It is false economy to postpone painting your property. Many months—perhaps years—must elapse before paint will return to 1913 prices, if ever. Meanwhile the wear and tear of weather is working more harm than any future reduction of paint prices could cover. Insure your house against decay by painting it with Matchless Paint.

Mothers' Advice

The responsibility for a daughter's future largely rests with the mother. The right influence and the information which is of vital interest to the daughter imparted at the proper time has not only saved the life but insured the success of many a beautiful girl. When a girl's thoughts become sluggish with headaches, dizziness, or a disposition to sleep, pains in back or lower limbs and a desire for solitude, her mother should come to her aid and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, will at this time prepare the system for the coming change and start this trying period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities. Thousands of women residing in every part of the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtues of this medicine, and what it has done for their daughters.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for what it has done for my daughter. She was 15 years of age, very sickly and pale and she had to stay home from school most of the time. She suffered agonies from backache and dizziness and was without appetite. For 3 months she was under the doctor's care and got no better. Always complaining about her back and side aching so I did not know what to do. I read in the paper about your wonderful medicine so I made up my mind to try it. She has taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and doesn't complain any more with her back and side aching. She has gained in weight and feels much better. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers and daughters."—Mrs. M. F. FRODA, 616 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Heir of Rosedene

OR,
The Game-Keeper's Hut

CHAPTER XXIX.

IN THE GAMEKEEPER'S HUT.

"A bad wait," he answered, "but where you like you may lead me, my queen! Mansion or keeper's cot are the same to me so you share them, my sweet Edna!"

Then they heard the dim, muffled thump of the horses upon the snowy road. How quickly that carriage must have come, they both thought, and, wrapping her in his greatcoat, and then again in the rug, he carried her in his arms through the snow to the carriage. Lights were flashing across the windows of the house as they approached it, and the hall door was wide open. Edward had, in his utter confusion and dismay, dropped a hint, and it had run through the whole house, as a spark dropped in the prairie runs through the snake grass. With Edna, all disheveled and flushed, he passed through the small crowd of servants, some of whom, being villagers, recognized him, and began to bow and cheer, and grow suddenly excited, and entered the drawing room, where they were instantly attacked by the anxious and excited questions of Aunt Martha and Mrs. More, who were, after the manner of each, perfectly upset.

Aunt Martha put up her spectacles as the fugitives entered, and stared at Cyril dumbfounded; then she sank onto a sofa; and then Edna, who had gone on her knees beside her, drew close to her bosom.

"Mr. Payne!" she gasped. But before she could say one word more a thrilling little treble rang out:

"Uncle Cyril! Uncle Cyril!" and little Bertie ran forward and clasped Cyril round the legs.

Cyril was touched, and he was glad to hide his face for a moment behind the bonny, tearful one of the boy.

"Yes, it's Uncle Cyril, Bertie! You are glad to see him, eh?"

"Young eyes are sharp, mamma!" he said, addressing the bewildered mother and holding out his hand. "You remember me now, Julia?"

"It is Cyril!" gasped Mrs. More. "Lady no longer!—and as the horrible doubt grew into certainty, she promptly fell into hysterics, and begged and prayed them to take "her home"—meaning, of course, to More Court—a request which her husband had seemed to anticipate, for he sent word into the room to say that the carriage was ready.

The weeping lady was conveyed into the vehicle with the greatest care, and Edward was about to follow, when it occurred to him that it would only be polite to invite Cyril to his own house, and gruffly telling his inconceivable spouse to be quiet, he returned to the drawing room to find Cyril already seated before the fire, with Edna at his feet and Aunt Martha close at his elbow, and both women listening to him with ears and eyes and mouth, as if every word that fell from him was a pearl; and after standing and staring for a moment unperceived, advanced into the room.

"Hello! is that you, Edward? Nothing the matter?"

"No—no—I'm going; but—but I thought—perhaps, you'd like to come home to-night. Of course, the place is not mine to ask you to—it's your own. I'll tell the people and have a room ready."

"Thank you, Edward," said Cyril, "but I think"—and his hand played softly with the silken hair that half hid the downcast face at his knee—"I think I will stay here, if my wife will have me!"

So Edward went, and Cyril resumed his story. What a story it was! It sounded like one of the exciting romances the old novelists used to glory in; and Aunt Martha, much as she wished to leave the reunited lovers alone, could not tear herself away, could scarcely suppress her tears at some portions of the recital, and at others could not suppress little ejaculations of amazement and kindred sensations.

And Edna—Edna sat motionless, with her head leaning against his knee, where it was convenient to his caressing hand; motionless, but not emotionless, for her face went pale and red by turns as he told them of the hardships he had gone through, of the dangers of those sharp, bitter tussles, when his men fell around him like corn before the sickle; and when he came to the story of that night before Bilbao, her heart beat so hard and fast that she fancied the other two must hear it as she did.

"It was a hard fight, well won," said Cyril. "We had been marching day and night to steal upon the town; we were but one against ten, and I thought once or twice we should lose the day," he broke off with a sigh, and the two women drinking in his words knew he was thinking of the wounded, the dying and the dead that fell beside him. Aunt Martha rose in her soft way, and went into the next room. Cyril bent down and turned Edna's face up to him. "It was a hard night, my darling," he said. "I thought I had learned how to shuffle off the mortal coil decently. I thought that I had got my quietus in that last little charge which won us the skirmish, and all I wanted was to creep into the dark and lie quiet; when I saw you I thought I was already dead, or that the delirium had set in. You did not know me—how should you, my poor darling!—but I knew you at a glance. I could not speak, too weak perhaps, at the first; perhaps I should have done so, but I saw Morton"—he paused, and Edna caught his hand and looked up at him eloquently.

"I was a fool, darling, but I thought that you had forgotten me—that you had learned to care for him—no, no—let me tell you! Well, weak as I was, I swore I would not die and leave you to fall in his clutches, and then I swooned, I suppose, for I do not remember anything more than that your sweet face was bending over me like an angel's, had vanished like an angel's, and that all was dark. When I woke I found myself lying in one of the ambulances. They had taken care of me, though the sawbones had given me up. I thought I had been dreaming, and lay pondering and pondering all day until I suddenly recollected something"—here he took from his bosom the blood-stained neck scarf.

Edna gave a great sob and hid her face.

"I knew it had all happened then, and that little handkerchief saved my life. You see, I said 'I'll live and give that back to her some day—no, not give it back, for I'll never part with it; but I'll show it to her some day.' I stuck to that and got better; then I got them to put me down in the dead list, and crept back to England, to be near you, to watch over you, and to thwart that oily villain, Morton. On my way, I went to look at the old place—the old bitter-sweet place—where you stole my heart. God! I suffered there! Not another word if you cry—not another word!"

"No, no, go on!" said Edna, holding up her face. "See, I am not crying—if I do it is for joy, for joy!"

"Well, then, I went on to Baste—I couldn't help it, you see, and I went to the little church, and there I saw the weak-kneed young parson that married us, and I asked to see the registry, for I thought I'd like to see your name, the name you had written—the page you had touched, and while I was looking at it—'Dear me,' says the young parson, 'didn't I marry you some time ago—and why, yes, I gave a copy of the certificate to a gentleman not a week ago.' I was staggered for the moment, then I asked him to describe the gentleman who had condescended to take so much interest in our affairs, and, of course, it was Morton. I lost no time then, but I came straight to England, intending to watch, night and day, if

Edna rose on her knees, and wore her white arms round his neck.

"Will you never forget it?" she whispered, imploringly. "Oh, Cyril! how often I have longed to purchase that short hour back, even with the cost of my life. I was mad, mad with jealousy that comes of excess of love. I loved you too much, Cyril; and when that woman"—a shadow came over Cyril's face, but he did not speak—"when she came and spoke horrible things of you, things that I did not half understand, that I do not understand or want to know anything about now, I felt as if she had torn my heart out, robbed me of everything—before she spoke I sat there in the sunlight, the richest girl in the world, full of love and trust. She snatched them away from me, and left me mad! Oh, Cyril, I have never seen her since, but I have looked for her everywhere."

Cyril looked with softened gaze and shook his head.

"You could not find her on earth, child—she is dead! Poor creature! she thought it one good action of her life, that warning you against me; she did not know I had made you my wife; she would not have believed it if you or I had told her it was so—she meant to do good."

