On 279 Special Trains, C. G. Railways

Up to March 1st 757,400 Troops have travelled over Government Railways.

Thousands arrive each week at Halifax and are sent forward to Dispersal Areas.

Since the war began in 1914 up to March 1st, when S.S. Belgic disembarked her returned soldier passengers at Halifax 757,400 troops have been carried on special trains over the Canadian Government Railways.

The first train which carried troops over the Government Railways the year the war was declared was numbered one and all special troop trains to and from Halifax since that time have been numbered consecutively. The last train from the Belgic was on Saturday No. 1279. Each train averages about twelve cars with an average of 50 men to a car, which figures up a total of 767,400 men carried. Of course in addition to this thousands of soldiers have journeyed between Montreal and Halifax by regular trains during the past four years.

The movement of troops back to Canada is now approaching its greatest activity. Last Sunday 5000 arrived at Halifax by the transports Lapland and Belgic and fifteen special trains were despatched westward inside of fourteen hours.

G. S. Megantic with soldiers and dependants arrived Wednesday and S.S. Adriatic is due Sunday. The movement of returnees is to be kept up actively.

Founder of St. Vincent de Paul Society

(By N. C. W. C. News Service.)
It was in answer to the taunts of those who declared that the tree of Christianity was dead and no longer bore fruit that Frederic Ozanam and seven companions founded the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, anticipating under the guidance of the Church a sort of type of social service that has spread throughout the civilized world.

Frederic Ozanam was born in Mian on April 23, 1813, but he spent the greater part of his life in France, studying law in Paris, and manifesting, even in his youth, a great devotion to the Church and to God's poor. Yet, despite his piety, he was for a long time disturbed with temptations against the faith, finally overcoming these through the instructions of a priest and philosopher, Abbe Noiret.

Ozanam left Paris in 1836 and was appointed to the bench of Lyons, later accepting the chair of commercial law in the same city. On the death of Faurel, for whom he substituted as one of the judges of the Cour de Cassation, he was elected permanently to the former's post. Believing with Lacordaire, that a Christian democracy was the end towards which Providence was leading the world, he expounded this notion in many of his writings, especially after the Revolution of 1848. To him the Gospel had renewed or revived all the germs of good to be found in the ancient and barbarian world, and he developed this idea in many studies. He took great interest in the education of the young, and was one of those who signed a petition addressed to the Archbishop of Paris urging him to obtain a large body of religious teachers for Catholic school children, whose faith was being endangered by unbelievers.

In organizing the St. Vincent de Paul Society, Ozanam followed the rules of charitable aid set down by his patron. The service of the members was to include the poor, the sick, the infirm and the unemployed, without distinction of creed or race. No discussion of personal or religious matters was permitted at the meetings, and it was emphasized that moral as well as material assistance should be an end of the organization. The foundation of the society was laid in 1833, when Ozanam was but twenty years old. The first St. Vincent de Paul conference to be established in the United States was that in St. Louis in 1845. The Society has now spread throughout every European country and has branches in China, India, Asiatic Turkey, Ceylon, Egypt, Natal, Transvaal, Canada, Mexico, Central America, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Argentina, Peru, Ecuador, Paraguay, Uruguay and British Guiana.

Frederic Ozanam lived to see the Society of St. Vincent de Paul spread through many countries. He died at Marseilles in 1853. Replying to the priest who exhorted him on his deathbed to have confidence in God, he replied: "Oh, why should I fear God, Whom I love so much?"

A Word To Boys

It is not much to say, perhaps, that never before in all history has the Catholic Church had such splendid prospects as are now spread out before her in this country. But in order to take full advantage of this magnificent opportunity, the Church requires an immense army of men and women in her service. The demand for Brothers is so great that these communities are sadly compelled to refuse applications for their services in various places on account of not having enough men.

Now there are many boys who, while having no inclination at all for the priesthood, would be able to do excellent work as Brothers teaching in the schools or assisting in homes and industrial schools. Tradesmen, such as carpenters, painters, plumbers, bakers and cooks are needed, as well as boys having a taste for these trades.

