The Trackmen's Strike.

The Grand Trunk trackmen should be able to return to work today in a comfortable frame of mind. They have secured a recognition of their association, and within thirty days the wages question will be adjusted, practically by arbitration, with a reasonable assurance that the men will be granted an increase of pay. Manager Hays has given proof of his goodwill by allowing the trackmen's committee free transportation over the Grand Trunk system in the meantime, so that they may confer with the trackmen all along the line and ascertain their various grievances.
This is a victory for conciliation and consultation. The management of the company wisely concede the principle that labor is free to combine, and has a right to collective action. The company have also admitted the force of public opinion as a factor in their relations with their employees. It is another illustration that the unfeeling law of mere supply and demand is being overruled in these days by moral and social considerations. The Grand Trunk Company will gain by thus acknowledging the associative rights of the trackmen, because the latter will feel a new dignity and increased responsibility as a recognized union, and will have a fresh incentive to prove that they are worthy of the confidence reposed in them by their employers.
A word of credit is due to those who were instrumental in bringing the company and the employees together, and in furthering the negotiations. Mr. James Sutherland, M. P., who acted for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, appears to have carried out the Premier's instructions with tact and skill. The Opposition members who previously interceded for the trackmen deserve gratitude for their sympathy and good intentions; but the weight of the Premier's position, combined with his "sunny ways," and other personal qualities, doubtless made him naturally a more effective mediator.

The Point of View.

The point on the Street Railway Company's side likeliest to have weight with the public is the assertion that the employees, if recognized in their collective capacity, would want to run the road, would render discipline and oversight difficult, and would put obstacles in the way of the deserved dismissal of drunken or dishonest men.
One answer to this is that the C. P. R. and G. T. R. Companies, like the Hamilton Street Railway Company, do deal with the men in their collective capacity, and none of these companies have difficulty in dismissing men who are dishonest or drunken.
There is also another way of looking at it. Instead of accepting the men in their collective capacity with a grudge, let the arbitrators, after laying down fair conditions for both sides, throw the men frankly on their honor, in the court of public opinion, as to their treatment of the Company.
President Mahone, a few evenings ago, talking to the Hamilton men's union, after a fair settlement with the Hamilton Street Railway Company had been made for a year, spoke substantially as follows: "Now, men, I want to say a few things to you as strongly as I can. I want you to make the Company's interests your own. I want you to take such care of the Company's property, be so considerate to the public, and so alert not to miss any business, that at the end of the year the Company would not dream of going back to the old system of unorganized and less responsible labor."
We do not think a man of this sort should be stigmatized as an "imported labor agitator."

Holding the Balances Even.

The tone of occupants of the judicial bench varies, depending sometimes on heredity, sometimes on environment. The recent utterances of Judge Barron, of Stratford, on the trackmen's strike, seem to us to hold the balances even. He told the men they had a perfect right to organize for the purpose of bettering their condition, but that they should not in any way whatever countenance disorder or breaches of the peace. At the same time, he remarked, he felt free to say that, in his opinion, 98 cents per day was not an adequate sum upon which to expect a man to support a wife and family, and he hoped the Company might be able, in conference with the men, to adjust the difficulty in some way that would be mutually fair. Happily, Judge Barron's words have proved prophetic.

President Kruger Indorsed by the Boers—Major Marchand at Home Again—Remains of Spanish Armada Found at Dunkirk.

London, June 19.—Lord Wolseley, who has been alling, will retire as commander-in-chief of the army next month. His successor will be Lord Roberts, who will be replaced at Dublin by the Duke of Connaught.

A meeting of 4,000 burgers at Parde Kraal indorsed President Kruger's attitude regarding the franchise and deprecated war. There were no disturbances.

Major Marchand arrived yesterday morning at Thoissey, his birthplace, and was received by the mayor and enthusiastic crowds.

His passage to the railway station to the residence of his father was a triumphal procession.

HICKORY WANTED.
Among recent trade inquiries at the high commissioner's office was one for hickory, which would be used in the manufacture of golf sticks; length, 44 inches, by 7 1/2 square.

MORE CABLE TALK.
The Imperial Government, having intimated its willingness to consider whether more assistance might not be given to the peace conference, it is now being arranged between the representatives of the colonists and the Imperial Government will result in a satisfactory settlement of the question.

THE MISSIONARIES SAFE.
Hong Kong, June 19.—The report that Rev. S. H. Phillips, Mrs. Phillips and their three children, who were in the Province of Ngan Hwei, is contradicted, and it is now announced that all are safe.

INTERESTING RELICS.
Excavations which are being made at Dunkirk in connection with the extension of the docks have revealed a wooden warship with antique cannon buried in the sand. It is believed that the vessel belonged to the Spanish Armada, which was fitted out in 1587 for the subjugation of England.

TEN DROWNED.
Bremen, June 19.—In a collision off Friedrichshaven between the German steamer Arthurschaff and the British steamer Mauritius, the former was sunk and ten of her crew drowned.

Rosario, June 19.—The British steamer Castilian Prince (Captain Coull), from London, and Amphitrite (Capt. Maloney), from Sunderland and Buenos Ayres, have been in collision. The Castilian Prince arrived here in a badly damaged condition. The damage to the Amphitrite is unknown.

MAY ABDICATE.
London, June 19.—The Berlin correspondent of the Daily Mail says: In the course of a secret session of the Diet of Sax-Coburg and Gotha yesterday (Saturday), the minister of state, Count von C. P. von Streng, made a confidential communication containing the sensational announcement that Duke Alfred of Sax-Coburg and Gotha, the reigning duke, would probably abdicate this year.

CARLIST GUNS SEIZED.
Madrid, June 19.—Official confirmation has been received here of the seizure of the yacht Firefly at Arachon, a popular summer bathing place, 35 miles by rail southwest of Bordeaux, France, with 4,000 rifles, said to have been for the Carlists. It is claimed the yacht belongs to Lord Ashburton, who is looked upon as being the representative of Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender, in England. A well-known Carlist, who has been interviewed on the subject, said: "Even if 4,000 rifles have been seized, 8,000 have

Why Not in London?

If the G. T. R. Company can meet the trackmen in friendly conference, and, through the good offices of disinterested arbitrators, come to a practically satisfactory settlement, as has now been done, why should the London Street Railway decline to do likewise?

Concerning Payment of the Piper.

The Company's circular to the public uses this phrase: "The one who pays the piper should set the tune." Yes; but it is usually all the better to pay and treat the piper fairly, and in return you will be apt to get a better tune. The Company say, in effect, they have a right to "do what they like with their own," in their relations with employees. They have no such right, except as it goes along with a fair living wage, and with reasonable mutual protection on the part of the men, to the end that they are not discriminated against because they believe that labor to be respected needs some bond of organization. Nobody has any moral claim to do what he likes with what he calls his own, except in so far as he does what is right.

We do not deny that the Street Railway Company's directors are keen men. But consideration often pays better than undue keenness.

Wolseley Retires

already entered the country." The rifles are of the Chassepot pattern. The Firefly arrived at Arachon from England.

SET FREE TO DIE.
London, June 19.—Joe Mullatt, the Irish political prisoner, sentenced to imprisonment for life for attempting to murder a juror who convicted Michael Walsh, was liberated from prison Friday evening. He is in a dying condition.

CANADIANS ARE LOYAL.
London, June 19.—The Earl of Aberdeen, in an address before the Eighty Club in London, said that Canada was thoroughly and unquestionably loyal to the British crown. "Anything like serious contemplation of annexation to the United States," said his lordship, "is absolutely a thing of the past; and the French-Canadians are among the firmest supporters of a direct British connection."

London, June 19.—The Anglo-German treaty bill was read in the Reichstag Saturday for the third time, after a long speech by Count Posadowsky, imperial secretary of state for the interior, in the course of which he explained that only the British colonies which had not differentiated in favor of the movement would receive the most favored nation privileges granted by the bill to England.

CABLE NOTES.
Senator Pierre Waldeck-Rousseau, it is understood, has accepted the task of forming a cabinet conditional upon the co-operation of M. Casimir-Perier and certain sections of the French Chamber of Deputies.

As the outcome of quarrels over the Dreyfus affair, two duels were fought at Brest, France, Friday, between two officers, naval and artillery, and professors at the public schools. One of each professions was wounded.

The British House of Lords has finally dismissed the appeal of the owners of the steamer La Bourgogne from the decision holding the steamer responsible for the collision with the ship Cromartyshire, which resulted in the sinking of La Bourgogne, with great loss of life.

The Sultan of Turkey is decidedly opposed to the arbitration, schemes of the peace conference at The Hague, and several indignant councils of ministers have been held on the subject at the Yildiz palace.

MARK TWAIN

Banqueted by the White Friars Club—Pleasant Words All Around.

London, June 19.—Mark Twain was tendered a dinner by the high-toned White Friars Club in London, at which Dean Hole, Chauncey M. Depew, Sir Edward Clive, who commanded the British fleet at Manila when Admiral Dewey did some things to Admiral Von Diederichs, Max O'Hell, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Beatrice Harraden, and over 200 other celebrities were present.

Mr. Louis Frederic Austin, in proposing Mark Twain's health, said: "What most appeals to men and women in his own calling, and what will ever cause his name to be associated with Sir Walter Scott's in similar circumstances is his noble courage in his old age, and the high honor which he accepts the penalty of disaster and the undaunted toil that now enables him again to lift the colors of victory."

The reply of Mr. Clemens, who was received on rising, with prolonged cheers, was in his happiest vein, causing much laughter and applause.

