THE CABIN-BOY.

Upon the bridge, at silvery break of day, I stood, and saw a solitary bark Move from her moorings in the harbor dark;
Silent and spectral in the shadowy gray, Tower'd the great masts, and flung their poonies gay.
Among the sailors, cheerily as a lark, Whistled a cabin-boy, an elfin spark, Newly apprenticed to the fearful spray.
He stalked about, and watch'd the brightening beams
Kiss the topgallant with a golden tone That took his fancy to divine skies, Where isles remote made music in his dreams;
He sniff'd the gales that murmur round Ceylon;
While all the Indies flashed within his eyes.

Unhaling, wheel'd the inevitable year;
And once again upon the bridge I paced Beside a mother, sad, prophetic-faced, Each sea-gull making misery in her car.
Behind us humm'd the city, and more near,
The harbor rustled with the windy masts.
Then lo! a ship rush'd in before the blasts,
A batter'd phantom of the pillous sea—
The same grand bark which, one brief year ago,
Bore to the gleaming dreamlands of the East,
That beautiful boy, "O Captain, where is he?"
By sapphire isles, the fairies of the yeast Loved him, and took him down the emerald flow,
On their soft bosoms, to a marriage feast.

A HAUNTED HAMLET.

The following extract from an amusing paper under this title, signed C. Osborne, in an old number of Temple Bar, will doubtless be acceptable to many of our readers. The narrator was a promising but very poorly paid orator in a Provincial Company, who had some talent and much ambition for playing Shakespearian characters. The better to carry out his parts he ran in debt for some new dresses to a Jew costume dealer. He promised payment repeatedly without being able to fulfill his promise, until Moses' patience was exhausted when the poor player's benefit was about to come off. The tickets sold well, and he was certain of a bumper when the night arrived.
The rest of the story, which is of infinite humor, and how he came to be haunted throughout the evening by his father's spirit, he shall tell in his own words:—

The old church clock tolling the hour six, warned me to hurry from my lodgings to that temple of fame in which I fondly hoped I had secured a niche for myself. As I walked along I began to taste the pleasures of celebrity; shopmen nudged each other as I passed; a couple of young ladies, whose profession seemed to be "millinery," looked at me from under their bonnets, and then repeated my name in a whisper loud enough for me to hear half-a-dozen yards from them. "This is indeed renown," I muttered, "what matters it that my salary is small, when my fame is becoming so great?"

As I said the words, I felt a hand on my shoulder, and turned with the glow of exultation still suffusing my cheek.
"Mr. Arthur Stanley, I believe, sir," said my accoster.
"That is my name," I replied, trying to hurry on.
"Excuse me, sir, then," returned the man, "but you must come with me. At the suit of Moses marks for twenty-five pun ten and costs." He handed me a small slip of paper—I dare say you can guess its contents—and took me by the arm.
"This is most unfortunate," I said;
"had it but been one night later I should not have minded it."
"Case of 'hook it,' I suppose," said the man.
"On the contrary, I should have been able to have discharged the amount. I suppose you couldn't put off the arrest until after business this evening?"
"Not on any account," replied my captor, and I saw that he meant what he said.

This, then, was the end of my ambitious aspirations, instead of the glare of the footlights and the plaudits of an audience, I was to have the darkness and silliness of a jail. I folded my arms in despair, and defied my fate.

"Let us go," I said, "to-night was appointed for my benefit; but no matter—Denmark's a prison—a goodly one, in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons.
Lead on." As I turned to accompany the bailiff's man a messenger from the theatre accosted us.

"Oh, Mr. Stanley," the man said,
"I'm sent to tell you that we've no ghost; Figgins has just come in awfully drunk."
I was about to answer him, when my captor interrupted me, asking me if I had put up "Hamlet." Upon my replying in the affirmative, he said that he thought he could help me.
He had been a member of an amateur theatrical club, and the ghost of Hamlet's father had been one of his most successful attempts. If I liked, he would sustain the part on this occasion, and thus, keeping his eye upon me, would postpone my arrest until after the performance. I saw that vanity instigated the offer, but as drowning men will clutch at straws, I accepted the proposal, and hurried off to the theatre with all speed, accompanied by my obliging Nemesis. In the difficulty the manager consented to my supposed friend's offer, and a few hints sufficing to take the place of rehearsals, half-an-hour before the curtain was to rise saw the bailiff's man donning the armor of the inebriated Figgins.