Every boy should seriously ask himself, therefore, whether he ought to remain in the world or devote himself to the service of God in religion. Work in the mills and factories is hard. The majority of bookkeepers and clerks have long hours and small pay. The higher salaried officers in the railroad and corporations have their rivalries and disappointments. It is not always the most capable or the most worthy that is promoted, so that most of these officials have their grievances, not to speak of the strenuous work they must do. All this hardship and worry gains for the toiler, in most cases nothing more than a living. Even if he succeeds in amassing a fortune he cannot take one cent of it beyond the grave.

The life of a Brother, it is true, is far from being a life of ease and comfort; on the contrary, it is one of labor. But to imagine that he is thereby, depressed and made gloomy and sad would be a very great mistake. The fact is there is no class of people any where so happy as those who devote themselves unreservedly to God in religion. Happiness does not consist in the money one possesses or in the pleasures indulged in, but rather in the peace of a good conscience. In other words, the more perfectly one serves God the happier he is.

Hence it is that those who give themselves to God by the vow of obedience are happier than those who remain in the world. The Brother is happier, moreover, because his fellow Brothers are congenial souls to whom he is deeply attached by the bonds of common interest. Living as they always do in communities of three or more, the Brothers have an advantage in that they are often obliged to live alone deprived of agreeable companionship.

While the Brother of limited education can make himself very useful, one who has a taste for study is given every encouragement and employment suited to his talents. Fear not, therefore, to enlist in the great army of Charity. Have the courage to despise the judgments of the world, which will seek to make little of what is in reality a noble enterprise. Come forward and help Holy Church to make this the strongest, happiest and most religious nation the world has ever seen. Think of the reward. "Every one that left father or mother, or brothers or sisters, or lands for My Name's sake shall receive a hundredfold and life everlasting."

A Legend of The Cross

Lot had escaped from Sodom, when there appeared to him an angel holding three cypress cuttings in his hand.
"Plant these," said the angel, "and if they live and grow your great sin shall be pardoned. If they die, you shall be punished as you deserve. The water with which you refresh them must be brought from the River Jordan, and must be brought fresh every day."

Here was a hard task, but Lot did not question its justice. Every morning he made a journey to the sacred river, bringing back the water for his precious trees, which grew and flourished amazingly.

One morning, as he was returning to Hebron, a beggar met him by the roadside and asked him for a drink of water.
"I can give him a little," mused Lot, "and then have enough for my trees."

But when the beggar's thirst was quenched there appeared another, and another, until the water was gone. Then Lot threw

PILES HEMORRHOIDS ARE CAUSED BY CONSTIPATION.

There are few complaints more common than hemorrhoids, commonly called piles, and scarcely any which cause more trouble and misery.

Piles are divided into three classes, i.e., itching, protruding and bleeding, and consist in a fullness of blood and languid circulation in the portion of the lower bowel or rectum.

The chief causes of piles are constipation, straining at stool, and the use of drastic purgatives. This latter we would very strongly advise against as these strong purgatives, especially those containing calomel and other mineral drugs are too strong for the average person's bowels.

A mild laxative will do more to correct this trouble than anything else, and this you will find in Milburn's Laxative Pills. This is a purely vegetable, small, easy to take, and does not grip, weaken or sicken.

Milburn's Laxative Pills are 25c. a vial at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

himself down, buried his face in the sand and wept. When at length he raised his head an angel stood near him.
"Why do you weep?" he asked.
And Lot told him.
Be not alarmed," answered the heavenly visitant. "Obedience is acceptable in the sight of God, but charity is even more so. You served Him in succoring His poor. Henceforth, as your reward, the trees shall thrive without water. Your long penance is over."

Thus it came about that the cypress tree grew without the aid of Lot. And when one of them was old and mighty, the Cross of Christ was made from it; that He, the legend runs, "Who died for His love of mankind might suffer on the tree which was blessed by the 'grace of charity.'"