Mr. Depew, after some light bantering and a tribute to Mark Twain, struck a serious note, which received hearty indorsement. Alluding to the change of sentiment in America produced by Great Britain's attitude and action during the Hispano-American war, he said:

"When Capt. Cogan, of the Raleigh, returned from Manila, he told us about the attitude of Admiral Von Diederichs and Sir Edward Clive, of the Immortalite, and he told us what we all in our hearts already knew—that the European powers, save England, sympathized with our enemies, and that it was only their knowledge that England would support us morally and actively, if necessary, which prevented their interference (applause)—and it was this knowledge which made it possible for me, when addressing a political gathering of 20,000 in America the other day, to take the Stars and Stripes in one hand and the Union Jack in the other and not to hear one dissenting voice in that vast assembly."

A fitting climax was given at this point, when Sir Edward Clive, who had been prevented by another engagement from coming earlier, entered the room and was greeted with three cheers. Sir Edward Clive expressed his admiration for Admiral Dewey and his officers, and for the American sailors generally. He said: "I was very glad to be at Manila and the visit increased my respect for the American character. After all, blood is thicker than water; but I must not go on, for a friend of mine, Capt. Coghlan, got into trouble through talking the other day." (Laughter and cheers.)

From this stage of the proceedings Mark Twain and Capt. Clive shared the honors of the evening, everybody desiring to shake hands with both.

IN A HEALTHY CONDITION

Bradstreet's Weekly Review of Trade in Canada.

Toronto, June 19.—Bradstreet's weekly review of Canadian wholesale trade says: Business at Montreal the past week was fair for this season, while dullness prevailed about the middle of June, there is now a very fair sorting trade being done, and business generally is in a very healthful condition. The jobbing trade at the coast is being sent to the north, and a recent steamer took a cargo valued at $200,000. The Klondike business is much more active now than it has been for a long time. The crops, which have been backward, are doing better now.

Trade at Toronto has been quite active during the week. Retail business through the province has been better since the first of the month, and a big sorting business is being done by the wholesalers at Toronto. Business prospects for the fall trade are very promising. The money market is steady, but there does not appear to be much money available for speculation and this has affected the prices of mining, and, to some extent, the standard stocks during the week.

There has been a good business done at Winnipeg the past week. The demand for general staple goods from Manitoba points at the coast. The addition to the population have already made a difference in the movement in wholesale departments of trade.

BRITISH MILLIONS INVESTED IN ONTARIO.
Chicago, June 19.—A special from Duluth says: "In the last few days there has been closed three deals with British capitalists, amounting to $8,000,000, on the Rainy Lake district of Western Ontario, and large transactions are now pending for the sale of other mines in the region to England."

PROMINENT MASON DEAD.
New York, June 19.—The death is announced of Simeon Fry, sovereign grand commander of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite for the United States. He succumbed to an operation for appendicitis at a hospital in this city. He was 46 years old.

KILLED BY ELECTRICITY.
Owosso, Mich., June 19.—John Youngs, aged 23 years, was killed Saturday night by taking hold of a guy wire, which came in contact with a live wire. Youngs was passing the guy wire, back of the Owosso Electric Company's old power house, and, stooping, took hold of the guy wire, pulling the wire taut, it touched the live wire near the pole it was supporting. The guy took Youngs under the chin. Instantly his body doubled up and he uttered but one exclamation. A friend with him took hold of his body to pull him off, but he too received a terrible shock. A second attempt was more successful, and the unfortunate man fell to the ground. He died a few minutes later.

John Philip Sousa dislikes very much to hear his music "butchered." He recently stopped an organ-grinder on Broadway, New York, and took the crank and finished "grinding out" one of his marches.

THE STRIKE IS SETTLED

Grand Trunk Trackmen Asked to Return to Work.

Manager Hays Meets Their Chairman, Mr. Pole.

Who Receives Satisfactory Assurances—Statements by Mr. Hays and by Mr. Pole.

Quiet at Cleveland—Only One Line Operated Sunday.

Several Strikes Settled and Wages Increased.

Trouble Brewing in Baltimore and Buffalo.

Ottawa, June 19.—Success has crowned the efforts of Mr. James Sutherland, M.P., who spent almost the whole of last week in negotiating a settlement of the Grand Trunk trackmen's strike. The arrangement arrived at is that all of the strikers shall return to work this morning, and that within 30 days Mr. Hays will discuss the whole question with a committee of five men representing the trackmen. None of the strikers is to be refused employment unless he has been guilty of acts of violence or of having used menacing language towards the new men or the foremen and others who refused to go out. Mr. Pole agreed that this was fair and was more than satisfied when Mr. Hays promised that the case of any man whose services may be dispensed with will be heard, either by the superintendent or by Mr. Hays himself. The company will furnish free transportation in all such cases. In addition to the question of wages there are other matters to be dealt with, such as pay for overtime, and it is probable that the conference between Mr. Hays and the five representatives of the trackmen will be protracted. The prime minister, when he received news of the settlement was greatly pleased. In his interviews with the executive of the Grand Trunk Association last week, Mr. Wilfrid Laurier advised them to assume, in so far as possible, a conciliatory attitude, and in his two letters to General Manager Hays, the prime minister laid great stress on the necessity of the company's aiming at an early accommodation that would restore confidence to the travelling public. While the two parties to the difficulty are deserving of praise for the moderation and good sense displayed, it is equally the fact that to the intervention of the first minister and his earnest efforts to bring the trouble to an end the present settlement is large ascribable.

THE EXECUTIVE'S STATEMENT.
Montreal, June 19.—The strike of the G. T. R. trackmen is over. Mr. James Sutherland, M.P., came down from Ottawa Saturday and as a result of his visit, Mr. Pole, the chairman of the trackmen's committee, was requested to call on the general manager, Mr. Hays, which he did about 6 o'clock. After some discussion, Mr. Pole agreed to call the strike off, and yesterday gave out the following statement: "An amicable arrangement has been made between the company and the men. All the men are to resume work tomorrow morning, June 19. Certain details which are not finally closed will be adjusted in 30 days between the G. T. R. management and a committee of the trackmen." When asked what the terms were, Mr. Pole declined to make any further statement. It was pointed out it was understood before that all the men were to go back to work, and he was asked what the difference was. "Oh," he replied, "there is a great deal of difference."

"How did you come to call upon Mr. Hays?"

"We have been waiting all along for an opportunity."

"Is the position due to the intervention of Mr. Sutherland?"

"It is due principally to the efforts of Mr. Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Sutherland."

"You must not forget," added Mr. Lowe, the organizer, "that it is due also to the strength of our organization. We would never be where we are today if the men had not stood by each other. When the C. P. R. telegraphers were on strike for some time and there seemed no prospect of settlement, the chairman of the engineers told Mr. Tait that they would not run the engines unless their safety was assured by the return of the telegraphers, and the strike was soon ended. But in our case we reached the position we have without assistance from any other organization. That shows the strength of our union. I must also say that we were assisted by public sympathy."

"We don't want to call it a victory," said Mr. Pole, "and I don't think Mr. Hays does. There was a good deal of compromise on both sides."

MR. HAYS INTERVIEWED.
Mr. Hays, the general manager, when seen last night, said: "The men have agreed to call the strike off."

"What are the terms?"
"Well," said Mr. Hays, "the company is where it always was. It could not deal with the men who were not in its employ. They have agreed to go back to work, and I have promised to see their committees within 30 days, or 40 days at the outside, and arrange the question of wages."

"But was there not a hitch before over taking back men?"

"Really," said Mr. Hays, "I never could understand what the difficulty was. They could not go back without making application. Two thousand men could not walk on to the tracks and resume work without asking the foremen."

"Will a written application be necessary?"

"No," replied Mr. Hays. "They simply ask the foreman for their keys or tools, as the case may be. I did not say anything about a written application before. It may have been thought necessary in some cases, where it was advisable to inquire into the conduct of the applicants. But now the men resume work except those who have been guilty of some violence against the company."

"What becomes of those now at work?"

"They will go on the extra gangs," replied Mr. Hays. "You know that the season for track work is short, and in summer we double up the gangs, while in winter we cut the number down to the lowest possible limit."

Mr. Hays added that he had written a letter to the chairman of the trackmen, substantially embodying the above statement, in receipt of which the strike was called off.

Others Strikes.

TWO STRIKES SETTLED.

New York, June 19.—Ten of the principal manufacturers of children's clothing signed an agreement with the union and gave satisfactory security to pay the union scale of wages. It is said today the strike will be over by evening.

Hamilton, June 19.—It is understood that the strike of the iron and ore handlers at the smelting works is over, and the men will return to work on the old day system today.

Peterborough will return to work today.

WAGES TO BE ADVANCED.

Pittsburgh, June 19.—As a result of the four days' conference between the representatives of the manufacturers and the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers the wages of 25,000 iron and steel workers throughout the country will be advanced after July 1 for one year. This is a virtual restoration of the wages of 1903. The advance to rollers will be 11 per cent; to shearmen about 11 per cent, and to day hands 15 per cent.

BIG INCREASE.

Springfield, Ill., June 19.—The force of men at the Springfield Iron Works will be increased from 10 to 20 per cent.

CLEVELAND QUIET.

Cleveland, June 19.—There was no new developments in the strike of the street railway men today. The company made no attempt to operate cars except on the Euclid Avenue line. The police afforded ample protection and the cars were run on schedule time. It is expected that an attempt will be made tomorrow morning to resume operations on some of the other lines.

