Buffalo, March 7.-It is a week since Edwin L. Burdick was murdered, yet there have been no arrests and only shadowy hints and rumors of accusa-The "positive evidence" for which the authorities have said they were waiting still seems beyond their reach. The chief of police and the district attorney each has declared that he has a definite suspicion amounting almost to a certainty, but these statements were not made jointly. Their individual suspicion may not fall on the same person. Supt. Bull has formed his opinion from the reports made by the chief of detectives, while District Attorney Coatsworth's work on the case has been, in many details, separate from the efforts of the police.

you can convict," the district accorney quoted as saying to Mr. Cusack. "I have enough for a conviction," is the detective's reputed reply, but he has not convinced Mr. Coatsworth. The district attorney is not an excitable person, and he is thinking his way with extreme care. He has been in office only two months, and he is trying to avoid a slip. HAWTHORNE'S THEORIES

The Well-Known Author Writes on the Case at Length.

Julian Hawthorne writes as follows to the New York Journal concerning the murder:

There was, in the morning, on the table in Burdick's den, a small collation found set out on a table there. This was presumably prepared by Burdick him self. But there is testimony to the ef fect that he was of a dyspeptic tendency, and was not in the habit of eat ing such things as the collation con sisted of.

It is inferred, therefore, that he pre pared (if he did prepare it) for some one else-for his expected caller, for

Leaving aside for the present the pos-sibility of this information coming from the murderer in person, as a consequence of nervous breakdown, let us inquire into the likelihood of any other persons possessing direct knowledge of

Some friend or relative of the murderer may possess such knowledge; or some inmate of Burdick's house may possess it. Discarding the former supposition, as being too vague for our purpose, what inmate of Burdick's house could have entered upon the scene in time to recognize the murderer? There is only one of the servants or old Mrs. Hull, the mother of Mrs. Bur-

Was it the servant? It is quite possible; and yet it seems unlikely that a girl of that kind would maintain silence as to her knowledge. Besides, supposing that the servant had gone to her bed when the murder was in progress, her room is more distant than the den that Mrs. Hull's is. Moreover, as we have seen, Mrs. Hull was a very poor sleeper. And finally, the Burdick house is a frame structure, not new; and it is almost inconceivable that any disturbance in the lower story should not have made such a noise and vibration as would easily awaken her. She was fond of her son-in-law; the noise might lead her to think that he had met with some accident; she would come downstairs to investigate, and would be confronted with the bloody spectacle and the murderer in the midst of it. This hypothesis is not lacking in plaus-

DOES MRS. HULL KNOW ?

But why, then, did not Mrs. Hull at once give the alarm? Or, if intimidated at the moment, why did she not do so as soon as the murderer left the house? The explanation at once suggests itself that the murderer was person known to her; perhaps well known and heretofore liked and trust-Reasons which we may imaging would in that event lead her to hesitate to bring her accusation. She might think the truth were better left unknown. Burdick was dead; he was beyond help; why bring what family? She might hesitate and delay. Meanwhile, we know that the police have subjected her to a rigorous examination on more than one occasion-an examination that would be cruel were it not warranted by strong motives. It would be justified, indeed, only if we assume that they were trying to force from her unwilling lips some facts which they were morally certain must be in her possession. They must have felt morally certain that she saw the murderer, and have resolved to break down her reluctance to give up his or her name, and, supposing the murderer to have been a woman, Mrs. Hull, who loved and trusted Burdick, may have been moved to keep the thing secret in order to protect Burdick's moral reputation. To be killed by a woman under the circumstances of this case would mean disgrace as well as death. Mrs. Hull may have wished to spare him. Supposing all this to be accepted as the truth, or approximately the truth, There were twelve blows upon the then, when the police make their arrest, we may expect to learn that it was on the basis of information supplied by Mrs. Hull. And if she should name a woman as the culprit we shall have a horror to contemplate such as has from submitting or supporting alternative proposals. Vienna, March 7. - Dispatches received daily from Constantinople and Sofia indicate that the Macedonians are in no way becoming more peaceable, despite the promulgation of the reform scheme. Hardly a day passes without a conflict between Macedonians and Turkish troops. None of these has as yet been very serious, but they show that the revolutionary movement has not been checked. The Sofia correspondent of the Neue Wiener Tagblatt telegraphs that the Macedonian leader, Sarafoff, will shortly assume a most active role. Another Sofia report says that the Bulgarian police have seized ten cartloads of rifles which were being taken to the fronties. Stories of Bulgarian officers quitting the army to join the revolutionists are frequent. It is the firm belief in Sofia that the movement is developing into a crisis.

It is a normal act for a man to marry a woman younger than himself. Statistics collected in Germany show that of 1.000 bridegrooms only 89 chose women older than themselves. A difabnormal. In New York City in one year, the number of couples married whose ages there was a disparity of 20 years or more was 818; but among these there were few in whom the dif-

MARTINEAU TOOK $75,000

Approach That Sum.

Ottawa, March 7.—A. Banderus Martineau, the Militia Department defaulter, was again remanded for a week yesterday morning at the request of his counsel, owing to several new charges of forgery being laid. Six new charges were brought before the court this morning by Inspector Hogan, dealing with three checks, on each of which were based charges of forgery and uttering a forged document. The checks were: One for $13,500, dated Oct. 13, 1902, payable to A. Martineau; one for $6,700, dated July 7, 1902, ptyable to Charles D. Cote, and one for $4,355, dated April 26, 1902, payable to Charles D. Cote. The charges previously before the court were of forging and uttering a check for $9,300, dated July 7, 1902, payable to Charles D. Cote. The charge of breach of trust by a public officer has not yet been presented to the magistrate, although it was one of the earliest prepared. Crown Attorney Ritchie gave to the press a memo. of the alleged forgery of Martineau, by which it appears that it amounted to $75,705. Checks for $20,000 were passed through the Sovereign Bank, for $20,200 through the Sovereign Bank, All of these, except those passed through the Royal Bank, were payable to Charles D. Cote, while the Royal Bank checks were payable to A. Martineau.

Car Etiquette in Cincinnati.

We are told that in Cincinnati the street car straps are hung so high that women of average inches cannot reach them. This obliges them-the women, of course-to hang on to the seats or the men passengers. Of course, the seats can't object, but the Cincinnati men are very indignant over such a flagrant disregard of their dignity. They don't like to be grabbed by the hair, or yanked around by the collar. In fact, some of them are disposed to be so much disgruntled by it that at times they have thought of getting up and sent for a bottle at once, and I am glad resigning their seats to the impertinent women. But they haven't done it yet. -Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Artificial Lightning. Prof. Trowbridge, of Harvard University, says that with his battery of 20,-000 cells, a voltage of about 6,000,000 is obtained, which is at least comparable with that of lightning. With this large battery he is able to get an electric spark about seven feet long. In his experiments he found that a spark of this length, instead of striking water, invariably jumped to some adjacent object. A spark a few inches in length will, however, strike water, but such a spark is not to be compared to light-ning. Beyond 1,000,000 volts the initial resistance of atmospheric air to electrical discharges becomes less, and the discharges, therefore, are shunted through the air instead of upon the wa-ter. Prof. Trowbridge thinks it doubtful, if the testimony of those who claim to have seen lightning strike the sea is to be accepted; they have mistaken the reflection of lightning in the water for the flash itself.—New Sork Sun.