"And though she did, what right had I to listen to her? What right had I, your wife, to send you from me, with hard and cruel words, because of something that had happened in the past? Oh, Cyril, night after night, I have lain awake, calling to you to come back. I have never dreamed one night but that you have stood beside me, with that look on your face. Oh!"

"Hush! my darling, my wife!—that is all passed."

"But why did you not take pity on a foolish girl, and come back to me?" Cyril hung his head, speechless for a moment; then he looked up, with self-reproach in his eyes:

"Because I was a fool, a self-tormenting fool, Edna! I thought that you—no, not you, but the world—would say I had tricked you into a marriage for the sake of the paltry money—that I, a ruined man, had saved myself from utter shipwreck by a piece of chicanery; and that you would think that I had come back to you, not because I loved you, but because I wished to claim John Weston's money."

I had to sleep in the woods, and run the chance of being shot for a poacher; but luck had turned; your under-keeper, my Edna, had left, and I got the berth, and there I was, near you at last. Oh, my darling, if you knew how I longed to see you! Sometimes, half mad with impatience, I thought I would walk boldly up the hall steps, walk in, and say: 'Look here, I am come for my wife—my wife!' But I didn't, because—because—"

"Go on," whispered Edna, softly.

"Because the memory of that cursed night in the churchyard rose and stopped me, and I thought: 'What force yourself upon a pure, innocent girl who doesn't love you, because she happens to be your wife—not' and so I waited until that awful rascal Morton should come. I wanted to meet him at his work, and catch him red-handed, for I gave him credit for greater cleverness than he possesses. I thought he knew I was still alive. For all that, I might have come sooner, notwithstanding the memory of that night—"

Edna rose on her knees, and wore her white arms round his neck.

"Will you never forget it?" she whispered, imploringly. "Oh, Cyril! how often I have longed to purchase that short hour back, even with the cost of my life. I was mad, mad with jealousy that comes of excess of love. There's no doubt that you get the maximum return for your money when you buy Zam-Buk, because Zam-Buk is a medicine—not 5% medicine and 95% animal fat as ordinary ointments are.

The herbal extracts and vegetable oils of which Zam-Buk is composed are so wonderfully blended and refined that Zam-Buk possesses unusual power of penetration. Instead of remaining on the surface skin, ordinary ointments do (owing to the amount of coarse animal fat they contain), Zam-Buk literally soaks through until it reaches the "root" of the disease, which it always cures from the "root" up, which is the only thorough and permanent way of curing skin troubles, and why Zam-Buk succeeds when other treatments fail.

Zam-Buk is best for eczema, dimples, blotches, psoriasis, chronic sores, blood-poisoning, teething rash, boils, piles, cuts, burns and scalds. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co. Toronto. 50c. box, 2 for $1.25.

MINERS' COMMISSION.
LONDON, March 20.

The interim report of the coal commission, of which Justice Sir John Peel is chairman, issued to-night, recommends seven hours for work underground instead of eight, from July 16, and six hours from July 1, 1921, subject to the economic position of the industry. The report recommends an increase in wages of two shillings per shift for colliers, and a reduction of one shilling for workmen now under sliding scales and an advance of one shilling for workmen under sixteen years. In the interest of the country the colliers, it is further recommended, should have an effective voice in the direction of the mines. Substitution of a uniformity of national jurisdiction or joint control. The Sankey report points out that the recommendations mean the distribution annually of £20,000,000 considered within that it should be considered whether a penny per ton brought to be collected at once on coal brought to the surface to improve the housing of the colliers. This would be equal to £2,000,000 yearly. The Sankey report was signed by Arthur Balfour who was master cutter of Sheffield in 1911-12 and has been connected with various advisory commissions. Sir Thomas Duckham, Director General of Aircraft production, and Sir Thomas Lloyd, member of the Shipping Commission, are also members of the Commission. The mine owners on the Commission recommended an increase of eighteen pence a day in wages and a reduction of working hours to seven. A third report by the miners' representatives, signed by Robert Smillie, the miner-leader, Frank Rodgers, Sir James Pollock Money, Sidney Webb and others recommend full acceptance of the miners' terms.

POLAND'S PITIFUL CONDITION.
CHICAGO, March 20.

In a letter received to-day by John Smutski, President of the National Polish Department, Madame Padewski, wife of the pianist, and Premier of Poland, described conditions in Poland as pitiful, and said the Polish army was hungry and without clothes in a zero weather and lacked 28,000,000 letters was dated January 28. The city of Lemberg was without electricity, water, food, arms or munitions, had been constantly bombed.

A JAPANESE AMENDMENT.
PARIS, March 20.

(By the A.P.)—A Japanese amendment to the covenant of the League of Nations providing that the contracting parties shall agree to grant equal and just treatment to all aliens within their borders, who are Nationals or State Members of the League, will be submitted by the Japanese from Japanese sources. The standpoint of the Japanese is that citizens of nations deemed sufficiently advanced to become members of the League, should have equal rights when travelling or living in foreign countries.

TO CONSIDER LEAGUE DRAFT.
PARIS, March 20.

A meeting of the League of Nations Commission will be held at 10 o'clock Saturday morning when proposed amendments and changes will be considered and the plan set into definite form. This will be the PARIS, March 20. (By the A.P.)—A Japanese amendment to the covenant of the League of Nations providing that the contracting parties shall agree to grant equal and just treatment to all aliens within their borders, who are Nationals or State Members of the League, will be submitted to the Supreme Council. It is learned by Reuters from Japanese sources. The standpoint of the Japanese is that all citizens of nations deemed sufficiently advanced to become members of the League, should have equal rights when travelling or living in foreign countries.

TO CONSIDER LEAGUE DRAFT.
PARIS, March 20. A meeting of the League of Nations Commission will be held at ten o'clock Saturday morning when all proposed amendments and changes will be considered and the plan put into definite form. This will be the first meeting of the Commission since the covenant was adopted, and it will consider proposals submitted at the hearing of neutrals to-day and also any other suggestions which have taken definite form. Lord Robert Cecil and Thomas W. Gregory, former United States Attorney General, are now here and are among those who have sought to draft a proviso relative to the Monroe Doctrine in such form that it will meet the approval of legal experts. The Commission plans to hold continuous sessions until the work of revision is completed.

LONDON, March 20. Virtually all of Ukraine is now in the hands of the Bolsheviks, according to advices reaching London to-day.

BOLSHEVIKS RETIRING.
COPENHAGEN, March 20. The important railroad junction town of Mitau, southwest of Riga, has been captured by the Lettish troops, a Lettish official statement issued on Wednesday announces. The Bolsheviks are retiring along the whole front.

DEFENDING THE KAISER.
BERLIN, March 20. (Via Copenhagen).—Aroused by recent criticisms of the former Emperor or William regarding his flight from Germany to Holland last fall, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg has prepared and published here a defence of the former ruler's action. After depicting the situation as it existed in November caused by the weakening of the army, the doubtful reliability of forces in the field, and the breaking out of the revolution at home, the Field Marshal writes, "The peaceful return home of the Emperor then became impossible. It could only have been carried out through the forcible employment of loyal troops and civil war would have been added to the hostilities with the enemy. The Emperor could have taken himself to the fighting troops in order to meet death at their head in a last attack on the enemy, but the promise so keenly desired by the people would thereby have been postponed and the lives of many soldiers uselessly sacrificed. The Emperor finally in agreement with his advisors and after a severe mental struggle, decided to leave the country, solely in the hope that he could thereby best serve the fatherland, save Germany from further losses, distress and misery, and restore peace and order to her."

SPIRITS PROHIBITED.
LONDON, March 19. The Government has prohibited the importation of all spirits into the British West African Colonies except under license, which will not be granted for the importation of so-called trade spirits, it was announced to-night.

TO MEET NEUTRALS.
PARIS, March 19. The following sub-committee has been named to meet the representatives of neutral countries to discuss the League of Nations: Leon Bourgeois, France; Lord Robert Cecil, Great Britain; E. Verzhelos, Greece; Paul Hymans, Belgium; Col. E. M. House, United States; Dr. M. R. Vranitch, Serbia.