The strikers are preparing for a big demonstration tomorrow evening. A meeting is to be held in the afternoon, at which representatives of all the labor unions are expected to be present. The meeting will arrange for a parade to take place in the evening. It is anticipated that between 10,000 and 20,000 union workmen will be in line, and there will be several bands in the procession. The object of the demonstration will be to influence the members of the city council and 100 representatives of organized labor will be selected to attend the meeting of that body and request the passage of an ordinance introduced a week ago which requires that all motor cars should have had at least 20 days' experience in running cars in Cleveland before they can be employed in this city. The present ordinance on that subject requires ten days' experience, but it may be had.

The representatives of labor will also ask that the company be required to comply with the terms of its charter or forfeit its franchise.

The strike was the subject of many of the sermons delivered by Cleveland ministers today, and some of the clergymen took the ground that the strikers had made extreme demands of the company.

BIG STRIKES THREATENED.

Baltimore, June 19.—Two thousand employees of the marine department, Maryland Steel Company, held a meeting yesterday and determined to strike at the end of seven days if their demands for a nine-hour day and weekly payments were not acceded to by the company.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 19.—A secret meeting of representatives from the Coal Heavers' Union, the ore handlers, the elevator men, marine firemen, freight handlers and grain shovellers was held tonight to consider the next step to be taken in an endeavor to force the Erie Railroad Company to grant the demand of their freight handlers for an increase of wages. This proposition will be submitted to the Erie Company by a committee led by Mr. Hays.

Should the company again refuse to grant the increase, a general strike of all men employed along the docks is likely.

PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY

Troubles in India—Rev. Dr. Jordan's Sermon.

Hamilton, June 19.—The discussion of personal disputes in public is always to be deplored, even where the quarrel relates to far deeper regret when the disputants are parties engaged in religious work, and the ventilation takes place in an ecclesiastical court. The general assembly Saturday morning listened with deep interest to the recital of difference between the Presbytery of Indiana—consisting of Revs. N. H. Russell, F. H. Russell and W. A. Wilson and others—on the one hand, and Rev. J. Wilkie, President of Indiana College, on the other. The point at issue was the strength of the assembly to condemn those laboring to convert the heathen in a far-off mission field was accented by the character of Mr. Wilkie's reply to the complaints formulated by the Presbytery of Indiana, which relate to the higher education given in connection with Indiana College, and the expense of maintaining that institution. Rev. Mr. Wilkie is a short, wiry-looking man, with dark hair and beard, and a sallow countenance. He has the face and manner of an enthusiast. His look is somber, but his burning glance, quick, nervous gesture and intense earnestness all denote the strength of his convictions. Rev. Mr. Wilkie impressed the assembly by his evident religious fervor, and up to a certain point he carried his audience with him. Toward the close of his statement, however, he made some remarks of a personal nature, which most of the assembly felt would have been better left unsaid, and which afterwards caused him to be rather severely criticised. Mr. Wilkie's worthy friends could not help thinking he had seriously prejudiced his case by the personal tone of his remarks, and the discussion of the matter had barely begun, only the preliminary statements, pro and con, having been presented, when the hour for adjournment arrived. President Forrest, of Halifax, however, offered a resolution in favor of sending a commission of inquiry to Indiana, and noting the members of the assembly to lay the resolution over until next assembly. The resolution and amendment stand for discussion some time during the present week.

THE ASSEMBLY'S SERVICES.

Special services were held at Central Church yesterday in connection with the General Assembly, and the pulpits of other churches in the city were occupied by visiting clergy. At the morning service in Central Church Rev. Dr. Jordan of St. Catharines, presided. The reverend gentleman's text was Isaiah vi, 5, and the subject was "The vision of the king, or the secret of a great life." The preacher described the early life of the prophet, and the influence he exerted during his own time and the ages that have intervened. The vision spoken of in the text, he said, was the only one of which Isaiah gave a clear and full description. It came to him in his early life, and affected all his after years. The preacher likened it to Paul's vision on his way to Damascus. The two visions were of such high importance because, in the one, he saw the revelation of God, and in the other, the vision of Jesus marked the beginning of a life work which was to have great and lasting influence in the church of God. It was a vision and a revelation, a conversion and a call. "The deep secrets of life," said the preacher, "are difficult to tell. The finest drapery of mysticisms seems to coarse to express the meaning. Here surely the Divine Spirit has guided the prophet in his delicate task so that the truth is set forth in just, reverent tones. The central fact is the vision of God as King. You say that you are a man, and we shall see. This man did not live. In a very deep sense he died. In that hour the prophet died the death which leads to religious life. All self-interest was swallowed up. The selfish man was practically killed. The vision of God kills, that it may make life. The fire which brings the divine revelation burns up much of the dross of human pride and passion. That which made the hero of Isaiah and gave life to the purest religion of his day was the force which also nerved their fathers to cast out superstition and fight for liberty—the vision of a God who is supreme, who is really and truly God, through nature, who is guide of nations, and who does not disdain the cry of the penitent seeking soul. It brought a true sight of self. No man saw rightly except in the light of God's presence. The knowledge of another life placed the things of this world in their proper proportions. There was an undoing of a man which was the making of him. The man who was brought to his knees by the weight of privilege, the sense of responsibility should rise up faithful and strong. One of the greatest needs today was a deeper revelation. This we could not learn by rote, and no mere surface ceremony could supply the lack. It could only come from that consuming fire of God's presence which shook the soul to its center, and showed that false pride and vain ambition were foolish things. Then our worship would not be a display of empty ritual, but a real quickening power. Less of our shallow self-sufficiency, less of flippant and religious performance, more sense of being undone and utterly helpless in the presence of the King. Was not this our everlasting need? Forgiveness and the cleansing that comes with it are not the end of religious life, but the beginning. To the great words 'Thy sins are forgiven,' our Lord added the clear call, 'Follow Me.' God needed men to speak for him. Some would say this is the cry of their self-conceit—that they could serve God better by silence than babbling speech. But it was precisely the man who had grasped most completely the thought of his own helplessness and unworthiness who realized this truth in all its significance. The life of heaven was longing to break through with beneficent cleansing power into the life of man, and it could only find its way effectively through the ministry of faithful souls. A vision which was interwoven with such clear, strong convictions was sure to prove its power in storm and stress of life. Through all the conflicts and changes Isaiah came to see one thing with ever greater clearness, even this—that though judgment may come, and the present order of things be destroyed, religion could not die. The King was always present, and the kingdom was ever coming. The kingdom as it came revealed impurity and broke down sham.

THE ARMY CANTEN

Cannot Be Operated in Pennsylvania Without a License.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 19.—Judge Simonton, in the county court, decided that an army canteen for the sale of liquor to soldiers cannot be carried on without a regular license from the courts. This decision was made in the case of two men who were arrested on complaint of the Anti-Saloon League of the state for maintaining a canteen at Camp Meade.

Counsel for the defendants argued that they were acting under instructions of the commandant of the camp, who was acting under authority of military law.

Judge Simonton said that he did not recognize such a law when in conflict with the law of the state; that the United States had no authority to issue a license to sell liquor in the states. He directed the jury to find a verdict of guilty and then suspend sentence. At the same time he notified all concerned that if there were any more violations of the law, he would sentence them all. The commandant of the camp promised that the canteen would be suppressed.

SADIE HOLT

Had Poison in Her Stomach—Believed That the Young Woman Did Not Commit Suicide.

Leamington, June 19.—The inquest on the body of Sadie Holt was begun by Coroner Chamberlain at 11 o'clock. There were six witnesses examined, but little evidence was given except to the young woman's condition when found unconscious in her room. Drs. Ede, of Leamington, and McCornick, of Wexley, found sufficient poison in her stomach to cause death. The stomach was much inflamed, more so than would have been produced in a few hours by an overdose of the poison found in the stomach, which would make it appear that she had been taking some irritant poison for some time.

There is no one but who believes that the poisoning was accidental. The girl had been in such good spirits, and on retiring had laid out her wearing apparel for next day.

The parents are prostrated with grief, and the sympathy of the community goes out to them.

VERDICT FOR $1,000

The Defendant Sold Whisky to a Man Who Was Killed.

Corunna, Mich., June 19.—The damage suit of Flora Reynolds vs. Otto Hein ended in a judgment for $1,000. Hein is charged with selling whisky to Reynolds, husband of the girl on which he was killed by a Grand Trunk train.

The defense attempted to prove that Reynolds was drunk when he entered Hein's saloon, and that when he called for whisky he should have been given ale. Kilpatrick and Pierpont represented the plaintiff.

THE STRIKE IS SETTLED

Grand Trunk Trackmen Asked to Return to Work.

Manager Hays Meets Their Chairman, Mr. Pole,

Who Receives Satisfactory Assurances—Statements by Mr. Hays and by Mr. Pole.

Quiet at Cleveland—Only One Line Operated Sunday.

Several Strikes Settled and Wages Increased.

Trouble Brewing in Baltimore and Buffalo.

Ottawa, June 19.—Success has crowned the efforts of Mr. James Sutherland, M.P., who spent almost the whole of last week in negotiating a settlement of the Grand Trunk trackmen's strike. The arrangement arrived at is that all of the strikers shall return to work this morning, and that within 30 days Mr. Hays will discuss the whole question with a committee of five men representing the trackmen. None of the strikers is to be refused employment unless he has been guilty of acts of violence or of having used menacing language towards the new men or the foremen and others who refused to go to work. Mr. Pole agreed that this was fair, and was more than satisfied when Mr. Hays promised that the case of any man whose services may be dispensed with will be heard, either by the superintendent or by Mr. Hays himself. The company will furnish free transportation in all such cases. In addition to the question of wages there are other matters to be dealt with, such as pay for overtime, and it is probable that the conference between Mr. Hays and the five representatives of the trackmen will be protracted. The prime minister, when he received news of the settlement was greatly pleased. In his interviews with the executive of the trackmen's Association last week, Sir Wilfrid Laurier advised them to assume, in so far as possible, a conciliatory attitude, and in his two letters to General Manager Hays, the prime minister laid great stress on the necessity of the company's aiming at an early accommodation that would restore confidence to the travelling public. While the two parties to the difficulty are deserving of praise for the moderation and good sense displayed, it is equally the fact that to the intervention of the first minister and his earnest efforts to bring the trouble to an end the present settlement is large ascribable.

