(By the Author of "A Bachelor Husband")

CHAPTER IV.
Miss Mason was helping herself to a pat of butter. She held it poised for a moment on the end of her knife while she answered—

"Rich? I should think he is! He's one of the richest men in London."

"One of the richest men in London! But he—"

"But he—" would never see him again.

She looked round the little room with angry eyes. It only Fate had set her feet in sunnier paths. She looked at the plain furniture and cheap carpet; the wall-paper was hideous; there was a frightful oleograph of two Early Victorian women with erhollous and ringlet curls hanging over the mantelpiece. They both looked smug and self-satisfied. There was an enlarged photograph of a bald-headed man wearing a Masonic apron on another wall. He was fat and had his right hand plastered carefully along a chair-back to bring into prominence a large signet ring. Esther looked at him and shivered. She felt utterly alone and cut off from the world. She longed for Raymond Ashton with all her soul. She hated Micky Mellows because his kindly condescension had made her feel her position more acutely now she knew him to be what he was.

In spite of the new friend she had made in June Mason she felt lonely and unwanted; she began to cry like a child, as she sat there on the side of the iron bedstead; the tears ran down her cheeks and she made no effort to wipe them away.

She wanted to be happy so badly, and it seemed as if she never was to be happy, the elation that had come to her when she read Micky's letter that morning had faded miserably; after all, what was a letter when it was a real, living personality she wanted, and not mere words?

Downstairs she could hear June Mason moving about and singing; she at least was happy with her little mauve pots and her cheery optimism.

Esther cried all the time she undressed; she crept into bed sobbing miserably, like a child who sleeps at a boarding-school for the first time.

CHAPTER V.
Micky passed three days before he made any attempt to see Esther Shepstone again; days that seemed like a month at least, and during which he lost his appetite and forgot to smoke.

That she did not particularly care if she saw him again or not, he was miserably sure. She had no thoughts for any one but Ashton. He felt at it he could not settle to anything.

On the third morning Mrs. DeLond rang him up. He had told her many times that her voice on the telephone cheered him, but to-day it made him frown.

He tried to answer her "deary" "That you, Micky?" as cheerily, but he knew it was a failure.

"What's the matter?" she asked quickly. "Aren't you well? Or are you cross?"

There was a hint of laughter in her voice. She had never known Micky cross; he was always the cheeriest of mortals.

Micky grabbed at the excuse she offered him.

"I've got a brute of a headache," he said.

"Poor old boy!" The pretty, sympathetic voice irritated him. "Come out for a walk; it will do you good."

"Thanks—thanks awfully, but I don't think it would. I'm a perfect bear—you'd hate me. Some other time."

There was a little pause. Micky could have kicked himself as he remembered on what terms they had parted. It was not her fault that a miracle had happened since then to metamorphose the whole world. He supposed uncomfortably that she was just the same as she had been when he last saw her. He knew she must be wondering why he had stayed away so long. He tried to soften his words.

"I'll look in to-night, if I may, sorry to be such a bear."

She answered rather dispiritedly that it was all right, that she was sorry he felt ill. It was a relief when she rang off. He took his hat and went off to call on Esther.

He felt that he could settle to nothing till he had seen her again; there was a curious jealousy in his heart about Ashton; he would have given anything he possessed to be able to distinguish her, but knew it was impossible without hopelessly compromising himself.

It was a bitter disappointment to find that she was out when he reached the boarding-house; his face felt absurdly when he turned and walked away.

He wondered if she really was out, or only to him.

After a moment he laughed at himself. A few days ago he had not known there was such a person as Esther Shepstone in the world, and yet now here he was, consumed with jealousy because she was not in when he called.

He took a taxicab back to the West End; he walked about for half an hour staring aimlessly into shop windows, then went back to his room. He could not understand his extraordinary restlessness; he had only once before felt anything like it in all his life, and that had been the first time he ever backed a horse, and was waiting a wire from the course to say if the brute had won.

He recalled the fever of impatience that had consumed him, then, and laughed; after all, it had been nothing compared with this.

Driver came into the room.

"If you please, sir, Miss Mason has been on the phone. She said would I ask you to meet her for tea."

Micky did not look enthusiastic; he liked June awfully, but to-day every one and everything seemed a bore.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for all coughs, colds, hoarseness, croup, throat ticks, bronchitis, asthma or winter coughs.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The nasal throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat ticks, bronchitis, asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. In either way, you get 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for less than 25¢.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else advertised to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"Tea! Where?" he asked vaguely.

"Miss Mason said that you would know, sir; the same place as usual."

"Oh, all right!"

Micky looked at the clock and sighed. After all, June was always amiable; he went off almost cheerfully to the unpretentious club of which she had spoken to Esther. He had to wait in the lobby while a boy in buttons fetched June to him. She came downstairs looking very much at home, and smoking the inevitable cigarette. It was one of June Mason's charms that she always managed to look at home wherever she was.

She had taken off her coat, but she wore a green hat with a gold ornament that suited her to perfection, set on her dark head at a rakish angle.

"I began to think you were not coming," she said.

She gave him her left hand, and Micky squeezed it in friendly fashion. They went upstairs together to a small tea-room, which was just now deserted save for two waitresses who were signalling together over a newspaper.

June walked over to a table in the window, and Micky followed.

He had been here with her scores of times before, and the two waitresses smiled at one another knowingly; they were quite sure that this was romance.

(To be continued.)

Dakota's Experience.