I am a bird student, but have not had the pleasure of seeing a passenger pigeon for many years. The cause of the almost total extinction of these birds, which in my time swarmed here in countless millions is a puzzle to naturalists. My own theory is they were slowly starved. The natural food of the passenger pigeon was beechnuts, acorns, wild fruits of many kinds, and mast, of which there was an endless supply in the thousands of miles of forests which were never touched by the axe till the white man came. Settlement Commenced at the Atlantic seaboard, and

It begins by saying that the dealer is the posssor of a "good thing," by which the recipient can become independently rich, if directions are followed. It goes on to say: "There's no reason why you should be a slave and toil all of your life for nothing. The opportunity is here for you to 'switch off' from poverty and benefit yourself in a substantial way. Don't be foolish enough to let conscientious scruples interfere with your aim in life. The chief says that the number of letters which fall into his hands is structions? The chief says that the proceedings that follow were described by Chief Williams, for the dealer scarcely tells of what a swindle the whole thing is. It is the old story of the green goods man, and the easy victim, and even in these days of wide-awakedness there seems to be the necessity for periodical warnings. The "ingoing to bite, would be to go to a cer-tain place, generally New York, and then the customer could see for himself what the deal was. The hope of making money easily leads many to go on, and they find the green goods man a most affable fellow. If he sizes up his man as a good one he shows him genuine bank notes, for nothing in the counterfeit line is kept. He not only shows the victim the good notes, but he gives a five-dollar note and asks him to go out and see if he cannot pass it. The victim goes out and, of course, he finds it is taken very readily as good legal tender, for such it really is. A purchase follows, and the package is done up, and then the dealer tells his man how necessary it is Others have to watch how he conducts his business, and how he must have the goods ex pressed to him. This is agreed to and from the express finds that the "square" man who sold him the goods has put in the package, possibly a brick or some such valuable article, while the victim is left to dream of the money that he thought he was going to have. "These sharks," said the chief, "ge send letters like this to two or three a one time in the same town or city. A Curious New Locomotive.

A new curious locomotive has been constructed in England. The boiler, engine, coal bunker, water tank and appendages are mounted upon three bogie carriages and two independent axles, as illustrated in the accompanying cuts. The front compartment is for the engine driver. This room extends in front of the smoke-box of the boiler, and the driver has thus a clear view of the line through the looking glasses or windows. The regulator, reversing gear, continuous brake, hand brake and other parts or motions are all controlled from the driver's compartment. As this compartment is separated by a partition and folding or other doors from the engine-room, and is also separated from the fire room, the driver is enabled to keep a good lookout, and is not subjected to the heat or blaze from the fire-box during stoking operations.

Adjacent to the driver's compartment is the engine room. There are three cylinders bolted to a cast-steel b plate secured to the frame plates. All the three cylinders may work with high-pressure steam direct from the boiler. The driving wheels are 10 feet external diameter. The stoking compartment is at the rear of the engine room, between the boiler and the coal bunker and water tank.

She first appeared in an evening gown of white satin, covered with bunches of hand-painted roses with foliage. It was simply the lace for which Mrs. Campbell has such a weakness, on the bodice, a very simply made skirt, and a sash, the color of the roses. With this she were a magnificent rose-colored velvet opera cloak, covered with lace, the high collar and revers of which were bordered with mink fur.

In the next act she wore a charmign morning gown of cream lace, colbolero style. Later she donned a driving coat of biscuit-colored cloth, lined with cream satin. It was long, belted in at the waist, and the collar and revers were of black velvet covered with heavy lace. A black velvet hat was worth with this.

In the two last acts she wore one of the most beautiful gowns I have ever seen, an evening gown of pale blue satin. On it were two indescribably shaped pieces of shot gold and pale These started one on gradually widening, to the hem of her skirt. The sleeves consisted of a band of pale chiffon at shoulder and elbow, with a long, floating "angel" sleeve of pale blue chiffon, which began under the arm and fell half-way down her skirt, leaving her beautiful arms bare from shoulder to finger-tips.

Now, as to her play. Many critics of Mrs. Campbell wonder why she gets in the styles of play which are her favorites, "Magda," "The Second Mrs. "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith," "The Joy of Living," and all those plays which are, in Mrs. Campbell's hands, triumphs of dra-

First Canadian Woman On the Prairie.

The first Canadian woman in the Northwest, says a writer in the Hartney Star, was the wife of John Baptiste Lajimoniere, who, in company with her husband, arrived in Manitoba in July of the year 1807, and died at St. Boniface in 1879 at the age of 96 years. Madame Lajimoniere had no vomen companions but the squaws. Her husband was a hunter, who roamed the territory between the Red River and Fort Edmonton. There were then in the Northwest some five or six other Canadian hunters married to Indian women, and the lives of these men did not differ from that of the Indians. They lived in wigwams made of skins, encamping near the summer and passing the winters in the woods and on the prairies hunting. The first white girl was born in Manitoba on the King's Birthday, 1807. and was named Reine. The mother Madame Lajimoniere, carried her baby in a moss bag as the squaws did, and accompanied her husband on hunting expeditions that extended over many thousands of miles of wild country. Food consisted principally of dried meat and fish, and for some years such a thing as bread was unknown. Women may write about their ills to Mrs. Pinkham, and avoid the questioning of a male physician. They can tell their story without reservation to her; she never breaks a confidence, and her advice is the best in the world.

The questions asked of a woman by a male physician are embarrassing. and often revolting to a sensitive nature. In consequence the whole truth is not told; this makes it difficult for female troubles to be successfully treated even by the best physicians, and is the reason so many women grow worse rather than better. A woman understands a woman better than a man, there are symptoms which sick women have that a man cannot understand. simply because he is a man, but the whole truth may be told to Mrs. Pinkham, and her vast experience enables her to give advice which leads to a cure.

All women who suffer should secure Mrs. Pinkham's advice; it costs nothing but a letter addressed to her at Lynn, Mass. Female troubles are real troubles, and must be treated understandingly. For a quarter of a century Mrs. Pinkham's advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have been helping women to get strong and well, and her great file of letters prove that more than a million women have been restored to health and strength by her advice and her medicine when all other means have failed.