AUSTRALIA FOR HOME PROTECTION.
LONDON, March 19. A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Melbourne, says that acting Premier Watt to-day announced the introduction of a measure in Parliament calling for higher protective duties.

MILITARY SERVICE BILL.
LONDON, March 19. During the debate in the House of Commons to-day on the Military Service Bill, Winston Spence Churchill, Minister of War, in opposing the amendment limiting the operation of the bill to December 31, 1919, instead of April 30, 1920, emphasized the fact that the British regular army had virtually disappeared, and that it was necessary to keep men whom the bill retained with the colors for overseas garrison. Mr. Churchill said he had every hope however, that the British foreign establishment would be on a voluntary basis before the end of the year. The army of occupation, he added, was on a different plan and could not depend on voluntary recruiting. It was impossible to assert how long it would be necessary to have a British army on the Rhine in order to influence Germany's policy by the pressure of its presence, but he was very glad that it had been decided to send food to Germany to enable Germany to get to work and to enjoy a real measure of peace. It was all the more necessary, however, to keep a force on the Rhine to see that Germany carried out the terms of the Peace Treaty when it has been ratified. Mr. Churchill said conditions in Europe were getting worse instead of better, and dangers were increasing instead of decreasing. In these circumstances he considered that the date for the operation of the bill, April 30, 1920, should stand, and concluded by saying that he had every reason to expect the necessity for compulsion would have passed away by that date. The proposed amendment was defeated.

DECIDING ON THEIR FUTURE.
LONDON, March 20. The Luenbourg Chamber of Deputies passed a bill on March 19, by a vote of 30 to 20, calling for a plebiscite to decide whether the present dynasty will be maintained, a dynasty created, or a republic established, according to despatches received here.

WARNING UKRAINIANS.
PARIS, March 20. Marshal Foch and other Generals were called in during yesterday's prolonged session of the Supreme Council, to give advice on action to be taken in Galicia, where Ukrainian forces are besieging Lemberg, which is threatened from three sides. It was decided that a sharp warning should be sent to both sides asking for a suspension of hostilities.

NEGOTIATIONS INTERRUPTED.
PARIS, March 20. Negotiations between the Inter-Allied Commission and the German Government's representatives at Posen, have again been interrupted, at a time when a result seemed about to be reached. It is said that this was the result of the evasive attitude of the German Government. Despatches state that the German High Command appears to be in open conflict with the Berlin Cabinet, and will not undertake to respect an armistice between the Germans and Poles. A decision in keeping with the situation is expected to-morrow.

NFLD. OFFICERS RETURNING.
HALIFAX, N.S., March 20. Included in the list of Newfoundland officers returning on the Baltic to-day, was Lieut. T. J. Connors, of St. John's, Nfld. Lieut. Connors went over with the First Nfld. Regiment, but subsequently entered the Naval service, and did exceptionally fine work. Previous to the war he was captain of the Portia.

At the City Hall.

The Municipal Council held its regular session last evening. Councillor Morris presided and Councillors Brownrigg, Tait, Mulhally attended. After reading of Minutes of preceding meeting, etc., the following matters were disposed of:— Harvey & Co. made application for permission to install a fish oil reduction plant on their waterside premises near Temperance Street. Mr. Noonan, representing the firm was present at the meeting and explained the nature of the system at length. Permission was ordered to be given for the installation of the plant with the understanding that there should be no nuisance connected with the installation.

James Murdock, asked for the removal of a hopper near her residence. Nothing can be done in this matter at present. Councillor Tait brought up the matter of the obstruction of the sidewalks and drains on New Gower Street. It was decided to ask the Inspector General to request his men to give attention to this matter.

Imperial War Relief Secretary sent an appeal for assistance on behalf of widows of soldiers and sailors who died in the war. A letter will be sent in reply. C. R. Thompson wrote asking for an estimate of cost and details in connection with Sudbury property, Water St. West. He will be asked to see City Engineer who will give him all the necessary details.

James Murdock, on behalf of Sergt. Butcher, submitted plan of bungalow to be erected on Sudbury Street. He also submitted layout of the property for two more houses, plans of which will be submitted later. Plan passed subject to Engineer's approval regarding street line.

W. Parsons, 32 Hutchings' Street, asked permission to cover roof of house with "Ruberoid." Granted. Sergt. Chas. H. Ellis wrote asking if Council would agree to extend water and sewerage mains on Freshwater Road to the point where he contemplates to build. Nothing can be done in this matter at present.

City Engineer reported that line of street had been given to H. Ford, South Side, to erect his building. He also reported on routine matters for the past week. The Health Officer's weekly report was read. Sanitary Supervisor reported there were no horses available in the local market at present and there would be none until about the first of May. It was decided to send the Supervisor to Canada to purchase horses in that market.

A requisition for rubber from Water-Works Department passed. It was decided to get the Sanitary and Roads' Departments to make an effort during the coming week to clean up the mud on the City Streets. After passing pay rolls and bills and disposing of some other routine business the meeting adjourned.

Question! Does Your Roof Leak?

If it does and you know where the leak is, a 5 lb. pail of ELAS-TI-GUM, costing $1.00, will speedily remedy the trouble.

ELAS-TI-GUM is a Tar-Cement which is guaranteed to stop leaks. It won't run like tar, nor crack like cement, and Captain Cuttle says "The remedy lies in the application thereof."

When you decide to put on a new covering of FELT-ASPHALT or EVER-LASTIC READY RUBBER ROOFING, ask us for information, we shall tell you which is the best kind and where to get it.

SHORTER HOURS MEAN LESS WAGES.

LONDON, March 20. Lancashire cotton employers have decided to grant the workers a forty-nine and one-half hour week, compared with the present fifty-five and one-half hour week, but declare they cannot concede the demand for increased wages. The workers had asked for a forty-four hour week with increased wages, to enable them to earn the same amount in forty-four hours as in fifty-five and one-half. The employers will consider the offer of the employers.

DEMANDS RESIDENCE.

GENEVA, March 20. The Swiss Government has received a formal demand from former Emperor Charles of Austria requesting permission for him to live in Switzerland. As the Allies, through Mr. Balfour, the British Foreign Secretary, were sounded on the subject recently and made no objection to such residence, the request of Charles probably will be granted. The matter is now in the hands of the political department. Reports received here from Neuchâtel, twenty-five miles west of Bern, say that the former Empress Zita, wife of Charles, has arrived there incognito and is living in a private house.

ANTI-BOLSHEVIK DEMONSTRATIONS.

WASHINGTON, March 20. Despatches received at the State Department from Sweden to-day, said social revolutionists in Petrograd and Moscow had been active in demonstrations against the Bolshevik, and that rioting in the streets had occurred. A Bolshevik commissioner, who attempted to address the meeting of social revolutionists, was mobbed. According to these advices all roads leading to Petrograd were closed to passenger traffic on March 15.

THE NEUTRAL'S INNINGS.

PARIS, March 20. Representatives of neutral nations, who are to present the views of their countries on the League of Nations plan, met at three o'clock this afternoon in the Hotel De Crillon. Many of the delegations were accompanied by military and naval attaches, making an impressive and showy gathering.

AIDING THE FLIGHT.

LONDON, March 21. All the resources of the British air forces weather bureau will be at the disposal of the aviators competing in the trans-atlantic flight, according to a statement made to the Mail to-day by Major Gendle, chief of the bureau. A twenty-four hour forecast for every competitor will be attempted, being based on reports from experts at St. John's, Lisbon and the Azores. A British battleship will also be stationed between St. John's and the Azores to co-operate with any British or American aviator making an official attempt to cross the ocean by airplane. Weather bureau stations in the western part of Africa will also assist, it is understood. Lieut. Harris will sail for Halifax on the battleship Montcalm to-day, and will test wind currents at great heights with a kite apparatus. It is understood that a flying boat for the Air Ministry official attempt will go to St. John's on board the battleship. Another official attempt with a Handley-Page machine is contemplated.

AMERICANS MAY OBJECT.

LONDON, March 20. The Liverpool Post says, "Lord Herbert Cecil places the Monroe Doctrine in its true light with regard to the League of Nations. He says in effect that so far from the League being the death blow to the capital article of American political faith, it is the application of the article on a universal scale." "According to the draft of the covenant, the parties to the League undertake to report and preserve, as against external aggression, the territorial integrity and existing political independence on the part of every member of the League. The most absolute supporter of Monroeism could surely desire no more than that." "The independence of America is guaranteed by an overwhelming majority of the Powers, great and small. The League of Nations will give America her rightful place in the van of the forces of civilization, and henceforth are to shape the large purposes of our race."