Up went the curtain, to a house crowded to the ceiling, the tragedy commenced with every promise of success, my recitation was most flattering, and the applause that greeted my points almost made me forget the presence of my custodian, who watched me, with ever vigilant eyes, from the wing. I was naturally apprehensive of the "man in which the ghost would be rendered, but the interview with my father's shade was as satisfactory as it would have been had Figgins himself embodied the spirit, though it must be admitted that spirits were peculiarly in his line.

At the words "Alfen, alfen" Hamlet remember me," were uttered, generous applause rewarded the exertions of the stage-struck bailiff.
With a look of relief I was about to apostrophise heaven, earth, and the other place, when, turning, I saw my father's spirit still upon the stage.
"Leave the stage," I whispered, supposing that my friend had forgotten his exit.

To my horror the ghost replied with an oath, not loud but deep that he would see me—first. It was in vain that I reiterated my direction, the ghost would not give up, and feeling that the situation was critical, I went on with my part, and strive with extra vehemence to carry the audience with me, so that they might overlook the presence of the implacable shade. Either the audience were not at home with the text, or looked upon the ghost's remaining as a new reading, for they gave no sign of disapproval. When Horatio and Marcellus came on, however, their wonder almost brought on the catastrophe, but I urged them to go on, and the act drew to a conclusion, with the novelty of the ghost speaking his injunction over my left shoulder. The drop down, I showered expostulations on my persecuting father's head, but he turned a deaf ear to them all.

"I'll tell you what it is, gov'ner," he said, "I ain't wishing to be at all annoyin' or ungentlemanly to you, but I had to arrest a gentleman in your profession once, and obliged him by waiting until his performance was over, when blowed if he wasn't shabby enough to get taken down a trap at the end, and bolt. I thought of that while I was on the stage just now with you, and if I leave you again, my mother was a Frenchman.
Without going into the question of his parentage, I promised to surrender myself at the end of the evening, but it was to no purpose; he was obstinate. In the absence of the manager, who had been luckily called away, I confessed my dilemma to the prompter, and he, influenced by good feeling, and the promise of a present on the morrow, consented to allow the tragedy to go on, in spite of my being perpetually haunted.

In a few minutes the tale was in every dressing room, and the company choking with laughter, but as it was not an affair of theirs, they did not offer any objection to the constant interpolation of my father's accursed spirit. Polonius' interview was shadowed by his presence, and although the ancient chamberlain took his leave, the substitute of Fig-gins remained a fixture. Plagued by Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern, I was still more bored by the abominable shade, he intruded upon my interview with Ophelia, listened to the scolding I gave the queen, looked on while I stabbed Polonius.

For all this, however, the audience were satisfied, nay, enthusiastic; as I have said, the majority were too ignorant of the hard to be critical, and the few who were better informed looked upon the performance as a new reading. Indeed, the editor of the Grayport Guardian, a man admitted by his own paper to be the highest authority upon all matters Shakespearean, had already made the preliminary notes lauding the sublime embodiments of the terrible conceptions of Hamlet's afflicted soul.
Indeed so impressed was he with the magnificence and originality of that evening's performance, as to come between the acts and read me the heads of his projected essay.

I was in ecstasy, like a man who on the steps of the gallows receives a reprieve—alas! my head was not out of the noose yet.
As I was standing at the wing in readiness for my entrance for the fifth act, I noticed the manager looking on from the other side. I shouldered, I knew his violence and tyranny, and I trembled at his rage, should he stay there to witness the ghost's unusual presence.

I spoke to the bailiff's man; I implored him to leave me for the rest of the tragedy; I promised him money, anything he should demand, but it was in vain; my anxiety to be away from him only confirmed him in his suspicions that I wanted to use the opportunity to escape.

Despair made me desperate, I called a scene-shifter, and while I pointed to one of the fly-pieces as if it was of that I was speaking, I whispered words of very different import into his ear. The man nodded and hurried away, while I, to keep up appearances, again begged the ghost to remain invisible, of course without making any impression upon his obstinate nature. In a minute the scene-shifter returned. "It's all right sir," he said, "it will be arranged directly." A glance thanked him.

"If you still persist in being at my elbow," I said to my ghost, "I must trouble you to shift your quarters, as I enter at the back of the scene."

He accompanied me as requested, followed by the scene-shifter, and as we stopped I heard the cue given for my entrance. I turned to my ally, who stamped sharply upon the stage, and a knock underneath replying to his signal, he seized the ghost as the trap upon which they stood opened, and in a moment they were both hidden from my sight.