The San Quentin Congregation of the Sacred Heart, having decided to build a church to serve the new, growing quarter of Rome, propose to erect an adjoining seminary for the missions. The Pope has written a letter, most highly praising this holy enterprise, to which he subscribes twenty thousand lire, authorizing the Fathers at the same time to send out an appeal to the Catholic world for subscriptions.

Treatment Of Returned Men

In his recent valedictory address to Congress President Wilson included in his recommendations— "Rehabilitation and training of disabled soldiers and sailors. Let Canadian returned men take note of these words. Let them reflect that they mean that the great United States, infinitely richer than Canada, and with a soldier's re-establishment problem proportionately incomparable in magnitude, has yet to begin work to re-establish its returned men which Canada has been engaged in for upwards of three years. It is more than three years now since Canada, still in the ordeal of battle, began preparing to care for her soldiers. Since then much has been achieved. There have been gratuities higher than those of any other nation; vocational training which has aided and re-established tens of thousands of maimed men and untrained men pensions more generous than those of any other nation; preferment to all returned men in the public service, and a land settlement scheme which, upon a scale unequalled by similar schemes in any other country, has placed many thousands of soldiers on the land. True, more has not been done than ought to have been done, for the debt to those who fought is heavy, nevertheless it is worth while remembering that what a great people like the United States propose on the eve of 1921, Canada has been doing for returned men since 1917. It is worth remembering if for no other reason than to answer those extremists who constantly injure the returned man's cause by senseless attacks upon our Government and on our people.

Canada and The League

Hon. N. W. Rowell has done a service to the cause of world peace by his plain speaking at the League of Nations Conference at Geneva. Mr. Rowell and his fellow delegates from Canada have the advantage over many of the representatives of other nations in coming to Geneva unhampered by diplomatic tradition, and with no long history of alliance and counter alliance to hinder and enmesh their policy. It would be impossible for the Great Powers not to dilute their political ethics with a tincture of expediency and action which taken by Canada may be acclaimed as militant and progressive, if followed by Britain or France would be dubbed radical and revolutionary. Mr. Rowell puts his finger on the danger which has been the object of no small amount of adverse criticism against the League when he refers to the growing tendency of the Great Powers of Europe to control the machinery of its operations. Article Twenty-three of the Covenant provides that bureaux for the study and regulation of economy and finance, of transportation and transit and of health, shall be instituted by conventions of the members of the League. A committee appointed by the League recommended that these bureaux should be established by the League forthwith. Mr. Rowell protests that if the report of this committee were adopted these bureaux would come under the control of the Council of the League, which is dominated by the Great Powers, and that with these bureaux centralized at Geneva they themselves would be under the thumb of the Powers of Europe on account of their contiguity, which would tend to make the membership of the bureaux solely European. "Canada, for instance," he pleads, "would be unable to send her leading men so great a distance to become a part of several bodies."

The opening words of the Covenant are: "The high contracting parties, in order to promote international co-operation and to achieve international peace, agree to this Covenant." It is not without significance that the establishment of international co-operation is placed in the very forefront of the preamble, and Mr. Rowell made it quite plain in his address that he was anxious that the member nations should grapple with the financial, transportation and health problems. He does not want the solution of those problems to be adopted by a small executive committee of the society of which his country is a member. "Find your solution and report back to us next year," he says in effect, "but do not take any decisions which may have a vital effect on world peace, and which, therefore, are Canada's concern no less than the concern of every member of the League, until we meet again in the full assembly of all the nations."

It is a testimony to the justice of the case and of the amity that prevails in the League that this viewpoint was adopted after many conferences at midnight, and the report of the great committee is "referred back."

Article Ten And The League

The action of Canada's delegates at Geneva in moving for the deletion of Article X, and the announcement that Sir Robert Borden at the creation of the Covenant opposed this contentious clause, leaves President Wilson apparently alone in his devotion to what he described as "the teeth of the League of Nations."

Article Ten reads as follows: "The members of the League undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the League. In case of any such aggression, or in case of any threat or danger of aggression, the Council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled." It has been pointed out before in The Star that this English version is not exactly identical in meaning with the French. The words translated in English "advise upon" are in French "avisent" and a better interpretation of the last phrase would be "the Council shall deliberate upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled. The translation is peculiarly unfortunate, for the English words go a step further in their encroachment on national sovereignty than the French, and it was this which formed the basis of much argument against the League in the United States Senate.

