IMPERIAL DEFENCE.

Intimately associated with the question of imperial federation is that of "to what extent shall the colonials enjoy and contribute to the military and naval defence of the empire?" It is admitted that in the Australian colonies the spirit of military Australian colonies the spirit of defence is very vigorous, but there is a lack of unity of action that goes far to lessen the effectiveness of their forces. The scheme of defence is fragmentary, each colory working on its own lines; and though all are working for the common good yet there is no general comprehen-sive scheme of defence. The Dominion sive scheme of defence. The Dominion of Canada is in a different position; it has a military organisation in which theory and practice both find place, and is able to place in the field at very short notice an efficient and well equipped fighting force, force which has recently done good at tary service. In this its federation are enabled with a very short notice and intended to apply for a divorce. There is not the slightest foundation for the statement and this was demonstrated the other day by the trio appearing to get the other day by the trio, appearing to get the other day by the trio, appearing to get the other day by the trio, appearing to get the other day by the trio, appearing to get the lie direct to the slander. Virtues of Lentil Flour. A writer in the Therapeutic Gazette recommends soups made of lentil flour, mixed with one eighth part of ground malt, for the use of invalids. In warning, the diastase of the malt converts the flour into soluble and easily digested substances. The soup may be flavored with beef tea.

The writer says that lentil flour contains more inorganic salts and twice as much nitrogenous material as wheat or oat flour.

Soon after the acquaintance began, Belt appears to have rendered Sir William Abdy some services of the nature that is called "delicate," and of which the details still remain obscure. But the upshot of this business was that Sir William Abdy advanced to Belt a loan of £2,000, without either security or interest—a fact which, as the judge remarked, showed that Belt possessed considerable influence over Sir William Abdy. "Soue Geaper."—The Standard is "Goue of the missing and selections."

"Sour Grapes."—The Standard is quite sure that the columns of a respecta-ble newspaper should not be opened to a card in explanation from an unfortunate woman who stands charged with a grave offence. Is the Standard a "respectable" paper (everyone knows it is not a newspaper) in its own estimation? And being so, how does it account for the appearance in its columns not long ago of a card from a next rough courtesing the standard to the ance in its columns not long ago of a card from a notorious courtesan threatening to horsewhip the editor of a city paper for exposing her house? If it is disgraceful to permit a poor woman to defend herself, surely it is equally disgraceful to permit the insertion of a card from a woman of the same class breathing murder. We are afraid it is a case of "sour grapes" with our contemporary, the trouble being that the card (in which there is not the slightest impropriety) was not offered him to print.

The tuneral of Mrs. R. Hall.

The tuneral of the late Mrs. R. Hall, who met with so tragic a death on Friday last, took place from the residence of her purents, Pembroke street. The remains were first taken to the Methodist church, where the service for the dead was conducted by Revs. Percival and Dowler, the edifice being filled to overflowing, and the impressive ceremony was rendered more solemn by the sad circumstances connected with it. The cortegs re-formed and proceeded to Ross Bay cametery, where the regretted dead was placed in her last resting place. The members of the I. O. O. F. attended in a body, and a very large number of sorrowing relatives and friends, such was the general sympathy felt for those nearest to the deceased. The following acted as pallbearers: S. T. The Dominion steamer Sir James Douglas brought from the west coast yesterday afternoon James McBride and George Gosnell, who have been prospecting for coal and other minerals at Clayoquot Sound. Good indications of lignite were found at three different places there. At the head of the sound, on Flores Is—land they found land, they found

TWO LARGE LEADS of what is called fine steel galema, the specimens of which are thought to be of very good quality. On the north side of the sound a lead of plumbago was discevered. They intonded to go back to the main range, but as the snow was too deep to permit this, they confined their attention to the coast, where, on a small river whose name the prospectors did not know, they found plentiful specimens of gold-bearing and also of silver-bearing quartz. Both on some of the islands and round the Sound were seen areas of

