THE SHOES I CAN'T WEAR

All Because of a "Touchy" CORN

But you can wear them, Madam—and now. Simply place on that corn a little Blue-jay plaster, and never again will you feel it. In two days there will be no corn. It will disappear for good. Millions of women know that. They don't pay corns. They don't use old-time methods. And they don't suffer. When a corn appears they end it. We are urging you to join them. Corns are needless since Blue-jay was invented. So they are absurd. You can prove in one minute that Blue-jay stops corn aches. You can prove in two days that it ends them forever.

WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER XIV.
 The Future Son-in-Law.

She allowed him to hold her hand in his for a minute or so, then slowly withdrew it, and walked to the window. He followed her hesitatingly.

"May I stay?" he asked.

"No!" she said, not coldly, but with a terrible calmness. "I want to think—I would rather—"

"I understand; of course you'd like to be alone—after all this. I'll go and tell the squire—" he said, smothering a sigh of disappointment.

She turned on him quickly.

"You will not tell him—"

"About our bargain? No, trust me," he said, with a sharp smile and a gleam of cunning in his small eyes. "Good-by, then, till—"

He waited for her to fix a time, but she merely murmured "Good-by," and with a wistful glance at her, he left the room.

She stood looking out at the bright flowers, her face pale, and wearing the rapt, preoccupied expression it had borne all through the interview. Then, as she heard the door open, she forced a smile to her lips, and turned with her back to the window to receive her father.

"Olivia!" he said, coming to her quietly. "Is this true?"

"That I am engaged to Mr. Bradstone, papa?" she said, with an unnatural cheerfulness. "Quite true. Has he told you?"

"Yes; the poor fellow is half mad with joy; I never saw him so—but let me look at you!"

And he took her in his arms and looked at her searchingly.

She bore it for a moment or two, then hid her face on his shoulder.

"Are you pleased, papa?" she said, in a low voice.

"Pleased?" he echoed, and there was a strange ring in his grave voice, a vague anxiety. "Yes, yes—that is, if you are pleased. It is for you to decide, my child. I have said all along, I have told him repeatedly, that not by word or look would I seek to influence you. If I have, it has been unconsciously."

"No, dear," she murmured. "And you have not. It is of my own free will—and you are pleased? Tell me, papa."

She seemed to crave a word of approval or satisfaction from him.

"Of course I am pleased," he said, gravely. "Bartley—by the way, you must not call him Mr. Bradstone any more—Bartley is a good fellow. I have always said so, and though you might have done better, as the cant of the world goes, he is a wealthy man, a very wealthy man, I think, and that means so much now, Olivia."

And he stifled a sigh.

"Yes," she said, softly. "I know that, and Mr. Brad—Bartley—the name seemed to leave her lips awkwardly—"is generous."

"I think so, I think so, I have always said so," he assented, as if he were eager to emphasize the good points of his future son-in-law. "Did he speak to you of money?" he said, after a moment's pause.

"Yes," she replied. "He told me that I could have as much as I wanted. That was generous, papa!"

"Very. It bears out my estimate of his character," he said, his brow knitting itself. "He—he told you that?"

"Yes," she said, in a low voice.

He drew a breath of relief.

"Heaven grant you have done wisely!" he said. "Of one thing there can be no doubt; he loves you very deeply, Olivia."

"Yes," she assented.

"And you?"

She kept the brave smile on her face.

"I shall make him as good a wife as I can, dear," she said. "I—I think he will be very happy."

He drew her to him and kissed her.

"It is of your happiness I am thinking," he said, in a low, nervous voice. "But I think you have done right. Heaven send you every joy, my child. You have been, and will still be, all the world to me—all the world—"

He broke off abruptly, as if unable to continue, and, gently releasing her, walked aside for a moment. Then he came back to her. "You will live at The Maples, Olivia? I could not lose you—I could not! There must be an understanding—a bargain."

A faint shudder ran through her at the sound of the hateful word.

"There shall be a bargain, dear," she said, smiling. "Mr. Brad—Bartley has just told me that we should live where I please, and the nearer I am to you—ah, if we could only live here!"

"Why should you not?" he responded, eagerly; then he checked himself with a laugh. "No, that would be asking too much, even of"

Bartley, generous as he is. But The Maples is not very far, is it? Not very far. I shall see you every day. You will still be the sunlight of my life, the comfort of my old age. See how selfish I am!"

She flung her arms around him with a sudden abandon, and he felt her quiver and tremble as she sobbed.

"Yes, I shall still be your child, papa. You will never let me go far from you. Promise—promise!"

"Hush, hush, Olivia!" he said, soothingly, his own voice trembling. "This is my fault. Come, come; this is not very complimentary to Bartley. Why, dear, you must remember that you don't lose your father because you gain a husband! Bartley and I are quite close friends, and we shall be closer now. Run up to your room, my dear, or he will see you have been crying, and feel hurt. He loves you, thank God! No man could love you more devotedly."

CHAPTER XV. A Woman's Way.

Faradeane rode home slowly through the wood. It was well for him that his horse was sure-footed, and picked its way safely through the undergrowth, for its master rode like a man who has suddenly lost his sense of sight and hearing. Unguided, the animal bore him to the gate, and then Faradeane, with an effort, raised his head and threw off the kind of lethargy which had held him.