NOV. 11th NATIONAL HOLIDAY.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 20. Mr. I. E. Podlow, Liberal member for South Renfrew, has given notice of a resolution, declaring that November 11th each year should be set aside as a day of National Thanksgiving, to be a perpetual memorial of the signing of the armistice ending the great world's war. Representatives of the retail merchants of the Dominion, who waited upon Hon. A. K. MacLean, Minister of Trade and Commerce, yesterday, also urged that November 11th be fixed permanently as Thanksgiving Day in the Dominion.

DVINSK ABANDONED.

HELSINGFORS, March 20. The Bolshevik forces have been compelled to abandon Dvinsk.

KING'S TROPHY.

LONDON, March 20. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—It is officially announced by the Henley Regatta Committee that King George has promised to present a trophy for an eight oar race. The event will be open to amateur crews of service men representing any Allied nations, and British Dominion, Colony and Protectorate, which raised its own Expeditionary Force or equivalent. The Committee decided not to accept any overseas or foreign entries this year, except in the four events for Allied forces.

JAPS ARE FINE PEOPLE, BUT—

PARIS, March 20. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The Dominion delegates heartily concur in the view of the British delegation that the question of the equality of treatment of all nationalities throughout the world is a matter for the League of Nations. A prominent Australian expressed the opinion that the Commonwealth was not prejudiced against the Japanese, but had a great admiration for them, nevertheless Australians believed that it would be better for the future of the world if each race should develop along its own distinctive lines. The chief consideration was the industrial one. Australia aimed at building up in the most rapid manner an all-British population of over fifteen millions. Australia's chief attraction was its high wages and pleasant industrial conditions. The Asiatic work-champ worker, therefore to open the doors to Asiatic immigration would automatically close it to Europeans.

Amazing Strikes.

Recalling Some Queer Ways in Which The Working-Man's Weapon Has Been Used.

"No Betting To-day!" was the amazing notice issued on a famous race-course shortly before the war. The "bookies" had gone on strike! The stewards had relegated them to a new position at the sides of the approach to the grandstand, and the complaint was that there was not room for the number of punters, and also insufficient accommodation for the public who wished to "put a bit on." The bookies took up a position of their own, from which the police tried to eject them. Finally a compromise was effected, and the bookies were happy again.

Some years ago the executioners of Canton struck against striking off any more heads unless they were paid an extra shilling for each head removed. The prisoners in the condemned cells were anxious that the strike should continue till the crack of doom, but the authorities climbed down, and the executions went on as merrily as before.

One-Man Strike.

Glasgow, which is so much in the strike line, these days, once experienced a strike of grave-diggers. Their demands were an increase of three shillings a week, shorter hours, and six days' holiday in the year. They picketed the cemeteries and stopped the funerals.

A one-man strike occurred in an Australian city. A prisoner in the town gaol, a tailor by trade, refused to work in the tailors shop on the plea that it would be contrary to his principles as a trade unionist—"unfair competition with his brother unionists outside," as he put it. He sent a letter to the Tailors' Union, but as they took no notice he was condemned to three days' solitary confinement, during which he "continued the strike."

There was a strike of paupers in a country workhouse. They struck for new potatoes! They expected greens for dinner, and as there was none, they refused to eat old spuds! They even declined to enter the dining-room. The guardians prescribed a bread-and-water diet, with the result that at the end of twenty-four hours the inmates were ready for potatoes—new or old.

No Snowfalls. No Lectures.

Fines having been imposed upon a number of students in a well-known college for snowballing in the college-garden, 138 men left the place in a body, and picketed the neighbourhood. Armed with sticks and hurries, they refused to admit the students who preferred lectures to snowballing, and when one of the professors received

WELCH'S GRAPELADÉ, A Pure Grape Jam.

Grapelade is a real food product that takes rank with Welch's Grape Juice and is made by the same company. It is a new asset to the grocer's product on which constantly increasing and always profitable sales can be counted. Its permanence is assured by its enthusiastic reception and big repeat sales wherever it has been introduced.

Remember that Grapelade is not simply another grape jam. It is a new product, a real discovery in grape goodness. It can be enjoyed in many delightful ways.

As we are cutting out the Jobbing end of our business we will not be carrying Grapelade in stock, but we are now booking orders for direct shipment to the retail trade by boat from New York. For further particulars and prices see or telephone

A New Mother for Invention.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

There is one sure thing about living in the country—it certainly teaches you to stand on your own feet.

The city is, par excellence, the place of specialists. When anything goes wrong in any department of the household, if you live in the city, you call in a specialist; if you live in the country, you fix it yourself.

What You Do If You Live in the City.

Take the little (?) matter of plumbing, for instance. Suppose you are a city dweller, and something goes wrong with that apparently intricate system of balls and sockets in the water tank in your bathroom. There is a plumber right around the corner, at the farthest, and the other end of your telephone, just waiting to pick up his tools and charge you so much per minute for his walk to your house. It would be flying in the face of Providence to interfere in his department. And so you go to the telephone and that's the end of it (till the end of the month). The intricate system remains indefinitely a mystery to you.

What You Do If You Live in the Country.

Suppose, however, you live in the country. The nearest plumber has his headquarters in B. eleven miles away. Very likely he is eleven miles and your call for help, when the water persists in acting queerly, would only bring that interesting information from his wife. So what do you do? Why the only thing that is left to do, is to get acquainted with the mystery of the ball and socket. You finally manage to work out the problem and fix what's wrong, and ever after you remain on friendly, almost patronizing terms with your plumbing. I have used plumbing as a symbol of the way the country dweller has to stand on his feet because it represents my own experience.

Plumbing Was One of the Seven Deadly Mysteries to Me.

For the first thirty years of my life I lived in the city within four blocks of the plumber and thought plumbing one of the seven deadly mysteries of the world. Then I acquired a summer residence in the country and learned to use my wits.

Of course, the plumber is only one of the many specialists who live right around the corner in the city. Next door to him is the doctor, on the other side, the carpenter, across the street, the furnace man, the locksmith, etc. They are all ready and eager to keep the city dweller from trying to use his intelligence in any but his own specialty. Whereas, in the country, it's either learn to use your wits or suffer for the lack of them.

Truly, to pervert an old proverb, "Distance is the mother of invention."

Gamblers All!

A certain London magistrate gave it as his opinion that it would be quite impossible for the police to suppress gambling among Chinamen in the East End. Gambling is almost a national passion with a Chinaman; he will gladly gamble on anything and everything.

During recent years there has been a marked increase in gambling in this country, and it is really astonishing what some people will gamble on. A game of chance which is popular in a number of South Coast holiday resorts is played as follows: Each player—there may be any number—puts down a lump of sugar and a shilling in front of him. The one on whose sugar the first fly settles secures the stakes. Many players have been known to win as much as £5 in a single day.

In the Rhondda mining districts it is no uncommon sight to see a group of men and youths standing at a street-corner watching for the number of the first tramcar on which there was a corner watching for the number of the hymns given out at religious services not infrequently form the subject of bets.

First Things First.

The monotony of a long ocean voyage is frequently relieved by inventing new sweepstakes. On a certain Cape liner the male passengers got up a "sweep" on the total ages of all the women passengers on board. Each had to guess their individual ages, and then add up the total. When completed these lists were handed to the ship's purser, who was able to check them with the official age declarations given him by each passenger at the soothing oils and the caressing treatment. You can spend fifteen or twenty minutes with the manipulation, and they will be moments well invested. Your arms and hands will feel younger and their soft surfaces will be simple reward for your trouble.

Over the cold-creamed surface sprinkle almond meal. This will combine with the cream that remains and will form a paste. Pat in well with flattened palms. Have your best household oil wring big Turkish towels out of very hot water and wrap about the arms. The heat will drive in the oils still deeper. Continue with the hot applications as long as you have time to play that way. No fewer than three towels on each arm anyway. More are better.