Lord Grey, on his return to London at the end of his term as special ambassador to Washington, sent a letter to the London Times, in which he discussed this Article Ten. He showed that in Great Britain the Government is daily responsible to the representative authority of the House of Commons, and in case of conflict between the House and the Government the latter must immediately give way, in the United States a President through his representative on the League of Nations, might commit the United States to a policy which the Legislature of that day might disapprove. The inference to be drawn from this letter was that if no great objection to the Article had been expressed by British statesmen, yet its powers to influence the policy of either countries were widely different.

So far as France was concerned, Premier Clemenceau scoffed privately and in public at the League. "I do not believe that the Society of Nations constitutes the necessary conclusion of the present war," he said in the Chamber.

So that, save for America, there were no champions of the famous Article in the Council that sat at Paris, and there was more than one strong opponent. As it turned out, the hostility which President Wilson's enemies were able to conjure from various interpretations of the Article proved his own undoing and a stumbling-block for the League itself. It would appear, now that the clause is likely to disappear, or to be modified so that the dangers its critics fear will be abolished. In any event, the future of the League depends far more upon its spirit than the letter of its laws. It needs a constitution through which its ideals can function, but a constitution that chafes is worse than none at all.—Montreal Star.

Canada At Geneva

Certain United States newspapers have been quick to appreciate the significance of Canada's action at Geneva in taking a course of her own. They have seen that in this, as in other matters, the British Dominions are not merely pawns in a game directed from London and played in the interests of the European end of the British Empire.

The anti-League elements in the United States have laid stress unceasingly on the idea that the British votes in the Assembly of the League would be "swung" on bloc in whatever direction the British Government wished to swing them, and that the United States would be hopelessly outvoted in consequence. They have never yet been able to conceive of the British Dominions as other than Crown colonies, taking orders from Downing Street and unable to act upon any will of their own, even should they possess it. They have not, even yet, realized that Canada and Australia and South Africa played the part in the war which they did play, not under duress, but as free and equal powers, following a line of action which it was their unhampered choice to follow. They have been unable or unwilling to read the plain pages of history and to understand that Canada is not only able but perfectly at liberty to express her opinions on subjects of moment to her and to act upon her opinions when formed.

Of course it is not to be expected that certain chronic Anglophobes among the American press will even try to interpret this latest proof of individuality of thought and action among the British Dominions in the sound and simple way it should be interpreted. They will profess to see in it either an evidence of British "duplicity" or a symptom of the "break up of the Empire." It is neither the one nor the other. It is merely an expression of opinion by a member of a certain family, speaking among his equals on a matter of moment to them all. It does not mean either a combine or a quarrel. It does mean that Canada has her own views on matters which concern herself, that when the time comes she is ready to express them, although they may conflict with those of other members of the family. And, finally, it means that the other members of the family accord her perfect liberty to act as she believes it wise to act. That is all the Geneva incident means.

League of Nations

Geneva, Dec. 7.—Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce of Canada, stirred the Assembly of the League of Nations this morning by an eloquent appeal for action against the typhus epidemic in Poland and the Near East in general Canada and Siam, Sir George remarked, were the only countries that had responded with cash contributions to the call of the council for aid.

"Let it not be said that the flood-gates of sympathy closed," Sir George cried. "It is not to be said that the semi-illies of the world have been dulled to such imperative calls." After this passionate appeal by Sir George, the Assembly voted to appeal to all nations to contribute to a fund of 2,000,000 pounds to fight the epidemic. Foster was rewarded with vigorous applause when he touched on the League's possibilities for welfare work among the impoverished.