He threw the bridle to his man and entered the cottage. As he did so, Bertie sprang out of a chair to meet him, with an eager, anxious expression; then he stopped short and uttered an exclamation of dismay.

"Great Heavens! are you ill?"

Faradeane closed the door carefully, and dropped his hat on the table.

"No—that is, yes; it's of no consequence." He went to the sideboard and drank some wine. "I—I beg your pardon; help yourself. You'll want it," he added, unfeelingly, but with a sad, decisive air.

"Then—then you've seen her?" faltered Bertie. "I thought you would go to her this morning. You have seen her—"

"Yes, I have seen her," assented Faradeane, dryly.

"And—but there is no need to ask you the result," breathed Bertie, like a man resolved not to show the agony that is devouring him.

"My face is that of an unsuccessful ambassador, is it? Yes, my mission has failed, Cherub. I am sorry."

Bertie turned his back to him and was silent for a moment; then he said, hoarsely:

"What did she say? Tell me."

"What did she say?" repeated Faradeane, dropping into a chair and passing his hand over his brow with a weary gesture, as a smile of bitter self-mockery shone for a moment in his eyes. "I don't know. What does it matter?"

"You don't know?" echoed Bertie, turning to him. "For Heaven's sake, try and remember! I—I can bear it, whatever it was. Did she laugh?" and his lips quivered.

"Laugh! No, she didn't laugh much," replied Faradeane, grimly, as the vision of the slim, graceful form lying full length in its abandon of misery rose before him.

"Then she took it seriously? What did you say to her, Faradeane?"

"I said all I could. I did my best. Believe that, Bertie. I can't tell you what I said, but I pleaded as if—he paused, and his lips came together tightly—"as if I were pleading for myself. I could do no more. Would to Heaven I had not done so much!" bitterly.

"And what did she reply? Did she say 'No' straight out?"

"No, she didn't."

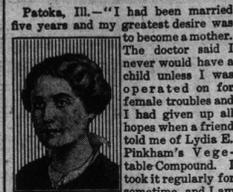

"Then there is—there may be some hope! You took her by surprise; she was frightened, perhaps. She'll think it over," said Bertie, excitedly.

Faradeane rose and laid his hand on his shoulder, firmly, yet pityingly.

"Cherub, there is no hope," he said, in a low, grave voice. "I should be your bitterest enemy, instead of your best friend, if I allowed you to think that there was. There is none. Accept it, Bertie, once and for all. Be a man; there is no hope—there never has been. If you had pleaded for yourself, if an angel had pleaded for you, instead of me, it would have been the same."

Mrs. Stephens Did Not Need The Surgical Operation.

Patoka, Ill.—"I had been married five years and my greatest desire was to become a mother. The doctor said I never would have a child unless I was operated on for female troubles and I had given up all hopes when a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly for some time, and I am in better health than ever, and have a healthy baby girl. I praise your Vegetable Compound for my baby and my better health. I want all suffering women to know that it is the sure road to health and happiness."—Mrs. GEORGE STEPHENS, R. F. D. No. 3, Patoka, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ills because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good old-fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, curative influence.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

"She—she never cared for me?"

"Yes, she cares for you as a sister cares for a brother. Be content with that—"

"Content!" Bertie burst out. "Content! You are mad, Faradeane!"

"I dare say," was the calm, sad assent. "We are all more or less mad, Cherub; but I would rather be loved as a brother by Olivia—Miss Vanley—than as a husband by any other woman—"

He stopped abruptly, and Bertie stared at him.

"You can't know what love—such love as mine—is!" he said.

Faradeane smiled.

"Perhaps not," he said, grimly.

"I tell you—but what is the use of talking? Faradeane, my life is ruined. I don't care what becomes of me. I staked everything upon her; I loved her as a man never loved a woman before. I—oh, old fellow, tell me the truth! Is there no hope for me?"

Faradeane shook his head.

"Not a fragment," he said, solemnly. "If I—if I went to her myself—"

"As you should have done at first," said Faradeane, grimly. "Would to Heaven you had. No, Bertie, none. Don't go to her. Accept my report. Why should you harass her? I tell you that there is no more chance of her marrying you than there is of her marrying—the Sultan of Mocha. Be a man, Cherub. There are other women—"

Bertie put up his hand.

"Don't," he said, wincing. "I can't bear that anyhow. I'm—I'm very grateful to you, old fellow. You did what few men would have done, what I would have asked no other man to do, and—and I'm grateful. Even now, crushed and knocked out of time as I am, I can scarcely realize it. I thought she might not consent right away, that she might say she'd think it over—"

"There was no occasion for her to do that," said Faradeane, grimly.

Bertie looked up sharply.

"You mean that there was—some one else?" he said, with the acuteness of a man whose nerves are on the rack.

Faradeane nodded.

"There is! Who—who is it?"

"Mr. Bartley Bradstone."

Bertie groaned.