In the conservative side of the house is a manner quite unusual, except on the occasion of some great party debate. In the conservative side of the house is a time and the conservative side of the house is a mounting an attempt to break up the legislative union, he declared that the resolution was unconstitutional, that the house had no power or right to add to expenditure, and that the executive alone had a right to do so, the house having only a duty to control and abridge it. His whole tone was not that of a man of business discussing a practical business question, but of one who had lost his temper, and lost it so badly that he could not help showing it. It was apparent that he had reason to be alarmed that he government should be defeated on a division, and had resolved to bully the proposer into withdrawing it. The Morning Post in commenting on the above says: When the country is in daily expectation of being asked to find a sum of wast amount to enable Mr. Gladstone to an another than the is now said to be going to give these, no one will be decived by his cutburst of righteous indignation at the fidea of the house of commons being asked to say that a small sum is necessary to help one of the forces of the country to maintain efficiency. The volunteers may be congratulated on having practically gained their point.

THE EXTRADITION TREATY A DEAD LETTER.

The U. S. government have again refused to surrender Bulldog Kelly, although the evidence against him was so plain that the U. S. commissioner who heard the evidence, twice remanded him for extradition. The crime with which Kelly stands charged is the murder of a commercial traveler named Baird, near Golden City, British Columbia, a year and a half ago. Baird was an American and represented an American firm, in whose interest he had crossed the line from Montana to collect from traders who were engaged in business along the line for the Canadian Pacific railway. At the time of the Canadian Pacific railway. At the time of the Assassasination Baird had $4000 in his saddlebags. The murder was a cold-blooded one. Unsuspicious of danger, the traveler was riding along the road, when Kelly, whose face was imperfectly disguised beneath a false beard and shot Baird down. Having secured the booty, Kelly field, but there were eyewitnesses of the crime and the murderer was recognized, followed into American territory, and there arrested. He has been in gaol many months. THE ROYAL CITY HUBBUB.

The Ottawa Citisen published a starting paragraph with big head lines an nouncing that a rebellion had broken out in New Westminster. It purported to be a private telegram, containing the mere attement of fact, with no particulars of, or reasons assigned for an outbreak. People in the capital were very much astonished, and asked one another, "What does it mean?" The B. C. members were deluged with questions and the peculiarity of the thing was that not one of them is, knew anything about it. Enquiries were made of General Sir Fred. Middleton and the officers of the militia department, but one could explain the meaning of the departch. The following day the cause and sope of the hubbub were explained and the excitement abated.

The first page is a woodcut, "fearfuly and wonderfully made," of the President of the United States, says the Providence Journal. This was in-tended, doubtless, to represent Wash-ington, although it would answer equal-ly well for Adams, Jefferson, Madison Monroe. On the reverse is a cut re-presenting a small lad with hatin hand, standing reverently in the presence of his aged instructor, and underneath verses frem Proverbs and Ephesians: Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it;" "Let not thy heart envy sinners; but be thou in fear of the Lord all the day long;" "Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right."

The earliest copy of the primer known to be in existence was printed t Boston in 1737: This, together with at Bosten in 1137. It is, orgented with five other copies, the latest printed at Newburyport in 1790, brought at the Brinley sale the sum of $612. No one knows when the first New England primer was published, or by whom it was compiled. As early as 1691 Ben-jamin Hardis, a printer and bookseller in Boston, advertised as in press a "second impression." No copy, however, of any edition earlier than the one already named is known to be ex-

CANADIAN NEWS.

