King Rhoud and the Bird. A warrior bold was brave King Rhoud, But a tender heart had he, And he heard one day as he walked through

And he heard one day as he waised through the wood
A bird moaning piteously.
"Poor thing! It is surely in pain!" he cried
To his courtier standing by;
"Perchance that may be!" the earl replied,
"But no time for birds have I!"
Then, without a word, the lithe young king
Climbed up the tree like a boy,
And rescued the bird with the drooping wing, And carried it home with joy.

'Twas in the time of war, and throughout the land Bold traitors were plotting how They could wrest the sceptre from Rhoud's strong hand And snatch the crown from his brow: And that very day 'neath the palace wall Two wicked villians said They would let, at night, a loose plank fall From the ceiling above his head—The while on his couch the monarch slept—And crush him to death by the blow, But, how it all happened, none except Themselves would ever know.

It was late that night when King Rhoud sought
His rest, with a conscience clear Toward God and man, and never a thought Of the danger lurking near!
And sound had he slept—to waken no more!— When lo! in the stillness he heard When lo! in the stillness he heard Again and again as he heard before In the woods, the cry of the bird. "Poor little thing! perchance it may need Fresh water," the monarch said, And tarrying not to do the kind deed, He sprang at once from his bed.

Just then the ceiling above fell down,
And the plank crushed the couch below;
And all in the palace and all in the town
Ran aimlessly to and fro;
For with dread forebodings their hearths were

And swiftly the panic spread, When a herald cried, "King Rhoud When a herald cried, "King Rhoud i killed!

He is crushed to death in his bed!"

But lo! before them unharmed he stood With the bird he had saved that day:
"Fear not!" he said, "Our God is good—
He guards us from ill alway;
Nor scorns He ever the slightest thing,
For all may fulfit his word;
And since a wee bird can save a king
Should the king not save a bird?"

Up to a month ago I had read enough stor ies of demoniacal madmen to turn my hair white. I concocted a craving for their horrible adventures. I searched all current literature for them until I had a close acntance with lunatics of every descripon. My friend Gibbets was in much the same state as I. He had begun by reading frightful tales in the newspapers; these gave him a taste of the unhealthy excitement. room and on Sunday morning. My reading room is also my parlor and sitting-room— everything except bedroom and dining-room. I have two rooms on the first floor of a very select boarding-house, both of which, I flat-ter myself, are quite comfortably furnished; and in the one of these that is not the bedroom Gibbets and I were sitting. He had come in, as was his custom, directly after

He took every Sunday newspaper that was published and so did I. We sat down before the crackling wood in two large easy chairs, piled our respective sheets on the chairs, piled our respective sheets on the floor beside us, and commenced to examine them. An ordinary man, a sensible man, would have looked first at the important news of the day. Gibbets and I did not do that; we glanced eagerly from one page to another until we arrived at the denormant. another until we arrived at the department other, that if confined together the behavior

No one can ever tell but that his next-door neighbor-his intimate friend-the very companion with whom he is sitting—is a dangerous maniac!"

And suddenly a terrible thought darted through my mind, causing my every nerve to quiver, filling me with unknown fearwhat if Gibbets was a maniac? I withdraw my eyes slowly from the paper, turned my head and looked at him. Heavens! He was glaring at me-glaring steadfastly at me with dilating pupils! I was spellbound and I could not remove my gaze. His eyes became more and more queer, seeming to dart out ferocity and destruction. My flesh crawled. In that mo ment that we remained thus silently looking at each other all that I had ever read of sudden madness, all the knowledge that I had ever possessed of concealed lunacy, passed through my mind. Half a minute had passed; Gibbets had not yet moved a muscle, and you may be sure I had not. I discovered that I was still alive, and began to recover myself a little; the blood commenced to flow slowly through my veins again. With my eyes still fixed upon his glaring, enlarging orbs, which seemed to bore me, though I called upon all my faculties to form a plan of escape. Then suddenly I realized why he had not yet sprung upon me; my steadfast gaze had held him quiescent, as the human eye often will hold an infuriated animal or mad-

