Third Day.

At the Presbyterian synod Thursday morning, Rev. Robert Murray, editor of the Presbyterian Witness, spoke of the Twentieth Century Fund. He moved resolutions expressing satisfaction of the synod that the general fund was approaching one and a half million and the common fund over half a million, urging each congregation to pay full amount subscribed and make earnest efforts to increase the common fund to $650,000 by uniting liberal contributions and completing the canvass. Also that the following committee be appointed to carry on the work to an wass. Also that the following committee be appointed to carry on the work to an early completion: Revs. E. A. McCurdy, E. D. Miller, T. Stewart, Dr. McMillan, A. B. Dickey, R. G. Strathie, C. Munro, the Moderator, George Millar, J. Corathers, Elders Judge Forbes, H. A. White. The resolutions were seconded by Dr. Burnarden convict.

The resolutions were seconded by Dr. Durents of the century committee to urge upon the committee the claims of the college to an additional grant from the endowment fund.

Rev. A. McLean seconded the motion, and Rev. A. McLean seconded the motion, and Rev. M.

the Augmentation Fund committee, show-ing most encouraging growth, two con-gregations having been made self-sustaining since last year.

He moved that the synod receive the report and that the synod sanction the proposal to raise $10,000 this year, allotting the amount among the Presbyteries as follows:

The resolution was seconded by Rev. James Sinclair and adopted: Rev. Anderson Rodgers presented the Rev. A. McLean Sinclair moved that the synod rescind the tenth section of the regulations for the fund, which reads that a minister who has not paid the annual rate into the fund shall receive only one half the amount to which he would have been otherwise entitled.

Rev. A. H. Foster opposed the motion, saying that there was something wrong with the fund, as the best business minds of the younger men were not in sympathy

Rev. D. McGregor said the fund could not possibly live if the rates were not raised. Prof. Burrows also spoke against the fund. Rev. Mr. McArthur said the fund should be put on such a basis that all could go into it.

Discussion was deferred until afternoon

Discussion was deferred until atternoon. At the afternoon sederunt Rev. Dr. Pollock, principal of the Presbyterian College, Halifax, submitted the statement of the college board. He complained of the treatment and thought he deserved better after his long period in the service of the church.

Rev. Dr. Sedgewick advised deliberation before a change was made. He moved that the motion lie upon the table for a year and that meantime the question be submitted to Presbyterians.

Rev. J. S. Sutherland, of Halifax, in seconding Dr. Sedgewick's amendment, said he had the name Westminster in mind but would not advocate its claims at the present.

Judge Forbes said no scheme was more popular with the laity if the clergymen would give it their support.

Church Life and Work.

The report on chur work, read by Rev. The report of the dealing o Matter for the Laity.

Rev. J. D. McKay, Halifax, did not have nuch confidence in the scheme under its present policy, chiefly that it demanded support from the young clergymen who desired to be beneficiaries. It was a matter of business, he thought, for the laity to provide for aged and infirm ministers. Rev. J. M. Dawson thought that young ninisters ought to contribute to the fund. Rev. McGregor McKay said he now reeived $200 a year from the fund. This he regarded as nothing but justice and back salary for the days when he labored night and day for the church at $400 per annum Rev. A. McArthur, New Glasgow, wanted a scheme formulated which would be more acceptable to the young clergymen. A scheme ought to be perfected to enable the retired clergymen to receive $300 Aged and Infirm Fund Again Debated.

Rev. M. G. Hendry, St. Croix, said ever if the existing system was not considered perfect, young ministers were not loyal to the church who refused to join until a perfect scheme was developed. He would present annual demand, $4. Rev. Dr. Macrae, St. John, wanted a law making it compulsory for every minisinitial step towards placing the fund on a firm and satisfactory condition.

Rev. Mr. McKinnon moved that the question be remitted to the presbyteries, as to any or what changes ought to be made and report at the next maritime synod.

After considerable further discussion, 10 was carried by a vote of 41 to 9. Rev. Mr. Rogers, New Glasgow, then provided the synod with information relative to the fund. At the beginning of the year the debt had been $1,300 and had been accumulating. It would probably be $2,000 by the end of the year. The report included a proposal asking presbyteries to provide for the debt on the basis of the allocation for the augmentation fund. Rev. Dr. Murray, Halifax, seconded by Presentations and discussions of reports brought the evening sederunt which brought the convention to a close.