B. C. DEVELOPMENT.

The increased attention which the people of eastern Canada are beginning to pay to this province is a significant sign of the times. Whether in the house of commons or out of it, anything relating to British Columbia is sure to be read with interest. The members from our province are daily besieged with letters asking for information regarding the resources of British Columbia, and the chances are that when the C. P. R. is running through to the Pacific coast there will be a large migration westward. The will be a large migration westward. The efforts being put forward to develop the resources of British Columbia could not be better summed up than they are in the Toronto Mail of recent date. The leading journal says: "A few years ago British Columbia began to look about and see how to utilize the Pacific trunk for the opening up of her magnificent valleys. The first effort was to obtain a charter for a railway to connect the Kootenav lake with the up of her magnificent valleys. The first effort was to obtain a charter for a railway o connect the Kootenay lake with the Arrow lakes, at the upper end of which the Arrow lakes, at the upper end of which the Canadian Pacific railway rune west and east. This railway is intended to bring the mineral resources of the Kootenay district within easy access: To-day Mr. Homer introduced a bill to incorporate the Shuswap and Okanagan railway. This railway starts from a point on the Canadian Pacific at Sikamoose Narrow to Okanagan lake a distance of fifty miles, and is intended to open up a wheat area along the railway and the lake. This area is estimated at 200,000 acres in extent, earable of producing fine wheat and bearea along the railway and the lake. This area is estimated at 200,000 acres in extent, capable of producing fine wheat and being used for stock-raising purposes. There are also valuable mines which are attracting attention, and the development of which will add greatly to the weakh of Canada. The British Colambia members say it is but one of many enterprises rendered possible of accomplishment through the construction of the Canadian Pacific railway. A new era has opened in that great province and much may be expected in the way of its development now that the national undertaking has been completed. The wealth which will be added to the Dominion in British Columbia alone, as the direct result of the completion of the Canadian Pacific railway, will amply warrant the expenditure the people of Canada have made." Another bill affecting the Pacific province is the one introduced into the commons this week by Mr. Tupper to incorporate a company to lay out, construct and operate a railway from a point on the Canadian Pacific railway at or near the Columbia, thence following the valley of the Columbia river, and thence through the Athabasea and Canoe passes.

The British Colambia members say it is but messured four yards in circumference. Our bodies did not fit in them and our sleever hung in bags. We read "Lucile" and "Maud" and were very romantic. Then they slip on a loose wrapper and was formerly manifested. This tendency is still increasing; and in one direction in fact there has been shown a desire to fill wants before they were felt—an anticipatory spirit that will compel projectors of certain schemes for the mutual benefit of the compelence of the mutual benefit of the compelence of the compe themselves and Vancouver to tilay on their oara" for a spell. In seme of these cases the speculation though premature is genuine,—that is, it is the intention of the promoters to proceed with the proposed ventures themselves; for, though this and devoured cakes and sugar plums and devoured cakes and sugar plums the promoters to proceed with the proposed ventures themselves; for, though this may not be so in all instances, capital is represented. Though all the schemes that have been enumerated in connection with Vancouver are legitimate enough in their way, they invariably propose to deal with future requirements, while an existing market for a mineral resource is apparently ignored. We allude to petroleum or rock oil. There is always a steady demand for this liquid fuel, and the wonder is that before now a company with the necessary capital has not been found to test the value of the petroleum discoveries that have been made on the eastern coast of this island. A large sum of money was spent two years ago in each prospecting at Quataino Sound—searching for a mineral of which there is already a plethora; whereas signs of a source of wealth that is even more stable, lie dormant, apparently for the want of a true appreciation of their significance. Though the price of crude oil is much less than it was a few years ago, the means of refining it are sufficiently behind the production to make the industry a most lucrative one. It is generally supposed that petroleum is a considered the acme of classicality for materials of the constitution of the verge of the constitution of classicality for materials of the verge of the constitution of the verge of the verge of the constitution of the verge of the constitut the industry a most lucrative one.

It is generally supposed that petroleum is inseparably connected with coal; but this considered the acme of classicality for inseparably connected with coal; but this is not so. It occurs in all geological for-popularity. As for those flowery ar clay, limestone and sandstone, at last tapped a deposit of coal oil. The yield from each well there is slight, only two tons a day; but many of the most productive wells of the present time showed decive wells of the present time showed here. from each well there is alight, only two tons a day; but many of the most productive wells of the present time showed less promise when first developed, having since attained their maximum—one of these being the famous oit well in the Baker district, on the shores of the Caspian Ses, which shoots up 1,125,000 gallons per diem—three times the capacity of the largest well ever opened in America; and yet the first indication of this oil lake was a greasy, pitchy-looking deposit on semi-stagnant water. America and Russis annually produce 704,000,000 imperial gallons of refined oil, of which England consumes 230,000,000 gallons. Our philosophy perhaps hardly dreams of the latent capabilities of this fluid apart from its powers as an illuminant and a fuel. Its powers as a means of expansion upon ignition may yet make it an engine of destruction in maritime warfare; while its value as a means of locomotion is now recognized. In its race with coal it will win; for petroleum is not only a fuel but a self-atoking fuel. The industry is an enormous and stable one; and there is no reason why, with properly directed efforts. British Columbia ahould not have her share of it.