If I could keep him thus till I reached the door or procured a weapon, I might yet be saved. But the door was at the other end of the room; I could never get to it before him. And there was no weapon in the room -yes, there was; my heavy cane. It stood n the corner, about ten feet away. But Gibbets was as near to it as I was, and at my first movement he might leap upon me. Never mind; I must try it -it was my only hope, I would move very very quietly-cautiously-and hold him spell-bound with my gaze as I did so. So thought I, and prepared to act. I took my newspaper in one hand and lowered it slowly to the floor, concentrating all my will in my look upon him. Heavens! Gibbets was doing the same thing. Then he was not about to spring suddenly upon me up, "Yes," he replied. but was going to play with me awhile-catlike. I was crawling towards my heavy cane in the corner. But no matter how slowly or softly I crept, Gibbets kept As I said before, never was man in such a situation. Many men have been confined with lunatics and found themselves in more dangerous places than I was. But whoever, in the sanctity of his own room, before his own grate fire, sitting comfortably with his own best friend, suddenly saw that friend go crazy and play with him maliciously before killing him? Yes, I had about resigned myself to being killed: I realized that the maniac was thus mimicking me merely for the pleasure of watching my anguish, and I repeatedly pictured my stark, white body lying upon the with wounds and ghastly bruises. The idea caused me to shiver from head to foot and o involuntarily think of the door. The door-ves: I might reach that by crawling very softly towards it. But I must proceed quietly; at my first violent move I would be a dead man. I wheeled cautiously around, an inch at a time. Gibbets still imitated me. I crawled gently over the carpet toward the door, but Gibbets kept up with me, neck and neck. I increased my pace. Gibbets went faster stopped entirely. Gibbets stopped. Evidently I could not reach the door either? I had now been in this frightful danger so long that calm began to succeed the throbbing tempest in my heal. One cannot long endure such extreme emotion. My hear resumed its natural beat, my ideas assumed order in my brain. I thought serenely,

"Well, if I must die now 1 must die." But I also commenced to think of all the expedients I had ever heard of being resorted to in conflicts with madmen. A plan quickly occurred to me. I would pacify this creature, address him in kind and gentle accents, sabdue his ferocious fury. I turned on my knees so as to face him.

"Gibbets," said I, in a low, sweet voice, do you feel badly? Poor Gibbets." His look become instantly more horrible than ever. He backed away and prepared for a spring. But I presevered.

Suddenly an excellent idea came to me. I had often read of the wonderful influence that one crazy person has upon another, that if confined together the behavior of each one will astound the other into stupid reflection, and often effect an entire cure. I straightway determined to become very insane myself and astound him so that I could reach the door.

I raised my arms and began, slowly at first, to wave them about in wild circles, crying in a monotonous voice—"Boo—woo." Meanwhile I watched him as closely as ever; Meanwhile I watched h Meanwhile I watched him as closely as ever; creased my efforts, thrashing my arms about like a wind-mill in a gale, and squeaking-"Blunketty-poo Kalamazoo." This was very queer. Gibbets, then, was still playing with m; still enjoying my poor attempts to escape him, since he knew it was impossible. I rested my chin on the top of attempts to escape him, since he knew it was impossible. I rested my chin on the top of the sofa and looked at that ghastly face a while in despair. I thought over a dozen stories concerning lunatics that I had lately read and reflected upon the different ways in which the hero outwitted them. Soon it struck me that I might try one of them with favorable results. I would address my miac, pretend to fall in with his ideas, and propse some action to him in the pursuance of which I might escape. My former words angered him. I must proceed carefully. "Gibbets," ssid, I, softly, "you want to kill somebody, don't you?"

to be able to raise the banner of equality over our maritime provinces.