The bailiff's man knew enough of stage mechanism not to venture upon a struggle while descending a trap, and although he gave me a parting look of reproach and anger, he knew he was unable to oppose his fate.
Thus relieved in mind, I hurried on for the grave scene with a lightened spirit, and everything was well accordingly. My quip with the grave-digger, my Yorrick speech, "Imperial Caesar, dead and turned to clay," all brought a torrent of applause, and when I leapt into the grave the whole house was enthusiastic.

I had just said to Lertes, "I prince take thy fingers from my throat," when I felt other hands, besides those of Ophelia's brother assailing me. I knew too well who grappled me, and assured that the time for expostulation was gone, I prepared for a short struggle to get rid of the ghost at any rate for that scene. At the same moment I heard the deep tones of the manager, but in the confusion I could not understand what he said. I had not long to wait, however, before I saw the execution of his orders.

The first grave-digger, advancing from the back of the scene, seized the ghost by the arms, and giving him a preparatory swing, swung him on his shoulders, and walked off the stage with him. The violence of the motion had loosened the fastenings of the helmet, and the first jerk shook it from the bailiff's head, displaying a vast quantity of unkempt, carrotty hair. The house was in a roar, and when, amid the din, the angry ghost was heard threatening, in language far from Shakespearean and certainly not polite, the audience sought a congregation of lunatics. I jumped from the grave, but such a storm of laughter hailed me, that with one look of terror, the audience rushed out of the stage, as I heard the manager's indignant orders for the prompter to "ring down."

I had no further consciousness until I found myself in my own room, the morning sun glaring in upon the tumbled costume of the unfortunate Hamlet. It took a little time to realize the depth of my misfortune, but bit by bit the whole horror came upon me. It is not necessary, however, to enlarge upon what you can easily imagine; shame-faced I went to the theatre, settled with the indignant manager, satisfied the bailiff's man who was on the lookout for me, and removed my few properties from my room. I did not dare ask Mr. — to renew for next season; I knew it would be hopeless; I felt I had made my last appearance at Grayport.

ON DRAINING.

HOW DRAINS ACT ON AND AFFECT THE SOIL.

CHEMICAL ACTION OF THE SOIL.
Plants receive certain of their constituents from the soil, through their roots. The raw materials from which these constituents are obtained are the minerals of the soil, the manures which are artificially applied, water, and certain substances which are taken from the air by the absorptive action of the soil, or are brought to it by rains, or by water flowing over the surface from other land.

The mineral matters, which constitute the ashes of plants, when burned, are not mere accidental impurities which happen to be carried into their roots in solution in the water which supplies the sap, although they vary in character and proportion with each change in the mineral composition of the soil. It is proven by chemical analysis, that the composition of the ashes, not only of different species of plants but of different parts of the same plant have distinctive characters, some being rich in phosphates, and others in silic; some in potash, and others in lime; and that these characters are in a measure the same, in the same plants or parts of plants, without special reference to the soil on which they grow. The minerals which form the ashes of plants, constitute but a very small part of the soil, and they are very sparsely distributed throughout the mass; existing in the interior of its particles as well as upon their surfaces. As roots cannot penetrate to the interior of pebbles and compact particles of earth, in search of the food which they require, but can only take that which is exposed on their surfaces, and, as the oxidizing effect of atmospheric air is useful in preparing the crude minerals for assimilation, as well as in decomposing the particles in which they are bound up—a process which is allied to the rusting of metals—the more freely atmospheric air is allowed, or induced, to circulate among the inner portions of the soil, the more readily are its fertilizing parts made available for the use of roots.

By no other process is air made to enter so deeply, nor to circulate so readily in the soil as by under-draining, and the deep cultivation which under-draining facilitates.

Of the manures which are applied to the land, these of a mineral character are effected by draining in the same manner as the minerals which are native to the soil; while organic or animal and vegetable manures, (especially when applied, as is usual, in an incompletely fermented condition), absolutely require fresh supplies of atmospheric air, to continue the decomposition which alone can prepare them for their proper effect on vegetation.