A rising bath of clear water with a little benzoin added will remove the paste. Don't use soap as that is drying and will detract from the good results of the oily treatment. Finish up with a massage with a Turkish towel and a light palm massage with talcum powder. This arm treatment has such a softening effect upon the finger nails and cuticle about the nails that a manicure should rightly follow.

Red and white checked gingham makes a delightful morning gown with a round ruffled collar of handkerchief linen and red bone buttons for trimming.

and New Zealand; horse racing being the most popular. When "plotting out" a new town, it is not unusual for the race-track to be laid out first, even before the sites for the church and school have been decided upon.

Many men working on the "out-back" sheep station of Australia and New Zealand will frequently state the entire proceeds of twelve months' hard toil on the result of some local horse-race. This reckless speculation is often undertaken each year with amazing regularity.

Milady's Boudoir.

BEAUTIFYING HANDS AND ELBOWS.

There never was a human elbow that did not need beautifying. We should be grateful that our elbows are hidden to us in such a manner that we cannot see them well; it would be too discouraging.

Just get a pot of cold cream, a shaker full of almond meal, some hot Turkish towels and considerable elbow grease.

We begin by giving the hands and arms a good scrubbing with warm water, pure white soap and a nail brush, the lathering process to extend to the tops of the arms. A gentle drying, if you please with a bit of soft linen. Be thorough with the drying.

We begin now the massage with cold cream. Creme marquisse is usually well adapted to hand and arm massage because it is a thin, smooth cream and is readily eaten up by the skin.

Each finger is massaged separately, the cream frictioned in to the last possible minute. See that the cuticle about the nails is specially treated. Dig into the knuckles where the household dust loves to gather, seeking secure crevices and hiding spots. Follow with a thorough massage of the backs of the hands and the palms.

Very firm the pressure, you can't hurt your hands and arms with too much rubbing, and the stimulation will help forward the good results that are on the way.

Place the right hand like a bracket around the left arm. Hold it firm and turn the arm forward and back. Begin at the wrist and work up towards the top of the arm. Follow with long, firm strokes from elbow to hand. Work in the sweet-odored emollient. Your flesh will eat it eagerly. It will be as if the cells hungered for the soothing oils and the caressing treatment.

You can spend fifteen or twenty minutes with the manipulation, and they will be moments well invested. Your arms and hands will feel younger and their soft surfaces will be simple reward for your trouble.

BILL HOENZOLLERN. If he had loved the green of trees, The drowsy hum of summer bees, If friends had dared to call him Bill, He might have been a monarch still. If he had ever stopped to play With children at the close of day, Or ridden them upon his knee, He might not now an outcast be.

If he had ever turned aside And dropped his dignity and pride, Forgetting that he was a king, To do a little neighboring With humble men who crossed his way, If he had ever spent one day In comradeship—he might not now Have hatred written on his brow.

Had he loved skies and running brooks, And tangled woods and fishing nooks, And learned to call the birds by name, And fed them crumbs as they grew tame, Or had he ever left his throne To talk with men, he might have known Some secrets of the human heart, And better played the monarch's part.

If he had ever meant to him More than a castle, cold and grim; If he had tended it with care, Planted the roses blooming there; Had learned to laugh and romp and sing, Been more a man and less a king, He might not now in Holland wait The dreadful verdict of his fate.

That man who worships power alone Shall suddenly be overthrown; Who turns away from men and God Shall fall at last beneath the rod. He that would seek for world success Must tread the ways of humbleness And find in the gentle ways and pure The royalty that can endure.

THE CALLING VOICE.

WALT MASON

"Somewhere a voice is calling." I hear the plaintive lay, when evening shades are falling, and dusk is dim and gray; it's sung by youth and maiden, who lightly bear their vine, and long to be up yonder where all the planets shine. For life is sad and bitter, a long and weary road, and one who's not a quitter must always bear a load. There is no time for stalling, no pause for set or fun; somewhere a voice is calling for mon and still more mon. The good sport bears his burden, and hopes that when he dies he will receive as geurdon a free pass to the skies. Where silver streams are brawling by Eder's verdant hills, he'll hear no voices calling on him to pay the bills.

Mother! Is Child's Stomach Sour, Sick?

If tongue is coated or if cross, feverish, constipated give California Syrup of Figs.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit-laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so "carefully look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

The Transatlantic Flight.

St. John's has now its opportunity to become more famous than ever, and through the publicity which it will get during the next few months, it will be possible to rid foreigners once and for all of the idea that we are politically part of Canada. Nothing is more amusing to the Newfoundlanders, and nothing is more calculated to demonstrate the ignorance of people, outside, who should know better, than to receive letters addressed, St. John's, Newfoundland, Canada. Not all the sinners in this respect are North Americans. Englishmen too are prone to fall into the same error. It had been hoped that Newfoundland's part in the war, would at least have educated those without previous knowledge of its independent position, and that neither integrally nor geographically was it part of Canada, any more than Great Britain is part of Europe, in the same sense. The conferring of the title of Dominion on Newfoundland should have been further evidence that we are separate and distinct from Canada. But there are some who will not learn, neither will they be taught. The coming transatlantic flight, which will begin from St. John's may succeed in showing to all and sundry our correct position. As an advertisement for Newfoundland the contemplated air journey to England has no equal, for from the day when it was first announced to take place, we have been the cynosure, as it were, of the eyes of the world, and as day succeeds day until the flight actually takes place we will be receiving in the foreign press more and more publicity. The cable news is beginning to contain references to the aero trip over the herring pond, and the various clubs are on the alert and will have special representatives come to St. John's to watch the flight and observe conditions. Already the Royal Aero Club of the United Kingdom has notified the American Aero Club that Major Partridge, of the Royal Air Force, has been appointed official observer and will come to St. John's shortly to witness the start. This city will for some time be the Mecca of all aviators and specialists in flying and one splendid opportunity through this, offers itself for making our distinguished visitors acquainted with the fact that Newfoundland is Newfoundland, and not a province of Canada, and through them the knowledge will be diffused and we shall be known as we are.

During the stay amongst us of those aviation experts no opportunity should be omitted of showing them the varied and unrivalled resources of the country, and the geographical and other valuable assets in our possession. There are many ways of improving conditions in Newfoundland even under present circumstances, and our aim should be to inter-enture outside capital in order that future development should be hastened. Our reconstruction problems are many and difficult and if a practical solution of these can be brought about in any way compatible with their importance, many new methods will have to be adopted, and many antiquated ideas scrapped. Progressiveness is the motto of the hour, and we must move with the times.

Last Night's Meeting.

THE HOUSING QUESTION.

A large gathering of trade and labour representatives met at the L.S.P.U. Hall last night to discuss the Housing Question. Hon. Mr. Anderson addressed the meeting explaining his plans for the proposed houses, and it was thought by those present that the scheme was practicable, provided all parties co-operated. Plans of the dwellings were distributed and committed upon a committee, consisting of representatives of the different unions in the city be appointed to consult with Mr. McCarter, the architect, and a committee be appointed also to interview the Government. The Unions to be represented on both committees as follows:—Coopers, Messrs. Linegar and Healey; Carpenters, Goff, Hartley and Jacobs; Truckmen, Bart, Cochran and Mullings; L.S.P.U., McGrath and Howell; Printers, Ryan and Quigley; Tinsmiths, McCormack, Phillips and Stafford; N.L.W.A., White and representatives from the St. John's Fishermen's Amalgamated Society, and the Locals of the N. I. W. A., with Hons. John Anderson and M. P. Gibbs. The next meeting will be held Monday night next when the Committee hope to be able to table a report.

Masonic Installation.

The installation of the R. W. M. elect, and the investment of the other officers of Lodge Tasker, No. 454, S.C., which was postponed from St. Patrick's Day because of the illness of D. G. Master Duder, took place in the Masonic Temple last night, in the presence of a large gathering of members of the craft. The ceremony was performed by the District Grand Master, who was assisted by District Grand Master Cliff of the English Constitution. The officers elected are as follows:

R.W.M.—Bro. P. K. Macleod.
I.P.M.—Bro. A. Munn.
W.S.W.—Bro. A. E. Rabbits.
Secretary—Bro. H. A. Bastow.

