London, Oct. 17 .- Prince Ching, on behalf of the Tsung Li Yamen, has given Sir laude McDonald, the British Minister, at Bekin, satisfactory assurances as to the health of the emperor.

The Pekin correspondent of the Times says Prince Ching, president of the Tsung Li Yamen, has informed Sir Claude Mc-Donald officially that the health of the emperor is improving. He declares that the empress dowager is not opposed to genuine reform, but only to such violent and impractical reforms as were hastily decreed. Her Majesty will proceed on lines more adapted to Chinese conditions. The Baptist mission at Sing-Ngan-Fu, in the prov-

The Berlin correspondent of the Standard says: The Emperor of China was to have taken refuge at the British embassy in Pekin, whence he would have issued a proclamation declaring the acts of the dowager empress void, but the plan was discovered and frustrated.

RAIN SPOILED ONEIDA'S FAIR

Speeding Events To Be Run Off on October 28.

The Oneida Indians were not fortunate enough to strike good weather this year for their fall fair, and the three days' rain proved rather disastrous to their always prosperous show, which is usually largely attended by people from London and sur-rounding country, when the roads are good. There is no better place for one to make for, whether it be on a wheel or in a buggy, and a hearty welcome is always accorded visitors in true Indian fashion. They are hospitable people. Despite the severe drawback the number of exhibits was large, and a good crowd was in at-tendance Friday, though it rained the entire day. The speeding, of course, was declared off, as the track was a veritable mud-puddle. But the Indians are enterprising and purpose having the races on Oct. 28, when a good programme will be furnished. If only the day is fine there will be a big time in Oneida that day.

Wadie Brown Brought Back

Arrival of the No torious Peg-Bronchitis, Consumption, Leg, Marion Brown, Murder of Police Officer Toohey.

The Circumstances Surrounding His Arrest in Washington State

By U. S. Detective Dilley, of North Yakima.

The Peg-Leg Breaks His Hand-Cuffs on the Train.

He Expressed a Fear of Being Lynched in London.

Interesting Story of Prisoner's Long Journey to London in Charge of Detective Thomas Nickle and the American Officer-Scenes at Various Stations on the Way-Quiet Transfer From the Train at William Street to the Police Station and Thence to the Jail-The Prisoner Already Identified by Watchman Ross, Whom He Assaulted.

"Madie Brown," alias Tom Allen, the noted one-legged tramp and alleged murderer of P. C. Michael Toohey, was brought to the city at eight o'clock Saturday night and lodged in jail. He was accompanied by Detective Thos. Nickle, of this city, and Marshal Dilley, Washington, who traveled over 3,000 miles with the prisoner. All of the party were tired out, as none of them had had their clothes off for eight days. The prisoner was quietly removed from the train at William street, and the crowd at the C. P. R. station and Adelaide street was thus avoided.

The terrible crime of which Brown stands accused, readers of The Advertiser are well aware of. The prisoner has been in London before, as the county jail registrar contains his name entered on three separate occa-

The expression on the prisoner's race when not conversing, is sullen, and the gleam that shines in his dark brown, scowling eyes, is victous in the extreme. When talking to the detectives, his face, looking at it from a distance, was not unpleasant to look at. His smile, though, might belong to a comic actor. His features wrinkled up into a grin at the jokes he made, but there was nothing imbecile-looking in them. He never for a minute dropped him spinning. The redskin's face swell-

Each time the bag cular sent out, but was impressed with the idea that Brown was the man wanted. He threw Brown, who is known in Yakima as "Tom Allen," completely off his guard. Going up to Allen, Marshal Dilley said: "I've been looking for you-you are the fellow who has been supplying liquor to these In- WHAT THE ALLEGED MURDERER dians." Brown was remanded on the charge of selling whisky to Indians, and seemed to take matters very coolly, indeed, for a while, but the authorities soon ascertained what a desperate fellow Brown was when they attempted to search him, which was not done until the following Tuesday, Sept. 27. The sheriff of North Yakima, an old man at the business, went to Brown's cell, to divest him of whatever he had. Brown objected to this proceeding, and it is said he unbuckled his peg-leg and DEFIED THE SHERIFF. who entered the cell, and covered the prisoner with a 44-caliber shooter.

on the head. The prisoner sank to the floor, and the pieces of timber flew around the cell. Help was on hand, and Brown was searched. On him was found a common case-knife, ground to such a fine edge that Brown used this to shave with. There was a jackknife, and this was found down his pant-leg, as he had transferred it from his pocket during the time the sheriff was expostulating with him. Brown wore a fine double-cased gold watch and chain, to which was attached a small round locket. When arrested he had also a razor in his pocket. Both of these articles—the watch and the razor—were brought to Canada by Marshal Dilley. They are believed to punching bag, and a table supplied with cards. A day or so before Brown left Yakima he indulged in a "friendly" game of cards with the Indian. A dispute arose between them over the ownership of a card, When Brown claimed the Indian said, "You're a liar!" Brown at the same instant thrust his left clenched fist into the Indian's face, just below the right eye, and knocked ed up and turned several hues, and when Brown left the jail en route to Canada the Indian's face was so swolin the art of punching. Officer Dilley says that the jail officials at Yakima were amused and amazed at the pugilistic abilities of Brown. He often stood before the punching bag and banged away at it, hitting it right and left, with jabs, under cuts and square blows was struck Brown hopped out of the way before it returned-sometimes on the right left and sometimes on the peg-leg, both of which he used with wonderful effect. He liked the exercise, and used to laugh heartily at the took a step that other prisoners when they were unable to dodge the punching bag as it recoiled.

He is active, and an expert train-jumper.

THE PRISONER'S NATIVITY AND CHARACTER.

Marion Brown was born at Sansaba, Texas and raised in that state. His mother is said to have been part Indian and negro, and his father was part white and part Indian. Brown claims that he lost his leg as the resuit of an accident. He says that a horse fell on it when he was a cowboy. For years he has traveled over all the United States, and is alleged to be a desperate scoundrel—an all-round thief and burglar. Brown, so Marshal Dilley says, has followed the race tracks and frequented low dives of all descriptions, especially gambling resorts. He has been in jail many times, and when at large begged his food. Brown seldom or ever worked, but preferred the occupation of a crook. He was jailed at Georgetown, Texas, for burglary, and while there he broke jail on June 4, and liberated four other prisoners—two of whom were doing terms for burglary and one for horse-stealing. He took the jailer and locked him in a cell, after taking away his revolver and keys. There the jailer remained for some time before the true facts of the case became known. Brown was not a man to be deprived of his liberty after having gained it by taking such risks, and when a deputy marshal attempted to prevent Brown from going any farther, the prisoner is said to have shot him with the jailer's 44 calibre revolver, then pursuing his course unhampered. The cripple was greatly assisted by the men whom he liberated, and managed to reach Canada h, the cripple was greatly ada by traveling on II all kinds. He came to London by the G. T. R. from the Sarnia tunnel, it is supposed, and wanted to go east. It was while walking along the G. T. R. track, in London yard, and inquiring about east bound freight trains, on the 24th of June, that Mr. James Ross, the G. T. R. watchman, ordered him off the company's property. Brown refused to go, and when Mr.Ross pressed him, Brown gave the old gentleman a blow in the face that knocked him unconscious. The peg-leg then escaped. and made towards the C. P. R. track on Ontario street. P. C. Michael Toohey followed the peg-leg on this street, and met his death, of which Brown now stands accused. Brown says he was a cowboy in his younger days and a Baptist in religious persuasion. Few men of far greater weight possess anything like the physical strength of the now famous one-legged tramp.

BRING THE PRISONER BACK. Detective Nickle left London two weeks ago last (Sunday) night to bring back the alleged murderous peg - legged tramp. Nickle stopped in Chicago over Monday and went then to St. Paul, and from there to North Yakima, where he was shown the prisoner, and although he had never seen the alleged murderer the detective believed that Marshal Dilley was correct in arresting the man. The prisoner was somewhat careless while in jail at Yakima as to what might be done with him, but he was always polite and obedient to Marshal Dilley. On Friday night, Oct. 7. Brown was awakened from a pleasant sleep by the marshal, and told to dress. He asked no question as to where he was going, or what was wanted of him. In company with Marshal Dilley and Detective Nickle, Brown went to the depot, and party were soon en route to Seattle, where the two officers well knew that complications might arise, and they

AVERTED ALL UGLY DIFFI. CULTIES.

The trio arrived at Seattle late in the evening. The evening papers there contained nothing of the arrest. A weekly paper published on that day, however, announced, in a small para-graph, that Marshal Dilley was en route to Canada with a prisoner, who was wanted for murder in "Montreal." It stated that he would pass through on the train, leaving Seattle, at 8:15 a.m. The morning papers would appear at 5 o'clock, and all the lawyers in Seattle would be on the qui vive and willing to take Brown's case, and fight extradition. Knowing this, and that there was $500 in such a prizepackage, Detective Nickle and Marthal Dilley decided to leave Seattle on the steamer Garlan at 1 o'clock in the morning, and go to Victoria. By the time the lawyers were made aware of the fact that Brown was going back to Canada, he would be well into Canadian waters. It mattered little then what course they pursued—they could not prevent his going and could not bring him back, because he had been quite willing and ready to go, as he relished the idea of getting away from the Texas authorities. On arriving at Victoria Constables Redgrove and Anderson arrested the prisoner on the charge of murder. Detective Nickle had his warrent backed, and all was plain sailing. On arriving at New Westminster, B. C., Brown appeared to know where he was going and what he was going for, but he said nothing, talking but little and taking everything in. The awful ruin at New Westminster, where the devastating fire occurred a few weeks ago, struck him, and he commented on the fact that there must have been a hot time in that old town that night. The rain poured down in torrents, so much so, Detective Nickle says, that the water ran through the improvised roof of the rough boarded hotel, at which they had dinner, on to the table, and he gave a boy 10 cents to hold an um-brella over them while they ate From New Westminster they went by hoat to Vancouver, and left on Monday morning for home. In this instance the longest way round was the shortest way home, and they went as far east as Carleton Junction and back again west to Toronto, seeing the millions of wild geese and ducks that hovered round the streams and lakes, all through the country. Brown said: "It ought to be pretty good shooting out round there." Brown often got tired, and when he did he squirmed around considerably, and acted in such a manner that both officers knew he required constant watching. He would have taken any available opportunity, no matter how brief, to have escaped. He was warned that any unbecoming behavious on his part was a question of life or death with chances in favor of the latter. He smiled and chatted sometimes. When Brown smiles his swarthy countenance lights up, and when he laughs he chuckles all over. His face, when in its normal condition, is a stamped receipt of brutal determination. While traveling over the prairie country, the coyotes, running everywhere through the grass greatly pleased the prisoner.