When you go to a druggist for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, do not let him persuade you to try something which he says is just as good; there is nothing just as good, because Mrs. Pinkham's medicine holds the record for the largest number of cures of any female medicine in the world.

As royalty never dines until that hour she went without having her dinner, and so did the member of her suite who acompanied her. But she got her dinner and saw the beginning of the play as well. Between the first and second acts dinner was served in a retiringroom at the rear of the royal box. As that is a spacious apartment, considering its use, dinner may be enjoyed there with even comfort enough to satisfy royalty.

Women of Venezuela.

When Mr. Bowen, minister to Venezuela, came to Washington to negotiate as representative of that country with the powers of Europe, he was accompanied by his young wife. Their marriage took place just a year and a month ago, and there was something of a romance connected with it, for the nuptials were celebrated while she was on a visit to the capital of Venezuela with some cousins of the minister.

"Life in Venezuela is very delightful," she remarked. These points he had not yet considered.

Now that he was about to die, he conceived a strong desire to see Francesca once more—for the last time. He ened by Francesca's attitude of sorrow thought it would be happiness indeed if he could die holding her hand in by Paolo's sudden and unaccountable his, looking into her eyes; but that return.

familiar voice, exclaiming:
"What, ho! my lord-returned so soon! Did'st end the war so quickly? Perhaps thy dread name did cause the enemy such fear they died from fright. I marvel at your power."

It was Pepe the jester, who had chanced that way, had recognized the form of Paolo in the darkness, and was much surprised to see one who and cloudless; as Francesca looked had started for Florence not ten hours from her window she beheld the beauago. SELECTION OF A VOCATION. "The selection of a vocation is quite important. My experience is that those things are largely matters of chance. I don't think I ever expected as a young man to get into the railroad business "Having chosen a profession, I do not hink a young man is warranted in sticking to it when he feels that he is not fitted for it, or that he sees a better opportunity to acquire wealth in another direction.

"I was first a farmer, then a merborn on a farm—a Canadian farm. That chant's clerk, then a farmer, a laborer, a clerk, a builder of steamboats, a constructor of railroads as a subcontractor, and then stockholder and owner. So again comes the question of confidence in one's ability to discern words, it starts a chap right. That's half that which is best for him and to strive for that regardless of opposition. In other words, it is the confidence that enables the young man to take risks without which great things can never be accomplished. "Perhaps you might accept these outlines as the rules which I have observed through life. The young man should not make the mistake today of imagining that conditions are not as favorable as at any time in the past century for the poor boy acquiring wealth.

"The world is in its infancy, especially the western world. Industrial development is just beginning. Agriculture, mining, contracting, shipping, railroading, land speculating, mercantile life and manufacturing offer every inducement for the ambitious youth of today to become a man of millions. "Money is so plentiful that a deter-mined boy of worth can borrow all he needs. Bankers accept the element of prospects in lending money as well as ability to pay and there is no more prospect of a monetary value than youth, ambition and grit, backed by western intelligence. Therefore, the way is, if anything, more easy, that is, the way to the top.

THE REAL STRUGGLE. "The real struggle is at the bottom There is where the ranks are crowded. The fight is very fierce there. When you begin to get away from the crowd it is easier.

You pass many commercial derelicts, failures and wrecks of men along the way, but the great trouble is in getting started up. Everything seems to contribute to hold a man down until he starts, then everything turns to boost him up after he has secured a start. That is the way of the world. recognize him when you see him, too. That is quite important." President Hill has an eye always to advancing merit, even though he at the same time advances his own in terests. It is related that he had more than once observed the enormous expense of his different roads for the long line of rubber hose used at nearly every station for filling tanks of cars, sprinkling lawns and kindred work.

He bought an improved quality of hose but the dragging of the line over the platform surface usually wore it out in a short time. Away out on the mountain division at a small station, he observed a day laborer filling the tank of a dining car with a piece of hose, around which was wrapped an old piece of telegraph wire, coillike. He asked the man what that was for. "To allow me to drag it around without destroying it," was the reply.

INGENUITY REWARDED. The problem was solved, and the invention saved the company thousands of dollars annually. The laborer is now one of the chief mechanical men on the Great Northern.

Mr. Hill is too alert to let anything escape him. Examining the operating expense account, he noted the increased consumption of coal on the engines. He figured down the average quanthe two broad seats of our wagon, tity of coal consumed by each engine, and posted a bulletin offering each wedged in, though we preferred to engine crew half of the value of all walk in good weather; then the vehicle coal they could save monthly under this established average. ANAEMIA Poverty of the Blood

An ailment that threatens the very life of many thousands of women, both young and old. They become pale, weak and languid and gradually, but certainly

Flesh and Tissue Wastes Away

When you cut a finger or get a scratch or tear on the skin, is the wound slow to heal? Are your gums, lips and eyelids pale, as though the blood had gone out of them? Then your blood is thin and watery. It is lacking in red corpuscles-the life giving, tissue building element of the blood. You cannot endure much exertion without feeling weak and tired out. Your appetite is deficient and digestion impaired; your breathing is short and quick and you become nervous and irritable. Irregularities and weaknesses of the reproductive organs also frequently result from poorness of blood or There is one way, and one only, in which anæmia can be cured, and that is by increasing the number of red corpuscles in the blood, or in other words, by instilling into the blood the vital energy which is required to build new cells, construct new tissues, and repair the waste of living. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food accomplishes this result as no other preparation, ancient or modern, was ever known to do. It is not claimed that this food cure will do any other thing than create new red corpuscles in the blood, but in doing this it is a positive, thorough and lasting cure for the most difficult diseases that have ever come to the attention of the physicians.

After all, it is the blood that earries life to the organs, repairs the waste and supplies the motive power for the machinery of the body, and when the blood gets pale, weak and watery, external assistance must be sought. The most potent restoratives of nature are happily combined in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so as to make it the greatest blood and nerve revitalizer that the world has ever known. You connot possibly be disappointed in this great modern treatment. Gradually and thoroughly it replenishes the shrivelled arteries and restores vigor, energy and health to weak, worn and sick bodies.

Miss Lizzie B. Carey, 15 Foster Street, Chatham, Ont., states:-"I was all run down in health, my blood seemed to be thin and watery, and at times I scarcely had strength enough to get around. Since using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my condition is altogether changed and my health very much improved. Though I was formerly quite pale I find the color is returning to my face. I am strong and healthy and in fact feel better than I have for years."

An English translation of this code has been made from the German translation of Hugo Winckler. This is the code which Professor Delitzsch used in his lecture before the German Emperor a few days ago, in which he bolstered up the view that the Babylonian code was far reported to the laws of Moses and that superior to the laws of Moses and that the latter was a fraud. All this is absurd, and no one can read this oldest code without seeing that it is also the crudest code of laws extant.