I. Guard—Bro. E. W. Scandrett.
S. Steward—Bro. W. J. Phillips.
J. Steward—Bro. P. Ledingham.
Tyler—Bro. Geo. Morris.

Following the ceremony the usual congratulations were tendered the newly elected Master, and a jewel was presented to Past Master A. Munn in appreciation of the services rendered the Craft during the year. Subsequently the members were called from labour to refreshment, and a most enjoyable hour or two spent in the banquet hall.

The collection, in aid of the Tasker Educational Fund resulted in a substantial addition to this benevolent object.

Announcing the Arrival & Display of the New Spring and Summer Styles in LADIES' COATS.

This display is especially noteworthy, as it includes all the authoritative style models on which the fashions for Spring are founded.

The handsomest aggregation of Coat Styles we have ever shown. Belted Styles are favoured with full flare collars; some show pleated backs with button trimmings. The shades include

Navy, Saxe, Turquoise, Fawn, Taupe, Grey, and Electric, etc.

Others come in two tone effects, embodying style and colour blending that is at once noticeable. Our prices are very moderate for such worthy styles.

$18.00, $21.00, $33.00, $35.00, $37.00.

When you want Steaks, Chops, Cutlets and Collops, try ELLIS'.

Ladies' Chinchilla Coats And Chinchilla Capes are fashionable too. These you will see in three-quarter and full length. Some in all White, others with contrasting trimmings. You will admire the swing and hang of these and their adaptability. Prices $18.00 and $20.00. Other Coat styles in abundance at lesser prices.

Shabby Treatment of Wounded Soldier.

If the story of the treatment of one of our returned men be true, and it is current talk in this town and accepted as fact, then those responsible should have the opportunity of explaining their action or neglect. One of our men who was awarded the Military Medal while on duty with Our Regiment in France and was severely wounded, was returned in a very weak condition with a German missile in his body.

After spending some time with his parents, his wounds gave him trouble and he became very weak and sick and went to St. John's for hospital treatment. While at St. John's he was moved from the West End to a place which had been hurriedly fitted up and where conditions were, not to him at least, satisfactory. Our sick and wounded friend and hero came back home and of late has been very ill, in fact he is too ill at the present. Since Christmas, it is said this young man has received one cheque from the authorities for the sum of Ten dollars ($10.00).

Now, Mr. Editor, the question is: "Who is responsible for such treatment to a brave soldier who underwent the terrific experiences of Gallipoli and who lost too much blood in France to get back again to normal and who was awarded the Military Medal for his action upon the field?"

In the name of Newfoundland, by those in authority, is such treatment being handed out to the men who have made such sacrifices for her and to whose efforts and sacrifices she owes so much? Is such true? Can it be?

I believe every Newfoundlanders desires, yes, demands BETTER TREATMENT FOR OUR RETURNED WOUNDED HEROES. Carbonear, March 18, 1919.

To Commercialize Fish Offal.

At yesterday's meeting of the City Council, Harvey & Co., Ltd., applied for permission to erect a building in the East End for the purpose of reducing fish offal. Mr. Noonan, representing the applicant company was present, and explained that the intention was to erect an up-to-date plant, by means of which fish offal could be converted into fertilizer etc., and be made a valuable asset of our fisheries, and that a success in St. John's would probably mean the extension of the business to some of the principal outports. The Council favored the application, providing the factory did not create any nuisance derogatory to the town.

A Dog's Intuition.

The Hon. Grantley Berkeley tells an interesting story of the wonderful intuition of a dog of his, and how animals can best be trained by kindness. He says: "In proof of the natural beauty of the sport with dog and gun I now narrate an incident which happened to me in the New Forest with one of my Setters, then a young dog in his first season. He was ranging, as he ever ranged, with the long but cautious gallop of his race, and coming close up-wind of a snipe, flushed it; but the snipe, not being aware of man's presence, simply flew a few yards out of his way, and pitched again. 'Chalk' dropped when the bird rose, but, having marked him to the ground, not being more than ten yards from him, rose to his point again. On seeing this, though at a long distance, I commenced to walk up, when in my way I nearly trod on a rabbit, which I then killed. At the noise of the gun 'Chalk' dropped to down charge, watched me pick up the rabbit, and then, on seeing me coming towards him, rose steadily to his point again, and the snipe also fell to the gun. When you want Sausages, why—get ELLIS'; they're the best.

Quinine That Does Not Affect Head. Because of its tonic and laxative effect. LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE (Tablets) can be taken by anyone without causing nervousness or ringing in the head. There is only one "Bromo Quinine." E. W. GROVE'S signature on the box. 30c.

Fads and Fashions. Linings are all of fancy silk or brilliantly colored chiffon. Straps of jet serve as sleeves on a gold cloth evening gown. Suit coats are much longer, sometimes reaching the knees. The low French heel is suitable for both day and evening wear. Large embroidered Chinese flowers trim crisp organdie frocks. Small rosettes or grosgrain ribbon appear on smart little hats. For its only trimming a dress of wool serge uses black silk braid. Sheer batiste fashions becoming blouses of the Peter Pan model. Self-covered buttons are used more than those of bone or wood. A smart gown of brown velvet is embroidered in black and silver. Coats are shirred over the hips to give the desired barrel shape. The pointed, turn-back cuff is featured by the new taffeta dresses.

Metal brocades, with Chinese figures, are popular for evening gowns. Narrow tucks and stitching are used as trimming for the spring suits. Rows of small buttons are still much used on the more simple gowns. NORMAL eyes do not give you pain or discomfort. It is these faulty ones that make you conscious that your eyes are a burden to you. Call today for an examination. Know to a certainty. H. B. Friday's Comments.

By FRED A.

And so some of our wandering invalids have got back to old Terra Nova again. It was very strange, however, to note that there was none of the former spectacular welcomes accorded them.

Judging by the photo engraving, the Silent Premier is looking none the worse for his laborious exercises at the Peace Conference, and we are indeed glad to note same. In connection with his return, we feel that we must await a later occasion to hear of all the doings abroad and the part played in them by our (?) representative, as the recorded interview by the "organ" is not very enlightening, excepting, of course, when it informs the public of a little excursion to the battlefields, which was very proper.

The "wordy" President is apparently making an exhaustive survey of the fields of action, and the latest story going the rounds, is that he is gathering "facts" for the issuing of a book entitled "Some Reflections on Beaumont-Hamel." The Dame also adds that the book may be sold in conjunction with the National (?) paper. Our island home promises to have additional lustre given to its name by its peerless authors.

Without going into any of the ramifications of the seal question, and the price of fat as propounded by "Calchas," it is rather strange that so little has been said about the price regulation as influenced by the "friend." And without saying anything out of the way at all, it is quite true that many of the Union men were disgusted at the difference between their reception this year and the promised good things held out to them last year. Possibly though, the promise of good roads was given as a substitute. If so, "Nuff said!"

"When will the House be open?" is the question often asked to-day, and no definite answer is as yet forthcoming. Rumor says about the end of the month. Admitting that it does, whom have we to attend? Will the few mis-representatives on assembling, try to retain their present manipulation of the treasury, and subject us longer to such an unstable and unsatisfactory government? We are well aware that they may possibly try to do so, but we feel equally confident that the electorate is not as much asleep as appears on the surface, and so the days of the present few are numbered, and their downfall certain.

Great fear appears to be felt these days by the majority of the government heeled. Is it an omen of the sentiment of the bulk of the people? We presage it as such, and emphasize the wish that the fear may grow speedily—it's bound to come some time, and the quicker the better—when we may once more have an honest administration and the minimum of inter-dependent flatterers and irrationalists.

There is quite a little talk in Canada over the Daylight Bill, as many people, especially farmers, wish the Act repealed. As we copy so extensively from our continental neighbors, and as the voyageurs only recently visited that part of the world, perhaps we may once again revert back to the old time system. As a repeal would be popular with many fishermen, it is quite possible that the Nationalist candidates—will they go out as Nationalists or some other high sounding name—may promise even that in the vain hope of another little term of doing yeoman service for personal benefit.

GEORGE M. BARR.

He Never Spoke Again.