It is acknowledged to be woman's duty publicly and privately to help the fallen, purify the home, and train the rising generation in morality and virtue. In fact, this is said to be "woman's sphere." Of course it is. But we read the story of the captive Israelites, how their oppressors required a certain "tile of bricks" and gave them no straw with which to mix the clay. We despise the government that could so treat its slaves. But look at ourselves: We are expected to do a work, but no tools are given us, except prayers and tears. Let us help ourselves, not by choosing a leader and marching to some unknown land, but let us follow the Francis Willards, the Lucy Stones, and the Ludy Henry Somersets along their "Save me from him!" whispered Gibbets. Hervey turned white, backed out of the loorway and fled, pell mell, down the stairs. Then a sudden suspicion shot like lightning through my frame. "Gibbets," said "No," he replied; "are you?"
"Heavens! no," answered I, uttering a tremendous sigh of relief, rising to my feet and stepping over the sofa. "Why, thunderation! I thought for the last hour that marching to some unknown land, but let us follow the Francis Willards, the LucyStones, and the Lady Henry Somersets along their line of march, straight for the parliments, there to ask in the name of humanity and the home to be put on a political equality with men.

The tendency of the time as I have said, is to flock to the cities, where the club-room is supposed to be the place for intellectual development as well as for fine dinners. Thither the well-to-do citizen wends his way when business hours are over. Then there is the restaurant, the bar-room, the gambling den and their companion places of vice for the less oppulent. Is it any wonder that the cry of the city is "keep the women at home." But what is home under such conditions, sentiment worn out by neglect, feet and coming from behind the chair. "You don't mean it? Why I thought for underlying suspicions of each other that will never be dissipated. the ery of the city is "keep the women at home." But what is home under such conditions, sentiment worn out by neglect, womans usefulness as a home-maker for the husband of her choice almost unnecessary, no interchange of ideas on the world and its movements, to make an intellectual union. What is there left? I tell you mothers, sisters and wives, the home is in danger, and we must do what is called the unwomanly office of assisting those who would help us to keep it. We must look our position square in the face, and consider that under the moral law there is no sex—one Lord, one faith, one baptism for all. As that is an incontrovertible fact, can woman shirk her individual responsibility? If she is morally, which is the highest test, man's equal, she has proved herself his equal intellectually,—her plain duty in defence of home and hearthstone is to strive for political freedom, or in other words, political equality. Either this or she must return to the world of unreason; she must unlearn all she has learned of freedom. This is imperative. She cannot stand half way between freedom in theorye and slavery in fact.

In conclusion, I would say in behalf of the home view of the question in our comprehensive work, we must strive for homes permeated with the highest social, christian, and intellectual responsibility — not great homes, but good homes. We may well adopt the advice given by Epictetus to Marcus Aurelius," "It is better that great souls live in small habitations than that abject slaves burrone in great houses."

—The Montreal daily Sur of the 9th instant says: "The export of apples from this port this season is exceptionally heavy. Three steamers which sailed this week carried between them over 25,000 barrels. A great many more are still to be shipped. The freight amounts to two shillings a barrel against three shillings obtained last year."

The point in the above to which we wish the strength of the greatfully chean to call attention is the exceedingly cheap rate of freights mentioned. According to this statement apples are now being carried from Montreal to the English market at two shillings per barrel, while it is costing the shillings per barrel, while it is costing the fruit-growers of this valley something like double that amount to send them from Halifax to the same market. It ought to be just the other way. Halifax is, roughly speaking, about a thousand miles nearer London than Montreal is, by the St. Lawrence roue. Other things being equal we should get freights at about one-half shat charged from Montreal. But the latter city has the advantage of several competing lines, and in consequence freights are down much lower than with us. It can be taken for granted at it pays the steamship companies to carry im from Montreal at even the two shillings is barrel, or they would not be doing it for the simple than with us would be a fairly remunerate that what would be a fairly remunerate that what would be a fairly remunerate the same competition. Up to the present time we have refrained from saying anything concerning a driving track for this town, from the fact that up to last Monday evening the matter had been entirely speculative. To-day, however, we are in a position to announce that a number of our leading citizens have liberally subscribed towards the movement, that the site has been selected and purchased, a provisional board of directors chosen, and all other preliminary arrangements effected for the immediate grading of the track, which is to be accomplished under the supervision of Hector MacLean, Esq., a gentleman of vast experience in such matters, and who will perform the work in a most thorough and painstaking manner.

who will perform the work in a most thorough and painstaking manner.

