Beautiful Cynthia;

Victory After Many Defeats.

CHAPTER XXVII.
AN OFFER OF MARRIAGE.

He bit his mustache, and looked at her questioning, and then away from her. Was it possible that she had not heard of the fight on the frontier, of the rumors that several of the officers of the Rexford Fusiliers were wounded, and some dead or missing? No, she could not have heard the news which had stricken Alicia to the ground. And he dared not tell her!

"She's getting better, pulling around," he replied laconically. "I left her there, but she'll follow soon. I wanted to get back at once. Wanted to hear the whole truth—to see you."

"It's very kind of you," murmured Cynthia, rather quaveringly. "But you are always kind and thoughtful for others, Lord Northam."

"No, I'm not," he said gruffly. "Not for most people; can generally look after themselves; but you—Cynthia, look here; I'd made up my mind to keep my mouth shut, but the sight of you, the black dress, the sound of your voice, the thought of your being all alone—has broke me down. Cynthia, I wish you'd let me take care of you. Hold on! I know what you're going to say, but I promised Darrel Frayne that—"

She started, and the smile and color left her face as she shrank from his gaze. The sound of the beloved name smote on her senses like a blow.

"I promised him that—that I'd look after you, and now he's not here—may not come back—"

He blundered into a momentary silence, and looked at her fearfully; but he saw that she did not understand the full significance of his words, and, with averted eyes, he said:

"I mean—that—well, he's not here, and you are alone, and I—Cynthia, you know I love you, that I haven't got over it, never shall, in fact. Let me keep my promise for—his sake, as well as for my own. Be my wife, Cynthia, and give me the right to look after you!"

Reduced in Flesh Sleepless Nights

Kidney Disease and Gravel Caused Keenest Suffering—Cured by
Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. W. Smith. That disease of the kidneys causes the greatest suffering it is well known and when stone or gravel is formed in the bladder the torture is almost beyond human endurance. The disease should never be allowed to reach this dangerous stage. Pains in the small of the back, pain or smarting when passing water, frequent urination, loss of flesh and weight tell of the need of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to regulate and invigorate the kidneys and restore these organs to health.

Mr. W. Smith, Port Dalhousie, Ont., writes:—"For some years I was afflicted with kidney disease and gravel in its most severe form, having often stoppage of water, accompanied by the most dreadful agony. As the disease wore on me I became reduced in flesh and passed sleepless nights. No doctor was able to do much for me, and I used many medicines without obtaining more than temporary relief. My attention was directed to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and by using this treatment the disease was eradicated from my system in less than six months. I have gained in weight, sleep well, and feel better than I have for twenty years." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

She did not blush, her eyes did not leave his face, but as she held out her hand to him he knew that she could not grant his prayer. His face paled, and his lips twitched, and he looked hard into her eyes for a moment; then he rose slowly.

"All right; we'll go on to the station. I've got a cab outside," he said, as casually as he could. "Parsons goin' with you? That's right—good sort, Parsons. She'll look after you."

He did not stay to witness the farewell between Cynthia and the servants, some of whom were visibly affected, Suplexy particularly so; indeed, his struggle to remain calm and composed before his subordinates was quite a painful sight.

Northam went to the station, his face somber and anxious, for he was asking himself whether it would not be better for her to learn the news from him rather than from a less sympathetic informant. But he decided that it was not the place or the time to deal so cruel a blow, and that he would go down to Summerleigh in a day or two.

He engaged a carriage, bought a stock of magazines and illustrated papers and magazines, tipped the guard to an extent that startled even that often and liberally tipped official, and stood beside the door like a soldier on guard.

Cynthia did not thank him—indeed, she felt that her only safety lay in silence. But her hand lingered in his and her eyes rested on his homely face with a full understanding, a profound gratitude.

"You're off!" he said, as the train moved. "You'll send for me if—if you want me, however little? And, I say, try and forget that I—spoke to you. That's all right. Good-by."

Cynthia drew down her veil hastily, and lay back in a corner of the carriage; and Parsons made no foolish attempt to comfort her. A fly awaited them at the station, and the faithful Betsy, who had been engaged as "general," was waiting at the garden gate to welcome them; and Cynthia was home again.

CHAPTER XXVIII.
NEWS OF A LOVED ONE.

Tired as Cynthia was, she lay awake a great part of the night in her old bed in her old room. And at times in those still watches she was almost yielding to a belief that all that had passed in the days since she had left the cottage, was the phantasmagoria of a dream.

If only her father were there with her, to comfort and console her, to encourage her with his cynical but gentle humor, to take up her life again!

Much to Cynthia's relief—for she had misgivings on the point—Parsons was delighted with her new quarters. "You see, miss," she remarked, as she brushed Cynthia's hair—for the last time, Cynthia insisted, for there would be plenty of more important duties for Parsons now—"you see, Miss Cynthia, I'm country-born and bred, like yourself, and I've never been really happy up there in London; there's always been a feeling in my heart that I didn't belong there, but was only waiting to get back. And it's such a lovely place, Miss Cynthia! I was up early this morning—I wouldn't wake you, for I knew that you'd lie awake most of the night, as was only natural—and I took a walk and a look around. It's perfectly beautiful, and the house is just like one of those at home. The smell of the flowers came in at my windows and woke me, if you'll believe me! And Betsy's such a nice, cheerful girl—and handy! Lor', Miss Cynthia, when I think of all the servants that was wanted to run the London house! And to see that that bit of a girl had got everything neat and tidy before I was up, early as I was; it fair astounded me."

"I am glad you are pleased, Parsons," said Cynthia gratefully. "And

I hope you will be happy; the change from Westlake House—

"Don't you speak or think of it, Miss Cynthia," broke in Parsons earnestly. "And, besides, if it's good enough for my betters, it ought to be good enough for me. If this air—why, it's like champagne!—will only bring the color back to your cheeks—not that you ever had much, miss; but you know what I mean?"

"Yes," said Cynthia, with an attempt at her old brightness of speech and manners. "I am going to get quite well, so that when my father comes back—"

For the first few days she kept to the house and garden; not at once could she dare to go to the hillside room which she could see the stream and the bridge, the chimneys of the court rising above the trees; but on the third day, toward evening, she ventured to leave the precincts of home, and, avoiding the path to the ridge, went round by the moor—that moor which her father had refused to sell to Darrel!—It was hard to realize that Sir Anson had indeed one to his heritage of six feet by six, as her father had put it—and made her way toward the village. But she did not reach it on this occasion, or, suddenly, on a wall, she came upon a large bill headed:

"To be sold, by order of the Mortgagee, the Estate of Summerleigh Court."

She stopped and gazed at it, reading no more than the bold-faced heading; then she turned back toward the cottage, her heart aching painfully.

Darrel was poor, homeless; it was all that he was absent, that his eyes could not be seen by that horrible, taring placard.

But surely her sacrifice was not a sin one, and he would reap the reward! She had left him free to win his way back to fortune, to his proper place—no, her sacrifice would not be in vain.

As she came in sight of the cottage, she saw a big, clumsy figure lounging against the gate. It was Sampson Burridge's; and involuntarily she stopped and hesitated; and at that instant she remembered, with the pain of a sudden heart stab, the day he and lounged on the bridge, and the fision of the boy-preserver rose before her.