CURIOUS CROWDS. As the train neared Winnipeg, every was crowded with people, eager to get a glimpse of the supposed murderer. This the prisoner did not like, and called them "rubber necks." At Calgary, N. W. T., Mr. W. T. Edge, of this city boarded the train, and was much surprised to see a London de-tective aboard. He sat opposite the prisoner's seat for some time, Brown often chimed in in the conversation. On arriving at Winnipeg, the station was thronged by a large crowd, RUSHED FOR THE TRAIN before it had fairly stopped. They piled into the car and, taking a look at the prisoner, passed out. Madie at the ladies, winked at some, and often broke into a boisterous laugh at the nerve of some and the timidity of others, of the hundreds of the eager visitors who gazed at him. This kind of thing continued all along the route, and as each station was approached, Brown laughed, and said. 'More rubber necks."

BROWN TELLS OF HIS DARING

DEEDS. As the train moved speedily along, time hung heavily. The prisoner slept but little, and he was glad on Thurswhen Mr. Edge paid Detective Nickle a visit, and broke the monotony with a general talk about people, who they were, and what they were, and what they did. Different stories had been told about different things, and Brown considered that it was his turn to say something. He started, and his story was deeply interesting, from more than one standpoint. Brown first told of his arrest at Georgetown, Texas, and went on to describe the manner in which the released the prisoners, and locked the jailer up and escaped. There were four prisoners in the cell with him, two of whom were burglars and one a horse thief. He proposed that the two burglars should raise a rumpus, and go at one another as though in a desperate life and death struggle. The old jailer would be sure to come in and separate them, and when he came in Brown and disarm said he would "guzzle" The scheme worked like a charm, "Madie" said. When there was a good opportunity the two burglars started wrangle, as though in earnest. They called one another everything but gentlemen, made a few passes, and then clinched. Down they went heap on the floor, and in rushed the jailer, revolver in hand, threatening to shoot if they didn't "break away." He bent over to put his hand on them, but the prisoner Brown said he snatch. the revolver from his hand, and pointing it at him backed him up and made him surrender the keys. Brown then released all the prisoners in Georgetown jail, with the exception of a negro, who refused to come out when the cell door was unlocked. The man's lack of nerve at such a time, exasperated his would be liberator, and dragging the jailer to the door of the negro's cell he pushed him in, locked the two up, and, bidding them good bye, made his exit.

Brown laughed and chuckled when he told this story. He thought the best joke of all was when the jailer got down on his knees and begged him (Brown) not to shoot him. The others who heard the story laughed, not so much at its details as the manner in which Brown described the scene. His manacled hands went up and down, and his big brown eyes bulged out with excitement.

Madie Brown, alias "Tom Allen," has an ugly temper, which, being for-tified by his strong will, makes him a desperate character at times. Thursday night the prisoner was very restless. He shuffled around, while his face betrayed a storm raging within. He never spoke to the detective by his side, nor to Marshal Dilley, who sat opposite. The latter stretched himself out to have a sleep, and Detective Nickle watched the prisoner He looked through the corners of his eyes at the detective, and the detective did the same with the prisoner, and knew what he was endeavoring to do. The prisoner yawned, and each time he brought his hands down with a turn. The captive now and again held his breath, and with all the strength that he possessed he tried to break the steel bracelets that encircled his wrist and bounds his hands together. He tried this periodically all night, and about daylight on Friday morning, as the train was 80 or 90 miles east of Fort William, the captive strained every muscle. Then there was a crack, a sigh of relief, and the HANDCUFFS WERE BROKEN. Brown had twisted the three links which united the handcuffs into a knot by turning his hands, and then, applying all his strength, the middle one gave way. Detective Nickle was on his feet instantly, and his hand on his revolver. The captive remained quiet and showed no signs of resistance, as he knew that such a course meant a long sleep from which he would never awaken. Marshal Dilley was awakened and produced the American handcuffs, which he had taken from Brown's wrists when he became a Canadian prisoner. Detective Nickle unlocked the manacles from Brown's left hand, but the attempt to take the one from the right hand was futile. bracelet was bent and strained so that it could not be taken off, and the prisoner carried it to London. The American handcuffs were again placed on the prisoner, and his hands locked closer together. From that time until he reached London, Brown's demeanor was that of indifference. THE CAPTIVE AT TORONTO.

A reporter of The Advertiser awaited the arrival of the prisoner at the Grand Union depot. The train conveying the alleged murderer was timed to arrive in Toronto at 3:30 p.m., and as the hour drew near groups of men gathered on the platform. Detective Davis, of the Toronto force; Detectives Cockburn and Hodge, of the G. T. R., and Detective Ross, of the C. P. R., headed off the crowd. The officers entered the car, and were closely followed by four reporters. The detectives greeted Mr. Nickle and Mr. Dilley, and congregated around the seat of the notorious peg-leg. Detec-tive Nickle was held up by the reutes. By this time the car was pack- timely end on the night of June 24. ed from end to end. A crowd collected outside, and the prisoner laughed the prisoner, and he prepared to leave at their curiosity. He asked to have the train, sandwiched between the two curtain put down, and thus shut officers. off the view from the exterior. A policemen was sent for, but while he came in at the other. The sight-seers increased in number, and the train was pulled west into the yard as a "bluff," and the eager crowd got off. When the train backed up into the station again there was another rush of railway officials and others. The car containing Madie Brown was filled to overflowing when the train started towards London. The detectives got off at Parkdale, where another crowd was awaiting the train. The Advertiser reporter occupied a seat across the aisle, directly in front of the prisoner, for some time, and then obtained a seat behind him. At all the stations along the line the train was met by crowds of the townspeople, who came through the car or peeped through the windows. At Galt about 200 people stood at the station. Among there were many women and girls, and these Brown seemed glad to see. He seemed very much interested in one young lady, at whom he winked and smiled, and she reciprocated the flirtation, until Brown roared with laughter. The majority remained outside. One young lady walked into the car and took a good look at the pris-oner while he was engaged in flirtation with those outside. The captive turned his head around quickly, glancing first at the lady and then at the officers, and chuckling as he said: "Wouldn't that kill ye? She's a proper rubber-neck, she is. She stole a march on me that time, but I'll have to keep my eyes skinned for the next maiden that comes in."

BROWN GROWS SERIOUS.

As the train continued on its way the prisoner lapsed into another thoughtful mood, and his face betrayed a heavy heart. That he feared something seemed very evident, but what, no one knows. He remained in this condition for about half an hour, when Marshal Dilley relieved Detective Nickle. The prisoner began to whistle by the time he reached the next station, and he appeared to have accumulated enough laughing-gas to again explode.

MADIE TALKS TO THE REPORTER The reporter took a seat nearer the prisoner and asked: "Have they treated you well since

"It is said that you were given whicky and opium while in jail at Yakima, and that while under its influence vou were brought to Victoria. Is there any truth in that statement?" "No, sir," Brown answered, with a laugh, "no, sir, they didn't."

"Well, you didn't scrap with the officere there? "No. sir!" "Are you troubled over this shooting affair with which you are charged?" Brown smiled again and replied:

"No. sir; I was in Missouri at that time. "You're all right," returned the reporter. "I guess so," was his only response. The prisoner said little until Drumbo was reached, where two young men who had been on the train for some time bade the prisoner good-bye and got off.

There were not many people up here," Brown said, with Business is so rushed here, there ain't so many customers." He laughed again and said, "I wonder how many customers there would be if you charg-

Marshal Dilley-It would make a good rakeoff for you, Tom.

"There wouldn't be so many if it was like that," Tom answered. Brown's mood again became pensive, and a sober look overspread his face. He asked for a cigar, and having secured a light, he nestled down and appeared a little sulky. When the train neared Woodstock, Detective Nickle told the prisoner there would be a crowd of "rubber necks" there sure. Brown wanted to know how many there were in the town and how far it was from London. When told & was 24 miles. Brown looked all around him and finally settled his gaze on Marshal Dilley, who sat opposite him.

At Woodstock the St. Thomas train was waiting, and the people peered through the car windows and strained their necks to see the captive. laughed and made fun of them in a quiet way and threw away his cigar, but with a heavy sigh.

Turning to Detective Nickle, Brown said with a downcast look:

"I SUPPOSE I'LL BE LYNCHED when we get there." Detective Nickle assured him that there was not the slightest danger. There would be plenty of police to protect him. "The crowd won't hurt you," said the speaker. "That's what I've been dreading all along-ever since I started," said the with police. At Thamesford there was a small army of young men and ladies, and the reception accorded the prisoner was not of a flattering nature. When the train stopped several voices outside opposite his window outside grinned at him and saluted him in this manner: "Hello,peg-leg!" "There's the ——!"

"How do you like it now?" "He's the right fellow," etc.

AT LONDON.

When the train pulled into London, Brown's facial expression was decidedly glum. He watched the electric lights, and as the train passed the coal shed, Brown turned his head to the window, and looked back towards the electric light, which threw its rays around the termination of Ontario street, and apporters, and told them the story of the peared interested in the place where capture and trip in a very few min- P. Darville and Detectives Rider and Egelton met the prisoner with a cab at William street, and he was hustled into it and driven rapidly to the police station.

AT POLICE HEADQUARTERS.

Crown Attorney James Magee, Q.C., J. B. McKillop and the magistrate, together with a number of policemen and witnesses awaiting to identify the prisoner, were present. The first duty was to remove the handcuffs. That was an easy task, but to remove the one which Brown had broken and carried on his right wrist all the way from Fort William, was a different matter. It was finally removed after a vigorous pummeling with a hammer. Wnen asked his name, the prisoner answered, "Marion Brown." He gave his age as 31. and his occupation as a cowboy. After these preliminaries, Marion Brown was remanded by Magistrate Parke until Thursday next, when he will be brought up at the police court and examined on the charge of murder.

