn. The Holy Priesthood was conferred upon several deacons by St. Rev. James McGolrick, Bishop of Duluth, Minn., who officiated in the absence of Archbishop Ireland. A large number of people, relatives and friends of the young levites witnessed the impressive ceremony. Among the newly ordained was one from far away P. E. Island, Rev. Thomas E. Cullen, son of Mr. Patrick Cullen, Fitzroy St., Charlottetown. Father Cullen has resided at the Seminary for upwards of four years and has earned an enviable reputation for scholarship. Owing to the fact that his ordination took place before the regular time it was impossible for him to return to his Island home to offer up his first Mass. On Sunday, the 10th inst., he celebrated the Holy Sacrifice for the first time in the Cathedral of St. Paul in presence of a large congregation. He was assisted by the priests of the Cathedral and by Rev. J. M. Reardon of the Seminary who preached a sermon appropriate to the occasion. We wish Father Cullen many years of useful labor in his adopted home.—Com.

AN exchange says: If the news by cable be true that a cure has been discovered in England for the dread disease cancer, many people throughout the world will breathe free. The cablegram states that Lady Margaret Nash was dying of cancer in the throat, that the disease had so developed that her throat was nearly closed. So bad was she, indeed, that nourishment had to be administered artificially, and her death was expected at any time. A visiting friend prescribed for her the use of fresh green violets leaves. The suggestion was followed. Relief was immediate. The large, hard, external tumor disappeared and in a week all pain had ceased and the cancerous growth in the throat disappeared in a fortnight. It is said that the result of the remarkable cure has caused a sensation in England in medical circles.

Plot to Seize the Yukon.

There appears to be considerable basis for the report that a conspiracy was planned by adventurers to overpower the mounted police and seize the Yukon. Owing to the vigilance of the police, however, the plot was nipped in the bud. The story of the plot, based upon official reports to the minister of the interior, is as follows: About three weeks ago, the police of Dawson, under direction of Supt. Woods, shadowed a man whom they deemed a suspicious character. The police got into this man's confidence, and he formally disclosed a plot which he said had been formed by people at Skagway and Seattle. The idea was to rush the posts in the lower part of the Yukon and then take possession of the country. The conspirators reckoned upon American citizens in Yukon not assisting the Canadian authorities, so that the raid, in their opinion, would be a comparatively easy matter. News of the plot was quickly sent from Dawson to White Horse, and the police there soon had under surveillance all suspicious characters. The headquarters of the conspiracy was located in Skagway, and it was ascertained who the character associated with it were and where papers bearing upon the plot were kept. There was nothing, however, to show any overt act of treason, to the United States or Canada, and consequently the authorities could not take any proceedings. The Canadian officers went down to Skagway nevertheless and consulted with the United States officers, and concerted action was agreed upon in case of necessity. In the meantime the parties connected with the plot are closely watched.

It's O! for bygone days, The days that long since fled, The old child faith and simple heart The slowly vanished, That changing years Wrapt round with tears And buried with their dead. Hugh E. Gile.

PART II. OFF TO RUSSIA.

"I forget, aunt. I only remember that mamma made beautiful pictures in books for me, and papa made beautiful pictures; and the pretty head bent low, and tears were blotting the new drawing-book. The princess did not know how to console a child, though she would have liked to console Blandine at that moment. She gave her time, made no remark as to the blotted page, and went on apparently with her reading. When the young head was again lifted no trace of a tear remained in the dark eyes. Well, I will leave the rest to you, my dear. Ring for Daria. We have had drawing enough for one day. Daria, you may bring your knitting and tell stories to barshchynaya while I give audience to one who is to come about this time."

"She is waiting," said Daria. "So much the better." As she spoke, the visitor entered. "And this is Anis?" The princess held out her hand cordially. Anis took the extended hand, kissed it and burst into tears. "Come, come, come, Anis! Tears are never of much use. Tell me their cause and we will seek a remedy together. Tell me all about my poor Socha, my poor lost darling!"