But she stopped for a moment only, for she knew that she must meet Sampson sooner or later, and grief and misfortune had not robbed Cynthia of her old spirit.

He did not come forward to meet her, but held the gate open—as if the cottage were his rather than hers—with one hand, and extended the other.

He, too, had changed, and for the worse; his big face had grown fatter and coarser, and his resemblance to his father was closer than ever; an evil-smelling cigar was stuck in the corner of his shoulder:

DRY SACK Sherry

The choicest product of the famous Sherry district—Spain.

Welcome you to our guest with a biscuit and a glass of Dry Sack Sherry—It's a graceful old-time custom now coming into favour again.

D. O. HOBLIN, Canadian Agent, Toronto.

JOHN JACKSON, Resident Agent.

"Don't forget to go over the house and pick out them things; but not many, mind!"

When he had quite gone, Cynthia said to Parsons, who, from the passage, was staring with amazement and indignation at the departing Sampson.

corner of his thick lips, stretched in a grin that was meant for one of welcome, and his small, cunning eyes stared at her with insolent admiration an da covert triumph.

"How'dy do, Cynthia?" he cried. "My! you're looking pale and pecky, an' no mistake! Been having a bad time, ain't you? Heard the news, of course. The old lady played it low down on you, went back on you, didn't she? Somehow, I always thought she would. No, I wasn't a bit surprised. There's no trusting the best of her sort, and she wasn't the best by any means, though she was such an out-an'-out swell."

Cynthia touched the red, flabby hand and made a murmured response, and after a moment she passed on to the house, hoping that he would go. But Sampson, the admiration growing bolder in his eyes, followed her into the sitting room, and, plumping into a chair, said:

"I'll sit down and have a chat with you for a minute or two, Cynthia; can't stop long, because we're busy with the sale you know."

Cynthia stood by the table, refraining from removing even her gloves; but Sampson did not appear at all abashed by his reception.

"I suppose you saw the bills?" he inquired, with a grin. "Fine, ain't they? I drew 'em up. Biggest sale we've had in these parts. Ought to have got the thing through before this; but the governor muddled the notice, got behind hand with it—he's getting old, you know, old and a bit shaky—and he wouldn't leave it to me. If he had, I'd have put it through before this. I suppose you'll come to the sale? All the county will be there—"

Cynthia shook her head. "No? You oughter! But if you'd rather not—and, of course, I can understand your feelings—you can look round the place before the day; and if you like to pick out one or two things you fancy, I'll have 'em bought in for you. Not many, of course; for we mean to keep the old furniture, that is, the best of it, and carry on the Court in the good old way. The governor was for letting it, but I stuck out against that. Not me! I'm going to be master of Summerleigh Court, and one of the county gentry."

He grinned with a mixture of cunning and satisfaction that made the blood tingle in Cynthia's veins; but she remained silent.

"Father not back yet?" he said, after a pause, during which he flung the butt end of his foul cigar into the fireplace. "He's a regular Wandering Jew, isn't he? I'm wishing to see 'im, Cynthia, for I want to buy the piece of moorland he and old Sir Anson used to quarrel about."

"My father is on his way home," said Cynthia. "I don't want to seem discourteous, Sampson; but—I am tired; I do not desire to see visitors."

He rose, but laughed banteringly. "Oh, come, I'm not an ordinary visitor, Cynthia," he retorted. "You and me are old friends. I'm not forgetting that you've been a kind of a swell and treated me that night we met outside that place in London as if I was beneath your notice; but I'm a good-hearted chap and don't bear malice. I should be ashamed to drop a friend because I happened to be up in the world and she's down. Well, I'll be off. But I'll look in now and again for a talk over old times; jolly, weren't they? Lor', a little did either of us think of the changes that were coming! But don't you be down-hearted, Cynthia! Your luck may take a turn!"

With a nod and a wink, a leering smile, he lurched to the door, but paused on the threshold and added over his shoulder:

"Don't forget to go over the house and pick out them things; but not many, mind!"

When he had quite gone, Cynthia said to Parsons, who, from the passage, was staring with amazement and indignation at the departing Sampson.

A NEW ANGLE.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

As I was walking across a very familiar bit of country the other day, a muddy sidewalk forced me to climb on a high banking and walk along there for a bit. It's an ill wind that blows nobody good. As I looked out from my new eminence across the familiar piece of territory and the tiny lake which I was skirting, I was struck with its beauty.

I have taken this walk many times, and the landscape has become so familiar to me that I had forgotten how pretty it was. A lighthouse keeper, who had to sleep in a room in which a bell, connected with the light, rang every thirty seconds, told me he had become so accustomed to it that he was not conscious of hearing it at all. Even so this accustomed scene scarcely made an impression upon my eye.

But from my new point of view, all was changed. The familiar scene took on entirely new value. A singularly perfect tree which stands by the edge of the water was revealed to me in all its symmetry. I realized that the curve of the little hill beyond the tiny lake was very beautiful. I saw the reflection of an arc of light in the water, looking like the golden gateway into water fairy land. Indeed I was so pleased by the new beauty of the old scene, that I stood quite still for a moment or two enjoying it.

And all this revelation came to me simply because I got a new angle on an old scene.

Surely you have had an experience like this at one time or another. Some accident of point of view has given you a new angle on a familiar scene, and you have been astonished at the vast change this little thing made. Emerson says that if a man will stoop over and look at the world from between his legs, he will find that the most familiar country looks quite different.

So a new angle creates a new world. Now this is not true merely of the things that we see with our physical eyes. What about the world of our mental vision? Is it not true that a new angle or a new point of view will change that quite as completely.

We are lifted out of our routine by some powerful emotion, or we climb up on to the eminence of sympathy, or some sweet influence teaches.

Perhaps you are not getting the best angle on your life.

Try another one.

HOW BLOOD IS MADE.

The liquids and the digested foods in the alimentary canal pass through the wall of the canal into the blood. This process is called absorption and takes place chiefly from the small intestine. After absorption the blood carries the food through the body, and each cell takes from the blood the food it needs. A pure glyceric extract made from bloodroot, mandrake, stone, queen's root and golden seal root, and sold by druggists for the past forty years under the name of gives uniformly excellent results as a tonic to help in the assimilation of the food and in the absorption of the food it requires. Eradicate the poisons from the blood with this alternative extract which does not shrink the white blood corpuscles, because containing no alcohol or other injurious ingredients. Thus the body can be built up—strong to resist disease. This is a tonic taken from Nature's garden that builds up those weakened by disease. Sold by druggists everywhere. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. CHAS. FARRER, Jr., of 322 Woodlawn Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "I was troubled with my stomach for almost three years. I tried several doctors and most everything anybody recommended to me, but kept getting worse and honestly did not care to live as I was a mere shadow. I was told that I was a nervous man, and was given a number of pills, but they did me no good. Always tired, my whole body in a throbbing, burning heat, and I would not eat or what would agree with me, and was melancholy. But after taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with the Pleasant Peppermint it has made me a well man which is something to live for."

Household Notes.

When moths get into a carpet, spread a damp towel over the part and iron it dry with a hot iron. It destroys both larvae and eggs.