Prof. Falconer submitted the report of the committee on Sunday schools and religious welfare.

Sunday School Statistics.

The report showed 832 schools in the synod. The teachers numbered 4,269 and the scholars 36,947; average attendance, 25,208. The amount contributed for schemes of the church was $4,155, for the students to whom liberality had been extended was in a measure responsible for the debt incurred. Dr. Pollock also called attention to the small number of students in attendance this year. There seemed to be a marked decrease in the number of theological students. In Scotland there was a decrease of 50 per cent. and it was strange that the falling off had extended to Canada. It was a serious matter as there was an increasing demand for young men to go into the church. Some means should be devised to aid the operations of the church from being prevented. Dr. Pollock closed his remarks with a motion expressing satisfaction with the accomplishments of the college, asking congregations to instructors. struct the presbyteries to provide such

Rev. Mr. Sinclair moved that the synod request the general assembly to have the Presbyterian College of Halifax changed to Columba College. Judge Forbes seconded the motion. In making the motion the mover paid tribute to the saint whose name ought to be revered by all the church because of the fruits of his missionary work in Scotland.

Principal Calkin favored the change, but Rev. Dr. Isaac Murray did not. He claimed that nothing could be said for Columba which could not be said for Scotchmen. He cited the names of Knox and Melville, names which were more illustrious in the history of Presbyterianism. In the course of his remarks Rev. Dr. Murray was frequently interrupted.

said he had the name Westminster in mind but would not advocate its claims at the present.

Rev. McGregor McKay (retired), as far as his memory served, could not recall much in favor of Columba, who was born at the dawn of the dark ages and was responsible for much bloodshed. "Are we," asked the speaker, "going to name a blue Presbyterian college after an excommunicated priest." Later, he said, history did not indicate how much Catholic or how much Presbyterian there was in the make-up of Columba.

The vote was 67 to 15 in favor of post-toning the question for one year.

Rev. Mr. Archibald, secretary to the committee appointed to deal with the application of Mr. Duncan Stewart for admission to the Presbyterian ministry, reported. The recommendation was that Mr. Stuart have leave to withdraw his application.

St. Thomas, June 1—A modern miracle was made known today when Mr. Riddle, of this city, announced that he had recovered his hearing. He has been almost entirely deaf, and it borders on the maraculous to find him able to hear everything with great distinctness. As his case is proving of such universal interest, we give Mr. Riddle's own statement. "My hearing was always poor, and not long ago I became almost deaf. It was the result of Catarrhal Inflammation, but nothing did me good until I used Catarrhozone. It cured my trouble, and I strongly recommend it to the deaf." Fully nine-tenths of the deafness is the result of Catarrh, and can be cured by Catarrhozone. The cures of even deafness wrought by this remedy in cases of even twenty years standing are really astounding. Among many others, ministers of the gospel testify to the wonderful powers of Catarrhozone, and your druggist can tell of some astounding cases in his own experience. Better give it a trial, if your hearing is impaired. Price $1.00; smoll size 25 cents, druggists of N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S.

NOTES ON MILKING.

Important Matters For the Consideration of Dairymen. We keep a daily record of each cow's We keep a daily record of each cow's milk and find it pays in several ways, has become cloddy or has been partwrites a correspondent of Rural New Yorker. We think many are deterred with set pointer, so that the empty pails, which all weigh alike, will hang at zero. Then it is but a second's work to weigh and set down the result. For keeping the record we have a roll fastened at both ends to roller similar to rolling pins. The frame has a glass front and a narrow space just wide enough to permit one milking to be set down at a time. The sheet is always clean, as it is not apt to be where a gets credit only for what she really gives. The cow that gives a fair mess and sticks right at it has a show then with the cow that gives a big mess for a month or two and then drops out of sight. We are apt to milk a little faster and cleaner, as we want to keep up or increase her record. If several cows drop, we know that there is something the mat-We note how quickly they are affected by early or late cut hay, or how a cold storm will show a decrease. We find that the cow that can be quickly milked gives most satisfaction Men are more likely to dry up a slow milking cow and are not apt to milk her quite so clean. We have found that some men will get much more milk out of certain cows than others. Theoretically every man should milk the same cows, but if you have some slow milkers better let them have all the strippers, or else let them milk hit or miss. More of a dairyman's success depends on the milking than one is likely to think. Some men take good care of their cows up to this the last vital point and then miss. The cow should be at Havana, Oct. 1.—The constitutional convention has addressed a letter to Governor General Wood informing him that the changes which he suggested should be made and that the convention deeming its work and the con not get so much milk. Look out for the man with finger nails. He will irritate the cow just enough to make her uncomfortable and you'll have to stand the loss. Noise of any kind or anything out of the ordinary that, excites the cow should be guarded against at milking time.