The plan of the track was made by R. J. Uniacke, Esq., of Annapolis, who unhesitatingly states that there is no better location to be found in the province, it being none other that the land directly back of the residence of William Chipman, Esq., and within two minutes' walk from the centre of the town and all the hotels.

At the meeting above referred to the following board of provisional directors were chosen: E. Ruggles, O. T. Daniels, and John L. Cox, Esqrs., Hector MacLean, J. W. Beckwith, Jac. R. deWitt and N. E. Chute, E. G. Langley and R. E. Feltus.

E. Kuggles, Esq., was unanimously elected president, and John L. Cox, Esqrs., was unanimously elected president, and John L. Cox, Esq., secretary-treasurer.

ed president, and John L. Cox, Esq., secretary-treasurer.

After thoroughly discussing the cost of the track and carefully considering all other features in connection therewith, the meeting adjourned, greatly pleased with the success of the indefatigable labors of Mr. Leander Miller and Mr. Cox, who have been mainly instrumental in procuring the subscribed stock necessary to build one of the best tracks to be found in the Maritime Provinces.

Death of Parker N. Young.

Information was received from Zanesville Ohio, last week, by Mr. Moses Young, o Information was received from Zaneaville, of too high, and we trust that before another season our fruit-growers and shippers will be able to devise ways and means whereby they can ship their fruit on as favorable conditions as those of the upper provinces.

It will be observed also that the quantity being shipped from Montreal is quite large. This, of course, is owing to the fact that the St. Lawrence will be frozen up in a few weeks and the fruit is being rushed along before that takes place. The shipments from there may affect the markets for a few weeks, but present indications point to a brisk market at good prices after that time.

—WE were slightly in error in stating last week that an agreement had been entered into between Great Britain and Russia by which these nations were to interfere in the conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on in the east, and put an other conflict now going on the contract of the death of his eldest son, Parker N., which cocurred at that place on Saturday, 13th the clocated on Saturday, 13th the throat. onflict now going on in the east, and put an end to the war. The agreement, it appears, includes France and Germany as well as Great Britain and Russia, and the object, as far as it is yet known, is to protect Europeans and European interests in China, leaving the two belligerents to fight it out among themselves a little longer.

Among the native population of China there is not the best of feeling toward foreign residents, even in the most peaceable times. Should the power of the central government be overthrown, or for the time rendered powerless, every foreign resident in China would be in imminent danger from the fanatical mobs of Chinese. To guard against anything of the kind the great powers of Europe have made ample provision by sending strong naval reinforcements to the scene of the conflict.

We still think that Europe should, and doubtless will, interfere to prevent the partition of the Chinese Empire. There are doubtless will, interfere to prevent the partition of the Chinese Empire. There are nearly 400,000,000 of people there, and there by themselves with a government and institutions of their own, suited to the spirit and genius of so peculiar a people, is the place for them to live. If the empire were broken up or dismembered now, hordes of them might swarm over other lands leading to results such as no pen can describe. We are aware that some of our great religious bodies at their annual gatherings have recently passed strongly worded resolutions asking that all restrictions upon Chinese immigration be removed: but, these resolutions, asking that all restrictions upon Chinese immigration be removed: but, these resolutions, looked at from a practical or common sense point of view, appear to be unwise in the extreme.

We have not as yet given this subject much thought, but already we can see one serious objection to the scheme. On the evening of Monday last a large party of our young folks assembled at the home of Mr. Alfred Barnes, for the purpose of having a good old time husking. The corn was duly husked and the proverbial red ear was there in abundance, causing much merriment among the gentlemen and some little embarrassment among the ladies. After the husking was finished a delightful tea was served, and the remainder of the evening was spent in social games, such as only jolly young people can enjoy, with just a little dancing, to music furnished by our host on his cornet.