If kept saturated with water so that the air is excluded, animal manures lie nearly inert, and vegetable matters decompose, but incompletely, yielding acids which are injurious to vegetation, and which could not be formed in the presence of a sufficient supply of air. An instance is cited by H. Wanner where sheep dung was preserved for five years by excessive moisture, which kept it from the air. If the soil so saturated with water in the spring, and, in summer (by the competing of its surface which is caused by evaporation) be closed against the entrance of air, manures will be but slowly decomposed; and will act but imperfectly in the crop; if, on the other hand, a complete system of drainage be adopted, manures (and the roots which have been left in the ground by previous crop) will be readily decomposed, and will exercise their full influence on the soil, and on the plants growing in it.

Again, manures are more or less effective in proportion as they are more or less thoroughly mixed with the soil. In an untrained, retentive soil, it is not often possible to attain that perfect till, which is best suited for a proper admixture and which is easily given after thorough draining.

The soil must be regarded as the laboratory in which nature, during the season of growth, is carrying on these hidden but indispensable chemical separations, combinations, and recombinations, by which the earth is made to bear its fruits and maintain its myriad life. The chief demand of this laboratory is for free ventilation. The raw material for the work is at hand, as well in the wet silt as in the dry; but the door is sealed, the damper is closed, and only a stray whiff of air can now and then gain entrance; only enough to commence an analysis, or a combination, which is choked off when half complete, leaving food for sorrel, but making none for grass. We must throw open door and window, draw away the water in which all is immersed, let in the air, with its all-destroying, and therefore, all creating oxygen, and leave the forces of nature's beneficent chemistry free play, deep down in the ground.
Then may we hope for the full benefit of the fertilizing matters which our good soil contains, and for the full effect of the manures which we add.

With our land thoroughly improved as has been described, we may carry on the operations of farming with as much certainty of success, and with as great immunity from the ill effects of unfavorable weather as can be expected in any business, whose results depend on such a variety of circumstances. We shall have substituted certainty for chance, as far as it is in our power to do so, and shall have made farming an art rather than a venture.

To be continued.

Professor Agassiz professes to be clearly of the opinion that Maine was the first formed land of the New World, that there the solid land first appeared, and there the "Laurentian Hills" stood above the waters, and first showed to the world a rising continent.

COMMUNICATIONS.

LIQUOR LICENSES.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Chiquetto Post.

Sir.—You are professing an independent journal, and I therefore ask you to publish the following remarks in answer to a communication signed "Sense" in your last issue. That article was a fair sample of the Temperance literature of the day; a literature abounding in harsh, narrow and illiberal sentiments, and reeking with abuse towards all the world except the self-righteous and militant exponents of Temperance. "Sense" makes the common mistake of supposing that intemperance, and all evils resulting therefrom, are due solely and alone to liquor sellers. He does not allow that a large part and perhaps a large majority of society from our Governors, our Bishops and our Judges down, not only allow but sanction and encourage the moderate use of alcoholic stimulants, and finally believe they are benefited when properly used. He does not allow that from this large demand of liquors, there must result a large and legitimate supply, and hence a vast number of persons engaged in manufacturing and vending them. The business is supported and believed to be morally right by a majority of people. Why then does a narrow sect arrogate to itself such mighty intelligence as to stigmatize the trade by every evil name and epithet? It is true that some men in the rum trade who would vend a deadly poison to a besotted wretch, and watch the last flickering of expiring life, to sell the carcass for the dissecting knife; men who every day rob the widow and the fatherless and tread on human misery. I am wrong in calling such creatures men, they are devils incarnate, and their damnable calling of "coining gold out of human suffering." But that there are black sheep in the rum trade should no more lower the public estimate of respectable liquor sellers than the black-sheep and sly drinkers existing in nearly every temperance society, should create the impression that all temperance men are hypocrites. The liquor trade professes to have an amount of charity and christianlike virtues equal to any other class in the community. Are all your farmers the very pink of liberality and honor? Was never such a thing heard of as a lawyer being so kind to bankrupts, with large sums mysteriously unaccounted for? And you who occupy the sacred desk, are you all perfect and above reproach? Are you all so good that you can level the finger of scorn at the liquor seller?

"Sense" affects to believe that no good can come out of the rum selling class. Let me ask him this: What class gives the most splendid donations to the church and to charitable purposes? What land is ever open to the tale of poverty and suffering? Is it the rum-seller or the temperance class. Cathedrals are built, missionary societies endowed; orphan, widow, blind, and a thousand other charitable institutions placed on a firm foundation, and by whom? The sleek, sanctified, mean, narrow-minded temperance man or the open-hearted liquor seller? Of whom hundreds exist all over the country, and many of them are statesmen and philanthropists, and occupy exalted positions in the councils of the country.