Value of Careful Preparation on the An expert Texas butter maker tolls in Farm and Ranch how he holds the price on his butter. He says: Working butter is an art not well should be worked to get the milk and in them, and every pound we send out is an advertisement for the retailer to whom we sell. Country butter, good, bad and indifferent, is only "country butter" and is at a discount in all our markets There must be some distinguishin mark about buter to distinguish it from "country butter." Thousands of pounds of "country butter" are bough up by our country merchants. It is never offered to their customers at home, but shipped to the "process but ter" factories to be converted into creamery (?) butter. ly puddled, there is a shape of mold board, a stage of soil moisture, and from this practice because they think it takes too much time. We have a scale help to restore the tilth best and help to restore the tilth best and quickest. When such a soil is the least amount too dry to puddle, the plow will shear it into the thinnest slices; if still drier the leaves will be thicker and will form closer granules. When much too dry no shearing can take place at all and the furrow slice is simply broken into coarse lumps.

If you bend but a few leaves of the book at a time there is but little slipping, but the thicker the pile of leaves the greater is the sliding and the greater is the tendency to shear. So it is in plowing; the deep furrow pulverizes better and puddles worse than the thin slice or shallow furrow, Again, if you bend the leaves gently there is little shearing, but if abruptly the sliding is bend the great. So if you plow with the low mold board on Fig. 1 you disturb the tilth least, puddle the soil least and leave the texture coarsest; but if the steep mold board of Fig. 2 is used there is the greatest danger of ouddling, if the soil is too wet, and the moisture is right. To understand why then is to teach both how and when. It must be clear from the mechanical action of the plow that its form should be adapted to the soil. If the soil has a tendency to be too open and porous and is naturally coarse grained, like the sandy soils, it should be plowed with a steep mold board, a little over wet, and as deep as other conditions will permit, so ease, then milked gently, but just as fast as possible. It is good, hard work and secure the closer texture.

> the soil is a little dry, so as to shear into thicker layers and form granules of larger size. If plowing must be done when the soil is a little too wet, use the less steep mold board and plow as shallow as other conditions will allow. If a soil has become a little too dry and is not pulverizing fine enough, use the steep-er mold board and plow deep, for this will split it into thinner layers, make the soil finer and tilth better. Since the steepest mold board bends the furrow slice most and pulverizes most, it is clear that the work done is greatest, and hence that the draft will be most. Since deep plowing pulverizes more than shallow plowing, the work done is more than in proportion to the depth. Since clay soils have more > and larger granules which must be sheared in two in plowing than sandy soils do, the labor of plowing must be greater.

> Since the granules of the soil are not as strong when the soil is moist as when dry, it plows much easier when in good condition. But if the soil has become too dry and yet must be plowed, it should be plowed deeper, rather than shallower. This is necessary to pulverize better, to get more moist soil on the surface for the immediate seed bed, and to quick the immediate seed bed, and to quicker moisten and bring into con-dition the layer which has become

It must be evident from the principles underlying the art of plowing that set rules can only occasionally, and in the most general way, meet the case in hand. It may be safely said that on the majority of soils where there is a general deficiency of moisture for best yields plowing in the fall may be done to great profit and advantage, because, first, it saves moisture already in the soil, making it available in the spring; second, if the plowing is early it in-creases the available plant food for the next crop by increasing the rate of nitrification and the rate of solution of other salts; third, there is less danger of puddling the soil in the spring by the early plowing; fourth, one or more crops of weeds can usually be destroyed.