British Fighting Subs. Off American Coast.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 18.—Apparently with the idea of trying to capture or sink German submarines, Great Britain has dispatched two fighting submarines to this side of the Atlantic. The submarine depot ship Adamant, with two British undersea fighters, was off the Virginia coast a few days ago, and reported to have engaged in a three days' search for the German submarine Deutschland. The Adamant is reported to have sighted a third periscope 300 miles off the coast, and with her charges started after the stranger. The chase apparently did not result in the capture of the mysterious submarine, as the Adamant and other Allied warships are still reported off this coast. The two submarines are reported to have come from Bermuda or Halifax. They are said to be of a small type.

Dairy Shorthorns.

Remarkable Results are Being Secured in Alberta.

Dairying forms a prominent feature in the work carried on in connection with the demonstration farms and schools, conducted by the Department of Agriculture in the Province of Alberta. As part of this work demonstrations have been given as to the capacity of the double-purpose Shorthorn as a milk producer. The records made in the Alberta Provincial farms have not quite equalled the best made at the Ontario Agricultural College, where one dairy Shorthorn gave 12,401 pounds of milk in a year. What has been accomplished in Alberta would, however, be creditable under any circumstances, and is especially so in view of the fact that the Alberta records were made by cows imported from Ontario, and that had not as yet been fully acclimatized in the west.

At the demonstration farm at Sedgewick, Alberta, the Shorthorn cow Lady McKay 2nd, gave 10,472 lbs. of milk in a year, and two other Shorthorns gave 9,699 and 9,096 lbs. of milk respectively. Fourteen cows of the same breed at this farm, five of these being two-year-olds, and one three, gave an average of over 6,000 lbs. of milk for the year.

The most interesting feature in connection with what is being done with dairy Shorthorns at these Alberta Provincial farms is found in the records made by daughters of one of the herd bulls. This bull is Butterfly King. He has, says the official report of the Department of Agriculture all the characteristics of the choicest dairy Shorthorn sires, and at the same time he would in his prime have stood in good company in any beef show ring. This bull is the sire of one cow which produced 8,343 pounds of milk in nine months; another which is credited with 5,284 pounds in a little over six months; of a three-year-old which produced 2,561 pounds in three months, and a two-year-old which has a record of 3,454 pounds of milk in five months. The Department report claims for this bull that he has more daughters in the Record of Merit in Canada than any other dairy Shorthorn bull in the Dominion.

The Allies' Man Hunt.

(From the Boston Herald.)

Observe how methodically the generals and war offices of the entente powers count and record the numbers of men captured in the engagements on every front. Mention is often made of the number of guns taken, but that is always secondary. The first thing to ascertain is the extent to which the enemy has been disabled by loss of men, and, while the dead and wounded can only be estimated, the prisoners can be counted. This there is always reliable information of the results of one method of reducing the hostile staff for the reduction of Austro-German man power. First of all, be sure to get the men rather than the guns, the men rather than the miles, and then the deserted guns and the vacant miles can be appropriated easily enough. That is in effect the order of the day.

The Russian, French, British, and Italian armies are all engaged in a great man hunt. They are closing in to capture or kill. Within the narrowing ring the enemy's guns must be put out of action and the fortifications demolished, but only in order that their defenders may fight no more. The guns, the munitions, the trenches are useless without the men, and to capture them without the men would be profitless. Guns are easily replaced, new for old; men are not. As fast as the Allies can capture guns the Krupp and Skoda works can make them; but where shall men be found to fill the depleted ranks when the army reserves are exhausted? The German reserve is believed to have entered on the down grade at the beginning of the year, and so heavy have been the losses of the Austrians, especially in prisoners, the Austrian reserve is probably extinct.

How is it that the allies are so successful now in capturing large bodies of the enemy? It is no secret; the enemy knows all about it, and laments the loss of that superiority in artillery which in the early days of the war enabled the Teutonic forces to gain a footing in Belgium, France and Russia. These words appear in a semi-official Austro-Hungarian statement: "Our artillery cannot rival the overwhelming strength of the enemy's guns, and is therefore unable to prevent our infantry." Besides, there is the manner of handling the artillery for the capture of men. We noted this first on the Russian front, when Brusiloff dropped his curtain of fire in rear of attacking infantry, cutting off the retreat and gathering in the prisoners. This the horrible grinding down of the French front at every assault, and the guns are incessantly shelling a five-mile-zone behind the German lines. The same plan is in operation on the Austro-Hungarian front. It is the hardest of Austria, next to Germany. France and Italy resist it wonderfully well; Russia does not seem to feel it; and Britain, according to Sir Douglas Haig "will not achieve her full strength on land until next summer." Surely by that time the man hunt should be over and the reign of peace begun.

SLIGHT FIRE.—At 10.05 this morning a slight fire broke out at the residence of Mrs. Molloy, New Gower Street. The Central and West End Fire Brigades quickly responded and quenched the blaze, which poured out of the chimney and threatened the neighbouring houses. Three minutes after the "all out" signal was sent in.

Belvidere Orphans at Smithville.

Yesterday the annual picnic for the Orphans of Belvidere was held at Smithville. The little ones, who were conveyed to the grounds in carriages, etc., enjoyed themselves right heartily. Nor could it be otherwise with them as the proverbial kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Furlong and the Misses Furlong was literally showered upon them. Sweetmeats and good things in superabundance, like the glorious sunshine, prevailed everywhere.