Foster said that after the war it was found typhus not only out into Poland's population, but that it was a menace to all Europe. The League this year asked for a 2,000,000 pound fund, he said, and the response was generous. However, nearly all nations imposed such restrictions on the use of the funds that not one pound had been available in combatting the epidemic. Canada has withdrawn her contribution, he said, and others are joining. Work will be started at once, he said, with what money is at hand. Sir George's reminder to the Assembly that much had been promised in aid of the anti-typhus campaign but that little had been paid except by Siam and Canada produced a decided reaction among the delegates. Representatives in all corners of the world succeeded one another at the speaker's stand to give assurance of the co-operation of their Governments in the work.

A member of the Indian delegation, the Prince of Navanagar, added to Sir George's appeal by giving a vivid description of the ravages of typhus in the East. He declared the world was facing in this a graver emergency than the situation in Armenia. Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, the Norwegian delegate, said that the typhus could be effectively fought with the price of two torpedo boat destroyers. He proposed the naming of a committee to get the money.

One of the early acts of the Assembly this morning was to approve the decision of the committee on relations between the Assembly and the Council for the elimination of the entire paragraph of its report which provided that the Assembly had no power to take up questions within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Council. Hon. N. W. Rowell, of Canada, who made the report, pointed out that the elimination did not change the present situation. The report, being merely interpretative, could not change the relations between the Council and the Assembly. Mr. Rowell remarked, but was merely explanatory of the provisions of the Covenant.

Plans for co-operation on technical organizations of the League of Nations by representatives of Armenia and former Russian states, though those states are not admitted to full membership in the League, were also discussed by the Assembly. This was the principal item on the agenda having been brought into prominence by the decision of yesterday of the committee on the admission of new states. The Assembly also continued the work of laying a working basis for the League which would enable it to function as efficiently as possible, pending the time necessary to get a clear interpretation of various matters and not the practical effects of the intricate system by which the Assembly and Council detail into each other.

Geneva, Dec. 8.—Plans proposed for the formation of the technical organization of the League of Nations, dealing with finance, health and transportation, were sharply attacked at today's session of the League's assembly by Hon. N. W. Rowell, of the Canadian delegation. These plans, the Canadian representatives contended, tended to take such organizations out of the hands of the Assembly, which control them, and throw them under the influence of Europe through the impossibility of the non-European nations sending their best men to three or four conferences annually. "Fifty thousand Canadian soldiers under the sod in Europe, the price Canada has paid for the European statesmanship that drenched the continent in blood," Mr. Rowell exclaimed. Mr. Rowell's energetic intervention in the debate took the Assembly by surprise. Most of

A case of leprosy has been discovered in Toronto the first in eight years, the previous case being that of a Chinaman. The present case is that of a woman from the west Indies. The case has been diagnosed by Dr. J. L. McKinley, nose and throat specialist, and the germs have been segregated by Dr. W. E. Ferguson, pathologist at the Western Hospital. Dr. Ferguson said there need be no fear of a spread of the disease, as it is only mildly contagious. The treatment the woman leper is receiving is very similar to that given for tuberculosis.

After Mr. Rowell had voiced his views Gabrielle Hanotaux, of France, took the floor and replied to Mr. Rowell's criticisms. These, the French representative argued, should have been made in committee.

Replying to M. Hanotaux's interpretation of his remarks as an attack upon European statesmen, Mr. Rowell said he did not so intend them and that if any delegate so construed his remark he had no hesitation in withdrawing his words.

Mr. Rowell's second appearance on the speaker's stand removed the embarrassment his frankness had produced in certain parts of the Assembly and he was applauded after proposing adjournment of the debate until tomorrow in order to enable further study for the purpose of conciliating the divergent views.

Old Age

It is too late! Ah! nothing is too late. Till the tired heart shall cease to palpitate. Cato learned Greek at eighty; Sophocles Wrote his grand Oedipus, and Simonides Bore off the prize of verse from his compeers When each had numbered more than four score years; And Theophrastus at four score and ten Had but begun his "Characters of Men." Chaucer, at Woodstock with the nightingales, At sixty wrote "The Canterbury Tales." Goethe, at Weimar, toiling to the last, Completed "Faust" when eighty years were past. What then! Shall we sit idly down and say The night hath come; it is no longer day? The night hath not yet come; we are not quite Cut off from labor by the failing light; Something remains for us to do of dire, Even the oldest trees some fruit may bear. For age is opportunity no less than Youth itself, though in another dress; And as the evening twilight fade away The sky is filled with stars, invisible by day. Henry W. Longfellow.