This week will see the apples about all gathered, and the greater part of the root crops housed. The apple crop being so much larger than was expected, barrels are becoming very scarce, some of our farmers having to house large quantities of their apples in bulk. The gale of last week caused a great deal of damage among the apples, blowing off as many as thirty barrels in some orchards. The demand thus far is small, with prices ruling very low, the buyers not having got down to work yet. MRS. MARSHALL'S, PARADISE CORNER MAGISTRATES' BLANKS FOR SALE How to get Rich.

Russel Sage carved out his own great fortune of $50,000,000. He is a notable example of a self-made man. He is believed to have more ready money than any single individual in the world. There are larger fortunes than Mr. Sage's, but they are invested in securities, property and business. Mr. Sage has larger investments, but so carefully selected that no general financial disaster would make a diffe rence of 10 per cent. in them. The reason that he keeps so much money on hand is to accommodate men and corporations that require loans. How to make money is a problem that every man tries to solve. When Mr. Sage was asked for his solution, he replied: "I believe that any man of good intelligence can accumulate a fortune, at least a moderate one, by adopting three principles-industry, economy and patience. I place no reliance on luck. A mind capable of directing on in the right course makes success almost certain. A young man should start out in life trusting in God, and resolved to attain a position of self-dependence. He ed potatoes for a few days. must so conduct himself as to command the respect and confidence of all with whom he regarded by others will have a powerful in fluence on his failure. To disregard the opinions of others would be to invite failure.

Without economy no man can succeed, even if he should be placed in circumstances where there are large gains. His gains would not be prepared to withstand reverses which are likely to come to anyone. A man must be ready for set-backs. I see striking illustrations in Wall street of the lack of and when the course of speculation changes to an adverse direction the money that is use the same as if it were a cake of soap. needed to tide the speculators over the trouble has been dissipated. ould be governed by circumstances. Men's oundings are different, and a rule that could follow another could not. Judgent must be exercised in saving as well as in spending. It is safe to advise a young man to save all he can, and he will find that the saving of his first hundred dollars will teach him to save the second, and so on, until he has laid the foundation for a fortune hat may by good management be made a arge one. A man's health has much to do with his success in life and it behooves him to look well after his bodily condition. Ill health will deprive him of energy, which he must use in achieving success. The young man must first work on a salary until he is able to comprehnd the value of money, and also the source of supply and the ease with which it may be dissipated. He must read books and newspapers to keep posted on topics of the day and the course of human events. It would be well for him to attend debating societies to qualify himself to stand on his two feet and express himself in an intelligent manner. Learning acquired by a young man in his own room after his labors of the day are over is hard gained, and for that reason more lasting than the education acquired in the great institutions of culture. The young man taught in a fashionable college is a house plant, while the young man who cultivates himself is an outdoor growth,

'Intelligence is a prerequisite to success One of the wealthiest men in America recently said that he considered intemperance th greatest cause of poverty, but the lack of a wide difference in men. Some men have no more intelligence than a dumb animal. It is also with animals as with men. Some animals are almost human in their intelligence, and others are the merest brutes, with only their instinct, and that of the lowest order, to direct them. The intelligence of horses and dogs is often astonishing. "Close application is necessary in every business. If I did not give personal and careful attention to my own business I could not hope to prosper. I hereby certify that I have carefully examined the sample of K. D. C. submitted by the K. D. C. Co. Ltd., Feb. 10, 1893, and have been unable to detect any objectionable or injurious ingredients therein. It is a compound prepared from pure drugs, and it is my opinion that, if properly administered it will give ready relief to sufferers from the different forms of the disease for which it is intended. It is a perfectly safe remedy.

A Floral Quilt.