In the early evening the Rt. Rev. Mgr. MacDermott, V.G., paid a welcome visit and added greatly to the enjoyment of the children by promoting races and "scrambles" for them, into which they entered with vim and zest, right merrily.

Towards late evening the return to the Orphanage was made, and the joyous laughter and song of one hundred and thirty supremely happy and delighted children, eloquently proclaimed their grateful appreciation of the kindness of their hosts of Smithville, and of all who bent their energies towards rendering the day a happy one, but especially of the good Nuns, who unselfishly, in season and out of season, give of their best in talent and in labour to impart sunshine, happiness, noble sentiments and lofty ideals into the lives and hearts of their young charges. An ideal ending of an ideal day.

The housekeeper who considers the comfort of herself or maid will plan only one hot meal a day in summer. Sweet corn should never boil more than three minutes. If it boils longer will lose much of its sweetness.

The most important feature in giving comfort is to keep the air from the burn.

Only four lima bean plants should be allowed to a hill. If more remain they are too thick to produce well.

In sultry weather let the lid of the bread box remain open every morning. This will prevent mould.

Oives, a small quantity of minced red peppers and a spoonful of capers, increase the savor of potato salad.

Retribution.

It is natural that the increasing fury of battle on every field of operations mounting in a crescendo of horror to a climax which the combatants well know will be a decision, should be reflected in a deeper intensity of feeling on both sides and the perpetration of numberless petty acts inspired by sentiments of exaggerated bitterness and hatred. But there have been from the first, and particularly of late, certain performances of the German marked by a degree of wanton cruelty and injustice which are not explained, much less excused, on this ground, and which can only be referred to a deliberate course of action adopted for a set purpose. Intimidation it can hardly be, for it must by this time have penetrated even the German mind that no single one of their adversaries can be overawed by deeds of brutality against their helpless fellow countrymen. But the German mind is a strange machine and works in strange ways. We have lately heard from a German source the extraordinary explanation of the judicial murder of Captain Fryatt, an act in direct contravention of his murderers' own military code, that it was done in order to commit the German nation definitely to a line of conduct from which there could be no turning back—a sort of burning of their moral bridges in a ruthless war to the death with Britain!

We can well believe it. But, as always, it implies a complete misunderstanding of the British character; however faithfully portraying the German. Great Britain has gone a long step further in its reply than it did when the Wittenberg prisoners were left to languish and die, or when Edith Cavell was murdered. Its Parliament has put on record its determination that there shall be no peace until the individuals responsible for Fryatt's death have been handed over to justice. Germany can afford at present to ignore this; in all probability she does not understand what it means. It will sooner or later be abundantly plain. When one nation wars with another and is faced with inevitable defeat, peace is arranged upon diplomatic terms involving such things as the cession of territory, payment of an indemnity and the like. There will in this case be some additional terms to be considered, not merely as mutual agreements, the foundation of peace, but as precedent conditions to peace itself.

When Germany is in the end isolated and alone, as she surely will be, and further resistance is hopeless, she will sue for peace. Great Britain and her Allies will then demand, among other things, that certain individuals be handed over for trial, among them Fryatt's murderers. If Germany refuses, the Allies will not waste time in argument. Their guns will speak again and more German territory will be laid waste. If necessary, the way will be blazed, whatever the cost, right to Berlin, that this single act of justice be done.

It will be done, and the German people will be left to reflect. Perhaps the result of their reflections will be the discovery that with all their boasted "kultur" and "pre-eminence" (we will allow them to cling to the delusion) in the arts and sciences and what not, they have hitherto lacked at least one attribute which distinguishes men from brutes. It is most marked in the Anglo-Saxon. We call it variously the sporting instinct, sense of fair play and so on, designating by a trivial name what is a far deeper and finer quality. The Germans have not yet learned what it is or what they do when they outrage it. They cannot understand a people that have no hatred, but it may be admiration, for a foe that slaughters thousands of its citizens in fair fight, but is aroused by the murder of one defenceless man or woman to an anger that demands, and will not be satisfied until it exacts, the utmost expiation of the offence. As to the way it will be exacted we can quote, as a probable indication, the words of James M. Beck, an American celebrated as giving to the world the best and most convincing proof of the righteousness of the Allied cause in his book "The Evidence in the Case." Mr. Beck says:

"I venture the suggestion that when the war is ended the allied nations should select five distinguished jurists and four neutral nations, say Holland, Switzerland, Spain and the United States, each to be asked to name a jurist body thus to be formed to consider the primarily what offences of the Central Powers are of such heinous character as to justify postbellum punitive action against individuals, and in what manner such punitive measures could be taken."

Our readers will be interested in the following which has been sent us by the Associated Newspapers, Ltd.:

BRITISH BATTLE PICTURES.

"Picture postcards from official photographs of battle scenes in the great British offensive will in a few weeks be within reach of all throughout the Empire.

The British Official Bureau announces that for "the exclusive right of making and selling, in the United Kingdom, postcards from photographs taken by official photographers on the Western Front and issued by the Press Bureau, the tender of the Associated Newspapers Limited (the London Daily Mail) has been accepted. The terms offered by the successful tenderer are half the net profits of the undertaking, with the minimum payment of £5,000."