"In the first place, mother, you must know that the cloth-factory your steward built was very successful while father lived and directed it. When he died suddenly, and Rand was taken to help the new master, things went rather badly. Rand said there was dishonesty, and that made enemies for him; so he had to seek another situation. Poor mother was so grieved at having to give up our little home that she fell sick. Rand had to go a long distance to obtain another situation, and we were to give up the house you settled mother in when she married. It broke her heart, she just could not rally from her sickness. When she died, I went after Rand. He was working, but not steadily. He had signed a contract with a lepidary for five years; after that he was to get a good place in the rich mines of Irkutsk. He was impatient to be off. He went before the five years were ended, and I had to seek a situation. I went to P. Karsburg. I knew the Wallinskis did not need a governess, but I thought Alexandra Alexandrovna would help me to find a place when I told her you were my god-mother. She was so good to me, though not happy at that time; for she had just learned of her father's second marriage with a person she did not like; and as she would not marry one of her father's obnoxious, she was just that out of him."

"Well, what after that?" "What could she do? She came to Paris, to the Beaunx Arts. "She had a pretty little apartment, three rooms only, in a quarter where the rents were not high. She fitted up her place very nicely. I was with her when I had no lessons. When Rand would go off to Irkutsk I resolved to keep near her until he wanted me. I couldn't give him up. I promised mother that I would be faithful to him. She said to me just before she died: "Be good, Nan; don't steal; don't lie; don't keep bad company. Be kind to Rand. And all these I promised and have done the best I could."

"Come, come, Anis! You are like all the rest, scorning yourself for a selfish, heartless man." "He was such a good boy, mother. So obedient, so industrious. Handy at every work; but soft, weak. He'd believe anything he heard and lend his last kopeck, and, you know, lent money is lost money in Russia."

"And so Sachinka (little soola) was good to you? I am glad of that."

"She was more than good. She got a room for me in the same house with herself. She fed me, clothed me, for the little help I gave her. I took care of her wardrobe, kept her room in order, went on errands about her work, did her marketing. And I was with her when the news came of the great conspiracy and the arrest of the students."

"How did she take it?" "She wouldn't believe that Vasily had anything to do with it. She said he couldn't be one of that band of assassins. He wouldn't risk her happiness by joining that set."

"But when he was condemned?" "She didn't believe in either. She couldn't. When it was proved and he was condemned, she prepared to set off to Moscow, hoping to reach there before the convey of prisoners should be started off. She had her traveling bag in her hand when she heard a step on the stairs, a man's step. She just flew to open the door. It was a carrier. He handed her a letter. She just read it, and fell to the floor. He is dead, I thought to myself. They have shot him or he has killed himself."

"I did what I could to bring her to. Oh, it was a sad sight! Almost all the life was gone out of her. She was ghastly, just like death itself. I got eau-de-vie and forced some of it between her teeth. I rubbed her and worked over her for hours. She would come to a little, and then go off into a deathly cold state again. For days she was like that. At last she would get up. And then what work it was to keep her from destroying herself! Now it was poison, now the railway, now the river."

"She was mad," said the princess, in a choking voice. "She was mad," said Anis, "and well she might be. On the second day I read the letter while she was in a sort of half-conscious sleep. It was from her old acquaintance. It said:

"My darling little Socha: Congratulate me. Papa has saved Vasily. We are betrothed. Your old friend, VERA."

"The judge had saved him from Siberia, on condition that he married his ugly daughter. Ugly and malicious always, was that Vera Gorski!"

"Was my poor child long in that state of despair?"

"Not so long. She was proud. In a few weeks she was quiet. She would go to work just to keep up appearances."

"Did she answer the letter?"

"She made me send congratulations in her name."

"Well, Anis, is there more to tell?"

"Only a few months after that my poor girl was getting resigned like, though very pale and thoughtful still. She kept steadily at her work, going even on a day when a great picture was being exhibited. I tried my best to keep her at home that day. But I had to let her go, mother. I would have gone with her, although I had lessons; but she wouldn't hear of it. Of course I was not sure it would be different from other days. I came home in the evening. No one answered my tap at the door. Twenty times in an hour I came down from my room to see if she had come. No sign, no token; and so the living night. I went out in the direction she always took, thinking to meet her. No!"

Repairing Neatly Done

Never thought of such a sign for a medicine did you? Well, it's a good sign for Scott's Emulsion. The body has to be repaired like other things and Scott's Emulsion is the medicine that does it.

These poor bodies wear out from worry, from over-work, from disease. They get thin and weak. Some of the new ones are not well made—and all of the old ones are racked from long usage.