Where spring rains are not excessive, and especially when the fall has been dry, late plowing may be practiced even for corn, especially on soils naturally mellow. The disk harrow is so perfect a tool for stirring the soil in the spring that it has removed many objections to fall plowing; indeed it has made other plowing for small grains unnecessary in many cases where these are to follow corn or potatoes.

When a soil is in poor tilth and is hard and lumpy, deep plowing late in the fall, leaving the surface rough and open so that moisture may be absorbed and thaw and freeze in the clods, will greatly improve its tex-ture. Sod ground may usually be plowed to advantage in the fall even in comparatively wet climates, and this should usually be done se as to lay the sod close and flat, plowing deep enough to have soil to develop the seed bed in. If the furrow is set on edge, or the depth is shallow, much of the stubble and roots will work to the surface and be less available in forming humus and nitrates.

Manure may often be plowed under in the fall to advantage, especially if There should be cleanliness all the it is coarse and if it is on sod

TWENTY DOLLAR SILO.

Easily Built and Has a Capacity of About Thirty-six Tons. In a recent issue Hoard's Dairyman published the accompanying picture and detail of construction of a silo that was built by an Oregon farmer at a cost of $20. The silo is 10 by 24 feet, inside measurement. It is a stave silo, built of 2 by 6 scantlings set edgewise, and they are neither sized nor beveled. There are sixty-two staves or scantlings. They are set on a foundation of gravel and brick. For the foundation the earth is excavated to the depth of fourteen inches, two feet wide, in cir-cular form. This is filled in with stone and brick (the brick were used simply because they were handy; gravel is just as good) and tamped down solid. On the center of this the bottom ends of the staves are set. For hoops or uses woven wire fencing cut in about thirty foot lengths. The ends of the wire are run through a 4 by 4 timber, the timber turned half over and wire fastened by twisting the ends around. Through these timbers are run three bolts with nuts for drawing them together and tightening the hoops.

The openings for taking out the en silage are made by cutting out three staves for a distance of twenty-four inches, which would make the opening 18 by 24 inches. There are three these openings, one between each band, there being four bands around the silo. They are cut on the bevel, with the longer sides inside, so the pressure of the ensilage will hold them in place.

The lumber in this silo cost $12, the four foot woven wire fencing $6.80 and the twelve bolts $1.20, or a total of $20. The cost of labor is not taken into consideration. It required one and a half days to build it. This is of about thirty-six ton capacity and was built for eleven cows.

Pasturing Sorghum. During the time the Kansas station has been pasturing sorghum several reports have been received of cattle dving in ten or fifteen minutes from the time they entered the sorghum patch, but in every case where we have been able to get details the cattle have eaten the sorghum in empty or nearly empty stomachs, says Professor stomachs so well filled that they feel completely satisfied before touching the green sorghum and then should be allowed to eat it only a few minutes at a time until they are accustomed to the If sorghum can be pastured successfuly, as the Kansas experiment station has done, it means that the dairymen and stockmen can get an immense amount of pasture from a small area, which is available at a time when the other pasture is getting short and dry. Pasturing will also be the most economical way of utilizing sorghum. The man that turns his cattle in a sorghum field, however, must realize that he may be taking risks. He must weigh the evidence for and against its use and then decide for himself if the benefits outweigh the risks. Care of Pastures. dairying or depend simply upon summer dairying, it is necessary to have good pasture through the summer, and in the late summer and autumn it is necessary to help the pasture out, says W. Conway of Indiana in American Cultivator. This is simpler than many imagine. Sometimes it simply means fencing off a portion of the field, so the grass has a chance to grow while the cows are feeding on the other part. Constant daily cropping in hot, dry weather kills the grass and keeps the plants from ever getting any headway. If the pasture field is sufficiently large, fence part of it off in August and in this way keep it green and healthful. Also be sure that the weeds and briers are kept cut down. Do not let any of these go to seed. Their spread will ruin a pasture lot quicker than anything. The cows do not disturb the weeds and briers, and consequently they have the opportunity to grow and thrive while the grass has not. At least give the latter a fair chance in the race.