The money will be devoted to military charities.

The "Daily Mail" and the "Overseas Daily Mail" are taking steps to place the postcards on sale throughout the whole Empire.

The War Office has given unlimited facilities to the photographers in the fighting since the first of July, and their pictures, taken amid the smoke and roar of battle, are a unique record of the Great Advance.

The pictures will be reproduced in silver-print style (imitation photograph) in photogravure and in colors. They are to be made up in packets of eight postcards, for sale at 6d. a packet.

Announcements may be looked for as to the arrangements for sale in the Dominions, but inquiries may be addressed to the War Picture Department, "Daily Mail" Office, Carmelite House, London, England.

Obituary.

In the motor tragedy which occurred on Tuesday night last on the Freshwater Road a promising life was cut short in the flower of his manhood, in the person of the late Edward Knowling Scanlan. The deceased was a life-long employee of the Anglo-American Telegraph Company where he was held in the highest esteem as well by the management as by his fellow employees. The deceased was of a gentle and retiring disposition, and made hosts of friends not alone in the city but in the nearby outports, where he was a general favourite. He was a son of the late Thomas Scanlan, a trusted official of the Anglo-Company up to the time of his death. He leaves several brothers and sisters, some of whom are residing outside the Colony, and to whom his tragic end will come as a great shock. It was only those who knew Edward Scanlan intimately that could appreciate his good qualities of head and heart. He was charitable without ostentation, and was ever ready to assist any deserving charity, and only those who were beneficiaries were aware of his generosity. In social circles he was a prime favourite, as his bright disposition and kindly manner endeared him to all those with whom he came in contact. To the bereaved relatives the Telegram extends condolence.—Com.

Iron Cross Refused.

"A notable little incident is reported in connection with the final 'clearing up' at Oviliers.

"A party of prisoners, with whom were two officers, were being marched back in charge of a subaltern's guard. One of the German lieutenants, coming up abreast of the British officer, unpinned an Iron Cross from his breast, and extended it. The British officer asked him what he meant.

"Take it for having done what we considered to be impossible," said the German officer. "I give it to you."

"The lieutenant thanked the German, but declined, explaining that it was not the custom of the British Army to deprive an unfortunate enemy of anything he had won by his own bravery," says Router's Correspondent.

HAMBURG IN STATE OF REVOLUTION.

LONDON, Aug. 24. A despatch to the Chronicle from Amsterdam says that for a week past the port of Hamburg has been in a state of revolution. One who has just escaped, as he expressed it, tells an extraordinary story of the gradually rising exasperation of the population, until early last week they broke into hunger riots and peace demonstrations. The authorities appear to have been taken by surprise, for the police were unable, and perhaps unwilling, to quell the disturbances. They were completely overpowered, and before soldiers could arrive angry crowds had forced their way through several principal streets and smashed every shop and business house window. Only vigorous measures were able to restore order.

ANOTHER AIR RAID.

LONDON, Aug. 24. The East Coast of England was visited again last night by a hostile airship which dropped bombs in a field, but did no damage. The British official statement concerning the raid, says: A hostile airship crossed the East Coast shortly before midnight last night, and a number of incendiary and some explosive bombs were dropped in open fields. No damage or casualties are reported. The airship went to sea again before one o'clock this morning.

VIOLENT SHELLING BY GERMANS.

PARIS, Aug. 24. After intense bombardment of Soyecourt Woods, the Germans attacked with grenades the French positions south of the Somme last night, but without avail, says to-day's War Office statement. Positions between Fleury and Thiaucourt, which had been taken by the French, were violently shelled by the German guns.

BULGARIAN ATTEMPTS REPULSED.

LONDON, Aug. 24. A statement on the Balkan fighting says that the French and British have repulsed Bulgarian attempts to recapture positions in Doiran sector, while the Serbians have retaken Hill 1506, northwest of Ostrovo.

VON MACKENZEN.

LONDON, Aug. 24. A wireless press despatch from Borne says that the Vienna paper Allgemeine Zeitung in denying reports that Von Mackenzen is on the Western front, states that he is, Commander-in-Chief of the combined Bulgarian-German-Turkish forces operating against the Allies at Salonika.

CREDIT FOR $25,000,000.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24. Completion of negotiations for the extension of a second commercial credit to France is announced here. The new credit runs for one year and is to be availed of by 90 days sight drafts. It is secured by collateral consisting of French Government bonds, which are held in New York, and payment in gold at maturity at New York is guaranteed by the Bank of France. Several New York banking houses will participate in the advance.

THE DEUTSCHLAND.

LONDON, Aug. 24. Reports of the return of the German submarine Deutschland from the United States are corroborated in a telegram received at Amsterdam from Bremen, as forwarded by Reuter's correspondent. According to this information, the Deutschland travelled 4,200 miles on her return voyage. At the beginning of the sea was tempestuous, but later it became calmer. The Deutschland proved to be able to navigate stormy seas excellently. Her engines worked faultlessly. No icebergs were passed on the journey.