Scott's Emulsion fixes all kinds. It does the work both inside and out. It makes soft bones hard, thin blood red, weak lungs strong, hollow places full. Only the best materials are used in the patching and the patches don't show through the new glow of health. No one has to wait his turn. You can do it yourself—you and the bottle.

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle. Send for free sample. SCOTT & BOWNE, TORONTO, CANADA, soc. and dr. all druggists.

Here Anis had to stop. The recollection of that night overcame her.

"On the third day my door opened and a gentleman walked in. He begged my pardon, saying he had knocked several times before trying the door. I was so dazed I had not heard a sound. I knew the gentleman by sight. He was an artist I had seen at the Academy. A fine-looking gentleman, tall, fair, with beautiful manners, just like a real English nobleman. He asked me if I was Miss Clough, and if I would go with him. 'I have no note,' he said, 'because the person you desire to see you cannot write at present.' I did not ask a single question, but just put on my bonnet and followed him. Oh, mother, I cannot give you any idea of what I saw! That beautiful girl lying on the hospital bed, all broken, combed, her big eyes sparkling bright. 'Nan,' she says, in a sort of whisper, 'Nan, I am going to my mother.' Then her eyes closed, and she lay a long time like that."

"Did she tell you it happened, Anis?"

"Yes, long afterwards. "There was a great stillness in that part of the academy, where she was working. Only an occasional footstep passed, for every one was in the exhibition hall. She, with her pretty white bonnet hanging over her face, was mounted on a ladder, copying a small picture that was hung high because of its great value. She heard a voice in the next room that made her heart almost stop beating; then another voice and laughter. She hastily mounted another step of the ladder, pulled her muslin bonnet over her face and put on her spectacles. The voices and the laughter came nearer. The steps came nearer, then passed. They seemed to pay no attention to the person on the ladder, but she had recognized Vera's laugh, and as they passed beneath her she saw her coquetting with her husband, laughing and merry, hanging on his arm. She did not remember whether she tried to descend or not after their departure. She felt herself growing giddy and seized the round of the ladder. She knew not even that she was falling. But she must have moaned loud enough to be heard in the next room, for the fall made no noise, did not alarm any one in the least. The artist, working away all alone in the next room at a picture promised for the exhibition, heard a moan and looked in. He saw a little heap at the foot of the ladder. "Oh, my God!" he cried, and throwing down his brushes ran and lifted her. Without a word to any one he carried her, as well he might, for he was a strong, splendid fellow indeed, through the least frequented passages to the street. "Any sum you like for a cab!" he cried to the cabsmen always in line there. "For life or death! emergency entrance; — Hospital!" There he laid her down and there I found her, a mass of wounds and bruises."

"If I had not gathered most of this from your letters, Anis, I think it would kill me. But, somehow, I have gotten over the worst pain, since I know she rallied from her grief and married."

"Were they happy, think you?" "Happy mother! Happiness is not the word. They were like child ren let into the Garden of Eden. The world never had anything for them after she gave her consent to become his wife."

"But she did not recover completely, it seems?"

"No, and that was one reason for her so long refusing to marry. She remained a cripple; well as to health, but a little paralyzed in her limbs. Both ankles had been broken in the fall. The doctor said it would pass in time, she was so young and of good constitution. She had the best doctors of the faculty of Paris and all the help money could command."

"Did she return to her former apartments?"

"No; she feared she might be traced. She went with me to a little cottage in the suburbs. It was tenanted by friends of Father Laland, but they gave us some rooms. There I remained with her till she was convalescent, till the past had faded and the new life was about to begin. The day of her marriage I started to join Rand, who was very ill; and she and her husband went to the south. He was anxious to take her there. He said he was sure she would be perfectly cured at Lourdes."

"What a pity that she changed her faith!"

"A pity, mother! why?"

"Love ought not to influence in such matters."

"It never influenced her, never! I can swear to that, if need be. Only sincere conviction led her to the faith of her husband. She read much, she prayed, and finally was persuaded that she was embracing the true faith."

"Did you not try to prevent it?"

"Did you not tell her to remember it was against the laws of her country?"

"How could I, mother? I know nothing at all about creeds! But from what I have seen of Christian actions I can only judge that Socha did choose the best."