I will ask "Sense" a question, and then close. Let us suppose you are a poor man and want to borrow ten dollars to purchase a barrel of flour these hard times for your family. To whom would you apply for the assistance? To the Temperance Society, of which perhaps you are a member? "No," you reply, "Temperance Societies are not loan shops." Would you apply to your temperance brother down the way, who is both rich and mean, who has a twang to his voice and a shake to a head containing enough self-righteousness for a whole Roman legion, who frowns at poverty and suffering, and spares his sympathy for the rich like himself? Do you ask favors from such men, or do you go to the liquor seller? Whom you have probably been abusing, but who you know would hand out two five dollar bills with a smile and a pleasant word.

Liquor selling is attended with no difficulties. A license has to be obtained and paid for, and the licensee is visited with severe penalties if he by any act contravenes the statute. Besides this, all the odium resulting from intemperance is visited on the headless head of the liquor seller. Many a young man learns to drink at his father's table, and is physically and morally a drunkard before he ever enters a bar room. And yet how often are we told that the rum-seller ruined such a one? Does the vendor drag the victim into his den and forcibly pour the distilled poison down his throat? No! Men go there to satisfy their cravings after they have already learned the habit of tipping in society. When the slave trade cursed this continent, were the slave-traders held to be alone responsible for slavery? No! The planters who owned the slaves and worked their plantations with them, and had the benefit of them, did not shirk the moral responsibility of slavery; and if the drinking habit of society countenance and support the rum-seller, why should he be painted on every occasion as a demon of the blackest dye? Why should the servant—the rum-seller—be trodden upon as a reptile, and his master—the drinking customs of society—be excused? Of course it is considered a highly edifying spectacle for temperance orators to indulge in fierce spiced-eggs at the expense of the rum-seller, but did it never occur to them, that their withering blasts, being wrongly directed, were harmless; that if there was no desire on the part of the people to drink intoxicants, there would be no rum holes; that the evil exists in the people and the rum shop is a result and not the cause of the evil; that education is the surest and only preventative, and that a hundred legislative enactments, even though made by so august a body as the Westminster Sessions, are powerless against the will of the people.

Yours,
LIQUOR SELLER.

SACKVILLE, N. B., NOV. 10, 1871.

The River du Loup Railway.

The New Brunswick Railway Co., formed for the purpose of building a Railway from Fredericton to Edmundston to connect with River du Loup, having failed to secure capital in England, has closed a contract with Messrs. E. R. Burpee, Alex. Jardine, C. H. Fairweather, Isaac Barpee, John Boyd, B. Devereux, and W. W. Turnbull, of St. John. The work of location, survey, &c., will be at once commenced. The road will be 160 miles long and the gauge 3 feet 6 inches. The contractors are to survey, construct and equip the line and to receive certain lands, bonds and stock of the company. Bridges across the St. John River at Fredericton and Woodstock will be built. Our readers will remember that the Government gives 10,000 acres per mile in the County of York, Carleton and Victoria; that the municipalities of York and Carleton have appropriated $100,000 each; the Sessions of Victoria, $50,000; the city of Fredericton $25,000, and the N. S. and N. B. Land Co. $25,000. It is expected that St. John will contribute heavily to a work that will bring her into close connection with Quebec and the upper Provinces. There will remain some sixty miles to be built in the Province of Quebec to complete the connection. That Province has made grants, &c., which will ensure the construction of that link. The enterprise of Provincial capitalists in an undertaking of such magnitude, exhibits in a marked manner the progress of our country.

Mount Allison Public Exhibition.

The Exhibition at the closing of the first Term took place on Tuesday afternoon last, at Lingley Hall, which as usual on such occasions was well filled. We subjoin the programme:—

Devotional Exercises—Rev. C. Stewart, D. D.

Essays by Young Ladies.

Beacons—Miss Edith B. Patterson.

Mountains—Emma R. Barrill.

Epidemics—Jeanette L. Morse.

Life's Elms—Annie R. Trueman.

Music—Thou art the Star, (Song)—Miss Trenholm.

Declaration by Students of College, Junior Class.

Gratitude for the Dead—John Ellis.

The World, the great Instrumentality—Benj. Chappell.

Funeral Ode to Wellington—John P. Lawrence.

Is man the Architect? (original)—J. W. Doull, affirmative; H. R. Baker, neg.

Impenetrability of great Names—D. W. Johnson.

Selection from Locksley Hall—G. J. Bond.