A BALL, terrible as regards circumstances connected with it, was that given by the Duchess of Richmond on the ever of the Battle of Waterloo. This gathering took place at Brussels in the house in the Rue Royale nearest to the old Port de Schaerbeek, and was attended by the Duke of Wellington, who, though presenting on that occasion a cheerful countenace, knew alone, of the merry throng assembled, that the scene of gaiety which he was beholding would be speedily changed for one of fearful carnage and strife on the field of bettle; the event celebrated in verse by Byron strice on the laid of outce; the event celebrated in verse by Byron is, however, so familiar to all that more than the briefest allusion to it is un-necessary. In the gossiping pages of the diary of Samuel Pepsy's accounts of severdiary of Samuel Pepsy's accounts of sever-al remarkable balls are to be found. On one occasion it seems that the "Merry Monarch" startled his courtiers in the middle of their dancing by bounding Lady Gerard, wife of Charles, Lord Gerard of Brandon, out of the room. The following is the quantity taken from each port: speaking ill of "My Lady Castemaine" to the queen, and provoked in consequence a passionate outburst of anger on his part, which led to her forcible expulsion. It was at a ball, if we are not mistaken, that Lord Townsend and Sir Robert Walpole proceeded to personal abuse, and seized each other by the collar. Boyse Girus

A Boy Hero.

He was only 6 years eld, little Tommy Brown. His father was a pioneer out in Oregon. (Look on the map, as always, and find Oregon, if you don't know where it is.) Pioneers have discomforts and privations that the people in older settlements do not dream of. They are often twenty miles away from any store. If anything has happened that they have not laid in a supply of meat, flour and meal, and these things give out at home, it becomes a very serious business. If the roads are snowed up, or if the mud is so deep as to make them impassable, there is a chance that the pioneer's family may go hungry. They may even starve. Provisions had given out in the family of Mr. Brown. There had been a deep, soft snow, so the roads were very bad indeed. But food must be had or his babies would have nothing to eat. So the father started with his wagon to the store, twenty miles away. He was a long time getting there, for the road was so heavy.

Mr. Brown loaded his wagon and started back. But a tremendous fall of snow came and blinded him and blocked his way. The forlorn man staggered on as long as he could. But it grew colder and colder. He began to be chilled through. Nobody knew what finally happened to him in those awful hours, or what he thought about.

For he never came home. When the storm cleared away, and people went to look for him, they found him frozen stiff and lead in the road. His wife was dead, and his children had been left at home alone, to wait till he came back with the provision. What had become of them, poor babies?

TOMMY AND THE BABY OUT IN THE COLD.

It had not been so very cold when he left home and nobody thought anything would happen. There were two children, Tommy and a younger brother, only 4 years old. Their father would have hardly dared to be leave them, except that he had a beautiful and fathful shepherd dog. This noble animal was used to take care of the children just as if they had been two lambs. His name was "Shep." He watched and guarded them at play, during the hours when their pape was obliged to leave them alone.

The little creatures and the fathful dog waited all day for Mr. Brown to come back. They went to bed, and to sleep, and still the father was not there next morning. They began to get hungry as the day wore on. But another night passed, and the next morning they were very hungry indeed. They thought they would go out and try to find pape. They were not very warmly dressed, but out they went. They wandered into the woods, Shep after them. It was Sunday morning when they left their cabin. They walked and walked, and cried bitterly, but no pape came. Shep hugged as close to them as he could. There were wild animal in the woods who would have attacked and devoured the helpless bables, only for Shep. He was as brave as a lion and as faithful as a father. Worn out at last, when darkness came they huddled down against Shep's warm coat and lay there. It is the greatest wonder they did not die with the cold.