"And the husband; what do you know about him?"

"I know that he was a gentleman, a scholar, an artist. But as to his

It Hurt To Eat.

The pain, nausea and distress that Dyspepsia suffer after every meal can all be permanently removed by Burdock Blood Bitters. It tones up and restores the stomach to normal condition so that it digests food without causing discomfort.

Here's proof positive: Mrs. Maggie Spinks, Delaware, N.B., writes the following: "I have been a sufferer from Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia for the past two years and feel very miserable. I could not take much food as it hurt me to eat. My friends said, 'Why don't you try B.B.B.' I did so, using two bottles, which made such a complete cure that I can now eat anything I like without it causing me discomfort."

family, you must ask Father Laland who married them. He took pains to satisfy himself on every point, before he would consent to perform the ceremony."

"A Jesuit, no doubt, this Pere Laland?"

"I don't know, mother. I never saw a Jesuit to my knowledge. What are they like?"

"They are black robed." "Father Laland wear black, certainly; but whether he be a Jesuit, or not, I cannot say. I know a Dominican or a Franciscan when I see one, but none other."

"I must see him. I will speak with him before the child departs." (To be continued.)

Mr. F. W. Myers, King St. E., Berlin, Ont., says: "I suffered for five years with palpitation, shortness of breath, sleeplessness and pain in the heart, but one box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills completely removed all these distressing symptoms. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cure all diseases arising from "weak" heavy worn out nerve tissues, or watery blood.

In the Clutch Of Consumption.

Don't neglect that persistent hacking cough till you find yourself in the clutch of Consumption. It's an easy matter to stop it now by taking DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP. This pleasant remedy heals and soothes the lungs and bronchial tubes, and cures lingering and chronic coughs when other remedies fail.

Mr. W. P. Cann, writing from Morpeth, Ont., says: "I honestly believe I would have died of consumption only for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I have used it for years and consider it has no equal for severe colds and throat troubles."

MISCELLANEOUS.

An English Author Wrote: "No shade, no shine, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves—November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes constantly troublesome. There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, completely cures catarrh, and taken in time prevents consumption. We cannot see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cures. It is undoubtedly America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

Mary had a little ring, 'twas given by her beau; and every where that Mary went, that ring was sure to go. She took the ring with her one day, off to the seashore, where she might display it to the girls who were all clustered there.

And when the girls all saw the ring, they made a great ado, exclaiming with one voice: "Has it at last got round to you?"

The breath of the pines is the breath of life to the consumptive. Norway Pine Syrup contains the pine virtues and cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, hoarseness and all throat and lung troubles, which, if not attended to, leads to consumption.

"Did you know," said the man who is always worrying, "that the coal supply will be exhausted in a few million years?"

"Well," answered the friend with the world weary face, "can you blame it, you would be exhausted too if you were worked for a million years, wouldn't you? Why express surprise at so simple a phenomenon?"

There is a newspaper in Kansas whose motto is, "Lie, steal, drink and swear," and it is thus explained by the editor: "When you lie, let it be down to pleasant dreams; when you steal, let it be away from immoral associates; when you drink let it be pure water; when you swear, let it be that you will patronize your home paper, pay your subscription and not send your jobwork away from home."

Painters' Kidneys.

The worst thing a painter has to contend with is the turpentine. The lead, of course, is bad too, but the turpentine cuts the kidneys, inflames and weakens them, makes the painter's life a dangerous one. When a painter's backaches, it is time for him to begin treating the kidneys.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS will fix them up—take out the inflammation and congestion give ease to the aching back.

Mr. J. Evanson, the well-known painter and decorator, 50 Oxford St., Toronto, Ont., said: "About eight weeks ago I was taken with an excruciating pain in my back over the kidneys. It was so bad that my wife had to apply hot cloths till the doctor came and gave me morphine. He said the trouble was due to a stone passing from the kidney to the bladder. My water was loaded with a brick dust deposit and scalded me passing. While in this condition I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and started taking them. It was not long before I got relief from pain and have been improving in health ever since. My urine is now clear and does not smart me, and I feel better than in years."

LAXA-LIVER PILLS. These little pills act easily and naturally on the bowels, clearing away all bile and effete material. Constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, heartburn, waterbrash—all disappear when they are used. Price 35c.