(From the Montreal Gazette.)
The Manitoba Government, it seems, expects to finance the Province by means of savings institutions it has developed. North Dakota, from which Manitoba seems to get some of its financial ideas, had a similar notion. North Dakota state banks are closing. Literally by the dozen, and Chief Justice Robinson is reported as speaking of the institutions as a Jonah, who, "without any means of his own, has posed as a banker and got into his coffers all the public moneys from every county and corner of the State; he has put a large part of the money into long time loans on land and into the coffers of bankers and parties that will never repay, and into buildings, mills and elevators." The depositors now demand their money, and the money is not there for them. The story has been told before in connection with non-state banks. The Manitobans should take notice, and avoid a common and dangerous mistake of forgetting that banks which neglect to provide for paying their debts when due, like men who have like experiences, come to financial grief.

WOMEN WHO CANNOT WORK

Read Mrs. Corley's Letter and Benefit by Her Experience

Edmund, S. C. "I was run down with nervousness and female trouble and suffered every month. I was not able to do any work and tried a lot of medicines but got no relief. I saw your medicine advertised in a little book, and I had not taken two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before I could see it was helping me. I am keeping house now and am able to do all of my work. I cannot say enough for your medicine. It has done more for me than any doctor. You may print this letter if you wish."—ELIZABETH CORLEY, care of A. P. Corley, Edmund, S. C.

Ability to stand the strain of work is the privilege of the strong and healthy, but how our hearts ache for the weak and sickly women struggling with their daily rounds of household duties, with backaches, headaches, nervousness and sleepless nights. A new pain. Why will not the mass of letters from women all over this country, which we have been publishing, convince such women that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help them just as surely as it did Mrs. Corley?

LUX
FOR DAINTY FABRICS

When Choosing the Material for a washable Frock for the growing child—
MOTHER naturally thinks of the possibilities of the fabric shrinking in the wash. It is therefore a relief to her to know that the fabric will not shrink or lose its charm if Lux is used for its cleansing.

Durability, charm of colour, quality of texture, the freshness of newness—these are preserved to all good fabrics washed with Lux. A packet of Lux—a bowl of warm water—and dainty hands can cleanse delightful fabrics in a delightfully easy manner.

The beautiful pure Lux flakes are whisked into a creamy, bubbly lather in an instant. Gently squeeze this cleansing foam through and through the soiled texture—then rise in clean water and hang to dry. Lux cannot harm a silken thread, it coaxes rather than forges the dirt from the clothes.

Packets (two sizes) may be obtained everywhere.

NELLIE MAY LEVER.
There passed peacefully away at Heart's Content, on March 17th, after a lingering illness, Nellie May, aged 18½ years, beloved daughter of the late James and Adelaide Lever, leaving two brothers, Raymond, now at Heart's Content, William, at St. John's, and her grandmother and grandfather, with whom she was residing at the time of her decease, as well as a large circle of mourning friends. The deceased was up to the time of her illness an employee of the W. L. Cable Co., where she was most loved, both by Managers and Co-workers, for her pleasant disposition and enthusiastic works. She was also Secretary of the W.M.S. Association and a zealous worker in both Sunday School, Ladies' Aid Association and Choir. Cut down in the bloom of womanhood, she rests with those of her loved ones gone before, there to await with them the glorious resurrection. The funeral took place on Sunday, and was notable for its size, having been one of the largest seen in Heart's Content for quite a number of years. Rev. Dr. Saint officiated, and in a short address spoke highly of the commendable qualities of the deceased. To the sorrowing relatives, the people of Heart's Content extend their sympathy.—Com.

"Clear Away the Wreckage."

CAPTAIN WHITELEY'S ADVICE.
"Clear away the wreckage and prepare at once to recover our markets lost through the Fishery Regulations," is the advice given by Capt. George Whiteley, who returned by last Kyle from a trip to Europe. "We must forget our monetary losses and by good business management make a supreme effort to regain the former favorable position which Newfoundland held in the fish markets of the world," he further added when interviewed by a Telegram reporter yesterday. Asked what he thought of the chances for the disposal of the balance of our codfish, he replied, "the market has struck bottom as far as the price is concerned. There is some movement of fish in Oporto, but the conditions in Spain are very bad due to flooding while we were fighting the Italian buyers. London brokers are looking for a little general improvement in the near future."

Capt. Whiteley did not think much good could be gained by a discussion of the harm done by the Regulations. He, however, stated that everywhere he went, our Fishery Regulations were looked upon as a most foolish piece of legislation. "In fact, we are the laughing stock of Europe," he said. Everywhere he was confronted with the query, "Did you think that Newfoundland was the only country that caught fish?" Questioned as regards the coming fishery, Captain Whiteley said, "We must have absolute assurances that the Regulations will not be again imposed; without this assurance no person will engage in the industry."

"Is there a possibility that they would be again imposed?" we asked. "Yes," he replied; "for having a large stock of old fish on hand, it is possible that regulations would be enforced conditioning the sale of this fish first. The consequent result would be that all new fish would be withheld from market giving our competitors again the advantage." Regarding outfitting, Capt. Whiteley said that prices must come down to enable us to produce cheaper fish.

"There will be smaller crews and smaller outfits, of necessity, and the majority of fishermen this year will be sharmen, as it is felt that they should be prepared to take a portion of the risks as well as the outfitting. The fishery regulations must be repealed as a first step before any sane person will engage in next year's fishery," said the captain in conclusion.

While away Capt. Whiteley visited Liverpool, London and Valencia, Spain.

Scientific methods
Efficient methods have been found. Able authorities have proved them by many careful tests. The best dental opinion endorses them. These methods are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And to let all know its benefits a 10-Day Tube is being sent to everyone who asks.

You must fight film
Brushing does not save the teeth if you leave the film. That's why well-brushed teeth so often discolor and decay. Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The ordinary tooth paste does not end it, so very few people have escaped its damage. It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. So dental science has in late years sought ways to fight that film.