Jeff's Tough Lesson

Jeff was adopted at an early age by a young mining engineer in Mexico. Of course Jeff was a dog, and he was a great favorite, devoted and affectionate, and he was obedient too—that is, he was obedient with one exception. He always came when he was called, unless the commanding whistle or spoken order reached his ears at a moment when a frantic rabbit was diving into its hole. After that rabbit Jeff would go, regardless of anything his master said or did, and into the burrow as far as he possibly could. His chief ambition was to discover the contents of every hole in the ground. Now, it is all very well to chase bunnies to their lairs, but in this country where Jeff lived, there were many other creatures not so attractive. In fact there were some most disagreeable and dangerous ones infesting that portion of the globe and Jeff soon found this out. "Jeff" warned the dog's master, many a time, after Jeff had disobeyed a command to return, tempted beyond his endurance by a frisky bunny, "one of these days, old man, something is going to happen to you. You will meet a scorpion or a rattler, and then what?" Then Jeff would apologize. He knew well enough that he was doing wrong. He would sit at his master's feet and look up with remorseful eyes as his tail went thump, thump against the ground to emphasize his repentant feelings. But although Jeff promised as best he could that if he were forgiven this time it would never happen again, it always did. The scorpions, he admitted, were mean little varmints. He avoided them as well as he could. As for rattlers, didn't he know as much about them as his master? Didn't they always give warning with that nerve-racking buzz on the tip of their tail? Hadn't he jumped out of their way more than once, and so saved himself from coming in contact with their poisonous fangs, and couldn't he jump again in the face of danger. He wasn't old and stiff, and he wasn't going to get that way, either, at least not for a long long time. His master was young and quick and he was too so really he felt quite able to look out for himself. Thus reasoned Jeff to himself and all went well for some time. So long as his master was near, the world was his. Jeff's motto evidently was, "Love me and the world is mine." His good disposition, his cute bright ways, as well as his cunning, intelligent expression made him a favorite Minard's Liniment for Garet in Cows.

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also. Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and the condition is commonly worse in winter. "I suffered dreadfully from rheumatism, but have been completely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, for which I am deeply grateful." Miss Frances Barr, Prescott, Ont. "I had an attack of the grip which left me weak and helpless and suffering from rheumatism. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and this medicine has entirely cured me. I have no hesitation in saying it saved my life." M. J. McDosola, Trenton, Ont. Hood's Sarsaparilla Removes the cause of rheumatism—no outward application can. Take it.

all over the mining camp. For, with the exception of that one fault mentioned, no one could ask for a better dog. One hot, sunny morning Jeff and his beloved master were out looking for a nice fat rabbit to make a stew for dinner. Suddenly a bunny flashed across the desert on a run for its life, with Jeff in hot pursuit. His master called in vain. Regardless of the shrill whistle that summoned him back, Jeff dashed ahead, and, fortunately for the dog his master was not far behind. The rabbit went headlong into a big hole, and in his hurry, with so many holes about, Jeff made a mistake in his calculations—or perhaps he was running so fast that he couldn't stop to turn into the right hole. Anyway, there were two holes close together. The bunny took one hole, Jeff took the other, thinking like the foolish pup that he was—that he had selected the right one. His body half disappeared and the next moment Jeff jerked back, and the air rang with a newly acquired college yell. "Ki-yi-yoop-ee-yow-you-ki-yi!"