IDENTIFIED BY WATCHMAN ROSS James Ross, the 70-year-old man, whom Brown assaulted on June 24 was among those present. The prisoner paid more attention to him than to any of the others. He eyed Mr. Ross wherever he went. When the latter came out he was asked by the reporters if he recognized the prisoner. Mr. Ross said, "Indeed, it is the man." "Are you positive "

"Yes, I am positive. I'd pick him out of a thousand." Marion Brown was identified by many others as the one-legged enan who had passed along Ontario street on the night of the tragedy. CROWD OUTSIDE THE COURT. As usual, a crowd followed the hack, and by the time the vehicle reached police headquarters, the entrance was almost blocked. Brown was driven to the rear of the building and taken inside, when the doors were closed, and no one admitted until the prisoner was locked up in a cell. About ten o'clock he was removed to the county jail,

Why the Mohegan Came To Be Wrecked.

Fifty-One Bodies Recovered-Late Details of the Disaster.

London, Oct. 17 .- As all the navigating officers of the steamer Mohegan will ever be thrown on the causes of the disaster. All the flags ashore and on the boats in the bay are at halfmast.

The Atlantic Transport Company issued the following statement last evening regarding the fate of the passengers and crew of the steamer Mohegan, which was wrecked Friday evening off the Lizard, between the Manacles and the Lowlands. "Of the passengers, 11 have been saved, 10 bodies have been recovered, and 33 are missing. "Of the crew and cattlemen, 39 have been saved, 14 bodies have been recovered, and 51 are missing." Since this statement was issued. 9 other bodies have been picked up, including 2 that have been identified as those of passengers. The reports of the various correspondents differ widely as to the rescue, recoveries and losses, though no one has been able to ascertain the exact number of those saved or of the bodies recovered. The bodies of the following passengers have been recovered: T. W. King, Edna King, Master King, James Blackey, Miss H. M. Cowen, Dr. Fallows, B. Franklin Fuller, Mrs. L. M. Luke, George Seymour, Miss L. H. Warrener.

The latest advices from Falmouth say that 38 bodies have been identified, cried out, "Where's the peg-leg?" He mostly the bodies of sailors. Four are was soon singled out, and the crowd yet unidentified, including those of two elderly ladies. One appears to be a German. She wore a watch and wedding ring, both engraved "1871." The other wore a silver brooch, with the letter "D" in pearls. This is probably the body of Mrs. Charles Duncan.

Nine of the bodies have been brought to Falmouth, the others to the village church at St. Keverne. The rescued passsengers are being sheltered at cottages along the shore, and the crew at the Sailors' Home at Falmouth.

Tugs have been cruising in the vicinity all day, despite the very rough weather, in hope of picking up other

NO EXPLANATION OF THE CAUSE The cause of the disaster remains the profoundest mystery. Nobody attempts to explain how the Mohegan got far north of her true co six to seven miles. There was no fog at the time, while the wind on her port quarter was not sufficient to prevent her answering her helm. It has been suggested that her compass was faulty; but daylight lasted long after Eddystone light was passed. The sailors say the fact that the Lizard light was not visible should have served to give the alarm.

The masts of the Mohegan, which are above water, show that her stern is landward, causing a theory that the navigating officer on discovering that he was in the bay suddenly turned seaward. Two engineers who were saved declare, however, that they never slackened speed.

REMARKABLE STORIES. Remarkable stories of rescue continue. Robert Barrow, a seaman, performed the feat of swimming unaided through the roughest water to Coverack Point, a distance of two and onehalf miles. He climbed up the ragged cliff, where a searching party found him early the next morning completely exhausted. A. C. L. Smith, of Oregon, a passenger, surrendered to a woman in the water wreckage that was supporting him, and swam ashore unaided. The woman was saved. Her name is reported as Miss Webb, but no such name appears in the company's list. DIFFICULTY IN GETTING OUT

THE BOATS. Messrs. Smith and W. J. Bloomingdale say there was the greatest difficulty in launching the boats. The ropes were new and stiff, and the blocks would not work. The lockers were hard to open.

The crew in a chivalrous effort to save the women made the mistake of under-manning the boats. There were only four sailors in one boat, which capsized as soon as it was launched. Messrs. Smith and Bloomingdale say that Capt. Griffiths had appeared ill all

The death of Mr. T. W. King, who was a newspaper proprietor at Nantucket, Mass., and of his family, in-cluding Mrs. King, her mother, Mrs. Weller, and his sons Rufus, aged 11, and Anthony, aged 7, has caused deep sorrow at Penzance, where the family had a summer cottage, and were very popular.

WHEN THE CRASH CAME.

Joseph O'Rorke, King's valet, who was saved, says he was on deck when the crash came. The lights went out immediately. Rushing to the saloon, he heard Mr. King exhorting his family to keep cool. O'Rorke, with seven otners. clung to the rigging until 6 o'clock next morning, when a lifeboat took him off. He identified the bodies of the Kings and Mrs. Weller, and will have them embalmed and taken to the United States in accordance with cabled instructions from the relatives of the family at Nantucket.

FIFTY-ONE BODIES RECOVERED. Up to midnight yesterday 51 bodies had been recovered. Some were found miles away in coves, and it & expected that more will be washed ashore today. Many persons undoubtedly were killed by being dashed on the rough rocks who would have escaped if cast ashore on an ordinary coast. Some of the bodies are horribly mangled. A good deal of jewelry and money has been found.

The officers and crew of the Mohegan numbered 96, and of these 33 are known to have been saved. TERRIBLE PANIC.

Advices from St. Keverine say the panic on the Mohegan was terrible, and that the cries of despair were heard on shore. One passenger cut away the falls of a lifeboat with a razor and thus saved several lives. Miss Roundbush, and her mother, Mrs. Grandin, entered a ship's boat which was capsized, and Mrs. Grandin was jammed between this boat and a lifeboat. One of the lifeboat's crew, at great personal peril, jumped on board the steamer's boat, after the steamer righted, and pulled Mrs. Grandin from her dangerous position. She was landed in a dying condition, and all the efforts made to revive her were unsuccessful.

CANADIANS AMONG THE LOST. One of the victims was Mr. James Blackey, buyer for the firm of John Macdonald & Co., of Toronto. Miss Fraser, a Montreal lady, and Miss Shepherd, of Woodstock, are also reported to be among the lost.

ANOTHER DISASTER

A British Ship Burned and Eleven Lives Lost.

Nine of her crew, including her captain and a pilot perished. vivors were landed here and at Dover. The Blengfell was passing here in tow, on her way to London at about 6:30 a.m., and was about four miles off the coast. Suddenly she was enveloped in flames and smoke poured from her hatchways. Two life boats immediately put off to her assistance, but before they were able to reach the burning vessel her masts fell, and she was burned to the water's edge. Her hull eventually drifted upon the Goodwin

Sands. TWO MORE VICTIMS. Later it developed that the captain's wife and child and the first and second mates were among those who lost their lives. The Blengfell was an iron vessel, built at Whitehaven, in 1876. She registered 1,117 tons, hailed from Liver-

FRANCE IN A FOG

Has Lost Her Way as a Nation," Says a Prominent Journalist.

A well known London journalist declares that France "has lost her way as a nation, and is wandering about in poisonous jungles and over perilous heights." This exactly indicates the real peril of the moment, to France herself and to the peace of Europe. In the much-be-placarded military conspiracy directed against the Brisson ministry, there is, as yet, more rumor than fact, but the air of Paris is so charged with electricity that it needs but a military firebrand such as France so often provides in moments like these, to do incalculable mischief. In itself, the Fashoda incident would not survive a half-hour's friendly talk between Delcasse and Monson, but it assumes a terrible importance, in view of what might happen any day to recognized authority in Paris. Sir Wemyss Reid reports in the Speaker the remark of an English public "We may see a coup d'etat in Paris within fourteen days. PLOT AGAINST KING HUMBERT

Anarchists Plan to Assassinate the King of Italy.

Anti-Revolutionists Regard the French Conspiracy as a Myth-The French Strike Petering Out.

London, Oct. 17 .- The Alexandria correspondent of the Daily Mail, telegraphing regarding the anarchist plot against Emperor William, which was discovered on Friday, says: The plot against the kaiser is hourly proven more important, each arrest disclosing new ramifications. The documents found disclose a plot to kill King Humbert already well matured. Fifteen persons, all Italians, have been arrested. The original plan was to throw a bomb of gun cotton and fulminate of mercury on Emperor William's carriage in a narrow street of Cairo. When the Egyptian trip was abandoned, elaborate arrangements were made by the conspirators to send confederates to Jerusalem to carry out the plot during the dedication of the German Church of Our Redeemer. Paris, Oct. 17 .- The anti-revisionist papers regard the reported discovery of military plot against the government as being pure invention.

According to the Pettit Bleu, the generals engaged in the plot met at Versailles and sent emissaries Prince Victor Bonaparte. The hesitation of Prince Victor, however, obliged them to turn in another direction. Special dispatches from Paris to London say that the sole consequence of the abortive attempt at a military coup d'etat will be the early displacement of several officers of high rank. The Gaulois classes the affair as "a conspiracy without conspirators." But in spite of this, the papers which announced the conspiracy insist upon the exactness of their information. THE STRIKE PETERING OUT. The number of the military patrols and the detachments of troops on duty at stationary points were decreased in strength today, excepting the troops oa duty at the railroad depos and the detachment of troops on duty at the town hall, near the labor exchange, which has hitherto been composed of a company of infantry, and two troops of cavalry has been entirely with-drawn. In addition, the soldiers are pool, and was owned by J. Edgar & no longer confined to barracks, and are promenading the streets as freely as usual. In Paris, the same state of affairs prevails. The troops have been withdrawn from the railroad station at Rouen, where all fear of trouble has vanished.

BASEBALL. THE WIND-UP

Boston and Baltimore wound up the championship season of 1898 with a slugging contest at Baltimore on Saturday. The ex-champions should have won, but fielded poorly, and their errors gave the game to the two-time pennant winners from the Hub. Three innings were played of the second game, when darkness put a stop to hostilities. At the close, Boston had 4 runs, 6 hits and 2 errors; Baltimore, 6 runs, 6 hits and 0 errors. The two final ball games of the season between Chicago and Pittsburg were called off on account of cold weather.

It was a "long pull and a strong pull," but the National League season is at last over. Interest in the games had failen off greatly the past few weeks, largely because of the certainty of the result so far as the pennant was concerned. A little interest was developed in the Chicago-Cleveland contest for fourth place, and in the Philadelphia-New-York contest for a place in the first division, but not very much out-side of the cities concerned. Perhaps the schedule of 154 games has been a failure, as some are inclined to think. Very likely, however, the magnates may incline to give it a trial another year, when it is to be expected baseball will not be interfered with so much as it has been the past season on account of the war scare. PETROLIA 4, LONDON 0.