But they did not. Toward morning it became warmer and began to rain. How the poor things suffered when morning came. They had no hope and no refuge but Shep, called till they could shout no longer, but nobody came. At last the younger brother said:

"Tommy, oh, Tommy, I'm freezing to deeth!"

Then what do you think this brave, tender bits brother did —big brother, though he OMMY AND THE BABY OUT IN THE COLD

"Tommy, oh, Tommy, I'm freezing to death."

Then what do you think this brave, tender big brother did!—big brother, though he was only 6 years old. He took his own coat off, all the warm garment he had, and wrapped it around the younger child. The rain poured in torrents, and Tommy had nothing upon his shoulders but a cotton shirt, but he bore it all, and pulled the coat close about his baby brother. There is not the least doubt the little fellow would have frozen to death only for this.

So at last the neighbors found them at noon, Monday, cuddled all down close together, Tommy, the small brother and Shep. A few hours more and both the children would have been dead. But how much the kind hearted people made over them when they did discover them! There was hardly anything good enough for these two whom

More Snowflakes. Most of you will have opportunity to examine the beauty and shapelines of the snow crystals about this time of year.

If you have a microscope you can see them better. Catch them upon something black for a background, and examine. There are very many shapes. One of the things never yet found out is how nature makes such beautiful crystals. Just given some floating vapor, then a sudden cold air catches it, and lo! there come out perfect mathematical figures in many shapes. Man has tried to draw these figures, but he cannot make them look as delicate as nature does. Our geometrical and architectural designs, however many and beautiful they are, are marely imitations of work made by a greater hand than man's—work which has been steadily turned out year after year for unfold ages.

A Variation of the Compass in Georgia.

[Lawrenceville (Ga.) Herald.]

In the early history of Gwinnett two neighbors disagreed as to their land lines, and agreed to have the dividing line settled by the county surveyor. This surveyor was fond of his toddy, a fact not unknown to one of the parties in interest.

On the day the line was run one of the parties notified the surveyor that just behind a tree to which he desired him to run was a bottle of old corn liquor, and if he happened to hit that tree the bottle was his. Strange to say, the surveyor hit that tree entrally. To do this it was necessary to make a curve, but this was not hard to do, and when the other party protested that the line was not a straight one, the surveyor slenced him with the remark that it was necessary to angle a little to meet the variations of the compass.

The line was duly established, and to this day it stands as the dividing line between two tracts of land. It is needless to say it is not a straight line, but it has been duly surveyed, and "that do settle it."

Whether They Meet or Not.

There seems to be some foundation for the superstition that it is unlucky to be one of a social party of thirteen. The Lancet and Clinic quotes Quetelet as saying that, taking thirteen persons of different ages, the probabilities are that one death will occur among them within the year. Of course the circumstance is likely to take place whether the thirteen persons meet together or not. meet together or not.

Finally, filled with misanthropic disgust against these summer friends, he had resolved to quit England, and go he cared not where.

On the morning after coming to this decision, while glancing aimlessly over a paper, his eye fell upon an item describing the discovery of gold in California. In an instant his resolve was formed. He would go there.

If his strength gave out before the goal was reached, so much the better; no one would care, no one would miss him.

It was in this mood that he had made his first request for a meal, for the*last few pennies of his slender funds had bought him a meagre dinner the day before.

A half smile parted Ralph's pale lips.

"Why do you ask me that?" he responded.

"Because mamma says that people—real good people, I mean—are always happy, and that they only feel sad when they do something wrong."

"I suppose mamma is right," said Ralph, sighing. "And yet I am not a bad man, little one; only a foolish one."

"I am foolish sometimes, and a little bad, too," said the little creature, shaking her head with a serious air. "And then mamma tells me to sit down in my chair and think about it; and by-and-by I feel very sorry, and look sad like you do now. Don't you feel sorry you was se foolish?

Darting away from his side, she felt the room, returning in a few minutes with a small parcel in her hand.

"See here," she said, opening it upon his knee. "Papa had my picture taken on some cards the other day, and he gave me this one to do just what I pleased with." He wrote my name on it: "Maude Evelyn Granger."