A ventriloquist who had a worthless dog and no money hit upon a clever scheme to convert the former into the latter. Going into a restaurant he took a seat, the dog sitting on the floor beside the chair. When the waiter came the ventriloquist turned to the dog with the query: "Well, Jack, what will you have?" The waiter nearly collapsed when he apparently heard the dog answer, "A ham and beef sandwich." Then he hastened to the proprietor "I say, gov'nor," he exclaimed, "there's a dog over there that can talk!" It immediately struck the proprietor that such a dog could draw custom, so after hearing the animal talk he began bargaining for him. The dog during the haggling over the price begged in so realistic a manner not to be sold that the restaurant keeper became the more determined to have him, and at last agreed to the ventriloquist's price, $20. As the trickster started for the door with the money the dog inquired: "Have you really sold me?" "Yes, Jack, I've sold you," was the reply. "Well," said the dog, "mark my words, I'll never speak again!"—Rod and Gun.

Good Reason for Complaint.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Would you kindly, through your valuable paper, enquire why it is the authorities permit the corners of New Gower Street to be forever thronged with crowds of ruffianly and unruly corner toughs who use the most filthy and abusive language? When people are going and coming from different churches, and when those that dwell in the places referred to sit in their rooms to chat or pray with their families, they are obliged to witness the ribald conduct of these corner hangers. It is time for some one to wake up and get a policeman in plain clothes to get after this gentry. A few five dollar fines and one would have clear corners and less people insulted.

Yours truly,
ONE WHO SUFFERS.

Dear Sir.—In reading the extended notice in the press of the visit of His Excellency the Governor to the Boot & Shoe Factory, I noticed that due reference was made to the manager, his assistant and heads of departments. I consider that our old friend "Ted Hunter," who has been associated with the plant for many years, should have been included in the list of those who have assisted in bringing this concern to its present state.

The trouble is that the church does not reach down far enough, and that we have few social institutions to rescue fallen humanity, which are sufficiently adequate in their scope of service to do so. The times demand prompt action instead of lengthy criticism and theorizing. The success of these institutions elsewhere put them outside the need of such formula. This is an age which demands the straight issue—the truth, devoid of bigotry, prejudice, or any other evils, which blight our social and religious advancement.

Llewellyn Club.

At the "Llewellyn Club" last night a fairly large gathering assembled to listen to the address of Mr. Llewellyn Colley on London. The address was delivered in a very interesting manner, and the accompanying slides were an added education.
Rev. Mr. Moulton, in the capacity of Chairman, regretted the absence of the Rector, Rev. Dr. Jones, and also the Vice-President's, and referred to the long associations he had had with the speaker.
Mr. Colley prefaced his lecture by saying he had spent nearly one year in London, and had endeavoured to take in some of the sights of that city during his stay, and gave a short history of the rise and growth of London, explaining that London was really comprised of three circles, the inner circle, or real London, having a population of 20,000 people. He also dwelt on the qualities of the Metropolitan police, and the efficient regulation of the traffic. The pictures shown gave a whole illustration of the city as a whole, Downing Street, Charing Cross, the Horse Guards, Westminster Bridge (and here he quoted the words of Wordsworth who paid in verse a glowing tribute to the memories evoked while standing thereon), Houses of Parliament, the Three Towers, Clock Tower, Victoria Tower, and St. Stephen's Tower, the interior of the House of Lords and Commons, St. Margaret's Church, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral, Jerusalem Chamber, Buckingham Palace, Hyde Park, Kensington Lake, Royal Albert Hall, Edgeware Road, Tyburn Tree, British Museum, Covent Garden, Holborn, Imperial Institute (University of London), The Strand, Cleopatra's Needle, Mansion House, Bank of England, Royal Exchange Building, Guild Hall, Cheapside, St. Paul's Cathedral, London Bridge, Tower of London, The Mint, Lambeth Palace, Crystal Palace, Hampton Court, The King and Queen.
Rev. Mr. Clayton proposed a vote of thanks to the speaker which Mr. R. G. Macdonald seconded. Rev. Mr. Moulton in putting the motion referred, as did the other speakers, to the most instructive lecture of Mr. Colley, and one and all felt that the evening had been well spent in listening to the description given of London. The National Anthem closed the evening.

The Maternity Home.

This is a work of rescue in which the Salvation Army leads, and it seems a blot on our civilization to thwart her purpose. Somebody must lead off in every work of reconstruction and reform. The ideas must be conceived by some mind and carried into action by some individual or natural force.
The Salvation Army has taken the initiative in nearly every social reform movement in this, and other countries, and in the present instance has come forward courageously and confidently. She has the field, and only one who is willing to take advantage of another's ideas or another's efforts, will try and take the field from her.
When we consider the need of national institutions of a Social Reform character we might also ask, why not the churches be nationalized, instead of being the property of the various conferences? Why not the S. A. Citadel be a national institution? They are built by public funds, and have as much right to be placed in the category of public institutions as the Salvation Army Maternity Home.
We would like to know just how long we would have to wait for this much-needed institution if the Salvation Army had not considered this an age of "action, not of whining?" We seem to be afflicted with a national religion, instead of a national religion based on Christianity.

Yours truly,
AN OLD HAND.

Forty Years in The Public Service—the Evening Telegram

Vocational Committee Meeting.

The Civil Re-establishment Committee was convened last night in the Board of Trade Rooms for the purpose of showing the work done, and the work contemplated in the future. The meeting was fairly largely attended, and His Excellency the Governor was present. Hon. Mr. Justice Kent presided, and in introducing the Vocational Officer, spoke of the work of the committee, and of the encouragement given to it by the presence of His Excellency and many of the most influential men of commerce. He stated that the problem of helping the soldier and sailor back to civil life was a task involving much time, and perseverance, and all should endeavour to solve this problem for the sake of the sacrifices made by the veterans.

Dr. Blackall, in speaking regretted that more people were not present. He quoted from different authorities the importance of civil re-establishment. He affirmed that it was the duty of the public and of the press to help in the solution, and that to secure the greatest amount of success there must be co-operation between all classes for the common good. He referred to the Board of Pensions' Commission, and the Employment Committee, of the N. P. A. who did good work, but that extra work entailed some alterations, and a selective officer was chosen Dr. Blackall while Hon. Mr. Justice Kent was Chairman, and Messrs. R. B. Job and H. E. Cowan, Vice-Chairmen. From that time the discharged soldiers acquainted the Vocational Officer with their desires, and as far as possible these plans were carried into effect.

Since September 14, 1918, more than 1,500 soldiers have been discharged, 280 of them having suffered disabilities to a greater or lesser degree. Papers had been sent abroad to men still on active service, asking their future intentions, and 600 replies had been received. Of those, 461 were able to return to their jobs if open, and the others were unable to work owing to disabilities. So far the employers of labor had been doing well in placing returned men. There are 102 men taking training, from the university to the factory. Some 60 applicants, whose cases were not considered urgent, had been refused. The great trouble is not to overcrowd the professions. There is a great desire to engage in telegraphy, but the desire of the committee is to place men at profitable employment without unduly interfering with any branch. Great encouragement is given those who want to study navigation, motor engineering and the like. A school has been opened in the former Spencer College, in which several teachers or tutors are engaged, and opportunity is here offered the men to study and prepare themselves for the different occupations they select. This education is only preliminary, not technical. Another problem of the Committee is to save the men from unwise decisions as to vocations. The pay to the man under training is, unmarried: $50 a month; married: $70; married, with one child, $76, and $6 for each additional child. In connection with the school, other teachers are needed, and also an increase in the general staff.

The committee so far has held 37 meetings, and the outlay at present is about $30,000.

The Governor proposed a vote of thanks to Dr. Blackall, the Premier seconding and Sir P. T. McGrath supporting. Mr. Justice Kent put the motion, which was carried by acclamation, and the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

The Baker's Dozen.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—So the report of the a.s. Beverley has been published at last, and the majority in this district was very pleased with the remarks of our much esteemed representative, W. J. Walsh, Esq., which appeared in the "News" some time ago. His criticism on that very important matter proves that he is ever on the watch to guard the interests of our people. And also to his credit is the patriotic stand taken by him in the House on the vote to extend the life of Parliament. In fact Mr. Walsh has many good acts to his credit, which will result in his receiving the largest vote ever polled in this district. I have been quite a while in this old world of ours, and have seen and known unpopular governments, but throughout all my time I have never witnessed such a suppressed feeling of indignation as exists at present against the self-constituted 13 that call themselves a Government. Is there no strong hand to be raised in the interest of the people to drive those unconstitutional 13 to the people? The universal cry is "To the Polls! To the Polls!"