The London Juniors returned from Petrolia on Saturday night wearing sundry black eyes and carrying many bruises, but nevertheless happy. Petrolia had been unable to overtake the lead London gained here a week ago. The local team say Petrolia lost partly because they played the American game of "massing." The Londons did not hustle matters, being content to keep their opponents from scoring. The score: Petrolia 4, London 0. The attendance was small.

Major-General Hutton Joins in the Parade.

Thousands View the Troops-Stirring Sermon by Rev. Canon Dann-Some 250 Men in Line.

Yesterday's military church parade was more than usually imposing, combining as it did all the corps in this city. It made citizens realize that London was no inconsiderable military center. The day was an ideal one, and brought out thousands of people. The announcement that Major-General Hutton, the new commanding officer of the Canadian militia, would be present, gave increased interest to what, in London, is always an attractive event. The different corps looked emart and neat, and their uniforms and equipments were spick and span enough to satisfy the scrutinizing eye of the general. In point of numbers, the parade was somewhat smaller than expected-particularly the Seventh Battalion's muster-but the "boys" made a favorable impression. The streets all along the route of march were lined with thousands of citizens, the scene at Victoria Park being very animated. At the appointed hour the various corps began to assemble at the drill shed and on Wellington street. Here line of quarter column was formed facing south. General Hutton arrived at 3:10, and was received with a general salue, after which he passed down the line, making a brief inspection of the corps. At 3:25 the column moved off by way of Wellington, Queen's avenue and Richmond to St. Paul's Cathedral-THE STAFF.

The staff in command was as follows: Major-General Hutton, com-manding the Canadian militia; Col. Holmes, No. 1 Company, R. R. C. I.; Col. Buchan, No. 1 Company; Norman Cassidy, Forty-eighth Highlanders, and the aide-de-camp to Gen. Hutton.

The order of parade was as follows: Seventh Band, 32 strong, under Bandmashter Roselle Pococke. Bugle Band, 16 strong, under Corp.

Hussars, 4 sections, 45 strong; Capt. Booker, Capt. Struthers, Lieut. Weld. Lieut. Abbott; Capt. Booker in com-

Artillery, 2 sections; Lieut. Smallman and Sergt. Black. No. 1 Company, 35 strong; Capt. Car-master, and Capt. Moore, paymaster. Major Hayes was in command.

Lieut.-Col. Lindsay and Lieut.-Col. Gartshore were out of the city.

SERVICE AT THE CATHEDRAL. The service at the cathedral was largely attended. The front part of the edifice was reserved for the soldiers, and the other portion was thrown open to the public. The opening exercises were conducted by Ven. Dean Innes, and Rev. Canon Dann followed with an earnest and eloquent sermon. The reverend gentleman took his text from Jeremiah, xc., 23, 24: "Thus saith the Lord, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might; let not the rich man in his riches," etc. The soldier's life was a life of action. At all times they were drilling, and preparing for battle. It should be the same with every true Christian, who became a soldier of Christ-he should lead life of action in his cause. Christ's trumpet was always being sounded for action. The man who would retire and not join his comrades in fighting the battle against Windsor, Ont., Oct. 17.—Following sin. that was now going on, was a are the results of Saturday's racing: First race, 7 furlongs, 3-year-olds and | go through their duties as if they were up, selling—Desmonthes won, Sissie about to attack the enemy, so that Chance 2, Annie Taylor 3. Time, 1:33. when the time should come, they would when the time should come, they would Second race, 5 furlongs, 2-year-olds, selling—Mischief Maker won, By George 2, Prince Plausible 3. Time, Christ's soldiers, that they might be ready to overthrow every sin when the time came. The real soldier's life is for battle, and for battle alone. This was the same with God's soldiers. Their life is given to battle against sin. Every faculty of our life and body should be dedicated to God. "Let us be Christian men, by all means, but manly men as well." Some young men were con-tent to be manly and honest, and do not trouble themselves about religion. This was a terrible mistake. If God had given them strength and power, let them use it for his cause. A true Christian soldier would always refuse to do what his companions wished if it were wrong. "No matter how great the temptation, or the cost, be manly. and stand for God and right." Any sacrifice should be made for God. It was better to be the laughing-stock of every boy on the street, and have a manly heart, than be a favorite, and have an unworthy heart. In conclusion the speaker urged upon the soldiers to take up the cross and follow the way of Christ, NOTES.

The return march was by way of Richmond street and Central avenue to the drill shed, and was viewed by a vast throng.

Major-General Hutton stood at the corner of Richmond street and Duf-ferin avenue and viewed the passing of the troops on their return march. The general will be in London until Tuesday, and will make a general inspection of the different bodies of soldiers and their equipments.

Robbed the Grave. A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetitegradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters'; and to my great joy and surprise the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents a bottle, every battle guaranteed, at any drug store.

Anglo-Saxon Vitality. An American contemporary notes that all the United States peace commissioners in Paris have short, crisp, Anglo-Saxon names-Day, Gray, Reid, Frye, Davis. This is a seemingly trivial coincidence, but there is much significance behind it. It forcibly illustrates the preponderance of the Anglo-Saxon mind in the highest spheres in the United States. The flood of inamigration which has rolled over the republic would have unsettled the foundations of a weaker race. The success with which the native American element has assimilated this vast foreign admixture is perhaps the most striking example in history of Anglo-Saxon vitality. Blood less virile must inevitably have been weakened by this infusion from continental Europe and the racial domination of the real Americans been threatened by these alien forces. But the nation remains true to its Anglo-Saxon mould. Anglo-Saxon names are written almost exclusively in the republic's great achievements. Take the roll of the presidents-Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Adams, Jackson, Van Buren, Harrison, Tyler, Polk, Taylor, Fillmore, Pierce, Buchanan, Lincoln, Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Cleveland,

Harrison, McKinley-and it will be seen by their names that all excepting Van Buren and Polk were of British descent. Emigration to the United States is now slackening, and the foreign ingredients of the country will be even more rapidly dissolved in the Anglo-

Saxon menstruum. When it is considered what multitudes of aliens, many of them of the worst type, have been absorbed by the United States without any sign of national disintegration, it is ridiculous that opponents of the Canadian Government should make a fuss because a handful of Galicians have been placed on our vacant lands in the Northwest, especially when the great volume of our immigration continues to come from the British Isles. The proposal to bring some 2,000 Russians -a moral, industrious sect-to the Northwest will no doubt be attacked by the same stupidity. If Canada, of Macaulay, Freeman, Green and Garwith its present small population, were diner, Motley, Prescott and Parkman, being deluged by alien hogwash, it to mention only a few of the brilliant nationality, but the Government would allow no such influx. Our immigrants tion upon which so many young peoof foreign blood as a rule have ple waste their precious time. Biography made good citizens, and are pros- is one branch of this great subject pering. They are not numerous enough which may be made "as interesting as a few Galicians or Doukhobortsis. Our gratifying to know that the tide is coming this way at last. From the first of January to the end of September 25,000 immigrants reached Winnipeg, and before the year is over the number will be 35,000. During the eight months of 1898 ending August, 20,155 emigrants sailed for Canada from British ports-more than went to South Africa and Australia combined

The Young People's Opportunity.

The summer has lingered long with us, but we must soon face the winter with its cold days and dark nights. Both seasons have their advantages for the life of the young; in summer, in the long, warm days, recreation is naturally sought outside, in shady woods, or by the inviting stream, while winter evenings furnish appropriate opportunities for social enjoyment and mental inprovement. This, we are told, is pre-eminently the young people's age. Every church has its society or guild, the Public Library opens its treasures to them, and various associations try to show that the life of the young need not be limited to the boundaries of any one sect. All this is good, and it is well for our young people to remember that the measure of their privileges is also the measure of their responsibility. If youth is the time for healthy enjoyment, when life is full of varied interests and attractions, it is also the time for improvement, for acquiring a firmer grasp of high principles, and learning to take broad views of life. Then, memory is quick, and perception keen, and it is the time to lay up mental treasure, a reserve of knowledge and of strength to draw upon in after

In England, during this season, the South Kensington science and art classes are held in connection with Mechanics' Institutes and other local societies, and in these evening classes thousands of young men and women, who are busy during the day, learn the elements of some science or art, which either fits them for a higher position, or gives them a taste of a broader education.

In Ontario, where the population is not so dense, and high schools so accessible, that particular form of study may not be needed. But in some form it is important that our young people should devote a part of their leisure to the study of subjects which lie outside of the regular day's work. Along this line the various young people's societies may work with good effect. The mutual improvement societies of the last generation, which were sometimes made the butt of thoughtless ridicule and cynical scorn, rendered useful service in lowly ways. It is possible to have societies or clubs which make more pretension and yet do not render more efficient service.

The ideal young people's meeting, we are told, is short, sharp and snappy. It must have nothing slow or tedious about it. We do not claim any special virtue for sleepy slowness, or prosy dullness, but we maintain that what is called liveliness may be bought at too high a price. A meeting in which the members are kept perpetually on the move, has a fussy air about it, and tends towards shallowness. The subject that can be handled in five minutes, or settled in a few sharp sentences, is either not a big subject, or is treated in a superficial fashion. Without being willing to give a little thoughtful attention, we can never learn anything of any importance. A life that consists of a series of short gasps must necessarily be feeble. Youth is the time, also, for learning to listen to anyone who has a real mes-

It is also the time for learning to speak; hence the debating night has its uses. There was a time when education consisted too largely in learning to debate, and consequently debating degenerated into quibbling, a perverse ingenuity often exercised upon matters that were either of no use, or altogether beyond the range of human knowledge. There is no need of that in these days, when there are many questions scientific, historical, literary, or political, which form the legitimate subject for debate. Of course, in this exercise, the main thing is not to learn new facts, to increase one's store of information, but to gain power of expression, quickness in intellectual fence, skill in asking pertinent questions, and readiness in meeting objections. Some of our greatest debaters gained much of their skill in the unions or societies where young men were not afraid to tackle all kinds of problems.