Nothing is better for perfumed linen than little bags of gauze filled with dried rose leaves, lavender, lemon, verbena or heliotrope.

To be sure that milk toast won't be soggy, serve the boiling buttered milk in a pitcher so that each may pour it on for himself.

If an ostrich feather gets damp and out of curl sprinkle thickly with common salt and shake before a bright fire until dry.

If turpentine is rubbed on paint the moment the paint gets on the clothing, it can be very easily removed.

Every family should have a supply of round straw mats for seats on grass or veranda. Nothing is handier. Never fold an umbrella when wet, but always keep it rolled when dry, if you would have the ribs keep their shape.

To remove hot water marks from Japanese trays rub them over with sweet oil and polish with a little dry flour.

Fasten stockings together in pairs by means of a course thread before sending them to the laundry.

Pecan nut meats, chopped and laid between slices of buttered brown bread, make delicious sandwiches.

Apples, cored and filled with chopped dates or figs, then baked, make excellent breakfast fruit.

After peeling onions, rub the hands with parsley or celery if you would counteract the onion odor.

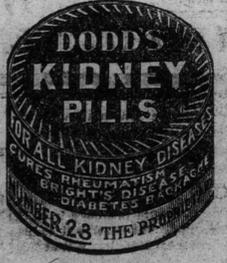

When ironing lace, lay it on a Turkish towel and press the lace smoothly on the wrong side.

Who is the Most Versatile Man?

A Vote for Sir John Hay Athole Macdonald—A Striking Record—Mr. Balfour and Some Other Notable Examples.

"Who is the most versatile man in England?" This question was asked recently in the smoke-room of one of London's most learned clubs, and immediately provoked a lively discussion. Several names were put forward as candidates for the honor of being acknowledged as the most versatile man in the country, but no two members agreed upon the same name. Everyone put forward a separate selection, and yet the list from which men of conspicuous versatility are to be drawn is anything rather than extensive. As a matter of fact there never was a time when versatility was so much required to give a little color and spirit to life. We are living in what is very largely an age of specialists and too much specialism it may be fairly urged, is not good for the happiness of the individual or the prosperity of the race. Charles Darwin, one of the greatest specialists who ever lived, cultivated his special gift to such an extent that it became abnormal at the expense of his other senses. There came a period in his life when he could not distinguish one tune or phrase of music from another, and he could not read five or six consecutive pages of the finest romance ever written. Apart from his special line of research, the man's natural capabilities had become atrophied through disuse. Specialisation generally tends to general mental and physical atrophy outside the restricted province of its own knowledge, art, or science. A good example of this in the world of sport is provided by those American "athletes" who are specially trained to do special performances in a special time on the running track, and who are otherwise physically unfit. So it may be agreed that the versatile men of the nation deserve to be cultivated while the most versatile man in England should be reclaimed, if not with drums and cymbals, at least with hearty praise, as an example for our youth to follow. But who is the most versatile man?

Probably the palm should be awarded to Lord Kingsburgh, who is also well known as the Right Hon. Sir John Hay Athole Macdonald, Lord Justice—Clerk of Scotland, whose interests appear to be as varied as his accomplishments are many.

Among other versatile men one thinks of Mr. Balfour at once, who, besides politics, has philosophy as a life study, who is the author of various publications, and who is interested in golf, cycling and motoring. Mr. Alfred Lyttelton is another distinguished politician, is also a brilliant barrister, a clever golfer, besides having once been the greatest wicketkeeper in English cricket. Lord Morley has also a fair measure of versatility, having been a barrister, a politician, a journalist, and an historian.

Mr. Arthur Reed Cooper, better known to the world in general as "Adrian Ross," is in another sphere of life a striking example of versatility. He is a keen mathematician, a lecturer on history, a journalist, a poet, a writer of innumerable lyrics for comic operas and musical comedies, and he plays chess and golf. Other instances will occur to many people, and possibly we shall discover in the end that the most versatile man in England is some person who has chosen to remain entirely obscure.

The name of Mr. C. B. Fry will probably occur to many readers, but while being the most versatile sportsman in the country, Mr. Fry's activities have always been centred on sport and training, so that his talents have been confined to one particular sphere. We should try to judge this question on the broad basis of varied and contrasting interests.

Tack Hammer Treatment.

Is the Latest for Lung, Heart and Stomach Trouble.

Philadelphia, May 6.—Scientific hammering of certain vertebrae of the spinal column with an ordinary tack hammer has brought relief to scores of patients at the Philadelphia hospital, suffering from lung, heart and stomach and liver trouble. The novel means is being applied at the institution with remarkable success almost daily by Dr. Myer Solis Cohen, of this city. The "tack hammer treatment" bears the scientific name of "spondylotherapy" and according to Dr. Cohen, is based upon a sensible and scientific understanding of the various nerve centres that gather about the spinal cord. Nerve centres that control the heart, the stomach, the lungs, the liver and spleen, are all found in the spinal canal.

"Spondylotherapy," said Dr. Cohen, "is not so much for treatment of diseases as it is for the treatment of the various internal organs of the body."

"For instance, if a patient has a dilated heart, the organ can be contracted by the hammering of a certain vertebrae which is in proximity to the nerves that control the heart. A patient suffering with asthma or a spasm of the bronchial tubes can be greatly helped by thumping the vertebrae nearest the nerve centre that controls the bronchial tubes."

"It is necessary to dilate the heart, I pound with my hammer on the spinal column from the eighth to the twelfth dorsal vertebrae and the treatment rarely fails."

Notes and Comments.

The fishing industry of the United Kingdom has 25,000 boats engaged, with 100,000 men and boys on board as crews. There is of course a large number of people employed on shore, engaged in cleaning, curing, packing and selling fish. About $5,532,000 worth of fish is landed from British boats annually half of which is exported. About $19,466,000 worth of fish is imported.

Germany in 1911 took from Great Britain 1,319,220 barrels of herring, and also large importations from the Netherlands, Norway and Sweden. The herring trade is dominated by the Scotch packer who have an advantage as the herring shoals frequent the British coast within the three mile limit.

The American Consul-General at Hamburg describes the German demand for herring as follows:—

"The German trade demands three classes of salted herring, each of which has its season. During May and June there is an extensive sale in the North Sea coast region, as well as in the Netherlands, of Matjes herring—that is to say, drawn fish lightly salted and of the first quality. It is not considered possible to import herring of this class from remote fishing countries. Matjes herring of the first quality come in barrels containing 125 pieces, of a gross weight of 330 pounds, and they command as much as $30 per barrel. A second quality comes in barrels containing from 800 to 850 pieces, worth about $9.50 per barrel.

These fish are sold in all first class shops and are a much esteemed table delicacy during a few months of the year. Toward the end of June and throughout July full herring enter the market. These are hard salted and are worth $7.15 to $9.50 per barrel. In August and September still another grade of hard salted herrings are consumed without cooking in the industrial interior Germany by the poorer classes, who eat the entire fish except the bones."