"I will give it to you, and when you look at it you can think of your little friend, and that she wants you to be good."

"But will your mamma let you give this to me?" asked Raiph with some misgiving.

"Oh yes! I asked her just now. I told her I wanted to give you something to make you feel happy, and she said, "Very well, dear." Now you'll have one friend, won't you?"

He pressed little Maude's hand in a close, lingering clasp, raised his hat to his benefactress, and left the house.

Five years had passed, finding Raiph Wentworth still working as a common laborer at the mines.

Every evening when his work was ended, he would wander off to some secluded spot, then drawing a little package from his pocket, gaze long and earnestly at the pictured face it contained.

Frugal, abstemiotis, and self-denying as a hermit, his life appeared to have in it little to envy. But he had a goal before his mental vision of which they knew nothing—a goal to the attainment of which every dollar of his hard-earned wages, every energy of his life, were of which every dollar of his hard-earned wages, every energy of his life, were devoted.

Although apparently lost to the world without, Ralph was not forgotten.

One day a letter came for him; a thick cumbrous-looking envelope, directed in a large sprawling hand.

In the solitude of his little cell-like room, he opened it, and his pale check flushed with a look that was cestasy.

The prilliantly lighted parlors of Mrs. The brilliantly lighted parlors of Mrs.

The brilliantly lighted parlors of Mrs. Remington's handsome mansion were filling fast with guests, when the hostess came forward to welcome a new comer—a lovely girl of twenty years, who was entering, accompanied by a gentleman, evidently her father.

"Good evening, my dear Maude!" she exclaimed, with a rapturous—little squeeze of her hand. "I have delightful news for you—and all the other marriageable young ladles who will be here to-night!" with a gay laugh.

"I am to have among my guests tonight no less a person than Mr. Wentworth, that elegant young man—I call him young, for he is only thirty-five—who has been winning so many laurels.

"He's a splendid-looking man, they say, and immensely rich—owns mining property. He is home for a short visit, and I've secured him for to-night. I will be sure to secure you an introduction to him."

"Do," replied Maude, smiling. Then she passed on to another part of the room.

Half an hour later there was a slight bustle at the door, and a ripple of expectancy among the guests.

Maude, who happened to be standing where she had a view of the entrance, perceived a tail elegant gentleman bending over the hand of Mrs. Remington.

At the next moment he raised his head to glance over the company, and their area met.

At the next moment he raised his head to glance over the company, and their eyes met.

Was it fancy, or did a fleeting emotion cross his face—a look of surprise, almost gladness, light up his fine eyes?

Maude was sure she had never met him before, and yet, as she returned his gaze for a moment, a feeling as of a half-forgotten memory came over her.

Twenty minutes later, as Maude stood conversing with her partner, Mrs. Remington's voice greeted her ear:

"Maude, my love, Mr. Wentworth wishes to be introduced to you;" and looking up, she encountered again the earnest gaze of the handsome stranger.

A request for the next dance followed the introduction; then a promenade; and then, almost before she was aware, Mr. Wentworth had secured all the disengaged dances on her card.

His conversation, animated, varied, fluent, had at the same time a certain undercurrent of deep, even intense feeling, that lent a strange charm to his most commonplace words, and sent a thrill to the very heart of the fair girl.

It seemed as if there existed a kindred chord between them—a chord long silent, yet living still, and which thrilled with every vibration of his voice, making her feel, ere that short evening was past, as if he had been a friend of years er feel, ere that show past, as if he had been a friend of years a loved and valued friend—rather than —a loved and valued friend—rather than a stranger whom she was meeting for the first time.

Mr. Wentworth learned, in the course of their conversation, that Miss Granger was spending the winter in the city, being on a visit to some relatives; and he further asked and obtained permission to call upon her.

being on a risk to according to call upon her.

He did call, many times; and at length, one evening, he said in the course of a long and earnest conversation:

"Miss Granger, ever since our acquaintance began, I have been wanting to tell you a story. Let me tell it now."