As skimmilk contains only a very small quantity of fat, some solid food rich in fat must be added. For this purpose there is nothing better than ground flaxseed or old process oilmeal made into a jelly by means of some hot water, says F. W. Wall of the Wisconsin experiment station. The amount of flaxseed or oilmeal added to the milk is small at the start, only about a tablespoonful, and as the calf grows the quantity given is increased by slow degrees until toward weaning time, when one-half a pound may be given daily. Good results have also been obtained way through. The adage of the weak-est link in the chain determining its.

MISS HALL'S "WIFE,"

The Strange Story of Woman Who Died on Steamer at New York.

New York, Oct. 1-Miss Rosalia Baldelli, who passed as the "wife of Miss Caroline Winslow Hall, who died on the steamship Citta Di Torino, from Italy, told today on board the vessel the story years ago while she (Miss Baldelli) was years ago while she (Miss Isalitelli) was a government school teacher. Miss Hall explained that she was an art student, whose home was in Boston. The two women became great friends. Miss Hall adopted men's garb because it was easier for her to work in such clothes in carry-ing on her studies at the art school in Milan. The two travelled over Italy, but it was not until 1897 that Miss Hall dethe guise of her wife under the name of Guiseppani Hall. All this was done be-cause of Miss Hall's belief that she would be subjected to much less annoyance than if they travelled simply as two young women.

After the minutes of the last session had been read and approved the warden referred in terms of sympathy to the decease of Sheriff Sturdee. The deceased had always been prominent in municipal affairs, had held many offices of responsibility and in every case his efforts had been most satisfactory to the municipality and citizens. He thought the council should put on record its deep sense of loss in the decease of such a painstaking, able and conscientious officer.

Councillor McGoldrick agreed with the warden. He referred to the late sheriff's long connection with public affairs and particularly with the municipality. As sheriff he had a good grasp of his duties and his zealous efforts had been appreciated by all.

It is believed the fire started from a discarded match or cigar stub thrown behind the stage. The fire had been burning some time when discovered; the interior of the Opera hall was then a mass of flames and the roof was about falling in. The buildings touching the Opera block on each side were saved without being scorched, so efficient is Truro's fire department.

An immense crowd quickly removed the goods from the stores to adjacent buildings without any fire damage, though the goods were partially damaged by smoke and water.

tality. Oblivion! It can swallow and will swallow whole galaxies of thing. Even the pyramids are dying.

Yet oblivion does not remove or swallow everything that had better not be removed or swallowed. The old monster is welcome to his meal. This world would long ago have been overcrowded if not for the merciful removal of nations and generations. What if all the books had lived that were ever written and printed and published? The libraries would by their immensity have obstructed in-telligence and made all research impossible. The fatal epidemic of books was a merciful epidemic. Many of the state and national libraries to day are only morgues, in which dead books are waiting for some one to come and recognize them. What if all the people that had been born were still alive? We would have been elbowed by our ancestors of ten centuries ago, and people who ought to have said their last word 3,000 years ago would snarl at us, saying, "What are you doing here?" There would have been no room to turn around. Some of the past genera-tions of mankind were not worth remembering. The first useful thing that many people did was to die, their cradie a misfortune and their grave a boon. This world was hardly a comfortable place to live in be-fore the middle of the eighteenth century. So many things have come into the world that were not fit to stay in we ought to be glad they were put out. The waters of Lethe, the fountain of forgetfulness, are a healthful draft. The history we have of the world in ages past is always one sided and cannot be depended on.

Now, I have told you that this oblivion of which I have spoken has its defeats and that there is no more reason why we should not be distinctly and viviely and gloriously remembered five hundred million billion trillion quadrillion quintillion years from now than that we should be remembered six weeks. I am go-ing to tell you how the thing can be

Go and sin no more?" Did you tell a man clear discouraged in his waywardness and hopeless and plotting suicide that for him was near by a laver in which he might wash and a coronet of eter-nal blessedness he might wear? What are epitaphs in graveyards, what are eulogiums in presence of those whose unread biographies in the alcoves of imperishable records you have made in the iliumined memories of those to whom you did such kindnesses? Forget them? They cannot forget them. Notwithstanding all their might and splendor there are some things the glorified of heaven cannot do, and this is one of them. They cannot forget an earthly kindness done. The kindnesses you do to others will stand as long in the appreciation of others as the gates of heaven will stand, as the "house of many man-sions" will stand, as long as the throne of God will stand.