The elaborate system of laws regulating the dower rights of widows and the comstruggle to give daughters some show of justice in the division of estates which theoretically seem to have belonged to sons—these, together with the frantic atsons—these, together with the france at-tempts to protect orphan children, show an old and entangled civilization which had already developed "problems."

THE GRADES OF SOCIETY.

The social conditions depicted by this code can only be glanced at. There were code can only be glanced at. There were were the officials of the civil government, who, whether or not they formed a district class, seem to have had special privileges. Then came the free-born class, next the freedmen class, and last-ly the slaves. There were state slaves and last-ly the slaves privately owned. There were and slaves privately owned. There were and slaves privately owned. There were and slaves privately owned the industrial conditions, we find first that by edict 188, "if an artisan has undertaken to rear a child and teaches him is craft, he cannot be demanded back" by his relatives."

The state of civilization was such that physicians skillfully performed operations.

Grades of Society.

That the wages of labor, the fees of physicians, the rental of farm lands in Babylon, 2250 B.C., would ever be authoritatively known, was not dreamed of until a few weeks ago. The cuneiform inscriptions recently found by M. de Morgan have proved upon translation to be the oldest code of laws in existence. The code consists of 280 edicts, issued by Hammurabi (the biblical Amraphel), King of Babylon in the time of Abraham. An English translation of this code has been made from the German translation of Hugo Winckler. This is the code replace the slave with another slave. replace the slave with another slave." We do not get the wages of barbers for their ordinary work, but if any barber shave a slave, and cut on him the sign of "For Sale," and the slave is not for sale, the barber shall have his hand cut off. The wages of carpenters working as journeyhad already developed "problems."

Moses, on the other hand, was starting a new nation. His code could be simpler and more direct.

MOSES AS A STRIKE LEADER.

Moreover, it is just as well not to forget that Moses was the successful leader of a great strike, which, originating in the refusal of the perfectly just demands of the brickyard laborers of Egypt, finally terminated in the emancipation of a race of slaves. Coming out from under oppression and injustice and wrong, the code of Moses would very naturally embedy more telegration and he more express.

Marber shall have his hand cut off. The wages of carpenters working as journeymen were 12 cents a day. Building contractors putting up a house for private parties could charge $120 per "sar" of surface. But if the building is not properly constructed and it falls and kills the owner, then the building contractor "shall be put to death." "If it kills the slave of the owner, then the son of that builder shall be put to death." If it kills the slave of the owner, then the building contractor "shall be put to death." oppression and injustice and wrong, the code of Moses would very naturally embody more toleration and be more expressive of justice than any code issued by long-established power.

One great value of this Babylonian code has never yet been pointed out. It is that here we have the original tablets of the oldest preserved code, absolutely untampered with. There is no question in this case of interpolations, of transcribers coloring the originals to suit changing times, or to support sectarian. scribers coloring the originals to suit changing times, or to support sectarian views. We know the laws of Manu, the Book of the Dead, the laws of Moses and even the Justinian code have each and all been "doctored by the great physican, Time," and it is almost impossible to say that any given idea in any of these works dates back to the time ascribed to the oldest portion of the document in which it is found.

After Standard Oil and Thomson-Houston electric tramways; after Morganization, and the efforts of a Chicago Gas Company to obtain the contract for a municipal service; after the 'Strenuous Life,' with President Roosevelt as its prophet-the cake walk has conquered Paris. It is no longer a march or solemn promenade, with allusive racial color; it has become dance, rapid, with sudden breaks and unexpected movements, exotic in time and tune, and healthily epileptic. There was room for it.

The English literature concerning France does not seem to have informed tourists that the cancan lapsed from sight some time in the last century, before the Jardin Mabille, which was its classic home, disappeared in the early eighties. The disjointed chahut, which came in with the exposition of 1889, has also ceased its exacting strain, and no longer lifts the toe skyward above the head since the Moulin Rouge closed its doors for ever with the year just past. The aristocratic stables of a private house now show an exclusive entrance where Paris gayety freely passed in crowds to the world-famed Mabille; and a row of prosaic apartment houses is already going up on the site of the Moulin Rouge. Each thing comes in its time; it was time for a new dance-behold the cake walk!

"How in the world is it to be pronounced?" was the first and natural question. "Kek Vallk," was the answer, and so it is now everywhere known—"vall" being sounded like the first syllable of "valley."

moth will not corrupt nor thieves break in and steal. The troublesome, tiresome public cannot intrude and annoy if Kitchener chooses to turn Crusoe.

A pile of great granite boulders forms the up-river extremity of the island. From here the view is towards the First Cataract, with Philae beyond—one of the fairest views afforded by the Nile. Prying eyes which might be tempted to look across from Assouan are shut off by the luxuriant palms of Elephantine.

On the island itself everything which could be done to aid the effects of nature at her best has been done by the soldier owner. No money nor pains has been spared to make the island home beautiful. A perfect screen has been formed around the edge by planting young palms where the indigenous mimosa and other wild growths have been. The northern half is a picture of pomegranates, oranges, citrons, oleanders and roses. In the center of the island is an arbor enveloped in a profusion of the pale blue blossoms of a magnificent convolvulus. There stands a Greek pedestal of exquisite taste and design, dug from some ancient ruin, of make and time unknown.

Near the river is another kiosk—a delightful shelter in the coolest part of the island, where one may sit and observe the changing scenes on the river.

With all this done for the beautiful there is much done for the practical. The vegetable gardens of the island are located near its center. Here are beans, French peas, lettuce, and other such vegetables, which find a ready sale in the hotels of Assouan. Nothing is left to chance. The island is developed by means of a perfect system of irrigation. Commercially the island is a valuable asset. The returns have been 50 per cent on the investment.

With all this prepared, the wonder now

The returns have been 50 per cent on the investment.

With all this prepared, the wonder now is what Lord Kitchener is to do with it. It has been surmised that he will make his home in the east, where he has done most of his work.

Nothing in the way of house-building has been attempted on the island yet, so no conjecture can be based on that. The kiosks are the only buildings which have been put up, and they are too fragile and immaterial to be used as residences.

With Lord Kitchener builds, then, it will be assumed that he has chosen the little island in the middle of the Nile as his permanent home.

Scott's novels, "Paradise Lost," Scott's poems, and other similar reading, have been a strong factor in forming a good taste in literature, when heard by children from 7 to 10 years of age. Such children have of their own volition learned large parts of "The Lady of the Lake," "The Lay of the Lake Minstrel," and many other poems of great merit. One lady, recently dead, took pleasure, when long past her Soth year, in repeating gems of poetry learned in her early girlhood.

with just as if an audience and the newspaper critics were sitting in judgment known as a burlesque there is witchery in the simple tales of child-hood. Cinderella, whose tiny glass slipper won the prince's heart; Dick Whittington and his cat; the luckless babes in the wood; Aladdin, with his wonder-working lamp, and that unfortunate castaway, Robinson Crusoe, have supplied the motifs of nearly all the Euglish burlesques that have been written. London is the home of burles

London is the home of burlesque and pantomime, and during the holiday season there is scarcely a theater of importance that does not serve its patrons these nursery stories in dramatic form, with a superabundance of tinsel and spangles and the inevitable harlequinade. "Cinderella" A Story of Stage Lite.