Seeing that we have come to believe that all life is sacred, there are two subjects of special interest-history and literature. Each church will suggest subjects bearing on its own life and work, and questions of party politics will be better avoided; but these two lines open up spheres of study that are both interesting and useful. History is the politics of the past, and so it enables us to understand the present. An evening each month devoted to epochs of history would give an education which would tend to impart breadth of mind and catholicity of feeling. Wholesome fiction has its place in literature and life, but young people who learn to love the writings would be a menace to our Canadian workers in this department, will come to despise the trashy sensational ficto be even temporarily troublesome, if a novel," and far more profitable. Whethey would. It is an insult to our ro- ther the cynics speak the truth, when bust race to say it is endangered by they tell us that the race of giants is now extinct, and that henceforth we crying need is population, and it is must be content with mediocrity more or less respectable, is a point we need not debate; but from Bismarck and Gladstone, down into the distant past, there are lives of great men in whom a great epoch was summed up and vocalized-waiting to yield up great lessons to the reverent youthful inquirer. Canadian history and biography would furnish its fair share to a programme of this kind.

Literature, whether we regard it as a criticism of life, or an interpretation of life, is a realm, a part of whose territory we must conquer in youth. If we do not get a taste for Shakespeare, and the great English poets, when we are young, it will not be easily acquired in later life. The young man who has learned to relish good literature will have no difficulty in beguiling the lonely hours; in fact, he will feel that in the rush of life the lonely hours are all too few. This taste may be acquired where young people are voluntarily associated for the study of literature, perhaps better than in the more scholastic study, where the attention is too much diverted from the beauty and inspiration of the piece to technical questions of grammar and philosophy. Tennyson, whose noble life has recently been given to the world, should be a favorite author, not only because of his choice, chaste language, and the artistic perfection of his verse, but also because he reflects so many phases of the century's life. The everlasting struggle between doubt and faith is reflected in his poems in manifold ways, and the great poet "fights his doubts and gathers strength" in a way that is both instinctive and helpful.

The lines that we have indicated are not new. Nothing really great is absolutely new; but they point to the great streams of the life of humanity. What young people need is not new sensatione, and shows of a glittering but shallow kind; nor must they be fed on small fads, so that they become confident of their power to comprehend the whole of life in some small sectarian formula. What they need is a broad view of human life, that they may learn how the same great privileges can be manifest in varied forms according to national needs and local circumstances. They will then learn to distinguish between small conventions and great principles, and so combine honesty of conviction and tenacity of purpose with a true tolerance and respect for the rights of others. If this kind of education does not offer any immediate pay, in the shape of what the world calls success, it will tend to uplift the ideal of manhood, and so strengthen the life of a free, intelligent people. Let our young people, then, grasp their golden opportunity, and remember that the life and honor of their native land depends upon them. The past gives them a noble heritage. The future expects a faithful service with an ominous rattling over Fashoda and ended with the rumbling of a revolutionary volcano in Paris. The situation arising out of the question between Great Britain and France as to the right of occupying Fashoda is extremely grave. Everything hinges on the nature of the report of Major Marchand, the French commander at Fashoda, which is now on its way from Khartoum to Paris, thanks to the courtesy of the British Government in permitting Marchand's officers to use the British lines of communication. The evacuation of Fashoda by the French must, however, take place if war between Great Britain and France is to be averted, as the Marquis of Salisbury has nailed his colors to the mast and cannot recede from the position he has taken and in which he has received the unanimous support of the country. The clear, strong speeches of the Liberal leaders, Lord Rosebery and Mr. Asquith, coming at this critical moment, were very important, in that they demonstrated to the world that the Liberal party is solidly with the government in the stand the latter has taken on the Soudan question. BRITAIN WILL NOT BACK DOWN.

The Speaker, the organ of the Liberal party, refers plainly to the impossibility of relinquishing the British claims, and points out that if it comes to war it will not be merely for Fashoda, but for the maintenance of Great Britain's place in the world, plus her undoubted rights. The Speaker adds: "If we abandon our claims, Englishmen would not only lose the respect of others, but would lose their own selfrespect, and English statesmanship would be dragged in the mire." These emphatic declarations of the English press and public men have already had a certain influence across the channel, and the inspired statements of the French press belittle the importance of Fashoda and shift the ground to an undefined claim on the province of Bahr-el-Ghazal and a port on the Nile.

FRANCE PREPARING TO ABAN-DON FASHODA.

The mouthpiece of the French foreign office is preparing France for the abandonment of Fashoda by asserting that Major Marchand overshot his goal and that instead of going to Fashoda he ought to have stopped at the confluence of the Bahr-el-Ghazal.

Many British publicists, however, scout the idea that France will be permitted to install herself on the Bahr-el-Ghazal, which is described as the "paying reef" of the Soudan. the rest of the reconquered territory as far as Fashoda, is comparatively valueless, being mostly desert ground which cannot be made to pay for many years to come. But the Bahr-el-Ghazal territory is thickly populated and has magnificent trade prospects. During the governorship of the late Gen. Gordon, Bahr-el-Ghazal had immense exports of ivory, grain, beeswax, skins, etc., while it contained whole forests of arrow-root. Besides the cotton grown there surpasses the Egyptian product.

STIRRING UP STRIFE. The Chauvinist Paris papers are denouncing Great Britain, and are doing their utmost to excite French feeling in the matter. Other French papers are making bitter complaints of Russia's inactivity. The Gaulois declares the time for Russia to pay the service which France lent her in the far east by helping against Great Britain, the Patrie, after declaring France had been betrayed by the Brisson cabinet, demands the dispatch of an ambassador to King Menelik of Abyssinia, "for the purpose of seeking an alliance with his 300,000 valiant, faithful warriors, who will co-operate with us in the event of hostilities at Fashoda.' The moderate thinking section of the French press is earnestly urging a peaceful arrangement of the affair. These papers candidly admit that France is no match for Great Britain in the event of war.

WAR TALK. There has been a great deal of talk here about the possibility of war with France, and various preparations upon the part of the British Government

London, Oct. 17 .- Last week opened | are reported to have been made. For instance, it is announced that a leading small arms firm at Birmingham was asked this week whether it was prepared to turn out 1,000 magazine rifles weekly. The significance of this will be appreciated when it is pointed out that the British Government works alone are capable of turning out 4,000 magazine rifles weekly.

It is also rumored that war insurances have been effected at Lloyds during the last few days, but they appear to have been more in the character of bets than trading.

THE FRENCH CRISIS. Authorities on French politics say the life of the Brisson ministry is not worth a month's purchase when the chambers meet. This and other considerations have led the British ministry earnestly to seek and devise some plan which may save France and help her to an honorable retreat. There are several possible plans under consideration. One is to treat Marchand as an explorer, and encourage him to continue his explorations in the direction of Darfur or the sources of Bahrel-Ghazal, Gen. Kitchener helping him with supplies. Another is to find a high place of promotion for him in French West Africa; and a third is to induce the czar to intervene at Paris in the cause of peace. might be made to appear to the French as fresh evidence of the immovable attachment of Russia to France. the first is the most likely, and may fit in with the past poncy of the British cabinet in Africa.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

Another correspondent, writing on the Fashoda affair, says: The London press is filled day after day with portentous articles on the Fashoda affair, but the monetary exchanges of Europe are not disturbed by the breath of suspicion that war is possible between England and France. The main point in the diplomatic correspondence has escaped observation. If it is a fact that Lord Salisbury has changed his ground, neither Rosebery nor Mr. Asquith referred to it in discussing the subject publicly, and the London leader writers fail to emphasize it. Lord Salisbury's protest against the French occupation of Fashoda is now based on the fact that England and Egypt have conquered the khalifa and succeed to the rights of the dominion enjoyed by him. This is a different plea from that advanced by the Rosebery Government three years ago, to the effect that the Soudan was an Egyptian empire. Lord Salisbury prefers to regard it as the joint conquest of England and Egypt by virtue of the final defeat of the dervishes before Khartoum.

IN EARNEST. Whatever may be the purpose of this alteration of phrasing, on which all the diplomats are commenting, it is evident that no change in England's attitude is possible. The presence of Major Marchand at Fashoda is regarded as an unfriendly act that is cause enough for war, and the French expedition will have to retire. There would be signs of panic on every stock exchange if the conviction was not general that Major Marchand will withdraw his force in the course of a few weeks, or otherwise the czar would not be proceeding quietly with his plans for the disarmament conference, nor would the German emperor be on his way to Palestine as a new crusader, with his eyes wide open for every chance for enlarging German trade in the east.

BRITAIN READY: It is well understood by those best able to judge that if a war with France must come, it could not happen at a better time for the English navy than the present. "Two years hence," says an authority in these matters, "if the ships now on French paper are then really floating in French waters, we may have a toughish job, but today the game is in our own hands. But. he added, with a smile, "we might as well wait till the promised French vellow book is published before taking seriously the challenge of the French yellow press.'

TOOK BACK THE ASPERSION. The German military attache's unfavorable criticisms of the famous charge of the 21st Lancers and the general conduct of the action at Omdurman were withdrawn somewhat late in the day, it is believed, in obedience to a timly hint from Berlin. It was pointed out at the time that the critic's experience in desert warfare was lamentably small, now Col. Martin, who himself' led the lancers in the charge, shows that the attache was not there in person, and had no knowledge of the actual situation. It is rare that an English officer condescends to answer in print attacks on his own efficiency in action, but this answer has a value all its own. Col. Martin shows elearly that the object of the charge was to head the enemy off from Omdurman, and this he did so successfully that the dervishes were driven first under battery and then under infantry fire, where they were exterminated. As the evidence which came first from the Soudan tended to exhibit the charge as a needless show of splendid courage, this refutation by one of England's best cavalry officers cannot be too widely circulated.

LORD ROSEBERY'S SPEECH. Lord Rosebery has, by his speech on Fashoda, forced himself once again into the front of the British political arena. In supporting Salisbury's policy towards France in so wholehearted a way, Lord Rosebery only follows out his long-cherished belief that foreign affairs should be kept outside of party wrangles. Mr. Asquith's speech on the same lines shows how powerful Lord Rosebery's influence discussion as to the advisability of the establishment of a regency. The Freisinnige Zeltung says: "When the Emperor and King of Prussia leaves the country for any length of time, as in the present instance, a duly empowered person ought in the meanwhile to seize the reins of government." urges that the matter be brought be fore the reichstag. A number of the leading papers support the regency proposition, while several of the Con servative papers scout this view. The constitution of the empire does not appear to provide for a regency. presidency of the German bund is vested in the King of Prussia, but nothing is said to legalize the transfer of this dignity to a regent of Prussia. In the meanwhile the emperor's brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, who would naturally be regent, is absent in China. The next prince available would be Frederick Leopold, son of the late Prince Charles of Prussia, eldest brother of Emperor William I., the grandfather of the present em-

THE KAISER'S COSTLY TRIP. The whole matter of the emperor's trip to the Holy Land will be thrashed out early during the coming session of the reichstag. In government circles the opinion is expressed that it is not fair to expect the emperor to bear the entire expense of the journey. It is said that the cost of his majesty's trip, exclusive of presents and liberal baksheesh, will amount to at least 5,000,-000 marks. The costly gifts to the Sultan of Turkey and to his harem, etc., also figure up from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 marks. Therefore, it is suggested, as the voyage is expected to redound to Germany's greater glory and advantage, that parliament ought to grant a credit to cover the main expenses, more especially so as otherwise the emperor will have to run into

BUSCH'S BOOK CONDEMNED. In an interview on the subject of Herr Moritz Busch's book on Prince Bismarck, Dr. Schweniger, the physician of the deceased statesman, said: "I voice the feelings of the Bismarck family, when I say they are all indignant at Herr Busch's book. It is not only full of glaring errors and misrepresentations, but it does grave injury to the memory of Herr Busch's benefactor. Besides, Herr Busch violated his sworn duty in the capacity of the pensioned, ex-state official, not to reveal state secrets, and not to publish documents. Moreover, his description of the prince's private habits is utterly imaginative."