With your permission, Mr. Editor, I will review the personnel of the Baker's Dozen, the unlucky 13, later.

Yours truly,
ONE OF THE OLD BOYS.

Ships' Bells in Queer Places.

Souvenirs of Historic Vessels.

Now that the days of so many ships in the Navy are numbered—for very soon they will be taken to the "Rotten Row" of a royal dockyard, there to be sold for breaking up—some steps might be taken to preserve their bells in the same way that some of the big shipping firms do.

The Isle of Man Steam Packet Co., for instance, preserves in its office, at Douglas, the bell of its steamer, Mona's Isle, and the White Star Line has that of the original Britannic (1870). But generally ships bells are not treasured by those who might be expected to prize them.

Buried in Museums.

One which belonged to a famous Blackwall liner now hangs outside a factory in Central London, where it fulfils the office of a 'buzzer,' while the bell of a liner, well known in its day, Lord Gough, is on the stage at East Ham, on the Mersey. The bells of two other historic ships—the Bounty (the mutineers which landed on Pitcairn Island, in the Pacific, and helped to form the isolated community now peopling it) and the Great Britain—are buried in museums.

At least two famous ships, however, are well commemorated by their bells, if by nothing else. One is the Royal Charter, that "treasure ship" which was wrecked off the Welsh coast, taking down with her £350,000, nearly all of which was ultimately recovered. Her bell appropriately rests not far from the scene of her doom—at Lord Boston's castle, in Angelsey.

BISHOP, SONS & COMPANY, LIMITED.

Bolshevistic Riots in Toronto.

Greek Church Adherents Theatrical Rector.

Bolshevism has broken out amongst several hundred foreigners in West Toronto, with the result that last Monday night, March 10, the police were called to disperse a rioting crowd of over 300 persons that congregated in front of a Greek Catholic church, at 119 Franklin Avenue.

Rev. James Boyarczuk, rector of the church, has received numerous anonymous letters threatening his life unless he turns the church into a "National Church." The unrest has been growing with such rapidity recently that Father Boyarczuk communicated with Bishop Budka, of Winnipeg, who is head of the Ruthenian churches in Canada, asking him to come here to settle the dispute.

Bishop Budka arrived in the city on Monday night, and when he saw the angered crowd congregating in front of the church, and demanding that the doors be thrown open for the purpose of holding a meeting, he issued instructions that the church be locked and remain closed until the dispute has been settled.

In explaining the trouble, Rev. James Boyarczuk stated that there was a congregation of 600 in church. It was owned, he said, by the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation. About 300 radical Socialists have been attending the church of late, and breaking up the services repeatedly since the new year.

Last Sunday, while the morning service was being held, the Socialists gathered in the basement and held a meeting. They were so disorderly, he said, that the church service had to be discontinued.

Inspector Duncan, of Keele Street division, had a strong force of men in the vicinity of the church on Monday night. When the crowd appeared and made effort to gain entrance to the building for the purpose of meeting, the police stepped in. They were successful in splitting the crowd, and driving them in different directions from Franklin Avenue.

Rev. Mr. Boyarczuk has asked for police protection. Some of the letters forwarded to him contained the threat that his life would be ended within twenty-five days.

Kaiser's Art Treasures.

Will They Be Sold?

The former German Emperor owned hundreds of paintings, coming from the brushes of the world's greatest masters, which hang upon the walls of the sixty-five palaces that belonged to him. What will become of these masterpieces?

There is a possibility of the pictures coming into the open market, the new democracy in Germany feeling that one of the first sources of revenue to meet the financial claims of the Allies may well come from the properties of the Hohenzollerns, the nobility, and the junkers.

Valued at £1,000,000.

Included in Wilhelm's collection are no fewer than nineteen undoubtedly genuine work by Rubens, acknowledged as the greatest of Flemish painters. £500,000 would not purchase these pictures under ordinary conditions indeed their price might well run to nearer £1,000,000, for among them is that wonderful "Holy Family," now in the Palace of Sans Souci, near Berlin, also "Mars and Venus" hanging on the walls at Koenigsberg.

All of his galleries are rich in examples of the French Romantic school, many of these works having been collected by Frederick the Great, who was so deep a lover of everything French, from art to philosophy.

Boon to Mankind.

There are at least fifty of the finest of this French school, and their price might run to almost any figure.

Some rare examples of the older German art and many of the Netherland and Italian masters fill out the spaces on the wall of the many palaces. It may be that out of the downfall of the Emperor will come another great boon to mankind, in that pictures which none save a favoured few have been able to admire and study will now be given to the world.

Earle Williams Sued.

For $100,000 Damages for Alleged Breach of Promise.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 2.—Although denying he ever agreed to marry Miss Roma Raymond, beautiful Polish actress, Earle Williams, the well-known film star, indicates in the answer on file in the Superior Court, that he will oppose on technical grounds.

Miss Raymond's suit for $100,000 for alleged breach of promise.

As a novel defence to the action, Williams contended in his answer that Miss Raymond was born in Austria-Hungary, had never been naturalized, and therefore was an enemy alien and unable to maintain a suit against the defendant, who was an American citizen, born in California.

He denied they became engaged or that he promised to marry her several times, while she alleged they were living in Brooklyn at 93 Hicks street. In that time he denied she acted toward him as a wife. On the contrary, he alleged she was "frequently careless, unkind and repellant" toward him.

He admitted he contributed to her support and paid the grocery bill while they lived in Brooklyn, but denied she was recognised as his wife. He declared she never offered to marry him until last September, when she learned he was about to marry another.

He did not marry another. His wife was Miss Florine Walz, a wealthy New York girl. They were married in October, and it was the announcement of the marriage which precipitated the court action. Williams also sought to show that Miss Raymond's suit was barred by the statute of limitations.

According to her complaint, they became acquainted about 1912, while both were working before the film camera. In 1913 she alleged they became engaged to marry, and she declared Williams repeatedly renewed his promise between September 1912 and 1918. Meanwhile, she declared, they began housekeeping in Brooklyn.

He was alleged to have told her his salary at that time was only $35 a week, and he did not consider that sufficient on which to marry. She said also that he told her he would appear to better advantage on the screen if it were not generally known that he was married.

Williams denied these assertions in his answer. It was September 27 that Miss Raymond declared she reminded him of his alleged promise to marry her and at that time she said he definitely refused. She then followed him to Los Angeles and instituted the suit.

Inherit the traditions of our race which have made our race glorious.

Their value is above all computation at this time. Again every assistance should be given those of our soldiers and sailors who are left to us to marry at once. Economic barriers should be removed; inducement should be held out. The old economic prejudice against married men with families is now no longer merely dangerous; it is fatal.

DIES IN SEATTLE, WASHINGTON.

By late Seattle, Wash. papers received here, we learn of the passing of one of that city's most prominent philanthropic ladies, in the person of Mrs. Elizabeth Foss, who was 91 years of age at death. Born in St. John's, Nfld., on June 18, 1828, she lived the early part of her life in Boston, being married in that city. In 1875 she went west to San Francisco, and thence to Seattle by boat. Seattle was at that time a very small and unimportant place, and during her lifetime there she witnessed its splendid development and growth. In her will she left the larger portion of her fortune to the churches and charitable institutions so that in death she was as generous as in life. Many in Seattle had good reason to regret her passing, and even here there may be some who will be sorry to hear the sad news.

"There's a Reason"

Canada Food Board License No. 2-026

"The young man power of the world, and especially of Europe, is reduced to a very low figure and the best of the young manhood is lost. The future of the race is largely with the middle-aged and the unfit. Thousands of women are condemned to go single who in happier days would have become the mothers of families.

"That the economic and social effects are likely to be most remote a question of dispute. No man can tell. But the medical effects are less obscure. It is not, for example, probable that unfit fathers will beget robust sons; nor that fathers who by one means or another were able to avoid service in the Army will breed a race of fighting men. The mothers may do something to save the situation, it is true; but men of weak stamina do not mate very often with vigorous and brave women.

"One remedy that suggests itself at once is a greatly increased care of the children of our soldiers and sailors. These do, in fact, represent the hope of the nation. They, and they alone,