The requests for theater favors in the small towns are very troublesome. Every person of local standing feels that he has a right to admission at least, while the trustees and the constable feel that they are entitled to private boxes. Some of the requests are decidedly unique.

Mr. Charles Frohman concluded arrangements with Messrs, Hyde & Benman by which he will become lessee of the Heraid Square Theater after the present lease held by Samuel S. "Cinderella" alone has been dished up in a hundred different ways, and generally there are several versions of this popular fairy tale to be found in the theaters in London after Christmas. Every one in the great English metropolis then goes to the burlesque and pantomime, and the playhouses are crowded. Matinees are given daily, and at Covent Garden and Drury Lane, where the most important productions are made, the house is sold out for weeks ahead. During the run of "The Sleeping Beauty and the Beast" at the Drury Lane Theater the advance sale reached the enormous sum of $100,000.

Discovery Made by a Famous Specialist Who Asks No Pay Until the garding Its Use.

Cure Has Been Effected.

A most wonderful discovery for the cure of Varicocele and Stricture, without pain, the use of the knife or loss of time has been made by Dr. Goldberg, of Detroit, Mich. For years the doctor has given patient study to the treatment of these diseases, and he guarantees his Latest Method Treatment a positive cure.

The treatment consists of a combination of drugs, which removes all traces of the Stricture, while in Varicocele it equalizes circulation, thereby restoring the parts to their natural condition and at the same time strengthens the organs, stops nervousness, backache, smarting sensations and unnatural dicharges.

It is also a guaranteed cure for weak men, and if he accepts your case for treatment you can pay when cured; this is certainly a fair proposition, as you need pay nothing until a complete cure has been made. Unless the doctor was certain that his Latest Method Treatment was a positive cure he could not make this offer.

Address, in confidence, Dr. Goldberg,
208 Woodward avenue, Room 5, Detroit, prove one of the great medical discoveries of the age. Thus far the prospects of formalin becoming a wonderful means of cure in cases of blood poisoning have been discussed almost wholly in the lay press, the medical journals having not as yet taken up the subject.

Formalin is a proprietary germicide, being composed of a 40 per cent solu-tion of formaldehyde. It is obtained by subtracting two atoms of hydrogen from wood alcohol, and thus far it has been used chiefly as an antiseptic or disinfectant, and as such, it is stated, is particularly effective. It is much used by undertakers as an embalming fluid. Formalin has a strong odor, a whiff of it being sufficient to cause the tears to come to a person's eyes, and its action on the blood is said to be quite severe.

A number of interviews with prominent members of the medical profesin Washington have been obtained by a reporter for the Star, and it is discovered that considerable diversity of opinion exists with reference to the probability of formalin proving a great medical discovery for treatment of the cases mentioned. It is generally conceded, however, that the experiments thus far conducted have been insufficient to form a basis for definite conclusions respecting the efficacy of the drug in curing blood poisoning.

VARYING VIEWS. In the absence of detailed and authoritative information with reference to the intravenous injection of formalin for the cure of septicaemia, Dr. W. C. Woodward, of the health department was unwilling to discuss the subject. He said, however, that the injection into the body of what is known as normal salt solution, which consists merely of a mixture of six parts of common table salt, purified, of course, with one thousandth part of water, has produced good results in the treatment of similar diseases, not because of any virtue in the salt, but merely because the water added to the blood tends to dilute the poison circulating in the blood and to favor its removal from the body.

"It may be that the injections of possible, however, that formalin can be mixed with the blood in the body culating there without the blood, injuring the blood vessels and resulting in death.

Dr. Woodward was especially emshould not yet regard intravenous injections for the cure of septicaemia as a, wonderful medical discovery, which, he says, it has not yet been shown to be, lest they may soon regard i a wonderful medical mistake. And he declares that it must not be regarded as a medical mistake until th fession generally has adopted it, and then been forced to abandon it.

REGARDED AS DANGEROUS. Dr. George M. Kober, president of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, said: "My opinion of for malin as a remedy in cases of septicaemia, based upon the experiments so far conducted, is that it is a dangerous means of effecting a cure. It might be used with good results in treatment of local affections, but think physicians generally object to using any strong germicide as an injection into the blood vessels. "I hardly think the prospects for its proving a great medical discovery in the treatment of blood poisoning are promising, but a larger field may be opened up for this disinfectant in using it as a local remedy."

Assistant Surgeon-General Geddings, of the board of public health and marine hospital corps, said: of cases which have heretofore been regarded as hopeless. Acute septicaemia is apparently a desperate condition, demanding bold and prompt measures, and formalin as a remedy in these cases seems worthy of further investigation."

sirous of further investigation in regard to the use of formalin in blood poisoning before they are willing either to accept or reject it as a remedy. Dr. John W. Bayne stated that he had made no personal experiments with formalin as a cure for septicaemia, but from the reports of its effect on patients he had considerable confidence in its efficiency, under certain conditions. He said he felt very much inclined to give it a test in the first case of septicaemia presented to him for

"But a great deal depends, I think, upon the conditions," said Dr. Bayne. 'For instance, in a case of necrosis of the intestines formalin could not do any good without first restoring the normal conditions of the affected portion, or by resection, by which the dead part would be removed. The field for the use of formalin in blood poisoning. I should say, would be much larger and more promising of good results in cases of puerpera sepsis." IN AN EXPERIMENTAL STAGE.

Dr. H. L. E. Johnson, president of the Medical Association of the District said: "I do not think the experi-ments conducted thus far with formain as a remedy for septicaemia justify recommending its use as an injection. I should be very guarded in using it in that manner, until more certain of its efficiency. It has a very strong action and has a tendency in a strong solution, to destroy the blood Formalin is in an experimental stage now with respect to this particular disease, and its use might work an injury.