Jeff's master looked on half amused and really quite alarmed, too. Jeff was engaged in what looked like an imitation of an Indian snake dance. He danced and whirled around in frantic terror, while clinging to his nose was a big rattler, its cruel fangs deeply imbedded. "Ki-yi-yoop-ee-ki-yi!" Jeff continued his frenzied yell. With a bound Jeff's master was beside him. He persuaded the dog to hold still, for now Jeff had braced himself and was pawing at the big snake's body. The young man aimed carefully and fired and that was the end of the reptile's career, but alas, Jeff's troubles had only begun. Poor doggie! That dreadful poison from the rattler's fangs was doing its worst. His head as well as his nose began to swell alarmingly. His eyes were nearly shut, his "college yell" died to a moaning whisper. In less time than it takes to tell about it, he was a most pitiable object, and Jeff's master, bending over him, spoke only kind, soothing words, and hadn't even the heart to say, "I told you so!" There was no time to lose, if Jeff's life was to be saved so with a vindictive glance at the big rattler that had done this damage to his pet dog, Jeff's master lifted him tenderly in his arms and fairly ran back to camp. There was no sleep for Jeff or for his owner that night. And the dog weakly tried to express his gratitude, and knowing, as animals invariably do, that his master was trying to help him quietly submitted to being doctored. His head had about as much shape to it now as a sausage. Hour after hour the young engineer worked with his suffering dog, applying remedies to combat the terrible rattlesnake venom. At first it looked as though Jeff could not rally. Every member of the mining camp paid him a visit, and the wisest ones in desert lore shook their heads dubiously. Even Jeff's mournful eyes seemed to say, "It's no use—this is the last of me!" But in answer to every moan he heard the sympathetic voice of the master he loved as he bent tenderly over him.

MEASLES LEFT BAD COUGH.

The after effects of measles may be far reaching, as the irritation of the respiratory passages is one of the characteristics of this disease, and very often those who have been robust, become delicate and liable to lung troubles, hence measles should never be regarded with indifference. Measles are generally followed by an acute attack on the mucous membranes. The sneezing is accompanied with a watery discharge, sometimes bleeding from the nose, a cough of a short, frequent and noisy character, with little or no expectoration, hoarseness of the voice, etc. Once the cough starts you should procure a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, take a few doses a day and thus prevent bronchitis, pneumonia, or perhaps a consumption getting a foothold on your system. Mrs. Oliver Kelly, Bellisle Station, N.B., writes: "Two years ago I had the measles, and they left me with a bad cough. I kept getting worse until at last I could not get my breath. My neighbor told me of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I sent and got a bottle, and before I had used it my cough was all better. I find it a great family medicine for colds and coughs, and I now keep it in the house all the time." Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 35c, a large bottle 60c, at all drug stores and dealers. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"Cheer up, old scout! You're going to pull through all right! And pull through he did, after many anxious hours. In a week Jeff was ready to go hunting again, a thinner and a wiser dog. The camp welcomed this re-appearance, and all the honors of a returned hero were heaped upon him. He had all kinds of choice bones to bury in a hundred mysterious spots, against that always to be dreaded hunger of the future. "Wonder how he'll act about holes!" thought Jeff's master, as they started out together one day. He soon found out. Bunnies were thick and before long Jeff was busy in pursuit of one. It darted off towards its burrow and dived in head first. Close at its heels was Jeff when his master whistled. Instantly the dog turned and came trotting back, the picture of obedience and his master laughed at himself as he watched Jeff twisting himself almost in two in his endeavor to say that he had learned his lesson at last. Jeff was entirely cured. Every seat in the trolley was occupied, when a group of women got in. Going through the car to collect the fares, the conductor noticed a man asleep. Seizing him by the shoulder, he proceeded to shake him back into a state of consciousness. "Wake up!" shouted the conductor. "I wasn't asleep," said the passenger. "Not asleep!" snapt the conductor. "Then what did you have your eyes closed for?" "It was because of the crowded condition of the car," explained the passenger. "I just hate to see women standing."

Monsieur; For 15 days in the month of January I was suffering with pain of rheumatism in the foot. I tried all kinds of remedies but nothing did me any good. One person told me about MINARD'S LINIMENT; as soon as I tried it the Saturday night, the next morning I was feeling very good; I tell you this remedy is very good. I could give you a good certificate any time that you would like to have one. If any time I come to hear about any person sick of rheumatism, I could tell them about this remedy. Yours truly, ERNEST LEVEILLE 216 Rue Ontario East, Montreal. Feb. 14, 1908.