The departure for America a week ago of the German submarine Bremen is reported in a despatch from Bremen. It is said the owners of the Deutschland and Bremen received word seven days ago of the progress being made by the Deutschland on her return voyage, and that it was not until they had obtained this information that they permitted the Bremen to depart.

TURKS SURRENDERING.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 24. Our offensive west of Lake Van is developing. Northeast of the town of Mush we occupied the region of the village of Arindovank. In the region of the village of Bachia two regiments were surrounded and taken prisoners. One of these regiments surrendered in a body with its commander and staff, cannon and machine guns. Counting of captured booty and prisoners taken is proceeding.

GREEKS VOLUNTEER WITH AL-LIES.

ATHENS, To-day. From all parts of Greece officers and men are hastening to Salonika to volunteer with the Entente forces to fight the Bulgarians. A corps of Albanians has arrived at Salonika. In view of the intensity of feeling over the Bulgarian advance, a mass meeting which is being planned for next Sunday in celebration of the anniversary of the revolution of 1898, is regarded with some apprehension. The advance of the Bulgarians in North eastern Greece was made with the sanction of the Government.

ARMED YACHT SUNK.

LONDON, To-day. The Admiralty announces that the Germans claim having sunk a patrol boat in the neighborhood of the Gulf of Alexandrette. This doubtless refers to the British armed yacht Zaida, which was engaged in destroying patrol stores in the Gulf. According to a Turkish report, four officers and 19 men of the crew of the Zaida were taken prisoners. The fate of the remaining two officers and eight men is unknown; it is assumed they are lost. The German claim referred to by the British Admiralty had not been published previously. The Zaida was a yacht of 108 tons, and prior to the war was owned by Earl Rosebery, former British Premier.

The Jealous Wife.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"What a discontented look Mrs. M— has around her mouth!" commented Molly, the little stenographer lady. "I wonder what it makes her so? She seems to have so much to be happy about." "She can't be happy," said the L. a. d. y. w. h. o. always-kn-o-w-s-somewhat. "No one can be happy who is so jealous." "Jealous!" said Molly. "Why I didn't think her husband ever looked at another woman. He always has his head-in-a-book when I see him." "Exactly," said the Lady, "and that's just what Mrs. M— is jealous of—his books. Don't you know that people who have the jealous temperament can be jealous of other things besides people?"

Jealous, But Not Of Other Women

"I don't know Mrs. M—, so I couldn't fully appreciate the Lady's analysis of her case, but I do know a great many women who make themselves (and other people) unhappy because they are jealous of some interest of their husbands. There is the woman who is jealous of her husband's male friends. Very likely she associates freely with her women friends, but when he brings his friends to the house or goes off with them for an evening she feels aggrieved and tries to make him feel that he has done something wrong. Then there's the woman who is so jealous of her husband's sports.

She Simply Hates That Boat.

I know one woman who hates her husband's boat almost as much as she would hate another woman. It had always owned and loved boats, and she knew it when she married him. She was timid about the water and refused to go with him. He insisted on spending some of his holidays on the water and she stayed at home and sulked and clouded the whole day for him by her manner of receiving him on his return. Other women are jealous of golf or tennis or hunting or any sport which they do not understand. But the most unreasonable jealousy of all is the jealousy which many women feel of their husband's interest in his business.

Jealous of Her Husband's Business.

They are the chief beneficiaries of this interest and yet they are unjust enough to be jealous of it. Of course there are plenty of men who by their absolute neglect of their wives for pleasure or business give good reason for jealousy. But it is not these women I mean and let no husband who deserves blame cite this article to his wife as a reason why he should not receive it.

Everyday Etiquette.

"I have seen so many people eat club sandwiches in different ways that it has often caused me to wonder whether it is proper to cut it up or take it in the fingers," mused Irene, "and another thing that I am not certain about is, when I am dining in a hotel, should I say 'thank you' to the waiter when he helps me to sugar and cream, etc.?"

The proper way to eat a club sandwich is to cut it up with the knife and eat with the aid of a fork. Some sandwiches may be nibbled as you would any servant when waiting on you.

A wire basket is always very desirable for frying.

DRY-WEATHER.

Throughout the west the long July, like some champagnes, was extra dry; the skies were blue, day after day, the sun pursued its red-hot way; when breezes swept the countryside, they felt as though they had been fried.

The goosebore prophets had their fling, and prophesied like everything. "I heard a rain crow all day long, and that's a sign that we're going wrong," one prophet said, to weeping joys; "we'll have a rain within two days." "This morn the eastern sky was red," another bum clairvoyant said; "that is a sign that rain will come, and save our crops of chewing gum." "There is a ring around the moon," remarked another wise goosoon, "and when the moon is wearing rings, there's bound to be a rain, by jings." "The pigs," observed a graybeard seer, "are showing signs of mortal fear; they rush, excited, round the pen, and squeal and gallop back again; and when the pigs thus act insane, you bet your boots there'll be rain." But all the prophets missed their guess, and but augmented our distress, by promising a sweet surcease the while we sizzled in our grease.