In May formalin, if sufficiently diluted, have been effective for the same reason," of last year she had an extremely severe attack of rheumatism. The best possible aid was at once secured, but after three months' treatment and good said Dr. Woodward. "It does not seem nursing her case was so much worse that she had become a chronic rheumatic. She was reduced in flesh about fifty pounds and had become a mere skeleton. One limb was twisted to such an extent that the knee joint became stiff and the hip joint had slipped from its socket. When moved the least bit she would suffer excruciating pain. Her temperature ran up to 104 and there was continual fever for three months. Her suffering was almost unbeliev-

We had just about given up all hopes of her recovery when we read in the papers of some of the wonderful cures that Powley's Liquified Ozone was phatic in the statement that the public effecting. To make sure that these cases were genuine we called upon the people whose testimonials appeared. Ozone. A bottle was purchased and the treatment commenced. Shortly after Mrs. Willfong was able to sleep naturally and her appetite improved. She had not been able to sleep naturally and had but little appetite for three months previous. In a week's time she was removed down stairs to another bed and gradually gained in strength all the time. In a few weeks she had gained in flesh and now her general health is as good as ever.

The hip joint, of course, is not altogether in its proper place and she is somewhat lame; but otherwise is in good physical condition. She has regained her good health and every trace of her rheumatism is gone. Her recovery is due entirely to the use of Powley's Liquified Ozone, as it succeeded after all other remedies had failed. RE-ENSLAVEMENT OF THE NEGROES

The Backward Step Taken By a U. S. Senate Committee.

Heals Diseases Called Incurable Shut Another Door of Hope in the Face of the Slaves Abraham Lincoln Set Free.

[New York Evening Post.] A Republican committee of a Republican Senate devoted Lincoln's birthday to the shutting of one more door of hope in Free Help for the Sick the face of the slaves whom Lincoln freed. Dr. Crum has been pronounced unfit to hold Federal office-simply bethat his character is above reproach and his ability out of the common. He is the type of those "very intelligent" negroes upon whom Lincoln wished to confer the suffrage, long before his party was ready to, and upon whom he would, by necessary inference, have been glad to bestow office. Lincoln could not have failed to sympathize with Sumner's later position-namely, that a fit colored man in a proper office was a "constant testimony and argument" for equal rights. No wonder that our latter-day recreancy to the principles of Lincoln should have called from Arshbishop Ireland in Chicago yesterday the indignant words, "To announce that the citizen who is black must not aspire to a political life, must not approach the ballot box, is to war against American institutions."

The two things go together. Disqualification for office means, for the negro, disfranchisement. The New York Sun is bold enough to speak out openly what that his character is above reproach and disfranchisement. The New York Sun is bold enough to speak out openly what many are saying privately. It would have the ballot taken from the black man. To have given it to him at all was, it says, a blunder. Senator Hoar tells us of a Republican colleague who goes further, and maintains that it was a mistake to have abolished slavery. That is logical, for the movement to deprive the negro of his political rights is really a movemnt to re-enslave him. People talk glibly about preserving to him his "civil rights"—the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness—after his political rights are extinguished, but this is to fly in the face of history. Have we got to argue over again the Reconstruction debates of 1867? Must some new Sumner arise to tell us that "a righteous government cannot be founded on the exclusion of a race"?

Disabilities cannot be effectually removed event by confering residue.

Disabilities cannot be effectually removed except by conferring privileges. There is no half-way house between a slave and a citizen. Every attempt to stop short in the process of freedom to stop short women, doctors and surgeons, clergymen and educators, are wondering at the remarkable cures made by Professor Thomas F. Adkin, discoverer of the Adkin Vitaopathic treatment.

Professor Adkin heals not by drugs, nor by Christian Science, nor by Osteopathy, nor by Hypnotism, nor by Divine Healing, but by a subtle psychic force of nature in combination with certain vital magnetic remedies which contain the very elements of life and health.

A reporter recently tasked with Professor Adkin, and was asked to invite all have let them out of wires them. not hold office, was rent to surdity. "What have you done?" asked Wilberforce, whose sympathies for the oppressed knew no white or black. "You have let them out of prison, but you still compel them to wear prison garb."

Herein 'lies the portentous importance of Dr. Crum's case. In his the prejudice of caste strikes at his whole race. His of caste strikes at his whole race. His who are worried by the ills of those dear to them, to write to him for asistance. "Some people have declared," said Professor Adkin, "that my powers are of God, they call me a Divine Healer, a man of mysterious powers. This is not so. I cure because I understand nature, because I use the subtle force of nature to build up the system and restore leafth, but at the same time I believe that the Creator would not have given me the Opportunity to make the discoveries I have made, or the ability to develop them, if He had not intended that I should use them for the good of humanity. I therefore feel that ft is my duty to give the benefit of the science I practice to all who are suffering. I want you democracy, or to the more than appeal to the fundamental principles of democracy. appeal to the fundamental principles of democracy, or to the memories of our heroic age. It is left for a Catholic prelate to tell these conspirators against the negro's political rights that they are striking at the heart of this nation. striking at the heart of this nation.

Negro suffrage a failure? So, with as much evidence, is Irish suffrage in this country a failure, or German, or Polish, or Italian suffrage. But does anyone propose to take the freeman's weapon—the ballot—from the men who have come to us from foreign lands? Municipal suffrage as a whole might be said to be a failure in this country. But for this are we going to disfranchise cities? That is not the democratic way. That is not the patriotic, the Christian, the truly enlightened way. If any class of the electorate is ignorant, it is our business to torate is ignorant, it is our business to see that it is educated. If it is a prey to designing politicians, we must not throw up our hands, confess that trickery is too much for honesty, and call for the dis-franchisement of voters whom corruptionists can debauch but whom we are too lazy to persuade. We get down to the fundamentals of democacy, in this bininess. "We must teach our masters to read," said Robert Lowe, when the extension of the suffrage in England was read," said Robert Lowe, when the extension of the suffrage in England was carried in 1867. That is the secret of democratic progress; of the cumulative amelioration of conditions. The reason why this country has been, as Goldwin Smith has said, a vast hopper into which all sorts of races have been poured and come out citizens of the republic, is that there has been this constant appeal to there has been this constant appeal to the intelligent classes to defend them-selves against the ignorant and the degraded by educating and elevating them. Strip the black man of his political rights and you cut the nerve of negro education.

Yes, and why educates him at all, if the natural fruits of education are to be de-nied him Dr. Crum, of Charleston, is admitted to be an educated gentleman. He stands head and shoulders above the people of his own race. He represents the colored man who has risen, as the disfranchisers say they would like to see all negroes rise. But how can they be expected to want to rise when they see the ordinary recognition and reward of ability and characters withheld from a way.

The New Baby Water Would Have to Be Raised Over Two Hundred Feet.

From the moment a child is born the question of nourishment becomes of great importance. A right start avoids a lot of trouble later on; it's so easy to begin right, too.

Many women cannot or will not-chiefly will not-nurse their children. The best thing to do under the circumstances is to help the bottle babies all we can—they're at a big disadvantage at best. We know positively that nothing will do them more good than Scott's Emulsion—a few drops in the bottle. It seems to furnish just the right quantity and the right kind of nourishment needed for babies and growing children.