Another defeat of oblivion will be found in the character of those whom we rescue, uplift or save. Character is eternal. Suppose by a right influence we aid in transforming a bad man into a good man, a dolorous man into a happy man, a disheart so much as one line in a newspaper regarding it of no mortal tongue may ever whisper it into human ear, but wherever that soul shall go your work upon it shall go, wherever that soul rises your work on it will rise, and so long as that soul will last your work on it will last. Do you suppose there will ever come such an idiotic lapse in the history of that soul in heaven that it shall forget that you invited him to Christ; that you, by prayer or gospel word, turned him round from the wrong way to the right way? No such insanity will ever smite a heavenly citizen. It is Christopher Wren planned and built heaven that you were the instrumentality of building a temple for the sky. We teach a Sabbath class or put a Christian tract in the hand of a a material that no frost or earth-quake or rolling of the centuries can damage or bring down.

There is no sublimer art on earth than architecture. With pencil and rule and compass the architect sits from his own brain a cathedral or a national capitol or a massive home before he leaves that table, and then he goes out and unrolls his plans great agony have become the claphe goes out and unrolls his plans and calls carpenters and masons and artisans of all sorts to execute his design, and when it is finished he walks around the year through the second that the second the great agony have become the clapping hands of a great joy. The requiem with which we began has become the grand regard. walks around the vast structure and sees the completion of the work with high satisfaction, and on a stone at lip on which sits the laughter of some corner of the building the architect's name may be chiseled. But the storms do their work, and time, that takes down everything, will yet take down that structure until there shall not be one stone left upon another, But there is a soul in heaven, Bone Grinders, Portable Forges,

Through your instrumentality it was put there. Under God's grace you are put there. Under God's grace you are the architect of its eternal happiness. Your name is written, not on one corner of its nature, but inwrought into its every fiber and energy. Will the storms of winter wash out the story of what you have wrought upon that spiritual structure? No. There are no storms in that land, and there is no water. Will time wear out the inscription which shows your fidelity? No. Time is past, and your fidelity? No. Time is past, ar it is an everlasting now. Built into the foundation of that imperishable structure, built into its pillars, built into its capstone is your name, either the name you have on earth or the name by which celestials shall call you. I know the Bible says in one place that God is a jealous God, but that refers to the work of those who that refers to the work of those who worship some other god.

A true father is not jealous of his child. With what glee you show the picture your child penciled or a toy ship your child hewed out or recite the noble deed your child accomplished, and God never was jealous of a Joshua, never was jealous of a Frances. Paul, never was jealous of a France Havergal, never was jealous of a man or woman who tried to heal wounds and wipe away tears and lift burdens and save souls, and while all is of grace and your self abnegating utterance will be, "Not unto us, not unto us, but unto thy name, O Lord, give glory!" you shall name, O Lord, give glory!" you shall always feel a heavenly satisfaction in every good thing you did on earth, and if iconoclasm, borne from beneath, should break through the gates of heaven and efface one record of your earthly fidelity methinks Christ would take one of the nails of his every gross, and write somewhere his own cross and write somewhere on the crystal or the amethyst or on the crystal or the amethyst or the jacinth or the chrysoprasus your name and just under it the inscription of my text, "The righteous shall be held in everlasting remembrance."

There is another and a more complete defeat for oblivion, and that is in the heart of God himself. You have seen a sailor roll up his sleeve and show you his arm tattooed with the

You have seen many a hand tattooed with the face of a loved one before or after marriage. This custom of tattooing is almost as old as the world. It is some colored liquid and the state of the strict enforcement of the law.