A DIET OF DOG.

The inadequate meat supply of Germany, owing to the barriers erected against foreign cattle, hogs and meat, continues. From Austria solely some 8,000 head of cattle have been admitted, and Russia supplied about 80,000 pigs. These imports are quite insufficient to cope with the requirements which the home supply fails to meet. Prices have risen steadily for months past, and they are now 20 per cent above those of 1897. The slaughtering of horses for food has greatly increas ed, and dog flesh is openly advertised. In the Chemnitz Neueste Nachrichten "fat young dogs" forms a standing

IMPROVED LIFEBOAT,

Director Schnemann, of the North German Lloyd Ship Company, has invented a new style of lifeboat, whose mechanism, while very simple, allows of the boat being easily launched without the use of davits. The new lifeboats can also be lowered in a high sea, and they drop into the water at some distance from the vessel, thus lessening the danger in the cases of shipwreck or fire. The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse is now being fitted with these boats. The new Hamburg-American liner now in course of construction will also be equipped with them. NOTES.

Influenza has again broken out in Berlin, and many fashionable people are prostrated. The government has now definitely decided to appoint permanently a naval attache at Washington, who will reach his post in January.

It is now said that Emperor William intends to become a neighbor of Queen Victoria in the Highlands of Scotland. He has been inquiring for a purchasable sporting estate in Scotland, providing salmon fishing and grouse and deer shooting. A national English movement is being attempted in support of the Czar's disarmament rescript. Meetings are to be held all over the land, following them up by sympathetic resolutions passed by such bodies as trades unions congresses and congregational unions.

American Markets.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.-The demand for flour subsiding, and a reappearance of the weakness in cash grain in the Northwest, there was a disposition in the wheat pit today to act cautiously on the buying side, and prices were allowed to sag. After an absence at the opening, December closed ½c low-er. Corn left off unchanged to ½c lower. Oats declined %c. Pork is unchanged to 2½c down. Lard, 2½c to 5c higher, and ribs unchanged. Before the opening reports were received from Liverpool that the market here had recovered all that it lost yesterday. First sales, therefore, were at an advance over night of 1/8c to %c. Though New York continued to send reports of large engagements, the news had much less influence than usual, the prevailing opinion being that reports of previous days this week were very much exaggerated, and that advices today might be duplicates. One unfavorable feature of the market, and one which had a great deal of influence in shaping the course of prices, was the weakness of the cash grain in the Northwest, and reports from Minneapolis of a pause in the demand for flour. The primary market receipts for the day were 1,-582,000 bushels, against 1,203,000 bushels a year ago. Chicago received 275 cars against 283 last year, and Minneapolis and Duluth 1,122 as compared with 1,112 a week ago, and 1,760 the cor-responding day the year before. The report of the export engagements to the seaboard finally ran up to 108 boat loads. This was entirely ignored, however, and the market continued to weaken during the last half hour, influenced by lack of speculative demand, and free liquidation by discouraged longs. December opened 1/40 higher, at 65%c to 65%c, ranged irregularly downward to 64%c, and closed at 64%c to 64%c. The leading

PLANS THAT FELL THROUGH

Marchand Expected Help From the Abyssinians.

French Influence in Ethopia Believed to Have Received a Heavy Blow.

Rome, Oct. 17.-The Tribuna's letter from Aden says: Marchand went to Fashoda expecting to find Frenchmen, or at least Abyssinians there, in accordance with the plans of M. Lebon and M. Bonvallet. On acriving at Faby way of Kerin but received no re- ing ply. He then sent a communication to his government by way of Ubanghi and the Cong), asking for instructions and stating that he had occupied this most unsatisfactory position because it commanded the road to Yarva, by which his collaborators were expected to arrive. Otherwise it would have

Sobat and the Nile. The correspondent of the Tribuna declares this was the plan which has carried out. Emperor Menelik is doing his utmost to prevent the realization, and the English have cut off the line of supplies. It only remains for Marchand to go down the White Nile to Cairo. According to the Tribuna's correspondence French influence in Ethiopia has received a final blow as regards the Nile, the Negus openly playing England's game against France. Advices from Djitonii, received in Paris, says it is believed that the revolt of Ras Mangascia, the most important of the Abyssinia chiefs, was engineered by the British. King Menelik is sending 40,000 troops, commanied by Ras Makonnen, to put down the insurgents, and as Ras Mangascia has only 10,000 troops at his command, it is expected that the revolt will be easily quelled, despite the British sup-

Council Will Operate the Tramway System and May Start a Telephone System.

London, Oct. 17 .- Lord Salisbury's campaign against the county council has been postponed for three years, until new elections can be held and the Progressives defeated.

Meanwhile the county council is not standing still. It has decided to purchase and operate the London tramway system, a portion of which has al- Lake. ready been taken over. The council by the opening of the new year, will be in full possession of the South London tramways, and expects to make an annual profit of $200,000, after providing for the interest and sinking fund. This margin of profit may not be secured, since the working hours of the tramway operatives will be reduced under the municipal management.

The county council has also asked the postoffice department whether it intends to act upon the recent report of the Hanbury committee, and establish a competing telephone service. The department is known to favor a municipal telephone service, and will prob-The ably return a negative answer. council will then be at liberty to go into the telephone business and provide existing service is expensive and inadequate. There is a good field for a competing business at reduced rates. Glasgow, Edinburgh and other towns are moving in the same direction. The municipal telephone is the newest method of applying the principles of collectivism to local government. The Glasgow municipal government began last week operating a five-mile section of street railway by electric traction with overhead wire. The cars are of a new design, and resemble Pullmans. Each will seat 48 people. If the experiment succeeds, electric traction will be introduced for the entire tramway service of Glasgow.

How Major MacDonald Repulsed the Dervishes

In Their Final and Desperate Attack on the Egyptian Brigades-Mr. Steeven's Brilliant Description.

The finest description of the battle of Omdurman is undoubtedly that by G. W. Steevens, the war correspondent of the Daily Mail. The most vivid paragraph is that which pictures the final rally of the dervishes and their sudden attack on Major Macdonald's Egyptian brigade, as follows:

But the cockpit of the fight was

Macdonald's. The British might

avenge his brigade; it was his to keep it and to kill off the attack. To meet it he turned his front through a complete half-circle, facing successively south, west and north. Every tactician in the army was delirious in' his praise; the ignorant correspondent was content to watch the man and his blacks. "Cool as on parade." is an old phrase; Macdonald Bey was very much cooler. Beneath the strong, square-hewn face you could tell that the brain was working as if packed in ice. He sat solid on his horse, and bent his black brows towards the green flag and the Remingtons. Then he turned to a galloper with an order, and cantered easily up to a battalion commander. Magically the rifles hushed, the stinging powder smoke wisped away, and the battalions were rapidly deacon Davis drove out to Delaware deacon Davis drove out to Delaware and round, in and out, as if it were a rade was together again in a new The field in front was hastening towards us in a whitey-brown cloud of dervishes. An order, Macdonald's jaws gripped and hardened as the flame spurted out again, and the whitey-brown cloud quivered and stood still. He saw everything, knew what to do, knew how to do it, did it. At the fire he, as ever, brooding watchfully behind his firing line; at the cease fire he was instantly in front of it; all saw him, and knew that they were being nursed to trlumph. His blacks of the Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh, the historic fighting regiments of the Egyptian army, were worthy of their chief. The Second Egyptian, brigaded with them and fighting in the line, were worthy of their comrades, and of their own reputation as the best disciplined battalion in the world. A few had feared that the blacks would be too forward, the vellows too backward; except that the blacks, as always, looked there was no difference at all between them. The Egyptians sprang to the advance at the bugle; the Soudanese ceased fire in an instant silence at the They were losing men, too, for though eyes were clamped on the dervish charges, the dervish fire was brisk. Man after man dropped out behind the firing line. Here and there a white officer with a red-lathered charger; there a black stretched straight, bare-headed in the sun, drylipped, uncomplaining, a bullet through his liver; two yards away a dead driver by a dead battery mule, his whip still glued in hand. The table of loss had topped 100-150-neared 200. Still they stood, fired, advanced, fired, changed front, fired-firing, firing always, deaf in the din, blind in the smarting smoke, hot, dry, bleeding, bloodthirsty, enduring the devilish fight to the end.

HONOR THE VANQUISHED.

And the dervishes? The honor of the fight must still go with the men who died. Our men were perfect, but the dervishes were superb-beyond perfection. It was their largest, best and bravest army that ever fought against us for Mahdism, and it died worthily of the huge empire that Mahdism won and kept so long. Their riflemen, mangled by every kind of remedy to do me good.
death and torment that man can devise, clung round the black flag and the green, emptying their poor, rotten, home-made cartridges dauntlessly. Their spearmen charged death at every minute hopelessly. Their horsemen led each attack, riding into the bullets till nothing was left but three horses trotting up to our line, heads down, saying, "For goodness' sake, let us in out of this." Not one rush, or two, or ten-but rush and rush, company on company, never stopping, though all their view that was not unshaken enemy was the bodies of the men who had rushed before them. A dusky line got up and stormed forward; it bent, broke up, fell apart, and disappeared.

Before the smoke had cleared another line was bending and storming forward in the same track.