The women who are willing but unable to properly nurse their children will find Scott's Emulsion a great help—a two-fold help in fact. It has a direct and immediate effect, not only feeding and sustaining the mother, but insuring also a flow of rich, nourishing milk for the baby.

Thus Scott's Emulsion strengthens the mother and goes naturally through the milk and strengthens the child.

BRITAIN'S RAILROADS

Have Not Much to Learn From the American Systems.

The departments in the March Canadian Magazine are this month even better than ever. Among the special features, "The Needs of the Northwest," a paper by the Hon. Clifford Sifton, is especially interesting. Mr. Sifton shows that the period of experiment has passed and that the settler who now goes Col. Yorke, chief inspecting officer of the board of railways, a department of the board of trade, who recently investigated American railroading in behalf of the board of trade, was issued yesterday afternoon in a bluebook. Col. Yorke found much to interest him in the practical construction of American railroads, but decided that comparatively little of it was available for English use, chiefly because the expense of a change would nullify its advantages. He was much interested in the automatic and other mechanical devices, but thought the gain was counterbalanced by the increased risks to passengers and employes, which, in the case of automatic signaling, might be due to the weather or possibly to be due to the weather or possibly to the failure of mechanism. One of the most striking articles in McClure's Magazine for March is by Lindows not believe it will be advisable to copy the American design. He approves decidedly of the American system of examination for promotion in the railway service, and says that in this respect the American railways are ahead of the British companies. Col. Yorke points out that New York and Boston furnish valuable lessons to lines, because those cities "outlined the is ". London in the matter of urban dertakings, not leaving the concessions and other "taking" stories and sketches, while the illustrations are liberal in numto be scrambled for by private com-panies." Difficulties in the Way of Supplying London with Water from Lake Erie-City Is More Than 230 Feet Above the Lake Level.

The suggestion has been made on more than one occasion that in the event of the city being unable to increase its water supply by the addition of springs in the vicinity of Springbank Park, the next best step, rather than utilize the river water, would be to lay a main to Lake Erie and thus have an endless supply for all purposes. That such an undertaking would ever be ventured is doubtful, unless the city should grow to a tremendous size. The cost of laying a main 28 miles to Lake Erie would be enormous—certainly prohibitive for a city of London's present population—and in addition to this the cost of a pumping plant at the lake side and the cost of operating the same would have to be added. However, until such a move is seriously spoken of, and a step in that direction taken, little is likely to be heard of it.

While some may have considered the question, it is safe to say that many have not given a thought to many phases of it. Did it ever occur to them that to get water to London from the lake it would not only have to be pumped a distance of 28 miles, but the machinery would also have to raise it over 200 feet? That is

The accompanying sketch shows the depth of the great lakes, their height above the sea level, and the position of London. Being at the head of the chain, Superior is the highest, the difference between it and Erie being 28 feet. The Grand Trunk Railway station here is 806 feet above the sea, and as Erie is only 574, it means that water pumped from there to this city would necessarily have to be raised 232 feet in the course of the 28 miles. Owing to the distance and the elevation of the city, the machinery at the lake would have to be of very great strength. The chief trouble, however, would not be along that line, nor would the presence of such a large volume of water in the main at one time mean that the danger of a breakage would be any greater than under ordinary circumstances. The greatest difficulty would arise from the intense friction in the pipe. With the main full, and the weight of the 28 miles bearing back on the lake end of the system, it would produce an intense friction, and therefore require all the more pressure to force the water through. To bring the water to the surface in London would require strong machinery, and after that was obtained, additional would have to be secured, according to the pressure desired. Of the cost of such an undertaking an estimate has never been made, but it would certainly be up in figures that would set the ratepayers talking.

Again, the fluid which comes up in some of the Yellowstone Park geysers has a temperature of 1% degrees, and speculation on the result of trying to tap that supply, or of locating a heat motor on the slopes of Pelee, is most inviting.

The particular type of engine employed to convert the heat thus sought would uttate the depth to which it would be necessary to go. In any case the machin-ery could be kept on the surface of the earth. If there were two vertical shafts, Poole describes the condition of the earth. If there were two vertical shafts, ones for the downward movement of cola water, and one for the upward flow of hot hquid, and if a capacious reservoir were blasted out at the bottom to hold the water while it was absorbing heat from the inclosing rock, the rest would be comparatively simple. It would then be necessary to decide whether to use in the engine itself some substance like carbonic acid, sulphur dioxide or ether, which will vaporize and expand at a lower temperature than water does, or to employ steam. In the former case it would be necessary to go down only far enough to obtain a temperature of 150 or 200 degrees, while in the latter 300 degrees or more would be requisite. Now, says the professor, Javan is the "Ionian," or Greek, and the Greek of the old Biblical geographer is, accordingly, the brother of the two nations of Asia Minor, Tubal and Meshech. Professor Sayce considers that the geographical of the Greek is plain. He lived on the Southern coast of Asia Minor, and occupied the region which extended from the Gulf of Antioch to Rhodes, including the Island of Cyprus. The Ionic Greek was the son of the Cilican Japheth, who had mixed his blood with that of sea rovers of the stock of Hellen, and the language that he spoke was a mixture also.

The Ionian Greek was not a pure blooded Hellene like the Dorian, but. half European and half Asiatic. His first home was not in Europe, but the South of Asia Minor, where he mingled with Dorian settlers from the West. But the curious point is that the Hittite grammar presents an extraordinary resemblance to Greek grammar, and the professor's recent decipherment of the Hittite inscriptions has led him to believe that in Greek we have an Asiatic as well as an Aryan element.-London Globe.

No Bank Checks in Germany.

The Berlin correspondent of Commercial Intelligence calls attention to the antiquated and cumbersome method of forwarding remittances that obtains in Germany. It is greatly to be wished that the means be provided for boring two or three experimental holes to a depth of three miles, in order to reveal the temperature gradient further down than man has hitherto gone. It would then be important to learn, by practical test, and not mere computation, the maximum amount of power that can be derived from a single pair of holes. How Normal School Connection Works -Letter From Mr. Dearness.

Discussion caused by the recently published comparison of the Model School and Medical School shows considerable misapprehension. What Dr Moorhouse said in his last letter is quite true, viz., that the Normal School clinical instructions in the hospital. A considerable part of the Normal School students' duties is simply observing and occupies only part of one-quarter of a day, and the practice lessons are previously carefully prepared and a plan of each one is written out in detail for submission to the Model School teacher. CHICAGO.