THE EXECUTIVE'S STATEMENT.
Montreal, June 19.—The strike of the G. T. R. trackmen is over. Mr. James Sutherland, M.P., came down from Ottawa Saturday and as a result of his visit, Mr. Pole, the chairman of the trackmen's committee, was requested to call on the general manager, Mr. Hays, which he did about 6 o'clock. After some discussion, Mr. Pole agreed to call the strike off, and yesterday gave out the following statement: "An amicable arrangement has been made between the company and the men. All the men are to resume work tomorrow morning. June 19. Certain details which are not finally closed will be adjusted in 30 days between the G. T. R. management and a committee of the trackmen." When asked what the terms were, Mr. Pole declined to make any further statement. It was pointed out it was understood before that all the men were to go back to work, and he was asked what the difference was. "Oh," he replied, "there is a great deal of difference."

"How did you come to call upon Mr. Hays?"
"We have been waiting all along for an opportunity."
"Is the position due to the intervention of Mr. Sutherland?"
"It is due principally to the efforts of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Sutherland."
"You must not forget," added Mr. Lowe, the organizer, "that it is due also to the strength of our organization. We would never be where we are today if the men had not stood by each other. When the C. P. R. telegraphers were on strike for some time and there seemed no prospect of settlement, the chairman of the engineers told Mr. Tait that they would not run the engines unless their safety was assured by the return of the telegraphers, and the strike was soon ended. But in our case we reached the position we have without assistance from any other organization. That shows the strength of our union. I must also say that we were assisted by public sympathy."

"We don't want to call it a victory," said Mr. Pole, "and I don't think Mr. Hays does. There was a good deal of compromise on both sides."

MR. HAYS INTERVIEWED.
Mr. Hays, the general manager, when seen last night, said: "The men have agreed to call the strike off." "What are the terms?" "Well," said Mr. Hays, "the company is where it always was. It could not deal with the men who were not in its employ. They have agreed to go back to work, and I have promised to see their committee within 30 days, or 40 days at the outside, and arrange the question of wages." "But was there not a hitch before over taking back men?" "Really," said Mr. Hays, "I never could understand what the difficulty was. They could not go back without making application. Two thousand men could not walk on to the tracks and resume work without asking the foremen." "Will a written application be necessary?" "No," replied Mr. Hays. "They simply ask the foreman for their keys or tools, as the case may be. I did not know anything about a written application before. It may have been thought necessary in some cases, where it was advisable to inquire into the conduct of the applicants. But now all the men resume work except those who have been guilty of some violence against the company." "What becomes of those now at work?" "They will go on the extra gangs," replied Mr. Hays. "You know that the season for track work is short, and in summer we double up the gangs, while in winter we cut the number down to the lowest possible limit." Mr. Hays added that he had written a letter to the chairman of the trackmen, substantially embodying the above statement, in receipt of which the strike was called off.

It could only come from the heart, the fire of God's presence which should reach to its center, and showed that false pride and vain ambition were foolish things. Then our worship would not be a display of entertainment, but a real quickening power. Less of our shallow self-sufficiency, less of flippant and religious performance, more sense of being undone and utterly helpless in the presence of the King. Was not this our everlasting need? Forgiveness and the cleansing there are some things in this world that no man is able to find out, but it's different with a woman. The sexton makes a grave mistake when he digs it in the wrong lot. Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done it will do again."

cisely the man who had grasped most completely the thought of his own helplessness and unworthiness who realized this truth in all its significance. The life of heaven was longing to break through with beneficent cleansing power into the life of man, and it could only find its way effectively through the ministry of faithful souls. A vision which was interwoven with such clear, strong convictions was sure to prove its power in storm and stress of life. Through all the conflicts and changes Isaiah came to see one thing with ever greater clearness, even this—that though judgment may come, and the present order of things be destroyed, religion could not die. The King was always present and the kingdom was ever coming. The kingdom as it came revealed impurity and broke down sham.

THE ARMY CANTEN

Cannot Be Operated in Pennsylvania Without a License.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 19.—Judge Simonon, in the county court, decided that an army canteen for the sale of liquor to soldiers cannot be carried on without a regular license from the courts. This decision was made in the case of two men who were arrested on the complaint of the Anti-Saloon League of the state for maintaining a canteen at Camp Meade.

Counsel for the defendants argued that they were acting under instructions of the commandant of the camp, who was acting under authority of military law.

Judge Simonon said that he did not recognize such a law when in conflict with the law of the state; that the United States had no authority to issue a license to sell liquor in the states. He directed the jury to find a verdict of guilty and then suspend sentence. At the same time he notified all concerned that if there were any more violations of the law he would sentence them all. The commandant of the camp promised that the canteen would be suppressed.

SADIE HOLT

Had Poison in Her Stomach—Believed That the Young Woman Did Not Commit Suicide.

Leamington, June 19.—The inquest on the body of Sadie Holt was begun by Coroner Chamberlain at Wheatley. There were six witnesses examined, but little evidence was given except to the young woman's condition when found unconscious in her room. Drs. Ede, of Leamington, and McCormick, of Wheatley, found sufficient poison in her stomach to cause death. The stomach was much inflamed, more so than would have been produced in a few hours by an overdose of the poison found in the stomach, which would make it appear that she had been taking some irritant poison for some time.

There is no one but who believes that the poisoning was accidental. The girl had been in such good spirits, and on retiring had laid out her wearing apparel for next day. The parents are prostrated with grief, and the sympathy of the community goes out to them.

VERDICT FOR $1,000

The Defendant Sold Whisky to a Man Who Was Killed.

Corunna, Mich., June 19.—The damage suit of Flora Reynolds vs. Otto Hein ended in a judgment for $1,000. Hein is charged with selling whisky to Mrs. Reynolds' husband on the night of his death, which was killed by a Grand Trunk train.

The defense attempted to prove that Reynolds was drunk when he entered Hein's saloon, and that when he called for whisky there he was given gin-fizz. Kilpatrick and Pierpont represented the plaintiff.

Newfoundland Fisheries Dispute To Be Brought to an Issue.

St. John's, Nfld., June 19.—It is understood here that the coming visit of Admiral Redford with the British warships Crescent, Prosperine and Quail to this port, where he will meet Commodore Giffard's squadron, composed of Comus, Alert, Buzzard and Columbine, is intended as a demonstration against the French squadron, consisting of the Isly, Trode and Fulton, in view of the determination of the British Government to bring the fishery dispute to an issue this season.

Wearry of Experimenting

With salves, suppositories and ointments, and dreading a surgical operation, scores and hundreds have turned to Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment and have found in it an absolute cure for piles. The first application brings relief from the terrible itching, and it is very seldom that more than one box is required to effect a permanent cure. When a bachelor and a spinster studiously avoid matrimony it is another case of "two souls with but a single thought."

A DINNER PILL—Many persons suffer excruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food partaken of is like a ball of lead upon the stomach, and instead of being a healing nutriment, it becomes a poison to the system. Dr. Parmedee's Vegetable Pills are wonderful correctives of such troubles. They correct acidity, open the secretions and convey the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the medicine to take if troubled with indigestion.

The man who gets intoxicated at night has plenty of time for sober reflection next morning.

THERE is not a more dangerous class of disorders than those which affect the breathing organs. Nullify this danger with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil—a pulmonary tic, of acknowledged efficacy. It cures soreness and lameness when applied externally, as well as swelled neck and crick in the back; and, as an inward specific, possesses most substantial results.

There was a stage in Saturday's game at Tecumseh Park when it looked as though the topsyturvy fate which left Guelph whitewash the Hams and the Bains make monkeys of the Saints, would let the Reds do the hitherto impossible trick of beating the Cockneys. It was in the third inning, when Reid trotted around to the third bag while Howell was scrambling under the fence after the ball, and tallied a moment later on Snyder's single to Mohler. Snyder scored second, went to third on Nordyke's out at first, and came in on Royce's double, who also tallied on Conklin's single. Conklin struck out, retiring the side.