Drawing his chair closer to where she sat, Ralph Wentworth began a tale with most of which the reader is familiar. Then, continuing, he said:

"One day there came to that young man a letter containing the notice of a bequest of four thousand pounds from a distant relative, lately deceased.

"The money, with what he had saved in those five years, completed the purchase of a claim that was the beginning of his fortune. Step by step he mounted the ladder of life once more, until he gained commanding wealth, influence, friends, and, better than all, a clear and homorable record.

find her who had been his good angel all those years.

"Perhaps she had forgotten the man to whom her sweet childish sympathy had been a talisman and a blessing, for he had not even told her his name; but something whispered to him that he would find her again—and find her heart-free.

something whispered to him that he would find her again—and find her heart-free.

"Maude," he continued, taking the hand that trembled in his clasp, "through all those years that innocent kiss of a warm affectionate heart has lain pure upon my lips, the solace of my lonely life. Temptations I had many, but that little face was present with me always. I could not look into those pure eyes and sin!

"On the day when her little hand pointed out the way to a better life, she promised that if I came back again, and could say to her that I had tried to do my duty, to be a good and useful man, she would kiss me again. I have kept my faith; have earnestly striven to retrieve youthful folly that had not yet become vice.

"And now will the woman redeem the promise of the child? Will she raise her lips to mine in another kiss—a kiss that shall tell mis she will be my life's angel—my cherished and honored wife?"

For a moment Maude's voice failed her. Back over the years memory swept, chringing up every detail of that memorable interview, and she now knew the secret of the subtle sympathy which had seemed from the first to bind titem together.

A new voice seemed speaking to her now one to which her heart responded with a great and solemn joy; and reading his answer in her face upraised to his in one freeling glance, Ralph Wentworth drew her to him and kissed her.

worth drew her to him and kissed her.

In a private apartment in Ralph Wentworth's luxurious home hangs a beautifully executed copy of the photograph he has cherished so long; while enclosed in a golden locket, which he will carry over his heart as long as he lives, is another, in miniature, of the sweet childish face, which, lifted to his in that first innocent kiss of sympathy and trust, was the turning-point in his life—the earnest of a useful, honorable, and happy future.

GLIMPSES OF AFRICAN LIFE.

Scenes Witnessed by a Traveller in the Mr. W. Montagu Kerr read a paper before the Royal Geographical Society recently, giving his experiences in "A Journey Overland from Cape Town across the Zambesi to Lake Nyassa."

Among many other interesting things, he told of the arrival of his party at the town of Chibinga, on the banks of the Msinqua river.

Two human skulls adorned either post of the arrivance agts. Their recention was

Two human skulls adorned either post of the entrance gate. Their reception was cold. Necessity compelled a prolonged stay at their town during which time Mr. Kerr wandered for many miles round, finding alluvial gold firthe sandy beds of the Msingua and other aributaries of the Mukumbura river.

The men composing his party informed him at this juncture that they were tired and must now get back to their wives; that they had wandered far from their homes and wished to retrace their stems. The natives of the town were of tired and must now get back to their wives; that they had wandered far from their homes and wished to retrace their steps. The natives of the town were of the Mande tribe, and seemed to have large numbers of slaves purchased from Senga, a town on the northern banks of the Zambes!

A great feast was going on at the town. His men all seemed beside themselves with joy at the thoughts of returning home. Native beer, made from millet, flowed like water. Kudu meat was in abundance.

The open centre of the town swarmed with human beings as black as ebony, a turmoil of voices rent the air, the dusky maidens darked and sang, keeping time as they stamped the ground with either foot, and following each other in long waving lines in their snake-like dance. The drums never ceased to beat for three days and three nights.

In the day the feast continued, when the sun was at its greatest height, throwing down rays of fire upon the festive crowd, the fat, melting in the glistening locks of their woolly heads and running all over their bodies, seeming to give zest to their movements.

Some time afterwards the men whom he had recruited descreted him, and left him entirely alone; but he was able after days had passed away to enlist six men in his service, to whom, however, hewas unable to speak. Aftength they reached the suburbs of the town of the Angoni despot.