Chicago, March 6.—Wheat—The situation in wheat today was a little improved over yesterday from a buil standpoint, although at no time did the market show decided strength. All the cables were fractionally lower, and reflected rather depressing conditions in foreign markets. Around 75%c early in the session there was further liquidation of May, which broke the price under 75½c. The wheat was wanted around this figure, however, and recoveries were quickly brought about, some of the leading commission houses doing a big business on the buying side. For the moment the liquidation appears to be about over, but we are not strong believers in higher prices until some important bull factors enter into the general situation. This is most likely to be crop-scare talk or something of that kind. We believe there is more money

The recent acquisition by this company of leases on 360 acres additional in the Wheatley District makes its control of oil lands now cover 1,890 acres in all, thus increasing its assets by nearly 25 per cent, with a corresponding increase in the intrinsic value of its stock. The fact that this addition was also made without drawing a dollar from its rapidly accumulating treasury funds, evidences the intent of its directors to continue the success of the company's operations, and let no opportunity pass to maintain its substantial character and leading position among Canadian enterprises.

At the customary oil field reckoning of one well to an acre, the probable output from these properties is almost beyond computation. The Wheatley property adjoins the several wells drilled and operated by the Union Gas and Oil Company, and is considered a very valuable acquisition; while President Woodward, of the Dominion Company, advises us that by the installation of the air compressor he expects to increase the output of the famous Gurd Gusher to 400 or 500 barrels a day—and this product is now bringing a higher price than any other petroleum oil on the North American Continent. Contracts are also under way-for the immediate development of the Wheatley property, where a good quality of oil has been found. of oil has been found.

THE LATE JOHN WATTERWORTH, One of the best known pioneers of Middlesex county, who died on Sunday, March 1, 1903, REDUCED M. H. O.'S SALARY

Board of Health Brings Dr. Hutchinson's Salary to $1,000.

Will Appoint a Veterinary Surgeon to Inspect Dairies.

The board of health held a brief meeting this morning, when it was decided after a vote had been taken to reduce the medical health officer's salary from $1,500 to $1,000. The other transactions were of a routine order. This course was adopted because the board decided to relieve Dr. Hutchinson from the duty of inspecting herds of cows, dairies, slaughterhouses, etc. Instead of having him do this they deemed it necessary to appoint veterinary surgeon as an inspector of herds, etc., at a salary of not more than $300 a year, and in view of this appointment to reduce the medical health officer's salary one-third.

The new inspector would be required to make an inspection and give a report at least four times a year. The motion to reduce Dr. Hutchinson's salary was made by Mr. Willis and seconded by by Dr. Campbell and Messrs. McBride the mayor. It was vigorously opposed Dr. Campbell, and Messrs. Bride and Taylor, who argued that the change was unnecessary, and that the Yeas-Carrothers, Beck, Skinner and

By Way of Comment.

Many owners of trotting or pacing youngsters seem to think that unless they place them in the hands of famrace drivers early in life they are handicapped. Nothing could be fur-ther from the truth. Few of the successful race drivers care to fuss with undeveloped youngsters, and even if they did, it is only an occasional man ful in bringing a colt along in his first out of four starters. of that class who would be as successspeed lessons as a trainer would be who has given his attention principally to the education of youngsters, instead of to campaigning race horses. There are a few, very few, trainers forbidden if a bill introduced into the who have shown the ability to succeed legislature by Senator Whitehead beboth as colt trainers and as campigners of aged horses. Some have started on the road to success by developing youngsters, but the greater within 60 days. The penalty for violanumber of those, even, abandoned the training of colts after experiencing the fascination of a campaign through the grand circuit. A first-class man to develop the speed of youngsters is as essential as a first-class man to drive them in their races later on, but in very few instances will the same man be found capable of filling both branches of training satisfactorily.

"Al" Watts Who Has Signed With Concord, N. H.

In "Al" Watts the Concord baseball team secure a "find" that will prove a great addition to that team, and Manager Carney should feel well pleased at having secured this signature to the contract. Watts will in all probability be seen in the Eastern League next season, and will be a credit to London before many years go by. The following shows Watts' record in connection with baseball: In 1899 he played center for the London Reds, and in 1900 he began his career as a pitcher, then joining the Memorials, and again playing with them in 1991. Last season he pitched for the Aberdeens until he was signed by the Jackson, Mich.. team of the Michigan State League. He pitched and won some phenomenal games for his team, and won a name that places him among the coming pitchers. He has all the marks and making of a "crackerjack." He has a cool head, good speed and plenty of curves, his control being perfect. Watts is 21 years of age, stands 5 feet 11 inches, and weights 171 pounds. He is a London boy and one that Londoners should all feel proud of. Concord is a team of the New England League.

FRANK A. REID. Mr. Frank Reid is a good fellow and general favorite among his associates. While he is not one of London's crack athletes, nor does he claim to be, he is one of London's hardest workers in promoting pure amateur sports. He has had the honor of holding office in almost every branch of sport played in this city within the past ten years, and has always given the best of satisfaction to the public Frank Reid has also done a considerable amount of athletic work him-Canada College football team in 1892-93, and with London juniors when they won the championship under the captaincy of Harry Pope in 1894-95. Afterwards he played with the Lornes team of Toronto, which won the intermediate championship for two seasons, 1896-97. His next venture was on the Osgoode Hall team, Toronto, in 1898. This team reached the semi-finals and then lost out. He was one of the London team in 1900, when they defeated the Peterboro team for the intermediate championship of Ontario. He has always played the position of half-back. In 1898 he was a great factor in assisting Frank Hobbs in coaching the juniors to victory, they winning the championship. He has also taken prominent part in baseball, being a member of the original Arlington team, which won the city championship, always being looked upon as a great batsman. He was one of the lucky members who were chosen to represent the All-Canadian cricket team that was sent to Chicago. He is a fine sparrer and wrestler, and plays a good game of golf. He is also captain of Com-pany D, of the Seventh Regiment, and has a fine lot of young men at his command. He stands six feet and weighs 200 pounds. He was born in London. How She Kissed Depew. No one who has ever interviewed

Senator Depew can deny his magnetic personality. Every newspaper man is his friend. He is never annoyed, never angry and never appears as if taken by surprise. A funny incident I witnessed when he was president of the Central road will illustrate his ready wit: I went to his office to interview him and was asked by his secretary, Capt. Harry du Val, to go in and sit down a few minutes. I entered and sat down in a corner. Depew saw me, but a woman who had seen more than 50 summers sat facing him, not dreaming that a third person was in the office. She was talking animatedly and her corkscrew curls, denoting spinsterhood, fairly shook beneath her hat. The senator's clear cut and often witty replies evi-dently delighted the woman. She rose facing him: "And now, Mr. Depew, one more point; what would you advise me to do, invest in real estate?" He leaned back in his revolving chair and replied: "There are two things, madam. I know nothing about-real estate and women." As quick as a flash she stooped and kissed him, said good-bye and walked majestically out. He never flinched or seemed surprised, but as I advanced toward him he beamed as he sat: merely the perquisites of my office; no railroad president is exempt."-Leslie's