Music—Taranthle, (by S. Smith)—Miss Trueman.

Doxology, Benediction.

The Literary Exercises were of a character to please the most fastidious taste. The recitations by the Academicians and Collegians bore strong evidence of good training in an educational point of view. This is an important object, as good speaking and good reading cannot have too much attention.

The music performed by Miss Stewart and Miss Trueman on the Piano, reflected credit on these young ladies, and gave evidence of careful training on the part of their teachers. The singing by Miss Trenholm shows that this young lady is in possession of a sweet musical voice, with a good deal of compass, and her rendering of "Thou art the Star," was a success. The written original essays by the young ladies must have given satisfaction to the intelligent audience, being characterized by clear, concise reasoning, and, what is not generally the case, being distinctly and amply read.

The Reports of Principal Inch, Vice-Principal Mellish, of the Male Academy, and President Allison, were most satisfactory. The progress of the various classes during the past term was real and substantial; the examinations for some time past have not been more gratifying; and the health of the students has been almost unexceptionable. The attendance at the Ladies' Academy was fifty-four, at the Male Academy fifty-four, and at the College twenty-eight.

Wesleyan Sabbath Schools.

As it is deemed all but impracticable in this locality to continue Sabbath School operations during the Winter months, arrangements were made with a view to render the closing exercises of the Schools in connection with the Wesleyan Church in Lower and Upper Sackville of an interesting and profitable character. An appropriate service was held in the Wesleyan Chapel, Lower Sackville, on the evening of last Sabbath week. A very large congregation assembled on the occasion. Devotional exercises at the commencement were conducted by the Superintendent of the Circuit, Scripture lessons read by the Rev. Dr. Stewart, when the other exercises of the evening consisted of recitations of Scripture texts by the several classes. Texts selected by the scholars at the request of the Superintendent of the school, each text containing one or more of the names and titles of our Lord Jesus Christ. The choice of texts was admirable, and the quotations commendably correct, excellent and appropriate. Hymns and pieces were sung by the choir. A good verbal report of the operations of the school was given by Mr. Chappell, in which touching and suitable reference was made to those who had taken a deep interest in the school, but who had departed this life during the year. Highly appropriate and impressive addresses were then delivered by Professor Inch and Rev. Dr. Stewart, a few words more added by Rev. E. Brettle, and suitable remarks bearing upon the character and prospects of the school by Mr. Robert Bowser, the Superintendent. The meeting was an exceedingly good one and, we believe, gave general interest and satisfaction.

The Closing Exercises of the Sabbath School in Upper Sackville.

The closing exercises of the Sabbath School in Upper Sackville were held in the Wesleyan Chapel of that place on Wednesday afternoon of the same week, and the exercises were of such a character as to reflect great credit upon all concerned. The exercises were chiefly conducted by the Superintendent of the school, John Fawcett, Esq., who has conducted it for eleven years. A variety of Scripture questions was proposed, and suitable and correct answers readily given. A large number of recitations, including some amusing and interesting dialogues, were given; some by very young children and some by adults. Two very appropriate essays were read—one by Miss Goodwin and the other by Miss Fawcett. An excellent closing address was read by Mr. C. Wheaton, which was immediately followed by the presentation of a large and handsome copy of the Holy Scriptures to the Superintendent of the school, by the young people, as a grateful testimony of their appreciation of his services. The presentation, by one of the young men, was accompanied by a short and suitable address, and as suitably acknowledged by the Superintendent, who had been taken altogether by surprise. During this interesting service, Mrs. Chappell Fawcett presided at the melodeon, and we had some well-selected Sabbath School melodies sung, in which we were delighted to hear the voices of very little children as well as others. The attendance was large, and all were evidently much interested. And to crown all and finish up well, the parents and friends had furnished an abundant repast of the most tempting eatables, including a variety of fruits. The meeting closed with the Doxology and Benediction. Such a service could not be otherwise than popular, and though we regret the necessity of suspending for nearly half a year the Sabbath School operations, we took a very favourable impression of the character and usefulness of such closing exercises.—Com.

Meeting of the Shareholders of the Lawrence Manufacturing Company.

held on Thursday.

OBITUARY.

With more than ordinary feelings of regret we record this week the death of Mr. Andrew Ford, after only a few days illness. Mr. Ford was not only an active, stirring, and sterling man of business, but also a most useful and public spirited citizen. Kind hearted and charitable, he has ever been an earnest friend to the sick and needy. His last sickness was caused by exposure in attending a stranger who he believed and died here a few days ago. We tender our condolences to his sorrowing widow and family.