Under mest disadvantageous circumstances he was brought before this man, whose name was Tolikuse, and who came down with humerous followers to the center of the town, where he (Mr. Kerr) was seated on a rook, to examine him. Tchikuse seemed to scoff at the dejected appearance presented by the traveller.

He was a young man of enormous dimensions, of a light reddish-brown complexion, and rather a vacant countenance, and completely wrapped up in his own importance. Vanity beamed from every line of his fat and sensual countenance.

Mr. Kerr was led into a small hut where a dusky daughter of Africa, whom

Mr. Kerr was led into a small hut where a dusky daughter of Africa, whom he afterwards discovered to be the king's sister, used to come in the night and sit beside him, and in whispering tones would talk by the hour, constantly repeating her brother's name. Tchikuse, with awe, and shaking her head and drawing deep sighs. Not a word of her talk could he understand. She never forgot to bring some beer (pombe) with her, the buils of which she imbibed herself.

In the Work of the Anglo-Russian Boundary Commission.

LONDON, April 12 .- A dispatch received last night from the Afghan frontier, via Teheran, states that a erious rupture has occurred between the British and Russian members of the international commission which is engaged in fixing the northern boundary of Afghanistan according to the agreement made between Lord Salisbury and M. DeGiers in 1884. The dispatch states that the disagreement is so serious as to have brought the compression to a standall. work of the commission to a standstill until the cause of dispute shall have been passed upon by the British and Russian Governments, to whom the subject has been reported by the respective commissioners. Dispatches confirmatory of this report are said to ave been received at both the Indian and Foreign Offices, but the content of those dispatches are at present withheld from the public. neta from the public.

It is taken for granted that Russians have made some intolerable demands which the British have refused. Thereupon the Russians have repeated their ultimatum and the British have ceased operations and reported to the Foreign Office. As the Russian policy has been one of delay ever since the boundary commission was organized they are doubtless well pleased with the present hitch, and will be still more delighted if it results in long dipomatic negotiations, as now appear

An Old Man Brutally Killed-- SUBSCRIP His Murderers in Jail.

CHARITON, Iowa, April 8.—Charles Archibald, an eccentric man of about 70, was found murdered in his back yard yeswas found murdered in his backs are terday morning, his body nearly naked and horribly mangled, his skull broken and his body covered with dirt. He lived by himself in an old hut and was supposed to have considerable money about his person. On the discovery of his body a trail was found leading to the house of the body a country of the discovery of his body a trail was found leading to the house of the body a country of the discovery of his body a trail was found leading to the house of the body as the leading to the house of the discovery of his body as the leading to the house of the leading to the leading to the house of the leading to the leading t trail was found isading to the mose of Thomas Kelly, a man of hard reputation, the ground showing plainly that Archibald had been dragged from Kelly's house. The police at once took charge of the premises and arrested Kelly and his wife. In the cellar were found the murdered man's coat and one of his shoes, a club covered with blood and hair, and a soldering iron in the same condition. Blood was on the floor and numerous articles were found up stairs with blood on them. In Kelly's coal shed was found $1230 in an old tin can. All matters went to show that the old man was murdered in Kelly's kitchen by Kelly and his wife, his body dropped through a trap door in to the cellar, and to make sure of his death, pounded to pieces. To cover their guilt his body was dragged to his own door and left there by Kelly. The affair was conducted by him in a most bungling manner, and the circumstantial evidence against him is overwhelming. Kelly and him the circumstantial awaiting the his wife are both in jail, awaiting roner's verdict.

The Twenty Million Bond be Floated.

London, Eng., April 13.—On Monday the Barings will invite applications for twenty million dollar Canadian Pacific railway first mortgage bonds, bearing interest at 5 per-cent. The issue is in pursuance of the new arrangement with the Canadian government. The price of the issue is 104 per cent. The list will be opened simultaneously in London and America.

The official statement of the Canadian Pacific Railway company shows a net revenue, for last year's workings of the incomplete system, of $100,000 in excess of the working expenses and all the fixed charges. The opinion on the street is that the issue will be a success.—Globe.