Under the auspices of the Governments of Canada and Newfoundland an arrangement has been made for a visit by teachers from these lands to the Old Country. The party will sail from Montreal on July 5th by the Allan liner Gramplan. An extensive itinerary is being arranged which covers the greater part of the months July and August. The cost to a Newfoundland teacher is estimated at $200. Mr. Blackall is the President of the local branch of the "Hands Across the Seas" League which has charge of the movement and Mr. S. P. Whiteway is the local Secretary.

BELLE VALLEY, Ohio, To-day.
The burned and blackened bodies of fifteen miners who lost their lives on Saturday evening, when an explosion of fire damp partially wrecked the Imperial Mine, were brought to the surface by rescuers yesterday.

WASHINGTON, To-day.

A vigorous denunciation of subsidized patriotism which seeks to create war, because of profits on armour-plate and battleships, and sensational mercenary newspapers which prefer big scare headlines to truth marked the address by Secretary Bryan, at the Hague yesterday. The anniversary meeting was held under the auspices of the Washington Peace Society. War is in the interest of few people, not of all, Bryan declared. Profits are gathered by a few, while the masses pay taxes; a few men gain glory, while the mothers of the nations furnish sons who make food for the battlefield. War rests upon feeling not upon necessity, for war is selfish and in the interest of the manufacture of battleships. There are men so unpatriotic that they try to stir up trouble in another country against their own, so as to make a personal profit therefrom. Bryan expressed the belief that in time this country would have treaties with all other nations, providing for efforts to arbitrate all questions in dispute, that other nations would follow this country's example. The agreements, he said, would make it almost impossible to bring this country into war with any other contracting nation.

An Appreciation.

OF THE LATE JOSIAH GARLAND, BY THE LATE REV. JAMES DOVE, DATED AT ST. JOHN'S, N.F., MAY, 19th, 1907.

"Mark the perfect Man, and behold the upright, for the latter end of that Man is peace.—Prov., xxxvii., v. 37."

"The memory of the just is blessed.—Prov., x., v. 7."

My acquaintance with Mr. J. Garland dates as far back as 1860, when I was stationed at Lower Island Cove, B.D.V. District. His parents occupied a very respectable position in the community being in very comfortable circumstances. The registry of his birth gives 22nd March, 1826 as the date of his entry into this world. The Garland family, by their diligence in business, sterling integrity, self-respect, were always held in high esteem by their fellow townsmen. Owing to the ups and downs in our commercial life in the early fifties, Mr. Garland decided to enter professional life and spent the best part of his school life teaching. As a teacher he was faithful in his efforts to advance his pupils and many who received their education from him have been most successful in their professional and commercial life. He brought up his family to maintain an honorable spirit of independence, to lean upon themselves for their success in life, through many discouragements he maintained his position in life and his family are now reaping the advantage of the training he imparted to them and the example he set before them. Retiring from school teaching some fifteen years ago he removed to St. John's and shortly after secured a position in the Department of Agriculture and Mines, from which he was retired some five years ago. For nearly sixty years he was a consistent member of the Methodist Church, walking in the fear of the Lord and in the comfort of the Holy Spirit.—Com.

Appropriate Discourse.

Rev. Father Pippy, of St. Patrick's Church, in the course of his sermon delivered yesterday, at mass, referred to the damage done by boys to public and private property, and was sorry to have to admit that even the sacred precincts of the churches were not immune from damage, as pencil markings and defacing of the walls testified. As far as he could hear the tendency to damage and destroy property was on the increase, and Fr. Pippy exhorted parents and guardians to inculcate in the minds of those in their charge more respect for the rights and property of the public.

Big Day at Nickel.

There will be a programme of exceptional interest at the Nickel Theatre to-day, afternoon and evening. Four full reels of pictures will be exhibited. They have been specially selected and will, we think, prove of the greatest pleasure to spectators. Misses Gardner and Guerin will be heard in dainty songs at to-day's performance. No patron of the Nickel should miss this evening's performance.

Lintrose Passengers.

The Lintrose arrived at Port aux Basques at 6.30 a.m. yesterday, bringing L. R. Jenkins, J. B. Orr, J. B. Barrington, W. Keating, Miss Mary Dillon, N. Rogers, H. J. Crowe, John P. Field, D. Feder, W. C. Smith, Mrs. J. F. Hann, Miss O. Billard, Miss M. Keeping, J. W. Sederquest, Neill Campbell, H. L. Goodman, Wm. March, M. W. Furlong.

Marine Notes.

The s.s. Adventure will sail the latter part of the week for Bell Island, to take an ore cargo to Philadelphia. The s.s. Tabasco sails to-morrow from Halifax for this port. The s.s. Norhilda sailed Saturday for Anticosti to load deals.

Kastalia's Repairs.

The work on the s.s. Kastalia, which went on dock Friday forenoon, is being done with thoroughness and expedition. Several of the plates in the bows have been indented and a number of rivets loosened, and the plates will be straightened and the rivets replaced with new ones. The Kastalia is one of the largest ships seen on the dock for some time past.

ARRESTED HIM.—Saturday night a resident of Trinity Bay, after entering a store on New Gower Street, protested that he had lost his watch and chain there insinuating that it had been stolen. The proprietor sent for the police, who seeing that the man was intoxicated, took him to the police station. If the ticker was taken from him it was stolen elsewhere.

This was the largest number to go out on the first Sunday excursion since its inception. All who went thoroughly enjoyed the outing.

At 11.40 last night the S. S. Meigle, Capt. Gooble, arrived at Humbermouth and wired the following to the Reid N.E. Co.:—

"Made all ports of call to Flower's Cove except Port aux Choix and Bartlett's Harbor, both harbours being filled with ice; could not enter any harbour east of Port Saunders; had E.N.E. winds all the passage; large quantities of ice are passing to the West; believe Straits again blocked."

When Language Fails.

The English tongue, as taught in schools, and governed grammatical rule, is good enough, most times; 'twas good enough for Scott and Pope when they produced their brilliant d o p e, their stories and their rhymes. 'Twas good enough for Shakespeare, too, who wrote "The Taming of the Shrew," and all of Bacon's plays; and Coleridge found it good hot stuff, and Wordsworth thought it rich enough in which to frame his lays. It's good enough for those who teach, and for the gifted men who preach, for jurists of renown; but when the sporting writers fall to work to write up games of ball, the tongue is out and down.

They borrow something from the Greek, and from the tongue the Choc-taws speak and from the Eskimos; they draw some symbols from the Slays and ancient toms; are split in halves for adverbs no one knows. I read the daily baseball yarn and then go out behind the barn where I can swear in peace; I cannot tell when all is done, which team's ahead and which has won a string of eggs of geese. I wish Sam Johnson could be here, that Edward Gibbon could appear, a pencil in his hand! Such men as these, with stately phrase would write about the divers plays so men could understand.

Another Narrow Escape

From Serious Street Car Accident.

Another serious street car accident was barely averted on Saturday night. About 8.15 as John Finnucane was crossing the street railway track at the foot of Loug's Hill, coming from his home on Cook's Street, he was knocked down by street car No. 2, in charge of Motorman Oakley and Conductor Rowe. Finnucane did not notice the tram approaching until it was quite near or about three yards distance from him. He then became excited and had not the presence of mind to get out of the way. Oakley, the motorman, when he saw danger ahead promptly applied the emergency brake and undoubtedly saved Finnucane from being run over and perhaps killed, but was too late to prevent the fender of the car striking Finnucane and throwing him violently on the wayside. The victim was picked up by citizens and brought into Eagan's store where Dr. Roberts attended him. Finnucane was badly shaken up, sustained several bruises but was not seriously hurt. Later Supt. Andrews of the street car service, had the injured man driven home. Finnucane was sober at the time of the mishap.