I cut blue denim into 42 hexagon pieces five inches long on each side. These were all hemmed neatly at one time on the sewing machine and put in a drawer. Afterwar each one was worked and laid away until all were ready for sewing together. Flower catalogues were bought, figures selected for each patch and basted on. A bunch of car-nation pinks was traced with rather coarse thread and outlined as flower, leaf and stem. I took off the paper and embroidered the design with linen floss, as taste or time permitted. I carried out the pattern in its delicate tracery and shading. When all was done there was no two patches alike. There were pansies, sweet peas, geraniums, roses, daffodils, tulips, coreopsis, chrysanthemums, a large bunch of clover and holly leaves and berries. As 42 is a goodly number, many designs were needed. Each design, with leaves, stems and tendrils, extended to the patch. Wall paper often, life?-Longfellow.

There | bed, the bed covering and bedding and the furniture of the bedroom should be the subject of consideration and thought. As it is, toa often this is the last room considered. In many families a good sized closet, with no opening into the outer air, is considered good nough for a bedroom. Not only should the edroom be thoroughly ventilated and exposed to the rays of the sun, if this is possible, but the bed clothing should be taken of and hung in the air and sun for several hours before the bed is made up. The fashion of the double bed is rapidly passing out of use. Where two persons occupy the same rooms two single beds, or twin beds placed side by rarely sleep together without one of them feeling ill effects. It is a most injurious practice for a child to sleep with an adult, but it is equally bad for a strong child to sleep with a delicate nervous one. The stronger person may sometimes draw strength from the weaker, but usually this

s reversed, and the more vigorous person is the sufferer.

Hot milk is a most nutritious beverage, a real value of which but few people know.

Many who have abundance of milk never think of using it as drink. A drink, did we say? That's a mistake. We should eat milk instead of drinking it. That is, take it in small sips. Why? Because the casein of the milk, when it comes in contact with the acid of the gastric fluid, coagulates and forms curds, and if swallowed in large quantities at once, a large curd is formed which the stomach handles with difficulty. The gastric fluid can mingle much more readily with the small curds that result from sipping the milk.

Cleanliness the First Law of Health. The following words of the late Dr. Richardson should be ever kept in mind: "Cleanliness covers the whole field of sanitary labor. Cleanliness, that is purity of air: cleanliness, that is purity of water: cleanliness in and around house: cleanliness of persons; cleanliness of dress; cleanliness of food and feeding; cleanliness in work; cleanliness in habits of the indivual man name from her tombstone." It is hardly and woman; cleanliness of life and conversation: purity of life, temperance, all these are in man's power. To Cure a Sty. Here is a remedy which will cure a sty: Take the white of an egg on a saucer and rub into it a small pinch of powdered alum. It will become a curd. Put it between two fine pieces of muslin lawn and bind it over the eye before retiring for the night. In the morning the sty will be gone or much better. A second application will prevent more sties from appearing. —In severe paroxysms of coughing, a tablespoonful of glycerine in hot milk or cream will give speedly relief.

From St. John,—MONDAY, WEDNESDAY and FRIDAY. Experience.

While the following statement of A. D. Thompson, of Montreal, is of local interest as coming from him, it is also of universal interest because it emphasizes a great truth. Mr. Thompson says:—"Being troubled with masal catarrh I was advised to try Hawker's catarrh cure, which I did, and since using it the catarrh has disappeared entirely; in fact I can walk all day and breathe through my nose without the least trouble." What Mr. Thompson says has been his experience, has been the experience of thousands. Even the most aggravated forms of catarrh yield to the wonderful curative power of Hawker's catarrh cure. It restores the breath to its pristine sweetness and removes all disagree able and unhealthy symptoms of the disease. It is a marvellously quick and sure cure for cold in the head, and will relieve the deafness caused by catarrh. For sale by all druggists at 25 cents per box. When Men Were Honest.

At one time, in the Highlands of Scotland, to ask for a receipt or promissory note was considered an insult, and such a thing as a breach of contract was rarely met with, so strictly did the people regard their honor.

When other modes of doing business were gradually introduced, the people resented such innovations, as in a case of a farmer who had been to the Lowlands and there from a gentleman in the neighborhood. That latter, Mr. Stewart, complied and counted out the gold, when the farmer im nediately wrote out a receipt. "And what is this, man?" cried Mr. Stewart, on being handed the slip of paper.