NEW STORE.

We omitted to mention before the recent establishment here of a new Store by Messrs. J. M. Mahon & Co., for the sale of Dry Goods exclusively. Every one likes to purchase goods cheaply, and Messrs. M. Mahon announce that they will sell at St. John prices for cash. We wish them success. See Advertisement.

FIREWORKS.

Wilson Bentley & Co., are erecting a large steam grist and saw-mill, which will be in operation in a few weeks. The cost will be over $7,000. The engine is 40-horse power, and the machinery is of Bradford (Canadian) manufacture. Mr. M. B. Harris is building a large store, and a number of dwelling houses are being erected.

DE. TURPIN.

De. Turpin is charged by two Halifax papers with having given orders to Campbell, the Halifax Post Office thief, to open and destroy letters sent by the Local Government to their supporters in the country. The charge is a commentary on the intensity of party feeling in Nova Scotia.

THE 23rd INSTANT IS THANKSGIVING DAY IN NOVA SCOTIA.

The Boston Post, daily, semi-weekly and weekly, takes a front rank in journalism. It is a live newspaper. Its editorials are strong and pointed; its news is late and reliable, and its literary selections, correspondence, etc., are rich and racy.

A BEAR WAS SHOT BY MR. M. PHINNEY AT MIDGIE ON FRIDAY LAST.

The skin of his bearship measured six feet long and the same in width.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

"THE CHANNINGS," A NOVEL BY MRS. HENRY WOOD.

novel by Mrs. Henry Wood, authoress of East Lynne, etc., has been placed upon our table by Messrs. J. & A. McMillan, of St. John. It is published in a neat form by the Canadian News and Publishing Company, who are first unrivalled either American or English houses in the publication of cheap works.

THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST FOR NOVEMBER HAS ARRIVED.

It is as full of valuable farming news, etc., as usual. Orange Judd & Co., Publishers, New York. Our subscribers may order from this office at club rates. With the Post, $2.15.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN IS RECEIVED REGULARLY IN EXCHANGE.

Machinists and others, desiring a really valuable and cheap scientific newspaper, cannot do better than subscribe. Our subscribers may order it from this office at Club rates. With the Post, $3.25.

THE ELECTRIC MAGAZINE FOR NOVEMBER IS AT HAND.

It contains the cream of the foreign literature of the day. In Biography, Belles Lettres and general literature—its peculiar department, it has no superior. It may be ordered from this office at Club rates. With the Post, $5.00.

FEW PEOPLE, UNacquainted with physiological chemistry, are aware of the quantity of iron in the blood, but all should know the importance of keeping up the supply, for debility, disease and death are sure to follow when the quantity becomes too much reduced. The Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of iron) supplies the vital element, and has cured many chronic diseases.

ADVERTISING AGENCIES.

It is a fact that all those persons doing a business which requires extensive advertising, and who from the mode of conducting it are able to arrive to a close approximation of the results produced by each separate investment in this way, are universal in their opinion that better contracts can be secured by the employment of Advertising Agency than that of Geo. P. Rowell & Co., New York, than can be obtained from publishers direct, no matter how familiar with rates and papers the advertiser may be. It stands to reason that an agency, controlling the passage to the extent of from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars per month, is able to secure favors which would not be accorded to any individual, even if we could entirely the benefits which they must derive from their extensive experience.—Eclectic.

SEWING MACHINE!

The Cheapest and Best Lock-Stitch Sewing Machine in the Market.

NO Machine ever introduced has achieved such extraordinary popularity in so short a time.

EVERY ONE SATISFIED!
The Lockman Pat. is the simplest Lock-Stitch Machine made. Any child can operate it without much instruction.

The Lockman has a pat. Automatic Thread Regulator. This contrivance enables the operator to sew the heaviest fabrics and the lightest without any alteration of Tension or of Setting the Needle.

The Lockman has an Adjustable Hemmer.
The Lockman has a Combined Filler, Baster and S&S Sower, an ordinary Hem-mer, Filler, Baster, &c., &c. All the attachments go with the Machine free of charge.