It was over. The avenging squadrons of the Egyptian arms swept over the field. The khalifa and the Sheikhed-Din had galloped back to Omdurman. Ali Wed Helu was borne away on a angareb with a bullet through his thigh bone. Yakub lay dead under his brother's banner. From the green army there now came only deathenamored desperadoes, strolling one by one towards the rifles, pausing to shake a spear, turning aside to recognize a corpse, then caught by a sudden jet of fury, bounding forward, checking, sinking limply to the ground.

Now under the black flag in a ring of bodies stood only three men facing the three thousand of the Third Brigade. They folded their arms about the staff and gazed steadily forward. Two fell. The last dervish stood up and filled his chest; he shouted the name of his god and hurled his spear. Then he stood quite still, waiting. It took him full; he quivered, gave at the knees, and toppled with his head on his arms and his face towards the legions of his conquerors.

MAY RUN TO LONDON

L. H. and D. R. R. May Make This Their Terminus if the Bylaw Is Defeated in St. Thomas.

The Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway bonus campaign is on again in St. Thomas in connection with the proposed extension of the road from Ridgetown. It will be remembered that a bylaw was submitted last spring, but was defeated largely through the instrumentality of a competing company, which is again canvassing against it, with what result remains to be seen. The bonuses in the municipalities along the route are pretty sure to carry. The building of the extension will probably follow, and this is where London's interest comes in. In the event of the bylaw not carrying in St. Thomas, the Lake Erie people will hardly go there, owing to the heavy expense of bridging, which can be avoided by running the lines further north, and in that case London would probably be the terminus, during the balance of the London and Port Stanley lease, at any rate. Why not make it the terminus permanently? No doubt some arrangement could be made with the Lake Erie Company for market rates and other advantages, which would bring London a lot of trade that is now done in St. Thomas, and this city would have besides another through connection with the west. The question is, would it not be worth while to offer the company some inducement to come in here, anyway? It is not yet too late. The matter should receive serious consideration in this city.

HAZING DAY

Initiation of the Freshmen by Merry Medicos.

> The Students Take Possession of the School and Send the First Year Men Into the Black Hole-A Jolly Function.

The medicos at the London Medical School had a merry time this morning. That time-honored function-the hazing of the freshmen-took place with all the vim, good-nature, wit and vigor that a couple of score of ablebodied young men could throw into the yearly episode in college life. A ruse on the part of the sophomores led the freshmen to believe that the even't was scheduled for next week, and consequently the first-year men were given them, however, of establishing to send to Brest without delay the first floor, which they converted into their stronghold. They numbered 15 strong, with the emphasis on the strong, and the sophomores were a good match for them. It was a battle royal, and the senior students, with a sprinkling of recent grads, stood by to large audiences Saturday afternoon see fair play. The freshmen succeedand evening at the Grand. No No accidents resulted, and throughout the stubborn struggle no ill-nature was exhibited. After the freshmen were subdued and forced to enter the black hole in the dissecting room, and carry up the cadavers, the oath was administered with the accustomed formality. The crowd then adjourned to the yard and were grouped before Dr. R. E. ORGAN OPENING

Pleasing Event at the Memorial Church -Triumph Achieved by the R. 8. Williams & Son Co.

Another fine three-manual organ has been added to the city by the Memorial congregation in their church on William street. It was heard yesterday for the first time, and is certainly a grand instrument. The case is of quarter-cut oak, and finely finished, and the front pipes, which are all speaking pipes, are very handsomely decorated in red, blue and gold. The console is about ten feet from the organ, singers sitting all round the player, who can thus both see and hear decani and cantoris choirs. All the visible work is of the best; it is hard to say whether the projection into the chancel or nave is the most handsome.

The tone of the organ is orchestral and very good. The flutes on the choir and great organs are fine; of the reeds, there is a lovely oboe on the swell, and a superb clarinet on the choir, and both the trumpets are well-voiced reeds. The diapasons are all both rich and bold and the Voix Celeste was the delight of all who heard it in the evening offertoire. Although put together in the remarkably short time of three weeks, there was not a hitch at either service; it played only when it was wanted, which is not the rule at organ openings. The Memorial Church has one of the best choirs in the city, as the programme of yesterday proves. "In morning Mr. Ashplant assisted with the solo in the anthem, in his usual easy manner. The evening anthem was the "Hallelujah Chorus"; Dykes' service in F in the morning, and Woodward in D in the evening. The rendering of all of them was good, showing that the organist, Mr. J. W. Fetherston, is an artistic choir master. The universal verdict is that the congregation is to be congratulated on the really good organ which is in the church, and the builders, R. S. Williams & Sons, have succeeded in erecting an instrument sec-

At the last meeting of the board of health, the public library was mentioned as a special channel by which infectious diseases were spread with the exception of one man who throughout the city. The public library board take every care in their power to prevent the spread of disease. Dr. Hutchinson, medical health officer, notifies the library of every case reported to him, and the first inquiry made by the officer is—"Have you any books from the library." If so they are taken and destroyed, and reported to me. The borrower is relieved of any responsibility in the matter. Since Jan. 1 we have been notified of 33 cases of scarlet fever and 12 of diphtheria, a total of 45. In only 17 cases had any members of the family been using the library, and only six Scarlet fever and diphtheria does not often attack children over eight years of age. Books in the library are not for the use of children so young, and they are not at all likely to be interested in them. If you will remember that over 6,000 cards are in use, and today about 3,000 books are out, the above figures compared with the circulation, is a very small percentage. The cases reported are not known as being blamed on the library.

Hurried Preparations of the French Naval Department.

Armored Cruisers To Be Prepared for Immediate Service-British Ironclads Practicing St . Erench Naval

Paris, Oct. 17 .- The Soliel publishes a dispatch from Toulon, which says that Vice-Admiral Fournier, who is now at Nice with M. Lockroy, minister for war, will return immediately to London, where orders have been received to repair the armored cruisers, Admiral Trehourt, Bouvines, Jemmeps taken by surprise. An opportunity was and Valmy for active service, and also largest possible number of gunners to man the forts and batteries.

Paris, Oct. 17.-Inquiries made today at the offices of the French minister of marine confirm the report, published by the Soliel in a dispatch from Toulon saying that Vice-Admiral Fournier, who is now at Tunis with the minister of marine, will return immediately to Toulon, where orders have been received to speedily prepare the armored cruisers Amiral Erehourart, Bouvines, Jemmapes and Valmy for active service, and that, in addition, orders have been issued to send the largest possible number of gunners to Brest without delay to man the forts and batteries there. The vessels mentioned are to be promptly placed on a war footing and are to be sent to Brest.

Rumor connects the French naval preparations with the question in dispute with Great Britain as to the possession of Fashoda on the Nile. The Paris papers today in chronicling the movements of the British fleet in the Mediterranean, announce, that three British iron-clads are engaged in gun practice off Bizzerta, the French naval station in the Mediterranean, on the African coast.

Cavalry or infantry, they were all alike, heroes incapable of fear, absolutely obedient, and entirely reckless of death. The reader who studies the accounts understands for the first time how the "Moors," who were just these men, swept over the soldiers of the lower empire, what Charles Martel had to resist at Tours, and how the Crusaders, the picked chivalry of Europe, were ultimately defeated by the "Saracens." It is all "fanaticism," it is said. Fanaticism helps, but we take it the truth is that the Arabs pure, the half-caste Arabs, and almost all Africans, whether Soudanese, Zulus, or Hussas, are among the best material for soldiers to be found in the world. He confessed he did not wish for my family to know before his own, and there were reasons why he must defer the acquainting them until his defer the acquainting them until his return. That reason I know now, through you, was his betrothment to his cousin. I own I did not require much persuasion on that head. I trembled at the thought of making the confession, and should have died from confession, and should have died from fright to have done so while Walter have been expected, the "glorious prospect" was realized. The gipsies, whose mode of life and wanderings Lady had remembered sufficietnly well to relate, were discovered, and Maria Saproni found to be yet living. When they learned they were not in danger of punishment for the abduction, the gold the earl used so generously quickly took effect, and they proved Maria to be Lady Esmer be-

rond a doubt. With this Gerard hastened home The result of his journey was marked in his features, without the help of words, as he entered the drawingroom where the countess and Lady Esmer were seated.

"Dearest cousin," he said, clasping her hands in his, "beyond the faintest suspicion of a doubt I have established your right to the name of Mortmain. It will now be my purpose to provide for you a position adequate to an heiress in the house of Lethrington." "It is true, then?" murmured Lady Esmer, confusedly pressing her fingers to her eyes. "It seems all so strange and wonderful; my brain swims; I cannot realize it!"

Giddy, she moved towards a chair, not aware her cousin's place had been taken by another. That other most audaciously placed her arms around her, whispering:
"My own darling, let me assist you

She looked up, and found Lord Cecil's face close to her's. His breath fanned her cheek. An exquisite thrill ran through her frame, her head sunk on his breast, and she would have murmured some reply; but his eager lips, with passionate love, sealed hers.
When Cecil quitted Lady Esmer he found the countess awaiting him in the study.

"Well, she has accepted you, Cecil?" she said, meeting him. 'She has.

"I am delighted. But-"But what? And why that suddenly grave face?" he queried, smiling. "Lady Flora Desmond?

"Lady Flora Desmond!" he repeated, a moment perplexed. "Yes," said Lucille, seriously shaking her head. "Oh, Cecil! Have you behaved fairly to her? What may you have led her to believe? We all fancied you loved her. Is it surpris-ing if she fancied the same thing, and

"Wonder? I should think not," remarked the countess, a trifle nettled. But do you mean to say, Cecil—"

"That the last thing Lady Flora
Desmond ever thought of was to fall in love with your humble servant, as little as he did with her. Listen, dear coz, for by the death of Admiral Conyers, announced yesterday, the matter need be kept no longer a secret." "Admiral Conyers? I saw it in the

I not only promised secrecy, but enrolled myself a conspirator in the cause of persecuted love. Why, coz, Willie Conyers was in Italy all the time we were. Now, however, Admiral Conyers' will has unexpectedly made him wealthy, he need no longer be in hiding, for Lady Flora's guardian will ing, for Lady Flora's guardian will readily give her consent."

When all the cards with which we have played out our history are laid face on table, when all is clear, and no longer a mystery, in our opinion to delay over the conclusion becomes wearisome to the reader; consequently our final sentences shall be brief. First, then, because least in our good graces, and from a desire to get good graces, and from a desire to get an ill-flavor out of our mouth, Lord Cecil, on learning the character of Capt. Granby Lascelles, forbade him his house and friendship, which was equivalent to forbidding him society.