The pace was too swift to last. After the locals had tallied a couple of runs to the good in the fourth, the visitors seemed to lose hope. The run in the sixth was a joint gift by Mohler and Howell. After two men were out, Conklin hit a grounder to Mohler, who flied it sharply, and then, with plenty of time, threw far wide of Schwartz at first. Eschbitt in the fifth, careless in handling Ziegler's grounder, and Conklin tallied. But for these the Londoners would have had an errorless game. The Cockneys got a good start. Safe hits to the outfield by Mohler, Schwartz and Eschbitt in succession allowed the two former to tally. At the end of the third, however, the Reds were two runs ahead. The fourth inning changed all that. Jones, who was in hard luck on Saturday, went out at first. Cope got a base on balls. Frank was hit by a pitched ball, and walked. Lohman singled to right field, scoring Cope. Frank tallied on a passed ball; Selver hit to left field, bringing in Lohman, and tallied himself on Howell's out at first and Ziegler's bad throw to first of Mohler's grounder. Schwartz flew out to Crawford, and the side was retired, but four runs had been scored. Bases on balls to Babbitt and Cope in the fifth, converted into runs by means of Wagner's bad throw to first, Frank's sacrifice and Lohman's long hit to center. In the sixth Mohler reached first on a scientific bunt just in front of the plate, reached second on a wild pitch, stole third and tallied on Babbitt's hit to center. One of the most remarkable features of the game was the fact that Howell neither got a base on balls nor was hit by a pitched ball. Score:

WOODSTOCK WINS AT LAST. St. Thomas, June 17.—The Woodstock baseball team played in professional style today, and won a well-contested game from St. Thomas. Pears pitched a nice game and would have won it had the locals been able to do anything with Thompson's shots. The latter kept the home team down to five hits and seemed to be an enigma to the locals, Roder being the only one to find him to any extent, he getting three of the five hits. The St. Thomas team fell down on easy plays, and batted like wooden men, playing listlessly. Score:

Hamilton, June 17.—A crowd of 1,000 or 1,200 saw Hamilton play a game ball today that was not a redeeming feature. FOR THE FANS. The Cockneys will spend the week away from home, playing two days each at Chatham, St. Thomas and Hamilton, in the order named.

The Buffalo Express in speaking of Wednesday's game says: Joe Knight arrived from St. Thomas in the morning and took up his position in left field, while Householder went to the bench and will be a general utility man hereafter. Knight had no opportunity in the field, all the hitters fighting shy from sending him any flies, knowing his appetite for eating up anything in that territory. He might have saved the game at that had he been left to choose his own position, but he was instructed to play in far too close and the result was that the ball that won the game was sent beyond his reach and is the whole secret of this sad tale. Joe made a hit.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review: The Stratford Beacon says that the Thins are filling Stratford's place well. This is the unkindest cut of all.

The Bains are getting new suits and will probably wear them for the first time today (Friday).

Freeman is now the chief long-distance slugger of the National League, with 67 extra bases. Lafolse follows him closely and "Ducky" Holmes is third.

Pat Cowan will be given a trial on the Bains team this week. He will be on the team today, when the doughty "Hams" run up against the Woodstock team.

The Chatham's new pitcher, halls from Columbus, Ohio. He is a good one.

Guelph Mercury and Advertiser: London's games are won, not by heavy batting, but by team work. Le Reid won't do it at third, unless his work improves at once. A little more jolly in the team, boys, is what is wanted. Warner has no superiors in the league as a fielding third baseman. Johnston pitched a good game.

The hitting in the sixth, for London, was made after the side should have been retired.

RACING IN LONDON.

Racing men throughout the province will be pleased to learn that the sport is again to be revived in London during the coming season, says Cycling. Mr. James McCormick, has leased the Tecumseh Park track, and intends to promote several local and open meets in the near future. "Jim," as he is familiarly known among the bicycle fraternity, will be remembered as a very active member of the London Bicycle Club some three years ago, the club at that time being one of the largest and most influential organizations in the W. A., being chairman of the racing board for two seasons, and acting as secretary for several of London's largest and most successful meets, he became known as one of the best race promoters on the Canadian circuit. The track at Tecumseh Park is now being put in the best possible condition and no labor or expense will be spared to make it one of the fastest in Canada. The grand stand accommodation and training quarters are very extensive, the seating capacity of the stands being 8,000 people; the track is one-third mile and surrounds the baseball diamond of the London club of the Canadian League. The grounds are situated just across the river, very centrally located, and one of the prettiest sporting parks in Canada. Good value prizes will be guaranteed for every meet, and racing men throughout the province will do well to keep an eye open for London, as they will be sure of being well treated.

SADDLE SQUEAKS. The bicycle repairman is now in the same class with the ice man and the plumber.

Tom Linton, the great Welsh middle-distance rider and middle-distance champion of France and all of Europe, will return to America next month.

A small piece of paper, brown pre-ferred in color, with a piece of rag, will make an emergency repair for a puncture. After solution the whole over the puncture.

A British judge has given judgment for £12 to a rider that brought a pair of wheels for that amount and found them defective. If American purchasers of poor wheels were to go to law to recover, dangerous bicycles would soon be a thing of the past.

Jimmy Michael has been signed by a prominent horseman and will take his position as a jockey Aug. 1, a position he has been working for ever since he started his work on the horse track. Michael is preparing himself carefully and will be ready to fill the responsible position for a term of years.

THE COLORADO athletic association has offered a $25,000 purse for a 25-round contest between Bob Fitzsimmons and "Kid" McCoy. The proposed fight is to be for the middle-weight championship of the world. McCoy has wired his acceptance. In case Fitzsimmons agrees to the Denver contest, McCoy says his match with Joe Chynowski will be called off.

A match was arranged Saturday afternoon for a 25-round bout between Jim Jeffries and Tom Sharkey, to take place at the Casino of October before the club offering the largest purse.

SEAFOOTH, Ont., June 19.—The Western Ontario Football Association match played here Friday afternoon between the Berlin Rangers and Seafooth Hurons, was won by Berlin, two goals to one. This gives Berlin the senior championship of the province for the spring season of 1899.

THE SUBURBAN HANDICAP. New York, June 17.—Imp, the western mare, won the suburban handicap at Sheephead Bay this afternoon, in record-breaking time for the great race of 2:05 1/4. The former record was 2:06 1/4, made by Ramapo in 1894. Bannockburn finished second, and Seaton third. Banister, the favorite, and winner of the Brooklyn, was practically left at the post. Fully 25,000 persons saw the race. It took eleven trials and a lot of time to get the horses away with a good start. Summary:

Suburban handicap, $10,000, 1 1/4 miles—Imp won by two lengths, Bannock second by three lengths, Warrenton third, by a neck, Seaton fourth, by a neck, Banister fifth, by a neck, and finished as named.

PRINCIPAL AND PUPIL

Eloped From Charlotte and Married at Windsor—Bride a Girl of 15—The Groom 11 Years Older.

Charlotte, Mich., June 12.—As a sensational center this city will, if the present keeps up, bid for championship honors. The announcement that Principal Charles Andrus, of the Charlotte High School, had eloped with Miss Thelma Murray, the 15-year-old daughter of Albert Murray, a leading merchant and a highly respected citizen, caused a genuine surprise.

The pair left the Murray home Friday night, a few moments before the east-bound Michigan Central train. The parents did not know of the departure until Mr. Murray received a telegram from Mr. Andrus, dated at Eaton Rapids depot, to the effect that he was suddenly called there, and that Maude was with him, at which time they would stop and that they would return in the morning.

The parents' suspicions were aroused, and a member of the family drove to Eaton Rapids, but he was informed that the pair did not stop there. Sheriff Shepard was notified and telegrams were sent to points where they were liable to stop, to hold them. Mr. Murray, thinking them in Detroit, went there Saturday morning. They were not located until about 10 o'clock, when the following telegram was received, dated at the Windsor ferry office:

"We are married. Hope you will forgive us. Will write. Charlie and Maude."

Mr. Andrus has been paying marked attention to Miss Murray for some time, and his actions have been the cause of much comment. Mr. Murray arrived home Saturday night, but did not see them at Detroit. The father refuses to say anything for publication. Mr. Andrus is 26 years old, and came here from Hastings, accepting a position as teacher of Greek and Latin in the public schools. He was a graduate of the University of Michigan and was highly recommended. He was not retained for the coming year, as his salary was not known.

The bride, Miss Thelma Murray, arrived home Saturday night, but did not see them at Detroit. The father refuses to say anything for publication. Mr. Andrus is 26 years old, and came here from Hastings, accepting a position as teacher of Greek and Latin in the public schools. He was a graduate of the University of Michigan and was highly recommended. He was not retained for the coming year, as his salary was not known.

Principal Andrus and Miss Murray were married in Windsor Saturday morning by Rev. Canon Hinks, of All Saints' Episcopal Church. They crossed from Detroit early in the morning, and at nine o'clock obtained a license from George E. Copeland. The bride gave her age as 18, and the bridegroom as 26. They went immediately to the residence of Canon Hinks, and in a few moments the nuptial knot had been tied.

Before going to Windsor Mr. Andrus telegraphed the bride's parents asking for their forgiveness, and stating the couple were going to be married. This elicited a telegram from the bride's father instructing the police not to molest the couple.

Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co. Takes a Front Rank Among the Great Medicine Concerns of the World—Bright Prospects for the Future.

When the American business of the Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Company, along with the private formulae of Dr. Chase, were bought up by Messrs. Edman, Bates & Co., some years ago, the attention of all Canada was attracted to the enterprise of this prosperous Canadian firm, which has made such a phenomenal success with Dr. Chase's Remedies in Canada.

Their new venture across the border has proved itself a wise investment, and has already assumed such vast proportions as to warrant the formation of a company with large capital to enter into competition with the largest proprietary medicine concerns of the United States. To this end the Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Company, of Buffalo, N. Y., has been formed, having a capital of $100,000, and with ample funds to spend large sums in advertising these world-famous remedies.

Mr. Ira Bates has taken the management of the Buffalo office, and Mr. W. J. Edman remains in Toronto as manager of the Canadian business.

The same comprehensive advertising policy which has won for this company the distinction of being the most progressive and up-to-date advertisers in Canada, has been adopted in the United States. The advertising appropriations for the first year will amount to from $40,000 to $50,000, and this will be confined almost exclusively to the States of New York and Michigan. Large space will be used in the leading newspapers, and booklets and other advertising matter will be liberally distributed.

People everywhere recognize the difference between these great private prescriptions of Dr. A. W. Chase and the patent medicines made and sold by the inexperienced. Eminent physicians endorse and recommend Dr. Chase's family remedies as the best treatment for the world affords for the diseases for which they are recommended.