The Lockman carried away the First Prize at the Provincial Exhibition, Toronto,

GLANINGS.
Ideas, says Voltaire, are like beads—in a garland that they have grown up, women never have any.
Hiane making at present takes the third rank among them in manufacturing interests of the United States.
A Frenchman said of Shakespeare, "You've got him any way you can't stand it, it's always something fine."
"A lady was lately lugged to death in Minnesota."—another illustration of the "power of the press."
There are six millions of real estate owners in the United States, the farmers being four millions of the number.
The last question for discussion before a Christian Association of a western town was "How to serve God and keep a hotel."
A Richmond merchant, on being asked how large an advertisement he wanted in the Engineer, replied that he might "but in about three pints of type."
"Paddy, where's the whiskey I gave you to clean the windows with?"
"Oh, master, I just drank it, and I thought if I breathed on the glass it would be all the same."
"How well he plays for one so young," said Mrs. Partington, as the organ-boy performed with a little brother who looks like him to be sure.
Under the head of "How we assist the Devil," a religious paper says:
"We consume millions of gallons of distilled spirit yearly. The editor didn't make any money." A country editor's sole editorial in one week's issue was that "If anything will make a man feel juicy about the heart, it is to talk velvet for a pair of sky-colored eyes, by moonlight, in a covered field."
Some one enters a Yank has invented a process by which molasses can be made out of common New Orleans molasses, thus saving the steam boiler. The next thing we are looking for is a process whereby they will make honey from cod-liver oil, flavoring it with bees wax.
A country editor thus courageously challenges the hopes of those patrons who believed that they could control his course by any threat of withdrawal of patronage.
"We do not belong to our patrons, our paper is wholly our own.
Whoever may like it may take it, whoever may not, can just let it alone."
A Long Cane.—A Yankee in Texas, who sat listening to the stories of a Louisiana in regard to the invaluable growth of sugar-cane on his plantation, near New Orleans, finally said, "That ain't nothing, I've seen cane in New England more'n a mile long." "What kind of cane was it?" "The general inquiry,
"A hurricane," answered the triumphant Yankee.
"Our major," says an old American soldier, "had very long feet, and also a horse that threw every one but the major. One evening the major's servant was out on the parade ground with the horse, and, as usual, got thrown off when one of the boys spoke up, and said, 'I know why the horse don't throw the major?' Why?"
"Was asked by a dozen or more."
"Well, you see, the major's got such long feet that the horse thinks he is in shafts."
A Colorado saloon keeper said of a rough crowd: "I couldn't get their whiskey strong enough for them, so, after trying every way, I at last made a mixture of poison-and ketchup. That fetched them.
I called it the sheep-herders' delight, and it was a popular drink. The first pike I tried it on yielded with delight; the next one took two drinks and turned a double somersault in the road before the house. A pedlar came along and, after he took several drinks of my sheep-herders' delight, he went off and stole his own pack, and hid it in the woods."
Among all the touching incidents connected with the "family at Chicago, not one exceeds in sadness that which was related by the Rev. Dr.
Thompson, who was in attendance upon the General Convention of the Episcopal Church at Baltimore. On the morning after the fire Dr. Thompson arose and asked the Convention to excuse his further presence at its sessions. Duty called him to Chicago. Not only his own church and parsonage in that city, but the residence of every member of his parish had been consumed by fire. History affords no other instance of a church and every member of it having been rented homeless and homeless in a single night.
At a so-called spiritual sitting in Hartford recently, there was present a woman who mourned the loss of her consort, and, as the manifestation began to appear, the spirit of the departed Benedict entered upon the scene. Of course the woman was now eager to engage in conversation with the absent one, and the following dialogue ensued:
Widow—"Are you in the spirit world?"
The Lamented—"I am."
Widow—"How long have you been there?"
The Lamented—"Oh, some time." Widow—"Don't you want to come back and be with your lonely wife?" The Lamented—"Not if I know myself. Its hot enough around here!"

A PROCLAMATION.
WE have just received a New Reversible Map of the DOMINION of CANADA, issued February 25th, 1871.
Price $2.50. Size 40x55 inches.
We declare that the many changes and improvements that have been made in our Dominion, have rendered the Maps of the late Province comparatively useless, and created a general demand for a New Map, that will show our Country as it now appears.
This Map will show all the Cities, Towns and Post Villages in the Dominion, and all the Railways and Canals, &c.
The Divisions into New Counties, all the New Townships, Free Grant Lands are given on this Map.
On the back of this Map will be shown a Map of British America, United States, Mexico and West Indies.
The Map of British America, will plainly and correctly show the new Province of Manitoba, British Columbia, and Vancouver's Island, together with all the British Possessions and Settlements in North