SHOULD BE FENCED.—The Northern Point of Portugal Cove is in a dangerous condition, and should be as it always has been, fenced-in. Yesterday, Mr. Fred Hibbs had to lasso his horse to keep it from walking over the place, which is only 10 feet from the road and going over a 50 foot cliff. To save men, as well as animals, the Government should have this very dangerous place fenced.

COLOGNE, To-day.
That a Serbo-Bulgarian conflict is inevitable should Serbia persist in her demand for a revision of anti-Bellum treaty, existing between those countries, with regard to a division of the spoils of war, and if Serbia does not submit to Russian arbitration the question of the disposal of the districts left open by the same treaty, is the belief expressed in a despatch received by the Cologne Gazette from a Sofia correspondent, who says he reached this conclusion after interviewing Bulgarian Ministers and various party leaders in the Bulgarian capital. Continuing, the correspondent says Bulgaria will not hesitate to conclude an alliance with Austria-Hungary, if such a step is necessary to achieve her end. The Anti-Serbian feeling in Bulgaria is running high and increasing hourly. If war comes it will be most bitter.

LONDON, To-day.
The first arrest under the so-called Cat and Mouse Bill was made when Annie Bell, hunger-striker, was taken into custody at Brighton. She was sentenced in April to three weeks imprisonment for carrying a pistol, but was released on account of ill-health occasioned by abstaining from food.

SHANGHAI, To-day.
Sixty-seven farmers of Shin Chow Ling, Western Hunan, who had resisted the attempts of soldiers to destroy the crops of opium were burned to death yesterday in a building where they were holding a meeting, according to a despatch received here by the North China Daily News. The despatch says soldiers started the fire.

PRESSBURG, Germany, To-day.
The extent of a fire here on Saturday when eight persons were rendered homeless, might have been considerably lessened but for the strict religious observance of orthodox Jews in refusing to perform any labor on the Sabbath. It was only after the Rabbi gave the congregation a dispensation they consented to save women and children. The Ghetto which was the most ancient in Europe, was completely destroyed. While the buildings were burning, people stood by and saw all their possessions swept by flames and refused to render any assistance in extinguishing the flames.

LONDON, To-day.
All the delegates of the Balkan Peace Conference are in London and will be formally welcomed by Sir Edward Grey. The first meeting of conference will probably be on Tuesday. Whether the preliminary peace treaty will be signed this week was expected is still doubtful. The Greek and Serbian delegates have not received authority to sign the treaty. It is supposed Greece and Serbia are pursuing a policy of delay in order to keep the Bulgarian forces before Constantinople and Bulair, while the territorial disputes with Bulgaria are still unsettled; believed, however, Powers will be able to influence Greece and Serbia to sign.

PANAMA, To-day.
The waters of the Pacific Ocean, were let into the Panama Canal by a giant blast, composed of 32,750 lbs. of dynamite shot, demolishing the locks of South Africa float locks and allowing water to flow into an extensive section of which the excavations have practically been completed. The blast was successful in every way. The vibration was felt in Panama city as though there had been a light earthquake.

Loss of the Proteus.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—Just a word or two with reference to an article by my friend, Mr. H. F. Slocum, in your esteemed journal of the 9th inst. I am well aware of the very high regard held by Mr. Shortis for the late Capt. Richard Pike, and feel sure he would be the last person to make a statement which in any way reflected on Capt. Pike as a master mariner. Allow me just to say that the late W. H. Norman was never captain of the s.s. Proteus; in fact I do not think that Mr. Norman was ever captain of a steamer going north. At the time the s.s. Proteus was lost, Captain Richard Pike was master and Mr. W. H. Norman chief mate, with an American Army officer by the name of Garlington in charge of the expedition. When the s.s. Proteus arrived near her destination, Captain Pike, observing a strong current running, therefore pressing the ice on the land, thought it advisable to wait until morning and anchored his ship. As soon as the ship was anchored, Garlington went on shore. To his inexperienced eye, being an army officer, he thought the ship could and should proceed, and at once. He hastily returned to the shore and told Capt. Pike, giving orders to get underway. Capt. Pike explained the force of the currents and their action on the moving ice, and how dangerous it would be to proceed just then, stating it would be better to wait until morning, and in any case until the current had ceased running on the land. Capt. Pike remonstrated, but it was of no use. "You are not doing your duty to the American Government," I command you to leave, and at once." The ship immediately left. Result, in a very few hours the s.s. Proteus was at the bottom, all the crew on the ice and a most successful expedition ruined. The next year, if I mistake not, Mr. Norman was chief mate of the s.s. Bear. The barque Rothesay incident reminds me of a story told, by an old hand on a yarn, at Dead Island, Labrador, about a large rock he saw floating.

LONDON, To-day.
The Chronicle says it has reason to believe Greece and Serbia concluded an agreement constituting a common policy with regard to the conquered territories, in alliance against Bulgaria and the grave danger of another war exists. The Chronicle's statement is not confirmed in other quarters. Despatches from Vienna and Sofia, represent the feeling between Greece, Serbia and Bulgaria as improving.

Man Drowned.

The Customs Department had a message saying that John Kendall, aged 27, of Round Harbor, was drowned on Saturday by a skiff upsetting; the body has not been discovered. Kendall was a single man.

If You Were Sick.

You say things aren't going your way,
You grumble and worry and whine;
Just look at the sunshine to-day!
Say, isn't this spring weather fine?
You wait that your going is tough,
And at eight-disappointments you kick,
You think you have troubles enough,
But suppose you were sick?
You let your chin sink on your breast
Because a few plums have gone wrong;
You lost were you hoped for the best,
But soon are the things you can get.
If only you'll show that you're game!
Your troubles you sadly rehearse,
And give up to care every trick;
You vow that things couldn't be worse,
But suppose you were sick?

Not T. N. M.

Dear Sir.—It has reached my ears that there is a faint suspicion, among musical and dramatic circles, that I am the writer of a letter signed T.N.M., appearing in your paper last week, criticising the entertainment held recently in the Methodist College Hall.
I wish to state that the idea is absurd and is wholly without foundation. I did not write the letter—in fact I have never seen the said letter and know nothing whatever about it. I regretted at the time and now regret it still more, that I was unable to attend the concert. Most of the performers are personally known to me, and being aware of their ability in musical and dramatic lines, the mere fact of their presence on the stage that night signifies to me that the concert must have been a delightful treat.

How such an idea originated passes my understanding except may be in the fact that I am so keenly interested in amateur theatricals; and I would like to state here that my enthusiasm for theatricals would never carry me to such a pitch as to be of such a critical mind as I am suspected of being. I dearly love to see amateur theatricals—whether they take the form of music or drama—praised skyhigh, and always endeavor to do my share of praising and never condemning.
Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space and hoping my name is no longer connected with T.N.M.
Sincerely yours,
A STANLEY HARVEY.