Think of it, to hold an everlasting place in the heart of God! The heart of God! The most beautiful palace in the universe. Let the archangel build a palace as grand as he can and then you enter this palace of archangelic construction and see how poor a palace it is compared with the greater palace that some of you have already found in the heart of a loving and pardoning God and into which all the music and all the prayers and all the sermonic considerations of this day are trying to introduce you through the blood of Oh, where is oblivion now? From the dark and overshadowing word that it seemed when I began it has become something which no man or woman or child who loves the Lord need ever fear. Oblivion defeated. Oblivion dead. Oblivion sepulchered. But I must not be so hard on that devouring monster, for into its grave go all our sins when the Lord for Christ's sake has forgiven them. Just blow a resurrection trumpet over them when once oblivion has them rises. Blow again. Not a stir amid all the pardoned iniquities of a lifetime. Blow again. Not one of them moves in the deep grave trenches. But to this powerless res urrection trumpet a voice responds, half human, half divine, and it must be part man and part God, saying, "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." Thank God for this blessed oblivion. So you see I did not invite you down into a cellar, but up on a throne; not into the graveyard to which all material-ism is destined, but into a garden all down alone and in silence and evolves brance. ## LEST OF VESSELS BOUND TO ST. JOHN. THE CHILDREN'S FAVORITE!

A THRILLING PERIL IN THE ICE.

The ship Chariot was one of the best vessels in which I ever sailed, and Captain Bynton, her commander, was a good master, though inclined to be fretful, especially toward his officers.

That he was an excellent whaleman there could be no doubt; and whaling was our business.

We, before the mast, could not help wishing that, while he treated us fairly well, he would not so often fly into a passion at our superiors, who certainly were very good men.

His conduct toward them seemed to spring from a kind of jealousy; and yet he was a man of sound understanding and a strong sense of justice in a general way.

He had the habit of speaking to his officers in terms calculated to mortify them before the crew.

"Mr. Jayae," he would say, as the chief mate might be directing a sailor in regard to some difficult piece of work, "that man knows how to do the job better than you do, so just let him alone, will you?"

Of course the subordinate would be extremely irritated, and sometimes there do, so just let him alone, will you?"

Of course the subordinate would be extremely irritated, and sometimes there would occur a serious flare up. Mr. Jayne, however, was ordinarily a quiet man, and however, was ordinarily a quiet man, and could bear much in silence.

Wide that a person course threatening, a second berg, somewhat smaller, was almost touching it upon the opposite side, while, added to the rest, there prevailed at the moment a fresh breeze, accompanied with a beav swell.

however, was ordinarily a quiet man, and would bear much in silence.

We were "making a season" in the Arctic Ocean, but it was not a very successful one, and the captain was correspondingly nervous and fault-finding.

It was from no fault of the officers that the ship was filled no faster, yet in his moments of vexation he professed to think that such was the case, and blamed them for not accomplishing impossibilities.

The whales were unusually wild, and would dodge our boats in the most provoking manner.

There was in particular one enormous animal which we had so often approached in vain that we had come to regard him as an old acquaintance.

The Arctic whales are generally large, but this patriarch was a monster among monsters. He was careful of himself, too, and seemed to know when he was well off.

One day we came within an acc of outwitting the old fellow. He rose directly ahead of Mr. Jayne's boat, to which I was attached, so that after a few strokes of our witting the old fellow. He rose directly used instead of oars, we succeeded in fastening to him with two harpoons.

After a short run he stopped, and we hauled up to him hand over hand. The mate was upon the very point of using a lance, when up went the wide tail, down went the big head, and we were left to look only upon a great whirl in the water.

Down, down, down the whale went to what seemed an endless depth, drawing the head of the boat almost under water.

Then all of a sudden we felt our long lines slacken and knew that both harpoons had drawn out.

Captain Boynton censured the first officients a short run he stopped, and in a few minutes at most the mass above must come thundering down. Already the ice mountain seemed to stoop toward the water.

Frantically the crew of the wrecked boat struck out for the mouth of the channel; one man in particular, whom we believed to be Captain Boynton himself, appeared to have been so injured that he could make scarcely any headway.

"Men!" cried. Mr. Jayne, turning to us as we sat with our hands on the oars, "that boat's crew must be saved!- Will you venture in there with me? Answer, quick."

er roundly for what had occurred, telling him that he had lost the whale through your lance," the captain said, "I was watching you from aloft, and saw just how you managed. A fine man you are to be mate of a ship! Your boat's crew ought to be showed of you!'

of a ship! Your boat's crew ought to be shamed of you!'