Drugs and these celebrated remedies the easiest in the world to sell, because they are so universally successful and because their merits are heralded abroad with the most liberal and extensive advertising.

To the very ends of the earth Dr. Chase's remedies are known and appreciated. Only a few weeks since a shipment was made to England, and in the near future there will be opened branches in Australia and Southern Africa to meet the demand aroused for these remedies by the immense circulation of Dr. Chase's famous Recipe Book in those far-off countries.

The enormous sale which Dr. Chase's remedies have already acquired is sufficient guarantee that their merits have not been made known to the people to insure their immediate popularity. With the facilities of unlimited capital these preparations will be introduced into all parts of the world, and just success, there is every reason to believe that the Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Company will soon take its place among the greatest medicine concerns on the continent.

Discussed by Cable Correspondents--The Transvaal Situation--A Warning to Kruger--Reasons for British Intervention.

The Voice of Chamberlain the Voice of England--National Crisis Approaching in Russia--Religious Polemics Revived in England--American Travel to Europe at High Water Mark.

London, June 19.—Mr. Henry Norman, in his cable letter, dwells at great length upon the Transvaal situation. In part, he says: The unexpected publication on Thursday of Sir Alfred Milner's long dispatch on May 4, every word cabled as of extreme urgency, added enormously to the gravity of the situation in the Transvaal. Hitherto the high commissioner has maintained a scrupulously cautious attitude, and has even subjected himself to hostile criticism by throwing cold water upon the acts of the Uitlander population in the Transvaal. Now he puts the whole case logically, convincingly and even passionately.

WORSE THAN SUPPOSED. The situation is worse, it appears, than the country had supposed. For example, as I cabled last week, we all believed the shooting of Edgar was an incident in a drunken brawl. Now we learn from Sir Alfred Milner's reply to High Commissioner Kruger, that the Boer police broke into the house of Edgar, a respectable British workman, in the middle of the night, to arrest him, without a warrant, for an alleged offense committed some time previously. When he resisted this illegal arrest they shot him dead, and a Boer judge and jury approved their action. Another example of the Boer methods is the case of Mrs. Appleby, the wife of a Wesleyan missionary, who had attacked the illicit drink traffic. No police action followed this outrage. Again, Field Cornet Lombard entered the houses of a number of colored British subjects at night, without a warrant, dragged them from their beds had the men beaten and kicked, and treated the women with such cruelty that one was prematurely confined, and a child died of fright. As a consequence of the pressure brought to bear, Lombard was suspended, but subsequently was reinstated.

REASONS FOR INTERVENTION. The case for intervention, Sir Alfred Milner says, is overwhelming. He adds: The spectacle of thousands of British subjects kept permanently in the position of Helots, constantly chafing under undoubted grievances, and calling vainly on her Majesty's Government for redress, does steadily undermine the influence and reputation of Great Britain and the respect for the British Government within the Queen's dominions. The seriousness of the crisis is shown by the fact of the British Government publishing such a dispatch as this, which, from another point of view, is also unprecedented. Sir Alfred Milner, as high commissioner for South Africa, is an independent official, responsible only to the British Government, but as the governor of Cape Colony, he is supposed, by the constitutional theory, to act upon the advice of his government, which at the present moment is Afrikaner or English-speaking Dutch. Yet in this dispatch he states that language is frequently used which seems to imply that the Dutch have some superior right, even in this colony, to their fellow-citizens of English birth.

BRITISH EXASPERATION. Thousands of men, peaceably disposed, and, if left alone, perfectly satisfied with their position as British subjects, are being drawn into the disaffection, and there is a corresponding exasperation on the side of the British. Already members of the Cape ministry are protesting against this implication of disloyalty, and it is quite possible that Sir Alfred Milner's words. It is impossible to exaggerate the seriousness of such an incident in a British colony. Were Sir Alfred an excitable or inexperienced man, his recall would be inevitable. He is, however, the exact contrary, and commands profound and universal respect and confidence. Therefore, the Saturday Review is well advised when it says that the Transvaal question can be settled now in only three ways: First, by the sacrifice of Sir Alfred Milner; second, the immediate admission of a large number of uitlanders to the franchise; or, third, by the armed intervention of Great Britain. This first is inconceivable; the second is improbable; and the third, the absence of the other two, is certain.

WAR EXPECTED. The London papers have warned their war correspondents to be ready to start for the Cape, and at Lloyd's great insurance center 12½ per cent of assurance against war within three months has been paid by members of the stock exchange, and 2 per cent on the insurance of buildings in Johannesburg for three months. Nevertheless, I repeat what I said last week, that war is not in sight. Already President Kruger has begun to move.

KRUGER MOVES. He now denies that the arbitration of a foreign power was made a condition precedent to the extension of the franchise, which it certainly was. He also offers to increase the number of representatives from the gold fields district, and adds that participation in the Jameson raid he has no bar to enfranchisement—all this in spite of the fact that on his return he said that there may be war. But I will give no more. The pressure by the British Government will continue. Possibly before long this may take the shape of a movement of troops to South Africa. Already the more thoughtful of the Boers are beginning to say that they have had enough of the agitation.

ACQUISITION OF DELAGOA BAY. It must be remembered, too, that the whole question may at any moment take a great step forward, by the acquisition of Delagoa Bay by this country. Only certain combined personal and pecuniary considerations in Portugal, about which it would be indiscreet to say more, block the way.

The Liberal party has postponed any action in parliament until the text of the Bloemfontein negotiations is received from High Commissioner Milner. But in these days anything seems enough to split the Liberal party. At first the Chronicle declared that war on such an issue would be infamous; it has now progressed to the point where it has declared that the Birmingham Post does not exaggerate it when it says: "On this Transvaal question the voice of Chamberlain is the voice of England. The Chronicle for many years has been regarded as the organ of the great body of non-conformist Liberals, but today this is reversed."

NO WAR TALK. Another correspondent cables: South Africa still holds the field as the one subject of absorbing interest; there is no war talk, and there has been no uneasiness in the stock market. If war had been seriously apprehended, there would have been a big selling movement in mining stocks, but nothing of the kind has happened. The publication of Sir Alfred Milner's and Mr. Chamberlain's long dispatches, written before the conference, was sharply criticized by several Liberal journals, on the ground that future negotiations would be seriously impeded by the publicity given to them. This was a superficial view. Sir Alfred Milner's dispatch was a most powerful statement of the grievances of British subjects in the Transvaal, and has produced a profound impression in England and in South Africa. Mr. Chamberlain made no mistake when he brought these two weighty documents out of the official pigeon-hole. President Kruger has been depending upon a Liberal demonstration against the government's policy in South Africa, but he is now likely to be disappointed.

CRISIS IN RUSSIA APPROACHING. A St. Petersburg correspondent claims a national crisis is fast approaching in Russia. He says that the national labor troubles at Riga, the disturbances of the students and the famine in various parts, are symptoms of greater trouble. He adds that he has reliable information enabling him to say that perfect demoralization prevails in the upper government circles of Russia, owing to the opposing influences of the czar on one side and his mother on the other.

CHURCH WAR REVIVED. Religious polemics have been revived by Lord Halifax's address read before the English Church Union, which has set evangelical teeth on edge, and given opportunists generally a cold chill. Instead of confining himself to safe generalities about the essential catholicity of the English Church, he charges that the present agitation is got up and paid for by that puritanism which nearly destroyed the church in the time of Elizabeth, and also lays great stress upon auricular confession, and appeals to what he describes as the whole body of the Catholic Church to support his position. The proceedings of the Church Union were moderate than the president's address, and Canon Knox Little declared with emphasis that high churchmen were law-abiding men, who were contending for the reformation settlement and for the liberties of the church.

WILL FOLLOW THE DRUM. The Duke of York has decided that his son Edward will ultimately enter the army and join the Tenth Hussars, of which the Prince of Wales is colonel, and the late Duke of Clarence was an officer. This decision, it is said, has greatly disappointed the navy.

THE TRANSVAAL. London, June 19.—The Transvaal situation is still the all-absorbing topic of discussion in Great Britain, and even the continent has caught the disease, though in a less virulent form. Outwardly the question seems to have advanced but little, though those who are inside think the cause of the Uitlanders has gone up several pegs. The publication of the Transvaal blue book with the emphatic denunciation of Transvaal methods, setting forth in measured paragraphs the alleged political, financial and judicial incompetence of the administration of President Kruger, and adopting as part of the government's own programme all the grievances of the Uitlanders, constitute a step of the highest import. It was AN UNMISTAKABLE WARNING. to the Transvaal as well as an indication to the people of South Africa generally that the government has arrived at a fixed decision, impossible to recede from, and there is not lacking indications that the hint has not been lost at Pretoria. Although it is difficult to separate fact from fiction in the multiplicity of conflicting stories, it is the general impression of those in a position to know that the conciliatory dispatch which Dr. Leyds, the representative in Europe of the Transvaal, received June 14, represents the true situation, while President Kruger's defiant speech of the same day was merely intended for home consumption. The opinion is now growing that the delay necessitated in awaiting Sir Alfred Milner's full report of the Bloemfontein conference will make for a peaceful settlement. As an official in the close confidence of the government declared, it will give President Kruger "time to get his house in order." But unless the talked of concessions are speedily inaugurated momentous consequences are predicted.

The position in England of the secretary of the colonies, Mr. Chamberlain, however, is steadily declining, and the emphatic suggestion is heard in influential quarters to transfer the conduct of the negotiations from the colonial to the foreign office.