S. A. Officers Arrive.

A large number of Salvation Army Officers reached town by yesterday's express to attend the Congress. They were met at the station by a large number of Salvation people, and last night were tendered a welcome at the Citadel. Over one hundred S. A. Officers are now in the city from all parts of the country. Owing to an accident to the train on which Commissioner Richards was travelling in Canada, he will not arrive till to-morrow afternoon. At 8 o'clock the same evening the city forces will combine and a public welcome will be given at No. 1 Citadel, New Gower Street.

Rumors of Efforts For Separate Peace.

Reports Reach Rome that Turkey and Bulgaria are Anxious for Peace.

Rome, Aug. 18.—Reports are coming from East, West, North and South concerning efforts by Turkey and Bulgaria to make a separate peace with the Allies. However, the papers warn the public not to put too much faith in such rumors, as, while there is a grain of truth in them, the Governments of those countries have taken no steps to that end.

The fact seems to be that certain influential persons of both Bulgaria and Turkey have sounded England and France and even Russia for the purpose of ascertaining on what terms separate peace would be granted, but that the Allies replied evasively, intimating that they could only treat with the responsible government and on the understanding that the countries desiring peace would fully acknowledge the victory of the Allies.

Real negotiations are still a long way off, but interested Bulgarians and Turks are working for this result.

TABASCO OFF.—The Furness Liner Tabasco sailed at nine o'clock last night for Liverpool taking a full freight and one of the largest mails that left here for some time.

Terra Nova For Me.

Sing not to me of the green fields of Erin,
Nor of the pluck which her soldiers have shown;
"Our boys" we know have done deeds just as daring,
No men in the wide world more brave than our own.

They've proven their worth on the sea and on dry land,
They've crossed and medals for their bravery;
I'm delighted to know that they're natives of my land,
Of all lands in the world, Terra Nova for me.

Scotia may sing of her heather and thistle,
Her sons and her daughters are loyal and true,
But give me the land where the wintry winds whistle,
My soul is enraptured and wrapt up in you.

I love every bit of your snow-covered mountains
When winter has thrown her cold pall over thee,
I love the cool drink from your clear crystal fountains,
Of all lands in the world, Terra Nova for me.

Albion, our Mother, has big ships to guard her,
Her foes she defied when their spite at her hurled;
I pray that kind Heaven may always reward her,
For her rule has enlightened the civilized world.

I love thee, I love thee, thou land of our fathers,
May God's choicest blessings be poured upon thee,
Land where in winter the stormy king gathers,
Of all lands in the world, Terra Nova for me.

Our Firemen Turned Down.

Because of their mutinous conduct when the ship was here a fortnight ago, resulting in the drowning of a seaman named Stanley Babstock, the Newfoundland firemen on the Red Cross Liner Florizel were all paid off last week at New York and foreigners taken on in their places, the local men coming on here from the American port as passengers. Some of our firemen have themselves to blame in the matter. An enquiry into the death of Stanley Babstock is now being held here at the Magistrate's Office.

Lines on the Daily Rhymster.

The prattle and the rattle of the rhymster's ding, ding, dong. The grumbling and the mumbering of that mighty dose of song. The banging and the slanging, oh the tiresome peevish whine. That at evening in the papers makes us tired—me and mine.

I relish local talent but that drivell, not for mine. It makes me feel so peevish that I heck to bed at nine.

But at morn' again I meet it, this tiresome rhyming pest. And it puts me in bad humour while a putting on my vest.

But this rhymist is a timer for he draws his regular pay. From the public who pay taxes, sure he gets it day by day.

I don't care a hang how much he scoops if only he'll keep still. And quit his botheration: I wonder if he will?

We're tired of flimsy rhyming, we're sick of the old ding dong. Oh give us something witty and do not make it long.

Cut out abuse of Councilors, that gag is worn and gray. And do something for your money for the stivers that we pay.

A Suggestion For the Council

Editor Evening Telegram,
Dear Sir,—While passing St. George's Pond on Signal Hill, yesterday, I was shown some peat which was secured by the foreman from the sides of the pond as the water has been drained low to facilitate the building of the intake.

I was informed by the foreman that after a few days' drying in the sun he uses the peat in his grates at home and that it burns splendidly and is equal to hard coal.

It occurred to me that here is a chance for a practical experiment by either the Government or the Municipal Council. The peat bed is about 15 feet deep and there are thousands of tons in sight (i.e. before the pond is filled).

If all that is claimed for it by those who have used it is correct, there is an opportunity for the Municipal Council to dispose of the same at a low figure and at the same time produce an income for the city.

Trusting that either public or private enterprise will take up this matter before the pond is again flooded.

I am, yours etc.,

Their sorrow is shared by the people of the whole country and the deepest sympathy will go out to them and their sorrow will be mingled with pride over the noble, brave-hearted sons of Newfoundland who died in a righteous cause.

Cordial Welcome to Lieut. Carter

Lieutenant Cyril Carter, of "Our's" returned home yesterday on an extended furlough. He is a Gallipoli hero and bears the honorable scars of battle. He was one of the first members of the Newfoundland Regiment to be put out of commission, as it will be remembered, he was shot through the knee during the landing of our troops at Suvla Bay some nine months ago. Ever since he has been an invalid and it is not yet definitely known whether he will ever again be fit for active service. He is still suffering from his wounds. He crossed by the C. P. R. Liner Messamah from Liverpool to Rimouski, thence going by rail to Halifax where he embarked on the Red Cross Liner Florizel for St. John's.