"Uaptain Boynton," replied Mr. Jayne, "you know that what you say isn't true. You know very well that I'm not afraid of a whale. You get in a passion and abuse ne; but some time you may be sorry for it, when you come to think the matter over."

The sympathies of the crew were all on the side of the mate, for a better whaleman or a better seaman it would have been hard to find.

In regard to his forbearance, however, there were various opinions, some of us thinking that he carried it too far, while others believed that he acted the part of wisdom under the circumstances.

"If the old man thinks he could tow that "If the old man thinks he could tow that big whale alongside the ship, why doesn't he go and try it?" asked one of the hands.

"Anybody could sit on the cross trees and growl," remarked another; "that's whaling made easy."

So the comments went through the forecastle; for it is there that the merits and demerits of superiors are rudely weighed and generally with some degree of justice.

Captain Boynton did not often go himself in chase of whales, as he had full confidence in his officers, and felt that they could do as well as himself. But he would sometimes take the fancy to try his hand, and such was the case a few days subsequent to this little altercation.

Intuitive mate's voice—"Pull! pull!"

"Snap! snap!" went two of our stout ash oars almost at the same moment, while their holders tumbled into the bottom of the boat; but the giant strokes of the remaining four still made the little craft leap.

Just as we cleared the channel the catastrophe came, I can but poorly describe it. All at once the immense mass above the fissure seemed to lose its balance, and, turning partly over, down it plunged, completely littling the temporary channel, and sending fragments by thousands of tons far out upon the opposite ice-field.

Our boat was swamped by the proligious swell which was raised; but the other boats quickly picked us up, as they did also the two Kanakas, who had leap d overboard at the start.

We now returned to the same moment, while their holders tumbled into the bottom of the boat; work almost at the same moment, while their holders tumbled into the boat; or same moment, while their holders tumbled into the boat; or same moment, while their holders tumbled into the boat; or same moment, while their holders tumbled into the boat; or same moment, while their holders tumbled into the boat; or same moment, while their holders tumbled into the boat; or same moment, while their holders tumbled into the boat; or same moment, while their holders tumbled the their holders almost at the same moment, while their holders almost at the same moment, while their holders almost at the same moment, whil

"Now we are to see something done!"

"Now we are to see something done!"

Jayne, with the assistance of the other two mates, pulled the captain's shoulder-bone into place, thus completely relieving him of suffering.

The "old man," as we called him, had a heart, and he was deeply touched by what

That day our own boat was unusually had taken place. "Mr. Jayne," he said, with strong emo successful-Mr. Jayne, in the course of the successful—Mr. Jayne, in the course of the forenoon, killing three large whales, which were left with the little "waifs" or flags I am sorry for it, and I ask your parden. quick?"

"Aye, aye, sir!" replied four of us, setting ourselves to the work as we spoke, while the remainder of our company, two Kanakas from the Sandwich Islands, struck with terror at the proposition, leaped ever-portion must go. It made a noise like thunder; but through all we still heard the mate's voice—"Pull! pull! pull!"

We now returned to the ship, where Mr.

were left with the little "waifs" or flags upon them while we pulled in pursuit of others.

The second and third metes also captured one whale each, so that there were five of the leviathans lying dead within sight of the ship.

But it happened that the captain could not secure a single prize. This was through no fault of his own, but simply the result of chance, as he was really a master of his business

All about the boats there were masses of All about the boats there were masses and big fellow which had so often eluded us.

time of the accident was apparently the same big fellow which had so often eluded us.

"I don't think we shall ever get him." be said. "He must be growing wilder all the while the whales wou'd go sculling in quest of the animalculae upon which they fed. Besides the more level fields, there were vast bergs, rising like enormous castles, some of them a quarter of a mile in diameter and a hundred and fifty feet high.

These were often so word or broken near the water as to present frightful arches and caverns; and one of them, in particular—the largest of the whole—appeared to be cracked horizontally in such a manner that the upper portion looked as if on the point of sliding off from the base.

"What an immense berg that is!" said