Ships of Concrete.

A 500-ton concrete scow was recently launched at Baltimore, Maryland. It is 110 feet long, 28 feet wide and has a depth of 10 feet 6 inches. Others, built before this one, have shown a large saving in repairs over wooden craft. It is claimed by the builders that concrete vessels will ultimately create a revolution in ship construction. The Italians have already made use of concrete vessels and have found them practicable. It is stated. Indeed they seem to be of exceptionally stout build, for one of them, rammed by a small war cruiser, showed no other injury but a crack, which it was quite possible to repair successfully. This accidental test gave the constructor much satisfaction.

Murderer Wanted.

John Shillitoni Killed Three Men, Two of Whom Were Detectives.

A communication containing a description of one John Shillitoni, alias "Harry Shields," alias "The Paper Box Kid," who is wanted by the New York authorities for the murder of three men, has just been received. Shillitoni, on the night of May 3rd, shot and killed Patrolman Charles J. Teare and William Heaney, members of the New York Police Department; also John Rizzo, a civilian. Shillitoni is an Italian-American, 21 years of age, stands 5 feet 1 inch, dark complexion and is well known in sporting circles. He wore a hard hat on the night he committed the murder and it is thought that when he escaped he took passage on a West Indian bound passenger boat. However, our local police have been requested to keep a sharp lookout for the murderer.

Highlanders' Parade.

Yesterday morning, the Nfld. Highlanders, under command of Lt.-Col. Paterson, left their armoury on King's Road, and by way of Military and Harvey Roads and Long's Hill paraded to Divine Service at the Kirk. Before the service began the Brigade's Chaplain, Rev. Mr. Sutherland, gave a brief but touching discourse on the recent tragic ending of a prominent member of the Highlanders—the late Oliphant Butler. Continuing, the preacher dwelt on the uncertainty of life and the great necessity of always being prepared for death. A hymn was then sung as a tribute to the memory of the deceased. During the service, Rev. Mr. Sutherland, who conducted it, gave an impressive sermon on Citizenship. After service the Battalion returned to their armoury, the pipers discoursing appropriate music en route.

Panama Hymn.

Here are some striking verses which enshrine the great task of cutting the Panama Canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific:—

Lord of the sun-drenched land and deep,
For whom of old, to suage thy wrath,
The floods stood upright as a heap
To shape thy host a dry-shod path.

Lo, now, from tide to sundered tide
Thy hand, outstretched in glad release,
Hath torn the eternal hills aside
To blaze a liquid path for Peace.

Thy hand, en-gleaved in flaming steel
Hath clutched the demons of the soil
And made their forge-fires roar and reel
To serve thy seraphim in toil.

While round their pits the nations bowed,
Have watched thine awful enginery
Compel, through thunderbolt and cloud,
The demigods to slave for thee.

For thee hath glaring Cyclops sweat,
And Atlas groaned, and Hercules
For thee his iron sinews set,
And thou wast lord of Rameses.

Till now they pause, to watch thy hand
Lead forth the first levitation
Through mazes of the jungled land,
Submissive to the will of man.

Submissive through the will of us
To thine, the universal will,
That leads, divine and devious,
To world-communions vaster still.

The titans rest; intense, aware,
The hosts of nations dumbly wait;
The mountains lift their brows and stare;
The tides are knocking at the gates.

Almighty of the human mind,
Unlock the portals of our sleep
That lead to visions of our kind,
And marry sundered deep to deep!
—Percy Mackaye, in the North American Review.

A Final Word.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Mr. Editor.—If the evidences of refinement contained in "An Observer's" letter are indices of the refinement he upholds in the Gypay Concert, I think the public cannot fail to agree with my expressed opinion and judge the performance at its proper value.

The letter in its purpose, in its matter, in its expression, shows a superficiality of comprehension that reminds one of a straw on the water drifting with the tide with other articles of similar weight; and as long as the crowd applauds, why it must be right!

It was not my intention to question the "musical talent" of the gypsies. I questioned only the use to which it was put. We have talent here. No one doubts it! But why waste time over frivolous and unmeaning stuff that is suitable only for a seaside Pierrot Troupe? If the parts had been taken by children of thirteen or fourteen years, the performance would have been vastly better, as the disposition of youth brings its natural attributes of "daintiness, prettiness and lightness," which sit with ill grace on those past childhood.

It is, however, cheering to know that the Gypsy ladies are in the early twenties; the rolling years will bring many chances, and before very many years pass they will realize and appreciate that after all, perhaps old T. N. M. was right.

I would not have them always serious, but would have them treat any expression of their talent in public seriously. No one relishes a "bit of fun," in its place, more than I do, and the "saving grace of humour" lightens many a burden.

The end of Dancing is to realize perfect grace in motion, and Byron speaks about a gentleman who "danced without theatrical pretence." I think that Dancing should form part of everyone's education, but because a Turkey has a certain natural method of propulsion, it is not, therefore, artistic to reproduce that "trot," even though it be done "true to life."

"An Observer" saves me from amending on the sketch any further. His story of the plot will convince the public that the "Queen's Messenger" is hardly the type of play one would walk many miles to hear (even if acted well, which I do not question in this case), and they will naturally resent the implication that the man who forgets his fiancée for another woman, and the woman who forgets her womanliness till the last moment, are types that are common.

The fact that the play has been used in London so many times as a "curtain-raiser" (whatever that new-fangled domestic implement may be! I should think a "curtain-stretcher" would be more useful!) does not altogether prejudice me in its favour. But seriously, I was driven to this criticism by I. C. M.'s extravagant (to me) praise. In his mild rejoinder he alludes from the subject to moralisation on business and its bad effect upon our higher natures. In this I agree with him, but would point out that it is catering to the jaded spirits of over-worked slaves of the money market that we have lost a great deal of the more solid amusement of the past.

This has become such an age of rush that the mind has no time for reflection or repose, and the form of entertainment has become "empty" and "on the surface" to suit those who do not think. This has been the cause of the rapid rise of the vaudeville and cheap shows. Of course the proper method is to reform business and break the legs of the giant money, who is luring the world to more wickedness and misery than the wars of centuries, but in the meantime cannot we present "solid food" to these jaded spirits in a way that will refresh as well as do good?

That is my point. But I am told that I must see "good in everything" whether it exists there or not, and that Perfection is not yet. Perfection is not yet, but the only thing that saves us from the life of a brute is that glimpse of something greater that is divinely implanted within us. And can we aim too high?

As Ruskin says: "If you are determined only to think of Art as a play or a pleasure, give it up at once; you will do no good to yourselves and you will degrade the pursuit in the sight of others."

Judging, as we should, every action and every word, by the clear light of searching analysis, can we give expression to anything that does not measure up to "whatever things are honest, whatever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely"? A state of contentment brings indolence. The vision of Perfection leads us ever on and up.

Will Dance in Public.

Lady Constance Richardson Has "Taken up" The Stage.

Celebrated English Noblewoman Whose Daring Eccentricities Have Provided so Much Small Conversation in London Will Appear in a "Judith" Play—Will go to Vienna to Save Friends' Feelings.

That Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, daughter of the Earl of Cromartie and niece of the Duke of Sutherland, who danced for charity in London drawing rooms a few years ago; is to make her appearance as a professional dancer on the stage of Vienna, comes as no particular shock to society in England at least. Somehow, Lady Constance always seems to be up to something quite eccentric and whimsical—to be going in for some "stunt" incompatible with her position in aristocratic society. The drama in which she will have the leading role is entitled Judith and is based on an incident supposed to have taken place during the Maccabean wars, after which Judith became the famous Jewish heroine. The performance was originally intended for London, but objections were raised in high quarters, and to these Lady Constance gave way.

In a published interview Lady Constance is quoted as follows: "I am one of the best swimmers in England, and also a first-rate salmon fisher, and, above all things, a huntress. I have danced in aristocratic families with much success, and thus am seized with a desire to appear in public, but the very idea naturally shocked my relatives. In her swimming dress a high aristocratic lady may be seen in public. To that nobody objects but dancing in public, why, that would, in English opinion, be an outrage on society.

"That would mean compromising my family and would imply loss of favor with the royal family forever. All of that I had to consider, but I could not give up my pet idea. If I succeed in Vienna it may help me to overcome the prejudice of society in London."

Boy of Nine Wants His Papa Arrested.

A small, sturdy boy, with a tear-streaked face and two small fists stuck in his eyes, marched into the Tremont avenue police station in the Bronx recently.

"I want my papa arrested," said he to the police Lieut. McMahon who was at duty. (No, you are entirely wrong. This isn't that old joke about the spanking, at all.)

"What do you want him arrested for?" said the much-amused lieutenant. "And what's your name and where do you live?"

"My name's John Manning," the youngster replied, "and I'm nine years old and I live at No. 963 Mohegan avenue, and I want you to arrest my papa."

"What for?" repeated the lieutenant.

"Cause he told me if I gave my little pigeons some whiskey they wouldn't grow any more, and stay little like they were then, and I got a saucer of whiskey and gave it to them, and they drank it all up, and then they just rolled over and died, and I want him arrested."

"Sorry my little man," said the lieutenant, but I'm afraid we can't do anything. You see, your father told you they wouldn't grow any more, and they won't now will they?"

"No, daddy told me to tell my troubles to a policeman," mused Johnny sadly as he departed.

The Ship That Comes.

The treasure ship for which you wait Hath passed, you say, the day dawn's gate. And proudly cleaves the curling foam With all her white sails trimmed for home.

You look—you laugh—how eagerly You watch the meet of sea and sky? Ha, ha, a something mounts the line! Is that yours?—It may be mine!

Have I a ship upon the sea? I wait to hail my argosy, With treasure trove from far away Amid the wonders of Carthage— Deep in the land of silk and pearl, Beyond the maelstrom's fatal swirl? And so the sails that yonder shine Instead of yours may all be mine!

The flag that flutters at peak Hath ta'en the blushes from your cheek; You turn away and with a sigh Hunt out the sight of sea and sky! There! wait with me; the honied bliss Of hope returns with stolen kiss; Hall we the ship that's crossed the line, It may be yours; it may be mine!

If yours, I will rejoice to know That homeward breezes gently blow; If mine, my hands will hasten to share Its treasures, always rich and rare; Love, let us watch upon the strand, The hopeful breeze blow to land; There will be love and bliss divine, Whether the ship be yours or mine.

The Old Potter And The Queen.

During the Royal visit to Potteries last week, an amusing interview took place between the Queen and an old potter who paid his homage in a remarkably natural way.

"At Messrs. Wedgwood's pottery works the Queen was vastly entertained," says the Daily Mail, "by an old man engaged in trimming the coat of Flaxman figures that are put on to the blue Jasper vases which form one of this firm's special productions. Her Majesty remarked upon the delicate beauty of these figures and the perfection of the moulding.

"Yes indeed," said old Thomas Lovett, "if they do work in Heaven it will likely be this (pottery), for it's as perfect as any, these is."

"How old are you?" the Queen asked. "Nearly 75," said Lovett, "and I've never been bad in m' life. When I began earning'm' livin' I started work at six in the morning and went on till I'd swept out the place after the others had gone. Aye, I've worked hard always, but I've always been careful. Never went out without put my hands on 'em, carelessness that makes potters bad."

"The old fellow stopped for breath, and the courtiers round thought the Queen would pass on, but old Lovett interested her. She smiled at him kindly.

"You must have some wonderful memories," she said. "Aye, your Majesty," he returned eagerly, delighted to talk. "I can recollect as far back as the 1851 exhibition. I mind how the old master for all us lads to go up to London and see it. Before we went we stood outside this very building and saug with jockstones in our hands that we kept knocking together."

"And then old Lovett, bending towards the Queen and beating his hands together, sang her in his quavering voice doggerel current in the 1851 exhibition year.

If you want to see the wonders of the day, See the sights and the carriages so gay, There is great Lord John and his little servant next, And the great King of Chum, Chum Chum.

"The Queen laughed with genuine enjoyment. 'Very interesting indeed,' she said, and left Thomas Lovett the happiest man in the realm."

The Girl Who Smiles.

The wind was east and the chimney smoked, And the old brown house seemed dreary, For nobody smiled, and nobody joked, The young folks grumbled, The old folk croaked; They had come home chilled and weary.

Then opened the door, and a girl came in; Oh, she was homely, very! Her nose was pug, and her cheek was

There wasn't a dimple from brow to chin— But her smile was bright and cheery. She spoke not a word of the cold or damp,

Nor yet of the gloom about her, But she mended the fire and lighted the lamp, And she put on the piece a different stamp,

From that old place, They forgot that the house was a dreary old place, And smoky from base to rafter, And gloom departed from every face, As they felt the charm of her mirthful grace

And the cheer of her happy laughter. Oh, give me the girl who smiles and sings, And makes all glad together! To be plain or fair is a lesser thing But a kind, unselfish heart can bring Good cheer in the darkest weather.

C.E. Service.

At the Church of England Cathedral, yesterday morning, Rev. Dr. Powell, of King's College, N.S., preached an able and eloquent sermon to a large congregation on the Lord's Prayer, emphasizing the petitions "Hallowed be Thy Name," and "Thy Kingdom Come." The preacher has a very clear voice and a fine delivery. In choice diction, he explained the different petitions and pointed out God's threefold revelation namely, Power, Life and Love.

Last night Canon Powell preached at St. Thomas's Church before a crowded congregation, his text being the laying up of treasures in Heaven. He illustrated fasting, praying and almsgiving and emphasized the responsibility of the Church and man's duty to his fellowman.

The Rev. Thomas Wesley Powell, M.A., D.D., D.C.L., was born in Ontario, and receiving a good education he became a teacher before entering into the ministry. In 1893 he was ordained deacon and became a minister in 1894. He was appointed President and Professor of Philosophy at the University of King's College, Windsor, N.S., which position he still holds. In 1911 he was appointed Prolocutor of the Lower House of the General Synod. Canon Powell will leave for home by the express train this evening, and St. John's churchmen will look forward to another visit from the learned Doctor, in the near future.

Rossley's New Troupe.