We join with his many friends in bidding him a cordial welcome and a speedy recovery.

Miss Gertrude Edwards, St. John's youngest prima donna, will also be heard in a beautiful ballad. There is both fun and pathos in this show, enough to please all. Every child should attend the matinee on Saturday to see those clever little girls trained by Mrs. Rossley. Two shows nightly. Secure your seats.

How We Must Defeat Germany.

We must await events, and meanwhile press home our offensive. But in achieving a decisive military result we should not aim at driving that large element of the German people who stand by Liebknecht and freedom into the arms of their oppressors under the dreadful alternative of surrendering to the enemy at home or seeing their nation perish. If we adopt the policy of the destruction of Germany we have a long journey before us and we shall fall in the end, for no nation that means to live will ever die. What we have to do is to beat Germany cleanly, decisively, finally, but to beat her in such a way that the better elements in her life will triumph and bring her in the course of the healing years back into the society of civilized nations. It is not Germany we have to destroy or can destroy. It is the spirit and policy of Bismarck that we can and must destroy.—London Daily News.

GRAND FALLS, To-day.

The people of Grand Falls gave a right royal welcome to Lieut. George Hicks, who arrived by Wednesday night's express from the front. The Patriotic Committee with the town band met at the log house where His Excellency the Governor is staying, and marched to the town hall. His Excellency, Lady Davidson, William Scott, Esq., Mrs. W. Scott and Lieut. Hicks drove in carriages with the procession. The chair was occupied by W. Scott, Esq., who in a few nice words welcomed our gallant young man from the front. His Excellency then spoke and both welcomed and congratulated Lieut. Hicks for the work he has done in the Regiment. He also paid a splendid tribute to Grand Falls by saying that it was the leading district of the colony for the young men that had enlisted from it. After His Excellency's splendid speech, Lieut. Hicks rose to his feet amid thunderous applause. He first thanked the people for the nice reception that was given him and then gave a sketch of the drive of July 1st when he was wounded. He also spoke in glowing terms of the Red Cross work and paid a splendid tribute to the open-heartedness of both the English and Scotch people. He said that it was the duty of every young man in Newfoundland who was able, to enlist and fill up the gaps that were made in our regiment by German bullets. He said that the regiment was determined to pay it back when they met the Germans again. He is leaving for St. John's by Sunday's express for a few days and then going back to the front.

Capt. Carty Returns.

Capt. G. T. Carty, who left here in charge of the last contingent, returned by yesterday's express. Captain Carty reports the trip across on board the Scyllian was all that could be desired; the distance from here to Liverpool was covered in 4 days. At the latter port the men were drafted to the Regimental quarters at Arr where they are now in training. On visiting Wandsworth and other hospitals in London, Capt. Carty was surprised to hear that a large number of our wounded soldiers had again reported for duty, while those still confined to hospital were in the best of spirits. As a result of a railway accident on Aug 11th, while en route from London to Liverpool in company with Mr. J. A. Cliff, K.C., particulars of which appeared in yesterday's Telegram, Capt. Carty's luggage was held up on the other side.

Health Hints

Have you ever noticed a bread wagon with the door wide open and the dust and dirt from the street blowing in over the bread? Just stop and think of the dirt, and you will always ask your Grocer for Lynch's Bread wrapped and sealed by machinery in a dust and germ-proof wrapper.—1718,17

Lieut. Hicks at Grand Falls.

Lieut. Geo. Hicks, of the First Newfoundland Regiment, a Gallipoli veteran, arrived at Grand Falls late on Wednesday night, but despite the lateness of the hour hundreds of people from the paper town were at the station to extend him a hearty welcome home. Prior to enlisting Lieut. Hicks was attached to the teaching staff of the public high school at the place mentioned, and at the outbreak of hostilities did some valuable work in recruiting. The young officer's home is at Carmanville, Pogo District. After reporting at headquarters he will join the Susu on her next trip north on a brief visit to his parents.

Cures Catarrh, Bronchitis by Swift Certain Method.

Thousands of drug fiends have been started on their downward course through Catarrh snuffs containing some habit forming drug. If you suffer from a cold, sneezing or Catarrh—don't use a snuff—use a sensible treatment like Catarrhazone. It heals and soothes, brings relief at once, cures thoroughly. In bronchitis and throat trouble no doctor can do better than prescribe Catarrhazone. Try it—see what wonders it works—what power it possesses. Different from the old way, you inhale Catarrhazone. Get the dollar outfit which includes the inhaler and is guaranteed. Smaller size, 50c; sample size, 25c; at all dealers.

Typhoid Outbreak.

At last night's meeting of the City Fathers Dr. Brehm, Public Health Officer, reported that four cases of typhoid fever had occurred within the city limits during the past week and that three of these cases were in the one house on the Southside, indicating that the use of impure water was the cause of the infection. He added that some of the wells on the Southside had been used and not cleaned out for the past quarter of a century. The quarantine rules have been strictly enforced and precautionary measures taken to stop the disease from spreading.