TREND OF TRAVEL. The tide of American travel to Europe was at high-water mark the past week, and as a result, not only are the London hotels turning people away, but visitors are lucky if they find ordinary lodgings. Steamships, which arrived had from 800 to 1,200 passengers on board. In fact, one brought 1,300. The evening scenes at the fashionable hotels are almost a counterpart of those witnessed at the Waldorf and the Savoy, New York. Every phase of American life is represented. Besides the immense flow of tourists, it is calculated that more American financial schemes have been floated, and that more London branches of American manufacturing have been established than ever before.

COMMERCIAL RIVALRY. The influx of American commercial men is a constant surprise to Englishmen, who are just beginning to realize what American business rivalry means. Entire sections of streets here are now lined with the signs of American firms in every line of trade. A prominent Manchester iron man said to a correspondent of the Associated Press: "The main significance of this impouring of manufacturing firms is that the Americans are not only underselling us here, but they are making their agencies bases from which they are gradually reaching out into every country in Europe. I know of an immense Cleveland concern which established an agent here who for a year did not undertake an English order, wholly confining himself to Germany, France and Russia. Now the concern has more orders from England alone than it can supply, and the agent has been instructed not to book another order for six months."

The shoe trade has also been greatly agitated by the immense increase in American imports to England, which has increased 45 per cent during the last ten months. The American shoe dealer has been gradually walking over here as it becomes better known. HARVEST FIELD FOR ELECTRICIANS. Vice-President Albert Johnson, of the Nassau Electric Street Railroad, of Brooklyn, has been investigating electrical traction prospects here and will return home on the Majestic. He said to a representative of the Associated Press: "London is the greatest field in the world for the future development of electric surface roads. I have made only a preliminary reconnaissance here, but shall return in a few weeks, when I expect to thoroughly take up the project. There is no doubt London in a few years will afford an immense market for American electrical appliances and material."

In connection with the above statements, the London County Council on Tuesday ordered its committee to report on the practicability of constructing a subway underground electric railroad from Westminster to the Bank of England, and thence northward on a principle similar to those of Boston.

TOP-HEAVY STEAMERS. With reference to the reports that the cruisers Albany and New Orleans, purchased here by the United States Government, have been found top-heavy and unseaworthy, the correspondent of the Associated Press saw Col. Watts, the naval constructor of the Albany, who said: "If the Albany and New Orleans are untrustworthy, many ships of the British navy, built at the same date, are also useless, as the Albany and New Orleans were built for the service sanctioned by Sir William White, chief naval constructor, and bear comparison in speed, and every other essential with any vessel of their class built at that date."

AUSTRALIAN TOBACCO. Tobacco growers and dealers are awaiting with interest the arrival of the first important shipment of the leaf from Victoria, Australia, now en route. The samples are regarded as very fine, and it is believed the leaf will secure ready sale at good prices. The tobacco was grown under the superintendence of a Kentucky grower, who was invited by the Victorian Government to test the experiment. THE GERMAN CANAL SCHEME. A Berlin dispatch says: The canal bill engrossed attention last week, and the papers had much to say pro and con, according to party standpoint. The ultimate fate of the bill concerns America, as the construction of the network of canals adjoining the three great rivers of Prussia, the Elbe, Rhine and Weser, and the far eastern provinces, these bordering on the German Ocean, will cheapen and facilitate the freights of American exports, in the most contemptible fashion of other bulky goods. Another point interesting to America is the fact that the Prussian agrarians, and these parties affiliating with them, the Conservatives, Reichstag and a portion of the center, have made the bill a test of strength between them and the government, and almost a personal contest between them and the emperor, who, with the entire Prussian majesty left no doubt this week that he strongly wishes the great canal to be built.

WHEAT FIRM. English Wheat in Ample Supply—Conditions of Crops in European Countries.

London, June 19.—There has not been much activity in the wheat market since the purchases have generally been for immediate wants. Only home wheat has continued in ample supply, but the demand is showing no increase and trade has made slow progress. Sellers, however, are requiring rather better prices.

Foreign descriptions have not engaged much attention, but with only moderate supplies on offer rates have tended in the holder's favor.

The appearance of spring wheat in England is very favorable. Corn, however, shows signs of a need of rain. The close of Friday night's market found foreign sorts quiet, but well maintained in value.

According to the Mark Lane Express the following is the condition of the wheat crops in different countries:

France—The condition of crops is excellent in general, particularly of cereals, which give promise of passing through the earing and blooming phases without hindrance.

Belgium—Cereal crops are progressing well.

Germany—Crops do not look as promising as last year.

Italy—Wheat is satisfactory. Hungary—With the cessation of rain the increase of rust is materially arrested, and a more confident feeling is gaining ground.

Roumania—Drought continues, and the hope of a revival of the wheat fields from timely rain are almost extinguished.

Bulgaria—Crops are reported in bad condition generally.

Russia—Continued complaints of drought come from the southern districts. The outlook for crops is very indifferent.

HON. DAVID MILLS

A Letter From One Who Knows Him—The Telegram's Attacks.

The following letter appears in the Toronto World, a Conservative paper: Editor World: For some inexplicable cause the Evening Telegram has kept up a fusillade on the minister of justice, Hon. David Mills. When there was nothing happening in the political arena calling for any special strictures on the policy of the justice department, this journal would blossom out in abuse of the head of that department, seeking to ridicule or belittle him.

Sometimes these notices would appear in sneering paragraphs or in a short leading article with a flaring headline, "A Dangerous Federalist," etc., or by a weak and ambiguous cartoon, or it would even descend to write in the most contemptible fashion of the poetry which the minister occasionally throws off.

Now the actions of our public men are open to fair and stringent criticism, but there ought to be in all references to those who conduct the public business at least some grounds on which to base these observations. But in many of the bitter animadversions upon the minister of justice these have been wanting. Occasionally the Evening Telegram has called attention in an offensive way to the fact that the minister of justice was called to the bar late in life. It was true. Mills was called to the bar at a period in life much later than the rule, but what of the years of assiduous toil and preparation by study of such a nature that peculiarly fitted him for taking the high position he at once took in Canada as an authority on constitutional law and history. To say nothing of many hard, useful years spent in the region of practical parliamentary procedure and politics?

This Telegram charges that Mr. Mills is a dangerous Federalist. This is quite a mistake. He has an ardent, keen, appreciation of provincial questions, with an intimate knowledge of their delicacies and varied intricacies as is not possessed by any other Canadian statesman. A quarter century spent in upholding these rights gives the lie to any charge of his being a dangerous Federalist.

But this does not blind him to rights of the Dominion, which as the minister of justice, he is bound by his oath to maintain.

He is an eminently fair-minded man, but he is something more. He is a safe adviser. If anyone imagines Mr. Mills is a merely theoretical lawyer or book-worm, he will be woefully disillusioned if he tackles him.

He has firmness and clearness and the characteristics of a judicial mind, and the grasp of the essential features of a question that is startling in its breadth and retentiveness. He is withal, a ready man. He knows his law and where to find it, and when he gives his opinion he is prepared then and there to support his contention by good, sound and reliable precedents.

It will be time enough for the Telegram to sneer when he has been proved wrong in any of his decisions. The man who undertakes to controvert Mr. Mills' legal opinions successfully has a hard and almost hopeless task. His administration of the affairs of his department has been most satisfactory. He is always to be found at his post early and late—kind, attentive, courteous and thorough, but having no time to waste on trifles or office-seekers. His patient and constant de-

CALEDONIA MINE DISASTER

Eleven Persons Perished—Ten Bodies Recovered—The Pit Still on Fire.

Halifax, N. S., June 19.—It appears that the Caledonia mine disaster death list will not number more than eleven. There are said to be others missing. The first explosion took place at five minutes to 4. This was followed by another at 5 o'clock. The coal in the west deep, as well as the timber, is on fire. The volunteers who were in the pit all morning had to come to the surface, being unable to get near the fire for smoke and gas. Thomas Brown, manager of Caledonia, went down with the rescue volunteers, and was knocked senseless by the explosion, but will recover. So far it has been found impossible to extinguish the fire in the pit. Donald Martin's body has not been found.

JESSAMINE.

"He spent the Sabbath with us," wrote she. "It was a pleasant day to us all. Mr. Wyllys kindly took my place as organist in church, and played with even more than his usual taste and feeling. His news of you would of itself have made him a welcome guest. His report of your health, sports, and progress in your studies was very favorable. He says, moreover, that Mrs. Baxter will not consent to give you up before spring. Do not abridge your stay, for fear we shall be lonely without you. We miss you, of course, but we are consoled for the pain of separation, by the knowledge that you are improving in health, and enjoying social and educational advantages such as our secluded valley cannot furnish."

"I inclose a letter from Roy, directed, as usual, under cover to father. In the accompanying note, he alludes to his gratification at learning that you are so pleasantly situated and happily employed this winter. We are glad that he is heartily in favor of the important step we ventured to take without waiting to consult him."

"I wish you could see your oriel now. Our flowers have flourished this winter as they never did before. The daphnes are in full bloom. The stephanotis is almost encumbered by buds, and the fragrant petunias and double nasturtiums (the seed of which Mr. Wyllys gave me in the fall) are thriving bravely, the latter climbing rapidly."

"Our excellent neighbors are very kind and attentive," etc., etc. Jessie re-read this letter when she had finished Roy's, perused it with a half smile, and was more thoughtful than amused, and an odd stricture about her heart. Eunice's round of pleasures and duties seemed to her like something she had passed—outgrown ages since, yet there was, far down in her spirit, a piteous longing for those gone days. She might be wiser—she was not better or happier for the glimpses lately granted her of a world of stormy and contending passions and mixed motives.