To-night at Rossley's theatre, there opens up for a short season, the Lorraine Buchanan Co., a first-class combination of vaudeville and dramatic performers who came direct from New York City on the s.s. Stephano. Lorraine Buchanan and Billy Devens present for their first offering "The Girl and the Detective." Billy Devens in the part of the Detective, disguises one of the stunts in a game of discover the plans of a gang of thieves, led by a clever girl Raffles, played by Miss Buchanan. The plot is a tense and thrilling one, and is enlivened by a comedy line of "Slang by the Girl," and some effective singing by Billy Devens, who is well known to musical comedy as the South African tenor. Cook and Beall will also present a fine comedy, entitled "Just Kicks," and will sing and dance and make lots of fun. Miss Beall can imitate a child to perfection, and her funny kid act should surely catch on. They are both expert dancers, and Rossley is to be congratulated on securing so versatile a troupe.

Harms Students

More Than Most Anyone Else.

The Chief of the Presbyterian Hospital in N. Y., Dr. Fisher, tells one very easy way to avoid some physical ills.

His comments on

are most interesting (see letter in southeast corner).

If the subject appeals to you, try leaving off tea and coffee entirely, use Instant Postum and carefully note, day by day, the return to health and strength.

A level teaspoonful of Instant Postum in an ordinary cup of hot water dissolves instantly and makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more, and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in cup of hot water.

Profanity.

BY H. L. RANN.

Profanity is a sly and enthusiastic form of utterance which does not allow the conversation to drag or the mind to become congested with a 4th thought. When used as a substitute for logic and reason and backed by a flourishing fist and red whiskers, it proves highly successful as a means of discouraging argument.

Profanity usually gets an early start by reckless use of the expletive "dam." This is the first word that into the mind of the small boy when he steps upon the fiery physique of the honey bee in his bare feet, and from that time on he keeps adding expletives to his vocabulary until finally his ordinary conversation sounds like the remarks of a shooting gallery. The old-fashioned mother used to discourage this tendency by the liberal application of soft soap and plenty of it, but owing to the scarcity of soap the practice has been abandoned.

Some men are profane from force of habit and never finish a sentence without tacking on a sulphurous suffix. They do not swear in a bitter or rancorous spirit, but merely in order to start the conversation. This kind of profanity is never abashed by a pastoral call or a meeting of the W. F. M. S., and even ripples through meal time in a preoccupied manner.

Other men never use profanity at all except when goaded to it by striking the lambent surface of a hectic corn against a rocking chair or biting heavily into a splinter of a T-bone steak. Many a woman has lived in the same house with her husband for years and never heard him use an expression that wouldn't be perfectly appropriate at prayer meetings, and then some evening, when he sits down on the lawn steeple and carresses the inverted setter of a high-spirited wasp, he will rise up and discharge the pent-up emotions of fifty years of exemplary living.

Instances have been known where women cured their husbands of the habit of using profanity by throwing a few of his own samples in his direction. A better method, however, is to leave him to get his own meals for about six months, which will keep him so busy that he won't have time to keep up with the changing styles in swear words.

Boy Missing.

George Newell has reported to the police authorities that his brother, Herbert aged fourteen, is missing from his home on Lime Street nearly a week. He was last seen on Wednesday night on New Gower Street and since then has not been heard from. Friends of the boy are becoming anxious over his disappearance and despite diligent searches have not succeeded in locating him. There is a belief that he stowed away on a ship that left port last week.

Mr. H. C. McLeod, former general manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, testifying before the Banking and Commerce Committee at Ottawa, said that the interests of depositors required a system of external bank inspection by the Government on the recommendation of the bank managers as opposed to the Bankers Association, which, he said, was liable at times to be controlled by one bank. He suggested also that the chairman of the board should be paid a salary of $25,000.

An enthusiastic Home Rule demonstration was held yesterday at Belfast. Sir Edward Carson declared that Ulster would adhere to the solemn covenant of last autumn. He said that the Unionists of the Province had sworn to oppose Home Rule, and had never ceased preparations to carry their resolution into effect. They would exhaust every means to avoid the necessity of resorting to force, but, if driven to resistance, those who drive them would be responsible. He urged loyalists to be ready. Their leaders would select the most opportune methods, and, if necessary, would take over themselves the entire government of Ulster.

Indications of dissensions among the Balkan Allies are being seriously emphasized. It was originally formed for the sole purpose of warring on Turkey. This no longer exists, and mutual distrust is growing daily. Servia claims that agreements have been violated, and that she is entitled to hold all parts of Macedonia, now occupied by her, including territory claimed by Bulgaria. The troubles seem to be due more to the military commanders than the Cabinets. Russia will probably act as Mediator. Differences between Bulgaria and Greece continue at daggers drawn. The latest report from Saloniki state that the Bulgarians are advancing westward and threatening the Greeks.

LONDON, May 18.
Details of the worst tragedy in modern Arctic exploration have filtered through from Wiedge Bay, the northernmost point of Spitzbergen where the German expedition under Lieut. Schroeder Stranz, was lost during the winter. The exploration party composed of 11 Germans and 5 Norwegians, set out in June in the Herzog, Capt. Ritcher. In August, the ship ran short of provisions, and was supplied by the Hamburg-American liner Victoria Luise, which was cruising with Arctic passengers. Nothing further was heard until Richter arrived alone in Advent Bay, after a terrible overland trip. He reported that disaster had overtaken the expedition at Wiedge Bay, and held out little hope of rescue. Two rescue parties, however, set out, one composed of Norwegians, the other of employees of the Northern Exploration Company. The news from them confirms the worst fears. Capt. Stranz, leader of the Norwegian party, reports the death of four members of the German expedition. Dalmers, Moeser, Eberhard and Stave. The two first were drowned. Eberhard was frozen to death. Stave died after an illness. Schroeder has not been found. He left the ship with three Germans on a sledge journey in August last, and has not since been heard of. They are supposed to have crossed Hinlopen Strait, to the North West Land, a wild, desolate region, where food would be extremely scarce. The failure to find them leaves little hope, but search will be resumed in June.

H. N. Society.

The members of the Holy Name Society to the number of over 600, attended 8 o'clock mass in the R. C. Cathedral yesterday, proceeding to the church in processional order. Mass was celebrated by the Spiritual Director, Rev. Father O'Callaghan, and the Society in a body received Holy Communion. At 2.30 p.m. in the Cathedral, the Society again attended and listened to an earnest and eloquent address preached by the same devoted Priest, who praised the members for their adherence to the principles of the Society and the strict observance of its rules. He exhorted all to persevere and hoped that in the near future the roll would contain 2,000 members. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was then imparted after which the members proceeded to their rooms and quite a number of applicants were admitted.

Escaped Death.

The lad John Sinnott, of Heart's Content, to whose case the Telegram referred a couple of days ago, had a very narrow escape from death. The accident to him occurred in a very peculiar manner. He had been at Sydney for a couple of months and worked with one of the companies there. He was in the boiler house one morning and fell asleep, and being given to somnambulism walked out of the place in his sleep. He fell into a deep pit striking on his head and was discovered unconscious, a couple hours later. An examination by the doctors disclosed the fact that the skull had been broken and that a piece of bone was pressing in the brain. Tapping was resorted to, the bone removed and a silver plate inserted. The lad is recovering slowly but surely.