What he was got whispered about town. The men upon whom he had lived fell off, and only a year after the captain had to start for the continent, where he made a precarious tinent, where he made a precarious living at the gaming tables of Homburg and Baden-Baden.

Lady Montmain's romantic history made her the rage in society. Every-body was anxious to number her among their friends. She created a furore, and never had a Countess of Lethrington had so large an assembly at any ball as that given by Lucille in her cousin's honor; a ball that brought joy to one heart, Honoria Mannering's, in the pages of the Morning Post the next day her name figured among the countess' guests—a fact that so overcome one of her admirers, Sydney Papyrus, son of Sir Sidney Papyrus, Baronet, once Lord Mayor of the City of London, that he unhesitatingly proposed, and now, old Sir Sidney Papyrus being no more, Honoria has the prefix "Lady" to her name.

The hour is sunset. The earl and his wife, she a trifle delicate as yet, stand on the terrace; but Lucille's eyes no longer wander to the church. They are bent upon a trim nurse-maid, who is pacing the lawn, hushing a small piece of humanity, draped in robes of costly lace, and ceruleanlined cashemire.

"Ah, Gerard," she says abruptly, leaning her cheek against his arm, "How good heaven is to us. Imagine, at one time, we thought our child would be nameless."

Diplomacy in Shopland.

"I have a grievance. It is as big as a cart-wheel. The other women assure me that my grievance is theirs, so I venture to mention it in hope of finding sympathizers."

This paragraph is clipped from a letter recently received, clipped because I am ready to head the list of those in sympathy with the topic which it ad-

It seems that a certain little lady in this city wanted a theater bonnet, so she started down town resolved to get that bonnet at all costs. She had put aside a tidy sum for it There was to be no dickering as to price. I merely mention this fact to show that the firm which lost the sale was in rather hard luck. The day was damp. Before the lady in question had reached the milliner's mirror, curls that had been so fussed over for the benefit of the bonnet were in stringlets. Hats and bonnets were trotted out for inspection. They were all beauties, as two-thirds of the fall fancies are. But when they found a resting-place on the forlornly straightened locks things were different. Naturally madame trying on bonnets was flustered. Nothing flusters a woman so much as a milliner's glass, a pretty piece of millinery and an utterly hopeless head of hair. Matters might have been righted, however, by diplomacy, for the young woman showing hats was, it seems, tactful. But, and here we come to the grievance. Lounging in a chair the glass was a person evidently in charge of the department, who de-liberately set herself to the task of staring. "She," complains the writer of the letter, "watched me as closely as a cat watches a mouse. Every movement of mine seemed of deepest interest to her. It made me as nervous as a fish, for I knew my hair was a sight, and I knew every hat I tried on made me look a fright.

"I stood it just as long as I could, and then I turned to my attendant and "'Will you take me to some place where I can have a little privacy, some place where I shall not be under inspection? I dislike nothing so much as being glared at by a stranger while I am trying on hats.' was immediately shown to the French room, but by this time the mischief was done. I was completely up-set, and I don't believe the most beautiful hat in that establishment could have appealed to me. I gave up the

This was as it should be. Were I head of a firm supplying millinery my customers should be given every privacy, and my orders would be that the attendants not engaged in waiting on customers make themselves scarce in the vicinity where that ticklish "trying on" process is under way.

For my part I would quite as soon try on a pair of corsets in public as a hat. I know of nothing more exasperating than hat-hunting under the best of circumstances, and to have to select something decently becoming with the uneasy sensation that furtive or bold glances are viewing the operation is maddening. The milliner's sanctum should be introduced into all stores. It should be cunningly contrived, so that when customers are piloted there, they will find mirrors that flatter, a tiny apparatus for heating a curling iron, iron close at hand, and a set of the most seductive bits of tulle and net that come in veiling. All very simple. The shopper would probably have on hand her own private powder rag. What bliss to coax back into fluffy rings locks that have wilted from dampness, to soften the shine of nose and forehead with a dust of powder, and how different the millinery effects would be with these little aids of comeliness. If women would employ such small toilet arts there would be a keen pleasure in hat-buying, instead of the feeling that it is a semi-annual trial. Let us have seclusion. Let us have it in such a way that our small vanities will be catered to. Those who sell and those who buy will be gainers.

Still Fasnionable.

The fancy waist will continue to be worn with plain skirts at the theater, at concerts, etc., but the skirt, though plainer, will be of the same color. Where the whole gown is in evidence, as at a house gathering, the dress must be a creation entire—that is, designed to be worn together and made en suite. The fancy colored waist, and dark, plain skirt are not now fashionable, and always gave the wearer a cut-in-two-athours after this experiment she had bought her hat. Presented With an Address by the Board of Trade.

The Minister Inspects the Harbor Thoroughly,

And Orders That the Work Be Hasten ed-A Supplementary Grant Asked -Warm Welcome.

Hon. J. I. Tarte, minister of public works, visited Port Stanley Saturday to inspect the harbor, and, to representative citizens of London, St. Thomas and Port Stanley, by whom he was met, the minister intimated Thackeray's Works, 30 volumes, gilt top 13.35 that the desired improvement would be made. He expressed surprise at the condition of the docks, and urged Foreman Heaborne to hurry forward the work of repairs, for which a grant was recently made by the government. With regard to the supplementing of this grant, Mr. Tarte promised to lay the matter before his colleagues, and seemed very favorably disposed to carry out the suggestion that a channel be made at the base of the hill on the east side of the pier, to change the outlet of Kettle Creek. Port Stanley will then be, unquestionably, the finest as well as the most important harbor on the north shore of necessary work will be proceeded with to save a harbor of the importance of Port Stanley, which has cost the government so much. Situated as we are about the center of the north shore of Lake Erie, which is considered one of the most dangerous bodies of fresh water known to navigation, we feel sure that our claim for a good, safe harbor for the protection of life and property will meet with your favorable consideration. In justice to those en-gaged in lake traffic, who find it necessary to use this harbor, and whose business is annually increasing, we feel confident in urging upon you the necessity of restoring the harbor to its former condition, when it was one of the most important harbors on north shore. the business men present were satisfied the result of his visit will be the improvement of the harbor to the great benefit of London and St. Thomas. The Londoners who went to the lake side were Mayor Wilson, Ald. Belton, Hunt, Dreaney, Taylor, Messrs. Chas. Hyman and William and John Bowman. They left the city on very short notice, and arrived at Port Stanley just in time to join Mr. Tarte and the St. Thomasites on their return trip. Those present from St. Thomas included Mayor Wright, Dr. Duncombe (president of the Reform Association), Messrs. John Farley, Q.C. (president of the board of trade), James McAdam (secretary of the board of trade), Frank Hunt (reeve of Southwold), Dr. Wilson, Wm. Mickleborough, John Heard, John Stewart, James Pin-John Farrow, A. Ferguson, Dr. Ferguson, Steve Dougall, Mr. Mc-Gregor, M.P., and President E. C. Walker and Supt. Woollatt, of the L. E.

and D. R. R., were also present On returning to St. Thomas, the minister was dined at the Grand Central Hotel at six o'clock, and left for Windsor early in the evening to spend Sunday there. It was his intention to visit Rondeau today, and go from there to Goderich, where his present tour in the west will terminate. To The Advertiser, Mr. Tarte, in speaking of the Port Stanley harbor, said that "eyesore" would be removed. Something would be done to put the harbor in good shape, he said cheerfully.

The suggestion that the outlet of Kettle Creek be changed meets with general approval. If this were done, it is thought the necessity of dredging will be obviated, as the harbor would be free from the creek wash. Supt. Woollatt says the L. E. and D. R. R. Company are spending about $75,000 on harbor improvements on their own account. About 280 feet, in shape, is being added to their slip-dock on the west side, and it is desired that the east pier be extended in order to protect this. The company's business at the port is developing rapidly. The quantity of coal brought in by schooner exclusive altogether of the Shenango's traffic, has this season exceeded last year's business by 1,500 tons, and general traffic shows signs of a corresponding increase. The car ferry boat business is also rapidly becoming one of greater importance outside of the coal trade-canned goods being a large part of the freight.

About Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

They Cure Stomach Troubles and Indigestion Anywhere, Whether You Have Faith in Them or Not.

Mere faith will not digest your food for you, will not give an appetite, will not increase your flesh and strengthen your nerves and heart, but Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do these things, because they are compounded of the elements of digestion, they contain the juices, acids and peptones ne-cessary to the digestion and assimilation of all wholesome food. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest food if placed in a jar or bottle in water heated to 98 degrees, and they will do it much more effectively when taken into the stomach after meals, whether you have faith that they will or not.

They invigorate the stomach, make pure blood and strong nerves, in the only way that nature can do it, and that is, plenty of wholesome food well digested. Prof. Robertson's Instructions-Tem perature Important.

All that can be expected in the case of butter is that Canadian creamery butter will be put on the market in such a condition that by its excellent qualities it will command the highest prices which is being paid at that time. The intrinsic quality of butter is changed by the processes of fermentation. The exclusion of air from the surface of butter is not sufficient to preserve it. The germs which bring about changes and ultimate spoiling are in the butter, and become active whenever the temperature is favorable for their growth. In the making ny cases, the buttermaker adds to the cream a fermentation starter for a somewhat similar purpose to that for which the housewife adds yeast to the batter in making bread. By the addition of a suitable fermentation starter, as fine butter may now be made in January as in June. If one could introduce a fermentation stopper as he does a fermentation starter, the butter might be expected to remain entirely unchanged. The stopping of fermentation may be accomplished by raising the temperature sufficiently high to destroy the ferments in the butter or other product. In the case of butter, that temperature (155 degrees Fahr.) would spoil the butter as a commercial commodity. On the other hand, if the temperature be reduced to freezing point, while the forms of life, which carry on fermentation, and bring about changes in the butter, will not be destroyed, their activity will be prevented so long as the butter is held at that temperature. Consequently, if butter is to be kept for a period longer than one month, it should be put into a refrigerator at a temperature of about 20 degrees Fahrenheit, and that becomes an effectual fermentation stopper. Butter is a substance difficult to cool or to heat quickly. If a full package of butter be put in a room at a temperature of from 36 to 34 Fahrenheit, several days may elapse before it is cooled to the same temperature in the middle of the package; whereas, if the package of butter be put into cold storage at a temperature of 20 degrees Fahrenheit, the whole of it within 24 hours will be cooled to a temperature of at least 36 or 34 degrees, at which the process of fermentation in the butter does not go on .- Prof. James W. Robertson.