"He spent the Sabbath with us," she read aloud. "And I was not at home! He said nothing to me of his intention to visit Dundee. Since he had changed his plans in one respect, he may in another, and be absent three or four weeks instead of two. Heigho!"

She folded up her sister's letter, and addressed herself very slowly to the task of getting ready for a party at Judge Provost's. The guests of the town. It was given in honor of a niece of his, who was visiting his daughter, and was to be a grand affair. Jessie had never attended one half so fine, but she was envious in anticipation.

"There will be the stock company of beaux," she meditated. "The one unmarried professor; the ten almost marriageable seniors, and the ten utterly ineligible ones, who are without beards or money; capital, the whole army (I had nearly said 'herd') of juniors and sophomores; the dozen or fifteen gentlemen detailed for the occasion from the doctors' and lawyers' offices, and the higher rank of tradespeople in Hamilton. There will be dancing in one parlor, and small-talk in another; promenading in the halls and billiard-rooms; flirtations in all stages among the dandies and lemons; trees of the conservatory, and 'a jam'—not sweet—in the supper-room. As a clergyman's daughter and the guest of a clergyman's wife, I must not dance in public. I am sick to nausea of callow collegians and small-talk, and I don't care for late supper and edifying dainties. I would rather spend the evening with Mariana in the moated grange, for that moish damsel would let me sit still and sulk if I wanted to. And I believe she would let me sit still and sulk if I wanted to."

"A little more fire, my love!" whispered Mrs. Baxter in the dressing-room, affecting to be busy in shaking out Jessie's pink silk drapery. "I have a presentiment that you are to meet your fate tonight. But rank must positively exert yourself to seem less quiet and preoccupied. Repose and lofty indifference are considered well-bred, and are a very safe role for the commonplace to adopt. But they are unbecoming to us."

The novice did her best to throw light into her eyes and warmth into her complexion. Being a novice, the attempt was a failure; but Mrs. Baxter, perceiving that ignorance, not obstinacy, hindered the desired effect, forbore to hint that, in spite of Jessie's elegant attire and becoming coiffure, she had never seen her look worse. Trusting to the animating influences of the festive scene to restore that which friendly expostulation had proved inefficient to recall, she committed her to the officious homage of young Lowndes, and turned her attention to the part she was herself to play in the evening's drama.

"What a magnificent creature your niece is, Mrs. Baxter; or is she a cousin?" said an elderly gentleman also one of the judge's visitors, to her at length.

The pleased and amiable chaperone looked over her shoulder, directed by his gaze, just in time to see Jessie pass, treading as if on air; her eyes luminous with the inner foldings of a damask rose; her lips apart in a smile, sweet and happy, and her hand on Orrin Wyllys' arm.

CHAPTER X.

"And you have really been to Dundee!" Jessie was saying, unconscious that she was clinging to Mr. Wyllys' arm—very slightly, but perceptibly to him, with the glad hold of one to whom something dear and rare had been restored. "Was this a part of the original plan of your journeyings?"

"No; but my business led me within sight of Old Windbeam—a frosty pow! his is, just now!—and it acted upon me as day of the Iron Mountain. 'Arabian Nights' upon the hapless ships that approached it. It drew out the nails of doubt as to the best course for me to pursue; the screws of resolution not to be turned aside by memories of the past and the allurements of the present. To be brief, I collapsed utterly, took the afternoon train to Dundee, and passed, in that retreat from briefs and busybodies, the happiest Sabbath I have known since last August."

"Euna wrote to me about it—the lovely, precise old darling! She never indulges in extravagances upon any subject, but her concise sentences mean much, and these said how she enjoyed the day—and your music!—was a nucleus of her when I read it, just for a moment, of course. I have seen so much of you this winter it seemed mean and selfish in me to grudge her a day of like pleasure."

"Envy so groundless could not but be evanescent," said Orrin, with admirable gravity. "But tell me about yourself. What have you been doing while I was away?"

BIBLE SCHOOL CONVENTION

Large and Interesting Gathering of Sunday School Workers at Poplar Hill.

Poplar Hill, June 17.—The Sunday schools of the township of Lobo convened in the First Baptist Church on Thursday, June 15, which was the eighth annual meeting of the association.

MORNING SESSION.
About 10:30 President Alder called order, and introduced Mrs. George Edmonds to the convention, who conducted the devotional exercises.

Appropriate hymns and Scripture lesson, mingled with earnest prayer to Almighty God for his rich blessing upon the sessions of the day was a good primer indeed.

Next was the president's address, in which he said the executive had spared no means in providing the programme, and heartily thanked those called upon for addresses, etc. Not one had refused.

The secretary-treasurer's report of last meeting was then read, and those who heard it do not wonder why it was quickly adopted. In accuracy, smoothness and style it would have done credit to a provincial gathering. Visitor Gray's report will talk for itself. Here it is: Number of Sunday schools in township, 9; number of officers, 52; average attendance, 43; number of teachers, 51; average attendance, 44; number of scholars on roll, 597; average attendance, 372. Amount given to home missions, $34.60; to foreign missions, $22.95; Manitoba and Northwest, $10.15; Children's Hospital, $2.50; Bible Society, $4.47; Grand Ligne, Que., $3.67; expenses of schools, $22.66; total, $311.06.

Bro. Gray also brought new methods of teaching, ways of raising money, and helpful hints gathered in the different schools, and laid them before the convention.

After a short discussion the meeting adjourned to the lawn of Mr. Graham, and when the writer saw the richly-laden school, we might give more than the paltry sum of 50 cents per scholar for missions, if we had to curtail the cake and pie.

AFTERNOON SESSION.
In the absence of Rev. A. Sinclair, the writer led the devotional exercises, beginning about 1:30. First on the programme was a study of the preceding Sunday's lesson by the president, which was ably handled and well threshed out.

Rev. H. D. Moyer, of Delaware, then delivered an able address on "Sunday School Literature," followed by music and a short prayer. The president then came a song, followed by an address, "The Sunday School and Its Relation to the Home," by Rev. S. Lawrence, in which he said: "If there is one thing that we must have, it is more home religion."

Then came a song, followed by an address, "The Sunday School and Its Relation to the Home," by Rev. S. Lawrence, in which he said: "If there is one thing that we must have, it is more home religion."

Next was an object-lesson, taught by Miss Cannon, of London, which was very interesting and instructive. Solo by Mrs. Steinhoff. "When the Master Himself is Away." The benediction was pronounced, and we returned once more to Mr. Graham's dining-parlor, which covered about an acre, and found the tables even more sumptuously loaded than before.

Spoken by myself, I don't care for cake today (Friday). The outward man was well fed, and there was much good spiritual food. Did we have as strong a relish for the spiritual food as we did for that which perishes? If not, why not?

EVENING SESSION.
The evening session opened with devotional exercises led by Rev. Mr. Marshall, pastor of the church, in his good, sweet-spirited manner. We heard Mr. Marshall called "the young old man." He is young physically, but his nature is old.

The report of the nominating committee was received and adopted, as follows: President, Mr. John Ross; vice-president, Mr. James McArthur; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Ella Zavitz; visitors, W. H. Caverhill and F. Robinson.

Next meeting at Church of Christ, Poplar Hill.

At this juncture the secretary-treasurer, Miss Maggie Sinclair, who had signed the notice of the convention, service, was presented with an address and Eddershem's "Life of Christ," in two volumes, by Rev. N. Lindsay, to which Miss Sinclair replied in a few well-chosen words.

Rev. H. C. Speller, of Sarnia, was next introduced to the convention, and delivered a very practical and powerful address. Subject: "The Boys in Our Sunday Schools," in which he set forth very clearly the wisdom that should be exercised by the teachers.

A few words from Mr. Cobbe, who happened to drop in; a closing song, and the benediction brought the convention to a close. It is thought that there were about 600 people at the evening session. We hope for 1,000 in Poplar Hill in one year.

GUILITY OF MURDER

John S. Marks, of Port Huron, Convicted of Killing His Wife.

Port Huron, Mich., June 19.—At nine o'clock Saturday evening, after being out four and a half hours, the jury in the Marks case returned a verdict in a verdict, finding the defendant, James S. Marks, guilty of murder in the first degree. The announcement of the jury's finding caused a suppressed murmur of approval to sweep over the crowded courtroom, but there was no other demonstration from the spectators. The trial just ended was one of the most remarkable criminal cases in the history of the county.

THE CRIME.
The crime of which Marks was convicted was the murder of his child-wife on the night of April 30. The victim was the 15-year-old adopted daughter of Marks and Mrs. L. E. Marks. Marks became criminally intimate with her, and a forced marriage resulted. One of the conditions precedent to the marriage was the execution of a joint deed of Marks' property to himself and wife. To obtain possession of the title thereto, together with his infatuation for another woman, was the alleged motive for the crime.

The evening of Sunday, April 30, the wife disappeared, and on the Thursday following her body was found floating in Black River. The autopsy disclosed none of the evidences of drowning, but two bruises on vital points were found, and Marks was arrested, charged with the murder. The prosecution forged a strong chain of circumstantial evidence connecting Marks with the crime, and this, together with the prisoner's conflicting statements under the sweating system, left no doubt in the jury's mind of the prisoner's guilt.

It developed at the trial that the prisoner began efforts for the establishment of an alibi the very next morning after the disappearance, and before there was any intimation of a murder having been committed. The defendant's counsel was badly handicapped in the case by the prisoner having practically outlined his defense by his statements before engaging counsel. The jury during its deliberations was agreed from the outset of the prisoner's guilt, but differed as to the degree of murder that their verdict should be.
